a iniúchadh Verbal noun of 'iniúch', translated as 'scrutinize, audit' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'cuntais a iniúchadh, to inspect, audit, accounts'. 'Iniúchaim' is translated as 'I audit' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'coiste iniúchta' being translated as 'committee of inspection'. 'Infiúchaim' is translated as 'I scrutinise, examine, look attentively at' in Dinneen.

'Ensuring that such persons have an adequate knowledge of the law and practice in the State relevant to the audit of accounts' is translated as 'a chinntiú go bhfuil eolas dóthanach ag na daoine sin ar an dlí agus ar chleachtas sa Stát is iomchuí d'iniúchadh cuntas' in s189(2)(b) of the Companies Act, 1990, for example. 'Audit of accounts of sweepstakes' is translated as 'Cuntaisí scuab-gheall d'iniúcha' in the Margin Title of s6 of the Public Charitable Hospitals (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1930, with 'Cuntais scéimeanna iontaobhais aonad a iniúchadh' translating 'Audit of accounts of unit trust schemes' in the Margin Title of s16 of the Unit Trusts Act, 1972.

We see above that 'scrúdú' translates 'audit' in the 1922 Constitution, 'Comptroller and Auditor-General' being styled 'Ard-Sgrúdaí' in Article 62. 'Roinn na hIniúcháir-eachta' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'Audit Department' in a Report from 1926, with 'iniúcháireacht' translating 'audit' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1926, p. 120. See further the commentary on Article 33.1.

a choinneáil Verbal noun of 'coinnigh', the first person singular, present indicative of which, 'coinnim', is translated as 'I detain' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'coinneáil' being translated as 'detention'. 'Custody' is translated as 'coimeád' in Téarmaí Dlí.

'Provision for the custody of the mortgage deeds and other securities belonging to the society' is translated as 'socrú chun na gníomhais mhorgáiste agus urrús eile de chuid an chumainn a choimeád' in s10(j) of the Building Societies Act, 1976, for example. 'The authorised person shall forthwith deliver him into the custody of a member of the Garda Síochána' is translated as 'seachadfaidh an duine údaraithe é láithreach i gcoimeád chomhalta den Gharda Síochána' in s39(c) of the Fourth Schedule to the Fisheries Act, 1980.

Looking at early Acts, 'All moneys, investments, and other property which immediately before the passing of this Act were vested in or were in the custody, possession, or control of the Dáil Éireann Trustees' is translated as 'Gach airgead, súncáil, agus maoin eile a bhí, díreach roimh rith an Achta so, dílsithe in Iontaobhaithe Dháil Éireann ... nó i gcimeád, ar seilbh nó fé smacht ag an gcéanna' in s2(1) of the Dáil Éireann Loans and Funds Act, 1924. 'Being a person over the age of sixteen years having the custody charge or care of C.D., a child' is translated as 'agus é ina dhuine os cionn sé mbliain déag d'aois ar a raibh cimeád, cúram no caomhaint C.D., leanbh' in the 'Forms of Indictment' appended to the Criminal Justice (Administration) Act, 1924.

a chruinniú Verbal noun of 'cruinnigh', the basic sense of which in Ó Dónaill is 'gather', with 'collect' as one of its senses, Ó Dónaill citing 'airgead a chruinniú, to collect, acquire, money'. Dinneen translates 'cruinnigh' as 'I hoard, heap together, gather together; I assemble; I concentrate', citing 'cruinnigh do chainnt, speak to the point'. DIL translates 'cruinnigid' as 'collects, gathers, assembles', citing 'don tí chruinnigheas toice' (translated by Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú as 'to the one who amasses wealth') from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death. This verb is based on the adjective 'cruinn', translated as 'round, globular, circular; compact, precise' in DIL; one of the senses of the abstract noun based on this adjective, 'cruinne', is 'thrift, hoarding, niggardliness', according to DIL. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'to raise a loan' ('of the State') as 'iasacht a chruinniú, a bhailliú', translating 'to raise money' as 'airgead a sholáthar' and 'to raise money on an estate' as 'iasacht airgid a fháil ar eastáil'.

Looking at early Acts, 'All moneys raised by securities issued under this Act' is translated as 'Aon airgead a gheobhar de bharr urúsanna a tabharfar amach fén Acht so' in s2(3) of the Appropriation Act, 1923. In s14(2) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923, 'The sum required to be paid by the Council of a County ... shall be assessed and raised in the same manner as the amounts of decrees under the Criminal Injuries Acts' is translated as 'An tsuim nách foláir do Chomhairle Chontae ... d'íoc ..., measfar agus soláthrófar í ar an gcuma gcéanna ina meastar agus ina soláthruítear na méideanna a luaidhteair in aitheanta fé sna hAchtanna um Dhiobháil Choiriúil'. Finally, 'and also to raise the monies required for the purposes aforesaid' is translated as 'agus fós chun an t-airgead is gá i gcóir na gcrícheanna roimhráite do chruinniú' in the Preamble to the Limerick Harbour Act, 1926.

Looking at modern Acts, 'in the case of a harbour authority unable themselves to raise a loan' is translated as 'i gcás údarais chuain ná beidh ar a gcumas iasacht a chruinniú iad féin' in s133(1)(c) of the Harbours Act, 1946. In s69(2) of the Finance Act, 1985, 'Any security which the Minister for Finance has power to issue for the purpose of raising any money or loan' is translated as 'Aon urrús a bhfuil sé de chumhacht ag an Aire Airgeadais é a eisiúint chun aon airgead nó iasacht a chruinniú'.

cuntais air 'Cuntas' is translated as 'account' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'tugaim cuntas, I account' is cited, for example. See further the commentary on Article 33.1.

'And shall have access to the books, accounts and returns of the amalgamated company' is translated as 'agus beidh dul aige ar leabhair, ar chuntais agus ar áirimh na cuideachtan có-nasctha' in s69(3) of the Railways Act, 1924. 'All proper and usual accounts of all money received or expended by it' is translated as 'gach cuntas is cuí agus is gnách ar an airgead go léir a fuair sí nó a chaith sí' in s16(1) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1978, 'gach cuntas is cuí agus is gnách ar an airgead go léir a gheobhaidh nó a chaithfidh (an Institiúid)' being found in s41(1) of the Industrial Research and Standards Act, 1961, and 'gach cuntas is cuibhe agus is gnách ar an airgead uile a gheobhaidh nó a chaithfidh' being found in s37(2) of the Industrial Research and Standards Act, 1946. Finally, 'to keep accounts of money received or expended by the Board' is translated as 'cuntais do choimeád ar airgead a gheibheann no chaitheann an Bord' in s17(1) of the Shannon Fisheries Act, 1935.

a ráthú Verbal noun of 'ráthaigh', translated as 'guarantee' in Ó Dónaill, 'ráthaim' being translated as 'I guarantee' in Téarmaí Dlí agus 'ráthuighim' as 'I guarantee, assure' in Dinneen. DIL cites but two doubtful examples of the verb 'ráthaigid', 'vouches for, guarantees', the first being from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster, the other being from a later source ('ro ráthaig Día fein in mbreith' ['God himself went surety for the birth (i.e. child)?]). This verb is based on 'ráth', translated in DIL as (a) 'a surety, guarantor', citing 'inna rath ... inna fecheman' ('of the securities ... of the creditors') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, where it glosses Latin 'creditorum', and (b) 'suretyship: a guarantee, pledge', citing 'imnedach cach ráth' ('troublesome is every security') from the Triads of Ireland.

'A Sister of the Community at present engaged there would be a guarantee of satisfaction' is translated as 'dáma Siúr í sin den Chóthionól atá ag obair ann anois ba dheimhniú é ar gach ní a bheith á dhéanamh sa cheart' in s25 of the 'Offaly County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'Securities guaranteed by the British Government' is translated as 'urrúsanna fé urraíocht an Rialtais Bhriotáinigh' in s2 of the Currency Act, 1927. 'Urraíocht a dhéanamh ar ...' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'guarantee ...' in a Report of the Public Accounts Committee, 1927. Finally, 'Guarantee of loans for industrial restructuring' is translated as 'iasachtaí le haghaidh athchóirithe tionscail a ráthú' in the Margin Title of s6 of the Industrial Development Act, 1981. See further the commentary on Article 40.3.1<sup>o</sup>.

fo-ábhair Plural of a compound of 'fo-', translated as (1) 'under-, sub-, ... secondary, subsidiary', (2) 'minor, lesser; light, trivial' and (3) 'odd, occasional' in Ó Dónaill, and 'ábhar', translated in Téarmaí Dlí as 'matter; subject matter (i.e. of contract)'. 'Fo-ábhar' does not appear to be given as a headword either in Ó Dónaill or in Dinneen. 'Fo-' is translated as 'under, below, sub-; occasional, odd, rare, few, small, slow, light' in Dinneen.

'For the salaries and expenses of the Ministry of Finance, including certain subordinate departments' is translated as 'Chun tuarastail agus costais na hAireachta um Airgead mar aon le fo-ranna áirithe' in the Schedule to the Appropriation Act, 1922. In Article 50 of the Fourth Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962, 'It may not, in any case, change their personal status, nor enlist them in formations or organisations subordinate to it' is translated as 'Ní cead, i gcás ar bith, a stádas pearsanta a athrú, ná iad a liostáil in eagair ná in eagraíochtaí atá ina cleithiúnas'. In Article 96, 'The commandant shall keep an up-to-date list of the labour detachments subordinate to him' is translated as 'Coimeádfaidh an ceannfort liosta cothromle-dáta de na diormaí saothair faoina cheannas'. 'Who by reason of rank or appointment is subordinate to him' is translated as 'a bheas, de bhíthin a chéime nó a cheapacháin, ina iochtarán aige' in s140 of the Defence Act, 1954. Finally, note that 'the hiring of persons to perform subordinate duties' is translated as 'fostú daoine chun íosdualgais a dhéanamh' in s18(2)(d) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1978.

a bhfuil baint acu leis 'Baint' is translated as 'connection, relationship; relevance' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'níl baint aige sin leis, that has nothing to do with it' and 'níl baint ná páirt agam leo, I have no connection whatever with them'. Dinneen cites 'ní' aon bhaint agam leis, I have nothing to do with him, it'. DIL cites 'ní lamad nech béin fria' ('... to touch her') from the Passions and Homiles from the Leabhar Breac s.v. 'béin', verbal noun of 'benaid' and 'boingid', translated in DIL as 'act of striking, beating; cutting, reaping; taking (away)' – 'béin' is perhaps a conflation of 'béim' (verbal noun of 'benaid') and 'búain' (verbal noun of 'boingid').

'Risk incidental to the employment' is translated as 'fiontar a ghabhas leis an bhfostaíocht' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Any matter ancillary or incidental to any of the matters referred to in any of the preceding paragraphs' is translated as 'aon ní a bhaineann nó a ghabhann le haon ní dá dtagraítear in aon cheann de na míreanna roimhe seo' in s15(1)(g) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981.

'Any personal expenses incurred by him on account of or in connection with or incidental to such election' is translated as 'aon chostaisí pearsanta fé n-a ragha sé ar son no i dtaobh nó a' los an toghacháin sin' in s36(1) of the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923. In s4(2) of the Drainage Maintenance Act, 1924, 'the cost of the execution of any works shall include all expenses incidental to the execution of such works' is translated as 'áireofar mar chuid de chostas aon oibreacha do dhéanamh gach fo-chostas a bhainfidh le déanamh na n-oibreacha sin'. Finally, 'and there do all such matters or things as in the opinion of the Minister or the Board (as the case may be) are necessary for or incidental to such maintenance' is translated as 'agus gach ní no rud do dhéanamh san áit sin is dó leis an Aire no leis an mBord (pe'aca aca é) do bheith riachtanach i gcóir an choinneáil-i-dtreo san no do bheith ag gabháil leis sin' in s84(2) of the Electricity Supply Act, 1927.

a leithghabháil Verbal noun of 'leithghabh', translated as 'appropriate' in Ó Dónaill, this verb not appearing to be given as a headword in Dinneen – see the commentary on Articles 11 and 17.2. The 'Appropriation Act, 1998' is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht Leithreasa, 1998', the 'Appropriation Act, 1922' being cited in Irish as 'an tAcht Leithreasa, 1922'.

a leagan ar Verbal noun of 'leag ar', translated basically as 'lay on' in Ó Dónaill, who also gives the sense of 'impose on', citing 'cáin a leagan ar rud, to lay a tax on something'. See the commentary on Article 3 regarding the verb 'lecaid', which comes from Old Norse 'leggya'.

cuspoírí Plural of 'cuspoír', translated as 'object (i.e. of contract)' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'object; objective, purpose' being a secondary sense in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Article 45.2.iv.

a ghlacadh Verbal noun of 'glac', 'I receive' being one of the senses of 'glacaim' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Articles 8.2, 12.10.4° and 13.1.3°.

a rialú Verbal noun of 'rialáigh' – see the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 12.5; 'rialáim' is translated as 'I control; I rule' in Téarmaí Dlí.

iomlán See the commentary on Article 21.2.1°.

a aisghairm See the commentary on Article 48.

Direct translation

Ciallaíonn Bille Airgid Bille arb é amháin atá ann forálacha lena ndéileáiltear leis na hábhair uile seo a leanas nó le haon chuid<sup>1</sup> díobh, mar atá, cánachas a fhorchur, a aisghairm, a loghadh, a athrú nó a rialáil; muirir a fhorchur ar airgead poiblí le haghaidh<sup>2</sup> fiach a aisíoc nó chun críocho eile airgeadais nó aon mhuirir den sórt sin a athrú nó a aisghairm; soláthar; cuntais airgid phoiblí a leithreasú<sup>3</sup>, a ghlacadh, a choimeád, a eisiúint nó a iniúchadh; aon iasacht a chruinniú nó a ráthú nó a aisíoc<sup>4</sup>; ábhair atá faoi réir na nithe sin nó faoi réir aon chuid acu nó a ghabhann<sup>5</sup> leo nó le haon chuid acu<sup>6</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'nó le haon cheann nó le haon chinn'
- 2 'd'fhonn'
- 3 'a leithghabháil'

4 'nó an céanna a aisíoc'

5 'acu, nó ábhair a ghabhann'

6 'nó aon cheann nó cinn acu nó a ghabhann leo nó le haon cheann nó cinn acu'

ARTICLE 22.1.2° AIRTEAGAL 22.1.2°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Sa mhíniú sin ní áirítear faoi na focail "cánachas", "airgead poiblí" agus "iasacht", faoi seach, aon chánachas, airgead ná iasacht a chruinnid údaráis nó comhlachtaí áitiúla chun críocho áitiúla.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In that explanation no taxation, money or loan which local bodies or authorities collect for local purposes are included under the words "taxation", "public money" and "loan", respectively.

ENGLISH TEXT

In this definition the expressions "taxation", "public money" and "loan" respectively do not include any taxation, money or loan raised by local authorities or bodies for local purposes.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Definition' is expressed in the Irish text as 'míniú', the core sense of which is 'explanation'; 'míniú' translates 'definition' in the Acts also, but in general usage, a compound, i.e. 'sainmhíniú', renders 'definition'.
- 2 'Expressions' is expressed as 'focail' ('words') in the Irish text.
- 3 'The expressions ... do not include ...' is expressed as 'ní áirítear faoi na focail' ('... are not included under the words') in the Irish text.
- 4 The Irish phrase expressing 'respectively', 'faoi seach', is preceded and followed by a comma, no corresponding commas being found in the English text.
- 5 'Or loan' is expressed as 'ná iasacht' ('nor loan') in the Irish text, the expected usage.

Note that the above English text is translated in Article 35 of the 1922 Constitution as follows:

Sa mhíniú so ní fholuíoim na focail "cáin" "airgead poiblí" agus "iasacht" fé seach aon cháin, airgead ná iasacht a thógfaidh lucht údaráis áitiúla chun úsáide áitiúla.

Commentary

faoi seach This phrase generally translates 'respectively' in the Acts. Ó Dónaill translates 'faoi seach' as (i) 'in turn; occasionally; respectively', citing 'cuir ina n-ionaid féin faoi seach iad, put them in their respective places' and (ii) 'in confusion', citing 'chuaigh an saol faoi seach orm, the world turned topsyturvy on me'. Dinneen translates "má (mu, fó or fá) seach" as 'in turn, respective(ly), separate(ly), alternate(ly), distinct(ly), occasional(ly), reversed, crossed, upside down', 'seach' itself being translated as 'a turn or spell, the quantity taken or amount done at a time'. The earlier form of this phrase, 'immasech', is composed of the preposition 'imb' ('about, mutually'), 'a' followed by eclipsis (i.e., the possessive pronoun, third person plural) plus the preposition 'sech' ('past, beyond'), DIL translating 'immasech' as 'in turn, (each) in (his) turn, one by one', citing 'ní bhí an saoghal acht fa seach' ('this life lasts only its turn') from a miscellaneous collection of religious Classical Irish poetry (Dán Dé).

focail 'Focail chinnteachta, words of limitation' is cited in Téarmaí Dlí, 'focail' being the plural of 'focal', translated basically as 'word' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'focail a chur ar rud, to express something in words', giving 'phrase, remark, observation, saying' as the secondary sense, translating 'cúpla focal a rá' as 'to make a few remarks'. Dinneen translates 'focal' primarily as 'a word, a saying, a phrase'. DIL cites the nominative singular form, 'focull', from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Psalms, translating 'focal' principally as 'a word, a vocable', secondly, by extension, of connected speech, 'phrase', citing 'senfocul sein ... la cach sruith' ('an old saying, proverb...') from Saltair na Rann, composed c. 1000.

We find both 'focal' and 'abairt' expressing 'expression' in the Acts of 1922: in Article 74 of the 1922 Constitution, 'the expression "financial year" means ... the year of assessment' is translated as 'cialluíonn an focal "bliain airgid" ... bliain a gearrtha' and in s4(5) of the Local Elections Postponement Act, 1922, 'the expressions "annual meeting" and "quarterly meeting" respectively mean any annual meeting or quarterly meeting' is translated as 'sé a chialluíonn na habairtí "Cruinniú bliantúil" agus "Cruinniú ráithiúil" fé seach ná aon chruinniú bliantúil no chruinniú ráithiúil'.

In s2 of the Pigs and Bacon Act, 1937, 'the expressions "licensee", "licensed premises" and "registered minor curer" have the same meanings as in the Principal Act' is translated as 'tá leis na habairtí "ceadúnaí", "áitreabh ceadúnuithe" agus "mion-leasuitheoir clárúithe" na bríonna céanna atá leo sa Phríomh-Acht'. Finally, in s22(2) of the Moneylenders Act, 1933, 'the expressions "assigned" means assigned by an assignment inter vivos ... and the expressions "assignor" and "assignee" have corresponding meanings' is translated as 'cialluíonn an abairt "do shannadh" sannadh do dhéanamh le haon tsannadh inter vivos ... agus is bríonna có-réire atá leis na focail "sannóir" agus "sannaí"'.

Looking at modern Acts, 'section 13 shall apply as if the expressions "at any time" and "at that time" in subsection (1) thereof were references to the relevant date' is translated as 'beidh feidhm ag alt 13 amhail is dá mba thagairtí don dáta iomchuí na habairtí "tráth ar bith" agus "an tráth sin" i bhfo-alt (1) den alt sin' in s4(3) of the Landlord and Tenant (Amendment) Act, 1980. In s1 of the Fourth Schedule to the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'the expression "coarse fish" means any freshwater fish' is translated as 'ciallaíonn an abairt "garbhiasc" aon iasc fíoruise'. 'The definitions of the expressions "deleterious matter" and "waters" is translated as 'na mínithe ar na habairtí "ábhar díobhálach" agus "uisce"' in the Second Schedule to the Fisheries (Statute Law Revision) Act, 1956.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks on the direct translation below that the current central sense of 'abairt' is a major syntactical unit ("móraonad comhréire") and that it creates confusion in having it refer to single words. Professor Ó Murchú recommends 'focail' or 'téarmaí'.

sa mhíniú 'Míniú' translates 'definition' in the Acts. Ó Dónaill translates 'míniú' as 'explanation, interpretation', citing 'focal mínithe, explanatory word'. 'Sainmhíniú' is translated as 'definition' by Ó Dónaill. 'Expounding, explaining, an explanation, a gloss, a commentary' are among the senses included s.v. 'míniughadh' in Dinneen. DIL cites 'míniugud', in the sense of 'interpreting, explaining', from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster, 'míniugud' being the verbal noun of 'mínigid', translated as (a) 'makes level or smooth in physical sense', (b) 'assuages, tames, subdues' and (c) 'interprets, explains, expounds', 'mínighther' glossing Latin 'interpretatur' in the Book of Ballymote, written c. 1400. This verb is based on the adjective 'min', the principal sense of which is 'smooth, level, of surfaces', commonly of land, often approaching the sense of arable or fertile, according to DIL. See the commentary on Article 12.4.2° regarding 'mínigh'.

'In this definition "building" includes ... any pre-fabricated or like structure' is translated as 'sa mhíniú seo folaíonn "foirgneamh" ... aon déanamhas réamhdhéanta nó déanamhas dá shamhail' in s43 of the Finance Act, 1981. In s1 of the Pyramid Selling Act, 1980, 'in this definition "trading scheme" includes any arrangements made in connection with the carrying on of a business' is translated as 'sa mhíniú seo folaíonn "scéim thrádála" aon chomhshocraíochtaí a dhéanfar i ndáil le gnó a sheoladh'. Finally, in s16 of the Army Pensions Act, 1923, 'in this definition the word "enemy" includes all armed mutineers, armed rebels, armed rioters and pirates' is translated as 'agus sa mhíniú so foluíonn an focal "namhaid" gach cúlmutaire armtha, gach rebeliúnach armtha, gach bruigheanach armtha agus gach pioráid'. Note also that 'míniú' translates 'definition' in Article 35 of the 1922 Constitution above.

áirítear See the commentary on Article 12.4.2° regarding 'áirigh', 'include'. References in the preceding subsections to a surrendering company do not include references to a company carrying on life business' is translated as 'Ní fholáíonn tagairtí sna fo-ailt roimhe seo do chuideachta ghéillte tagairtí do chuideachta a sheolann gnó saoil' in s44(1) of the Finance Act, 1990. In s2(2) of the Oireachtas (Payment of Members) Act, 1923, 'The salary for the time being payable to a member of the Oireachtas ... shall be deemed to include the allowance payable to such member' is translated as 'An tuarastal a bheidh do bhall den Oireachtas de thuras na huairé ... tuigfeadh é do bheith ag folú an liúntais a bheidh le n' íoc leis an mball san'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú regards 'áirítear' as much clearer than 'foláíonn' in the direct translation below.

chun críocha áitiúla According to the official standard this would be written as 'chun críoch áitiúil'. However, the unstandardised form is well established in the Acts. 'Loans from public moneys to local authorities or for local purposes' is translated as 'iasachtaí as airgead puiblí d'údarais áitiúla nó chun crícheanna áitiúla' in the Long Title of the Local Loans Fund Act, 1935. 'Established for charitable purposes only' is translated as 'a bunaíodh chun críocha carthanúla agus chuige sin amháin' in s109(1) of the Finance Act, 1990.

a chruinnid The synthetic form of the third person plural, present tense, of 'cruinnigh' – this would generally be written today as 'a chruinníonn siad'. See the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding the synthetic and analytic forms of the verb. See the commentary on the previous subsection as regards ‘raise’.

Standardised Irish text

Sa mhíniú sin ní áirítear faoi na focail “cánachas”, “airgead poiblí” agus “iasacht”, faoi seach, aon chánachas, airgead ná iasacht a chruinníonn údaráis nó comhlachtaí áitiúla chun críocha áitiúla.

Direct translation

Sa mhíniú sin ní fholáionn na habairtí<sup>1</sup> “cánachas”, “airgead poiblí” agus “iasacht” faoi seach aon chánachas, airgead nó iasacht a chruinneoidh comhlachtaí nó údaráis áitiúla chun críocha áitiúla.

Variants

- 1 ‘focail’, ‘téarmaí’

ARTICLE 22.2.1° AIRTEAGAL 22.2.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Más é tuairim Chathaoirleach Dháil Éireann gur Bille Airgid aon Bhille faoi leith ní foláir dó a dheimhniú gur Bille Airgid é agus, faoi chuimsiú na bhforálacha inár ndiaidh den alt seo, ní bheidh dul thar an deimhniú sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

If it is the opinion of the Chairman of Dáil Éireann that any particular Bill is a Money Bill he must certify that it is a Money Bill and, within the scope/constraint of the following provisions of this section, there will be no bypassing that certification.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Chairman of Dáil Éireann shall certify any Bill which, in his opinion, is a Money Bill to be a Money Bill, and his certificate shall, subject to the subsequent provisions of this section, be final and conclusive.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The Irish text commences with ‘Más é tuairim Chathaoirleach Dháil Éireann gur Bille Airgid aon Bhille faoi leith’ (‘If it is the opinion of the Chairman of Dáil Éireann that any particular Bill is a Money Bill’), rather than having this as a sub-clause, as in the English text, emphasizing that there might be doubt as to whether a Bill was a Money Bill or not, the main thrust of the English text being on the certification itself.
- 2 ‘Any Bill’ is expressed as ‘aon Bhille faoi leith’ (‘any particular Bill’) in the Irish text.
- 3 ‘His certificate’ is expressed as ‘an deimhniú sin’ (‘that certificate’) in the Irish text.
- 4 ‘His certificate shall ... be final and conclusive’ is expressed as ‘ní bheidh dul thar an deimhniú sin’ (‘there will be no surpassing that certificate’) in the Irish text.

- 5 ‘Subject to’ is expressed as ‘faoi chuimsiú’ (‘within the scope/constraint of’) in the Irish text; ‘subject to’ is translated as ‘faoi réir’ in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 6 ‘Shall’ is expressed as ‘ní foláir’ (‘must’) in the Irish text, as we have seen in the previous Article and in some other Articles.

Note that Article 35 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

The Chairman of Dáil Éireann shall certify any Bill which in his opinion is a Money Bill to be a Money Bill .... The decision of the Committee on the question shall be final and conclusive. Deimhneoidh Ceann Comhairle Dháil Éireann gur Bille Airgid aon Bhille atá ‘na Bhille Airgid dar leis .... Ní bheidh aon dul thar breith an Choiste ar an gceist.

Section 1 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 12) Act, 1930, contains the following:

The Chairman of Dáil Éireann shall certify any Bill which in his opinion is a Money Bill to be a Money Bill and such certificate shall be final and conclusive .... Deimhneoidh Ceann Comhairle Dháil Éireann gur Bille Airgid aon Bhille is Bille Airgid dar leis agus ní bheidh aon dul thar an deimhniú san.

Commentary

a dheimhniú ... deimhniú ‘Deimhniú’ is the verbal noun of ‘deimhnigh’, which verb is translated as ‘certify; affirm, assure; check’ in Ó Dónaill, who translates ‘rud a dheimhniú’ as ‘to certify something; to confirm something’. ‘Deimhním’ is translated as ‘I certify; I vouch’ in Téarmaí Dlí, ‘deimhniú’ being translated as ‘certificate; voucher’. See the commentary on Article 1, where ‘deimhnigh’ expresses ‘affirm’.

‘The Minister for Finance may certify accordingly and the certificate shall be conclusive’ is translated as ‘féadfaidh an tAire Airgeadais é a dheimhniú dá réir sin, agus is deimhniú críochnaitheach an deimhniú’ in s69(3)(d)(ii) of the Finance Act, 1980. In s5 of the Eighth Schedule to the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, ‘If the amount already paid by the Minister exceeds the amount specified in the certificate the County Court Judge shall certify the amount of the excess’ is translated as ‘Más mó ná an méid a luaidhtear sa deimhniú an méid a híoc an tAire cheana féin, deimhneoidh an Breitheamh Cúirte Contae méid na breise’. Note, finally, that we also find ‘teistear’ (literally ‘attestation’) translating ‘certificate’ in early Acts – in s35(b) of the First Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923, for example, ‘require that person to produce a certificate of naturalisation or to make a statutory declaration that he is a citizen of Saorstát Éireann’ is translated as ‘a éileamh ar an duine sin teistear eadóirseachta do thespeáint no faisnéis reachtúil do dhéanamh ar é do bheith ina shaoránach de Shaorstát Éireann’. See further the commentary on Article 24.1.

dul thar ‘Téigh thar’, literally ‘go over’, also has the sense of ‘bypass’ or ‘surpass’, Ó Dónaill citing ‘ní féidir dul thairis, it can’t be surpassed’ – see the commentary on Article 34.4.6°. ‘And such certificate of such medical referee shall be final and conclusive’ is translated as ‘agus ní bheidh dul thar an deimhniú san an dochtúra réitigh’ in s76(1)(vi) of the Workmen’s Compensation Act, 1934. In s22(3) of the Land Act, 1923, 'the record filed in the Land Commission shall be final and conclusive' is translated as 'ná beidh dul thar an mbreathachán a cuireadh i dtaise i gCoimisiún na Talmhan', with 'agus ní bheidh teacht aniar ná siar ar a bhreith' translating 'and his decision ... shall be final and conclusive' in s1(f) of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923. 'And every determination of the said Court shall be final, binding and conclusive to all intents and purposes' is translated as 'agus chun gach intinne agus críche gach socrú den tsórt san a dhéanfidh an Chúirt sin beidh sé gan aon dul thairis ach é ina cheangal agus ina shocrú deiridh' in s89 of the Dundalk Harbour and Port Act, 1925. Finally, 'The decision ... shall be final and conclusive' is translated as 'An bhreith ... beidh sí ... ina breith dheiridh gan aon dul tháirsi' in s15(6) of the Slaughtered Animals (Compensation) Act, 1928.

Looking at modern Acts, 'The decision of the local pension committee ... shall be final and conclusive' is translated as 'Is cinneadh críochnaitheach, dochloíte cinneadh an choiste phinsin áitiúil' in s164(2) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, and 'is breith chríochnaitheach, dhochloíte a bhreith sin ar an gcéanna' translates 'whose decision thereon shall be final and conclusive' in s10(5) of the Pensions (Increase) Act, 1959, for example.

inár ndiaidh See the commentary on Article 14.5.1°. 'Subject to the subsequent provisions of this section' is translated as 'faoi réir na bhforálacha ina dhiaidh seo den alt seo' in s29(2)(a) of the Finance Act, 1981, with 'fé réir na bhforálacha ina dhiaidh seo den alt so' translating the same phrase in s77(5) of the Local Government (Dublin) Act, 1930. Note that 'subsequent condition' is translated as 'iarchoinníoll' in Téarmaí Dlí. De Bhaldraithe translates 'subsequent' as '(caibidil, etc.) a leanas', translating 'at a subsequent meeting' as 'ag cruinniú ina dhiaidh sin, níos faide anonn'.

tuairim The Irish legal term for 'opinion', Ó Dónaill citing 'is é mo thuairim (go), I am of opinion (that)' and 'i mo thuairim, de réir mo thuairime, in my opinion'. DIL gives 'likelihood, promise, appearance, resemblance' as the principal sense of 'tuairim' with no examples cited from the earlier sources. See further the commentary on Article 40.6.1°i.

'The Minister may by order designate an institution which in his opinion is suitable for the medical treatment or the care of persons' is translated as 'féadfaidh an tAire, le hordú, foras a ainmniú ..., más dóigh leis é a bheith oiriúnach chun cóireáil liachta nó aireachas a chur ar fáil' in s28(10) of the Misuse of Drugs Act, 1977. 'The amount of each instalment, which, in his opinion, is likely to become payable' is translated as 'méid gach tráthchoda díobh, is dóigh a bheith iníoctha, dar leis' in s30(2)(b) of the Finance Act, 1976. 'That a person has committed on board the aircraft in flight anywhere an act which, in his opinion, is a serious offence' is translated as 'gníomh a bheith déanta ag duine ar bhord an aerárthaigh agus í ar eitilt in aon áit arb é a thuairim gur cion tromchúiseach é' in s7(1) of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1973. 'That a monument which in his opinion is a national monument is in danger of being or is actually being destroyed' is translated as 'séadchomhartha atá, dar leis, ina shéadchomhartha náisiúnta do bheith i mbaol a scriosta

... no do bheith á scriosa' in s8(1) of the National Monuments Act, 1930.

'Oipineon' translates 'opinion' in early Acts. 'The Minister if in his opinion it is necessary or expedient to do so may ...' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire má's é a oipineon gur gá no gur oiriúnach san do dhéanamh' in s2(1) of the Local Elections Postponement Act, 1922. 'Whenever the Official Censor is of opinion that part only of any picture ... is unfit for exhibition in public' is translated as '... agus gur dó leis ná fuil ach cuid den phictiúr sin gan bheith oiriúnach le taisbeaint go puiblí' in s7(4) of the Censorship of Films Act, 1923. 'If the Justice shall be of opinion that the facts proved against the accused constitute a minor offence' is translated as 'má sé barúil an Bhreithimh gur mion-chionta is intrialta ar an slí achumair an méid a cruthuodh i gcoinnibh an duine chúisithe' in s77B of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. Finally, 'opinion (of the Dáil) etc.' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'tuairim' in the 1926 Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann. See further the commentary on Articles 24.1 and 30.1.

tuairim Chathaoirleach Dháil Éireann Note that it is recommended in the First Progress Report of the All-Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution to amend this phrase to 'tuairim an Cheann Comhairle'.

faoi leith See the commentary on Articles 12.3.3° and 15.9.1° for 'ar leith'.

ní foláir dó See the commentary on Article 11.

faoi chuimsiú See the commentary on Articles 12.5 and 18.7.2°.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Más é tuairim an Cheann Comhairle<sup>1</sup> gur Bille Airgid aon Bhille faoi leith ní foláir dó nó di a dheimhniú gur Bille Airgid é agus, faoi chuimsiú na bhforálacha inár ndiaidh den alt seo, ní bheidh dul thar an deimhniú sin.

Note

- 1 Following the gender-proofed English text.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Déanfaidh Cathaoirleach Dháil Éireann aon Bhille atá, dar leis nó léi, ina Bhille Airgid a dheimhniú é a bheith ina Bhille Airgid<sup>1</sup> agus faoi réir na bhforálacha seo a leanas den alt seo, deimhniú críochnaitheach dochloíte a bheidh ina dheimhniú nó ina deimhniú<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'gur Bille Airgid é'
- 2 'a bheidh sa deimhniú sin', 'is deimhniú críochnaitheach dochloíte a bheidh ann'

ARTICLE 22.2.2° AIRTEAGAL 22.2.2°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Tig le Seanad Éireann rún a rith i dtionól nach mbeidh níos lú ná tríocha comhalta i láthair ann, á iarraidh ar an Uachtarán ceist a chur faoi bhráid Choiste Pribhléidí féachaint cé acu Bille Airgid an Bille nó nach ea.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Seanad Éireann can/may pass a resolution in an assembly in which not less than thirty members will be present, requesting the President to put a question before a Committee of Privileges to see whether the Bill is a Money Bill or is not.

ENGLISH TEXT

Seanad Éireann, by a resolution, passed at a sitting at which not less than thirty members are present, may request the President to refer the question whether the Bill is or is not a Money Bill to a Committee of Privileges.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The main thrust of the English text is that 'Seanad Éireann ... may request the President to refer the question', the Irish text making a clause of 'Tig le Seanad Éireann rún a rith' ('Seanad Éireann may pass a resolution ...'), with 'á iarraidh ar an Uachtarán' ('requesting the President') following this.
- 2 'At a sitting' is expressed as 'i dtionól' ('in an assembly') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Refer' is expressed as 'a chur faoi bhráid' ('put before') in the Irish text, the Irish phrase 'cuir faoi bhráid' having the sense of 'refer'; Téarmaí Dlí translates 'I refer' as 'tarchuirim', however.
- 4 'The question whether the Bill is or is not a Money Bill' is expressed as 'ceist ... féachaint cé acu Bille Airgid an Bille nó nach ea' ('a question ... to see whether the Bill is a Money Bill or is not') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 35 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

... the question whether the Bill is or is not a Money Bill shall be referred to a Committee of Privileges ...
déanfar an cheist i dtaobh ce'ca Bille Airgid no nach eadh an Bille d'fhágaint fé Choiste ar Phribhléidí.

Commentary

faoi bhráid Choiste Pribhléidí According to the official standard there would be no lenition following 'faoi bhráid' here, only a 'definite' noun and a proper noun being lenited after a compound preposition which is followed by the genitive – see An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, s5 of the Chapter on 'Séimhiú agus Urú'.

Ó Dónaill gives 'before, in front of' as one of the senses of 'faoi bhráid', translating 'rud a chur faoi bhráid duine' as 'to set something in front of someone; to submit, refer, something to someone' – see the commentary on Articles 13.7.1° and 17.1.1° as regards 'faoi bhráid'. In Article 40.4.3°, following the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, 'the High Court shall refer the question of the validity of such law to the Supreme Court' is rendered as 'ní foláir don Árd-Chúirt an cheist sin bail do bheith nó gan a bheith ar an dligheadh sin do chur fá bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraíge'. 'I refer (a case to the County Registrar, etc.)' is translated as 'tarchuirim (cás chun an Chláraitheora Chontae, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'He shall be entitled ... himself to refer the question to a deciding officer for determination' is translated as 'beidh sé féin i dteideal an cheist a tharchur chuig oifigeach breithiúnachta lena cinneadh' in s255(4) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. In s40(5) of the Insurance (Intermittent Unemployment) Act, 1942, 'that person may require the insurance officer to refer the question to the umpire' is translated as 'féadfaidh an duine sin ... an cheist do chur fé bhráid an mholtóra'. See further the commentary on Article 40.4.3°.

Looking at early Acts, 'the said Minister may if he so thinks fit refer such application to the Commission' is translated as 'féadfidh an tAire sin an t-iarratas san do chur fé bhráid an Choimisiúin más oiriúnach leis é' in s2(1) of the Tariff Commission Act, 1926. In s140 of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927, 'the Minister may if he thinks fit refer such appeal to the court' is translated as 'féadfidh an tAire, más oiriúnach leis é, an t-athchomharc san do chur chun na cúirte'.

Turning to 'Coiste Pribhléidí', 'pribhléid' is translated as 'privilege' in Téarmaí Dlí, in Ó Dónaill and in Dinneen. 'Pribiléid' is the form of the headword in DIL, where this word is cited from seventeenth-century sources such as Keating, Mac Aingil and Tadhg Ó Cianáin. According to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, this word, one of many Anglo-Norman loanwords, is probably long-established; Professor Ó Murchú remarks that one of the modern pronunciations, 'priléid', exhibits a long-standing phonological development and the semantic range of the word in current Irish shows some particular divergences. The ending '-éid', rather than the '-áiste' type, may be due to the influence of 'priobháid', to which it also shows some semantic attraction, according to Máirtín Ó Murchú, who also refers to 'discreíd', 'sícridéid', etc. DIL translates 'pribiléid' as 'a privilege, special favour'. This word developed the sense of 'special endowment, gift, talent (especially for conversation)', Ó Dónaill citing 'duine gan phribhléid, dull, uninteresting, person', along with the sense of 'self-assurance, boldness (in speech)', Dinneen citing 'ní' mórán pribhléide i Nóra, Nora is backward in manner'.

The Long Title of the Constitution (Amendment No. 12) Act, 1930, reads as follows:

An Act to amend the Constitution by deleting the provisions now contained therein as to the reference to a Committee of Privileges of the question whether certain Bills are or are not Money Bills and by making in lieu thereof other provision for the reference of such question to a Committee of Privileges. Acht chun an Bunreacht do leasú tré sna forálacha do scriosa amach atá anois ann maidir leis an gceist i dtaobh ce'ca Billí Airgid no nach eadh Billí áirithe do chur fé bhráid Choiste ar Phribhléidí agus tré shocrú eile ina n-ionad san do dhéanamh chun an cheist sin do chur fé bhráid Choiste ar Phribhléidí.

'Committee on Procedure and Privileges' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'Coiste um nós-imeachta agus pribhléidí' in the Dáil Order Paper, 1925, p. 216, with 'coiste ar phribhléidí' translating 'committee on privileges' on the Dáil Order Paper, 1928, p. 331. Note, finally, that 'shall ... enjoy the privileges and be subject to the obligations of such citizenship' is translated as 'beidh aige na pribhléidí agus tuitfidh air na hoibleagáidí a ghabhann leis an saoránacht san' in Article 3 of the 1922 Constitution.

i dtionól 'Tionól' is translated as 'assembly' in Téarmaí Dlí ('tionól neamhdhleathach, unlawful assembly') and as 'gathering, assembly' in Ó Dónaill. See the commentary on Article 15.11.3°.

'If the accused is brought before a justice otherwise than at a sitting of the Court for the district ...' is translated as 'Má thugtar an cúisí os comhair breithimh ar dhóigh seachas ag suí den Chúirt don dúiche' in s33(3) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1967. 'Ag suí den Dáil' translates 'At a sitting of the Dáil' in s28 of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997). In s1(b) of the Constitution (Amendment No. 12) Act, 1930, 'a majority of the members of Seanad Éireann present and voting at a sitting of Seanad Éireann at which not less than thirty members are present' is translated as 'móráireamh de sna baill de Sheanad Éireann láithreach agus ag vótáil ag suidhe de Sheanad Éireann agus gan níos lú ná tríocha ball i láthair'. See further the commentary on Article 15.8.1°.

ceist See the commentary on Articles 34.3.1° and 40.4.3°. 'That the Committee of Management ... immediately undertake an investigation into the question of outdoor relief as at present dispensed in each Union' is translated as 'An Coiste Bainistí ... do dhéanamh scrúduithe láithreach ar an gcuma ina ndintear fóirithin allamuich i ngach Aontas fé leith fé láthair' in s4 of the 'Kerry County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'Provided that nothing in this subsection shall affect the determination ... of the question whether that deemed disposal is one to which this Chapter applies' is translated as 'Ar choinníoll nach ndéanfaidh aon ní san fho-alt seo difear do chinneadh a dhéanamh ... i dtaobh an diúscairt lena mbaianeann an Chaibidil seo an diúscairt mheasta sin' in s63(3) of the Finance Act, 1990. 'A claimant shall be entitled to have the question whether the relevant accident was an occupational accident deemed notwithstanding that his claim is disallowed on other grounds' is translated as 'beidh sé de theideal ag an éilitheoir go ndéanfaí cinneadh ar an gceist i dtaobh an tionóisc iomchuí a bheith ina tionóisc cheirde d'ainneoin go ndiúltofar ar fhorais eile dá éileamh' in s60(1) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981.

i láthair ann 'In case of an equal division of votes at a meeting at which all the members are present and voting' is translated as 'I gcás comhionannas vótaí ag cruinniú ag a mbeidh na comhaltaí go léir i láthair agus ag a vótáil' in s13(3) of the Third Schedule to the Foyle Fisheries Act, 1952.

Standardised Irish text

Tig le Seanad Éireann rún a rith i dtionól nach mbeidh níos lú ná tríocha comhalta i láthair ann, á iarraidh ar an Uachtarán ceist a chur faoi bhráid Coiste Pribhléidí féachaint cé acu Bille Airgid an Bille nó nach ea.

Direct translation

Féadfaidh Seanad Éireann, le rún, arna rith ag suí a mbeidh tríocha comhalta ar a laghad i láthair ann, a iarraidh ar an Uachtarán an cheist cé acu an Bille Airgid an Bille nó nach ea a tharchur chun Coiste Pribhléidí.

ARTICLE 22.2.3° AIRTEAGAL 22.2.3°

TÉACS GAELGE

Má aontaíonn an tUachtarán leis an achainí tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, ní foláir dó Coiste Pribhléidí a cheapadh. An líon céanna de chomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann agus de Sheanad Éireann a bheas ar an gCoiste sin, agus breitheamh den Chúirt Uachtarach ina Chathaoirleach orthu. Is tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit a dhéanfar na ceapacháin sin. Más ionann an líon vótaí ar an dá thaobh beidh vóta ag an gCathaoirleach, ach murab ionann ní bheidh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

If the President assents to the request after taking counsel with the Council of State, he must appoint a Committee of Privileges. (It is) The same number of members of Dáil Éireann and of Seanad Éireann (that) will be on that Committee, with a judge of the Supreme Court as Chairman over them. It is after taking counsel with the Council of State that those appointments will be made. If the number of votes on both sides is the same the Chairman will have a vote, but if it is not the same he will not.

ENGLISH TEXT

If the President after consultation with the Council of State decides to accede to the request he shall appoint a Committee of Privileges consisting of an equal number of members of Dáil Éireann and of Seanad Éireann and a Chairman who shall be a Judge of the Supreme Court: these appointments shall be made after consultation with the Council of State. In the case of an equality of votes but not otherwise the Chairman shall be entitled to vote.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Decides to accede to' is expressed as 'aontaíonn le' ('assents to') in the Irish text.
- 'Request' is expressed by 'achainí', normally the Irish legal term for 'petition' – though 'achainí' has the sense of 'request' in general usage; 'request' is usually translated as 'iarraidh' in the modern Acts.
- The Irish text concludes the first sentence after 'ní foláir dó Coiste Pribhléidí a cheapadh' ('he shall appoint a Committee of Privileges'). Beginning a new sentence, 'consisting of an equal number' is expressed in the Irish text as 'An líon céanna ... a bheas ar an gCoiste sin' ('An equal number will be on that Committee').
- 'The Chairman shall be entitled to vote' is expressed as 'beidh vóta ag an gCathaoirleach' ('the Chairman will have a vote') in the Irish text.
- 'Consultation with' is expressed as 'comhairle a ghlacadh le' ('taking counsel with') in the Irish text, as we see in some other Articles also.
- 'And a Chairman who shall be a Judge of the Supreme Court' is expressed as 'agus breitheamh den Chúirt Uachtarach ina Chathaoirleach orthu' ('with/having a judge of the Supreme Court as Chairman over them') in the Irish text, preceded by a comma in the Irish text alone, with initial capital in the case of 'Judge' in the English text and no corresponding initial capital in the case of 'breitheamh'.

- 7 'These appointments shall be made after consultation with the Council of State' is a complete sentence in itself in the Irish text, as against a clause following a colon in the English text.
- 8 'In the case of an equality of votes' is expressed as 'Más ionann an líon vótaí ar an dá thaobh' ('If the number of votes on both sides is equal') in the Irish text.
- 9 'In the case of an equality of votes but not otherwise the Chairman shall be entitled to vote' is expressed as 'Más ionann an líon vótaí ar an dá thaobh beidh vóta ag an gCathaoirleach, ach murab ionann ní bheidh' ('If the number of votes on both sides is equal the Chairman will have a vote, but if (they) are not equal he will not') in the Irish text.
- 10 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must'), as we have seen in the previous subsection and in some other Articles, this being preceded by a comma in the Irish text alone.

Note that Article 35 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

... (the question shall be referred to) a Committee of Privileges consisting of three members elected by each House with a Chairman who shall be the senior judge of the Supreme Court able and willing to act, and who, in the case of an equality of votes, but not otherwise, shall be entitled to vote .... (déanfar an cheist ... d'fhágaint fé) Choiste ar Phríbhléidí ar a mbeidh trí baill a thoghfaidh gach Tigh agus mar Cheann Comhairle ortha an breitheamh is aoirde céim den Chúirt Uachtarach a bheidh ábalta agus toilteannach ar fheidhmiú, agus a bheidh, i gcás có-ionannas vótanna, agus sa chás san amháin, i dteideal vótála.

Commentary

achainí This headword is translated as 'petition' in Téarmaí Dlí, and as 'request, entreaty, petition' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'achainí a iarraidh, to make a request, a wish'. Dinneen translates 'athchuinghe' as 'request, petition, entreaty', citing 'iarraim d'athchuinghe ar, I entreat'. Originally 'athchuingid' had the sense of 'act of asking again, asking back', this being the verbal noun of 'athchuing(id)' (*ath-com-di-saig-), but it usually has the sense simply of 'act of asking, requesting (in some examples perhaps importunately); request, boon' according to DIL, citing 'ní téis féin do athchuingi' ('thou shalt not go thyself to solicit') from an early Irish text. No examples of the verb or verbal noun are cited from the Glosses; examples of 'cuingid' ('act of asking, requesting, seeking; request') are cited in DIL from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards.

'Iarraidh' and 'iarratas' are found in the Acts translating 'request'. 'There shall be issued to the person ... a request, to take the evidence of the witness' is translated as 'cuirfar amach chun an duine ... iarraidh, chun fianaise an fhinné ... do thógaint' in s12(2) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. In s66 of the Railways Act, 1924, 'Any notice, application, request, or other document authorised or required by this Act to be sent to a railway company' is translated as 'Aon fhógra, iarratas, impí, no scríbhinn eile a húdarúitear no a héilítear, leis an Acht so, a chur ag triall ar chuideachta bhóthair iarainn'. In s3(1)(b) of the Adoption Act, 1988, 'the health board ... declines to accede to the request' is translated as '(go) ndiúltoídh an bord sláinte ... géilleadh don iarraidh'. 'Reasons for their decision not to accede to the request' is translated as 'na fátha gur chinn siad gan géilleadh don iarratas' in s6(6) of the Restrictive Trade Practices (Amendment) Act, 1959. See further the commentary on Article 25.2.2°.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the translation below, favours 'iarratas' to 'iarraidh' where the sense 'attempt' is not involved, remarking that most of Ó Dónaill's examples of 'iarraidh' as a noun are more verbal noun than noun.

ionann This adjective is translated as 'same, identical; alike, equal' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'b'ionann aois dóibh, they were of the same age'. Dinneen translates 'ionann' as 'the same, identical; equal, equivalent, similar, alike; uniform, even, level'. DIL translates 'inunn, in(n)onn' as 'alike, equal, the same, identical; the one', citing the following from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Psalms: 'is inunn cumachtae .i. is ed a cumachtae cétnae indí dáe rodamsorsa din galarsa 7 durat digail forsna assaru' ('it is the same power of God that delivered me from this disease, and that inflicted vengeance on the Assyrians'). See further the commentary on Article 15.11.2°.

Note that in Article 22 of the 1922 Constitution, 'who shall have ... a casting vote in the case of an equality of votes' is translated as 'ag a mbeidh vóta réitigh ... má's ionann vótanna an dá thaobh', with 'más ionan na vótanna don dá thaobh' translating 'in the case of equality of votes' in the 1926 Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann. In s102 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'In case of equality of votes on the sentence' is translated as 'I gcás có-ionannas vótanna i dtaobh daor-bhreithe', with 'he shall also endeavour to secure equality of advantage among the several licensees' being translated as 'tabharfa sé fé n-a chur in áirithe leis, go mbeidh có-ionannas buntáiste imeasc na gceadúnaithe uile agus fé seach' in s40(1)(b)(iii) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927.

In s5(3)(ii) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'and in case there is an equality of votes the matter shall be determined by lot' is translated as 'agus i gcás comhionannas vótaí cinnfear an cheist trí chrannchur'. 'In case of an equality of votes in any election of Mayor' is translated as 'I gcás có-ionannais vótanna in aon toghachán Méara' in s19 of the Local Government (Galway) Act, 1938.

See the commentary on Article 34.3.2° regarding 'otherwise'.

aontaíonn 'Aontaím' is translated as 'I assent' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'assent, agree' being given as secondary senses of the verb 'aontaigh' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'aontú le rud, to assent to something' and 'aontú le duine faoi rud, to agree with someone about something' – see the commentary on Articles 26.2.2°, 28.3.1° and 40.2.2°. De Bhaldraithe translates 'to accede to a request' as 'géilleadh d'iarratas', translating 'to accede to a treaty' as 'glacadh le conradh'.

'If in his opinion ... his acceding to such request would interfere with the proper discharge of his duties' is translated as 'más dó leis go ndéanfadh a ghéille don iarrthas san cur-isteach ar cheart-chóilona a dhualgaisí' in s24 of the Fifth Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923. 'The Minister shall accede to every such application as soon as practicable' is translated as 'géillfidh an tAire do gach iarratas den sórt sin a luaithe is féidir' in s3(3) of the Road Transport Act, 1978. 'If the Board in determining the appeal does not accede in substance to the appellant's grounds of appeal' is translated as 'mura dtabharfaidh an Bord, ag cinneadh an achomhairc dó, aontachas do bhrí fhoras achomhairc an achomharcóra' in s19(1)(b) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1976.

An líon céanna Following the Seventh Amendment of the Constitution (Election of Members of Seanad Éireann by Institutions of Higher Education) Act, 1978, 'in substitution for an equal number of the members' is rendered as 'in ionad líon comhionann de na comhaltaí' in Article 18.4.2°, 'in ionad an oiread chéanna de na comhaltaí' expressing the same English phrase in Article 19.

ach murab ionann 'Shall ... be one moiety only of the fees which would otherwise have been payable' is translated as 'ní bheidh ionta ... ach leath amháin de sna táilli do bheadh iníoctha ina mhalairt sin de chás' in s40(1)(f) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. In s10(1) of the Family Law (Protection of Spouses and Children) Act, 1981, 'An appeal from a barring order shall, if the court that made the order or the court to which the appeal is brought so determines (but not otherwise), stay the operation of the order' is translated as 'Déanfaidh achomharc i gcoinne ordú urchoisc, má dhéanann an chúirt a rinne an t-ordú nó an chúirt a dtabharfar an t-achomharc os a comhair é sin a chinneadh (agus ní ar aon slí eile), oibriú an ordaithe a bhac'. 'At the request of the person so charged but not otherwise' is translated as 'ar iarratas ón duine a cúisíodh amhlaidh, agus ar an dóigh sin amháin' in s92 of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977.

a bheas The special form of the relative, future tense, of the substantive verb, this normally being written today as 'a bheidh' – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s'.

comhairle a ghlacadh See the commentary on Article 13.2.3°.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Má aontaíonn an tUachtarán leis an achainí tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, ní foláir dó nó di Coiste Pribhléidí a cheapadh. An líon céanna de chomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann agus de Sheanad Éireann a bheidh ar an gCoiste sin, agus breitheamh den Chúirt Uachtarach ina chathaoirleach nó ina cathaoirleach orthu. Is tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit a dhéanfar na ceapacháin sin. Más ionann an líon vótaí ar an dá thaobh beidh vóta ag an gcathaoirleach, ach murab ionann ní bheidh.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Má chinneann an tUachtarán, tar éis dul i gcomhairle<sup>1</sup> leis an gComhairle Stáit, ar ghéilleadh<sup>2</sup> don iarraidh<sup>3</sup>, ceapfaidh sé nó sí Coiste Pribhléidí ar a mbeidh líon comhionann<sup>4</sup> comhaltaí de Dháil Éireann agus de Sheanad Éireann maille le Cathaoirleach is Breitheamh<sup>5</sup> den Chúirt Uachtarach: déanfar na ceapacháin sin tar éis dul i gcomhairle<sup>1</sup> leis an gComhairle Stáit. I gcás comhionannais vótaí, agus sa chás sin amháin<sup>6</sup>, beidh an Cathaoirleach i dteideal vótáil<sup>7</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'i gcomhchomhairle', 'i ndáil chomhairle'
- 2 ', géilleadh'
- 3 'iarratas'
- 4 'an líon céanna'
- 5 'a bheidh ina Bhreitheamh nó ina Breitheamh', 'ar Breitheamh den Chúirt Uachtarach é nó í'
- 6 ', ach ní ar aon slí eile'
- 7 'i dteideal vótála' – while this does not comply with the official standard, a verbal noun not being inflected immediately following a prepositional phrase, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that the genitive is more natural here as 'vótáil' has no (indirect) object.

ARTICLE 22.2.4° AIRTEAGAL 22.2.4°

TÉACS GAELGE

Ní foláir don Uachtarán an cheist a chur faoi bhráid an Choiste Pribhléidí a cheapfar mar sin, agus ní foláir don Choiste a mbreith ar an gceist a chur chun an Uachtaráin taobh istigh de lá agus fiche d'éis an lae a cuireadh an Bille go Seanad Éireann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The President must put the question before the Committee of Privileges that will be appointed in that way, and the Committee must send their judgement on the question to the President within twenty-one days after the day the Bill was sent to Seanad Éireann.

ENGLISH TEXT

The President shall refer the question to the Committee of Privileges so appointed and the Committee shall report its decision thereon to the President within twenty-one days after the day on which the Bill was sent to Seanad Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Report its decision thereon to the President' is expressed as 'a mbreith ar an gceist a chur chun an Uachtaráin' ('send their decision on the question to the President') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Refer' is expressed as 'a chur faoi bhráid' ('put before') in the Irish text, as we saw in subsection 2 of this section.
- 3 'So appointed' is expressed as 'a cheapfar mar sin' ('appointed in that way / like that') in the Irish text, followed by a comma in that text alone; 'amhlaidh' generally translates 'so' in the Acts, although 'mar sin' does express this sense also.
- 4 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Commentary

mar sin Ó Dónaill cites 'ná labhair mar sin, don't speak like that' and 'mar sin is fearr é, it is better so'. Dinneen translates 'mar sin' as 'like that, in that manner, in that direction, accordingly, so, then (= if so)'.

Turning to the Acts as regards 'so', 'The term of office of every member of a committee of agriculture so appointed shall commence at the termination of the meeting' is translated as 'Tosóidh téarma oifige gach comhalta de choiste talmhaíochta a cheapfar amhlaidh ag deireadh an chruinnithe' in s2(2) of the Agriculture (Amendment) Act, 1980. In s7(2) of the Schedule to the Pilotage Orders Confirmation Act, 1924, 'but a member of the Committee so appointed or elected shall hold office only until the next annual general appointment or election' is translated as 'ach ball den Choiste a ceapfar no a toghfar amhlaidh ní bheidh sé i seilbh oifige ach go dtí go mbeidh an chéad cheapa no togha bliantúil eile á dhéanamh'.

a cuireadh Note that we find the following in s1 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 12) Act, 1930:

Every such Committee of Privileges shall decide the question so referred to it and report its decision thereon to Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann within twenty-one days after the day on which the Bill the subject of such question was sent to Seanad Éireann ....
Déanfaidh gach Coiste ar Phribhléidí den tsórt san a bhreith do thabhairt ar an gceist a cuirfead fé n-a bhráid amhlaidh agus an bhreith sin do thuairisciú do Dháil Éireann agus do Sheanad Éireann laistigh de lá is fiche tar éis an lae do cuireadh an Bille do abhar don cheist sin go dtí Seanad Éireann.

In s4 of the Second Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923, 'on or before the 1st day of January next after the day on which such form of claim was sent to him' is translated as 'ar dháta nách déanaí ná an 1adh lá den chéad Eanáir tar éis an lá a cuireadh an fhuirm éilimh sin chuige'. Note, finally, that s150 of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997) contains the following:

Immediately after a Bill, which in his or her opinion is a Money Bill, has passed the Dáil, and before it is sent to Seanad Éireann, the Ceann Comhairle shall issue his or her certificate that it is a Money Bill, and he or she shall announce that fact to the Dáil. Chomh luath agus a bheidh Bille, arb é tuairim an Cheann Comhairle gur Bille Airgid é, rite ag an Dáil, agus sula cuirfead chun an tSeanad é, bhéarfaidh an Ceann Comhairle a dheimhniú nó a deimhniú gur Bille Airgid é agus craolfaidh sé nó sí don Dáil é sin a bheith déanta aige nó aici.

a mbreith 'Breith' is translated as 'decision' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'judgement, decision' being given as the principal sense in Ó Dónaill. See the commentary on Article 15.11.1°.

Ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

lá agus fiche See the commentary on Article 21.2.1°.

d'éis See the commentary on Article 10.4.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an tUachtarán an cheist a tharchur chun an Choiste Pribhléidí a cheapfar amhlaidh agus déanfaidh an Coiste a bhreith<sup>1</sup> uirthi<sup>2</sup> a thuairisciú don Uachtarán laistigh de lá is fiche tar éis an lae a cuireadh<sup>3</sup> an Bille go Seanad Éireann.

Variants

- 1 'a mbreith'
- 2 'ar an gcéanna'
- 3 'a chuirfead'

ARTICLE 22.2.5° AIRTEAGAL 22.2.5°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní bheidh dul thar breith an Choiste.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

There will be no bypassing the judgement of the Committee.

ENGLISH TEXT

The decision of the Committee shall be final and conclusive.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 As in the first subsection of this section, 'final and conclusive' is expressed in the Irish text as 'Ní bheidh dul thar' ('no going over / bypassing').

Commentary

dul thar breith an Choiste See the commentary on subsection 1 of this section regarding 'dul thar'. 'Thar' generally lenites the following noun, according to the official standard. Commenting on the translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú refers to the clarity and neatness of the Irish text above.

Standardised Irish text

Ní bheidh dul thar bhreith an Choiste.

Direct translation

Breith chríochnaitheach dhochloíte a bheidh i mbreith an Choiste.

ARTICLE 22.2.6° AIRTEAGAL 22.2.6°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Má dhiúltaíonn an tUachtarán d'achainí Sheanad Éireann tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, nó mura gcuire an Coiste Pribhléidí a mbreith in iúl taobh istigh den tréimhse a luaitear anseo romhainn, seasfaidh deimhniú Chathaoirleach Dháil Éireann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

If the President rejects Seanad Éireann's request after taking counsel with the Council of State, or if the Committee of Privileges do not express their judgement within the period mentioned here before us, the certification of the Chairman of Dáil Éireann will stand.

ENGLISH TEXT

If the President after consultation with the Council of State decides not to accede to the request of Seanad Éireann, or if the Committee of Privileges fails to report within the time hereinbefore specified the certificate of the Chairman of Dáil Éireann shall stand confirmed.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Decides not to accede to' is expressed simply by 'diúltaíonn' ('rejects') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Fails to report' is expressed as 'mura gcuire ... a mbreith in iúl' ('do not express their judgement') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Within the time hereinbefore specified' is expressed as 'taobh istigh den tréimhse a luaitear anseo romhainn' ('within the period mentioned here before us', i.e. 'within the aforementioned period') in the Irish text, followed by a comma in that text alone.
- 4 'The certificate ... shall stand confirmed' is expressed simply as 'seasfaidh deimhniú ...' ('the certificate will stand') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Request' is expressed in the Irish text by 'achainí', the Irish legal term for 'petition', as in subsection 3 of this section.

Commentary

in iúl 'Rud a chur in iúl do dhuine' is translated as 'to let someone know something; to give someone to understand something; to pretend something to someone' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'chuir sé a bhuíochas in iúl dúinn, he expressed his gratitude to us' and 'tú féin a chur in iúl, to express oneself; to assert oneself'. See the commentary on Article 28.9.1°.

We find the following in s1 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 12) Act, 1930:

... but, if such Committee fails so to decide and report within such twenty-one days, the certificate of the Chairman of Dáil Éireann that such Bill is a Money Bill shall at the expiration of the said twenty-one days become and be final and conclusive .... ach, má theipeann ar an gCoiste sin breith do thabhairt agus do thuairisciú amhlaidh laistigh den lá is fiche sin, tiocfaidh deimhniú Chinn Chomhairle Dháil Éireann gur Bille Airgid an Bille sin chun bheith agus beidh sé, i gcionn an lae is fiche sin, gan aon dul thairis.

In s78 of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997), 'and may appoint a date upon which the Committee shall report back to the Dáil' is translated as 'agus féadfar dáta a cheapadh don Choiste chun tuairisciú don Dáil'. In s89, 'each Select Committee shall review its procedures ... on an ongoing basis, and shall report to the Committee on Procedure and Privileges at least every six months on those matters' is translated as 'déanfaidh gach Roghchoiste a nósanna imeachta ... a athbhreithniú go leanúnach agus tabharfaidh siad tuarascáil faoi na nithe sin don Choiste um Nós Imeachta agus Pribhléidí uair amháin ar a laghad gach sé mhí'. In s39(6) of the Health (Medical Services) Act, 1981, 'Where an appeal is made to the Minister ... the Minister shall designate a medical officer ... to examine the person and to report to him' is translated as 'I gcás ina ndéanfar achomharc chun an Aire ... ainmneoidh an tAire dochtúir oifigiúil ... chun an duine a scrúdú agus tuarascáil a thabhairt dó'. In s34(3)(d) of the County Management Act, 1940, 'to report to such council ... on any matter relating to such hospital on which such committee thinks it expedient so to report' is translated as 'tuairisc do thabhairt don chomhairle sin ... i dtaobh éinní, maidir leis an ospidéal san, 'na mbeidh sé oiriúnach dar leis an gcoiste sin tuairisc do thabhairt ina thaobh amhlaidh'.

Looking at the early Acts, 'Every account of expenditure ... shall be audited and reported on by him as an appropriation account' is translated as 'Gach cuntas caiteachais ... déanfaidh seisean é iniúcha agus tuarascabháil do thabhairt air mar chuntas leithreasa' in s3(2) of the Telephone Capital Act, 1924. 'An Act to provide for the establishment of a Commission to report to the Minister for Finance on proposals to ...' is translated as 'Acht chun socrú do dhéanamh chun Coimisiún do bhunú chun tuairisc do thabhairt don Aire Airgid maidir le tairisgintí chun ...'. Finally, 'report progress' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'tuairisc do thabhairt ar a dineadh' in the 1926 Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann.

seasfaidh Future tense of the verb 'seas', translated basically as 'stand' in Ó Dónaill, 'last, keep, hold good, remain valid' being given as a secondary sense, citing 'seasfaidh na coinniollacha go raibh an obair déanta, the conditions will stand until the work is finished'. Dinneen cites the proverb 'seasugheann an fhirinne nuair thuiteas gach uile rud, the truth prevails when all things else fail'. DIL cites 'do sheasmhadur leo seal' ('they held out for a time') from Cín Lae Ó Mealláin as its only example of the sense of 'holds out, perseveres' of the verb 'sessmaid', which verb is based on 'sessam', the principal sense of which is given as 'the act of standing, standing posture' in DIL.

'The salary in question shall stand confirmed or increased in accordance with the determination' is translated as 'beidh an tuarastal a bheidh i gceist arna dhaingniú nó arna mhéadú de réir an chinnte' in s10(6) of the Coroners Act, 1962, following s4(6) of the Coroners (Amendment) Act, 1947, where 'a bheas' replaces 'a bheidh' above. Finally, note that 'the Dáil stands adjourned' is translated as 'tá an Dáil curtha ar ath-ló' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1926, p. 984, 'fanfaidh an Dáil ar athló' translating 'the Dáil shall stand adjourned' in the 1926 Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann.

Regarding 'confirm' in early Acts, 'any court which was constituted under, or which was confirmed in its functions, or which purported to act under the authority of Dáil Éireann' is translated as 'aon chúirt a bunúodh no gur daingníodh a feidhmeanna, no a bhí in ainm bheith ag gníomhú fé údarás Dháil Éireann' in s1(1) of the Dáil Éireann Courts (Winding Up) Act, 1923, Amendment Act, 1924. 'I confirm' is translated as 'daingnim' in Téarmaí Dlí.

a luaitear See the commentary on Article 12.10.1° regarding 'luaigh', which expresses 'state' in that Article, expressing 'specified' in Article 14.5.2°. 'Proceedings in relation to property not hereinbefore specified in this Schedule' is translated as 'Imeachtaí maidir le maoin nach sonraítear anseo roimhe seo sa Sceideal seo' in No. 28 of the Third Schedule to the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Act, 1961. In s24(4) of the National Health Insurance Act, 1929, 'in any year in which the total cost aforesaid does not at any time exceed the limit hereinbefore specified' is translated as 'aon bhliain a bheidh an costas iomlán roimhraithe gan dul uair ar bith thar an teorainn a luaidhtear anso roimhe seo'. 'Unless he does that thing within the time specified in the notice' is translated as 'mura ndéanfaidh sé an rud sin laistigh den tréimhse ama a bheidh sonraithe san fhógra' in s25(1)(b) of the Finance Act, 1990. 'Having considered any such representations within the time so specified' is translated as 'tar éis don Choimisinéir aon uirill den sórt sin a rinneadh laistigh den am a bheidh sonraithe amhlaidh a bhreithniú' in s6(3) of the Farm Tax Act, 1985, 'laistigh den am a bheas sonraithe amhlaidh' translating 'within the time so specified' in s51(3)(b) of the Local Government Act, 1946. See the commentary on Article 14.5.2° regarding 'specified' in early Acts.

anseo romhainn 'Whenever the issue to be tried is not one of the issues hereinbefore expressly provided for' is translated as 'Aon uair nach saincheist de na saincheisteanna dá bhforáiltear go sainráite anseo roimhe seo an tsaincheist a bheidh le triail' in s19(3) of the Juries Act, 1976. In s24(3) of the Land Act, 1923, 'any land wherever situated, hereinbefore excluded from the operation of this section' is translated as 'aon talamh áirithe pé áit a luíonn sé, a gearradh amach roimhe seo anso o oibriú an ailt seo air'. In s4(1) of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923, 'Provided that nothing hereinbefore contained shall be construed to ...' is translated as 'Ach ní léireofar éinní dá bhfuil sa méid sin roimh-ráite chun ...'.

mura gcuire The present subjunctive of 'cuir', this would generally be replaced today by 'mura gcuirfidh' – see the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú again prefers 'má theipeann ar an gCoiste' to 'má mhainníonn an Coiste' in the translation below, stating that 'mainnigh' is very unusual and there being no evidence that a direct object would follow it. See the commentary on Articles 14.1 and 14.5.2° on 'teip', 'fail'.

Má dhiúltaíonn ... d(o) See the commentary on Article 13.2.2° regarding 'diúltaigh do'.

achainí See the commentary on subsection 3 of this section.

comhairle a ghlacadh le See the commentary on Article 13.2.3°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Má dhiúltaíonn an tUachtarán d'achainí Sheanad Éireann tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, nó mura gcuirfidh an Coiste Pribhléidí a mbreith in iúl taobh istigh den tréimhse a luaitear anseo romhainn, seasfaidh deimhniú an Cheann Comhairle.

Direct translation

Má chinneann an tUachtarán, tar éis dul i gcomhairle<sup>1</sup> leis an gComhairle Stáit, gan géilleadh d'iarraidh<sup>2</sup> Sheanad

Éireann, nó má mhainníonn an Coiste Pribhléidí tuairisciú laistigh den tréimhse a sonraíodh anseo roimhe seo beidh deimhniú Chathaoirleach Dháil Éireann arna dhaingniú<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'i ndáil chomhairle', 'i gcomhchomhairle'
- 2 'd'iaratas'
- 3 'daingnithe'

ARTICLE 23.1 AIRTEAGAL 23.1

TÉACS GAEILGE

Tréimhse chun Billí a Bhreithniú

Baineann an tAirteagal seo le gach Bille a ritheann Dáil Éireann agus a sheoltar go Seanad Éireann, ach amháin Bille Airgid nó Bille a ndearnadh an tréimhse chun a bhreithnithe ag Seanad Éireann a ghiorrú faoi Airteagal 24 den Bhunreacht seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Period to Consider Bills

This Article relates to each Bill which Dáil Éireann passes and which is sent to Seanad Éireann, except a Money Bill or a Bill the period for the consideration of which by Seanad Éireann was shortened under Article 24 of this Constitution.

ENGLISH TEXT

Time for Consideration of Bills

This Article applies to every Bill passed by Dáil Éireann and sent to Seanad Éireann other than a Money Bill or a Bill the time for the consideration of which by Seanad Éireann shall have been abridged under Article 24 of this Constitution.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Applies to' is expressed as 'Baineann ... le' ('relates to') in the Irish text, this phrase expressing 'applies to' particularly in the earlier Acts, which phrase is now generally translated in the Acts as 'beidh feidhm ag ... maidir le', although 'bain le' is also used.
- 2 'Send' is expressed by a term which differs from that expressing 'send' in s2.4° of the previous Article.
- 3 'Other than' is expressed as 'ach amháin' ('except') in the Irish text, preceded by a comma in that text alone.
- 4 'Consider' is again expressed by the Irish legal term translating 'adjudge', 'adjudicate' and 'decide', though this verb expresses 'consider' in the Acts also; 'breathnú' rather than 'breithniú' is found in the enrolled edition.
- 5 'Time' is again expressed as 'tréimhse' ('period') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Shall have been abridged' is expressed as 'a ndearnadh ... a ghiorrú' ('was shortened') in the Irish text.

Commentary

a sheoltar go The verb 'seol', principally 'sail', has the secondary sense of 'send, dispatch; direct, guide' in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Article 33.5.2°. Note that we find 'cuir go' expressing 'send' in s2.3° of the previous Article, as in some other Articles.

'The message shall state ... that the Bill is sent to the Seanad for its recommendations' is translated as 'Déarfair sa Teachtaireacht go bhfuil an Bille á chur chun an tSeanad le haghaidh a mholtai' in s154 of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997). In s30(1)(c) of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1983, 'a copy of the report has been sent to the proposed allottee of the shares' is translated as 'go mbeidh cóip den tuarascáil curtha chuig leithroinntí beartaíthe na scaireanna'. See Article 38 of the 1922 Constitution, where 'Every Bill initiated in ... Dáil Éireann shall be sent to Seanad Éireann' is translated as 'Cuirfear chun Seanad Éireann gach Bille do tionnscnuíodh i nDáil Éireann'.

Tréimhse This headword is translated as 'period, term' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'sa tréimhse atá dlíte, in the allotted time'. 'Fadaim an tréimhse' and 'fadú tréimhse' are translated respectively as 'I extend the period' and 'extension of period' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'Reacht na dTréimhsí, Statute of Limitations' and 'tréimhse mheabhreach, lucid interval' are also cited. Dinneen translates 'tréimhse' as 'a space of time, a good while, a limit (time)', citing 'le tréimhse, for some time past' and 'i ndeireadh na tréimhse, at long last'. 'Tréimse', the form of the headword in DIL, is an old compound of 'trí' and 'mí' – see Rudolf Thurneyson, op. cit., s385, regarding earlier 'trimsi' from 'tri-' and 'mís-' ('month') – and originally had the sense of a 'period of three months, quarter'. DIL cites 'tréimse' in the sense of 'period of time in general' from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

'Where the certifying doctor ... requires further information or further time for consideration before deciding' is translated as 'Má theastaíonn ón dochtúir deimhníochta ... tuilleadh eolais nó tuilleadh ama d'fháil chun an cás a bhreithniú sula gcinneadh sé' in s80(3) of the Factories Act, 1955. 'Where any such appeal or reference is pending or the time for so appealing has not expired' is translated as 'má bhíonn aon achomharc nó tarchur den sórt sin ar feitheamh nó murar caitheadh an tréimhse chun achomharc a dhéanamh amhlaidh' in s119(b) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. 'Time for payment of tax' is translated as 'Am le cáin a íoc' in the Margin Title of s477 of the Income Tax Act, 1967. The Margin Title of s52 of the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923, 'Limitation of time for prosecution of offences' is translated as 'Teora leis an aimsir chun próiseacht i dtaobh cionta'. 'With such modifications as to the times within which such acts are to be done' is translated as 'tar éis pé atharuithe is dó leis an gcúirt is ceart do dhéanamh maidir leis na haimsearacha go ndéanfar gníomhartha laistigh díobh' in s2(1) of the Companies (Re-construction of Records) Act, 1924. The heading 'time in operation' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'an fhaid a bhí ag obair' in translations for the Department of Industry and Commerce.

Note finally that 'ré' expresses 'period' in Article 16.5.

Baineann ... le See the commentary on Article 3, this phrase expressing 'applies to' in the earlier Acts in particular. 'This sub-section shall apply to all costs' is translated as 'Bainfidh an fo-alt so le gach costas' in s1(3) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. 'Article 77 of this Constitution shall apply as if such officers were existing officers of the Provisional Government' is translated as 'beidh d'fheidhm ag Airtíogal 77 den Bhun-reacht so 'na dtaobh i leith is gur oifigigh den Rialtas Sealadach ... na hoifigigh sin' in Article 79 of the 1922 Constitution. In s296(2) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, 'This section applies to every question' is translated as 'Baineann an t-alt seo le gach ceist', with 'This section applies to every territory' being translated as 'Baineann an t-alt seo le gach críoch' in s163(2) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976.

In s39(5)(b) of the Finance Act, 1990, 'Paragraph (b) ... shall apply to a company for as long as it is deemed ... to be carrying on a trade' is translated as 'Beidh feidhm ag mír (b) ... maidir le cuideachta fad a mheastar ... í a bheith ag seoladh trádála'. In s5(1) of that Act, on the other hand, 'This section applies to any payment which is made' is translated as 'Baineann an t-alt seo le haon íocaíocht a dhéanfar', with 'Provided that this section shall not apply in a case unless the income so arising ... is the sole or main income of the individual' being translated as 'Ar choinníoll nach mbeidh feidhm ag an alt seo in aon chás murab é atá san ioncam a eascróidh amhlaidh ... aon-ioncam ná príomhioncam na pearsan aonair' in s5(2).

In relation to the use of 'feidhm' in the translation below, account has been taken of Article 23.2.2°, where we find the phrase 'For the purpose of this application'.

a ghortú 'Ghortú' is the verbal noun of 'giorraigh', translated as 'to shorten' in Ó Dónaill, 'giorruighim' being translated as 'I shorten, abridge, contract' in Dinneen. De Bhaldraithe translates 'I abridge' as 'giorraim'.

In s2 of the Eighth Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923, 'provided that any misnomer or inaccurate description of any of those areas shall not in any way prevent or abridge the operation of this Act with respect to the subject of the description' is translated as 'ach ní dhéanfaidh aon mhí-ainmniú ná aon tuairisc nea-chruinn ar aon cheann de sna líomataistí sin cosc ná ghortú in aon tslí ar oibriú an Achta so maidir leis an ní ar a dtugtar an tuairisc'. In s267 of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act, 1959, 'no oyster fishery order shall take away or abridge any right of several fishery' is translated as 'ní dhéanfaidh aon ordú um iascach oisrí cealú ná cúngú ar aon cheart iascaigh eisiataigh'. 'Nothing in this Act shall take away or abridge any power to open or break up any street along or across which the railway is laid' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfaidh éinní atá san Acht so cealú ná laigheadú ar aon chomhacht chun sráide ar bith d'oscailt no do bhriseadh go mbeidh an bóthar iarainn curtha síos ar a feadh no trasna uirthi' in s18 of the Cork Milling Company Railway Act, 1935.

a bhreithniú Verbal noun of 'breithnigh', the first person singular, present indicative, of which is translated as 'I adjudge; I adjudicate; I decide' in Téarmaí Dlí. See the commentary on Articles 17.1.1° and 20.1.

Direct translation

Tréimhse chun Billí a Bhreithniú

Beidh feidhm ag an Airteagal seo maidir<sup>2</sup> le gach Bille a rithfidh Dáil Éireann agus a chuirfear go Seanad Éireann seachas Bille Airgid nó Bille a mbeidh an tréimhse lena bhreithniú<sup>3</sup> ag Seanad Éireann giorraithe faoi Airteagal 24 den Bhunreacht seo.

Variants

- 1 'a Mheas', 'a Bhreathnú'
- 2 'Baineann an tAirteagal seo'
- 3 'chun é a mheas', 'lena bhreathnú'

ARTICLE 23.1.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 23.1.1<sup>o</sup>TÉACS GAELIGE

Má tharlaíonn, taobh istigh den tréimhse áirithe a luaitear sa chéad fho-alt eile, go ndiúltaíonn Seanad Éireann d'aon Bhille lena mbaineann an tAirteagal seo, nó go ritheann Seanad Éireann an Bille agus leasuithe air a ndiúltaíonn Dáil Éireann dóibh, nó mura ndéanann Seanad Éireann an Bille a rith (cibé acu leasaithe é nó gan leasú) nó diúltú dó taobh istigh den tréimhse áirithe, ansin má ritheann Dáil Éireann rún chuige sin taobh istigh de naoi bhfichid lá tar éis an tréimhse áirithe a bheith caite, ní foláir a mheas gur ritheadh an Bille sin ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais an lá a ritheadh an rún.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

If it happens, within the particular period (that is) mentioned in the next subsection, that Seanad Éireann rejects any Bill to which this Article relates, or that Seanad Éireann passes the Bill and amendments to it which Dáil Éireann rejects, or if Seanad Éireann does not pass the Bill (whether amended or without amendment/amending) or (does not) reject it within the particular period, then if Dáil Éireann passes a resolution to that end within one hundred and eighty days after the expiration of the particular period, it must be deemed that that Bill was passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas (on) the day (that) the resolution was passed.

ENGLISH TEXT

Whenever a Bill to which this Article applies is within the stated period defined in the next following sub-section either rejected by Seanad Éireann or passed by Seanad Éireann with amendments to which Dáil Éireann does not agree or is neither passed (with or without amendment) nor rejected by Seanad Éireann within the stated period, the Bill shall, if Dáil Éireann so resolves within one hundred and eighty days after the expiration of the stated period be deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas on the day on which the resolution is passed.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Whenever a Bill ... is rejected by Seanad Éireann' is expressed as 'Má tharlaíonn ... go ndiúltaíonn Seanad Éireann d'aon Bhille' ('If it happens ... that Seanad Éireann rejects any Bill') in the Irish text.
- 2 'The stated period defined in' is expressed as '(an) tréimhse áirithe a luaitear (i)' ('the particular period mentioned in') in the Irish text, with 'stated period' on two other occasions being expressed as 'tréimhse áirithe' ('particular period') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Applies' is again expressed as 'baineann le' ('relates to' / 'concerns') in the Irish text.

- 4 'If Dáil Éireann so resolves' is expressed as 'ansin má ritheann Dáil Éireann rún chuige sin' ('then if Dáil Éireann passes a resolution to that end') in the Irish text.
- 5 'With amendments to which Dáil Éireann does not agree' is expressed as 'agus leasuithe air a ndiúltaíonn Dáil Éireann dóibh' ('and amendments to it that Dáil Éireann rejects') in the Irish text.
- 6 'With or without amendment' is expressed as 'cibé acu leasaithe é nó gan leasú' ('whether amended or without amending/amendment') in the Irish text.
- 7 'To have been passed ... is passed' is expressed as 'gur ritheadh ... a ritheadh' ('... was passed ... was passed') in the Irish text.
- 8 'The next following' is expressed as '(an) chéad ... eile' ('the next') in the Irish text.
- 9 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 40 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

A Bill passed by either House and accepted by the other House shall be deemed to be passed by both Houses. Bille a rithfead ag Tigh agus a glacfar ag an dTigh eile tuigfead é bheith riththe ag an dá Thigh.

Note also that we find the following in s2 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 13) Act, 1928:

Whenever a Bill (not being a Money Bill) initiated in and passed by Dáil Éireann and sent to Seanad Éireann is within the stated period hereinafter defined either rejected by Seanad Éireann or passed by Seanad Éireann with amendments to which Dáil Éireann does not agree or is neither passed (with or without amendment) nor rejected by Seanad Éireann within the said stated period ... such Bill shall, if Dáil Éireann so resolves after the expiration of such sixty days or longer period aforesaid, be deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas at the expiration of the said sixty days .... Pé uair a dhéanfidh Seanad Éireann, laistigh den tréimhse áirithe a mínítear anso ina dhiaidh seo, diúltú do Bhille (nách Bille Airgid) do tionnsnúodh i nDáil Éireann agus do ritheadh ag Dáil Éireann agus do cuireadh go dtí Seanad Éireann nó an Bille do rith tar éis leasuithe do dhéanamh air ná toileoidh Dáil Éireann leo, nó ná déanfidh Seanad Éireann é do rith (maille le leasú) ná diúltú dho laistigh den tréimhse áirithe sin, ... tuigfar, má bheartuionn Dáil Éireann amhlaidh le rún tar éis deire an trí fichid lá san nó na tréimhse sin roimhráite is sia ná san, an Bille sin do bheith riththe ag dhá Thigh an Oireachtais i gciann an trí fichid lá san.

Commentary

áirithe This adjective is translated as 'certain, particular' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'duine áirithe, a certain person' and 'lá áirithe, (on) a certain day'. Dinneen translates 'áirithe' as 'definite, certain, special, particular'. DIL gives 'special, particular, a certain' as one of the senses of 'áirithe', citing 'ticit laithi airigthi anuas for in magh' ('... on certain days') from the Gaelic abridgment of the Book of Ser Marco Polo.

In s4 (Table) of the Finance Act, 1981, 'and that it appears from them that, during a stated period, a stated return ... was not received from the defendant' is translated as 'agus go ndealraíonn sé uathu nach bhfuarthas ón gcosantóir tuairisceán ... a shonrófar, i rith tréimhse a shonrófar'. 'And that it appears from them that, during a stated period, a stated statement was not furnished by the defendant' is translated as 'agus go bhfeictear uathu nach ndearna an cosantóir ráiteas sonraithe a thabhairt i rith tréimhse sonraithe' in s57(6)(a) of the Finance Act, 1963.

ritheann ... rún chuige sin 'Chuige sin' is translated as 'to that end' in Ó Dónaill, Dinneen giving 'for the purpose' as one of the senses of 'chuige', citing 'chuige sin do scríobhas é, for that purpose I wrote it'.

'Beartú' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'resolve' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 24/1/24. 'If the Dáil resolves the motion in the affirmative' is translated as 'má ritheann an Dáil an tairisint' in the 1926 Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann. In s72(2) of the Local Government (Dublin) Act, 1920, 'Any hereditament or tenement in the City ... shall, if the City Council so resolves, be deemed to be a small dwelling' is translated as 'Má bheartuáinn Comhairle na Cathrach amhlaidh tuigfear gur tigh comhnaithe beag ... aon ionoighreachta no tionóntachán sa Chathair'. See further the commentary on Article 24.1.

caite Past participle of 'caith', 'spend (of time)' being one of the senses of that verb given in Ó Dónaill, citing 'tá na blianta á gcaitheamh, the years are passing'. Dinneen cites 'caithim mo shaoghal, lá, aimsear, I pass my life, a day, time, etc.' DIL cites 'goro cathestar Moysi trian a aeisi i clemnus int sacairt' ('and Moses spent a third of his life-time as the priest's son-in-law') from the early twelfth-century prose version of Saltair na Rann. See the commentary on Articles 12.3.1° and 21.2.1° regarding 'expiration' in the Acts.

naoi bhfichid lá 'Trí fichid bliain' is translated as 'three score years' in Ó Dónaill, Dinneen citing 'dá fhichid (dathad), trí fichid, 7c., forty, sixty, etc.' along with 'a deich is ceithre fichid, ninety'. DIL cites 'tri fichit' ('sixty') from Saltair na Rann, composed c. 1000.

lena mbaineann See the commentary on Article 3 regarding 'bain le', which has the sense of 'applies to' particularly in earlier Acts.

tréimhse See the commentary on Article 23.1. Note that we find 'tar éis na tréimhse áirithe bheith caithte' in the original text.

go ndiúltaíonn See the commentary on Article 13.2.2° regarding 'diúltaigh do'.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

Direct translation

Má dhéanann Seanad Éireann, laistigh den tréimhse shonraithe a mhíneofar sa chéad fho-alt eile ina dhiaidh seo, diúltú do Bhille a mbeidh feidhm ag an Airteagal seo ina leith' nó é a rith mar aon le leasuithe nach n-aontaíonn Dáil Éireann leo, nó mura ndéanann Seanad Éireann é a rith (mar aon le leasú nó gan leasú) nó diúltú dó laistigh den tréimhse shonraithe, measfar, má bheartaíonn Dáil Éireann amhlaidh laistigh de chéad lá is ochtó<sup>2</sup> tar éis dheireadh na tréimhse sonraithe<sup>3</sup>, go mbeidh an Bille rite ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais an lá a rithfear an rún.

Variants

- 1 'a mbaineann an tAirteagal seo leis'
- 2 'de naoi scór lá', 'd'ochtó lá is céad', 'de naoi bhfichid lá'
- 3 'tar éis don tréimhse shonraithe a bheith caithe'

ARTICLE 23.1.2° AIRTEAGAL 23.1.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Nócha lá, nó aon tréimhse is sia ná sin a réitid dhá Theach an Oireachtais le chéile maidir leis an mBille, an tréimhse áirithe, agus is é an lá a sheoltar an Bille ar dtús ó Dháil Éireann go Seanad Éireann tosach na tréimhse.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Ninety days, or any period (which is) longer than that which both Houses of the Oireachtas settle together with regard to the Bill, (is) the particular period, and the commencement of the period is the day that the Bill is first sent from Dáil Éireann to Seanad Éireann.

ENGLISH TEXT

The stated period is the period of ninety days commencing on the day on which the Bill is first sent by Dáil Éireann to Seanad Éireann or any longer period agreed upon in respect of the Bill by both Houses of the Oireachtas.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The stated period is the period of ninety days' is expressed as 'Nócha lá ... an tréimhse áirithe' ('Ninety days ... (is) the stated/particular period') in the Irish text, with 'stated period' again being expressed as 'tréimhse áirithe' ('particular period') as in the previous subsection.
- 2 'The period of ninety days commencing on the day on which the Bill is first sent by Dáil Éireann' is expressed in the Irish text as 'agus is é an lá a sheoltar an Bille ar dtús ó Dháil Éireann go Seanad Éireann tosach na tréimhse' ('and the commencement of the period is the day on which the Bill is first sent from Dáil Éireann'), this being a whole new clause, preceded by a comma found in the Irish text alone.
- 3 'Agreed upon ... by both Houses of the Oireachtas' is expressed as 'a réitid dhá Theach an Oireachtais le chéile' ('which both Houses of the Oireachtas settle/agree together') in the Irish text.

Note that s2 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 13) Act, 1928, contains the following:

The said stated period is the period commencing on the day on which the said Bill is first sent by Dáil Éireann to Seanad Éireann and ending at whichever of the following times is the earlier .... Isé rud é an tréimhse áirithe sin ná an tréimhse dar tosach an lá a chuirfidh Dáil Éireann an Bille sin go dtí Seanad

Éireann den chéad uair agus dar críoch pé am acu so leanas is luaithe ann.

Commentary

a réitid The synthetic form of the third person plural, present indicative, of 'réitigh', this would generally be replaced today by 'a réitíonn (siad)'. See the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding the synthetic and analytic forms of the verb. Ó Dónaill gives 'settle, agree (with)' as the sense of 'réitigh' with 'le', citing 'réiteach le duine, to settle with someone; to make peace with someone' and 'is breá a réitíonn sibh le chéile, you get on very well together'.

'I agree' is translated as 'comhaontaim' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Provided that where ... an applicant has agreed in writing to assign a patent when granted to another party' is translated as 'Ach ... má chó-aontuigh iarratasóir i scribhinn paitinn do shanna do pháirtí eile ... nuair a deonfí í in s25(1) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. 'Notwithstanding that the price has not been agreed upon or fixed' is translated as 'cé ná beifear tar éis a chó-aontú i dtaobh an phraghais no é do shocrú' in s30(1) of the Land Act, 1933. Finally, 'and shall take such measures as may be agreed upon' is translated as 'agus déanfaidh sé cibé bearta ar a gcomhaontófar' in s12 of the Fire Services Act, 1981.

is sia See the commentary on Article 21.2.1°.

áirithe See the commentary on the previous subsection.

a sheoltar See the commentary on Article 23.1.

Standardised Irish text

Nócha lá, nó aon tréimhse is sia ná sin a réitíonn dhá Theach an Oireachtais le chéile maidir leis an mBille, an tréimhse áirithe, agus is é an lá a sheoltar an Bille ar dtús ó Dháil Éireann go Seanad Éireann tosach na tréimhse.

Direct translation

Is í an tréimhse shonraithe an tréimhse nócha lá dar tosach an lá a chéadchuirfidh<sup>1</sup> Dáil Éireann an Bille go Seanad Éireann nó aon tréimhse is faide ná sin<sup>2</sup> ar a gcomhaontóidh dhá Theach an Oireachtais i leith an Bhille.

Variants

- 1 'a chéadchuireann'
- 2 'is faide'

ARTICLE 23.2.1° AIRTEAGAL 23.2.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Baineann an t-alt sin romhainn den Airteagal seo le gach Bille a thionscnaítear i Seanad Éireann agus a ritear ag Seanad Éireann, agus a leasaítear ag Dáil Éireann, agus go meastar dá bhithin sin gur i nDáil Éireann a tionscnaíodh é.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

That preceding section of this Article concerns each Bill which is initiated in Seanad Éireann and (which is) passed by Seanad Éireann, and (which is) amended by Dáil Éireann, and that it is deemed for that reason that it was in Dáil Éireann it was initiated.

ENGLISH TEXT

The preceding section of this Article shall apply to a Bill which is initiated in and passed by Seanad Éireann, amended by Dáil Éireann, and accordingly deemed to have been initiated in Dáil Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'A Bill' is expressed as 'gach Bille' ('each Bill') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Shall apply to' is expressed as 'Baineann ... le' ('concerns') in the Irish text, this phrase also having the sense of 'apply' and is so used in particular in the earlier Acts.
- 3 'Accordingly' is expressed as 'dá bhithin sin' ('for that reason') in the Irish text, 'dá réir sin' generally expressing 'accordingly' in the Acts, with 'de réir' translating 'in accordance with' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 'Amended by' is expressed as 'agus a leasaítear ag' ('and amended by') in the Irish text.

Note that we find the following in s2 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 13) Act, 1928:

When a Bill initiated in and passed by Seanad Éireann is amended by Dáil Éireann, such Bill shall be deemed to have been initiated in Dáil Éireann and this Article shall apply accordingly .... Nuair a leasóidh Dáil Éireann Bille do tionscnuíodh i Seanad Éireann agus do ritheadh ag Seanad Éireann, tuigfar gur i nDáil Éireann do tionscnuíodh an Bille sin agus bainfidh an tAirtíogal so leis an mBille sin dá réir sin.

Commentary

dá bhithin sin See the commentary on Article 29.4.3°. 'The word "discharge" includes ceasing by any means to be a member of the Armed Forces aforesaid and cognate words shall be construed accordingly' is translated as 'foluionn an focal "scur" éirghe ar aon tslí as na Fórsaí Armtha roimh-ráite agus léireofar focail den chineál chéanna dá réir sin' in s25(2) of the National Health Insurance Act, 1923. 'The regulation shall be annulled accordingly' is translated as 'beidh an rialachán ar neamhni dá réir sin' in s112(7) of the Finance Act, 1990, for example from a modern Act. See further the commentary on Article 43.1.2° where 'uime sin' expresses 'accordingly'.

a thionscnaítear ... a tionscnaíodh See the commentary on Article 20.1 regarding the verb 'tionscain'.

Baineann ... le See the commentary on Article 3.

Standardised Irish text

Baineann an t-alt sin romhainn den Airteagal seo le gach Bille a thionscnaítear i Seanad Éireann agus a ritear ag Seanad Éireann, agus a leasaítear ag Dáil Éireann, agus a mheastar dá bhithin sin gur i nDáil Éireann a tionscnaíodh é.

Direct translation

Beidh feidhm ag an alt<sup>1</sup> sin romhainn den Airteagal seo maidir le Bille a thionscnófar i Seanad Éireann agus a rithfidh<sup>2</sup> Seanad Éireann<sup>3</sup>, a leasóidh Dáil Éireann, agus a measfar é a bheith tionscanta i nDáil Éireann dá réir sin.

Variants

- 1 'Bainfidh an t-alt'
- 2 'agus a rithfear ag'
- 3 'a dhéanfar é a thionscnamh i Seanad Éireann agus a rith ag Seanad Éireann'

ARTICLE 23.2.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 23.2.2<sup>o</sup>TÉACS GAEILGE

Chuirge sin is é an lá a sheoltar an Bille go Seanad Éireann den chéad uair tar éis é a leasú ag Dáil Éireann a thosaíos an tréimhse áirithe i gcomhair an Bhille sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

To that end it is the day on which the Bill is sent to Seanad Éireann for the first time after its amendment by Dáil Éireann that the particular period for that Bill commences.

ENGLISH TEXT

For the purpose of this application the stated period shall in relation to such a Bill commence on the day on which the Bill is first sent to Seanad Éireann after having been amended by Dáil Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'For the purpose of this application' is expressed simply as 'Chuirge sin' ('To that end') in the Irish text, 'apply' having been expressed by the phrase 'bain le' in the preceding subsection and section.
- 2 'In relation to such a Bill' is expressed as 'i gcomhair an Bhille sin' ('for that Bill') in the Irish text.
- 3 'The stated period' is expressed as 'an tréimhse áirithe' ('the particular period'), as in the previous subsections.

Note that s2 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 13) Act, 1928, contains the following:

... and for the purpose of such application the said stated period shall in relation to such Bill commence on the day on which such Bill is first sent to Seanad Éireann after being so amended by Dáil Éireann ... agus chun críche na bainte sin tosnóidh an tréimhse áirithe sin, maidir leis an mBille sin, an lá a cuirfar an Bille sin go dtí Seanad Éireann den chéad uair tar éis do Dháil Éireann é do leasú amhlaidh.

Commentary

Chuirge sin See the commentary on Article 23.1.1<sup>o</sup> regarding 'chuirge sin' and see the commentary on Articles 8.3 and 13.8.2<sup>o</sup> regarding 'purpose' in the Constitution.

'Application of Act' is translated as 'Cad leis go mbainfidh an tAcht' in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms (followed, as reference, by 'general'). 'For the purposes of the application thereto of the provision of Clause XLIII' is translated as 'maidir le forálacha Cláis XLIII ... do bhaint leo' in s5 of the Schedule to the Pier and Harbour Provisional Order Confirmation Act, 1937. 'Application of Act of 1967', on the other hand, is translated as 'Feidhm Acht 1967' in the Margin Title of s44 of the Landlord and Tenant (Amendment) Act, 1980. 'Assuming the application to the disposal of Part II of the Principal Act' is translated as 'á ghlacadh leis go bhfuil feidhm ag Cuid II den Phríomh-Acht maidir leis an diúscairt' in s63(7)(b) of the Finance Act, 1990.

a thosaíos Special form of the relative of the present indicative of 'tosaigh', this would generally today be replaced by 'a thosaíonn' – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s'. Note that a comma precedes 'a thosaíos' in the original text.

i gcomhair This prepositional phrase is translated as 'for, intended for; to get' in Ó Dónaill and as 'for, in provision or store for' in Dinneen – see the commentary on Article 14.4.

a sheoltar See the commentary on Article 23.1 regarding the verb 'seol'.

Standardised Irish text

Chuirge sin is é an lá a sheoltar an Bille go Seanad Éireann den chéad uair tar éis é a leasú ag Dáil Éireann a thosaíonn an tréimhse áirithe i gcomhair an Bhille sin.

Direct translation

Chun críche an fheidhmithe seo, tosóidh an tréimhse shonraithe i ndáil le Bille den sórt sin ar an lá a chéadchuirfear an Bille go Seanad Éireann tar éis do Dháil Éireann é a leasú<sup>1</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'tar éis a leasaithe ag Dáil Éireann', 'tar éis é a bheith leasaithe ag Dáil Éireann'

ARTICLE 24.1 AIRTEAGAL 24.1

TÉACS GAEILGE

Má ritheann Dáil Éireann Bille, seachas Bille a luaitear a bheith ina Bhille a bhfuil togra ann chun an Bunreacht a leasú, agus go seolann an Taoiseach teachtaireachtaí scríofa chun an Uachtaráin agus chun Cathaoirleach gach Tí den Oireachtas, á dheimhniú dóibh gurb é tuairim an Rialtais go bhfuil práinn agus riachtanas leis an mBille sin láithreach chun síocháin agus slándáil an phobail a chosaint, nó go bhfuil práinn agus riachtanas leis láithreach toisc éigeandáil phoiblí inmheánach nó idirnáisiúnta a bheith ann, ansin má bheartaíonn Dáil Éireann amhlaidh le rún, agus go n-aontaíonn an tUachtarán leis an rún, tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, ní foláir an tréimhse a fhágfar an Bille sin faoi bhreithniú Sheanad Éireann a ghiorrú agus a chur faoin teorainn a luaitear sa rún.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

If Dáil Éireann passes a Bill, other than a Bill which is mentioned as being a Bill which contains a proposal to amend the Constitution, and the Taoiseach sends written messages to the President and to the Chairman of each House of the Oireachtas, affirming to them that it is the opinion of the Government that there is an urgency and necessity (to have) the Bill immediately to protect the peace and security of the people, or that there is an urgency and necessity to have it immediately because of there being a public internal or international emergency, then if Dáil Éireann so determines by resolution, and the President assents to the resolution, after taking counsel with the Council of State, the period in which that Bill will be left under the consideration of Seanad Éireann must be shortened and put under the limit which is mentioned in the resolution.

ENGLISH TEXT

If and whenever on the passage by Dáil Éireann of any Bill, other than a Bill expressed to be a Bill containing a proposal to amend the Constitution, the Taoiseach certifies by messages in writing addressed to the President and to the Chairman of each House of the Oireachtas that, in the opinion of the Government, the Bill is urgent and immediately necessary for the preservation of the public peace and security, or by reason of the existence of a public emergency, whether domestic or international, the time for the consideration of such Bill by Seanad Éireann shall, if Dáil Éireann so resolves and if the President, after consultation with the Council of State, concurs, be abridged to such period as shall be specified in the resolution.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'If and whenever on the passage by Dáil Éireann of any Bill' is expressed simply as 'Má ritheann Dáil Éireann Bille' ('If Dáil Éireann passes a Bill') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Expressed' is again expressed as 'luaitear' ('mentioned') in the Irish text.
- 3 'The Taoiseach certifies by messages in writing addressed to the President ... that, in the opinion of the Government, the Bill is urgent' is expressed in the Irish text as 'agus go seolann an Taoiseach teachtaireachtaí scríofa chun an Uachtaráin ... á dheimhniú dóibh gurb é tuairim an Rialtais go bhfuil práinn ... leis an mBille sin', 'and the Taoiseach sends written messages to the President ..., affirming to them that it is the opinion of the Government that the Bill is urgent'.
- 4 'That ... the Bill is urgent and immediately necessary' is expressed in the Irish text as 'go bhfuil práinn agus riachtanas leis an mBille sin láithreach' ('that there is an urgency and necessity for / to have that Bill immediately') in the Irish text, this phrase (with 'leis' ['it'] replacing 'an Bille' ['the Bill']) being repeated in the Irish text alone.
- 5 'Preservation' is expressed by 'cosaint', the Irish legal term for 'defence', whereas 'preserve' is generally expressed today by 'caomhnaigh'.
- 6 'Public', in the phrase 'public peace and security', is expressed as 'an phobail' ('of the people/community') in the Irish text, as against the usual direct translation of 'public', 'poiblí', which expresses 'public' in the phrase 'éigeandáil phoiblí' ('a public emergency'); we also find this genitive of 'pobal' translating 'public' in the Acts.

- 7 'A public emergency, whether domestic or international' is expressed as 'éigeandáil phoiblí inmheánach nó idirnáisiúnta' ('an international or an internal public emergency') in the Irish text.
- 8 'If Dáil Éireann so resolves' is expressed as 'ansin má bheartaíonn Dáil Éireann amhlaidh le rún' ('then if Dáil Éireann so determines by resolution') in the Irish text.
- 9 'And if the President ... concurs' is expressed as 'agus go n-aontaíonn an tUachtarán leis an rún' ('and [that] the President assents to the resolution') in the Irish text; note that no comma follows this phrase in the original Irish text, unlike the current popular edition, and corresponding to the comma in the English text.
- 10 'The time for the consideration of such Bill by Seanad Éireann' is expressed as 'an tréimhse a fhágfar an Bille sin faoi bhreithniú Sheanad Éireann' ('the period which that Bill will be left under the consideration of Seanad Éireann') in the Irish text.
- 11 'Shall be' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must be') in the Irish text.
- 12 'Abridged to such period as shall be specified in the resolution' is expressed as 'a ghiorrú agus a chur faoin teorainn a luaitear sa rún' ('shortened and put under the limit which is mentioned in the resolution') in the Irish text.

Commentary

a luaitear 'Luaim' is translated as 'I cite' in Téarmaí DLÍ, 'luadhaim' being translated as 'I mention, speak of, tell' in Dinneen and 'luaigh' being translated as 'mention, cite' in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Articles 12.10.1°, 14.5.2° and 28.3.3°, where 'luaigh' expresses 'state', 'specify' and 'express', respectively.

Turning to 'express' in the early Acts, 'subject to such restrictions and conditions (which shall be expressed on the certificate)' is translated as 'fé pé cosca agus coiníollacha (adéarfai sa teistias)' in s7(3) of the Censorship of Films Act, 1923. 'At the date at which such notice is expressed to take effect' is translated as 'ar an dáta a bheidh luaidhte mar dháta éifeachta don bhfógra san' in s7(2) of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923. 'The memorandum and articles of association of the Corporation shall be so framed and expressed' is translated as 'Déanfar memorandum agus airtíogail chomhlachais na Corparáide do dhréachtú agus d'fhocalú i slí go' in s12(1) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1927. Finally, 'the proclamation shall be expressed and shall operate to summon the Oireachtas' is translated as 'déarfadh agus déanfadh an fógra an tOireachtas ... do ghairm' in s1(3) of the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1926.

Looking at modern Acts, 'in which the marriage of parents of the donee or successor was, at the date of the disposition, expressed to be the consideration' is translated as 'ar sainíodh gurbh é pósadh tuismitheoirí an deontáí nó an chomharba an chomaoín ar dháta na diúscartha' in s46(1) of the Finance Act, 1981. 'On any amount (whether expressed to be income or not ...)' is translated as 'i leith aon mhéid (bíodh sé sainráite gur ioncam é nó nach ea ...)’ in s11(6) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976. See further the commentary on Articles 46.3 and 50.2 (where ‘luaigh’ again expresses ‘express’) and on Article 37.2 (added to the original text by the Sixth Amendment of the Constitution) where ‘expressed’ is rendered as ‘sainráite’, ‘nocht’ expressing ‘express’ in Article 40.6.1<sup>i</sup>.

á dheimhniú ‘Deimhním’ is translated as ‘I certify; I vouch’ in Téarmaí Dlí, ‘deimhnighim’ being translated as ‘I affirm, prove, verify, emphasise’ in Dinneen, and ‘deimhnigh’ being translated as ‘certify; affirm, assure; check’ in Ó Dónaill, who cites ‘dheimhnigh sé dom (go), he assured me (that)’. See the commentary on Articles 1 and 22.2.1<sup>o</sup> where ‘deimhnigh’ respectively expresses ‘affirm’ and ‘certify’.

‘As certified by medical certificate’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as ‘ar a bhfuarthas deimhniú dochtúra’ in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health. ‘To certify in writing as to the cause of the detention’ is translated as ‘deimhniú do dhéanamh i scríbhinn i dtaobh cúise a choimeádtha’ in Article 6 of the 1922 Constitution. ‘The Minister shall ... certify by order the date of the publication of the result of such census’ is translated as ‘déanfaidh an tAire ... dáta foilsithe thoradh an daonáirimh sin a dheimhniú le hordú’ in s156(1) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. ‘Unless the purpose of the appropriation has been recommended to the Dáil by a Message from the Government’ is translated as ‘mura mbeidh Teachtaireacht ag an Dáil ón Rialtas ag moladh chuspóir an leithreasaithe di’ in s142(2) of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997).

go seolann See the commentary on Article 23.1 regarding the verb ‘seol’, which expresses ‘send’ in that Article. Turning to ‘address’ in the early Acts, ‘Where the name of an occupier ... is not known to the Commissioners, such notice may be addressed to “the occupier” ... of the premises without naming him’ is translated as ‘Marab eol do sna Coimisinéirí cad is ainm do shealbhóir ... féadfar an fógra san do sheola go dtí “sealbhóir” an áitribh gan é d’ainmniú’ in s2(5) of the Civic Guard (Acquisition of Premises) Act, 1923. ‘To address ... to’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as ‘do chur chun ...’ in early Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann. Note that ‘A member of the Board may at any time resign his office as such member by letter addressed and sent to the Board’ is translated as ‘Féadfidh ball den Bhord aon uair eirge as a oifig mar bhall den tsórt san tré leidir do dhíriú agus do chur chun an Bhúird’ in s5 of the Dentists Act, 1928. In Article 33 of the 1922 Constitution, ‘Such persons who have at any time been members of Seanad Éireann ... as signify by notice in writing addressed to the President of the Executive Council their desire to be included in the panel’ is translated as ‘Pé daoine do bhí aon uair ‘na mbaill de Sheanad Éireann ... a chuirfidh in úil d’Uachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle le fógra i scríbhinn gur mian leo a gcur ar an ainm-liost’.

Looking at modern Acts, ‘either party may request interpretation of the award by an application in writing addressed to the Secretary-General’ is translated as ‘féadfaidh aon pháirtí a iarraidh go léireofaí an dámhachtain trí iarratas i scríbhinn a sheoladh chuig an a chosaint The verbal noun of ‘cosain’ – see the commentary on Article 40.3.1<sup>o</sup>. Looking at ‘preservation’ in early Acts, in s3(2) of the Offences Against the State (Amendment) Act, 1940, ‘If and whenever and so often as the Government makes and publishes a proclamation declaring that the powers conferred by this Part of this Act are necessary to secure the preservation of public peace and order’ is translated as ‘Má dheineann agus má fhoillsíonn agus pé uair agus chó minic agus a dhéanfaidh agus a fhoilseoidh an Riaghaltas furógra á dhearbhu na comhachta bronntar leis an gcuid seo den Acht so do bheith ag teastáil chun a chur in áirithe go gcoimeádfar an tsíocháin agus an t-ord puiblí’. In Article 47 of the 1922 Constitution, ‘These provisions shall not apply to Money Bills or to such Bills as shall be declared by both Houses to be necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety’ is translated as ‘Ní bheidh feidhm ag na forálacha so maidir le Billí Airgid ná le pé Billí a fhógróidh an dá Thigh a bheith riachtanach láithreach chun an tsíocháin no an tsláinte no an tsábháiltacht phuibli do chosaint’.

Ard-Rúnaí’ in Article 50(1) of the Second Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1980.

‘Cosaint na puiblíochta’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘preservation of public safety’ in the Dáil Order Paper, 1926, p. 36, with ‘cimeád suas’ translating ‘preservation (of State)’ in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1927, p. 505, and ‘caomhnadh na sláinte puibli’ translating ‘preservation of public health’ in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health. ‘Bancánachtaí, etc., do chosaint’ translates ‘Preservation of embankments, etc.’ in the Margin Title of s44 of the Land Act, 1923. ‘That I will see and cause the peace to be kept and preserved’ is translated as ‘go bhféachfad chuige agus go n-abharód go ndéanfar an tsíocháin do chimeád agus do choinneáil’ in the First Schedule to the District Justices (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. ‘Preservation of powers of the Military Forces’ is translated as ‘Chun comhachta na bhFórsaí Mileata do chimeád slán’ in the Margin Title of s15 of the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923. ‘The Minister may by order do all such things and make all such regulations as in his opinion shall be necessary for the proper preservation and management of the property’ is translated as ‘Féadfidh an tAire, le hordú, gach ní agus gach rialachán do dhéanamh is dó leis is gá chun buan-chimeád agus bainistí cheart na maoiné’ in s8(5) of the Local Government Act, 1925. Note, finally, that ‘in or about the storing, impounding and preservation of such goods, animals and chattels’ is translated as ‘le linn no i dtaobh na hearraí, na hainmhithe agus an mhaoin sin do chimeád i stór, i bpóna agus i dtaisce’ in s7(3)(b) of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1923, with ‘and also peels and fruits candied, crystallised and otherwise preserved with sugar’ being translated as ‘agus fós croicne agus torthaí atá crústaithe, criostalaithe no leasuithe ar aon tslí eile le síúicre’ in s15(3) of the Finance Act, 1924.

‘Lawfully engaged on duties relating to the preservation of peace and order’ is translated as ‘bheidh ag gabháil go dleathach do dhualgaisí bhainfidh le síocháin agus ordú do choimeád’ in s3 of the Treason Act, 1939. ‘In the maintenance or restoration of the public peace’ is translated as ‘chun an tsíocháin phoibli a chaomhaint nó d’athbhunú’

in s90(1) of the Defence Act, 1954. 'General power ... of the Commissioner ... to preserve order in public places' is translated as 'cumhacht ghinearálta ... an Choimisinéara ... ord a choimeád in áiteanna poiblí' in s126 of the Road Traffic Act, 1961, 'i dtaobh ordú do choimeád in áiteanna poiblí' translating 'to preserve order in public places' in s160 of the Road Traffic Act, 1933. 'To preserve the rights conferred on them by virtue of those enactments' is translated as 'chun na cearta a thugtar dóibh de bhua na n-achtachán sin a chaomhnú' in s133(1) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, 'chun a urlámhas ar an aerárthach a chaomhnú' translating 'to preserve his control of the aircraft' in s1 of Article 9 of the Second Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1973. See further the commentary on Articles 28.3.3° and 40.4.6°i where 'preserve' is expressed respectively by 'caomhnaigh' and 'coimeád'.

práinn See the commentary on Article 15.8.2° where this headword expresses 'emergency'. 'Práinn' is translated as 'hurry, rush; urgent need, exigency' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'tá práinn leis, it is urgent' and 'níl práinn orm leis, I am not in a hurry with it'. Dinneen translates 'práidhinn' as 'urgency, a difficulty, need; trepidation, hurry, flurry, rush', citing 'tá práidhinn agam leis, I require it'. Stair Éamuinn Uí Chléire, written by Seán Ó Neachtain (1655-1728), is the source of DIL's two citations of this word in the literature, DIL following the headword with the abbreviation for 'modern' and translating 'práidhinn' as 'urgency, difficulty, strait'.

'An emergency situation for the purpose of subsection (9) of this section shall be deemed to exist where, in the opinion of the manager, the works concerned are urgent and necessary (having regard to personal health, public health and safety considerations)' is translated as 'Measfar éigeandáil chun críche fho-alt (9) den alt seo a bheith ann i gcás, i dtuairim an bhainisteora, gur oibreacha iad na hoibreacha lena mbaineann atá práinneach agus riachtanach (ag féachaint do shláinte phearsanta, do shláinte an phobail agus do chúrsaí sábháilteachta)' in s27 of the Housing Act, 1988. In s22(14) of the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Act, 1961, 'A judge of the Circuit Court may make out of court any orders which he may deem to be urgent' is translated as 'Féadfaidh breitheamh den Chúirt Chuarda aon orduithe a measfaidh sé práinn a bheith leo a dhéanamh taobh amuigh de chúirt'. In the Preamble to the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'And whereas it is a matter of urgent necessity to provide a code of laws and regulations for the enforcement of military discipline' is translated as 'Agus de bhri go bhfuil práinn mhór le córus dlíthe agus rialachán do sholáthar chun smacht airm do chur i bhfeidhm ar na fórsaí armtha'. 'In cases of urgent and pressing necessity' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'i gcásanna go bhfuil práinn agus cruadhóg ag baint leo' in early Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann, 'urgent necessity' being translated as 'riachtanas nách foláir féachaint chuige láithreach' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1922/23, and 'matters of urgent public importance' being translated as 'nithe go bhfuil deabha agus tácht phuiblí ag baint leo' in the Dáil Order Paper, 1925, p. 437.

As regards 'immediately necessary', in s6(3) of the Defence (Amendment) Act, 1987, 'take ... any reasonable measures which he has reasonable grounds for believing to be immediately necessary to protect the safety of the aircraft' is translated as 'aon bhearta réasúnacha a dhéanamh ... a mbeidh foras réasúnach aige lena chreidiúint gur gá iad a dhéanamh láithreach chun sábháilteacht an aerárthaigh ... a chosaint'. 'This paragraph shall not apply to the running of any omnibus by the Company for the purpose of meeting a public requirement of a temporary nature or an immediate necessity' is translated as 'Ní bhainfidh an mhír seo leis an gCuideachta do thiomáint aon omnibus i gcóir riachtanais phuiblí shealadaigh no i gcóir riachtanais láithrigh' in s3(a) of the Dublin United Tramways (Omnibus Services) Act, 1925. 'Pass such further legislation and do all such other things as may be necessary to implement the Scheduled Treaty' is translated as 'rithfidh ... pé reachtúchán eile agus gach ní eile a bheidh riachtanach chun an Conradh Sgeidealta do thabhairt chun críche' in s2 of the Constitution of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) Act, 1922. Finally, 'and there do all such matters or things as in the opinion of the Minister ... are necessary for or incidental to such maintenance' is translated as 'agus gach ní no rud do dhéanamh san áit sin is dó leis an Aire ... do bheith riachtanach i gcóir an choinneáil-i-dtreo san no do bheith ag gabháil leis sin' in s84(2) of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1927.

éigeandáil 'A national emergency exists' is rendered as 'go bhfuil ann ... staid phráinne náisiúnta' in Article 28.3.3°, following the First Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1939; as J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 194, states in his commentary on the present Article, "This "public emergency, domestic or international" must include the "national emergency" of Article 28.3.3°, but the different wording implies that they are not coextensive'. Note that the Irish wording differs even more than the English, Article 28.3.3° following Article 15.8.2° where 'In cases of special emergency' is expressed as 'i gcás práinn speisialta a bheith ann'.

'Éigeandáil' is translated as 'dangerous situation, emergency' in Ó Dónaill and as 'necessity, distress' in Dinneen. This compound of 'éicen' ('necessity, compulsion') and 'dál' ('a meeting, conference, assembly' and 'a dispute, controversy' being but two sets of senses of this word in DIL) is translated as 'a stiff encounter; a distressing position, dangerous strait' in DIL, citing 'airc na éicen na écendál' from the version of the Táin contained in the twelfth-century Book of Leinster.

'Declaration by the Government of existence of a state of emergency' is translated as 'Dearbhú ón Rialtas go bhfuil staid éigeandála ann' in the Margin Title of s15 of the Prices Act, 1958. 'In case of any emergency' is translated as 'i gcás aon éigeandála poiblí' in s4 of the Office Premises Act, 1958, and s118(1) of the Factories Act, 1955.

Looking at early Acts, in Article 25 of the 1922 Constitution, 'in cases of special emergency' is translated as 'ar ócáidí de riachtanas speisialta'. 'That certain emergency powers should be given to Local Authorities' is translated as 'comhachtanna áirithe i gcóir éigeandála do thabhairt d'Údaráis Áitiúla' in the Preamble to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'comhacht ócáide' translating 'emergency power' in the Proceedings of Seanad Éireann, 1926, p. 178. 'Ócáid práinne' translates 'emergency' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1926, p. 225, 'ócáid dainseura náisiúnta' translating 'national emergency' in the Dáil Order Paper, 1925, p. 363. 'Proclamation of national emergency' is translated as 'Furógra strus-ócáide' in the Margin Title of s1 of the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1926 [styled in Irish 'an tAcht chun Cosanta na Puibhíochta (Comhachta Ócáideacha), 1926'], with 'the Executive Council may by proclamation declare that a state of national emergency exists' being translated as 'féadfadh an Ard-Chomhairle a fhaisnéis le furógra go bhfuil strus-ócáid náisiúnta ann' in s1(1). 'The Executive Council may at any time or times by order under their hand declare that a state of emergency exists in Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'Féadfadh an Ard-Chomhairle a fhaisnéis, aon uair no uaireanna, le hordú fé n-a láimh, go bhfuil staid práinne i Saorstát Éireann' in s180(1) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

inmheánach This adjective is translated as 'internal, interior' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'cogadh inmheánach, internal war'. Dinneen translates 'inmheadhónach' as 'internal, inward; middle, moderate, mean, indifferent'. DIL translates 'inmedónach' as 'internal, inner, inward; medium, intermediate, mediocre', this word glossing Latin 'interior' in the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian, DIL citing 'ac denam cocaidh inmedhónaigh atraibh (ettraib, v.l.) féin' from In Cath Cathardha (The Civil War of the Romans), the twelfth-century Irish version of Lucan's Pharsalia. See further the commentary on Article 29.6.

'When borrowing in domestic or international financial markets' is translated as 'Nuair a bheidh an Ciste ag fáil iasachtaí ar mhargaí intíre nó ar mhargaí idirnáisiúnta' in s6 of Article VII of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (Financial Support Fund) (Agreement) Act, 1976, 'cloi le beartais eacnamaíochta iomchuí, intíre agus idirnáisiúnta' translating 'follow appropriate domestic and economic policies' in the Preamble to the Schedule. 'Irrespective of whether the aircraft is engaged in an international or domestic flight' is translated as 'is cuma cé acu ar eitilt idirnáisiúnta nó ar eitilt intíre don aerárthach' in s2 of Article 4 of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1975. 'It shall also apply to arbitral awards not considered as domestic awards in the State' is translated as 'Bainfidh sé freisin le dámhachtaintí eadrána nach meastar gur dámhachtaintí intíre iad sa Stát' in s1 of the First Schedule to the Arbitration Award, 1980. In the Long Title of the European Communities (Amendment) Act, 1979, 'An Act to amend the European Communities Act, 1972, so as to provide that the Treaty relating to ... shall be part of the domestic law of the State' is translated as 'Acht do leasú Acht na gComhphobal Eorpach, 1972, chun a fhoráil gur cuid de dhli baile an Stáit an Conradh maidir le ...'. Finally, in passing, note that 'a garage, conservatory, domestic office, or other out-office' is translated as 'aon gharáiste, tigh gloine, oifig thighis no mion-tigh eile' in s11(3) of the Local Government Act, 1927.

See further the commentary on Article 45.2.i where 'their domestic needs' is expressed as 'riachtanais a dteaghlach'.

má bheartaíonn 'Plan, contrive; consider' is a secondary sense of 'beartaigh' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'scéim a bheartú, to devise a scheme' and 'de réir mar a bhí beartaíthe, according to plan'. 'Beartaigh' with the preposition 'ar' is translated as 'decide (upon)' by Ó Dónaill, who cites 'beartú ar rud a dhéanamh, to determine to do something'. Dinneen translates 'beartaim' with 'ar' as 'I fix upon', giving 'I say, pronounce an opinion; I think, suggest, estimate' as senses of 'beartaim'. 'Beartughadh' is translated by Dinneen as 'act of brandishing; act of conceiving; judging; thinking; planning; gathering; tucking up'. See further the commentary on Article 28.3.3°. Note that 'if Dáil Éireann so resolves' is expressed as 'Má ritheann Dáil Éireann rún chuige sin' in Article 23.1.1° – see the commentary on that Article for early translations of 'resolve'.

faoi bhreithniú See the commentary on Articles 17.1.1° and 20.1 regarding 'breithnigh' expressing 'consider'. 'Breithniú' is translated as 'adjudication' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill. 'Breathnú', the form in the enrolled text, is translated as 'observation, examination' and 'consideration, judgement' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'breathnú a dhéanamh ar chás, to consider a case' and 'is é sin mo bhreathnú ar an scéal, that is what I think of the matter'. Dinneen translates 'breathnughadh' as 'act of judging, perceiving, observing; judgement, reflection, examination ...', translating 'breathnughadh do dhéanamh ar' as 'to examine'. DIL cites 'fágaim fá breathnughadh an leightheora cia córa a mheas' ('I leave to the reader's judgement ...') from Keating's seventeenth-century Eochair-sgiath an Aifrinn.

'Ar ócáid seachas le linn Bille nó tairiscint ó chomhalta príobháideach a bheith faoi bhreithniú' translates 'other than while a private member's Bill or motion is under consideration' in s20 of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997). 'To keep under general review practices ... in relation to the advertising of ... goods' is translated as 'cleachtas ... a choimeád faoi bhreithniú ginearálta i ndáil le hearraí ... a fhógairt' in s9(6)(a) of the Consumer Information Act, 1978. See further the commentary on the next section.

Má ritheann 'If and whenever' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'i gcás' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1922/23. In s23(2)(c) of the Local Government (Dublin) Act, 1930, 'if and whenever, on or after such cessor or the appointed day ... there is a coroner duly appointed for the Borough' is translated as 'má deintear agus pé uair a dhéanfar, ar scur do amhlaidh no dá éis sin no ar an lá ceaptha ... corónéir do cheapa go cuibhe don Bhuirg' in s23(2)(c) of the Local Government (Dublin) Act, 1930. 'If and whenever the Minister is satisfied that ...' is translated as 'Más deimhin, agus aon uair is deimhin, leis an Aire' in s24(1) of the Fisheries Act, 1980. 'If and whenever the Minister ... so provides by order' is translated as 'má dhéanann agus aon uair a dhéanfaidh an tAire ... sin a fhoráil le hordú' in s1(3)(a) of the Rates on Agricultural Land (Relief) Act, 1978.

Turning to 'passage', 'in relation to meters which are at the passing of this Act installed on the premises of consumers of gas' is translated as 'maidir le méadracha atá, le linn riththe an Achta seo, curtha suas in áitreabhacha geas-úsáidir' in s5(3) of the Gas Regulation Act, 1928. 'Motion for passage of Bill' is translated as 'Tairiscint chun Bille a rith' in the Margin Title of s124 of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997), 'for a date not earlier than fourteen days after the passage of the resolution of concurrence' being translated as 'ar dháta nach luaithe ná ceithre lá dhéag tar éis an rún comhthoilithe a rith' in s133. 'If those provisions of the said Bill are rejected by Dáil Éireann during the passage of the Bill through the Oireachtas' is translated as 'má dhiúltaíonn Dáil Éireann do na forálacha sin den Bhille sin le linn do Bhille a bheith ag gabháil tríd an Oireachtas' in s85(1)(b) of the Finance Act, 1974, 'le linn an Bhille sin do bheith ag gabháil tríd an Oireachtas' translating 'during the passage of such Bill through the Oireachtas' in s2(1)(c) of the Customs Duties (Provisional Imposition) Act, 1931.

See the commentary on Articles 13.3.1 and 17.2 regarding 'rith'.

tuairim See the commentary on Article 22.2.1<sup>o</sup> regarding 'opinion' in early Acts and note that 'the provisions relating to the statement of a case for the opinion of the High Court on a point of law' is translated as 'na forálacha a bhaineann le cás d'aithris chun barúil na hArd-Chúirte d'fháil ar phuínte dlí' in s4(3) of Part II of the First Schedule to the Finance Act, 1926. 'If, in the opinion of the Government, he has become incapable' is translated as 'más dóigh leis an Rialtas go bhfuil sé éirithe neamhinniúil' in s2(b) of the Data Protection Act, 1988. 'The part of the rate of such duty that, in the opinion of the Government, was the fiscal element therein' is translated as '(leis) an gcuid de ráta na dleachta sin arbh í, i dtuairim an Rialtais, an eilimint fhioscach a bhí inti' in s46 of the Finance Act, 1975.

a ghiorrú Note that in s17(2) of the Patents Act, 1964, 'The period ... shall be extended to such period ... as may be specified' is translated as 'Déanfar an tréimhse ... a fhadú go dtí cibé tréimhse ... a shonrófar'.

riachtanas This headword is translated as 'necessity, need' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'má tá riachtanas leis' as 'if there is a need for it' – see the commentary on Articles 45.2.1<sup>o</sup> and 45.4.1<sup>o</sup>.

slándáil See the commentary on Articles 28.3.3<sup>o</sup> and 45.2.v.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2.

go n-aontaíonn 'Aontaím' is translated as 'I assent' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 22.2.3<sup>o</sup> where 'aontaigh' expresses 'accede', and see the commentary on Article 15.8.2<sup>o</sup> regarding 'assent', expressed there by 'toiligh'.

comhairle a ghlacadh See the commentary on Article 13.2.3<sup>o</sup>.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

teorainn See the commentary on Article 2.

Gender-proofed Irish text

The only emendation involved here would be emending 'chun Cathaoirleach' to 'chun cathaoirleach', following the gender-proofed English text.

Direct translation

Má dhéanann agus<sup>1</sup> aon uair a dhéanfaidh an Taoiseach, ar Dháil Éireann a<sup>2</sup> rith aon Bhille, seachas Bille a shonraítear a bheith ina Bhille ina bhfuil togra chun an Bunreacht a leasú, a dheimhniú le teachtaireachtaí i scríbhinn arna gcur<sup>3</sup> chun an Uachtaráin agus chun Chathaoirleach gach Tí den Oireachtas, go bhfuil práinn leis an mBille agus go bhfuil gá leis láithreach chun an tsíocháin agus an tslándáil phoiblí a chaomhnú, nó de bhíthin éigeandáil phoiblí a bheith ann, cibé acu arb éigeandáil intíre<sup>4</sup> nó idirnáisiúnta í, má ritheann Dáil Éireann rún amhlaidh agus má chomhaontaíonn an tUachtarán, tar éis dul i gcomhairle<sup>5</sup> leis an gComhairle Stáit, déanfar an tréimhse<sup>6</sup> chun an Bille sin a bhreithniú<sup>7</sup> ag Seanad Éireann a ghiorrú go cibé tréimhse a shonrófar sa rún.

Variants

1 'nó'

2 'do'

3 'arna ndírú', 'arna seoladh'

4 'bhaile'

5 'i ndáil chomhairle', 'i gcomhchomhairle'

6 'déanfar, má ritheann Dáil Éireann rún amhlaidh agus má chomhaontaíonn an tUachtarán, tar éis dul i gcomhairle leis an gComhairle Stáit, an tréimhse'

7 'a mheas', 'a bhreathnú'

ARTICLE 24.2 AIRTEAGAL 24.2

TÉACS GAEILGE

Bille ar bith a ndearnadh an tréimhse chun a bhreithnithe ag Seanad Éireann a ghiorrú faoin Airteagal seo, má tharlaíonn,

- i gcás Bille nach Bille Airgid, go ndiúltaíonn Seanad Éireann dó nó go ritheann Seanad Éireann é maille le leasuithe dá ndiúltaíonn Dáil Éireann nó nach ndéanann Seanad Éireann é a rith ná diúltú dó, nó,
- i gcás Bille Airgid, go gcuireann Seanad Éireann ar ais go Dáil Éireann é maille le moltaí nach nglacann Dáil Éireann leo nó nach ndéanann Seanad Éireann é a chur ar ais go Dáil Éireann, taobh istigh den tréimhse a luaitear sa rún, ní foláir a mheas gur ritheadh an Bille ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais i gceann na tréimhse sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any Bill the period for the consideration of which by Seanad Éireann was shortened under this Article, if it happens,

- in the case of a Bill which is not a Money Bill, that Seanad Éireann rejects it or that Seanad Éireann passes it along with amendments which Dáil Éireann rejects or that Seanad Éireann does not pass nor reject it, or,
- in the case of a Money Bill, that Seanad Éireann sends it back to Dáil Éireann along with recommendations which Dáil Éireann does not accept or that Seanad Éireann does not send it back to Dáil Éireann, within the period mentioned in the resolution, it must be deemed that the Bill was passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas at the end of that period.

ENGLISH TEXT

Where a Bill, the time for the consideration of which by Seanad Éireann has been abridged under this Article,

- (a) is, in the case of a Bill which is not a Money Bill, rejected by Seanad Éireann or passed by Seanad Éireann with amendments to which Dáil Éireann does not agree or neither passed nor rejected by Seanad Éireann, or
- (b) is, in the case of a Money Bill, either returned by Seanad Éireann to Dáil Éireann with recommendations which Dáil Éireann does not accept or is not returned by Seanad Éireann to Dáil Éireann, within the period specified in the resolution, the Bill shall be deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas at the expiration of that period.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Where a Bill ... is' is expressed as 'Bille ar bith ... má tharlaíonn' ('Any Bill ... if it happens') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Time' is again expressed as 'tréimhse' ('period') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Consideration' is again expressed by the term translated as 'adjudication' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'breithniú', though it has the sense of 'consideration' in the modern Acts.
- 4 'Amendments to which Dáil Éireann does not agree' is expressed as 'leasuithe dá ndiúltaíonn Dáil Éireann' ('amendments which Dáil Éireann rejects') in the Irish text.
- 5 'With recommendations' is expressed as 'maille le moltaí' ('along with recommendations') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Specified' is again expressed as 'luaitear' ('cited/'mentioned') in the Irish text.
- 7 'At the expiration of' is expressed as 'i gceann' ('at the end of') in the Irish text.
- 8 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, with 'the Bill shall be deemed to have been passed' being expressed as 'ní foláir a mheas gur ritheadh an Bille' ('it must be deemed that the Bill was passed') in the Irish text.
- 9 A comma follows 'no' ('or'), before paragraph (b), in the Irish text, no corresponding comma being found in the English text.

Section 2 of this Article is a new section inserted in place of the original Article 24.2 by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941. The original section read as follows:

Where a Bill the time for the consideration of which by Seanad Éireann has been abridged under this Article is within the period specified in the resolution either rejected by Seanad Éireann or passed by Seanad Éireann with amendments or recommendations to which Dáil Éireann does not agree or is neither passed (with or without amendments or recommendations) nor rejected by Seanad Éireann within the period so specified the Bill shall be deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas at the expiration of that period. Bille ar bith go ndearnadh an tréimhse chun a bhreathnuighthe ag Seanad Éireann do ghiorrú fán Airteagal so, má thárluigheann taobh istigh den tréimhse a luaidhtear insan rún go ndiúltaigheann Seanad Éireann dó, nó go ritheann Seanad Éireann é maille le leasuithe nó le moltaibh dá ndiúltaigheann

Dáil Éireann, nó muna ndéanann Seanad Éireann é rith (maille le leasuithe nó le moltaibh nó dá n-éaghmuis) nó diúltaidh dhó taobh istigh den tréimhse luaidhtear amhlaidh, ní foláir a mheas gur ritheadh an Bille ag dhá Thigh an Oireachtais i gceann na tréimhse sin.

Commentary

chun a bhreithnithe Genitive singular of 'breithniú', verbal noun of 'breithnigh' – see the commentary on the previous section. In s1 of Article III of the Schedule to the International Development Association (Special Action Account) Act, 1978, 'programmes being prepared for consideration by the Executive Directors' is translated as 'cláir a bheith á n-ullmhú lena mbreithniú ag na Stiúrthóirí Feidhmiúcháin', with 'or that affairs call for consideration by a meeting of the members of the society' being translated as 'nó gur call go mbreithneofaí na gnóthaí ag cruinniú de chomhaltaí an chumainn' in s29(1)(b) of the Building Societies Act, 1976.

moltaí Plural of 'moladh', 'recommendation, proposal' being one of the secondary senses of that headword in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'moladh a dhéanamh faoi rud, to make a recommendation about something'. Dinneen includes 'appraisal or review, a decision or recommendation' among the sense of 'moladh'. See the commentary on Article 21.1.2°. Note, for example, that in s17 of the 'Laoighis County Scheme' in the First Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'Those applications when inspected by the Sub-Committee of the District to be forwarded with recommendations to the Hospitals and Homes Committee' is translated as 'Tar éis d'Fhó-Choiste an Cheanntair iad do scrúdú, na hiarrataisí sin do chur ag triall ar Choiste na nOspideul agus na dTeaghlach maraon le molta'.

i gceann See the commentary on Article 21.2.1°. 'At the expiration of that period' is translated as 'ar dheireadh a bheith leis an tréimhse sin' in s6 of the First Schedule to the Corporation Tax Act, 1976, following s241(1) of the Income Tax Act, 1976; as 'ag deireadh na tréimhse sin' in s38(3) of the Patents Act, 1964, and as 'i ndeireadh na tréimhse sin' in s24 of the Galway Harbour Act, 1935.

má tharlaíonn Literally 'if it happens'. 'Where (a Bill)' is often translated as 'I gcás (Bille)' in the Acts, but as 'in the case of a Bill' follows this in the English text of this section, a different expression of 'Where a Bill' had to be found. 'Má tharlaíonn go mbeidh oifig an Cheann Comhairle folamh' translates 'When a vacancy has occurred in the office of Ceann Comhairle' in s10 of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997), for example. 'Má tharlaíonn agus cibé uair a tharlóidh ... gur dóigh leis an Aire ...' translates 'If and whenever ... the Minister is of opinion ...' in s2(3) of the Prisons Act, 1972.

ní foláir a mheas See the commentary on Article 11 regarding 'ní foláir' and on Articles 12.6.2° and 16.6 regarding 'meas', 'deem', which verb expresses 'consider' in Article 20.2.2°, for example. Commenting on the translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that, unlike 'ní foláir a mheas', 'measfar' below could have the sense of 'suppose' and recommends 'áireofar' as an alternative.

nach nglacann ... leo See the commentary on Articles 8.2 and 13.1.3°, 'glacaim le' being translated as 'I accept' in Téarmaí Dlí.

go ndiúltaíonn ... dó See the commentary on Article 13.2.2°.

maille le See the commentary on Articles 2 and 10.1.

Direct translation

An Bhille a ndearnadh an t-am lena bhreithniú ag Seanad Éireann a ghiorrú faoin Airteagal seo, más rud é,

(a) i gcás Bille nach Bille Airgid, go ndiúltaíonn Seanad Éireann dó nó go ritheann Seanad Éireann é le leasuithe nach gcomhaontaíonn Dáil Éireann leo nó nach ritheann ná nach ndiúltaíonn Seanad Éireann dó, nó

(b) i gcás Bille Airgid, go gcuireann Seanad Éireann ar ais go Dáil Éireann é le moltaí nach nglacann Dáil Éireann leo nó nach gcuireann Seanad Éireann ar ais go Dáil Éireann é, laistigh den tréimhse a shonrófar sa rún, measfar<sup>1</sup> gur rith dhá Theach an Oireachtais an Bille ag deireadh na tréimhse sin.

Variants

<sup>1</sup> 'áireofar'

ARTICLE 24.3 AIRTEAGAL 24.3

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ar dhéanamh dlí de Bhille a ndearnadh an tréimhse chun a bhreithnithe ag Seanad Éireann a ghiorrú faoin Airteagal seo, beidh sé i bhfeidhm ar feadh tréimhse nócha lá ó dháta a achtaithe, ach sin a mbeidh, mura n-aontaídh dhá Theach an Oireachtais roimh dheireadh na tréimhse sin an dlí sin a fhanacht i bhfeidhm ar feadh tréimhse is sia ná sin, agus go luaitear i rúin ón dá Theach an tréimhse a aontaítear amhlaidh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

On a Bill the period for the consideration of which by Seanad Éireann was shortened under this Article being made law, it will be in force for a period of ninety days from the date of its enactment, but that will be all, unless both Houses of the Oireachtas agree before the end of that period (that) that law remain in force for a period which is longer than that, and that the period that is so agreed is mentioned in resolutions by both Houses.

ENGLISH TEXT

When a Bill the time for the consideration of which by Seanad Éireann has been abridged under this Article becomes law it shall remain in force for a period of ninety days from the date of its enactment and no longer unless, before the expiration of that period, both Houses shall have agreed that such law shall remain in force for a longer period and the longer period so agreed upon shall have been specified in resolutions passed by both Houses.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Resolutions passed by both Houses' is expressed as 'rúin ón dá Theach' ('resolutions by both Houses') in the Irish text.
- 'When a Bill ... becomes law' is expressed as 'Ar dhéanamh dlí de Bhille' ('On a Bill's being made law') in the Irish text.
- 'It shall remain in force' is expressed as 'beidh sé i bhfeidhm' ('it shall be in force') in the Irish text, the verb 'fan' specifically expressing 'remain' later on in the section.
- 'And no longer' is expressed as 'ach sin a mbeidh' ('but that will be all') in the Irish text, this phrase being preceded and followed by commas in that text alone.
- 'Shall have agreed' is expressed simply as '(mura) n-aontaídh' ('[unless they / if they do not] agree') in the Irish text, 'aontaigh' being the Irish legal term for 'consent', though it generally means 'agree'.
- 'The expiration of that period' is expressed as 'deireadh na tréimhse sin' ('the end of that period') in the Irish text, a different phrase being used from that expressing the same English phrase in the previous section.
- 'Specified' is again expressed as 'luaitear' ('mentioned'/'cited') in the Irish text.
- 'Consideration' is again expressed by 'breithniú', which term is translated as 'adjudication' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'Time' is again expressed as 'tréimhse' ('period') in the Irish text.
- 'For a longer period' is expressed as 'ar feadh tréimhse is sia ná sin' ('for a period which is longer than that') in the Irish text.
- 'And the longer period so agreed upon' is expressed simply as 'an tréimhse a aontaítear amhlaidh' ('the period so agreed') in the Irish text.

Commentary

beidh sé i bhfeidhm ... a fhanacht i bhfeidhm 'Fanacht' is the verbal noun of 'fan', 'stay, remain'; 'fanamhaint' is the form in the original text, and is given as a separate headword in Dinneen, who associates 'fanacht' with Connacht and Ulster Irish. 'While that Act remains in force' is translated as 'faid a leanfaidh an t-Acht san i bhfeidhm' in the Preamble to the Statutory Undertakings (Continuance of Charges) (No. 2) Act, 1923, 'It shall be lawful for each of the Canal Undertakings specified in the First Column ... to continue for so long as this section remains in force to charge the ... rates ...' being translated as 'Beidh sé dleathach do gach ceann de sna Toisceanna Canálach uile sin a luaidhtear sa Chéad Cholún ... leanúint, an fhaid a fhanfaidh an t-alt so i bhfeidhm, ar éileamh na rátaí' in s3(1). 'Leanfaidh an t-alt seo i bhfeidhm go dtí an lá a cheapfar faoi fho-alt (5) agus rachaidh sé in éag ansin' translates 'This section shall remain in force until the day appointed under subsection (5) and shall then expire' in s110(4) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. In s17(b) of the Finance Act, 1981, 'and any certificate so given shall ... remain in force until the 31st day of December, 2000' is translated as 'agus aon deimhniú a thabharfar amhlaidh ... fanfaidh sé i bhfeidhm go dtí an 31ú lá de Nollaig, 2000'.

See further the commentary on Article 49.1 regarding 'i bhfeidhm'.

is sia See the commentary on Article 21.2.1°. Regarding the translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'is faide' rather than 'fhada'; the practice in the Acts in general as regards the comparative degree in such contexts, however, is simply to use the general form of the adjective.

mura n-aontaíd The synthetic form of the present indicative of 'aontaíonn', this would generally be written today as 'mura n-aontaíonn (siad)' – see the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding the synthetic and analytic forms of the verb.

sin a mbeidh The equivalent in the future tense of the more familiar phrase 'sin a bhfuil' – see the commentary on Article 12.3.2°.

luaitear See the commentary on Articles 12.10.1°, 14.5.2° and 24.1, where this verb expresses 'state', 'specify' and 'express' respectively.

chun a bhreithnithe Genitive singular of 'breithniú', verbal noun of 'breithnigh' – see the commentary on Articles 17.1.1° and 20.1.

Ar dhéanamh dlí See the commentary on Article 25.4.1° regarding 'déan de'.

Standardised Irish text

Ar dhéanamh dlí de Bhille a ndearnadh an tréimhse chun a bhreithnithe ag Seanad Éireann a ghiorrú faoin Airteagal seo, beidh sé i bhfeidhm ar feadh tréimhse nócha lá ó dháta a achtaithe, ach sin a mbeidh, mura n-aontaíonn dhá Theach an Oireachtais roimh dheireadh na tréimhse sin an dlí sin a fhanacht i bhfeidhm ar feadh tréimhse is sia ná sin, agus go luaitear i rúin ón dá Theach an tréimhse a aontaítear amhlaidh.

Direct translation

Nuair a thagann Bille a ndearnadh an tréimhse chun é a bhreithniú<sup>1</sup> ag Seanad Éireann a ghiorrú faoin Airteagal seo chun bheith ina dhlí fanfaidh sé i bhfeidhm ar feadh tréimhse nócha lá ó dháta a achtaithe agus ní fhanfaidh sé i bhfeidhm níos faide ná sin mura n-aontóidh dhá Theach an Oireachtais, roimh dheireadh na tréimhse sin<sup>2</sup>, go bhfanfaidh an dlí sin i bhfeidhm ar feadh tréimhse níos faide agus go mbeidh an tréimhse fhada ar a gcomhaontófar amhlaidh sonraithe i rúin arna rith ag an dá Theach.

Variants

- 1 'a mheas', 'a bhreathnú'
- 2 'sula mbeidh an tréimhse sin istigh'

ARTICLE 25.1 AIRTEAGAL 25.1

TÉACS GAELGE

Dlíthe a Shíniú agus a Fhógairt

Chomh luath agus a ritear Bille, seachas Bille a luaitear a bheith ina Bhille a bhfuil togra ann chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú, nó a mheastar é a bheith rite ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais, ní foláir don Taoiseach an Bille sin a thairiscint don Uachtarán chun a lámh a chur leis agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhlí de réir forálacha an Airteagail seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Signing and Promulgating Laws

As soon as a Bill is passed, other than a Bill which is mentioned/stated to be a Bill in which there is a proposal to amend this Constitution, or is deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas, the Taoiseach must offer that Bill to the President to put his hand to it and to promulgate it as a law in accordance with the provisions of this Article.

ENGLISH TEXT

Signing and Promulgation of Laws

As soon as any Bill, other than a Bill expressed to be a Bill containing a proposal for the amendment of this Constitution, shall have been passed or deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas, the Taoiseach shall present it to the President for his signature and for promulgation by him as law in accordance with the provisions of this Article.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Any Bill' is expressed simply as 'Bille' ('a Bill') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Expressed' is again expressed as 'a luaitear' ('mentioned'/'cited') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Present' is expressed by 'tairiscint', the core meaning of which is 'offer', in the Irish text.
- 5 'É a fhógairt ina dhlí', ('Promulgation by him as a law'), can also be read as 'proclaim it a law'.
- 6 'For his signature' is expressed as 'to sign it' / 'to put his hand to it' in the Irish text, i.e. 'a lámh a chur leis', with 'a Shíniú' expressing 'Signing' in the heading of this Article and 'síniú' being the Irish legal term for 'signature'.

Note that Article 41 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

So soon as any Bill shall have been passed or deemed to have been passed by both Houses, the Executive Council shall present the same to the Representative of the Crown for the signification by him, in the King's name, of the King's assent .... Chó luath agus a bheidh aon Bhille riththe no tuigte do bheith riththe ag an dá Thigh, cuirfidh an Ard-Chomhairle ag triall ar Ionadaí na Coróinneach é chun go gcuirfe sé síúd in úil, in ainm an Rí, aontú an Rí leis.

Commentary

a thairiscint The verbal noun of 'tairg', 'tairiscint', is translated basically as 'offer' in Ó Dónaill, who gives 'proffer, tender' as the principal sense, translating 'rud a thairiscint do dhuine' as 'to offer something to someone'. 'Tairgim' is translated as 'I offer' in Téarmaí Dlí, Dinneen translating 'tairgim' as 'I offer, proffer, bid, try, attempt'. The earlier form of this verb, 'do-fairget', is translated principally as 'offers, proffers' in DIL, citing 'tairg tri damu dóib' ('offer them three oxen') from the early Irish saga, Togail Bruidne Da Derga. See the commentary on Article 12.10.3<sup>o</sup>, 'tairiscint' expressing 'motion' in that Article.

See the commentary on Article 17.1.1<sup>o</sup> regarding 'present' in early Acts and note that 'Every mention of or reference to the presentation of an address to His (or Her) Majesty by both ... Houses of Parliament' is translated as 'Gach luadh no tagairt do thairisgint dileagra dá Shoillse ó sna Tighthe Páirliminte' in s5(2) of the Adaptation of Enactments Act, 1922, with 'the petition and report shall be deemed to have been duly presented and made under that Act' being translated as 'tuigfar gur tíolacadh agus gur dineadh an achuinghe agus an tuarascabháil go cuibhe fén Acht san' in s6(1) of the Arterial Drainage (Minor Schemes) Act, 1928. In s12 of the Mental Treatment Act, 1961, 'the person to whom the certificate is issued may present it to the member of the Garda Síochána in charge of any Garda Síochána station' is translated as 'féadfaidh an duine chun a n-eiseofar an deimhniú é a thíolacadh don chomhalta den Gharda Síochána a bheidh i bhfeighil aon stáisiúin Garda Síochána'.

a fhógairt ina dhlí See the commentary on Article 13.3.2<sup>o</sup>. 'Fógairt' is the verbal noun of 'fógair', translated basically as 'call out, proclaim' in Ó Dónaill, giving 'declare, announce, make known' as the principal sense, citing 'dlí a fhógairt, to promulgate a law'. 'Fógraím' is translated as 'I pronounce (i.e. judgement)' in Téarmaí Dlí, Dinneen translating 'fógraím' as 'I warn, announce, proclaim, decree, advertise, give notice'. DIL translates 'fúacair' as 'proclaims, announces, makes known, generally of important or authoritative statements', this verb glossing Latin 'indicare' in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

De réir forálacha an Airteagail seo In the official standard, this would have the form 'de réir fhorálacha an Airteagail seo', 'forálacha' remaining in the nominative case and being lenited instead of being put in the genitive – see the commentary on Article 1.

a lámh a chur leis See the commentary on Articles 12.8 and 13.3.1<sup>o</sup>, 'do lámh a chur le rud' being translated as 'to sign something' in Ó Dónaill.

a luaitear See the commentary on Article 24.1.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

Standardised Irish text

Chomh luath agus a ritear Bille, seachas Bille a luaitear a bheith ina Bhille a bhfuil togra ann chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú, nó a mheastar é a bheith rite ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais, ní foláir don Taoiseach an Bille sin a thairiscint don Uachtarán chun a lámh a chur leis agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhlí de réir fhorálacha an Airteagail seo.

Direct gender-proofed translation

A luaithe a rithfear aon Bhille, seachas Bille a shonrófar a bheith ina Bhille ina bhfuil togra chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú, nó a mheastar é a bheith rite, ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais<sup>1</sup>, déanfaidh an Taoiseach é a thíolacadh don Uachtarán chun é a shíniú<sup>2</sup> agus chun go ndéanfaidh sé nó sí<sup>3</sup> é a fhógairt ina dhlí de réir fhorálacha an Airteagail seo.

Variants

- 1 'A luaithe a bheidh aon Bhille, seachas Bille a shonrófar a bheith ina Bhille ina bhfuil togra chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú, rite nó a mheastar é a bheith rite ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais'
- 2 'dá shíniú nó dá síniú'
- 3 'an tUachtarán'

ARTICLE 25.2.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 25.2.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Taobh amuigh de chás dá socraítear a mhalairt leis an mBunreacht seo, gach Bille a thairgtear don Uachtarán mar sin chun a lámh a chur leis agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhlí, ní foláir dó a lámh a chur leis lá nach luaithe ná an cúigiú lá agus nach déanaí ná an seachtú lá tar éis an lae a thairgtear an Bille dó.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Apart from a case for which the contrary is provided by this Constitution, each Bill which is offered to the President in that way to put his hand to it and to promulgate it (as) law, he must put his hand to it on a day not earlier than the fifth day and not later than the seventh day after the day the Bill is offered to him.

ENGLISH TEXT

Save as otherwise provided by this Constitution, every Bill so presented to the President for his signature and for promulgation by him as a law shall be signed by the President not earlier than the fifth and not later than the seventh day after the date on which the Bill shall have been presented to him.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Save as otherwise provided by this Constitution' is expressed as 'Taobh amuigh de chás dá socraítear a mhalairt leis an mBunreacht seo' ('Apart from a case for which the contrary is provided by this Constitution') in the Irish text.
- 2 'So' is expressed as 'mar sin' ('like that' / 'in that way') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Present', 'for his signature' and 'promulgation as a law' are expressed in the Irish text by the same terms and phrases as in the foregoing section, 'present' being expressed by 'tairg' ('offer'), 'for his signature' as 'chun a lámh a chur leis' ('to put his hand to it') and 'a fhógairt ina dhlí' ('promulgation as a law') capable of being read as 'to announce/proclaim it a law'.

- 4 'Not earlier than the fifth and not later than the seventh day after the date' is expressed as 'lá nach luaithe ná an cúigiú lá agus nach déanaí ná an seachtú lá tar éis an lae' ('[on] a day not earlier than the fifth day and not later than the seventh day after the day') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Note that the words 'cúig'/'five' and 'seacht'/'seven days' were deleted by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, and the words 'an cúigmheadh'/'the fifth' and 'an seachtmhadh'/'the seventh day' were respectively inserted in their place.

Commentary

tar éis an lae See the commentary on Article 10.4 where 'd'éis' expresses 'after'. 'The tenant may, not earlier than the commencement of the agreement and not later than the expiration of 21 days beginning on the day on which the authority make a payment to the tenant' is translated as '(go) bhféadfaidh an tionónta, tráth nach luaithe ná tosach feidhme an chomhaontaithe agus nach déanaí ná deireadh na tréimhse 21 lá dar tosach an lá a thabharfaidh an t-údarás íocaíocht don tionónta' in s13(2)(e) of the Housing (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1979. In s1(2)(b) of the Local Government Act, 1960, 'they may, on a day not earlier than sixty days, and not later than one hundred and eighty days, after the day of the passing of the resolution' is translated as 'féadfaidh siad, lá nach luaithe ná seasca lá agus nach déanaí ná céad agus ochtó lá, tar éis lá an rúin a rith'.

taobh amuigh de chás See the commentary on Article 15.11.1°. 'Save as otherwise provided by this Act' is translated as 'ach amháin mar a fhoráiltear a mhalairt leis an Acht seo' in s18 of the Finance Act, 1980, for example, 'lasmuich de chás dá bhforálar a mhalairt leis an alt so' translating 'Save as otherwise provided by this section' in s49(1) of the Agricultural Produce (Fresh Meat) Act, 1930.

a lámh a chur leis See the commentary on Article 13.1.1°. Commenting on 'déanfaidh an tUachtarán gach Bille a thíolacfar dó nó di amhlaidh dá shíniú nó dá síniú', in a draft of the direct translation below of '... every Bill so presented to the President for his signature', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú doubts whether the preposition 'do' can be used in such a final clause, and recommends 'chun', 'd'fhonn' or 'le'.

socraítear See the commentary on Articles 8.3 and 15.2.2°.

a thairgtear See the commentary on the foregoing section.

a fhógairt See the commentary on the foregoing section.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

mar sin See the commentary on Article 22.2.4°.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Taobh amuigh de chás dá socraítear a mhalairt leis an mBunreacht seo, gach Bille a thairgtear don Uachtarán mar sin chun a lámh a chur leis agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhlí, ní foláir dó nó di a lámh a chur leis lá nach luaithe ná an cúigiú lá agus nach déanaí ná an seachtú lá tar éis an lae a thairgtear an Bille dó nó di.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ach amháin má dhéantar a mhalairt a fhoráil leis an mBunreacht seo, sineoidh an tUachtarán gach Bille a thíolacfar amhlaidh dó nó di chun é a shíniú agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhlí<sup>1</sup> tráth nach luaithe ná an cúigiú lá<sup>2</sup> agus nach déanaí ná an seachtú lá tar éis an dáta ar a dtíolacfar an Bille dó nó di.

Variants

- 1 'déanfaidh an tUachtarán gach Bille a thíolacfar amhlaidh dó nó di chun é a shíniú agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhlí a shíniú'
- 2 'an cúigiú'

ARTICLE 25.2.2° AIRTEAGAL 25.2.2°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ar achainí an Rialtais, le comhthoil Sheanad Éireann roimh ré, tig leis an Uachtarán a lámh a chur le haon Bhille is siocair don achainí sin níos luaithe ná an cúigiú lá tar éis an dáta réamhráite.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

On the petition/request of the Government, with the joint consent of Seanad Éireann beforehand, the President may put his hand to any Bill which gives rise to that petition/request earlier than the fifth day after the aforesaid date.

ENGLISH TEXT

At the request of the Government, with the prior concurrence of Seanad Éireann, the President may sign any Bill the subject of such request on a date which is earlier than the fifth day after such date as aforesaid.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Lá' expresses 'date' in the foregoing subsection, to which word 'such date as aforesaid', here expressed as 'an dáta réamhráite', now refers.
- 2 'Concurrence' is expressed as 'comhthoil' ('joint consent') in the Irish text.
- 3 'The subject of such request' is expressed as 'is siocair don achainí sin' ('which gives rise to that/such request/petition') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Prior' is expressed as 'roimh ré' ('beforehand') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Request' is expressed by 'achainí', the Irish legal term for 'petition'.
- 6 'On a date which is earlier' is expressed simply as 'níos luaithe' ('earlier') in the Irish text.
- 7 'After such date as aforesaid' is expressed as 'tar éis an dáta réamhráite' ('after the aforesaid date') in the Irish text.

Note that the words ‘cúig’/‘five days’ were deleted by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, and the words ‘an cúigmheadh’/‘the fifth day’ inserted in their place.

Commentary

achainí See the commentary on Article 22.2.3°. ‘The controller may, on request, grant a certificate’ is translated as ‘Féadfaidh an ceannasaí, ar a iarraidh san air, deimhniú do dheona’ in s117(2) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. ‘Ar a iarraidh sin do’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘at the request of ...’ in the 1926 Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann, ‘ar éileamh uait-se’ translating ‘at your request’ in translations for the Department of Finance. See the commentary on Article 22.2.3° for early citations of ‘iarraidh’ and ‘impí’ – ‘iarratas’ also being cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘request’ in translations for the Department of Justice.

Turning to modern Acts, ‘the Minister may, at the request of a health board’ is translated as ‘féadfaidh an tAire, ar iarratas ó bhord sláinte’ in s9(1) of the Health (Mental Services) Act, 1981, for example. ‘The Council shall at the request of the Minister’ is translated as ‘ní mór don Chomhairle, ar an Aire á iarraidh sin’ in s16(2) of the Fire Services Act, 1981. ‘On his own motion or at the request of the Minister for Finance’ is translated as ‘uaidh féin nó ar iarratas ón Aire Airgeadais’ in s18(1) of the Údarás na Gaeltachta Act, 1979. Finally, ‘The Minister may, at the request of the Government of the parent country of a ship to which this section applies’ is translated as ‘Féadfaidh an tAire, ar Rialtas máthairthíre loinge lena mbaineann an t-alt seo á iarraidh’ in s13(2) of the Merchant Shipping (Load Lines) Act, 1968.

comhthoil ‘Cómhthoil’ is translated as ‘unanimity, mutual consent’ in Dinneen. This compound of ‘comh’ (translated as ‘mutual, joint, common; co-’ in Ó Dónaill) and ‘toil’ (basically translated as ‘will, inclination, desire, wish’ in Ó Dónaill) does not appear to be given as a headword in Ó Dónaill. DIL translates ‘comhthoil’ as ‘agreement, unanimity’, citing ‘le comtoil comhairle’ (‘by the consent of the council’) from an early Irish law-tract. ‘Tol’ is principally translated as ‘will’ in DIL, citing ‘tol dae do dénum’ (‘to do the will of God’) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. The phrase ‘do-beir toil do’ is translated in DIL as ‘consents to’. ‘Consent’ is translated as ‘toiliú’ in Téarmaí Dlí, with ‘le toiliú’ translating ‘by consent’.

We find ‘toil’, ‘aontú’ agus ‘có-aontú’ translating ‘concurrence’ in early Acts. ‘In accordance with a scale to be prescribed by the Minister with the concurrence of the Minister for Finance’ is translated as ‘do réir scála a ordóidh an tAire le toil an Aire Airgid’ in s1(3) of the District Justices (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. In s16(3) of the Electoral Act, 1923, ‘the provisions of those sections as to the concurrence of, or certification by County Court judges’ is translated as ‘na forálacha atá sna haltanna san i dtaobh breithiúin Chúirteanna Contae ... do thabhairt toile no do dhéanamh teisteacha’. In s2(1) of the Criminal Justice (Administration) Act, 1924, ‘Rules made under this Act shall be made by and with the concurrence of the same persons ...’ is translated as ‘... siniaid na daoine a dhéanfaidh agus ‘na ndéanfar le n-a gcó-aontú aon rialacha a déanfar fén Acht so’, ‘The Purchasing Society shall not require the concurrence of any person other than the Liquidator of the Company’ being translated as ‘Ní éileoidh an Cumann Ceannuitheach aontú o éinne ach amháin o Scaoilteoir na Cuideachtan’ in s12 of the First Schedule to the Creamery Act, 1928. Finally, in s17(5) of the Wildlife Act, 1976, ‘The Minister shall not include in a notice ... any reference to a species of fish or aquatic invertebrate animal without the prior concurrence of the Minister for Agriculture and Fisheries’ is translated as ‘Ní chuirfidh an tAire i bhfógra ... aon tagairt do speiceas éisc nó ainmhí inveirteabraigh uisci gan comhthoilú roimh ré ón Aire Talmhaíochta agus Iascaigh’.

réamhráite See the commentary on Article 40.6.1°iii where this headword expresses ‘foregoing’. ‘Such revivor and continuance should be retrospective to the date on which such Acts expired as aforesaid’ is translated as ‘(chun) an aith-bheochaint agus an bunú san do shíne siar go dtí an dáta d’eug na hAchtanna san mar roimh-ráite’ in the Preamble to the Expiring Laws Continuance Act, 1922. In s66(2) of the Court Offices Act, 1926, ‘other than the salaries aforesaid’ is translated as ‘seachas na tuarastail roimhráite’. In s14(1) of the Finance Act, 1980, ‘or on such other date as aforesaid’ is translated as ‘nó cibé dáta eile atá ráite’.

‘For which accounts have been made up as aforesaid’ is translated as ‘dá mbeidh cuntais déanta suas mar a dúradh’ in s23(1)(b) of the Finance Act, 1990. ‘After the date specified as aforesaid in such notice’ is translated as ‘tar éis an dáta bheidh luaidhte mar adubhradh san bhfógra san’ in s3(2) of the Trade Loans (Guarantee) (Amendment) Act, 1932. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on ‘tar éis cibé dáta mar a dúradh’ as a translation below of ‘after such date as aforesaid’, remarks that ‘mar’ is not intelligible in that phrase and recommends ‘cibé dáta a dúradh’, possibly with the addition of either ‘roimhe’ or ‘roimhe seo’.

is siocair don ‘Siocair’ is translated as ‘(immediate) cause, occasion; pretext, excuse’ in Ó Dónaill, who cites ‘an rud ba shiocair leis an achrann, what gave rise to the quarrel’ and ‘cad é is siocair leis? What’s the cause of it?’ Dinneen translates ‘siocair’ as ‘motive, cause, occasion, pretext’, citing ‘siocracha na bpeacaí, the causes or occasions of sins’. DIL translates ‘siocair’ as ‘cause, reason, occasion’, most of the citations coming from seventeenth-century sources, including the following from Pádraigín Haicéad: ‘tar gach siocair ar son Éamuinn’ (‘beyond every [other] reason for Éamon’s sake’). See the commentary on Article 12.10.7° regarding ‘the subject of’ in the Acts.

roimh ré This phrase is translated as ‘in advance, beforehand’ in Ó Dónaill and as ‘beforehand, previously, premature’ in Dinneen. See the commentary on Article 18.3 regarding ‘prior’.

a lámh a chur le See the commentary on Article 13.3.1°.

Direct translation

Ar iarratas ón Rialtas, le réamh-chomhthoilú<sup>1</sup> Sheanad Éireann, féadfaidh an tUachtarán aon Bhille is ábhar don iarraidh<sup>2</sup> sin a shíniú ar dháta is luaithe ná an cúigiú lá tar éis cibé dáta a dúradh roimhe sin<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'le comhthoiliú roimh ré ó'
- 2 'iarratas'
- 3 'tar éis an dáta réamhráite sin', 'tar éis cibé dáta mar a dúradh'

ARTICLE 25.3 AIRTEAGAL 25.3

TÉACS GAEILGE

Gach Bille a ndearnadh an tréimhse chun a bhreithnithe ag Seanad Éireann a ghiorrú faoi Airteagal 24 den Bhunreacht seo, ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur leis an lá a thairgtear an Bille sin dó chun é a shíniú agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhli.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every Bill the period for the consideration of which by Seanad Éireann was shortened under Article 24 of this Constitution, the President must put his hand to it (on) the day that that Bill is offered to him to sign it and to promulgate it as law.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every Bill the time for the consideration of which by Seanad Éireann shall have been abridged under Article 24 of this Constitution shall be signed by the President on the day on which such Bill is presented to him for signature and promulgation as a law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 '(The Bill) shall be signed by the President' is expressed as 'ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur leis' ('the President shall/must put his hand to / sign it') in the Irish text, with 'for signature' being expressed as 'chun é a shíniú' ('to sign it'); 'shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, this phrase being preceded by a comma in that text alone.
- 2 'Shall have been abridged' is expressed as 'a ndearnadh ... a ghiorrú' ('was abridged/shortened') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Consideration', 'period', 'present' and 'promulgation as a law' are expressed in the Irish text by the same terms and phrase respectively as we have seen in previous sections of this Article, with the same possible divergences attaching to them.

Commentary

a shíniú 'Síniú' is the verbal noun of 'sínigh', translated principally as 'sign' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'litir, conradh, a shíniú, to sign a letter, a contract'. 'Sínim' is translated as 'I sign' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'sighnim' being translated as 'I sign, seal or mark, append my signature to' in Dinneen. DIL cites 'dá sine Seon / go bhfuighe fairbre san airtíogal nár líonadh fós' ('if he signs before he finds some flaw or other in the Article') from Dáibhí Ó Bruadair (c. 1630-1689), the first citation in DIL being in relation to making the sign of the Cross ('signis M. airde na crochi in agaid na lasrach', from Hogan's Latin Lives of the Saints). This verb (along with the verb 'signigid' ['signifies, indicates']) is based on the noun 'sigen', which comes from Latin 'signum', and is translated principally as 'a sign, token, mark; an omen or portent' in DIL, where 'sigen na crochi' (i.e. the sign of the Cross) is cited from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, composed in the second half of the eleventh century.

See the commentary on Article 12.10.3<sup>o</sup>, where the English phrase 'signed by' is expressed as 'faoi lámh', regarding the various ways 'sign' is expressed in the Irish text of the Constitution and in the Acts, and see further the commentary on Article 13.3.1<sup>o</sup> where 'sign' is expressed as 'lámh a chur le'.

chun a bhreithnithe 'Breithnithe' is the genitive of the verbal noun of 'breithnigh' – see the commentary on Articles 17.1.1<sup>o</sup> and 20.1.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

a lámh a chur leis See the commentary on Article 13.3.1<sup>o</sup>.

a thairgtear See the commentary on Articles 12.10.3<sup>o</sup> and 25.1.

tréimhse See the commentary on Article 23.1.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Gach Bille a ndearnadh an tréimhse chun a bhreithnithe ag Seanad Éireann a ghiorrú faoi Airteagal 24 den Bhunreacht seo ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur leis an lá a thairgtear an Bille sin dó nó di chun é a shíniú agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhli.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Déanfaidh an tUachtarán gach Bille a mbeidh an tréimhse lena bhreithniú giorraithe faoi Airteagal 24 den Bhunreacht seo a shíniú an lá a thíolacfar Bille den sórt sin dó nó di' le síniú agus le fógairt<sup>2</sup> ina dhli.

Variants

- 1 'don Uachtarán'
- 2 'lena shíniú agus lena fhógairt'

ARTICLE 25.4.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 25.4.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Déanann dlí de gach Bille an lá a chuireann an tUachtarán a lámh leis faoin mBunreacht seo agus is dlí é an lá sin agus ón lá sin amach agus, mura léir a mhalairt d'intinn ina thaobh, is é an lá sin a thagann sé i ngníomh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every Bill becomes law the day the President puts his hand to it under this Constitution and it is a law (on) that day and from that day on and, unless it is clear that there is a contrary intention in regard to it, that is the day it comes into operation.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every Bill shall become and be law as on and from the day on which it is signed by the President under this Constitution, and shall, unless the contrary intention appears, come into operation on that day.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Every Bill shall become and be law' is rendered as 'Déanann dlí de gach Bille ... agus is dlí é' ('Every Bill becomes law ... and it is a law') in the Irish text.
- 2 'As on and from the day' is rendered as 'an lá ... an lá sin agus ón lá sin' ('the day ... [on] that day and from that day on') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Unless the contrary intention appears' is rendered as 'mura léir a mhalairt d'intinn ina thaobh' ('unless it is clear that there is a contrary intention in regard to it') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Shall ... come into operation on that day' is rendered as 'is é an lá sin a thagann sé i ngníomh' ('that is the day it comes into operation') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Sign' is again rendered by the phrase '(a) lámh a chur le' ('put his hand to') as in previous sections.

Note that the original s4 was deleted by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, and a new section was inserted in its place. The original Articles 25.4.1° and 25.4.2° read as follows:

Every Bill signed by the President under this Constitution shall become and be law as on and from the day on which the Bill shall have been so signed. Gach Bille a gcuireann an tUachtarán a lámh leis fán mBunreacht so déanann dligheadh dhe an lá a chuireann sé a lámh leis amhlaidh agus is dligheadh é an lá sin agus ón lá sin amach.

Every Bill signed by the President shall come into operation on the day on which it is so signed unless the contrary intention appears. Gach Bille a gcuireann an tUachtarán a lámh leis is é an lá a cuirtear lámh leis amhlaidh a thigeann sé i ngníomh muna léir a mhalairt d'intinn ina thaobh.

Commentary

Déanann dlí de In Article 24.3 'Ar dhéanamh dlí de Bhille' expresses 'When a Bill ... becomes law'. 'Déan de' in impersonal use has the sense of 'become'; Ó Dónaill cites 'rinne bean dí, she became a woman' and 'dhéanfadh síoc de, it would turn to frost', also citing 'go ndéan criostal dá huisce, so that its water turns to crystal' from the earlier literature (this being from the Gaelic Maundeville, cited in full in DIL). Ó Dónaill also gives 'become' as one of the many secondary senses of the verb 'déan', citing 'déan-faidh sé fear láidir, he will make a strong man', 'rinne sé mí mhaith, it turned out to be a good month' and 'ó rinne sé lá, since it became day'. Dinneen s.v. 'do-ghnám', cites 'dhein crann de, it became a tree', 'dhein ceo dá chnámhaibh, his bones turned to dust' and 'dhein lochán timcheall air, a lake formed around it', along with 'do rinne sliabh mór dí, it became a great mountain' from Keating's Three Shafts of Death (completed on the second day of December 1631). A possible example of this impersonal use of the verb 'do-gni' with 'de' is cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles: 'is bésad na mmuimne dogní deidbleán di oc munud á dalti' ('it is the custom of the nurse to make a weakling of herself [teaching her pupil]). According to DIL, this is mainly a Middle Irish development of the construction 'dogní x de y', 'makes x of y = turns y into x' (DIL cites 'cindus fer dia ndenid-si deu?' ['of what kind of men do you make gods?'], from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses, as an example of that construction), which comes to be used impersonally: 'dogní x de y = y is turned into, becomes x'. The final example of this construction cited in DIL is 'Muire don deilbh ar ndéanamh' ('when the statue had turned into Mary') from the poetry of Aonghus Fionn Ó Dálaigh (c. 1520-1570).

Article 41 of the 1922 Constitution was amended as follows by the Constitution (Amendment No. 27) Act, 1936 (as outlined in the Schedule to that Act):

The deletion of all words from the words "the Executive Council" to the end of the Article and the substitution therefor of the words "the Chairman of Dáil Éireann shall sign such bill and the same shall become and be law as on and from the date of such signature". Na focail uile o sna focail "cuirfidh an Ard-Chomhairle" go deireadh an Airtíogail do scriosadh amach agus na focail "sighneoidh Ceann Comhairle Dháil Éireann an Bille sin agus tiocfaidh an céanna chun bheith agus beidh sé ina dhlí ar dháta agus ó dháta an tighnithe sin" do chur ina n-ionad.

Note that 'may become and be a member' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'féadfadh ... ceangal mar bhall agus bheith mar bhall' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health. See the commentary on Article 18.2 regarding 'become'.

mura léir The adjective 'léir' is translated as 'clear, lucid; distinct, explicit ...' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'is léir go' as 'it is clear that' and cites 'is léir don saol (go), everybody knows (that)'. Dinneen translates 'léir' as 'visible, plain, clear, open, perceptible', translating 'is léir go' as 'it is plain that' and citing 'an fhaid is léir an boladh, while the odour is perceived'. In Old Irish 'léir' was frequently used attributively with the sense of 'assiduous, earnest, careful, zealous', but later it became much more commonly used predicatively with the meaning 'visible, perceptible', DIL citing 'connárbo léir do neoch isin dúnud 7 corbo léir dóib-seom cách issin dúnud' ('so that they were not visible to anyone in the camp, yet everyone in the camp was visible to them') from the version of the Táin in Leabhar na hUidhre (compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100).

'The following expressions shall, unless the contrary intention appears, have the meanings hereby respectively assigned to them' is translated as 'mara mbeidh a mhalairt i dtuisgint beidh leis na focail seo a leanas na bríonna a cuirtear leo fé seach leis seo' in s2 of the Interpretation Act, 1923. In s3(1) of the Status of Children Act, 1987, 'the relationship between every person and his father and mother ... shall, unless the contrary intention appears, be determined' is translated as 'déanfar, mura léir gurb é a mhalairt atá beartaithe, an gaol atá idir gach duine agus a athair agus a mháthair ... a chinneadh'. In s36 of the Finance Act, 1977, 'For the purposes of the Tax Acts ..., unless the contrary intention appears' is translated as 'chun críocha na nAchtanna Cánach ..., mura léir a mhalairt d'intinn'.

d'intinn 'Intinn' is translated basically as 'mind' in Ó Dónaill, 'intention' being given as one of its secondary senses, citing 'rud a bheith ar intinn agat, to intend something' and 'tháinig mé le hintinn labhairt leat, I come with the intention of speaking to you'. 'Ar intinn calaais a dhéanamh ar' is translated in Téarmaí Dlí as 'with intent to defraud'. Dinneen translates 'intinn' as 'mind, intention, spirit, disposition; courage', citing 'ar an intinn sin, with that intention'. 'In(n)tinn' may come from Latin 'intentio', and is translated as (a) 'mind, view, disposition, attention', (b) 'intention, will, purpose' and (c) 'high spirits, courage, exaltation of mind' in DIL. This headword is not cited in the earlier sources, DIL citing 'mailli ré hinntinn trés an olc sin, teachd go holc eile' ('with the intention ...') from Mac Aingil's Scáthán Shacramuinte na hAithridhe (1618) as an example of sense (b).

Looking at early translations, 'Every applicant who intends to apply under this section to have any such application as aforesaid re-opened and re-heard shall serve a notice of his intention so to do' is translated as 'Gach iarrthóir atá ar intinn a iarraidh féin alt so go ndéanfaí aon iarratas den tsórt roimh-ráite d'ath-oscailt agus d'ath-éisteacht seirbheálfa sé fógra i dtaobh na hintinne sin' in s2(2) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. 'Fógra miosa go rabhas ar intinn ...' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'one month's notice of intention' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health, with 'notice of my intention to ...' being translated as 'fógra á rá go bhfuil ... beartuithe agam'.

a mhalairt 'Change; alternative' is one of the senses of 'malairt' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'tá a mhalairt de chúram orm, I have something else to attend to' and 'tá sé ar mhalairt de scéal anois, now he has a different tale to tell'. Dinneen cites 'a mhalairt is eadh dhein sé, he did the opposite' and 'ní h-iarrfainn a mhalairt de bhíadh, I desire no better food'. No Old Irish examples of the headword 'malart'/'malairt' appear to be cited in DIL, this word having the sense of 'damage, injury, destruction; maltreating, injuring' in Middle Irish (DIL cites 'dúthracair a malairt féin for na bráthrib' ['desired his own ruin for the sake of the brethren'] from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, composed in the second half of the eleventh century, for example), the sense of 'change, changing' appearing in early Modern Irish, along with 'exchange, exchanging', hence, followed by genitive or equivalent, the sense 'an exchange for = a different, another', DIL citing 'malairt na duaine-sí' ('a different song from this') from Dáibhí Ó Bruadair (c. 1630-1689) and 'ar an adhbhar nach fuil a mhalairt do threóraidhe aca' ('because they have no other guide') from Keating's seventeenth-century History of Ireland. 'Contrary opinion' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'a mhalairt de thuairim' in the 1926 Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann.

Direct translation

Tiocfaidh gach Bille chun bheith ina dhlí agus beidh sé ina dhlí ar an lá agus ón lá a shíneoidh an tUachtarán é faoin mBunreacht seo agus, mura léir go bhfuil a mhalairt d'intinn ann<sup>1</sup>, tiocfaidh sé i ngníomh ar an lá sin.

Variants

- 1 'mura léir gurb é a mhalairt atá beartaithe', 'mura léir a mhalairt d'intinn'

ARTICLE 25.4.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 25.4.2<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELIGE

Gach Bille a gcuireann an tUachtarán a lámh leis faoin mBunreacht seo ní foláir dó é a fhógairt ina dhlí le fógra san Iris Oifigiúil, faoi ordú uaidh, á rá go bhfuil an Bille ina dhlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every Bill to which the President puts his hand under this Constitution he must promulgate it as law by a notice in the Official Journal, under an order from him, saying that the Bill is law.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every Bill signed by the President under this Constitution shall be promulgated by him as a law by the publication by his direction of a notice in the Iris Oifigiúil stating that the Bill has become law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'By the publication ... of a notice in' is rendered simply as 'le fógra (san)' ('by a notice in') in the Irish text.
- 2 'By his direction' is rendered as 'faoi ordú uaidh' ('under an order from him') in the Irish text, 'ordú' being translated as 'order' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'direction' being translated as 'treorú'.
- 3 'Stating' is rendered as 'á rá' ('saying') in the Irish text, this term having the general sense of 'state', 'stated case', however, being translated as 'cás sonraithe' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 'Sign' is again rendered by 'a lámh a chur le' ('puts his hand to') in the Irish text, as we saw in some earlier sections.
- 5 'É a fhógairt ina dhlí' ('promulgates it as a law') is also capable of being read as 'proclaim it a law' in the Irish text.
- 6 'Shall' is again rendered as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that the original Article 25.4.3<sup>o</sup>, before Article 25.4 was amended by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, read as follows:

Every Bill so signed shall be promulgated by the President as a law by the publication by his direction of a notice in the Iris Oifigiúil stating that such Bill has become law. Gach Bille le n-a gcuirtear lámh amhlaidh ní foláir don Uachtarán é fhógairt ina dhligheadh le fógra insan Iris Oifigiúil, fá ordú uaidh, dá rádh go bhfuil an Bille sin ina dhligheadh.

Commentary

á rá Literally 'saying it', the verbal noun of 'abair' ('say') preceded by the possessive adjective, third person singular. Looking at early official translations, 'the aggregate value as stated in the drainage scheme' is translated as 'an méid suimithe adeirtar sa scéim dhréineála' in s9(1) of the Arterial Drainage (Minor Schemes) Act, 1928. 'Stating' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'ag innsint' in early Standing Orders, 'stating the question' being translated as 'ag luadh na ceiste'.

Turning to modern Acts, in s11(2)(a)(i)(II) of the Plant Varieties (Proprietary Rights) Act, 1980, 'he has caused to be given in the prescribed manner a general notice stating that he has under consideration such revocation' is translated as '(mura mbeidh agus go dtí go mbeidh) curtha faoi deara aige fógra ginearálta a thabhairt ar an modh forordaithe á rá go bhfuil an chúlghairm sin á bhreithniú aige'. In s4(1) of the Local Government (Toll Roads) Act, 1979, 'a road authority shall publish in one or more newspapers ... a notice stating that a toll scheme has been made by the road authority' is translated as 'Déanfaidh údarás bóithre ... fógra a fhoilsiú i nuachtán nó i nuachtáin ... á rá go bhfuil dola-scéim déanta ag an údarás bóithre'. See further the commentary on Article 12.10.1° where 'state' is expressed by the verb 'luaigh'.

Commenting on a draft of the translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommended the use of 'á shonrú' (or 'á dhearbhu') as against 'ina sonrú' (given as a variant below) as this relative phrase and 'fógra' are, in his opinion, too far removed from each other to be clear.

faoi ordú uaidh 'Ordú' is translated as 'order' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'cúnant faoi ordú sin na Cúirte' is translated as 'covenant under the said order of the Court'. 'Ordú' is translated as 'order, command' in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil. Ó Dónaill cites 'faoi ordú dochtúra, under doctor's orders' and Dinneen cites 'ag obair fá riar agus ordughthe, working under instructions and orders', including 'an order, decree or command' among the senses of 'ordughadh'. 'Órdughim' is translated as 'I order, ordain, decree, plan, dispose, direct, prescribe, arrange, wish, command' in Dinneen. The sense of 'an order, decree, ordinance' is a 'late' sense of 'ordugud', according to DIL, the first example of which sense cited there being 'tic ordugad on arsadiuc ... fon dis sin do chrochadh' ('an order comes ... to hang the two men') from Ó Cianáin's Flight of the Earls. 'Ordugud' is translated principally in DIL as 'arranging, settling, disposing; an arrangement, disposition', this being the verbal noun of the Old Irish deponent verb 'ord(d)aigidir', which is a denominative verb from 'ord', a learned loanword from Latin 'ordo', which word it translates in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

'And generally to carry out all reasonable directions of the Medical Staff' is translated as 'agus, i gcoitinne, gach treoir réasúnta ón bhFuirinn Leighis do chur i bhfeidhm' in the 'Galway County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'The initiation and direction of research' is translated as 'lorgaireacht do thosnú agus do stiúra' in s18(c) of the Local Government Act, 1925. Finally, 'every direction to a juror to stand-by' is translated as 'gach ordú do choisteoir dul i leataobh' in s52(4) of the Juries Act, 1927.

In s43(3) of the Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1988, 'Every person who, by himself, or by any person in his employment or acting by his direction or with his consent, refuses or fails to admit any member of the Garda Síochána' is translated as 'Gach duine a dhiúltóidh nó a mhainneoidh, cibé é féin nó trí aon duine a bheidh fostaithe aige nó a bheidh ag gníomhú faoina threoir nó le toiliú uaidh, aon chomhalta den Gharda Síochána ... a ligean isteach'. 'It shall be signed ... by the testator, or by some person in his presence and by his direction' is translated as 'Déanfaidh an tiomnóir, nó duine éigin ina láthair agus faoina threorú, í a shíniú' in s78(1) of the Succession Act, 1965.

Note, finally, that Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'le hordú uaidh nó uaithe' in the translation below.

fógra See the commentary on Article 12.10.3°. This headword is translated as 'notice' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, the latter citing 'fógra a chur ar na páipéir, to put a notice, an advertisement, in the papers'. Dinneen translates 'fógra' as 'act of announcing, proclaiming, decreeing, enjoining; ordering, excluding; expelling, banishing; warning; an ordinance, order, a proclamation, decree, command, an advertisement'. DIL cites the sense of 'a notice, announcement, summons, ordinance' of 'fógra' from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, composed in the second half of the eleventh century ('in tan tucad in fuacra-sa'), this being the verbal noun of 'fo-ócair', the sense of 'proclaiming, announcing, making known, giving notice' of which is cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles onwards.

'Notice of my intention to ...' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'fógra a rá go bhfuil ... beartuithe agam' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health. 'Every applicant ... shall serve a notice of his intention so to do' is translated as 'Gach iarrthóir ... seirbheálfa sé fógra i dtaobh na hintinne sin' in s2(2) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. Note, finally, as regards 'publish', 'Published by the Stationery Office' is translated as 'Foilsithe ag Oifig an tSoláthair' on the Title Page of the Acts for the year 1922.

In s45(2) of the Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1988, 'Subsection (1) of this section shall not apply to ... the publication of a notice inside the premises of the registered club in which the function is to be held' is translated as 'Ní bheidh feidhm ag fo-alt (1) den alt seo ... maidir le foilsiú fógra taobh istigh d'áitreabh an chlub chláráithe a mbeidh an dálás le seoladh ann'. 'The notice of seizure ... may ... be given by the publication of a notice of the seizure in Iris Oifigiúil' is translated as 'féadfar an fógra urghabhála ... a thabhairt ... trí fhógra i dtaobh na hurghabhála d'fhoilsiú san Iris Oifigiúil'.

Iris Oifigiúil Note that 'Iris Oifigiúil' is italicised in an early edition of the Stationery Office text and in the original text. See the commentary on Article 25.4.5° regarding 'iris'.

a gcuireann ... a lámh leis See the commentary on Article 13.3.1°.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

a fhógairt Verbal noun of 'fógair' – see the commentary on Articles 13.3.2° and 25.1.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Gach Bille a gcuireann an tUachtarán a lámh leis faoin mBunreacht seo ní foláir dó nó di é a fhógairt ina dhlí le fógra san Iris Oifigiúil, faoi ordú uaidh nó uaithi, á rá go bhfuil an Bille ina dhlí.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an tUachtarán gach Bille a shíneoidh sé nó sí faoin mBunreacht seo a fhógairt ina dhlí trí fhógra a fhoilsíú, faoina threorú nó faoina treorú<sup>1</sup>, san Iris Oifigiúil á shonrú<sup>2</sup> an Bille a bheith ina dhlí.

Variants

- 1 'faoina threoir nó faoina treoir', 'le hordú uaidh nó uaithi'
- 2 'ina sonrúfar'

ARTICLE 25.4.3<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 25.4.3<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELIGE

Is é téacs de Bhille a gcuirfidh an tUachtarán a lámh leis ná an téacs a ritheadh nó a mheastar a ritheadh ag dhá Theach an Oireachtas agus, má ritear Bille nó má mheastar é a bheith rite amhlaidh sa dá theanga oifigiúla, cuirfidh an tUachtarán a lámh le téacs Gaeilge agus le téacs Sacs-Bhéarla an Bhille.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The text of a Bill to which the President will put his hand is the text which was passed or is deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas and, if a Bill is passed or if it is deemed to have been so passed in the two official languages, the President will put his hand to the Irish text and to the English text of the Bill.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every Bill shall be signed by the President in the text in which it was passed or deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas, and if a Bill is so passed or deemed to have been passed in both the official languages, the President shall sign the text of the Bill in each of those languages.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Every Bill shall be signed by the President in the text in which it was passed' is rendered in the Irish text as 'Is é téacs de Bhille a gcuirfidh an tUachtarán a lámh leis ná an téacs a ritheadh' ('The text of a Bill which the President will sign is the text passed').
- 2 'The President shall sign the text of the Bill in each of those languages' is rendered as 'cuirfidh an tUachtarán a lámh le téacs Gaeilge agus le téacs Sacs-Bhéarla an Bhille' ('the President will sign the Irish text and the English text of the Bill') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Is so passed or deemed to have been passed' is rendered as 'má ritear, ... nó má mheastar é a bheith rite amhlaidh' ('is passed or deemed to have been so passed') in the Irish text.

- 4 As we saw earlier, the Irish term rendering 'English' ('Sacs-Bhéarla') differs in resonance from the normal contemporary form, 'Béarla'.
- 5 'Sign' is again rendered by 'a lámh a chur le' ('put his hand to') in the Irish text.

Note that the original s4 was deleted by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, and a new section was inserted in its place; unlike the preceding subsections, this subsection had no corresponding subsection in the original text.

Commentary

téacs This headword is translated principally as 'text' in Ó Dónaill, with 'téics' being translated as 'a text, a sentence, a quotation, a discourse or dissertation, a poem (poetic) ...' in Dinneen, who cites '*gach aiste agus téacs, every poem and verse, 'ag scaoileadh téicseasaí chugham i gcaitheamh na hoidhche, throwing out innuendoes to me through the night, talking to me' and 'ba chlú le téacsaibh, who was famous for his dicta'. 'Técs, técsa' is an English or Romance loanword, the earliest citation of which in the sense of 'work, version of a work' in DIL being 'ní mar do théx churthaoi gluais' ('your notes are not according to your text') from the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards'. 'Text' is translated as 'teacs' in Iris an Phoist, 14/12/27. 'A copy of the full text of the Bill can be inspected' is translated as 'Is féidir cóip de théacs iomlán an Bhille a iniúchadh' in the Appendix to s5 of the Referendum (Amendment) Act, 1959, for example.*

Note the lack of the definite article here before 'téacs' – one recalls the opening of Séadna, 'is é ainm a bhí air ná Séadna'. According to s119 of Graiméar Gaeilge na mBráithre Críostaí, the article can be left out in copulative sentences where a clause qualifies the noun, but it does not have to be left out of such sentences, the following being among the examples cited: 'is é [an] rud a rinne sé an bhó a bhleán'.

dhá Theach ... sa dá theanga 'Dhá', which becomes 'dá' before the article, also has the sense of 'both' – see the commentary on Article 20.3.

a gcuirfidh ... a lámh leis See the commentary on Article 13.3.1<sup>o</sup>.

Sacs-Bhéarla See the commentary on Article 4.

Direct translation

Síneoidh an tUachtarán gach Bille sa téacs inar rith nó ina meastar gur rith an dá Theach den Oireachtas é, agus má ritear Bille amhlaidh nó má mheastar gur ritheadh amhlaidh é sa dá theanga oifigiúla, síneoidh an tUachtarán téacs an Bhille i ngach ceann de na teangacha sin<sup>1</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'i ngach teanga diobh'

ARTICLE 25.4.4<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 25.4.4<sup>o</sup>TÉACS GAELIGE

I gcás an tUachtarán do chur a lámhe le téacs Bille i dteanga de na teangacha oifigiúla agus sa teanga sin amháin, ní foláir tiontú oifigiúil a chur amach sa teanga oifigiúil eile.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In the event of the President's putting his hand to the text of a Bill in one of the official languages and in that language only, an official translation must be brought out in the other official language.

ENGLISH TEXT

Where the President signs the text of a Bill in one only of the official languages, an official translation shall be issued in the other official language.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Issue' is rendered in the Irish text as 'cuir amach', 'put out', a phrase which has the sense of 'issue'; 'I issue' is translated as 'eisím' in Téarmaí Dlí, however.
- 2 'In only one of the official languages' is rendered as 'i dteanga de na teangacha oifigiúla agus sa teanga sin amháin' ('in one of the official languages and in that language alone') in the Irish text, this being a more conservative construction for the expression of this meaning in Irish, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú citing 'fear de na fearaibh, one of the men'.
- 3 'Sign' is again rendered by the phrase 'a lámh a chur le' ('put his hand to') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Shall' is rendered as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that the original ss4<sup>o</sup> was deleted by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941; the original ss5<sup>o</sup> read as follows:

An official translation of every law enacted by the Oireachtas in the Irish language shall be issued in the English language and an official translation of every law enacted by the Oireachtas in the English language shall be issued in the Irish language. Gach dligheadh dá n-achtuigheann an tOireachtas insan Ghaedhilg ní foláir tionntódh oifigeamhail air do chur amach insan Sacs-Bhéarla, agus gach dligheadh dá n-achtuigheann an tOireachtas insan Sacs-Bhéarla ní foláir tionntódh oifigeamhail air do chur amach insan Ghaedhilg.

Commentary

tiontú 'Tiontú focal, translation of words' is cited in Ó Dónaill, 'tiontú' being the verbal noun of 'tiontaigh', translated basically as 'turn', but with the secondary sense of 'translate', Ó Dónaill citing 'leabhar a thiontú ón Laidin, go Gaeilge, to translate a book from Latin, into Irish'. Dinneen translates 'tionntódh' as 'act of turning, reversing, translating, dissolving; a turn, a version, a conversion, a translation'. DIL cites 'tintúd' in the sense of 'act of translating; translation, version' from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, where we find

'tintúth béiri innaláil' ('translation of [one] language into another'). This is the verbal noun of 'do-intaí' (*to-ind-so-), principally 'turns back, returns' (as against 'do-sóí', 'turns'), DIL citing 'ní brónach donintarráí (not in sorrow has he returned)' from the same collection of Glosses.

Note that the official translation section of the Houses of the Oireachtas is styled 'Rannóg an Aistriúcháin'. While De Bhaldraithe translates 'I translate' as 'aistrím, tiontaím', he cites 'book translated from (the) German, leabhar a aistriódh ón nGearmáinis' and translates 'translation' simply as 'aistriú (ó theanga eile)'. 'Translation' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'aistriú' on p. 2 of the Constitution of the Irish Free State (Soarstát Éireann) Act, 1922.

Following the present Article, 'Tá an tiontú oifigiúil ar an Acht i gcló thall' is given as a footnote accompanying 'An tAcht um Bord na Gaeilge, 1978'; the English version of that note, 'The official translation of this Act is printed opposite', normally accompanies the Acts, that version generally being the original text, 'An tiontú oifigiúil' generally following the title of each Act in the Irish version of the Act. 'The official translation of any such Act or instrument' is translated as 'an tiontú oifigiúil ar aon Acht nó ionstraim den sórt sin' in s3(2) of the Place-Names (Irish Forms) Act, 1973. In s8(c) of the Arbitration Act, 1980, 'in any case where the award of the arbitration agreement is in a language other than one of the official languages of the State, a translation of the award or the agreement ... certified by an official or sworn translator' is translated as 'in aon chás ina mbeidh an dámhachtain nó an comhaontú eadrána i dteanga seachas i gceann de theangacha oifigiúla an Stáit, tiontú ar an dámhachtain nó ar an gcomhaontú agus é deimhnithe ag aistritheoir oifigiúil', with 'Deimhneoidh aistritheoir oifigiúil ... an tiontú sin' translating 'The translation shall be certified by an official ... translator' in s2 of Article IV of the First Schedule to that Act. On the other hand, 'a name, title or descriptive expression containing the words "building society" or the words "cumann foirgníochta" or any translation, variant or derivative of those words' is translated as 'ainm, teideal ná abairt tuairisce ina mbeidh na focail "building society" nó na focail "cumann foirgníochta" ná aon aistriú, malairt nó diorthaíoch ó na focail sin' in s9(2) of the Building Societies Act, 1976.

a chur amach Verbal noun of 'cuir amach', 'produce' being one of the senses of this phrase in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'earraí a chur amach, to produce goods' and 'tá an leabhar sin curtha amach go healaíonta, that book has been artistically produced', translating 'cuir amach' principally as 'put out'. 'Issue' is given as another secondary sense of 'cuir amach' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'litreacha a chur amach, to send out letters' and 'barántas a chur amach, to issue a warrant'.

'This Constitution shall come into operation on the issue of such Proclamation' is translated as 'tiocfaidh an Bun-reacht so i bhfeidhm ar fhoillsiú an Fhurógra san' in Article 83 of the 1922 Constitution. In s11(1) of the Public Safety Act, 1927, 'if in the opinion of the Executive Council any issue of a periodical printed outside Saorstát Éireann contains any seditious libel' is translated as 'Má sé tuairim na hArd-Chomhairle go bhfuil in aon chur-amach de thréimhseachán a clóbhuaitear nó a foillsítear lasmuich de Shaorstát Éireann aon chlu-mhille scríbhthe ceannairceach'. 'The day of issue of ballot papers' is translated as 'lá tabhartha amach na bpáipéirí ballóide' in s3(2)(a) of the Seanad Electoral Act, 1928, with 'Tabharthóirí Stóranna' translating 'Stores Issuers' in the Fifth Schedule to the Railways Act, 1924.

Turning to modern Acts, in s1(j) of the Fourth Schedule to the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'such licence shall be issued in that district' is translated as 'eiseofar an ceadúnas sin sa cheantar sin'. 'The issue of reports of such analyses' is translated as 'tuarascálacha ar anailísí den sórt sin a eisiúint' in s7(2)(a) of the Road Traffic (Amendment) Act, 1978, with 'the issue of certificates' being translated as 'deimhnithe a eisiúint' in s7(2)(c).

i dteanga de na teangacha Literally 'in a language of the languages', i.e. 'in one of the languages'. Note that in s70(1) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'may be sentenced by such Court-Martial to undergo one and only one of the punishments specified in the Scales A and B following' is translated as 'féadfa sí an duine sin do dhaora chun aon phionós amháin, agus ní chun a thuille, de sna pionóisí a háirítear i Scálaí A agus B a leanas é seo'.

do chur See the commentary on Article 15.8.2° regarding 'do' and 'a' before verbal nouns; because 'an tUachtarán' is followed by the verbal noun, it remains in the nominative rather than going into the genitive after the compound preposition 'i gcás'.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

Direct translation

I gcás nach síneoidh<sup>1</sup> an tUachtarán téacs Bille ach i dteanga amháin de na teangacha oifigiúla<sup>1</sup>, déanfar aistriúchán oifigiúil a eisiúint sa teanga oifigiúil eile.

Variants

- <sup>1</sup> 'síniú'.
- <sup>1</sup> 'I gcás gur i dteanga amháin de na teangacha oifigiúla a shíneoidh an tUachtarán téacs Bille, agus sa teanga sin amháin', 'I gcás an tUachtarán a shíniú téacs Bille i dteanga amháin de na teangacha oifigiúla agus sa teanga sin amháin'.

ARTICLE 25.4.5° AIRTEAGAL 25.4.5°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis Bille a shíniú agus é a fhógairt ina dhlí, ní foláir an téacs den dlí sin lena mbeidh lámh an Uachtaráin nó, i gcás lámh an Uachtaráin a bheith le téacs Gaeilge agus le téacs Sacs-Bhéarla an dlí sin, an dá théacs sínithe sin a chur isteach ina iris nó ina n-iris in oifig Iriseoir na Cúirte Uachtaraí, agus is fianaise dhochloite ar fhorálacha an dlí sin an téacs a chuirfear isteach ina iris, nó an dá théacs a chuirfear isteach ina n-iris, amhlaidh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

As soon as is possible after signing a Bill and promulgating it as law, the text of that law on which will be the President's hand/signature or, in the case of the President's hand/signature being on the Irish text and on the English text of that law, those two signed texts must be put into its journal or into their journal in the office of the Recorder of the Supreme Court, and the text that will be so put into its journal, or the two texts that will be so put into their journal, is/are irrefutable evidence of the provisions of that law.

ENGLISH TEXT

As soon as may be after the signature and promulgation of a Bill as a law, the text of such law which was signed by the President or, where the President has signed the text of such law in each of the official languages, both the signed texts shall be enrolled for record in the office of the Registrar of the Supreme Court, and the text, or both the texts, so enrolled shall be conclusive evidence of the provisions of such law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Enrol' is rendered by 'cuir isteach ina iris', which phrase literally translates as 'put into its journal/gazette', this phrase being cumbersome when more than one text is referred to, as this has to be expressed as 'cuir isteach ina n-iris' ('put into their journal/gazette'), this same phrase rendering both 'enrol for record' and 'enrol' in the Irish text; 'I enrol' is translated simply as 'rolláim' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'iris' is translated as 'gazette'.
- 'Registrar', in line with the term for 'enrol', is rendered by 'Iriseoir', which in the contemporary language more usually means 'journalist'; on the other hand, 'registrar' is translated as 'cláráitheoir' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'the Registrar of Wards of Court', for example, is styled 'Cláráitheoir na gCoimircithe Cúirte'.
- 'The signature ... of a Bill' is rendered in the Irish text as 'Bille a shíniú', 'síniú' being the verbal noun of the verb also found in 'an dá théacs sínithe', 'both the signed texts'; on the other hand, 'where the President has signed the text' is rendered as 'i gcás lámh an Uachtaráin a bheith le téacs' ('where the hand/signature of the President is on a text').
- 'The text of such law in each of the official languages' is rendered as 'téacs Gaeilge agus ... téacs Sacs-Bhéarla an dlí sin' ('the Irish text and the English text of that law') in the Irish text.
- 'English' is again rendered as 'Sacs-Bhéarla' rather than 'Béarla' in the Irish text.
- 'Promulgation as a law' is rendered in the Irish text by the same phrase we noted in earlier sections of this Article.
- 'Shall' is again rendered as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that the original Article 25.4.4°, before Article 25.4 was amended by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, read as follows:

As soon as may be after the President has signed any Bill and promulgated it as a law, the signed text shall be enrolled for record in the office of the Registrar of the Supreme Court and such signed text shall be conclusive evidence as to the provisions of such law. Chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis don Uachtarán a lámh do chur le Bille agus é fhógairt ina dhligheadh ní foláir an téacs sighthithe sin do chur isteach ina iris i n-oifig Iriseoir na Cúirte Uachtaraíche agus is fiadhnaisé dho-chlaoidhte an téacs sionghnighthe sin ar fhoráiltibh an dlíghidh sin.

Note also that Article 42 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

As soon as may be after any law has received the King's assent, the clerk, or such officer as Dáil Éireann may appoint for the purpose, shall cause two fair copies of such law to be made, one being in the Irish language and the other in the English language (one of which copies shall be signed by the Representative of the Crown to be enrolled for record in the office of such officer of the Supreme Court as Dáil Éireann may determine), and such copies shall be conclusive evidence as to the provisions of every such law ... Chó luath agus féadfar tar éis d'aon dlí aontú an Rí d'fháil, cuirfidh an cléireach no pé oifigeach eile a cheapfaidh Dáil Éireann chuige sin dhá chóip chearta den dlí sin á dhéanamh, ceann aca i nGaedhilg agus an ceann eile i mBéarla (agus sionghneoidh Ionadaí na Coróinneach ceann de sna cóipeanna san chun é do chur ar rolla cuimhnte in oifig an oifigigh sin de Chúirt Uachtarach ar a gcinnfidh Dáil Éireann), agus beidh na cóipeanna san mar fhíneacht chríochnuithé ar fhorálacha gach dlí dá sórt.

Commentary

a chur isteach ina iris nó ina n-iris 'Iris' is translated as 'gazette' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'irisim' translates 'I gazette'. Ó Dónaill gives 'journal, magazine, gazette' as senses of 'iris', citing 'iris oifigiúil, official gazette'. Dinneen includes 'tidings, a record, chronicle or gazettee', followed by the abbreviation for 'recent', among the senses of 'iris', translating this headword principally as 'faith, belief, religion; justice, law'. The sense of 'belief, faith, religion' is given under a separate headword 'iris' in Ó Dónaill, who gives 'oideas' as the standard form of 'iris' in the sense of 'record, knowledge, of events; historical information, history', citing 'leabhar oiris, chronicle, history book' – 'Leabar Oiris agus An[n]ála' is the title of a text published in the first volume of the journal Ériu. According to DIL, referring to 'iris-leabhar' (translated as 'a book of records or chronicles; a diary, a day-book, a journal, a magazine [recent]') in Dinneen, 'irisleabhar' being translated as 'journal, magazine' in Ó Dónaill, Modern Irish 'iris' seems to represent 'oideas', translated there as 'history, knowledge or record of events (in loose sense, including oral tradition)', the first citation therein coming from the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards'.

Looking at early translations of 'enrol', 'The principal teacher of every national and other suitable school at which any children to whom this Act applies are enrolled or attending' is translated as 'príomh-oide gach scoile náisiúnta agus gach scoile oiriúnaí eile go mbeidh aon leanbháil le n-a mbaineann an tAcht so ar an rolla ionta no á bhfreastal' in s15(1) of the School Attendance Act, 1926. 'Cur ar rolla' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'enrolment' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1928, p. 165. In s16 of the Army Pensions Act, 1926, 'any armed force ... the members of which by the terms of their commissions, agreement, enlistment, enrolment, contract or otherwise ...' is translated as 'aon fhórsaí armtha ... 'na mbeadh ar a mbaill ... do réir téarmaí a gcoimisiúin, a margaidh, a liostála, a gcláruithé, a gconnartha no éinní eile', 'The provisions of this Act as to billeting shall ... apply to women who are enrolled for employment by the Ministers as they apply to soldiers' being translated as 'bainfidh na forálacha den Acht so i dtaobh billéadachta le mná a chlárúigh an tAire chun a bhfostuithe fé mar a bhainfid le saighdiúirí' in s173(7) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. In s5(1) of the Garda Síochána (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, however, 'The men of the Garda Síochána shall be divided into the several ranks specified ... and shall be enrolled and appointed ... by the Commissioner' is translated as 'Roinnfáir fir an Ghárda Síochána do réir na gcéimeanna iolartha a luaidhtear ... agus déanfaidh an Coimisinéir iad do liostáil agus do cheapa'.

Following the wording of the present Article, 'All those parcels of land ... described and delineated by being coloured red on the plan which ... has, together with the text of this Act, been enrolled for record in the office of the Registrar of the Supreme Court' is translated as 'Na dáileachtaí talún sin uile ... atá tuairiscithe agus léirithe trína ndathú dearg ar an bplean ... a cuireadh isteach, maraon le téacs an Achta seo, ina iris in oifig Chláraitheoir na Cúirte Uachtaraí' in Part I of the Third Schedule of the Great Northern Railway Act, 1953. 'Arrange for the attendance at these courses ... of students enrolled in courses provided by the Authority' is translated as 'a shocrú go ndéanfaidh mic léinn freastal ar na cúrsaí sin ... is mic léinn atá ar na rollaí do chúrsaí a chuir an tÚdarás ar fáil' in s13(1)(b) of the National Agricultural Advisory, Education and Research Authority Act, 1977. Note, finally, that in an attempt to adhere to the wording of the Constitution and to Téarmaí Dlí, the notice of the latest enrolment of the Constitution, on 27/5/99, appeared as follows in Iris Oifigiúil, the Irish text following that of a previous notice:

A copy of the text of the Constitution as now in force embodying all amendments heretofore made therein, prepared under the supervision of the Taoiseach, was enrolled for record in the Office of the Registrar of the Supreme Court on the 27th May, 1999, in accordance with the provisions of Article 25.5.2° of the Constitution. Rinneadh cóip de théacs an Bhunreachtá mar atá i bhfeidhm anois agus ina bhfuil na leasuithe uile atá déanta air go dtí seo, arna ullmhú faoi threorú an Taoisigh, a rollú ina hiris in Oifig Iriseoir na Cúirte Uachtaraí an 27 Bealtaine, 1999, de réir fhorálacha Airteagal 25.5.2° den Bhunreacht.

'I enrol' is translated as 'rolláim' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'enrolment' translated as 'rollú'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'I enrol(l)' as 'cláraim (scoláirí); cuirim ar rolla, liostálaim (earcaigh)', translating 'enrolment' as 'liostáil (saighdiúirí), clárú (scoláirí)'. Ó Dónaill gives 'official record, register, list' as the secondary sense of 'rolla', translating 'bheith ar an rolla' as 'to be on the roll, enrolled', and translating 'rollaigh' principally as 'enrol', citing 'gníomhas a rollú, to enrol a deed'. 'Rolláim' is translated as 'I enrol' in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil. See the commentary on Article 18.4.1° regarding 'rolla', 'panel'.

Turning to the early Acts, in s15(5) of the Arterial Drainage Act, 1925, 'The Commissioners shall cause a true copy of the final award to be made ... and shall then enroll the final award in the Record and Writ Office of the High Court' is translated as 'Cuirfidh na Coimisinéirí fé ndéar fíor-chóip den mhola dheiridh do dhéanamh agus

... ansan cuirfid an mola deiridh ar an rolla in Oifig Breacachán agus Riteacha na hArd-Chúirte', a version of the same subsection being found in s12(5) of the Barrow Drainage Act, 1927. In s19(2) of the Arterial Drainage Act, 1945, however, 'and shall then enroll the Award in the Central Office of the High Court' is translated as 'agus déanfaid ansan an Moladh d'inrollú i bPríomh-Oifig na hArd-Chúirte'. 'Admission and enrolment', in the Margin Title of s10 of the Solicitors Act, 1954, is translated as 'Glacadh agus rollú', and in subsection (1) of the following section of that Act, 'on account of a defect ... in his admission and enrolment' is translated as 'toisc éalaing a bheith ... ina ghlacadh agus a rollú'.

We see above that 'enrol for record' is translated as 'cur ar rolla cuimhnte' in Article 42 of the 1922 Constitution. Looking at 'record' in general in early Acts, 'As Principal Executive Officer of the Hospital, he shall be responsible for all records, accounts and correspondence therewith' is translated as 'Mar Phríomh-oifigeach Feidhmiúcháin don Ospideul, beidh sé freagarthach i ngach breacachán, cuntas agus co-fhreagarthas a bhaineann leis an Ospideul' in the 'Galway County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'the conviction shall be recorded on the licence of the licence holder so convicted' being translated as 'breacfar an ciontú ar cheadúnas an tsealbhora ceadúnais a ciontófar amhlaidh' in s12 of the Intoxicating Liquor (General) Act, 1924. 'The Public Record Office' is styled 'Oifig na nAnálacha Puiblí' in Schedule (B) to the Appropriation Act, 1923, "Plate" includes any stereotype or other plate ... or negative used ... for printing or reproducing copies of any work, and any matrix or other appliance by which records, perforated rolls or other contrivances for the acoustic representation of the work are or are intended to be made' is translated as 'foluionn "pláta" aon chlóphláta no pláta eile ... no claonchló a húsáidtear ... chun cóipeanna d'aon obair do chlóbhuála no do dhéanamh, agus aon mhatrix no fearas eile le n-a ndintar recórdaí, rollaí pollta no gléasanna eile chun an obair do léiriú go fuaimiúil no 'na bhfuil sé ceaptha iad do dhéanamh leis' in s177(1) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. Finally, 'except the duty on records and other means of reproducing music' is translated as 'lasmuich den diúité ar phlátaí ceoil agus ar gléasanna eile ath-sheinnte ceoil' in s13(1) of the Finance Act, 1924.

Turning finally to a modern Act, in s20(1) of the Social Welfare Act, 1989, "original record" means any document, record, or record of an entry in a document or record of information stored by means of any mechanical or electronic device, whether or not in a legible form' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "taifead bunaidh" aon doiciméad, taifead, nó taifead d'iontráil i ndoiciméad nó i dtaifead nó faisnéis a stóráiltear trí bhíthin aon fheiste mheicniúil nó leictreonach, cibé acu an bhfuil sé i bhfoirm sholéite nó nach bhfuil'.

fianaise dhochloíte 'Fianaise dochloíte' (without lenition of 'dochloíte') is translated as 'conclusive evidence' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'fianaise dhochloíte' being translated as 'irrefutable evidence' in Ó Dónaill. See the commentary on Article 1 regarding 'dochloíte'. 'Fianaise' is translated as 'evidence; testimony' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'an fhianaise is fearr, best evidence' is cited. Ó Dónaill translates 'fianaise' principally as 'witness, testimony, evidence', citing 'i bhfianaise air sin, as evidence of that; in witness thereof'. Dinneen translates 'fiadhnaise' as 'witness, presence; testimony, testament, evidence; a witness'. DIL cites 'fiadnisse' from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, translating the headword 'fiadhnaise' as 'witness, testimony' with the sense of 'evidence, attestation' in early Irish laws, this noun being based on 'fiada', 'a witness; one who bears testimony'. In his 'Legal Glossary' to the early Irish law-text, Crith Gablach (p. 90f.), D.A. Binchy comments as follows:

fiadhnaise, evidence of an eye-witness (cf. preposition fiad 'in the presence of'), independent testimony on the facts at issue, which must be distinguished from teist, general evidence as to character etc., and also from the so-called 'proof' by compurgation.

We see above that 'finéacht chríochnuithe' translates 'conclusive evidence' in Article 42 of the 1922 Constitution. In s4 of the Indemnity (British Military) Act, 1923, 'A statement in writing signed by any Secretary of State of the British Government certifying any of the matters mentioned in this section shall be conclusive evidence of the matters so certified' is translated as 'Aon fhaisnéis i scríbhinn a bheidh sighthithe ag aon Rúnaí Stáit de Rialtas na Breataine agus ag deimhniú éinní de sna nithe a luaidhtear san alt so, beidh sé ina fianaise dho-chlaoite ar na nithe a deimhneofar mar sin'. In s11(3)(b) of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1983, 'the certificate shall be conclusive evidence of the fact that it is such a public limited company' is translated as 'is fianaise dhochloíte an deimhniú ar an bhfioras gur cuideachta phoiblí theoranta den sórt sin í'.

Iriseoir This headword is translated simply as 'journalist' in Ó Dónaill. Dinneen does not appear to give this as a headword – note that 'oiriseach' is translated as 'a narrator'. See the commentary above on 'iris', to which the suffix '-eoir', used in the formation of nouns of agency, is added; one of the forms in which the Latin suffix 'arius' appeared in Irish was as '-óir', Rudolf Thurneysen (op. cit., s269(4)(b)) citing 'caindleóir' ('candelarius', 'candle-bearer'), this formation being then followed with words which were not borrowings from Latin.

'Registrar' is translated as 'cláraitheoir' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'the Registrar of Wards of Court', for example, is translated as 'Cláraitheoir na gCoiimircithe Cúirte'. In a publication entitled 'Titles (in Irish and English) of Civil Service Posts' (1938), 'registrar' is translated as 'cláráthóir', 'Registrar of Title', for example, being translated as 'Cláráthóir Teideal'. 'The Office of the Registrar of the Supreme Court' is translated as 'Oifig Chláráthóir na Cúirte Uachtaraí' in s3(1) of the Court Officers Act, 1926. 'The Registrar-General' is translated as '(don) Ard-Chláradóir' in the Schedule to the Appropriation Act, 1922, 'that he is in fact the Registrar of such County Court Judge' being translated as 'gurb é sin le firinne is Cláráthóir don Bhreitheamh Cúirte Contae' in s13(5) of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1923. Finally, 'The Registrar of the Supreme Court' is translated as 'Cláraitheoir na Cúirte Uachtaraí' in s3(1) of the Central Bank Act, 1989, for example.

Chomh luath agus is féidir é 'Chomh luath is is féidir liom' is translated as 'as soon as I can' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'is féidir (go)' as 'it is possible (that)'. 'The Bank shall as soon as may be after the revocation of an approval of the rules of an exchange publish a notice of the revocation' is translated as 'déanfaidh an Banc, a luaithe is féidir tar éis ceadú malartáin a bheith cúlghairthe, fógra faoin gcúlghairm a fhoilsiú' in s106(5) of the Central Bank Act, 1989, for example.

an dá théacs sinithe According to the official standard, 'sinithe' would be lenited here, the adjective being lenited following the numbers two to nineteen – see the chapter on 'Uimhreacha' in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil.

a fhógairt See the commentary on Articles 13.3.2° and 25.1.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

lena mbeidh lámh See the commentary on Article 13.3.1°.

Sacs-Bhéarla See the commentary on Article 4.

Standardised Irish text

Chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis Bille a shíniú agus é a fhógairt ina dhlí, ní foláir an téacs den dlí sin lena mbeidh lámh an Uachtaráin nó, i gcás lámh an Uachtaráin a bheith le téacs Gaeilge agus le téacs Sacs-Bhéarla an dlí sin, an dá théacs shínithe sin a chur isteach ina iris nó ina n-iris in oifig Iriseoir na Cúirte Uachtaraí, agus is fianaise dhochloíte ar fhorálacha an dlí sin an téacs a chuirfear isteach ina iris, nó an dá théacs a chuirfear isteach ina n-iris, amhlaidh.

Direct translation

A luaithe is féidir tar éis Bille a shíniú agus a fhógairt ina dhlí, déanfar téacs an dlí sin a shíniú ag an tUachtarán nó, i gcás téacs an dlí sin a bheith sinithe ag an Uachtarán i ngach ceann de na teangacha oifigiúla, an dá théacs shínithe, a rollú don taifead in oifig Chláraitheoir na Cúirte Uachtaraí, agus fianaise dhochloíte a bheidh sa téacs, nó sa dá théacs, a rollófar amhlaidh<sup>1</sup> ar fhorálacha an dlí sin.

Variants

- 1 'beidh an téacs, nó an dá théacs, a rollófar amhlaidh mar fhianaise dhochloíte'

ARTICLE 25.4.6° AIRTEAGAL 25.4.6°

TÉACS GAEILGE

I gcás téacs Gaeilge agus téacs Sacs-Bhéarla de dhlí a chur isteach ina n-iris faoin alt seo agus gan an dá théacs sin a bheith de réir a chéile, is ag an téacs Gaeilge a bheidh an forlámhas.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In the event that the Irish text and the English text of a law are put into their journal under this section and those two texts are not in accord with one another, (it is) the Irish text which will have supremacy/dominance.

ENGLISH TEXT

In case of conflict between the texts of a law enrolled under this section in both the official languages, the text in the national language shall prevail.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The text in the national language' is rendered as 'an téacs Gaeilge' ('the Irish text') in the Irish text, 'the national language' being expressed as 'an teanga náisiúnta' in Article 8.1.
- 2 'Conflict between the texts' is rendered as 'gan an dá théacs sin a bheith de réir a chéile' ('those two texts not being in accord with one another') in the Irish text.
- 3 'The texts of a law enrolled under this section in both the official languages' is rendered as 'téacs Gaeilge agus téacs Sacs-Bhéarla de dhlí a chur isteach ina n-iris' ('enrolling the Irish text and the English text of a law'), with 'enrol' being rendered as 'a chur isteach ina n-iris', ('put into their journal') in the Irish text, the same phrase that renders 'enrol for record' and 'enrol' in the previous subsection.
- 4 'Prevail' is rendered as 'ag ... a bheidh an forlámhas' ('have supremacy/dominance') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 42 of the 1922 Constitution concludes as follows:

... and in case of conflict between the two copies so deposited, that signed by the Representative of the Crown shall prevail .... agus i gcás coinbhliocht idir an dá chóip a cuirfear i dtaisce mar sin, sé an ceann a bheidh síghnithe ag Ionadaí na Coróinneach a bhuaidhfídh.

Note that the original s4 was deleted by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, and a new section was inserted in its place; unlike earlier subsections, no corresponding subsection to the above is found in the original section.

Commentary

forlámhas This headword is translated as 'domination, supremacy; control, authority ...' in Ó Dónaill and as 'superiority, chiefship, supreme power or authority ...' in Dinneen. De Bhaldraithe translates 'to prevail over, against, someone, something' as 'an ceann is fearr a fháil ar dhuine, ar rud; buachan ar dhuine, ar rud', citing 'the law prevailed, bhí an lá ag an dlí'. 'A bhuaidhfídh' translates 'shall prevail' in Article 42 of the 1922 Constitution above, 'a sheasóidh' being found in s12(2) of the Finance Act, 1923, as we see below. 'The opinion of ... shall prevail' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'glacfar le oipíneon ...' in Iris Oifigiúil (exact date given questionable). 'Having regard to the prevailing standards of the Shareholding Banks' is translated as 'ag cuimhneamh do ar na staidaird a bheidh i bhfeidhm ag na Banc Scair-shealbhacha' in s18(3) of the Currency Act, 1927. Finally, in s2 of the Schedule to the Constitution (Amendment No. 17) Act, 1931, 'in the case of any inconsistency between this Article and the said Article 3 ..., this Article shall prevail' is translated as 'má bhíonn aon bhuinisciontacht idir an tAirtíogal seo agus an tAirtíogal san 3 ... isé an tAirtíogal so bhuaidhfídh'.

Following Article XIV in Part III of the First Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1988, 'In the case of any inconsistency, the text in the French language, in which language the Warsaw Convention of 12th October 1929 was drawn up, shall prevail' is translated as 'I gcás aon neamhréire, is ag an téacs i bhFraincis, an téacs inar tarraingíodh suas Coinbhinsiún Vársá dar dháta 12 Deireadh Fómhair 1929, a bheidh an forlámhas', following Article XVIII of the Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1965, where 'In case of any inconsistency, the text in the French language ... shall prevail' is translated as 'I gcás aon neamhréire, is ag an téacs san Fhraincis ... a bheidh an forlámhas'.

de réir a chéile 'De réir' is translated as 'in accordance with' in Téarmaí Dlí, Ó Dónaill translating 'nil siad de réir a chéile' as 'they don't correspond'. Dinneen translates 'do réir a chéile' as 'homogeneous, uniform, agreeing, in due order'. 'Conflict of evidence' is translated as 'easaontacht fhianaise' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'easaontas fianaise, conflict of evidence' being cited in Ó Dónaill.

In s12(2) of the Finance Act, 1923, 'and in the event of any conflict between the provisions of the said sections 27 and 28 or either of them and the provisions of any such Order as aforesaid, the provisions of such Order shall prevail' is translated as 'agus, i gcás aon choimblichtha idir fhorálacha altanna 27 agus 28 san no aon ailt díobh agus forálacha aon Ordú den tsórt san roimh-ráite, is iad forálacha an Orduithe sin a sheasóidh'. In s31(2)(a)(ii) of the Central Bank Act, 1989, 'the Bank is of the opinion that the exemption would not conflict with the orderly and proper regulation of banking' is translated as 'gur dóigh leis an mBanc nach mbeadh an díolúine contrártha do rialáil ordúil chuí a dhéanamh ar an mbaincéireacht'. 'Including its rules on the conflict of laws' is translated as 'lena n-áirítear a rialacha ar easaontacht dlíthe' in s1 of Article 42 of the Second Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1980, 'Easaontacht dlíthe' translating 'Conflict of laws' in the Margin Title of s36 of the Sale of Goods and Supply of Services Act, 1980. 'If ... that subsection would ... conflict with a constitutional right of any person' is translated as 'Más rud é ... go mbeadh an fo-alt sin ... i godarsna le ceart bunreachtúil de chuid aon duine' in s1(2) of the Garda Síochána Act, 1979. Finally, the Margin Title of s58 of the Pensions Act, 1990, 'Conflict between Part V and schemes', is translated as 'Easaontas idir Cuid V agus scéimeanna'.

Sacs-Bhéarla See the commentary on Article 4.

a chur isteach ina n-iris See the commentary on the previous subsection.

Direct translation

I gcás easaontachta idir téacsanna dlí a rollófar faoin alt seo sa dá theanga oifigiúla, beidh an forlámhas ag an téacs sa teanga náisiúnta.

ARTICLE 25.5.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 25.5.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELIGE

Is dleathach don Taoiseach a thabhairt, ó am go ham faoi mar a chífear dó gá a bheith leis, go ndéanfar téacs (sa Ghaeilge agus sa Sacs-Bhéarla) den Bhunreacht seo, mar a bheidh i bhfeidhm an tráth sin agus ina mbeidh na leasuithe uile a bheidh déanta air go dtí sin, a ullmhú faoina threorú.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is lawful for the Taoiseach to bring about, from time to time according as he sees that there is a need for it, that a text (in Irish and in English) of this Constitution, as it will be in force at that time and in which will be all the amendments which will have been made to it up to then, be prepared under his guidance.

ENGLISH TEXT

It shall be lawful for the Taoiseach, from time to time as occasion appears to him to require, to cause to be prepared under his supervision a text (in both the official languages) of this Constitution as then in force embodying all amendments theretofore made therein.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Supervision' is rendered by 'treorú', the Irish legal term for 'direction'; 'supervision' is translated as 'stiúradh' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'In both the official languages' is rendered as 'sa Ghaeilge agus sa Sacs-Bhéarla' ('in Irish and in English') in the Irish text, 'Sacs-Bhéarla' rather than the general term 'Béarla' rendering 'English', as we have already seen.
- 'Embodying' is rendered as 'ina mbeidh' ('containing') in the Irish text, with 'as then in force embodying all amendments' being rendered as 'mar a bheidh i bhfeidhm an tráth sin agus ina mbeidh na leasuithe uile' ('as it will be in force at that time and in which there will be all the amendments'), this clause being preceded by a comma found only in the Irish text.
- 'As occasion appears to him to require' is rendered as 'faoi mar a chífear dó gá a bheith leis' ('according as he sees that there is a need for it') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 25.5 was added to the text by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941.

Commentary

a thabhairt Verbal noun of 'tabhair', one of the major secondary senses of which in Ó Dónaill is 'bring', with 'bring about, cause, compel' being one of the subsets of this sense, Ó Dónaill citing 'thug sé an áit a dhíol, he caused the place to be sold' and 'ná tabhair ár náire, don't shame us'. Dinneen cites 'do-bheirim é do dhéanamh, I get it done', 'do-bheirim ar dhuine rud do dhéanamh, I get a person to do a thing' and 'is é rud thug mé annso, the cause of my coming here is'. DIL cites 'ní heasbaidh eoluis ... tug don choirneach mo chrostáil' ('... that caused the tonsured friar to censure me') from Dáibhí Ó Bruadair (c. 1630-1689).

See the commentary on Article 12.10.5<sup>o</sup> where 'cuir á' expresses 'cause'. 'The Minister shall cause to be prepared maps showing ... the boundaries of each of the several fisheries regions in existence for the time being' is translated as 'Cuirfidh an tAire faoi deara go n-ullmhófar léarscáileanna a thaispeánfaidh ... teorainneacha gach ceann ar leith de na réigiúin iascaigh a bheidh ann de thuras na huairé' in s10(12)(a) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, for example. In s6 of the First Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923, 'It shall be the duty of the registration officer ... to prepare or cause to be prepared, lists ... of all persons appearing to be registered as Dáil or Seanad Electors' is translated as 'Beidh sé de dhualgas ar an oifigeach clárathachta ... liostaí d'ullmhú, no do chur á n-ullmhú, de gach duine a dheabhróidh a bheith i dteideal a chlárúithe ina Dháil-toghthóir no ina Sheanad-toghthóir'.

faoina threorú 'Treorú' is translated as 'direction (by judge)' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'guidance, direction' being given as the sense of this term, the verbal noun of 'treoraigh', in Ó Dónaill, which verb is translated as 'guide, lead, direct', Ó Dónaill citing 'an coiste a threorú, to direct the jury'. Dinneen translates 'treorughadh' as 'the act of guiding, directing, preparing, arranging; example, guidance'. DIL cites 'treorugudh 7 eolus uaitsiu damsá co rius do agallaim Anaichis' ('guidance and direction from thee to me that I may come to have speech of Anchises') from the Irish Aeneid, translated some time before the year 1400.

In s1 of Article 30 of the First Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1936, 'in so far as that contract deals with such part of the carriage as is performed under his supervision' is translated as 'sa mhéid go mbaineann an connradh san leis an gcuid sin den iompar a deintear fé n-a mhaoirseacht', with 'and to his satisfaction and under his supervision' being translated as 'chun a shástachta agus fé n-a mhaoirseacht' in s14 of the Limerick Harbour Tramways Act, 1931. 'Under the supervision of the Bank' is translated as 'faoi mhaoirseacht an Bhainc' in s38 of the Central Bank Act, 1989. 'To carry out under the supervision of a veterinary examiner such examination of carcasses' is translated as 'cibé scrúdú, faoi mhaoirseacht scrúdaitheora tréidliachta a dhéanamh ar chonablaigh' in s7(4) of the Agricultural Produce (Meat) (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1978. In s6(c) of Article XVI of the Schedule to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (Financial Support Fund) (Agreement) Act, 1976, 'The Advisory Body shall be responsible, under the supervision of the Governing Committee, for preparing the work of the Governing Committee' is translated as 'Beidh an Bord Comhairleach freagrach, faoi mhaoirsiú an Choiste Rialaithe, in obair an Choiste Rialaithe a ullmhú'. Note that 'winding up under supervision' is translated as 'foirceannadh faoi stiúradh' in Téarmaí Dlí.

Looking at early Acts, 'All bottles ... shall forthwith be destroyed in the prescribed manner by or under the supervision of a special inspector' is translated as 'Na buidéal uile ... ditheofar láithreach sa tslí ordúithe iad ag cigire speisialta nó fé n-a mhaoirseacht' in s7(4) of the Weights and Measures Act, 1928. 'Maoirsiú' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'supervision' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1925, p. 103, 'stiúru' being cited from translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health. 'Any person who is subject to the supervision of the police' is translated as 'éinne atá fé fhaire na póilíneachta' in s8(1)(f) of the Firearms Act, 1925. Finally, 'the office of the Supervisor of Taxes' is translated as 'oifig Forfheicire na gCánach' in s9(1) of the Dublin Police Act, 1924.

Commenting on the translation below, Professor Máirtín

Ó Murchú remarks that in general usage we find 'faoina threoir' and 'faoina stiúir' rather than 'faoina threorú' and 'faoina stiúradh', although the latter is also found.

faoi mar This phrase is translated as 'according as' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'faoi mar atáimid ag dul ar aghaidh, at the rate at which we are progressing'. Dinneen translates 'féibh mar, fé mar, fá mar' as 'just or exactly as', citing 'féibh mar léightear, as we read'. 'Immar', from which 'mar' comes, is not found in Old Irish Glosses.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'as occasion requires' simply as 'de réir mar is gá'. 'Each fire authority which maintains a fire brigade shall prepare (and, as occasion requires, revise) plans for fire and emergency operations' is translated as 'Ní mór do gach údarás dóiteáin a chothabhálann briogáid dóiteáin pleananna le haghaidh oibríochtaí dóiteáin agus éigeandála a ullmhú (agus, de réir mar is gá, a athmheas)' in s26(1) of the Fire Services Act, 1981. 'The Minister may, from time to time as occasion requires, ... do either or both of the following things' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire, ó am go ham de réir mar is gá ... ceachtar de na nithe seo a leanas, nó iad araon, a dhéanamh' in s11(2) of the Youth Employment Agency Act, 1981. In s12(1) of the Interpretation Act, 1923, 'the power may be exercised and the duty shall be performed from time to time as occasion requires' is translated as 'féadfar an chomhacht d'fheidhmiú agus déanfar an dualgas o am go ham fé mar is gá'.

'When any question which appears to the Minister to require the assistance of assessors is heard' is translated as 'nuair a bheidh aon cheist a fheicfear don Aire cúnámh measúnóirí a bheith ag teastáil chuici á héistéacht' in s298(12)(a) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. In s90(1) of the Defence Act, 1954, 'The Minister may, at any time when occasion appears to require, direct that ...' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire, aon uair a dhealrós sé gur gá é, a threorú go'. In s4(3) of the Land Bond Act, 1925, 'the Judicial Commissioner may, in any particular case in which justice appears to him so to require, make such order' is translated as 'féadfidh an Coimisinéir Breithiúnais, in aon chás áirithe ina bhfeicfar do gur gá é do réir cirt, pé ordú is dó leis is ceart ... do dhéanamh'.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'de réir mar is gá leis' rather than the variant given in the translation below.

mar a chítear dó 'Chí' is given as 'a variant present' of the verb 'feic' ('see') in Ó Dónaill, who under the headword 'feic' translates 'chonacthas dom (go)' as 'it appeared to me (that)', citing 'ní fheictear dom go bhfuil an fhírinn aige, he doesn't seem to me to be stating the truth'. 'Do-chítear dam' is translated as 'it seems to me, I observe, notice, understand, infer' in Dinneen. DIL cites 'atchessa fiad lucht na netarnade comtis aige alta' ('they seemed to those lying in ambush to be wild deer'), from an old Irish hymn which is said to have rendered St Patrick and his monks invisible as such, as an example of the passive of 'ad-cí' ('sees') in the sense of 'appears, seems (do, to)', also citing 'do-connarcas damh trácht ar éiclipsigh na gréine' ('it seemed good to me to treat of eclipses of the sun') from the Irish Corpus Astronomiae.

a ullmhú Verbal noun of 'ullmhaigh', translated as 'make ready, prepare' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'ráiteas a ullmhú, to prepare a statement' and 'dráma a ullmhú don stáitse, to get up a play for the stage'. 'Ullmhuighim' is translated as 'I prepare, get ready' in Dinneen, who cites 'ullmhuighim bia, I dress, cook, food'. DIL cites 'co n-ullmaigend ... inad do dhiabul' ('is preparing a place for a devil') from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, composed in the second half of the eleventh century; the verb 'ellmaigid' is based on 'ellam', translated principally as 'quick, prompt, speedy; soon, readily' in DIL, citing 'combad ellam no comallaitis aní asrochoilset' ('that they should speedily perform') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Psalms.

'An accountable person shall ... prepare and deliver to the Commissioners ... a return of ... the names and addresses of all persons resident in the State' is translated as 'déanfaidh duine cuntasach ... tuairisceán ar na nithe seo a leanas a ullmhú agus a sheachadadh ar na Coimisinéirí ... ainm agus seoladh gach duine a chónaíonn sa Stát' in s109(7) of the Finance Act, 1990. In Article 54 of the 1922 Constitution, 'The Executive Council shall prepare Estimates of the receipts and expenditure of the Irish Free State' is translated as 'Ullmhóidh an Ard-Chomhairle Meastacháin d'fháltas agus de chaiteachas Shaorstáit Éireann'. Note that 'to prepare a translation' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'aistriú do dhéanamh' on p. 2 of the Constitution of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) Act, 1922.

ina mbeidh Literally 'in which there will be', this phrase generally expressing 'contain(ing)' in the Constitution – see the commentary on Article 18.7.1°. De Bhaldráithe translates the present sense of 'I embody' as 'cuirim isteach (alt i ndlí)', citing 'an article that embodies the following regulation, alt a bhfuil an rial seo leanas ann'. 'Shall ... be taken as references to ... a copy embodying a translation in English or Irish of the parts in a foreign language' is translated as 'measfar ... gur tagairtí iad ... do chóip ina bhfuil tiontú Béarla nó Gaeilge ar na Codanna atá i dteanga iasachta' in s47(1) of the Companies Act, 1963. In s94(4)(b)II of the Finance Act, 1982, 'instruments embodying alterations of the terms or conditions of any policy of insurance' is translated as 'ionstraimí ina ndéantar athruithe ar théarmaí nó coinníollacha aon pholasaí árachais'. In s45(3)(b) of the Medical Practitioners Act, 1978, 'on completion of the inquiry, the Council shall embody its findings in a report to the Council' is translated as 'nuair a bheidh an fiosrúchán críochnaithe, déanfaidh an Coiste a chinntí a chur i dtuarascáil chuig an gComhairle'.

In s4 of the Third Schedule to the Creamery Act, 1928, 'The Society doth hereby agree that it shall forthwith have a General Resolution passed by its members embodying and ratifying the terms of this Agreement' is translated as 'Co-aontuionn an Cumann leis seo go ndéanfidh a bhaill Rún Generálta do rith láithreach ina mbeidh agus le n-a ndaingneofar téarmaí an Chó-aontuithe seo'. Finally, 'embody' in the phrase 'to embody conditions in a licence' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'cur isteach' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1926, p. 1068.

dleathach See the commentary on Articles 14.3, 15.6.2° and 17.2.

Sacs-Bhéarla See the commentary on Article 4.

tráth See the commentary on Article 16.2.3°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Is dleathach don Taoiseach a thabhairt, ó am go ham faoi mar a fheicfead dó nó di gá a bheith leis, go ndéanfar téacs (sa Ghaeilge agus sa Sacs-Bhéarla) den Bhunreacht seo, mar a bheidh i bhfeidhm an tráth sin agus ina mbeidh na leasuithe uile a bheidh déanta air go dtí sin, a ullmhú faoina threorú nó faoina treorú.

Direct translation

Is dleathach don Taoiseach, ó am go ham de réir mar is gá dar leis,<sup>1</sup> a chur faoi deara téacs den Bhunreacht seo (sa dá theanga oifigiúla), mar a bheidh i bhfeidhm san am agus ina mbeidh gach leasú a bheidh déanta air go dtí sin, a ullmhú faoina stiúradh<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- <sup>1</sup> 'de réir mar is gá dar leis san am,'
- <sup>2</sup> 'faoina mhaoirseacht/mhaoirsiú nó faoina maoirseacht/maoirsiú'

ARTICLE 25.5.2° AIRTEAGAL 25.5.2°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Gach téacs a ullmhófar amhlaidh ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur le cóip de ar bheith fíoraithe di le sínithe an Taoisigh agus an Phríomh-Bhreithimh, agus ní foláir an chóip sin a chur isteach ina hiris in oifig Iriseoir na Cúirte Uachtaraí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every text which will be so prepared the President must put his hand to a copy of it on its being verified by the signatures of the Taoiseach and the Chief Justice, and that copy must be put into its journal in the office of the Recorder of the Supreme Court.

ENGLISH TEXT

A copy of every text so prepared, when authenticated by the signatures of the Taoiseach and the Chief Justice, shall be signed by the President and shall be enrolled for record in the office of the Registrar of the Supreme Court.

Divergences between the official texts

- <sup>1</sup> 'Authenticate' is rendered by the Irish legal term for 'verify', 'fíoraigh', 'I authenticate' being translated in Téarmaí Dlí as 'fíordheimhním'.
- <sup>2</sup> 'Enrol for record' is again rendered by the phrase rendering both 'enrol for record' and 'enrol' in Article 25.4.5°, and 'Registrar' is also rendered by the same term as found in that subsection, this term having the current sense of 'journalist'.
- <sup>3</sup> 'A copy of every text ... shall be signed by the President ... and shall be enrolled' is rendered as 'Gach téacs ... ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur le cóip de ...

agus ní foláir an chóip sin a chur isteach ina hiris' (Every text ... the President must sign a copy of it ..., and that copy must be enrolled') in the Irish text, this text alone having a comma before that final clause.

- 4 'Sign' is again rendered by the phrase 'a lámh a chur le' ('put his hand to'), 'signature' being rendered by the more specific term 'siniú'.
- 5 'Shall' is twice rendered as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 25.5 was added to the text by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941.

Commentary

fioraithe Past participle of 'fioraigh', translated as 'verify' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ráiteas a fhíorú, to confirm, bear out, a statement'. 'Fioraim' is translated as 'I verify' in Téarmaí Dlí and as 'I make true, verify, fulfil' in Dinneen, who cites 'fíoradh [an] tarngaire, the prophecy was realised' and 'súil nár fíoradh, a hope that was not realised'. DIL cites 'fégaid ocus fíraid' (translated by Edward Gwynn as 'look ye and speak truth!' in The Metrical Dindsenchas), from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster, as an example of the sense 'confirms, proves' of 'fíraid', literally 'makes true' (based on 'fir', 'true'), principally translated as 'realizes, fulfils', DIL citing 'adgellat nad firat' ('they make promises they do not keep') from the early Irish 'wisdom-text', Tecosca Cormaic.

'Fioraigh' expresses 'verify' in Article 27.2. 'I authenticate' is translated as 'fíordheimhnm' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Every legal tender note shall be ... numbered and authenticated in such manner as stood prescribed before the commencement of this section' is translated as 'Maidir le gach nóta dlíthairgthe, beidh sé ... uimhrithe agus fíordheimhniithe i cibé caoi, a bhí forordaithe roimh thosach feidhme an ailt seo' in s118(2) of the Central Bank Act, 1989. 'And such seal shall be authenticated by the signatures of two members of the Board' is translated as 'agus fíordheimhneofar an séala sin le sínithe bheirt chomhaltaí den Bhord' in s11(1) of the Scholarship Exchange (Ireland and the United States of America) Act, 1957.

In s6(4) of the Fourth Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923, 'if the numbers agree and the declaration of identity is found to be duly signed and authenticated' is translated as 'Más mar a chéile an dá uimhir agus go bhfaighfear an fhaisnéis chéannacht bheith sighthithe agus dilse-dhearbhuithe mar is cuibhe'. 'Authenticate' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'd'fhíorú' in Iris an Phuist, 18/4/28. 'Sealed with the seal of the Trustees authenticated in accordance with this section' is translated as 'séaluith le séala na nÍontaobhaithe agus an séala san deimhniithe do réir an ailt seo' in s2(3) of the Slaughtered Animals (Compensation) Act, 1928. 'Presumption of authenticity of documents' is translated as 'Déanfar talamh slán de go bhfuil scríbhinní áirithe údarásach' in the Margin Title of s12 of the Statistics Act, 1926, 'the Minister shall cause an authentic Register of subscribers to the Internal Loan to be prepared' being translated as 'cuirfidh an tAire fé ndéar Clár údarásach shíntiúsairí don Iasacht Inmheánach d'ullamhú' in s4(1) of the Dáil Éireann Loans and Funds Act, 1924.

a chur isteach ina hiris See the commentary on Article 25.4.5° regarding the notice of latest enrolment.

Direct translation

Déanfar cóip de gach téacs a ullmhófar amhlaidh, nuair a bheidh sí fíordheimhniithe<sup>1</sup> le sínithe an Taoisigh agus an Phríomh-Bhreithimh, a shíniú ag an Uachtarán agus a rollú don taifead in oifig Chláraitheoir na Cúirte Uachtaraí.

Variants

- 1 'ar bheith fíordheimhniithe di'

ARTICLE 25.5.3° AIRTEAGAL 25.5.3°

TÉACS GAEILGE

An chóip a bheidh sínithe agus curtha isteach ina hiris amhlaidh agus arb í an téacs is deireanaí, arna ullmhú amhlaidh, in alt na huairé í, beidh sí, ar bheith curtha isteach ina hiris di amhlaidh, ina fianaise dhochloíte ar an mBunreacht seo mar a bheidh ar dháta an chóip sin a chur isteach ina hiris amhlaidh agus, chuige sin, gabhfaidh sí ionad na dtéacsanna uile den Bhunreacht seo a mbeidh cóipeanna díobh curtha isteach ina n-iris amhlaidh roimhe sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The copy which will be so signed and put into its journal and which is the latest text, having been so prepared, at the particular time, it will be, on being so put into its journal, irrefutable evidence of this Constitution as it will be on the date of that copy's being so put into its journal and, to that end, it will take the place of all the texts of this Constitution copies of which will have been so put into their journal before that.

ENGLISH TEXT

The copy so signed and enrolled which is for the time being the latest text so prepared shall, upon such enrolment, be conclusive evidence of this Constitution as at the date of such enrolment and shall for that purpose supersede all texts of this Constitution of which copies were previously so enrolled.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Shall supersede' is rendered as 'gabhfaidh sí ionad' ('will take the place of') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Enrol' is rendered by the same phrase as expresses 'enrol for record' in the previous subsection.
- 3 'As at the date of such enrolment' is rendered as 'mar a bheidh ar dháta an chóip sin a chur isteach ina hiris amhlaidh' ('as it will be on the date of so enrolling that copy') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Upon such enrolment' is rendered as 'ar bheith curtha isteach ina hiris di amhlaidh' ('upon being so enrolled') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Which is ... the latest text so prepared' is rendered as 'agus arb í an téacs is deireanaí, arna ullmhú amhlaidh,' ('and which is the latest text, so prepared,') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Amhlaidh' ('So'), in 'a bheidh sínithe agus curtha isteach ina hiris amhlaidh' (rendering 'so signed and

- enrolled') in the opening clause, need only refer to 'curtha isteach ina hiris' ('enrolled') in the Irish text.
- 7 'For the time being' is rendered as 'in alt na huaire' ('at the particular time') in the Irish text.
  - 8 'For that purpose' is rendered as 'chuige sin' ('to that end') in the Irish text, preceded by and followed by a comma in that text alone.

Note that Article 25.5 was added to the text by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941.

Commentary

is deireanaí The superlative of the adjective 'deireanach', translated principally as 'last' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'an ceann deireanach, the last one', with 'latter, recent' being given as a secondary sense, citing 'an scéala is deireanaí, the latest news'. 'Deireanach' is translated as 'last, hindmost; final; late, latter; latest' in Dinneen. 'Deireanach, deirennach' is translated as 'last' in DIL, only citing two examples, the first being from the Book of Lecan (compiled c. 1400); this headword is '= deiredach', according to DIL, being influenced by 'déidenach'. 'Deiredach' is translated as 'coming to an end, latest, last' in DIL, citing 'rí is deiredacha díb' ('the last of those kings') from the Irish Grammatical Tracts. 'Deired', on which 'deiredach' is based, is translated as (a) 'remainder, residue' and (b) 'end, rear, conclusion' in DIL, citing 'is dered mbetho inso' ('this is the end of the world') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

'A copy purporting to be a copy printed and published by or for the Board under this section of the dental register which is for the time being the latest dental register so printed and published shall be evidence in any court' is translated as 'Beidh cóip a thugann le tuisgint gur cóip í do clóbhuailleadh agus do foillsíodh ag an mBord no don Bhord fén alt so den chlár d'fhiaclóirí a bheidh de thurus na huaire ar an gclár d'fhiaclóirí is déanaí do clóbhuailleadh agus do foillsíodh amhlaidh, beidh an chóip sin ina fianaise in aon chúirt' in s35(5) of the Dentists Act, 1928.

gabhfaidh sí ionad 'Ionad' is translated basically as 'place' in Ó Dónaill, 'substitution, succession' being given as one of the senses, citing 'ionad duine, ruda, a dhéanamh, to take the place of someone, something' and 'rud a chur in ionad ruda eile, to substitute one thing for another'. Ó Dónaill cites 'áit duine a ghabháil, to take someone's place' s.v. 'gabh', translated principally as 'take'. 'Ionad' with the genitive is translated as 'instead of, in the place for, in compensation for' in Dinneen. DIL cites 'do-ní éanmhac ionad cloinne' ('... takes the place of ...') from a miscellaneous collection of Classical Irish poetry s.v. 'inad', principally translated as 'place, spot; appointed place, position'.

'And those forms supersede in the case of a public limited company the forms of memorandum set out respectively in Tables B and D' is translated as 'agus, i gcás cuideachta poiblí teoranta, is iad na foirmeacha sin a úsáidfear in ionad na bhfoirmeacha meabhráin atá leagtha amach faoi seach i dTáblaí B agus D' in s4(3) of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1983. In the Preamble to the Royal College of Physicians of Ireland (Charter and Letters Patent Amendment) Act, 1979, 'And whereas many of the said ... provisions have long since fallen into disuse or been superseded' is translated as 'Agus de bhri go bhfuil a lán de na forálacha sin imithe as úsáid nó curtha as ionad le fada'. In s17(2) of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1936, 'and any such order shall, except in so far as it has been superseded by a subsequent order under this sub-section, be conclusive evidence of the matters so certified' is translated as 'agus, sa mhéid ná beidh sé curtha i leataoibh le hordú ina dhiaidh sin fén bhfo-alt so, beidh aon ordú den tsórt san ina fhianaise dho-chlaoite ar na nithe deimhneofar amhlaidh'. In s4(5) of the Broadcasting Act, 1990, 'A code drawn up under subsection (1) ... shall supersede any existing code under Section 18' is translated as 'Cód a tharraingeofar suas faoi fho-alt (1) ... glacfaidh sé ionad aon chóid láithrigh faoi alt 18'.

Looking at early Acts, in s52(ii) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924, 'where matters of such kind have been heretofore heard by the courts superseded by the Circuit Court' is translated as 'ina ndintí roimhe seo nithe den tsórt san d'éisteacht sna cúirteanna go mbeidh an Chúirt Chuarda ina n-ionad'. 'Sections 59 to 65 ... shall cease to have effect and shall for the purposes of Section 59 of the Pilotage Act, 1913, be deemed to be superseded' is translated as 'Ní bheidh éifeacht feasta ag ailt 59 go 65 ... agus chun crícheanna alt 59 den Pilotage Act, 1913, tuigfar iad do bheith curtha i leataoibh' in s9 of the Schedule to the Pilotage Orders Confirmation Act, 1924. Finally, in s3(3) of the Police Forces Amalgamation (Amendment) Act, 1926, 'and in case of any of the first-mentioned regulations being so superseded, in part only such regulation shall, until wholly so superseded, continue in force subject to such supersession' is translated as 'agus más go leathrannach amháin a malairteofar amhlaidh aon cheann de sna rialacháin a céad-luaidhtear leanfidh an rialachán san i bhfeidhm fé réir an mhalairtithe leathrannaigh sin go dtí go malairteofar mar sin go hiomlán é'.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'supersede' as (a) 'cuirim (rud, duine eile) in ionad (ruda, duine)' and (b) 'téim in áit (duine); gabhaim ionad (duine)'.

ar dháta an chóip sin Note how 'lá' usually expresses 'date' in this context in the Constitution – see the commentary on Article 12.3.1° – remembering Article 25.5 was added to the text of the Constitution by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941.

mar a bheidh 'As' in this context is often translated simply as 'amhail' in the Acts. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the direct translation below, remarks that 'amhail' would not be understood in this context and recommends 'a bheith amhlaidh' or 'a bheith sa riocht sin'.

curtha isteach ina hiris See the commentary on Article 25.4.5°.

in alt na huaire See the commentary on Articles 10.1 and 12.4.2°.

ina fianaise dhochloíte See the commentary on Article 25.4.5°.

chuige sin See the commentary on Articles 17.1.2°, 23.1.1° and 23.2.2°.

Direct translation

An chóip a shíneofar agus a rollófar amhlaidh, arb í an téacs is deireanaí<sup>1</sup> a ullmhófar amhlaidh í, beidh sí, ar í a rollú mar sin, ina fianaise dhochloíte ar<sup>2</sup> an mBunreacht seo<sup>3</sup> amhail<sup>4</sup> ar dháta an rollaithe sin<sup>5</sup> agus chun na críche sin glacfaidh<sup>6</sup> sí ionad na dtéacsanna uile den Bhunreacht seo a ndearnadh cóipeanna díobh a rollú<sup>7</sup> amhlaidh roimhe sin.

Variants

- 1 'déanaí'
- 2 'maidir leis'
- 3 'i leith an Bhunreachta seo'
- 4 'a bheith amhlaidh', 'a bheith sa riocht sin'
- 5 'Fianaise dhochloíte maidir leis an mBunreacht seo amhail ar dháta an rollaithe sin a bheith sa chóip a dhéanfar a shiniú agus a rollú amhlaidh, arb é, de thuras na huaire, an téacs is deireanaí arna ullmhú amhlaidh í, ar an rollú sin'
- 6 'gabhfaidh'
- 7 'ar rollaíodh cóipeanna díobh'

ARTICLE 25.5.4<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 25.5.4<sup>o</sup>TÉACS GAELIGE

I gcás gan na téacsanna d'aon chóip áirithe den Bhunreacht seo a bheith curtha isteach ina hiris faoin alt seo a bheith de réir a chéile, is ag an téacs Gaeilge a bheith an forlámhas.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In the event that the texts of any particular copy of this Constitution which will be put into its journal under this section are not in accord with one another, it is the Irish text which will have dominance/supremacy.

ENGLISH TEXT

In case of conflict between the texts of any copy of this Constitution enrolled under this section, the text in the national language shall prevail.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 As in the case of the corresponding §4.6<sup>o</sup> of this Article, regarding the texts of a law, 'conflict' is rendered in the Irish text as 'gan ... a bheith de réir a chéile' ('not being in accord with one another'), and 'the text in the national language shall prevail' is expressed as 'is ag an téacs Gaeilge a bheith an forlámhas' ('it is the Irish text which will have dominance/supremacy').
- 2 'In case of conflict between the texts of a law enrolled under this section in both the official languages' is expressed as 'I gcás téacs Gaeilge agus téacs Sacs-Bhéarla de dhlí a chur isteach ina n-iris faoin alt seo agus gan an dá théacs sin a bheith de réir a chéile' in Article 25.4.6<sup>o</sup> as against 'I gcás gan na téacsanna d'aon chóip áirithe den Bhunreacht seo a bheith curtha isteach ina hiris faoin alt seo a bheith de réir a chéile' above, rendering the same English text, with 'any copy of this Constitution' replacing 'a law' of the earlier section and with the addition of 'in both the official languages' in the earlier section.
- 3 'Any copy' is rendered as 'aon chóip áirithe' ('any particular copy') in the Irish text.

- 4 'Enrol' is expressed in the Irish text by the same phrase which expresses both 'enrol for record' and 'enrol' in Article 25.4.5<sup>o</sup>.

Note that Article 25.5 was added to the text by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941.

Commentary

curtha isteach ina hiris The 'h' before 'iris' indicates that this phrase is taken as referring to 'cóip' ('copy') rather than 'téacs' ('text') – see the commentary on Article 25.4.5<sup>o</sup> regarding this phrase, 'rollaigh' translating 'enrol' in Tearmaí Dlí.

an forlámhas See the commentary on Article 25.4.6<sup>o</sup>. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on 'tús áite' in a draft of the direct translation below, remarks that this has not the force of 'an forlámhas' and need not ensure that that text would be yielded to ("níor ghá go ndeimhneodh sé gur dó a ghéillfí").

téacsanna See the commentary on Article 25.4.3<sup>o</sup>.

áirithe See the commentary on Article 23.1.1<sup>o</sup>.

de réir a chéile See the commentary on Article 25.4.6<sup>o</sup>.

Direct translation

I gcás easaontachta idir na téacsanna d'aon chóip den Bhunreacht seo arna rollú faoin alt seo, beidh an forlámhas<sup>1</sup> ag an téacs sa teanga náisiúnta.

Variants

- 1 'tús áite'

ARTICLE 26 AIRTEAGAL 26

TÉACS GAELIGEBillí a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí*

Baineann an tAirteagal seo le gach Bille a ritear nó a mheastar a ritheadh ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais, ach amháin Bille Airgid, nó Bille a luaitear a bheith ina Bhille a bhfuil togra ann chun an Bunreacht a leasú, nó Bille a ndearnadh an tréimhse chun a bhreithnithe ag Seanad Éireann a ghiorrú faoi Airteagal 24 den Bhunreacht seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATIONSubmitting Bills to the Supreme Court for determination*

This Article applies to every Bill which is passed or is deemed to have been passed by the two Houses of the Oireachtas, except a Money Bill, or a Bill which is stated to be a Bill which contains a proposal to amend the Constitution, or a Bill the period for the consideration of which by Seanad Éireann was shortened under Article 24 of this Constitution.

ENGLISH TEXTReference of Bills to the Supreme Court*

This Article applies to any Bill passed or deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas other than a Money Bill, or a Bill expressed to be a Bill containing a proposal to amend the Constitution, or a Bill the time for the consideration of which by Seanad Éireann shall have been abridged under Article 24 of this Constitution.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Any Bill' is expressed as 'gach Bille' ('every Bill') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Reference of Bills' is expressed by the phrase 'Billí a chur faoi bhreith' ('Submitting Bills ... for determination') in the Irish text, 'I refer' being translated as 'tarchuirim' in Tearmaí Dlí.
- 3 'Express' is expressed by 'luaigh', the Irish legal term for 'cite', as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 4 'Consideration' is expressed by 'breithniú', the Irish legal term for 'adjudication', as we have also seen in some earlier Articles.
- 5 'Time' is expressed by 'tréimhse', 'period', in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 6 'Shall have been abridged' is again expressed as 'a ndearnadh ... a ghiorrú' ('was shortened') in the Irish text.
- 7 'Other than' is expressed as 'ach amháin', usually translated as 'except', in the Irish text; note that we find 'seachas' in the parallel Article 27.
- 8 'Applies to' is expressed as 'baineann le' ('relates to' / 'concerns') in the Irish text, this phrase also having the sense of 'applies to', particularly in the early Acts.

Commentary

a chur faoi bhreith 'A chur faoi bhreith an phobail le Reifreann' expresses 'submitted by Referendum to the decision of the people' in Article 46.2. Ó Dónaill translates 'cás a chur faoi bhreith duine' as 'to submit a case to someone for determination'. DIL cites 'an maor do bhí ar gach mbaile / tug Brian fa bhreith a dtoile' ('... placed beneath the authority of its folk') and 'ní nár dhuit dol fár mbreith-ne' ('... to yield to our judgment') from the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards'. See further the commentary on Article 40.4.3°.

'Reference of private member's Bill to Select or Special Committee' is translated as 'Bille comhalta phríobháidigh a chur chun Roghchoiste nó Coiste Speisialta' in the Margin Title of s104 of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997), the section reading as follows:

Should a private member's Bill pass its second reading, it shall be referred to a Select or Special Committee.
Má ritheann Bille comhalta phríobháidigh an dara léamh, cuirfear chun Roghchoiste nó chun Coiste Speisialta é.

The Margin Title of s132, 'Permissible amendment to motion concurring in reference to Joint Committee', is translated as 'Leasú a cheadaítear ar thairiscint chun comhthoilíú leis an mBille a chur faoi bhráid an Chomhchoiste', with '... shall ... be referred to a Standing Joint Committee' being translated as 'déanfar ... é a chur faoi bhráid Buan-Chomhchoiste' in the section itself.

In s5(s) of the Second Schedule to the Building Societies Act, 1989, 'whether disputes between the society and any of its members ... shall be settled by reference to the Circuit Court, arbitration or the Central Bank' is translated as 'cibé acu a dhéanfar díospóidí idir an cumann agus aon chomhalta dá chuid ... a réiteach trina dtarchur chun na Cúirte Cuarda, chun éadrána nó chun an Bhainc Ceannais'. In s23(b)(ii) of the First Schedule to the Bankruptcy Act, 1988, 'the claims either disallowed by him or which he considers should not be admitted without reference to the Court' is translated as 'na héilimh a bheidh díchálithe aige nó ar dóigh leis nach cóir iad a admháil gan iad a tharchur chun na Cúirte', with 'He shall refer disputed debts to the Court for adjudication' being translated as 'Déanfaidh sé fiacha a bheidh faoi dhíospóid a tharchur chun na Cúirte chun a mbreithnithe' in s23(c).

Looking at early Acts, 'Reference of disputes to Court' is translated as 'Díospóidí a tharchur chun na Cúirte' in the Margin Title of s10 of the Dáil Éireann Courts (Winding-Up) Act, 1923, 'Reference of issue of fact to County or District Court' being translated as 'Ceist i dtaobh firinne scéil á chur chun Cúirte Contae no Dúithche'. In s133 of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927, 'The law officer may examine witnesses on oath ... and may make rules regulating references and appeals to the law officer' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an dlí-oifigeach finnéithe do scrúdú fé mhionn ... agus féadfa sé rialacha do dhéanamh chun ceisteanna a curfar fé bhráid an dlí-oifigh agus athchomhairc a déanfar chuige ... do rialáil'. 'Iarratas ar chlárú do chur fé bhráid na Cúirte' translates 'Reference of application for registration to the Court' in the Margin Title of s55 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1934.

Baineann ... le See the commentary on Articles 3 and 14.5.1°.

a luaitear See the commentary on Article 24.1.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2.

chun a bhreithnithe See the commentary on Articles 24.1 and 24.2.

a ghiorrú See commentary on Article 23.1.

Direct translation

Billí a tharchur chun na Cúirte Uachtaraí

Baineann an tAirteagal seo le<sup>1</sup> haon Bhille a rithfear nó a mheasfar a bheith rite ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais seachas Bille Airgid, nó Bille a shonrófar a bheith ina Bhille ina bhfuil togra chun an Bunreacht a leasú, nó Bille a mbeidh an tréimhse ama<sup>2</sup> chun é a bhreithniú<sup>3</sup> ag Seanad Éireann ciorraithe faoi Airteagal 24 den Bhunreacht seo.

Variants

- 1 'Beidh feidhm ag an Airteagal seo maidir le'
- 2 'an t-am', 'an tréimhse'
- 3 'chun a bhreithnithe'

ARTICLE 26.1.1° AIRTEAGAL 26.1.1°

TÉACS GAELGE

Is cead don Uachtarán, tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, aon Bhille lena mbaineann an tAirteagal seo a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí féachaint an bhfuil an Bille sin nó aon fhoráil nó aon fhorálacha áirithe de in aghaidh an Bhunreachta seo nó in aghaidh aon fhorála de.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The President is permitted, after taking counsel with the Council of State, to submit any Bill to which this Article relates to the Supreme Court for determination whether that Bill or any (particular) provisions or provision of it are contrary to this Constitution or contrary to any provision of it.

ENGLISH TEXT

The President may, after consultation with the Council of State, refer any Bill to which this Article applies to the Supreme Court for a decision on the question as to whether such Bill or any specified provision or provisions of such Bill is or are repugnant to this Constitution or to any provision thereof.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Refer any Bill ... to the Supreme Court for a decision as to whether' is expressed in the Irish text as 'aon Bhille ... a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí féachaint an bhfuil' ('submit any Bill ... to the Supreme Court for determination to see whether'), 'decision' being translated as 'breith' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'Specified' is expressed in the Irish text as 'áirithe', usually translated as 'particular'; 'I specify' is translated as 'sonraim' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 3 'Repugnant to' is expressed as 'in aghaidh' ('contrary to', 'against') in the Irish text; this phrase is translated as 'aimhréireach le' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 'May' is expressed as 'Is cead do' ('is permitted') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 5 'Applies' is expressed by 'bain le' ('concerns'/relates to) in the Irish text, this Irish phrase also having the sense of 'applies', particularly in the earlier Acts.

Commentary

in aghaidh This prepositional phrase is translated principally as 'against' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'tá sin in aghaidh an dlí, that is against, an infringement of, the law'. Dinneen translates 'i n-aghaidh' as 'against, before'. DIL cites 'i n-agthib na srotha sain' ('against the current') from the version of the Táin contained in the twelfth-century Book of Leinster, 'agad, aigid' being principally translated as 'face' in DIL, this word not being found in Old Irish Glosses or in the early Irish law-tracts – see the commentary on Article 16.2.2°.

aon fhoráil nó aon fhorálacha Note that this is written as 'aon fhoráileamh nó aon fhoráilt' in the original text. See the commentary on Articles 8.3, 14.4 and 18.4.2° regarding 'foráil'.

faoi bhreith See the commentary on Article 26. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the translation below, sees no advantage in 'a tharchur chun na Cúirte Uachtaraí le haghaidh breithe' over 'a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí' of the original text and recommends merely the addition of 'faoin gceist'.

Is cead do(n) See the commentary on Articles 9.1.3°, 12.4.3° and 12.6.1°.

comhairle a ghlacadh See the commentary on Article 13.2.3°.

lena mbaineann See the commentary on Articles 3 and 14.5.1°.

de See the commentary on Articles 8.3 and 18.3 regarding 'thereof'.

Direct translation

Féadfaidh an tUachtarán, tar éis dul i gcomhairle<sup>1</sup> leis an gComhairle Stáit, aon Bhille lena mbaineann an tAirteagal seo a tharchur chun na Cúirte Uachtaraí le haghaidh breithe ar an gceist<sup>2</sup> an bhfuil an Bille sin nó aon fhoráil shonraithe nó aon fhorálacha sonraithe de<sup>3</sup> aimhréireach leis an mBunreacht seo nó le haon fhoráil de<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'i ndáil chomhairle', 'i gcomhchomhairle'
- 2 'a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoin gceist'
- 3 'den Bhille sin', 'den chéanna'
- 4 'den chéanna', 'den Bhunreacht seo'

ARTICLE 26.1.2° AIRTEAGAL 26.1.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

I ngach cás den sórt sin ní foláir an Bille a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte lá nach déanaí ná an seachtú lá tar éis an dáta a thairgeann an Taoiseach an Bille don Uachtarán chun a lámh a chur leis.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In every case of that kind the Bill must be submitted to the Court for determination (on) a day which is not later than the seventh day after the date on which the Taoiseach offers the Bill to the President to put his hand to it.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every such reference shall be made not later than the seventh day after the date on which such Bill shall have been presented by the Taoiseach to the President for his signature.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Every such reference shall be made' is expressed as 'I ngach cás den sórt sin ní foláir an Bille a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte' ('In every such case the Bill shall be referred to the Court') in the Irish text, 'refer' again being expressed as 'cuir faoi bhreith' ('submit for determination') and 'shall' as 'ní foláir' ('must'), as we have seen on many previous occasions.
- 2 'For his signature' is expressed as 'chun a lámh a chur leis' ('to put his hand to it / to sign it') in the Irish text.

- 3 'Not later than' is again expressed as 'lá nach déanaí ná' ('on a day not later than') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Such Bill' is expressed as 'an Bille' ('the Bill') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Present' is again expressed as 'tairg', 'offer', in the Irish text.

Note that the words 'cheithre'/'four days' and 'passed or deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas' / 'a rithtar an Bille nó a meastar a ritheadh é ag dhá Thigh an Oireachtais' were deleted by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, and the words 'an seachtmhadh'/'the seventh day' and 'presented by the Taoiseach to the President for his signature' / 'a thairgeann an Taoiseach an Bille don Uachtarán chun a lámh a chur leis' were inserted in their place.

Commentary

a thairgeann See the commentary on Articles 12.10.3° and 25.1. Note, regarding 'tíolaic' (which verb generally translates 'present' in the modern Acts), that Ó Dónaill translates that verb as 1 'bestow' – citing 'dá mba ór an duille donn thíolaic Fionn é, if the autumn leaves were gold Fionn would bestow them', and 2 'dedicate' – citing 'thíolaic sí a beatha do Dhia, she dedicated her life to God', with 'maoin a thíolaicadh (do dhuine), to convey property (to someone)' being cited as an illustration of the third and final sense in Ó Dónaill, following the abbreviation for 'Jurisprudence'.

Following the present wording, 'the Taoiseach is, owing to enemy action, unable to present such Bill to the President for his signature' is translated as 'an Taoiseach do bheith ... éagcumasach, de dheascaibh gníomhuithe námhad, ar an mBille sin do thairsint don Uachtarán chun a lámh a chur leis' in s3(1) of the Taxes and Duties (Special Circumstances) Act, 1942. In s16(2) of the Cork City Management Act, 1929, 'The Lord Mayor may at any time direct by writing under his hand that every order made under the foregoing sub-section ... shall be submitted to him for his signature' is translated as 'Féadfidh an Tiarna Méara, aon uair, a ordú le scríbhinn fé n-a lámh go leagfí fé n-a bhráid chun a shighnithe gach ordú a déanfar fén bhfo-alt san roimhe seo'. In s22(2) of the Waterford City Management Act, 1939, 'The Council may at any time by resolution direct that every order ... be submitted to the Mayor ... for his signature' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an Chomhairle tráth ar bith, le rún, a dhírú maidir le gach ordú ... iad do chur fé bhráid an Mhéara ... chun go sighneoidh an Méara ... iad'.

a chur faoi bhreith See the commentary on Article 26. We see here the advantage of the use of the Irish legal term 'tarchuir' over the phrase 'cuir faoi bhreith'. The translation below would have to commence with a phrase such as 'Loirgeofar/larrfar breith na Cúirte Uachtaraí', as Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú states, rather than simply 'Déanfar gach tarchur den sórt sin', were 'cuir faoi bhreith' being retained as expressing 'submit'.

den sórt sin See the commentary on Article 13.7.2°.

a lámh a chur le(is) See the commentary on Article 13.3.1°.

Direct translation

Déanfar gach tarchur den sórt sin tráth nach déanaí ná an seachtú lá tar éis an dáta ar a dtíolaicfaidh an Taoiseach an Bille sin don Uachtarán le síniú<sup>1</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'dá shiniú nó dá síniú', 'lena shiniú nó lena síniú a chur air'

ARTICLE 26.1.3° AIRTEAGAL 26.1.3°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Bille ar bith a chuirtear faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoin Airteagal seo, ní cead don Uachtarán a lámh a chur leis go dtí go dtugann an Chúirt a breith.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any Bill which is submitted to the Supreme Court for determination under this Article, the President is not permitted to put his hand to it until the Court gives its decision.

ENGLISH TEXT

The President shall not sign any Bill the subject of a reference to the Supreme Court under this Article pending the pronouncement of the decision of the Court.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Any Bill the subject of a reference to the Supreme Court' is expressed as 'Bille ar bith a chuirtear faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí' ('any Bill which is referred to the Supreme Court') in the Irish text, with 'refer' again being expressed by the phrase 'cuir faoi bhreith' ('submit for determination').
- 2 'Pending the pronouncement of the decision of the Court' is expressed as 'go dtí go dtugann an Chúirt a breith' ('until the Court gives its decision') in the Irish text; 'I pronounce (judgement)' is translated as 'fógraím' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 3 'Sign' is again expressed as 'a lámh a chur le' ('put his hand to') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Shall not' is expressed as 'ní cead' ('is not permitted') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Commentary

go dtí go Literally 'until'. Note that the adjective 'pending' is translated as 'ar feitheamh' in Téarmaí Dlí. De Bhaldraithe translates the preposition 'pending' as (a) 'pending the discussion, le linn na díospóireachta' and (b) 'pending his return, go dtí go bhfillfidh, bhfillfeadh, sé'.

'The rules of court relating to the winding up of companies shall, pending the making of rules of court for the purposes of this Part, apply' is translated as 'Go dtí go ndéanfar rialacha cúirte chun críocha na Coda seo beidh feidhm ... ag na rialacha cúirte a bhaineann le cuideachtaí a fhoirceannadh' in s52 of the Central Bank Act, 1989. In s17(2) of the Health (Mental Services) Act, 1981, 'Subsection (1) shall not prevent the admission of a person as a temporary arrangement pending his transfer to a designated centre' is translated as 'Ní choisfidh fo-alt (1) duine a ligean isteach mar shocrú sealadach fad a bheifear ag feitheamh lena aistriú go dtí lárionad ainmnithe', with 'go dtí go ndéanfar an t-achomharc' translating 'pending the appeal' in s31(5)(a). In s4 of the Land Act, 1923, 'no higher rate shall be due ... on account of any default or delay in payment of interest upon such mortgage, charge or incumbrance pending the completion of the sale' is translated as 'go dtí go gcríochnófar an díol ní bheidh aon ús is aoirdé ná san dlite ... mar gheall ar aon fhailli ná moill ar an ús d'íoc ar an morgáiste, an muirear no an ualach sin', the Margin Title of that section, 'Prohibition of penal interest on mortgages pending sale', being translated as 'Cosc ar ús pionósach ar mhorgáistí an fhaid a bheidh an díol gan críochnú'.

a chuirtear faoi bhreith See the commentary on Article 26. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the direct translation below, remarks that were 'cuir faoi bhreith' being retained, this would read '... aon Bhille a bheidh curtha faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí'.

ní cead See the commentary on Articles 9.1.3° and 12.6.1°.

a lámh a chur le(is) See the commentary on Article 13.3.1°.

breith Translated as 'decision' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 15.11.1°.

Direct translation

Ní dhéanfaidh an tUachtarán aon Bhille is ábhar do tharchur chun na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoin Airteagal seo a shíniú go dtí go bhfógrófar breith na Cúirte.

ARTICLE 26.2.1° AIRTEAGAL 26.2.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní foláir don Chúirt Uachtarach, cúirt ina mbeidh cúigear breitheamh ar a laghad, gach ceist dá gcuireann an tUachtarán faoina breith faoin Airteagal seo a bhreithniú agus, tar éis éisteacht le hargóintí ón Ard-Aighne nó thar a cheann agus ó abhcóidí a thoghfáir ag an gCúirt, ní foláir di a breith ar an gceist sin a thabhairt sa chúirt go poiblí chomh luath agus is féidir é agus, ar aon chuma, lá nach déanaí ná seasca lá tar éis an cheist a chur faoina breith.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Supreme Court, a court in which there will be at least five judges, must consider every question which the President submits to it for determination under this Article and, after listening to arguments from the Attorney General or on his behalf and from barristers who will be chosen by the Court, it must give its decision on that question publicly in the court as soon as possible and, at any rate, (on) a day not later than sixty days after submitting the question to it for determination.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Supreme Court consisting of not less than five judges shall consider every question referred to it by the President under this Article for a decision, and, having heard arguments by or on behalf of the Attorney General and by counsel assigned by the Court, shall pronounce its decision on such question in open court as soon as may be, and in any case not later than sixty days after the date of such reference.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Assigned by the Court' is expressed as 'a thoghfáir ag an gCúirt' ('chosen by the Court') in the Irish text, 'I assign' being translated as 'sannaim' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'In open court' is expressed as 'sa chúirt go poiblí' ('publicly in the court') in the Irish text, 'hearing in open court' being translated as 'éisteacht i gcúirt oscailte' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'After the date of such reference' is expressed in the Irish text as 'tar éis an cheist a chur faoina breith' ('after submitting the question to it for determination').
- 'Consisting of' is expressed as 'cúirt ina mbeidh' ('a court in which there will be') in the Irish text, preceded by a comma found in that text alone.
- 'Having heard arguments' is expressed as 'tar éis éisteacht le hargóintí' ('after listening to arguments') in the Irish text.
- 'Consider' is again expressed as 'breithniú', 'adjudge', 'breathnú' rather than 'breithniú' being the form in the enrolled edition.
- 'Refer ... for a decision' is again expressed by the phrase which usually simply expresses 'refer' in the Irish text, 'cuir faoi bhreith', this being literally translated here as 'submit for determination'.
- 'Not later than' is again expressed as 'lá nach déanaí ná', '(on) a day not later than', in the Irish text.
- 'Pronounce its decision' is again expressed as 'a breith ... a thabhairt' ('give its decision') in the Irish text, 'fógraím' translating 'I pronounce (judgement)' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'Shall' is twice expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Commentary

abhcóidí 'Abhcóide' is translated as 'barrister; counsel' in Téarmaí Dlí, as 'advocate, counsel' in Ó Dónaill and as 'an advocate, a pleader' in Dinneen. O'Molloy's Lucerna Fidelium ('an tadhbhcoide ... an Sbiorad naomh'), 1676, is the first citation in DIL from the literature of the headword 'abcóit(e)', translated simply there as 'advocate', this being an English or Romance loanword.

'Save that such person shall not be entitled or permitted to be represented by solicitor or counsel at such trial' is translated as 'ach amháin ná beidh teideal ag an duine sin ná ná ceadófar do atúrnae ná abhcóide do bheith aige mar ionadaí sa trial sin' in s17(a) of the Public Safety Act, 1927. In s14(4) of the Courts-Martial Appeals Act, 1983, 'The Supreme Court shall assign counsel to argue in support of the decision' is translated as 'Sannfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach abhcóide chun argóint a dhéanamh i bhfabhar na breithe'.

a thoghfár See the commentary on Article 12.2.1° on the verb 'togh'. Looking at early Acts as regards 'assign', in s2(5)(a) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923, 'the compensation awarded by such decree was assigned, mortgaged or charged before the 1st day of January, 1923' is translated as 'gur dineadh an cúiteamh a moladh leis an aithne sin do shanna no do chur fé mhorgáiste no fé mhuirear roimh an 1adh lá d'Eanáir, 1923'. 'It shall be lawful to assign two or more of the said Departments of State to a single person' is translated as 'Beidh sé dleathach dhá cheann no níos mó de sna Ranna Stáit sin do chur fé éinne amháin' in s3(2) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924.

In s9(4)(a) of the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Act, 1961, 'The President of the High Court or such other Judge of the High Court as may be assigned by him under subsection (2) ... may ...' is translated as 'Féadfaidh Uachtarán na hArd-Chúirte nó cibé Breitheamh eile den Ard-Chúirt a bheidh sannta aige faoi fho-alt (2)'. In s11(6)(c) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'being functions additional to those assigned by this Act' is translated as 'ar feidhmeanna iad i dteannta na bhfeidhmeanna a shanntar leis an Acht seo'.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'a bheidh ceaptha' in the direct translation below, remarking that if a technical term is necessary in the context he would recommend the phrase 'a bheidh sannta' as against 'arna sannadh'.

sa chúirt go poiblí In s4(1)(e) of the Irish Nationality and Citizenship Act, 1986, 'has made, either before a Justice of the District Court in open court ... a declaration' is translated as 'go ndearna sé, os comhair Breithimh den Chúirt Dúiche i gcúirt oscailte ... dearbhú'. 'And shall be deemed ... to have been authorised and required to be made and subscribed by the Chief Justice in open court in the presence of two or more of the ordinary judges of the Supreme Court' is translated as 'agus go dtuigfear ... é bheith údaruithe agus ceangailte an dearbhú san do dhéanamh agus do shighniú, ag an bPríomh-Bhreitheamh sa chúirt go hoscailte i bhfianaise beirte no níos mó de ghnáth-bhreithiúin na Cúirte Uachtaraighe' in s3(1) of the Executive Powers (Consequential Provisions) Act, 1937. 'The finding of acquittal ... shall not require confirmation or be subject to revision and ... shall be pronounced at once in open Court' is translated as 'Ní gá daingniú ná ní déanfar ath-scrúdú ar bhreithiúnas chun saora ... agus ... craolfar é láithreach i gcúirt oscailte' in s100(2) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. Finally, in s10(1)(b) of the Phoenix Park Act, 1925, 'prescribing the times during which the Park ... shall be open to the public' is translated as 'na tráthanna d'ordú go mbeidh an Pháirc ... ar oscailt don phuiblíocht'.

ar aon chuma This phrase is translated as 'at any rate' in Ó Dónaill and 'at any rate, in any case' in Dinneen – see the commentary on Article 15.4.1°, where this phrase expresses 'in any respect'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'in any case' as 'ar aon chaoi, ar aon chuma'.

'To have a report of the results of the examination ... submitted to the occupier ... as soon as may be and in any case not later than twenty-eight days after the completion of the examination' is translated as 'tuarascáil ar thorthaí an scrúdaithe ... a chur á seachadadh don áititheoir ... a luaithe is féidir agus in aon chás tráth nach déanaí ná ocht lá is fiche tar éis an scrúdú ... a chríochnú' in s10(1)(b) of the Safety in Industry Act, 1980. In s76(1) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'as soon as practicable thereafter, and in any case not later than 24 hours thereafter' is translated as 'chó luath agus is féidir é ina dhiaidh sin no, pé scéal é, ar uair nách déanaí ná 24 huair ina dhiaidh sin'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'ar aon chuma' in the direct translation below as being less dialectical than 'ar aon chaoi'.

éisteacht le 'Éisteacht' is the verbal noun of 'éist', translated, with 'le', as 'listen to' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'éisteacht le fuaim, le glór, le torann, to listen to a sound, a voice, a noise'. 'Éist', not followed by 'le', is translated as 'hear' in Ó Dónaill, this also having the sense of 'give formal hearing to', Ó Dónaill citing 'cás a éisteacht, to hear a case' and 'faoinstín a éisteacht, to hear a confession'. 'Éistim' is translated as 'I hear' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Dinneen, who translates 'éist liom' as 'listen to me'. DIL cites 'estid ri haidid cach ir' ('list to the fate of each') from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster, 'éistid' being from the prototonic stem of the compound verb 'in-tuasi', 'listens (to)'. DIL citing 'éitset frisín precept' ('let them listen to the teaching') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. See further the commentary on Article 32.

'Shall be entitled to appear and be heard (in person or by solicitor or council) and adduce evidence at such inquiry' is translated as 'beidh teideal aige chun teacht i láthair agus éisteacht d'fháil (i bpearsain no tré atúrnae no tré abhcóide) agus fianaise do chur ar nochta ag an bhfiosrúchán sin' in s9(2) of the River Owenmore Drainage Act, 1926. 'And may thereupon dismiss the application if satisfied that the allegations in the application have been adequately answered, unless any of the parties demands a hearing' is translated as 'féadfa sé an t-iarratas do chaitheamh amach más deimhin leis leor-fhreagra do bheith tugtha ar na nithe adeirtar san iarratas, mara n-iarraidh éinne de sna páirtithe éisteacht' in s43(10) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. Finally, 'argóint' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'argument' in early Standing Orders.

In s431(1) of the Income Tax Act, 1967, 'When the Special Commissioners have entertained an appeal against an assessment for any year of assessment and, after hearing argument on the appeal' is translated as 'I gcás ina mbeidh aird tugtha ag na Coimisinéirí Speisialta ar achomharc i gcoinne measúnachta d'aon bhliain mheasúnachta agus, tar éis argóint ar an achomharc a éisteacht', with 'tar éis argóna ar an athchomharc san d'éisteacht' translating 'after hearing argument on such appeal' in s9(1) of the Finance Act, 1932. See further the commentary on Article 32.

a thabhairt In s40(2) of the Offences Against the State Act, 1939, 'Every decision of a Special Criminal Court shall be pronounced by such one member of Court as the Court shall determine, and no other member of the Court shall pronounce or indicate his concurrence in or dissent from such decision' is translated as 'Isé chraolfaidh gach breith o Chúirt Choiriúil Speisialta ná an ball áirithe sin den Chúirt a chinnefidh an Chúirt agus ní chraolfaidh aon bhall eile den Chúirt an bhreith sin ná ní chuirfidh in iúl ce'ca aontuionn léi no ná haontuionn'. Following the wording of the present Article, 'The decision of the Board shall be pronounced by the Chairman ... and no other opinion, whether assenting or dissenting, shall be pronounced nor shall the existence of such an opinion be disclosed' is translated as 'Is é an Cathaoirleach ... a chraolfas cinneadh an Bhoird agus ní cead tuairim ar bith eile, ag aontú nó ag easaontú leis an gcinneadh sin, a chraoladh, ná ní cead a nochtadh tuairim den tsórt sin a bheith ann' in s7(4) of the First Schedule to the Adoption Act, 1952.

In s21(5)(b) of the Fire Services Act, 1981, '(until) ... if an appeal is taken and the notice is confirmed ... the date upon which the decision of the Court is pronounced' is translated as 'má dhéantar achomharc a shaothrú agus an fógra a dhaingniú, ... go dtí an dáta a bhfógrófar breith na Cúirte'. 'Non-obligation of Court to pronounce or record forfeiture where forfeiture falls as a statutory consequence of conviction' is translated as 'Gan a bheith d'oibleagáid ar an gCúirt forghéilleadh a fhógairt ná a thairfeadh i gcás forghéilleadh a theacht mar iarmairt reachtúil de dhroim ciontairthe' in the Margin Title of s316 of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act, 1959. See further the commentary on Article 34.4.5°, where 'pronounce a decision' is expressed as 'breith a chraoladh'.

Ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

dá gcuireann ... faoina breith See the commentary on Article 26.

a bhreithniú See the commentary on Articles 17.1.1° and 20.1.

Ard-Aighne See the commentary on Article 30.

a breith 'Breith' is translated as 'decision' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 15.11.1°.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Ní foláir don Chúirt Uachtarach, cúirt ina mbeidh cúigear breitheamh ar a laghad, gach ceist dá gcuireann an tUachtarán faoina breith faoin Airteagal seo a bhreithniú agus, tar éis éisteacht le hargóintí ón Ard-Aighne nó thar ceann an Ard-Aighne agus ó ahbcóidí a thoghfar ag an gCúirt, ní foláir di a breith ar an gceist sin a thabhairt sa chúirt go poiblí chomh luath agus is féidir é agus, ar aon chuma, lá nach déanaí ná seasca lá tar éis an cheist a chur faoina breith.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach, ar a mbeidh cúigear<sup>1</sup> breitheamh ar a laghad, gach ceist a tharchuirfidh an tUachtarán chucu<sup>2</sup> faoin Airteagal seo le haghaidh breithe<sup>3</sup> a bhreithniú<sup>4,5</sup> agus, tar éis dóibh<sup>6</sup> argóintí a éisteacht ón Ard-Aighne nó thar ceann an Ard-Aighne agus ó ahbcóidí arna sannadh<sup>7</sup> ag an gCúirt, fógróidh siad a gcinneadh<sup>8</sup> ar an gceist sin i gcúirt oscailte chomh luath agus is féidir, agus ar aon chuma<sup>9</sup> tráth nach déanaí ná seasca lá tar éis dháta an tarchuir sin.

Variants

- 1 'cúirt ar a mbeidh cúigear', 'agus i comhdhéanta de chúigear'
- 2 'chuici'
- 3 'gach ceist a chuirfidh an tUachtarán faoina mbreith faoin Airteagal seo'

- 4 'a bhreathnú', 'a mheas'
- 5 'Breitheoidh an Chúirt Uachtarach, ar a mbeidh cúigear breitheamh ar a laghad, gach ceist a tharchuirfidh an tUachtarán chucu faoin Airteagal seo le haghaidh breithe.'
- 6 'di'
- 7 'a bheidh samnta'
- 8 'sí a cinneadh'
- 9 'chaoi'

ARTICLE 26.2.2° AIRTEAGAL 26.2.2°

TÉACS GAELIGE

An bhreith a bheireann an tromlach de bhreithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí, sin í breith na Cúirte chun críocha an Airteagail seo agus is é a chraolfas an bhreith sin ná an duine sin de na breithiúna sin a cheapfaidh an Chúirt chuige sin, agus ní cead tuairim ar bith eile, ag aontú nó ag easaontú leis an mbreith sin, a chraoladh ná ní cead a nochtadh tuairim ar bith eile den sórt sin a bheith ann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The judgement which the majority of the judges of the Supreme Court give, that is the judgement of the Court for the purposes of this Article and he who will announce that judgement is that one of those judges whom the Court will appoint to that end, and it is not permitted to announce any other opinion, agreeing or disagreeing with that judgement, nor is it permitted to disclose that there is any other opinion of that kind.

ENGLISH TEXT

The decision of the majority of the judges of the Supreme Court shall, for the purposes of this Article, be the decision of the Court and shall be pronounced by such one of those judges as the Court shall direct, and no other opinion, whether assenting or dissenting, shall be pronounced nor shall the existence of any such other opinion be disclosed.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Pronounce' is rendered by 'craol', 'announce', in the Irish text, 'craol' generally expressing 'broadcast' today; 'I pronounce (judgement)', on the other hand, is translated as 'fógraim' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'And shall be pronounced by such one of those judges as the Court shall direct' is rendered in the Irish text as 'agus is é a chraolfas an bhreith sin ná an duine sin de na breithiúna sin a cheapfaidh an Chúirt chuige sin' ('and he who will announce that judgement is that one of those judges whom the Court will appoint to that end') – 'ceapaim' is translated as 'I appoint' in Téarmaí Dlí, while 'I direct (jury)' is translated as 'teoraim'.
- 3 'The decision of the majority' is expressed as 'An bhreith a bheireann an tromlach' ('The decision that the majority gives') in the Irish text.
- 4 'The decision ... shall be the decision' is expressed as 'An bhreith..., sin í breith na ...' ('The decision ..., that is the decision') in the Irish text.
- 5 'No ... shall' is rendered as 'ní cead' ('it is not permitted') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Note that the final part of this subsection, commencing 'and shall be pronounced' / 'agus isé chraolas', was added to the text by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941. The parallel Article 34.4.5° was added to the Constitution by the same Act.

Commentary

a bheireann This would generally be replaced today by 'a thugann' – see Ó Dónaill s.v. 'breith', where 'breith a thabhairt ar chás, to decide a question' is cited, though 'tabhair, beir, do bhreith air, say what you think of it' is also cited. 'A bheireann' is found in the enrolled edition. 'Beir' basically expresses 'bear, take' as against 'tabhair', 'give', Ó Dónaill giving 'voice, express; present, deliver; impart, administer' as a subset of senses of 'tabhair', citing 'barúil, breith, a thabhairt, to give an opinion, a decision'. 'Tabhair' is a compound of 'do' and 'beir'. 'Bheirim' is generally found for 'do-bheirim', according to Dinneen. DIL cites both 'is ón spirít rouiccus brith' ('it is from the Spirit I have passed judgement') and 'berid cách brith for arele' ('each gives judgement on the other') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses. See the commentary on Article 12.1.

an tromlach de 'Tromlach' is translated as 'greater part, main body, majority' in Ó Dónaill and 'a weight, a burthen, the greater part of anything, the main body as of an army, etc.' in Dinneen, who cites 'tromlach na Féinne agus tromlach Gaillian, the main part of the Fianna and of the Gaillians'. DIL cites 'tromlach mor marclaig' from the Annals of Connacht s.a. 1235, translating 'tromlach' as 'greater part, weight (especially of an army), host, large force', this noun being, as Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú notes, an old compound of 'trom', 'heavy', and 'slóg', 'host, group of people'. See the commentary on Articles 13.3.2°, 14.4 and 28.10.

In s12(2) of the Courts-Martial Appeals Act, 1983, 'and the determination of all questions before the Court shall be according to the majority of the members present but ... the judgement of the Court shall be pronounced by the President of the Court' is translated as 'agus is de réir na tuairime a bheidh ag tromlach na gcomhaltáí i láthair a chinnfear gach uile cheist a bheidh os comhair na Cúirte, ach ... is é Uachtarán na Cúirte ... a fhógróidh breithiúnas na Cúirte'. In s8(4) of the Civil Service (Transferred Officers) Compensation Act, 1929, 'The decision of the Board on any application, claim or question heard and determined by them under this Act shall be in accordance with the opinion of the majority of the members of the Board, but such decision shall be pronounced by the Chairman and no opinion assenting to, dissenting from, or commenting on such decision shall be pronounced by any other member of the Board' is translated as 'Is do réir bharúil an mhóráirimh de bhaill an Bhuird a bheidh breith an Bhuird ar aon iarratas, éileamh no ceist, éistfid agus a shocróid féin Acht so, ach isé an Cathaoirleach fhógróidh an bhreith sin agus ní fhógróidh aon bhall eile den Bhord aon bharúil ag aontú nó ag deifriú leis an mbreith sin ná ag tagairt di'.

ag aontú 'Aontaim' is translated as 'I assent' in Téarmaí Dlí. See the commentary on Articles 15.8.2° and 34.4.5° and see also the commentary on Article 22.2.3°, where 'aontaigh' expresses 'accede'. 'For the signification by him, in the King's name, of the King's assent' is translated as 'chun go gcuirfe sé siúd in iúl, in ainm an Rí, aontú an Rí leis' in Article 41 of the 1922 Constitution, 'either House may hold a private sitting with the assent of two-thirds of the members present' being translated as 'féadfaidh aon Tigh suidhe priobháideach do bheith aige ach dhá dtrian na mball a bheidh láithreach do thoiliú leis' in Article 25. 'Whether as proposer, seconder, or assenting elector' is translated as 'mar thairgtheoir, mar chuiditheoir no mar thoghthóir a thoilíonn' in s3 of Part I of the Fifth Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923.

'And no other opinion, whether assenting or dissenting, shall be pronounced' is translated as 'agus ní craolfar aon tuairim eile, ag aontú nó ag easaontú leis an mbreith sin' in s20(4) of the Industrial Relations Act, 1946. In s6(7) of the Censorship of Publications Act, 1929, 'and either one or two members of the Board has or have not signified any opinion (whether assenting or dissenting) in regard to such proposed report' is translated as 'agus go mbeidh ball amháin no beirt bhall den Bhord gan aon tuairim (ag aontú léi no ina coinnibh) do chur in iúl i dtaobh na tuarasgabhála beartuithe sin'. In s52(3)(a) of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1983, 'the prescribed form of assent to the company's being registered as unlimited' is translated as 'an fhoirm thoilithe fhorordaithe ag toiliú leis an gcuideachta a chlárú mar chuideachta neamhtheoranta'. 'An assent to the vesting of any estate or interest in unregistered land of a deceased person in favour of the person entitled thereto' is translated as 'Aon aontú a dhéanfar le heastát nó leas i dtalamh neamhchláraithe duine éagtha a dhísiú i bhfabhar an duine i dteideal chuiqe' in s53(1) of the Succession Act, 1965.

ag easaontú See the commentary on Article 34.4.5°. 'Breithiúnas easaontach' is translated as 'dissenting judgement' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Provided always that no judge shall sit upon the hearing of an appeal in an action tried before him whether with or without a jury, or upon an appeal from a judgement or order made by him or to which he was a party whether concurring or dissenting' is translated as 'Ach mar sin féin ní shuidhfidh aon bhreitheamh ar éisteacht athchomhairc in aicsean a trialadh ina láthair, pe'ca i dteanta no d'éamais coiste dháréag é, ná ar éisteacht athchomhairc i gcoinnibh breith no ordú a dhin sé féin, no ina raibh sé páirteach pe'ca aontú no easaontú leis a dhin sé' in s24 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. 'Dissenting occupiers' is translated as 'sealbhairí easaontathacha' in s8(1) of the Arterial Drainage Act, 1925.

The Margin Title of s204 of the Companies Act, 1963, 'Power to acquire shares of shareholders dissenting from scheme or contract which has been approved by majority' is translated as 'cumhacht chun scaireanna a fháil ó scairshealbhóirí nár aontaigh le scéim nó conradh lenar aontaigh tromlach'. In s4 of Article 48 of the Second Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1980, 'Any member of the Tribunal may attach his individual opinion to the award, whether he dissents from the majority or not, or a statement of his dissent' is translated as 'Féadfaidh aon chomhalta den Bhinse a thuairim féin, cibé acu atá sé ag easaontú leis an tromlach nó nach bhfuil, nó ráiteas á chur in iúl go bhfuil sé ag easaontú, a chur ag gabháil leis an dámhachtain'.

a nochtadh See the commentary on Article 40.6.1<sup>o</sup>, 'I disclose' being translated as 'nochtaim' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'The following are the requisite matters which must be disclosed for the purposes of subsection (6)' is translated as 'Is iad seo a leanas na nithe riachtanacha nach mór a nochtadh chun críocha fho-alt (6)' in s57(7) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, for example. The Margin Title of s13 of the Statistics Act, 1926, 'Information and returns not to be disclosed', is translated as 'Ní nochtfar eolas ná cuntaisí'. In s5 of the Double Taxation (Relief) Act, 1923, 'The obligation to secrecy ... shall not prevent the disclosure to any authorised officer of the British Government of such facts as may be necessary to enable relief to be duly given' is translated as 'An oblagáid shicréideachta ... ní choiscfe sé eolas do thabhairt d'aon oifigeach údaruithe den Rialtas Briotáineach ar pé dátáin a bheidh riachtanach chun a chumasú go dtabharfar faoiseamh go cuibhe'. Finally, 'fianaise d'innsint' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'to disclose evidence' in translations for the Department of Justice.

a chraolfas The special form of the relative, future tense, of 'craol', this would generally be replaced today by 'a chraolfaidh' – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s'. 'Craol' is translated principally as 'announce, proclaim', Ó Dónaill citing 'rud a chraoladh ón altóir, to announce something from the altar', with secondary sense of 'broadcast', this now being the usual sense of 'craol'. Dinneen translates 'craolaim' as 'I announce; especially from the altar or pulpit'. See the commentary on Article 34.4.5<sup>o</sup>.

an bhreith 'Breith' is translated as 'decision' in Téarmaí Dlí and principally as 'judgement, decision' in Ó Dónaill and as 'judgement, decision, sentence' in Dinneen – see the commentary on Article 15.11.1<sup>o</sup>.

tuairim See the commentary on Articles 22.2.1<sup>o</sup> and 24.1, 'tuairim' being translated as 'opinion' in Téarmaí Dlí.

a cheapfaidh See the commentary on Article 34.4.5<sup>o</sup>.

ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3<sup>o</sup>.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

An bhreith a thugann an tromlach de bhreithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí, sin í breith na Cúirte chun críocha an Airteagail seo agus is é nó is í a chraolfaidh an bhreith sin ná an duine sin de na breithiúna sin a cheapfaidh an Chúirt chuige sin, agus ní cead tuairim ar bith eile, ag aontú nó ag easaontú leis an mbreith sin, a chraoladh ná ní cead a nochtadh tuairim ar bith eile den sórt sin a bheith ann.

Direct translation

Is í breith thromlach bhreithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí<sup>1</sup>, chun críocha an Airteagail seo,<sup>2</sup> breith na Cúirte agus déanfar í a fhógairt ag cibé duine de na breithiúna sin a threoróidh an Chúirt, agus ní fhógrófar aon tuairim eile, cibé acu ag aontú nó ag easaontú,<sup>3</sup> ná ní nochtfar a leithéid de thuairim a bheith ann.

Variants

- 1 'breith thromlach na mbreithiúna den Chúirt Uachtarach', 'breith thromlach na mbreithiúna de chuid na Cúirte Uachtaraí'
- 2 'Chun críocha an Airteagail seo, is í breith thromlach bhreithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí.'
- 3 'ní dhéanfar aon tuairim eile, cibé acu ag aontú nó ag easaontú, a fhógairt.'

ARTICLE 26.3.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 26.3.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELIGE

I gcás aon Bhille a chuirtear faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoin Airteagal seo, más é breith na Cúirte go bhfuil aon fhoráil de in aghaidh an Bhunreachta seo nó in aghaidh aon fhorála de, ní foláir don Uachtarán diúltú dá lámh a chur leis an mBille sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In the case of any Bill which is submitted to the Supreme Court for determination under this Article, if it is the judgement of the Court that any provision of it is contrary to this Constitution or contrary to any provision of it, the President must decline to put his hand to that Bill.

ENGLISH TEXT

In every case in which the Supreme Court decides that any provision of a Bill the subject of a reference to the Supreme Court under this Article is repugnant to this Constitution or to any provision thereof, the President shall decline to sign such Bill.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'In every case in which the Supreme Court decides that any provision of a Bill the subject of a reference to the Supreme Court under this Article is' is expressed in the Irish text as 'I gcás aon Bhille a chuirtear faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoin Airteagal seo, más é breith na Cúirte go bhfuil aon fhoráil de' ('In the case of any Bill which is referred to the Supreme Court under this Article, if it is the decision of the Court that any provision of it is'), with 'reference to the Supreme Court' being expressed as 'a chuirtear faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí' ('submitted to the Supreme Court for determination'), as we have already seen.
- 2 'Is repugnant to' is again expressed simply as 'in aghaidh' ('is contrary to') in the Irish text; 'aimhréireach (le)' translates 'repugnant (to)' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 3 'To sign' is again expressed as 'a lámh a chur le' ('to put his hand to') in the Irish text, that phrase, of course, having the sense of 'to sign', 'I sign' being translated simply as 'sínim' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Commentary

breith See the commentary on Article 15.11.1<sup>o</sup>. 'I decide' is translated as 'breithním' in Téarmaí Dlí, but we find 'cinn' also translating 'decide' in the modern Acts. 'Whenever the Central Bank decides to refuse to register a memorandum' is translated as 'Aon uair a chinneadh an Banc Ceannais diúltú meabhrán ... a chlárú' in s10(4) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'In case a court decides ... to impose a sentence of imprisonment under section 27' is translated as 'Má chinneann cúirt ... pianbhreith phríosúnachta a fhorchur faoi alt 27' in s28(9) of the Misuse of Drugs Act, 1977.

Looking at early Acts, in s62(3) of the Local Government Act, 1925, 'and on such appeal the Minister or the High Court decides the charge or surcharge was lawfully made' is translated as 'agus, ar dhéanamh an athchomhairc sin, gurb í breith an Aire no na hArd-Chúirte gur go dleathach a dineadh an muirearú no an formhuirearú san'. In Article 56 of the 1922 Constitution, 'these Ministers or any of them may, should the Oireachtas so decide, be members of ... such Councils' is translated as 'go bhféadfaidh na hAí seo no aon duine aca, má chinneann an t-Oireachtas amhlaidh, bheith 'na mbaill de sna Comhairlí sin'. In s25(3) of the National Health Insurance Act, 1923, 'Every question or dispute as to whether a person is or is not a soldier ... shall be decided by the Minister for Defence whose decision shall be final' is translated as 'Gach ceist no conspóid i dtaobh ce'ca tá duine ina shaighdiúir no ná fuil ... reiteoidh an t-Aire Cosanta iad agus ní bheidh dul thar a bhreith'. 'Socrú' is also cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'decision'.

diúltú dá lámh a chur leis 'Diúltú' is the verbal noun of 'diúltaigh'. 'Diúltaigh do', is translated by Ó Dónaill as (a) 'renounce, repudiate', (b) 'refuse, reject', citing 'diúltú do bhia is do bheatha, to reject food and sustenance' and (c) 'decline, shirk', citing 'diúltú do throid, do chuideachta, to shun fight, company'. 'Diúltaigh', not followed by the preposition 'do', is translated as 'deny, refuse', Ó Dónaill translating 'diúltú rud a dhéanamh' as 'to refuse to do something', citing 'dhiúltaigh sé an cíos a íoc, he refused to pay the rent'. Dinneen also translates 'diúltuighim do' as 'I renounce', translating 'diúltuighim' as 'I deny, refuse, oppose'. See the commentary on Article 13.2.2°, where 'diúltaigh do' expresses 'refuse', and on Article 34.5.4° where 'diúltaigh' (without following 'do') expresses 'decline'.

De Bhaldráithe translates 'decline' as (a) 'cuirim suas do (chuireadh, ghradam)' and (b) 'eitím, diúltaim (duine)', translating 'to decline to do something' as 'diúltú rud a dhéanamh'. Ó Dónaill translates 'eitigh' simply as 'refuse', citing 'duine a eiteach faoi rud, to refuse something to someone'.

'The Minister ... may ... either approve of or decline to approve of the scheme by order' is translated as 'féadfaidh an tAire ... an scéim a cheadú, nó diúltú don scéim a cheadú, le hordú' in s33(1)(c) of the Central Bank Act, 1971. In s19 of the Statistics Act, 1926, 'that would entitle him to decline to give such information in a civil proceeding in a Court of Law' is translated as 'a thabharfadh teideal do chun diúltú don eolas san do thabhairt uaidh in imeacht shíbhialta i gCúirt Dí'.

in aghaidh aon fhorála de See the commentary on Article 26.1.1° regarding 'in aghaidh'; note that the form of this phrase in the original text is 'i n-aghaidh aon fhoráilte de'.

a chuirtear faoi bhreith See the commentary on Article 26.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

lámh a chur le See the commentary on Article 13.3.1°.

Direct translation

I ngach cás a gcinneadh<sup>1</sup> an Chúirt Uachtarach go bhfuil aon fhoráil de Bille is ábhar do tharchur chun<sup>2</sup> na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoin Airteagal seo aimhréireach leis an mBunreacht seo nó le haon fhoráil de<sup>3</sup>, diúltóidh an tUachtarán don Bille sin á shíniú.

Variants

- 1 'ina mbreithneoidh'
- 2 'a cuireadh faoi bhreith'
- 2 'den Bhunreacht seo'

ARTICLE 26.3.2° AIRTEAGAL 26.3.2°

TÉACS GAELGE

I gcás achainí a bheith curtha chun an Uachtaraí faoi Airteagal 27 den Bhunreacht seo i dtaobh Bille lena mbaineann an tAirteagal sin, ní foláir an tAirteagal sin a chomhlíonadh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In the event of a request having been sent to the President under Article 27 of this Constitution with regard to a Bill to which that Article applies, that Article must be fulfilled.

ENGLISH TEXT

If, in the case of a Bill to which Article 27 of this Constitution applies, a petition has been addressed to the President under that Article, that Article shall be complied with.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'If, in the case of a Bill to which Article 27 of this Constitution applies, a petition has been addressed to the President under that Article' is rendered in the Irish text as 'I gcás achainí a bheith curtha chun an Uachtaraí faoi Airteagal 27 den Bhunreacht seo i dtaobh Bille lena mbaineann an tAirteagal sin' ('If a petition has been addressed to the President under Article 27 of this Constitution with regard to a Bill to which that Article applies'), 'addressed to' being rendered as 'curtha chun', 'sent to', and 'applies to' being rendered as 'lena mbaineann' ('relates to' / 'concerns'), this phrase also having the sense of 'applies'; the term rendering 'petition', 'achainí', is the Irish legal term for 'petition' but expresses 'request' in some earlier sections.
- 2 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that this subsection was added to the text by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941.

Commentary

a chur chun Verbal noun of 'cuir chun', this phrase being translated principally as 'put, send, to' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'litir a chur chuig, chun, duine, to send a letter to someone'. Dinneen translates 'cuirim chugham' as 'I appropriate, put in my breast, pocket', citing 'cuirim siopa chugham, I open a shop'. Note that 'seol' expresses 'send' in some earlier Articles. See the commentary on Article 23.1.

a chomhlíonadh Verbal noun of 'comhlíon', 'comhlíonaim' being translated as 'I comply with; I conform with; I perform' in Téarmaí Dlí. See the commentary on Articles 12.1, 13.9 and 14.5.1°.

achainí This is the Irish legal term for 'petition'. See the commentary on Articles 22.2.3° and 25.2.2° where this noun expresses 'request'.

lena mbaineann See the commentary on Articles 3 and 14.5.1°.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

Direct translation

Más rud é, i gcás Bille lena mbaineann Airteagal 27 den Bhunreacht seo<sup>1</sup>, go ndíreofar<sup>2</sup> achainí chun an Uachtaráin<sup>3</sup> faoin Airteagal sin, déanfar an tAirteagal sin a chomhlíonadh.

Variants

- 1 'a bhfuil feidhm ag Airteagal 27 den Bhunreacht seo ina leith'
- 2 'go ndírítear', 'go gcuirfear', 'go mbeidh achainí curtha/seolta/dírithé'
- 3 'chuig an Uachtarán'

ARTICLE 26.3.3° AIRTEAGAL 26.3.3°

TÉACS GAEILGE

I ngach cás eile ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur leis an mBille chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis an lae a bheireann an Chúirt Uachtarach a breith.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In every other case the President must put his hand to the Bill as soon as possible after the day the Supreme Court gives its judgement.

ENGLISH TEXT

In every other case the President shall sign the Bill as soon as may be after the date on which the decision of the Supreme Court shall have been pronounced.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'After the date on which the decision of the Supreme Court shall have been pronounced' is expressed in the Irish text as 'tar éis an lae a bheireann an Chúirt Uachtarach a breith' ('after the day the Supreme Court gives its decision'); 'I pronounce (judgement)' is translated as 'fógraím' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'La', 'day', again expresses 'date', with 'after the date' expressed as 'tar éis an lae' ('after the day') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Sign' is again expressed as 'a lámh a chur le' ('put his hand to') in the Irish text.

- 4 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Commentary

a bheireann This would generally be replaced by 'a thugann' today – see the commentary on subsection 2 of the previous section.

breith Translated as 'decision' in Téarmaí Dlí. See the commentary on Articles 15.11.1° and 26.3.1°.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

a lámh a chur le See the commentary on Article 13.3.1°.

Standardised Irish text

I ngach cás eile ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur leis an mBille chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis an lae a thugann an Chúirt Uachtarach a breith.

Direct translation

I ngach cás eile déanfaidh an tUachtarán an Bille a shíniú a luaithe is féidir tar éis an dáta ar a bhfógrófar breith na Cúirte Uachtaraí.

ARTICLE 27 AIRTEAGAL 27

TÉACS GAEILGE

Billí a chur faoi bhreith an Phobail

Baineann an tAirteagal seo le gach Bille, seachas Bille a luaitear a bheith ina Bhille a bhfuil togra ann chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú, a mheastar, de bhua Airteagal 23 den Bhunreacht seo, a ritheadh ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Submitting Bills to the People for determination

This Article applies to every Bill, other than a Bill which is stated/mentioned as being a Bill in which there is a proposal to amend this Constitution, which is deemed, by virtue of Article 23 of this Constitution, to have been passed by the two Houses of the Oireachtas.

ENGLISH TEXT

Reference of Bills to the People

This Article applies to any Bill, other than a Bill expressed to be a Bill containing a proposal for the amendment of this Constitution, which shall have been deemed, by virtue of Article 23 hereof, to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Reference' is again expressed as 'a chur faoi bhreith' ('submitting for determination') in the Irish text, as in the foregoing Article.
- 2 'Any Bill' is expressed as 'gach Bille', 'every Bill', in the Irish text, as in Article 26.

- 3 'Express' is again expressed by 'luaigh', the Irish legal term for 'cite'.
- 4 'Hereof' is expressed as 'den Bhunreacht seo', 'of this Constitution', in the Irish text.

Commentary

de bhua This phrase is translated as 'by virtue of' in Téarmaí Dlí, Ó Dónaill citing 'de bhua (ruda), by virtue of (something)'. Archaic Irish 'boid' glosses Latin '(ad) bravium' in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, 'victory, triumph' being the principal sense of Old Irish 'búaid', with the secondary sense of 'special quality or attribute, gift, virtue' according to DIL, where 'búaid precepte' ('the gift of preaching') is cited from the same collection of Glosses.

'Or is to be treated as permanently discontinued by virtue of section 59 or 71 of the Income Tax Act, 1967', for example, in s26(1)(b) of the Finance Act, 1990, is translated as 'nó ina measfar i a bheith buanscortha de bhua alt 59 nó 71 den Acht Cánach Ioncaim, 1967'. In the Preamble to the Adaptation of Enactments Act, 1922, 'And whereas all Acts passed by the British Parliament ... will by virtue of the said Article 73 have the force of law in Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'Agus de bhri go mbeidh feidhm dlí i Saorstát Éireann de bhua an Airtioigail 73 roimh-ráite ag na hAchtanna uile do rith Párlimint na Breataine'. See further the commentary on Article 49.1 where 'de bhua an Bhunreachta' expresses 'by virtue of the Constitution'.

a chur faoi bhreith See the commentary on Article 26. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'a chur faoi bhreith' is much clearer than 'a tharchur chun' in the direct translation below.

den Bhunreacht seo See the commentary on Article 35.1 regarding 'hereof'.

Baineann ... le See the commentary on Articles 3 and 14.5.1°.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2.

Direct translation

Billí a tharchur chun' an Phobail

Baineann an tAirteagal seo le haon Bhille, seachas Bille a shonrófar a bheith ina Bhille ina bhfuil togra chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú, a mheasfar, de bhua Airteagal 23 den Bhunreacht seo<sup>2</sup>, a bheith rite ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais.

Variants

- 1 'Billí a chur faoi bhreith'
- 2 'de seo'

ARTICLE 27.1 AIRTEAGAL 27.1

TÉACS GAELIGE

Is cead do thromlach de chomhaltaí Sheanad Éireann, i bhfochair trian ar a laghad de chomhaltaí Dháil Éireann, comhachainí a chur chun an Uachtaráin faoin Airteagal seo, á iarraidh air diúltú dá lámh a chur le haon Bhille lena mbaineann an tAirteagal seo agus don Bhille sin a fhógairt ina dhlí, toisc togra a bheith ann ina bhfuil an oiread sin tábhacht náisiúnta gur chóir breith an phobail a fháil air.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

A majority of the members of Seanad Éireann, along with at least a third of the members of Dáil Éireann, are permitted to send a joint-appeal to the President under this Article, asking him to decline to put his hand to any Bill to which this Article applies and (to decline) to promulgate that Bill as law, because of its having a proposal in which there is so much national importance that the judgement of the people on it should be obtained.

ENGLISH TEXT

A majority of the members of Seanad Éireann and not less than one-third of the members of Dáil Éireann may by a joint petition addressed to the President by them under this Article request the President to decline to sign and promulgate as a law any Bill to which this Article applies on the ground that the Bill contains a proposal of such national importance that the will of the people thereon ought to be ascertained.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The will of the people' is expressed as 'breith an phobail' ('the decision/judgement of the people') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Ascertain' is expressed as 'fáil', 'obtain', 'get', in the Irish text, referring to 'breith an phobail' ('the judgement of the people').
- 3 'May by a joint petition addressed to the President by them under this Article request' is expressed in the Irish text as 'comhachainí a chur chun an Uachtaráin faoin Airteagal seo, á iarraidh air', '(may) send a joint petition to the President under this Article, asking him'.
- 4 'And not less than one-third' is expressed as 'i bhfochair trian' ('along with at least a third') in the Irish text, that clause being preceded by a comma in the Irish text alone.
- 5 'Request the President to decline to sign and promulgate as a law any Bill to which this Article applies' is expressed as 'á iarraidh air diúltú dá lámh a chur le haon Bhille lena mbaineann an tAirteagal seo agus don Bhille sin a fhógairt ina dhlí' ('asking him to decline to sign any Bill to which this Article applies and (to decline) to promulgate that Bill as a law') in the Irish text, a comma preceding the above in the Irish text alone, with 'a fhógairt ina dhlí' ('promulgate as a law') being capable of being read as 'pronounce it a law' in the Irish text, as we have seen earlier.
- 6 'On the ground that the Bill contains' is expressed simply as 'toisc ... a bheith ann' ('because it contains' / 'on account of it containing') in the Irish text, 'on ground of' being translated as 'ar fhoras' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 7 'Sign' is again expressed as 'a lámh a chur le' ('put his hand to') in the Irish text and 'applies' by 'baineann le', 'relates to'/'concerns' – in the current Stationery Office text, 'article', in the phrase 'to which this article applies', has a lower-case 'a' as against capital A both

- in the original text and in the other references to 'Article' in the section and capital A in the Irish text.
- 8 'May' is expressed as 'Is cead do' ('It is permitted to ...' / 'are permitted to') in the Irish text.

Commentary

comhachainí A compound of 'comh-', translated principally as 'mutual, joint, common; co-' in Ó Dónaill, and 'achainí', translated as 'petition' in Téarmaí Dlí, but earlier in the Constitution expressing 'request'. This compound does not appear to be given as a headword in Ó Dónaill or in Dinneen. See the commentary on Article 26.3.2° regarding 'achainí'. Note that Article 47 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

Such a Bill shall in accordance with regulations to be made by the Oireachtas be submitted by Referendum to the decision of the people if demanded before the expiration of the ninety days either by a resolution of Seanad Éireann assented to by three-fifths of the members of Seanad Éireann, or by a petition signed by not less than one-twentieth of the voters then on the register of voters .... Déanfar Bille den tsórt san do chur, do réir rialacha a dhéanfaidh an t-Oireachtas, fé bhreith na ndaoine le Referendum, má iarrtar san do dhéanamh fé cheann deich lá is cheithre fichid pe'ca le rún de Sheanad Éireann le n-a n-aontóidh trí chúigiú de bhaill Sheanad Éireann, no le hachuiní a shíghneoidh an fichiú cuid ar a luighead de sna vótáluithe a bheidh an uair sin ar chlár na vótáluithe.

i bhfochair trian One would expect 'trian' here, the genitive after the compound preposition. The prepositional phrase 'i bhfochair' is translated as 'along with, together with' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'bheith i bhfochair duine, to be along with, in the company of, someone', 'fochair' being translated as 'nearness, proximity'. Dinneen translates 'i bhfochair' as 'with, along with, together with, in presence of, as compared with', this phrase being followed by the genitive. DIL cites 'biasu im fochairsi i Pardus indiu' from the Leabhar Breac (written c. 1400), this being found as 'gu mbiá tú am fochair a niú a bpáthras' in the seventeenth-century translation of Luke xxiii. 43, and as 'beidh tú in éineacht liom inniu i bparthas' (i.e. you will be with me today in Paradise) in the current 'Maynooth' Bible.

In s50(4) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, 'A widow shall be disqualified for receiving a pension under this section if and so long as she and any person are cohabiting as man and wife' is translated as 'Beidh baintreach dícháilithe chun pinsean a fháil faoin alt seo má bhíonn sí féin, agus fad a bheidh sí féin, agus aon duine ag maireachtáil i bhfochair a chéile mar lánúin phósta'.

Turning to 'trian', Ó Dónaill cites 'trian de rud, a third part of something' along with 'bhí trian foirne againn, we had one-third of the staff we needed'. DIL cites 'co triun int slóig' (i.e. with a third of the host) from the Táin and 'batir díbergaig trá trian fer Érenn' (i.e. one third of the men of Ireland were outlaws then) from the old Irish tale, Togail Bruidne Da Derga.

In s4 of Part II of the Second Schedule to the Railways Act, 1924, 'one-third of the total number of directors ... shall be deemed to have been elected' is translated as 'tuigfar trian líon iomlán na stiúrthóirí ... do bheith tofa'. In s1(1) of the European Communities (Amendment) Act, 1973, 'if ... at least one-third of the members of Dáil Éireann by notice in writing to the Ceann Comhairle require Dáil Éireann to be summoned' is translated as 'más rud é ... go n-iarrfaidh trian ar a laghad de chomhaltaí Dháil Éireann, trí fhógra i scríbhinn don Cheann Comhairle, go gcomórfaí Dáil Éireann'. In s13(6) of the Nurses Act, 1985, 'and at least one-third of the members of that committee shall be persons other than persons who have been appointed by election to the Board' is translated as 'agus is daoine seachas daoine a ceapadh trína dtoghadh chun an Bhoird a bheidh in aon trian ar a laghad de chomhaltaí an Choiste sin'.

breith an phobail 'Billí a chur faoi bhreith an Phobail' expresses 'Reference of Bills to the People' in the heading of this Article. 'Breith' is translated as 'decision' in Téarmaí Dlí, as 'judgement, decision' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'tabhair, beir, do bhreith air, say what you think of it', and as 'judgement, decision, sentence' in Dinneen, citing 'a bhreith féin, his own estimate or judgement'. See the commentary on Articles 15.11.1° and 26.3.1°. On the other hand, 'toil' is translated basically as 'will, inclination, desire, wish' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'toil Dé a dhéanamh, to do the will of God'. De Bhaldraithe cites 'such is our will and pleasure, sin é is toil and is mian linn'.

Following the wording of the present Article, in s10(1)(a) of the Referendum Act, 1942, 'Whenever ... the President informs the Taoiseach in accordance with Article 27 of the Constitution that he has decided that a bill to which that Article applies contains a proposal of such national importance that the will of the people thereon ought to be ascertained' is translated as 'Aon uair ... a chuirfidh an tUachtarán in iúl don Taoiseach de réir Airteagail 27 den Bhunreacht gurb é a bhreith go bhfuil i mbillé lena mbaineann an tAirteagal san togra ina bhfuil an oiread sin tábhacht náisiúnta gur cóir breith an phobail d'fháil air'. In s16(3), however, 'provided such paper is so marked as to indicate with reasonable certainty the will of the voter' is translated as 'má bhíonn an páipéar san marcálta i slí a thaisbéanfaidh go réasúnta cinnte cadé toil an vótáilidhe'.

In s27(2) of the Rent Restrictions Act, 1960, 'Every district court valuer shall hold office at the will of the Minister and may be removed from office by the Minister' is translated as 'Beidh gach luachálaí cúirte dúiche i seilbh oifige an fad is toil leis an Aire agus féadfaidh an tAire é a chur as oifig'. In s2 of the First Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1954, 'The arbitral procedure, including the constitution of the arbitral tribunal, shall be governed by the will of the parties and by the law of the country in whose territory the arbitration takes place' is translated as 'Is do réir mar thóileas na páirtithe, agus do réir dlí na tíre arb ina críoch a déanfar an eadráin, a bheas an nós imeachta i gcás eadrána, lena n-áirítear comhdhéanamh an bhinse eadrána'. In s59(3) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'to carry against the will of such person any greater weight than that he is required by the said provisions to carry' is translated as 'aon mheáchain d'iompar d'ainneoin an duine sin os cionn na meáchaine is ghá dho a iompar do réir na bhforálacha san', with 'or took place against the will of such owner' being translated as 'no gur i gcoinnibh toil an únaera san a dineadh é' in s2(2) of the Public Safety (Punishment of Offences) Temporary Act, 1924.

a fháil Verbal noun of ‘faigh’, ‘get’, also with the sense of ‘find’. De Bhaldraithe translates ‘ascertain’ as ‘fionnaim, faighim amach, cinntím (firinne an scéil)’.

‘And in case the member of the Garda Síochána decides that he is unable to ascertain such person’ is translated as ‘agus i gcás go gcinntídh an comhalta den Gharda Síochána nach féidir leis an duine sin a fhionnadh’ in s14(2)(b) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1988, ‘The functions of the Official Assignee are to get in and realise the property, to ascertain the debts and liabilities’ is translated as ‘Is iad feidhmeanna an tSannaí Oifigiúil an mhaoin a ghlacadh isteach agus a réadú, na fiacha agus na dliteanais a chinneadh’ in s61(2). In s18(1)(c) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, ‘keep under surveillance and from time to time to ascertain by any means the quality of water in a fishery’ is translated as ‘faireachas a dhéanamh ar cháilíocht an uisce in iascach agus an cháilíocht sin a chinntiú ó am go ham ar aon dóigh áirithe’. ‘The applicant has taken all reasonable steps to ascertain the identity or whereabouts of such person’ is translated as ‘go ndearna an t-iarratasóir gach beart réasúnach chun a fháil amach cé hé an duine sin nó cá bhfuil sé’, with ‘after taking steps to ascertain the views of the employer and workman’ being translated as ‘tar éis do beart do dhéanamh chun tuairimí an fhostóra agus an oibrí do dhéanamh amach’ in s62(1) of the Workmen’s Compensation Act, 1934. Finally, in s5(2) of the Finance Act, 1924, ‘the Revenue Commissioners shall be entitled to call for such evidence as they may deem necessary to enable them to ascertain the correctness of such particulars’ is translated as ‘beidh teideal ag na Coimisinéirí Ioncuim chun glaoch ar pé fianaise is dó leo is gá chun a chur ar a gcumas a fháil amach a bhfuil na mion-innste sin fíor’.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the draft translation below, remarks that ‘fionnadh’ is not regularly found today and ‘fáil’ is equally as clear in the context.

an oiread sin tábhacht náisiúnta One would expect ‘tábhacht’ to be in the genitive case following ‘oiread’, Ó Dónaill citing ‘bhí a oiread deifre orainn leis an obair, we were in such a hurry with the work’.

In s61 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924, ‘that their decision involves a question of law or fact of such importance as to be fit to be the subject of an appeal to the Supreme Court’ is translated as ‘go bhfuil fighte ina mbreith ceist dlí no firinne atá táchtach a dóthain chun bheith ina habhar athchomhairc chun na Cúirte Uachtaráí’. In the Schedule to the Road Traffic Act, 1968, ‘or by the use of portable signs of such size, form and colour and having such significance as may be prescribed’ is translated as ‘nó trí shíneacha iniompair a úsáid de cibé méid, foirm agus dath a bheidh forordaithe agus lena mbeidh cibé brí a bheidh forordaithe’. In the Table in s20 of the Safety in Industry Act, 1980, ‘In every factory in which ... there is given off any dust ... of such a character and to such an extent as to be likely to be injurious ... to the person employed ... on the premises’ is translated as ‘I ngach monarcha ina mbeidh á chur amach ... an oiread sin agus an saghas sin deannaigh ... gur dócha go ndéanfaidh sé díobháil do na daoine a fostaítear ... san áitreabh’.

a chur chun See the commentary on Article 26.3.2°. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks on a draft of the direct translation below that ‘díriú’ is too sharp (“ró-ghrod”) for the context involved and recommends ‘chun’ as not needing any verb.

toisc Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends ‘ar an mbonn’ rather than the more usual phrase in the Acts, ‘ar an bhforas’, as being more generally intelligible.

ar a laghad Note that the phrase ‘ar a laighead’ is both preceded and followed by a comma in the original text.

gur chóir Note that ‘gur cóir’ is the form of this phrase in the original text.

do thromlach See the commentary on Articles 13.2.2° and 14.4 regarding ‘tromlach’.

lámh a chur le See the commentary on Article 13.3.1°.

lena mbaineann See the commentary on Articles 3 and 14.5.1°.

a fhógairt ina dhlí See the commentary on Articles 13.3.2° and 25.1.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2.

breith See the commentary on Article 15.11.1°.

diúltú dá See the commentary on Article 26.3.1°.

Is cead do See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Is cead do thromlach de chomhaltaí Sheanad Éireann, i bhfochair trian<sup>1</sup> ar a laghad de chomhaltaí Dháil Éireann, comhachainí a chur chun an Uachtaráin faoin Airteagal seo, á iarraidh air nó uirthi diúltú dá lámh a chur le haon Bhille lena mbaineann an tAirteagal seo agus don Bhille sin a fhógairt ina dhlí, toisc togra a bheith ann ina bhfuil an oiread sin tábhachta náisiúnta gur chóir breith an phobail a fháil air.

Variant

- 1 ‘trian’

Direct translation

Féadfaidh tromlach de<sup>1</sup> chomhaltaí Sheanad Éireann agus trian de<sup>2</sup> chomhaltaí Dháil Éireann, le comhachainí chun an Uachtaráin<sup>3</sup> faoin Airteagal seo, a iarraidh ar an Uachtarán gan aon Bhille lena mbaineann an tAirteagal seo a shíniú agus a fhógairt ina dhlí ar an bhforas<sup>4</sup> go bhfuil togra sa Bhille a bhfuil a oiread tábhachta náisiúnta ag gabháil leis<sup>5</sup> gur chóir toil an phobail air a fhionnadh<sup>6</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘an tromlach de’, ‘tromlach’
- 2 ‘trian’
- 3 ‘arna díriú acu ar an Uachtarán’, ‘arna seoladh/cur acu chuig an Uachtarán’
- 4 ‘ar an mbonn’
- 5 ‘atá chomh tábhachtach sin go náisiúnta / ó thaobh an náisiúin de’
- 5 ‘a fháil air’

ARTICLE 27.2 AIRTEAGAL 27.2

TÉACS GAELGE

Ní foláir gach achainí den sórt sin a bheith i scríbhinn agus í a bheith faoi láimh an lucht achainí agus ní foláir a sinithe sin a bheith fíoraithe ar an modh a ordáitear le dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every petition/appeal of that kind must be in writing and under the hand of the petitioners and their signatures must be verified in the manner ordered by law.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every such petition shall be in writing and shall be signed by the petitioners whose signatures shall be verified in the manner prescribed by law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 While 'the petitioners' is perfectly rendered in the Irish text, 'lucht achainí' literally translates as 'the people of the petition'; 'petitioner' is translated simply as 'achainíoch' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'Signed' is rendered as 'faoi láimh', 'under the hand of', which has the sense of 'sign'; 'I sign' is translated as 'sinim' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 3 'Whose signatures' is rendered as 'agus ... a sinithe sin' ('and their signatures') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Prescribe' is rendered by 'ordaigh', 'order', in the Irish text.
- 5 'Shall' is twice rendered as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that this section was added to the text by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941. The original Article 27.2 commenced as follows:

Every such petition shall be in writing signed by the petitioners .... Ní foláir gach athchuinghe den tsórt sin do bheith i scríbhinn fá láimh an lucht athchuinghe.

Commentary

a ordáitear 'Ordáim' is translated as 'I order' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 25.4.2°. De Bhaldraithe translates 'I prescribe' as 'leagam amach', translating 'prescribed task' as 'obair ordaithe; obair cheaptha' and 'in the prescribed time' as 'san am atá ceaptha'. See further the commentary on Article 34.1. 'Prescribe' is expressed as 'leag amach' in Article 15.9.1°.

In s9(2) of the Land Act, 1923, 'The purchase annuity shall be paid until the whole of the advance in respect of which it is payable is ascertained in manner prescribed by the Minister for Finance to have been repaid' is translated as 'Íocfar an bhlianacht cheannaigh go dtí go mbeidh déanta amach ar an gcuma a ordóidh an tAire Airgid go bhfuil aisíoc déanta in iomlán an roimh-ioca 'na raibh sé iníoctha mar gheall air'. In Article 27 of the 1922 Constitution, 'Each University ... shall be entitled to elect three representatives to Dáil Éireann upon a franchise and in a manner to be prescribed by law' is translated as 'Beidh de cheart ag gach Príomh-sgoil ... trí teachtaí do thogha do Dháil Éireann ar reacht-shaoirse agus ar nós a socrófar le dlí', with 'he shall record such refusal in the prescribed manner' being translated as 'breacfa sé síos an diúltú san ar an slí ordaithe' in s7(5) of the Censorship of Films Act, 1923. Finally, in s6(3) of the Finance Act, 1923,

'and proceedings for the recovery thereof may be taken in any manner prescribed by the Income Tax Act, 1918' is translated as 'ach chun an céanna d'fháil uaidh féadfar imeachta do bhunú ar aon tslí dá bhfuil leagtha amach san Acht Cánach Ioncuim, 1918'.

In the Table to s4 of the Finance Act, 1990, 'an individual who, in the manner prescribed by the Income Tax Acts, makes a claim in that behalf' is translated as 'aon phearsa aonair a dhéanfaidh, sa tslí a fhorordaítear leis na hAchtanna Cánach Ioncaim, éileamh chuige sin', this sentence being translated as 'Aon aonair a dhéanfaidh, sa tslí a fhorordaítear leis na hAchtanna Cánach Ioncaim, éileamh chuige sin' in s2(1) of the Finance Act, 1970, and as 'Aon phearsa a dhéanfas, sa tslí a hordaítear leis na hAchtanna Cánach Ioncaim, éileamh dá lorg sin' in s4(1)(c) of the Finance Act, 1951. See further the commentary on Article 34.4.3°.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú questions whether 'for-ordaigh' has any advantage over 'ordaigh' in the direct translation below. As a continuing situation is involved, apparently, rather than a series of actions, Professor Ó Murchú recommends translating 'in the manner prescribed by law' as 'sa tslí atá ordaithe le dlí'.

i scríbhinn 'Conradh i scríbhinn' is translated as 'contract in writing' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Scribend', which comes from Latin 'scribendum', is translated principally as 'act of writing' in DIL, citing 'oenlitre dodénom díb hi scribunt' ('that single letters should be made of them in writing') from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian. See the commentary on Article 15.10.

an lucht achainí 'Lucht' is translated as '(class, category, of) people' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'lucht oibre, ceirde, workpeople, tradespeople', 'lucht' in this sense not being inflected in the genitive singular. See the commentary on Article 12.10.6° ('lucht tagartha') regarding 'lucht' and see the commentary on Article 26.3.2° regarding 'achainí'.

fíoraithe Past participle of 'fíoraigh', 'fíoraím' being translated as 'I verify' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 25.5.2°, where 'fíoraithe' expresses 'authenticated'.

Ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

faoi láimh See the commentary on Article 12.10.3°.

ar an modh See the commentary on Article 18.6.

a sinithe sin See the commentary on Articles 6.2, 8.3 and 12.4.3° regarding 'sin'.

Direct translation

Beidh gach achainí den sórt sin i scríbhinn agus sinithe<sup>1</sup> ag na hachainígh a bhfíorófar a sinithe sa tslí a fhorordaítear<sup>2</sup> le dlí.

Variants

<sup>1</sup> 'arna síniú'

<sup>2</sup> 'sa tslí atá ordaithe le dlí'

ARTICLE 27.3 AIRTEAGAL 27.3

TÉACS GAELGE

Ní foláir léirthuirisc a bheith i ngach achainí den sórt sin ar an ábhar nó ar na hábhair áirithe ar a bhfuil sí bunaithe, agus í a thairiscint don Uachtarán lá nach déanaí ná ceithre lá tar éis an dáta a meastar a ritheadh an Bille ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

There must be a clear account in every petition of that kind of the particular matter or matters on which it is based, and (it must) be offered to the President on a day not later than four days after the date on which the Bill is deemed to have been passed by the two Houses of the Oireachtas.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every such petition shall contain a statement of the particular ground or grounds on which the request is based, and shall be presented to the President not later than four days after the date on which the Bill shall have been deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Ground' is expressed in the Irish text by 'ábhar', the Irish legal term for 'matter', with the Irish expression of 'the particular ground or grounds' ('ar an ábhar nó ar na hábhair áirithe') capable of interpretation as 'on the ground or particular grounds'; 'ground (of application, etc)' is translated as 'foras' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'ground of appeal' translated as 'foras achomhairc'.
- 2 'Request' is expressed as 'achainí', 'petition', in the Irish text, or more specifically by the pronoun 'sí' referring back to 'achainí'.
- 3 'Statement of' is expressed as 'léirthuirisc' ('clear account of') in the Irish text; 'statement' is translated simply as 'ráiteas' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 'Present' is again expressed by 'tairg', the Irish legal term for 'offer'.
- 5 'Not later than' is again expressed as 'lá nach déanaí ná' ('on a day not later than') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that the words 'shall be in writing signed by the petitioners' / 'gach athchuinghe den tsórt sin do bheith i scríbhinn fá láimh an lucht athchuinghe, agus léarthuirisc do bheith innti' were deleted from this section (originally s2) by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, and the words 'léarthuirisc do bheith i ngach athchuinghe den tsórt sin' were inserted in place of the deleted Irish words.

Commentary

léirthuirisc A compound of 'léir' agus 'tuairisc'; neither Ó Dónaill nor Dinneen appears to include this as a headword. Dinneen translates 'léir-, léar-', in compounds, as (1) 'all, full, complete'; (2) 'clear, distinct'; (3) 'diligent', citing 'léar-scrúdaim, I closely examine' and 'léar- smuaineadh, deep consideration or thought', translating 'tuairisc' as 'information, account, description, report, notification ...'. 'Tuairisc' is translated as 'report' (i.e. of a case) in Téarmaí Dlí and principally as 'information, tidings; account of whereabouts' in Ó Dónaill, with 'account, report, statement' as a secondary sense, citing 'tuairisc a thabhairt ar rud, to give an account of something' and 'tuairisc garda, garda report'. The adjective 'léir' is translated as 'clear, lucid; distinct, explicit' in Ó Dónaill. In Old Irish 'léir' had the sense of 'assiduous, earnest, careful, zealous', later having the sense of 'visible, perceptible'. DIL cites 'léir' compounded with 'túarascbáil' ('account, description') from Leabhar Breac ('lertuarascbail na cined-sin do faisnes'), compiled in 1411 or earlier. One theory regarding the origin of 'túairisc' is that it is a back-formation from 'túarascbáil', 'túairisc' being found only in Modern Irish, according to DIL, where this headword is translated as 'account, description, information, tidings', citing 'a bhfuairis d'ulc ag troid fá iath do shean / do thuirisc shuthain tug mar Bhrianach beacht' ('all that you endured fighting for your ancestral land gave lasting witness of you that you were a genuine scion of the O'Briens') from the poetry of Pádraigín Haicéad (c. 1600-1654).

'Any ground of refusal mentioned in the written statement of grounds of refusal and no other ground may be advanced in opposition to the appeal' is translated as 'féadfar aon scór chun diúltuithe luaidhtear sa ráiteas scríbhte i dtaobh scóranna chun diúltuithe agus ní féadfar aon scór eile do chur i gcoinnibh an athchomhairc' in s13(5)(c) of the Betting Act, 1931. In s31(10) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, 'it shall include in any document or advertisement issued to the public ... a statement of the charges or the basis for the charges in respect of the services' is translated as 'cuirfidh sé ráiteas faoin muirir, nó faoin mbonn atá leis na muirir, i leith na seirbhísí, ar áireamh in aon doiciméad nó fógrán a eiseofar don phobal'. 'A statement of the charges against him', in s6(1)(a) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1967, is translated as 'ráiteas ar na cúisimh ina choinne', 'a concise statement of the charges, defences, and counter-charges in support of which evidence was given' being translated as 'cuntas comair ar na cúisithe, ar na cosanta, agus ar na frith-chúisithe gur tugadh fianaise chun neartuithe leo' in s14(2)(c) of the Censorship of Publications Act, 1929. 'In the case of an application under subsection (2) ... the application shall contain a statement of the reasons why it is so made' is translated as 'I gcás iarratas faoi fho-alt (2) ... beidh ráiteas san iarratas maidir leis na fáthanna a bhfuil an t-iarratas á dhéanamh', 'A recommendation for reception shall ... contain a statement of the facts upon which the registered medical practitioner has formed his opinion' being translated as 'Maidir le moladh glactha ... déarf ar ann cad iad na fíoraí ar a bhfuil tuairim an liachleachtóra bunaithe' in s19(5). In s39(2) of the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923, 'to deliver a statement of the particulars required to be contained in the return' is translated as 'ráiteas do sheachada ar na mion-innste is gá a bheith sa chuntas'.

Looking at other early translations of 'statement', in s4 of the Indemnity (British Military) Act, 1923, 'A statement in writing signed by any Secretary of State of the British Government certifying any of the matters mentioned in this section' is translated as 'Aon fhaisnéis i scríbhinn a bheidh sígnithe ag aon Rúnaí Stáit de Rialtas na Breataine agus ag deimhniú éinní de sna nithe a luaidhtear san alt so'. 'That the statement of means lodged by the debtor is false' is translated as 'an cuntas acuinne a lóisteáil an féicheamh do bheith bréagach' in s20(2) of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1924. Finally, 'where a felling notice contains a statement that a tree is being cut down or uprooted for a specified purpose' is translated as 'Má abartar i bhfógra leagtha crainn go bhfuil crann á ghearra anuas no á réaba as a phréamhacha chun criche áirithe' in s6(1) of the Forestry Act, 1928.

ábhar This headword is translated as 'matter; subject matter (i.e. of contract)' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 10.1. See the commentary on Article 18.4.2° regarding 'foras', 'ground'. 'Where the ground or one of the grounds on which the petition is based is that corrupt practices prevailed extensively' is translated as 'másé is foras no is ceann d'fhorais na hachuinge ná gur tharla cleachtanna cuirpthe go fairsing' in s36(g) of the Referendum Act, 1942. In s54(2) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1934, 'Any objection based on any of the foregoing grounds is in this Part of this Act referred to as a statutory ground of objection' is translated as 'Gairmtear scór agóide reachtuil sa Chuid seo den Acht so d'agóid ar bith a bheidh bunuithé ar aon scór acu san roimhe seo', 'send a statement in writing to the Executive Council of his objection and of the specific grounds on which it is based' being translated as 'ráiteas i scríbhinn do chur chun na hArd-Chomhairle i dtaobh a agóide agus i dtaobh na bhforas áirithe ar a bhfuil sí bunuithé' in s17(5)(b) of the Control of Manufacturers Act, 1934. In s22(7) of the Derelict Sites Act, 1990, 'An appeal to the Tribunal shall contain a statement of the specific grounds for the appeal' is translated as 'Beidh, in achomharc chun an Bhinse, ráiteas i dtaobh na bhforas sonracha a bheidh leis an achomharc'. See also the commentary on the previous section.

Looking at early translations, 'or shall have reasonable grounds for believing that there were some such goods, animals or chattels therein' is translated as 'no go raibh cúis réasúnta aige chun a chreidiúint go raibh earraí, ainmhithe no maoin éigin den tsórt san ann' in s10 of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1923. In s164(3) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'Where a person claims his discharge on the ground that he has not been attested or re-engaged' is translated as 'Má éilíonn duine a scur ar an scór nár teistíodh no nár hath-fhostuío dh é'. The current term, 'foras', is found in s5 of the Dáil Éireann Courts (Winding Up) Act, 1923, Amendment Act, 1924, where 'after special leave to appeal has been granted by the Commissioners on a motion on notice stating the grounds of appeal' is translated as 'marar dhin na Coimisinéirí cead speisialta chun athchomhairc do dheona do bharr tairisginte gur tugadh fógra ina thaobh agus inar luadhach foraisí an athchomhairc'.

a thairiscint Verbal noun of 'tairg', 'tairgim' being translated as 'I offer' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Articles 12.10.3°, 25.1 and 26.1.2°.

Ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

achainí See the commentary on Article 26.3.2°.

den sórt sin See the commentary on Article 13.7.2°.

Direct translation

Beidh ráiteas i ngach achainí den sórt sin maidir leis an bhforas áirithe nó na forais áirithe ar a mbeidh an iarraidh bunaithe, agus déanfar í a thíolacadh don Uachtarán tráth nach déanaí ná ceithre lá tar éis an dáta a mheasfar an Bille a bheith rite ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais.

ARTICLE 27.4.1° AIRTEAGAL 27.4.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Chomh luath agus a gheibheann an tUachtarán achainí faoin Airteagal seo ní foláir dó í a bhreithniú agus, tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, a bhreith a thabhairt uirthi lá nach déanaí ná deich lá tar éis an lae a meastar a ritheadh, ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais, an Bille sin lena mbaineann an achainí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

As soon as the President gets a petition under this Article he must consider it and, after taking counsel with the Council of State, give his judgement on it (on) a day not later than ten days after the day that that Bill to which the petition relates/applies is deemed to have been passed, by the two Houses of the Oireachtas.

ENGLISH TEXT

Upon receipt of a petition addressed to him under this Article, the President shall forthwith consider such petition and shall, after consultation with the Council of State, pronounce his decision thereon not later than ten days after the date on which the Bill to which such petition relates shall have been deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Upon receipt of a petition addressed to him under this Article, the President shall forthwith ...' is expressed in the Irish text as 'Chomh luath agus a gheibheann an tUachtarán achainí faoin Airteagal seo ní foláir dó' ('As soon as the President gets a petition under this Article he must ...'); note that 'glacaim' translates 'I receive' in Téarmaí Dlí – where, however, 'money had and received to the use of another' is translated as 'airgead a fuarthas chun úsáide duine eile'.
- 'Consultation' is expressed as 'comhairle a ghlacadh' ('taking counsel') in the Irish text; 'comhchomhairle' translates 'consultation' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'Pronounce' is again expressed as 'a thabhairt' ('give') in the Irish text, 'I pronounce (judgement)' being translated as 'fógraim' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'Not later than' is again expressed as 'lá nach déanaí ná', '(on) a day not later than', in the Irish text.
- 'Consider' is again expressed by the Irish legal term for 'adjudge', 'adjudicate', 'decide' – 'breithnigh', however, also translating 'consider' in the Acts.
- 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Commentary

Chomh luath agus a gheibheann Literally, 'as soon as ... gets'. 'A gheibheann' is a variant form of the present tense of 'faigh' and would generally be replaced today by 'a fhaigheann'. In s11(1) of the Fourth Schedule to the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'and upon receipt of such application such board may ... fix such licence duty' is translated as 'agus ar an iarratas sin a fháil, féadfaidh an bord sin ... an dleacht cheadúnais sin a shocrú'. In s7(2) of the Finance Act, 1923, 'Immediately upon receipt of any such certificate as is mentioned' is translated as 'Láithreach tar éis aon deimhniú d'fháil den tsórt a luaidhtear'. See the commentary on Articles 27.1 and 46.5, 'ar mbeith' expressing 'upon' in the latter Article.

achainí See the commentary on Article 26.3.2°.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

a bhreithniú See the commentary on Articles 17.1.1° and 20.1.

comhairle a ghlacadh See the commentary on Article 13.2.3°.

a bhreith See the commentary on Articles 15.11.1° and 26.3.1°.

lena mbaineann See the commentary on Article 14.5.1°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Chomh luath agus a fhaigheann an tUachtarán achainí faoin Airteagal seo ní foláir dó nó di í a bhreithniú agus, tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, a bhreith nó a breith a thabhairt uirthi lá nach déanaí ná deich lá tar éis an lae a meastar a ritheadh, ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais, an Bille sin lena mbaineann an achainí.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ar achainí a chuirfeadh<sup>1</sup> chuige nó chuici faoin Airteagal seo a fháil, déanfaidh an tUachtarán an achainí sin a bhreithniú<sup>2</sup> láithreach agus, déanfaidh sé nó sí, tar éis dul i gcomhairle<sup>3</sup> leis an gComhairle Stáit, a bhreith nó a breith ar an achainí<sup>4</sup> a fhógairt tráth nach déanaí ná deich lá tar éis an dáta a mheasfar an Bille lena mbainfidh an achainí sin a bheith rite ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais.

Variants

- 1 'a bheidh dírithe'
- 2 'a bhreathnú', 'a mheas'
- 3 'i gcomhchomhairle', 'i ndáil chomhairle'
- 4 'ar an gcéanna', 'uirthi'

ARTICLE 27.4.2° AIRTEAGAL 27.4.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

I gcás an Bille nó aon fhoráil de a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoi Airteagal 26 den Bhunreacht seo ní bheidh ar an Uachtarán an achainí a bhreithniú mura ndéana ná go dtí go ndéanfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach, de dhroim an churtha faoi bhreith sin, breith a chraoladh á dhearbhu gan an Bille sin nó an fhoráil sin de a bheith in aghaidh an Bhunreacht seo ná in aghaidh aon fhorála de agus, i gcás an Chúirt Uachtarach do chraoladh breithe á dhearbhu sin, ní bheidh ar an Uachtarán a bhreith ar an achainí a chraoladh go ceann sé lá tar éis an lae a chraolfar breith na Cúirte Uachtaraí ag dearbhú mar a dúradh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In the case of the Bill or of any provision of it being referred to the Supreme Court for determination under Article 26 of this Constitution the President will not have to consider the petition if the Supreme Court, in consequence of that submission for determination, does not announce or until the Supreme Court does announce a judgement declaring that that Bill or that provision of it is not contrary to this Constitution nor contrary to any provision of it and, in the case of the Supreme Court's announcing a judgement affirming that, the President will not have to announce his judgement on the petition for six days after the day the judgement of the Supreme Court will be announced affirming as stated.

ENGLISH TEXT

If the Bill or any provision thereof is or has been referred to the Supreme Court under Article 26 of this Constitution, it shall not be obligatory on the President to consider the petition unless or until the Supreme Court has pronounced a decision on such reference to the effect that the said Bill or the said provision thereof is not repugnant to this Constitution or to any provision thereof, and, if a decision to that effect is pronounced by the Supreme Court, it shall not be obligatory on the President to pronounce his decision on the petition before the expiration of six days after the day on which the decision of the Supreme Court to the effect aforesaid is pronounced.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Pronounce' is again rendered by 'craol', 'announce', in the Irish text, with 'until the Supreme Court has pronounced a decision on such reference' being rendered as 'go dtí go ndéanfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach, de dhroim an churtha faoi bhreith sin, breith a chraoladh' ('until the Supreme Court, on account of / arising out of that referral, announce a decision').
- 2 'It shall not be obligatory on the President' is twice rendered in the Irish text as 'ní bheidh ar an Uachtarán' ('the President will not have to'), the English clause alone being preceded by a comma.
- 3 'A decision ... to the effect that the said Bill ... is not repugnant to this Constitution' is rendered in the Irish text as 'breith ... á dhearbhu gan an Bille sin ... a bheith in aghaidh an Bhunreacht' ('a decision ... declaring that Bill ... not to be contrary to this Constitution'), with 'repugnant to' again being rendered simply as 'in aghaidh', and 'if a decision to that effect is pronounced by the Supreme Court' being rendered as 'i gcás an Chúirt Uachtarach do chraoladh breithe á dhearbhu sin' ('in the case of the Supreme Court's announcing / where the Supreme Court announces a decision declaring that'), with 'to the effect aforesaid' being expressed as 'ag dearbhú mar a dúradh', 'declaring as said'.

- 4 'If the Bill ... is or has been referred' is rendered as 'I gcás an Bille ... a chur faoi bhreith' ('In the case of the Bill being referred') in the Irish text, with 'refer to the Supreme Court' being again rendered by 'cuir faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí' ('submit to the Supreme Court for determination').
- 5 'Unless or until' is rendered as 'mura ... ná go dtí go', 'unless nor until', in the Irish text and 'or to any provision' as 'ná in aghaidh aon fhorála', 'nor to/against any provision'.
- 6 'Before the expiration of six days' is rendered as 'go ceann sé lá' ('for six days') in the Irish text.
- 7 'Consider' is again rendered by 'breithnigh', the Irish legal term for 'adjudge', 'adjudicate', 'decide'.

Note that Article 27.4.2<sup>o</sup> was added to the text of the Constitution by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941.

Commentary

de dhroim 'Tionóisc a tharla de dhroim agus i gcúrsa na fostaíochta' is translated in Téarmaí Dlí as 'accident arising out of and in the course of the employment'. Ó Dónaill cites 'de dhroim a ndearna sé, because of what he did' and 'dá dhroim sin, on that account'. Dinneen cites 'de dhroim an chunntais, because of the account' and DIL cites 'do druim a doire' ('on account of her wrath') from the metrical Dindshenchas ('topography') contained in the twelfth-century Book of Leinster. 'Druim(m)', 'back', is cited in DIL from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms.

'Shall be entitled also to appear and be heard at the hearing of an appeal against a decision on such application' is translated as 'beidh teideal freisin aige láithriú agus éisteacht a fháil tráth a bheidh achomharc in aghaidh breithe ar an iarratas sin á éisteacht' in s17(4) of the Malicious Injuries Act, 1981. 'And a decision on such application is not given until after the expiration of the registration' is translated as 'agus ná tabharfar breith ar an iarratas san go dtí tar éis dul in éag don chlárú' in s116(3) of the Mental Treatment Act, 1945.

mura This conjunction, translated as 'if not, unless' in Ó Dónaill, is used with the present subjunctive or future indicative to express future condition; Ó Dónaill cites 'mura mbaine, mbainfidh, taisme dó, unless he meets with an accident' and 'mura n-ími, n-imeoidh, tú gan mhoill, if you don't leave soon'. Dinneen translates 'muna' as 'unless, if not'. 'Mani' and 'mina' are cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles as forms of the conjunction 'má (ma)', 'if', with negative – 'mani-d-chreidid esséirge Crist ... nib-noibfea for n-ires' ('unless ye believe the resurrection of Christ ... your faith will not sanctify you') being among the examples cited from that collection of Glosses.

Looking at early translations of 'unless', we find the phrase 'fé bhun' in s1 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 2) Act, 1927, where 'The member of Dáil Éireann who is the Chairman of Dáil Éireann immediately before a dissolution of the Oireachtas shall, unless before such dissolution he announces to Dáil Éireann that he does not desire to continue to be a member thereof ... be deemed without any actual election ...' is translated as 'An ball san de Dháil Éireann is Ceann Comhairle ar Dháil Éireann díreach roimh an Oireachtas do scur tuigfar, gan aon togha achtúil do dhéanamh, agus fé bhun é a chraola do Dháil Éireann roimh an scur san n-ach mian leis leanúint de bheith ina bhall de Dháil Éireann'.

Looking at modern Acts regarding the phrase 'unless or until', in s20(2)(b) of the Fire Services Act, 1981, 'prohibit the use of the building ... unless or until specified precautions are taken' is translated as 'a thoirmeasc an foirgneamh ... a úsáid ... mura ndéanfar nó go dtí go ndéanfar réamhchúraimí sonraithe'. 'Unless or until the contrary is proved' is translated as 'mura gcruthaítear agus go dtí go gcruthaítear a mhalairt' in s20(5) of the Finance Act, 1960. Finally, in s4 of the Licensing (Renewal of Licences) Act, 1923, 'Provided always that this Act shall not apply to any such licence as aforesaid unless or until all excise duties ... have been ... duly paid' is translated as 'Ar choiníoll i gcomhnaí ná bainfidh an tAcht so le haon cheadúnas den tsórt san roimhráite marar híocadh go cuibhe ná go dtí go n-íocfar go cuibhe ... gach diúite máil'.

go ceann 'For the duration of' is one of the senses of this phrase in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'fan go ceann seachtaine, wait for a week', 'go ceann' also being translated as (1) 'to the top of' and (2) 'to the end of'. Dinneen translates 'ceann', preceded by the preposition 'go', as 'for (of time), till the end of'. DIL cites 'co cenn bliadnae' ('for a year') from 'Fiacc's Hymn' in the Liber Hymnorum, composed c. AD 800, translating 'co cenn' with noun indicating periods of time as 'till the end of, for the duration of'.

'If demanded before the expiration of ninety days' is translated as 'má iarrtar san do dhéanamh fé cheann deich lá is cheithre fichid' in Article 47 of the 1922 Constitution. In s16(6)(c) of the Packaged Goods (Quantity Control) Act, 1980, 'If a Peace Commissioner is satisfied that for any reason a direction given by him under this section should have effect before the expiration of seven days from the date of its making' is translated as 'Más deimhin le Feidhmeannach Síochána gur chóir ar chúis ar bith go mbeadh éifeacht le hordachán a thug sé faoin alt seo sula mbeadh seacht lá caite ó dháta a dhéanta'. In s37(5) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1976, 'Any person may, before the expiration of twenty-one days next following the period stated ... appeal' is translated as 'Féadfaidh aon duine, sula mbeidh an lá is fiche díreach i ndiaidh na tréimhse a luafar ... caite, achomharc a dhéanamh'.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú favours 'go ceann' over 'sula mbeidh ... caite' as being clearer and more concise.

ní bheidh ar an Uachtarán One of the senses of the preposition 'ar' with the substantive verb relates to 'duties, obligations, rights, responsibilities', Ó Dónaill citing 'tá orm labhairt leis, I must speak to him'. Dinneen cites 'bheadh sé air é dhéanamh, he would have to do it'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'obligatory' as 'éigeantach', translating 'to make it obligatory (up)on someone to do something' as 'a chur d'iallach, de cheangal, ar dhuine rud a dhéanamh' and 'it is obligatory on us' as 'tá sé dlite againn; dlítear dinn'.

Looking at early Acts, 'Nothing in this Act shall render it obligatory for the Land Commission to acquire untenanted land which is intermingled with woodland' is translated as 'Ní bheidh sé d'obligáid ar Choimisiún na Talmhan de bharr éinní san Acht so talamh nea-thionóntuithe do thógaint más talamh fé choill cuid de' in s24(7) of the Land Act, 1923. 'It shall not be obligatory upon any Under-Sheriff to employ any bailiff to assist him' is translated as 'ní bheidh ceangailte ar aon Fho-Shirriamh aon bháille d'fhostú chun cabhrúithe leis' in s2(1) of the Enforcement of Laws (Occasional Powers) Act, 1923. Finally, 'It shall not be obligatory for the names of candidates at a Seanad election to be printed on the ballot papers in one continuous column' is translated as 'Ní bheidh sé riachtanach ainmneacha na n-iarrthóirí i dtoghachán Seanad do chlóbhuála ar na páipéirí ballóide in aon cholún leanúnach amháin' in s3 of the Electoral (Seanad Elections) Act, 1925.

Looking at modern Acts, 'provided that it shall not be obligatory under this subsection to hold a fresh election if an Assembly election otherwise is due to be held in the State' is translated as 'ach ní bheidh sé d'oibleagáid faoin bhfo-alt seo toghchán úr a dhéanamh má dhlítear, ar dhóigh eile, toghchán Tionóil a dhéanamh sa Stát' in s17(7) of the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, with 'save that it shall not be obligatory on the Commissioners to acquire any land' being translated as 'ach ní bheidh d'oibleagáid ar na Coimisinéirí aon talamh ... a ghlacadh chucu' in s13(1) of the Coast Protection Act, 1963.

ag dearbhú mar a dúradh Literally, 'declaring as was said'. 'Dearbhú' is the verbal noun of 'dearbhaigh', which verb is translated as 'declare, affirm; assure; attest, prove' in Ó Dónaill, 'dearbhaím' being translated as 'I declare' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 12.10.7°. See the commentaries on Articles 16.2.4° and 25.2.2° respectively regarding 'effect' and 'aforesaid' in early Acts. 'Effect', in the present sense, is translated as 'brí, éirim (scéil)' in De Bhaldraithe, who translates 'I received a telegram to the same effect' as 'fuair mé féin sreangscéal ina raibh a leithéid chéanna de scéal' and 'that is what he said or words to that effect' as 'murab é sin é a dúirt sé, sin é éirim a chuid cainte'.

'The Registrar under that Act shall ... make an entry opposite the entry of the mortgage to the effect that the mortgage is satisfied' is translated as 'déanfaidh an Cláráitheoir faoin Acht sin ... iontráil a chur isteach os coinne iontráil an mhorgáiste á rá go bhfuil an morgáiste sáraithe' in s27(4) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s49(9) of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1983, "unqualified report" in relation to any accounts of a company, means a report, without qualification, to the effect that in the opinion of the person making the report the accounts have been properly prepared' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "tuarascáil gan agús" i ndáil le haon chuntais de chuid cuideachta, tuarascáil, gan agús, á rá go bhfuil na cuntais ullmhaithe go cúí dar leis an duine atá ag tabhairt na tuarascála'. In s14(1) of the Trade Marks Act, 1963, 'Where, by a contract in writing ... a purchaser or owner of goods enters into an obligation to the effect that he will not do ... an act' is translated as 'I gcás ina rachaidh ceannaitheoir nó úinéir earraí, trí chonradh i scríbhinn ... faoi oibleagáid arb éifeacht di nach ndéanfaidh sé ... gníomh', while in s256(1) of the Companies Act, 1963, 'the majority of the directors may ... make a statutory declaration to the effect that they have made a full inquiry into the affairs of the company' is translated as 'féadfaidh stiúthóirí na cuideachta ... dearbhú reachtúil a dhéanamh á rá go ndearna siad fiosrúchán iomlán faoi chúrsaí na cuideachta'. Finally, 'every provision in this section to the effect that a rate of wages ... is to remain unchanged' is translated as 'gach foráil san alt so, gurb é a ciall go bhfanfaidh ráta páigh ... gan atharú' in s51(3) of the Conditions of Employment Act, 1936.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on 'arb éifeacht di' in the direct translation below, favours 'á dhearbhu' and recommends 'á dhearbhu sin' over 'arb in is éifeacht di'.

a chraoladh 'Craoladh' is the verbal noun of 'craol', translated principally as 'announce, proclaim' in Ó Dónaill, with the secondary sense of 'broadcast' – see the commentary on Article 34.4.5°.

mura ndéana The present subjunctive of 'déan', this would generally be expressed today by the future tense (i.e. 'mura ndéanfaidh') – see the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

den Bhunreacht seo Note that a comma follows this phrase in the original text.

a chur faoi bhreith See the commentary on Article 26. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the direct translation below, recommends 'cuir' rather than 'tarchuir' as being more intelligible.

achainí See the commentary on Article 26.3.2°.

a bhreithniú See the commentary on Articles 17.1.1° and 20.1.

Standardised Irish text

I gcás an Bille nó aon fhoráil de a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoi Airteagal 26 den Bhunreacht seo ní bheidh ar an Uachtarán an achainí a bhreithniú mura ndéanfaidh ná go dtí go ndéanfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach, de dhroim an churtha faoi bhreith sin, breith a chraoladh á dhearbhu gan an Bille sin nó an fhoráil sin de a bheith in aghaidh an Bhunreacht seo ná in aghaidh aon fhorála de agus, i gcás an Chúirt Uachtarach a chraoladh breithe á dhearbhu sin, ní bheidh ar an Uachtarán a bhreith nó a breith ar an achainí a chraoladh go ceann sé lá tar éis an lae a chraolfar breith na Cúirte Uachtaraí ag dearbhú mar a dúradh.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Má tharchuirtear nó má tarchuireadh an Bille nó aon fhoráil de<sup>1</sup> chun na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoi Airteagal 26 den Bhunreacht seo, ní bheidh d'oibleagáid ar an Uachtarán an achainí a bhreithniú<sup>2</sup> mura bhfógróidh nó go dtí go bhfógróidh an Chúirt Uachtarach breith ar an tarchur sin arb éifeacht di<sup>3</sup> an Bille sin nó an fhoráil sin den Bhille gan a bheith aimhréireach leis an mBunreacht seo nó le haon fhoráil de<sup>4</sup>, agus, má fhógraíonn an Chúirt Uachtarach breith arb in is éifeacht di<sup>5</sup>, ní bheidh d'oibleagáid ar an Uachtarán a bhreith nó a breith a fhógairt ar an achainí sula mbeidh sé lá caite<sup>6</sup> tar éis an lae a fhógrófar breith na Cúirte Uachtaraí arb éifeacht di<sup>7</sup> mar a dúradh thuas.

Variants

- 1 'den Bhille', 'den chéanna'
- 2 'a bhreathnú', 'a mheas'
- 3 'á dhearbhu', 'á rá'
- 4 'den Bhunreacht', 'den chéanna'
- 5 'á dhearbhu sin'
- 6 'go ceann sé lá', 'roimh dheireadh sé lá'
- 7 'ag dearbhu'

ARTICLE 27.5.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 27.5.1<sup>o</sup>TÉACS GAEILGE

I gcás gach Bille is siocair d'achainí faoin Airteagal seo, más é breith an Uachtaráin go bhfuil togra ann ina bhfuil an oiread sin tábhacht náisiúnta gur chóir breith an phobail a fháil air, ní foláir dó scríbhinn faoina lámh agus faoina Shéala a chur go dtí an Taoiseach agus go dtí Cathaoirleach gach Tí den Oireachtas á chur sin in iúl dóibh, agus diúltú dá lámh a chur leis an mBille sin agus dá fhógairt ina dhli mura nglactar, agus go dtí go nglactar, an togra

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In the case of every Bill which is the ground for a petition under this Article, if it is the judgement of the President that it contains a proposal which is of such national importance that the judgement of the people should be obtained on it, he must send a written document under his hand and under his Seal to the Taoiseach and to the Chairman of each House of the Oireachtas informing them of that, and he must decline to put his hand to that Bill and to promulgate it (as) law unless the proposal is accepted, and until it is accepted

ENGLISH TEXT

In every case in which the President decides that a Bill the subject of a petition under this Article contains a proposal of such national importance that the will of the people thereon ought to be ascertained, he shall inform the Taoiseach and the Chairman of each House of the Oireachtas accordingly in writing under his hand and Seal and shall decline to sign and promulgate such Bill as a law unless and until the proposal shall have been approved either

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'In every case in which the President decides that a Bill the subject of a petition under this Article' is expressed as 'I gcás gach Bille is siocair d'achainí faoin Airteagal seo, más é breith an Uachtaráin' ('In the case of every Bill which is the cause of / gives rise to a petition under this Article, if it is the decision of the President') in the Irish text.
- 2 'That the will of the people thereon ought to be ascertained' is again expressed in the Irish text as 'gur chóir breith an phobail a fháil air' ('that the judgement of the people should be obtained on it'), as in Article 27.1.
- 3 'He shall inform the Taoiseach ... accordingly in writing' is expressed in the Irish text as 'ní foláir dó scríbhinn ... a chur go dtí an Taoiseach ... á chur sin in iúl dó[ibh]' ('he must send a written document ...

to the Taoiseach ... informing [him] of that'), this phrase being followed by a comma in the Irish text alone.

- 4 'Approve' is expressed by 'glac', the Irish legal term for 'receive', 'accept'; 'formheasaim' translates 'I approve' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 5 'To sign' is again expressed as 'a lámh a chur le' ('put his hand to') and 'fógairt ina dhli' ('promulgate as a law') is again capable of interpretation as 'proclaim as a law' in the Irish text.

Commentary

is siocair d(o) Ó Dónaill cites 'An rud ba shiocair leis an achrann, what gave rise to the quarrel' and 'cad é is siocair leis? what's the cause of it?' – see the commentary on Articles 12.10.7<sup>o</sup> and 25.2.2<sup>o</sup>. In s1 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 12) Act, 1930, 'Every such Committee of Privileges shall decide the question so referred to it and report its decision thereon to Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann within twenty-one days after the day on which the Bill the subject of such question was sent to Seanad Éireann' is translated as 'Déanfidh gach Coiste ar Phríbhléidí den tsórt san a bhreith a thabhairt ar an gceist a cuirfeadh fé n-a bhráid amhlaidh agus an bhreith sin do thuairisciú do Dháil Éireann agus do Sheanad Éireann laistigh de lá is fiche tar éis an lae do cuireadh an Bille do abhar don cheist sin go dtí Seanad Éireann'.

á chur ... in iúl See the commentary on Articles 28.9.1<sup>o</sup> and 22.2.6<sup>o</sup>, 'cuir in iúl' expressing 'report' in the latter. 'Rud a chur in iúl do dhuine' is translated as 'to let someone know something; to give someone to understand something; to pretend something to someone' in Ó Dónaill. 'I have to inform you' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'tá orm a chur in iúl duit' in translations for the Department of Industry and Commerce. In s11(1)(d) of the Safety, Health and Welfare (Offshore Installations) Act, 1987, 'the person by whom the appointment is made shall ... inform the Minister in writing of the appointment' is translated as 'cuirfidh an duine a dhéanfaidh an ceapachán ... an ceapachán in iúl don Aire i scríbhinn'. In s33(4) of the Health (Mental Services) Act, 1981, 'Where the application is refused the health board ... shall so inform the applicant in writing' is translated as 'I gcás ina ndiúltófar don iarratas cuirfidh an bord sláinte ... é sin in iúl i scríbhinn don iarratasóir'. Finally, 'the Commission shall inform the Minister in writing of such failure or non-attendance' is translated as 'cuirfidh an Coimisiún an teip no an nea-theacht san in iúl don Aire i scríbhinn' in s27(3) of the Currency Act, 1927.

mura nglactar See the commentary on Articles 8.3, 12.10.4<sup>o</sup> and 13.1.3<sup>o</sup> regarding 'glac'; 'glacaim' is translated as 'I admit (as evidence); I receive' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'glacaim le' is translated as 'I accept'. See the commentary on Articles 13.1.2<sup>o</sup> and 13.7.3<sup>o</sup> for translations of 'approve'. 'Or fails to adhere to the scheme approved by the Court' is translated as 'nó má mhainníonn sé gníomhú de réir na scéime a cheadaigh an Chúirt' in s38(8)(c) of the Central Bank Act, 1989, for example. 'A proposal to unite is approved by a special resolution of each society' is translated as 'go gceadófar togra an aontaithe le rún speisialta ó gach cumann' in s25(1)(a) of the Building Societies Act, 1976.

scribhinn This headword is translated principally as 'writing; written document' in Ó Dónaill and as 'script' in Téarmaí Dlí where 'scribhinn na fianaise, transcript of evidence' is cited – see the commentary on Article 15.10.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2. Note that the final 'togra' is followed by a dash in the original text.

achainí See the commentary on Article 26.3.2°.

breith See the commentary on Articles 15.11.1° and 26.3.1°. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú favours 'breith' to 'toil' in the direct translation below and recommends translating 'that the will of the people thereon ought to be ascertained' as 'gur chóir breith an phobail air a iarraidh'.

an oiread sin tábhacht náisiúnta See the commentary on Article 27.1.

ní foláir dó See the commentary on Article 11.

faoina láimh See the commentary on Article 12.10.3°.

a chur See the commentary on Article 26.3.2°.

diúltú do See the commentary on Article 26.3.1°.

lámh a chur le See the commentary on Article 13.3.1°.

dá fhógairt See the commentary on Articles 13.3.2° and 25.1.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

I gcás gach Bille is siocair d'achainí faoin Airteagal seo, más é breith an Uachtaráin go bhfuil togra ann ina bhfuil an oiread sin tábhachta náisiúnta gur chóir breith an phobail a fháil air, ní foláir dó nó di scribhinn faoina láimh agus faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala a chur go dtí an Taoiseach agus go dtí cathaoirleach gach Ti den Oireachtas á chur sin in iúl dóibh, agus diúltú dá lámh a chur leis an mBille sin agus dá fhógairt ina dhlí mura nglactar, agus go dtí go nglactar, an togra

Direct gender-proofed translation

I ngach cás a gcinnfidh an tUachtarán go bhfuil a oiread sin tábhachta náisiúnta i dtogra i mBille<sup>1</sup> is ábhar d'achainí faoin Airteagal seo<sup>2</sup> gur chóir toil an phobail air<sup>3</sup> a fhionnadh<sup>4</sup>, cuirfidh sé nó sí é sin in iúl dá réir sin don Taoiseach agus do Chathaoirleach gach Ti den Oireachtas i scribhinn faoina láimh agus faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala agus diúltóidh sé nó sí don Bhille sin a shíniú agus a fhógairt ina dhlí mura nglactar leis an togra nó go dtí go nglactar leis<sup>5</sup>

Variants

- 1 'go bhfuil togra lena ngabhann a oiread sin tábhachta náisiúnta i mBille'
- 2 'arb ábhar achainí faoin Airteagal seo é'
- 3 'ar an gcéanna'
- 4 'gur chóir breith an phobail air a iarraidh'
- 5 'mura nglactar leis nó go dtí go nglactar leis an togra'

ARTICLE 27.5.1<sup>oi</sup>, ii AIRTEAGAL 27.5.1<sup>oi</sup>, ii

TÉACS GAEILGE

- i le toil an phobail i Reifreann de réir forálacha alt 2 d'Airteagal 47 den Bhunreacht seo, taobh istigh d'ocht mí dhéag ón lá a bheireann an tUachtarán a bhreith, nó
- ii le rún ó Dháil Éireann arna rith taobh istigh den tréimhse réamhráite i ndiaidh lánscoir agus ationól do Dháil Éireann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

- i by the will of the people in a Referendum in accordance with the provisions of section 2 of Article 47 of this Constitution, within eighteen months from the day the President gives his decision, or
- ii by resolution by Dáil Éireann passed within the aforesaid period after Dáil Éireann has dissolved and re-assembled.

ENGLISH TEXT

- i by the people at a Referendum in accordance with the provisions of section 2 of Article 47 of this Constitution within a period of eighteen months from the date of the President's decision, or
- ii by a resolution of Dáil Éireann passed within the said period after a dissolution and re-assembly of Dáil Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'By the people' is expressed as 'le toil an phobail' ('by the will of the people') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Within a period of eighteen months' is expressed simply as 'taobh istigh d'ocht mí dhéag' ('within eighteen months') in the Irish text, a comma preceding that phrase in the Irish text alone; in paragraph ii, 'within the said period', which is expressed as 'taobh istigh den tréimhse réamhráite' ('within the aforesaid period') in the Irish text, refers to the 'period' specified in paragraph i.
- 3 'From the date of the President's decision' is expressed as 'ón lá a bheireann an tUachtarán a bhreith' ('from the day the President gives his decision'), with 'from the date' again being expressed as 'ón lá', 'from the day', in the Irish text.

Commentary

toil See the commentary on Article 12.9 where 'toil' expresses 'consent'. Note that 'that the will of the people thereon ought to be ascertained' is expressed as 'gur chóir breith an phobail a fháil air' in Article 27.1 – Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'breith' is the more suitable term in most of these contexts. As regards the phrase 'by the People', 'for the purpose of the Constitution of Ireland lately enacted by the People' is translated as 'chun críche Bunreacht na hÉireann d'achtuigh an Pobal le déanaí' in the Long Title of the Electoral (Chairman of Dáil Éireann) Act, 1937. In Article 48 of the 1922 Constitution, 'The Oireachtas may provide for the Initiation by the people of proposals for laws or constitutional amendments' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an t-Oireachtas soláthar do dhéanamh chun tairisgintí ó sna daoine do thionnsnamh i dtaobh dlíthe no i dtaobh leasuithe bun-reachta’.

de réir forálacha alt 2 According to the official standard, this would have the form ‘de réir fhorálacha alt 2’ – see the commentary on Article 1 regarding the (lenited) nominative instead of the genitive.

a bheireann This would generally be written today as ‘a thugann’ – see the commentary on Article 12.1.

a bhreith See the commentary on Articles 15.11.1° and 26.3.1°.

rún See the commentary on Article 12.10.4°.

réamhráite See the commentary on Article 25.2.2°.

lánscoir See the commentary on Articles 13.2.1° and 18.8.

ationól See the commentary on Article 18.3.

Reifreann See the commentary on Article 47.1.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

- i le toil an phobail i Reifreann de réir fhorálacha alt 2 d’Airteagal 47 den Bhunreacht seo, taobh istigh d’ocht mí dhéag ón lá a thugann an tUachtarán a bhreith nó a breith, nó
- ii le rún ó Dháil Éireann arna rith taobh istigh den tréimhse réamhráite i ndiaidh lánscoir agus ationól do Dháil Éireann.

Direct translation

- i ag an bpobal i Reifreann de réir fhorálacha alt 2 d’Airteagal 47 den Bhunreacht seo laistigh de thréimhse ocht mí dhéag ó dháta bhreith an Uachtaráin, nó
- ii le rún ó Dháil Éireann arna rith laistigh den tréimhse chéanna tar éis Dáil Éireann a lánscoir<sup>1</sup> agus a ationól.

Variants

- 1 ‘a scoir’

ARTICLE 27.5.2° AIRTEAGAL 27.5.2°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Cibé uair a dhéantar togra a bhíonn i mBille is siocair d’achainí faoin Airteagal seo a ghlacadh le toil an phobail nó le rún ó Dháil Éireann de réir na bhforálacha sin romhainn den alt seo, ní foláir an Bille sin a thairiscint don Uachtarán chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis a ghlactha, chun a lámh a chur leis agus é a fhógairt ina dhlí, agus air sin ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur leis an mBille agus é a fhógairt go cuí ina dhlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Whenever a proposal (which is) in a Bill which is ground for a petition under this Article is accepted by the will of the people or by a resolution by Dáil Éireann in accordance with the foregoing provisions of this section, that Bill must be offered to the President as soon as possible after its acceptance, in order to put his hand to it and to promulgate it as law, and thereupon the President must put his hand to the Bill and duly promulgate it as law.

ENGLISH TEXT

Whenever a proposal contained in a Bill the subject of a petition under this Article shall have been approved either by the people or by a resolution of Dáil Éireann in accordance with the foregoing provisions of this section, such Bill shall as soon as may be after such approval be presented to the President for his signature and promulgation by him as a law and the President shall thereupon sign the Bill and duly promulgate it as a law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘The subject of a petition’ is again rendered as ‘siocair d’achainí’ (‘ground for a petition’) in the Irish text.
- 2 ‘Present’ is again expressed by ‘tairg’, ‘offer’, in the Irish text.
- 3 ‘Approve’ is twice expressed by ‘glac’, ‘accept’, in the Irish text, as in the foregoing subsection, and ‘by the people’ as ‘le toil an phobail’, ‘by the will of the people’.
- 4 ‘For his signature’ is again expressed as ‘chun a lámh a chur leis’ (‘to put his hand to it’) with ‘sign’ also being expressed by ‘a lámh a chur le’ (‘put his hand to’), in the Irish text; ‘promulgate as a law’ is expressed by the same phrase we have already seen and which is capable of being interpreted as ‘proclaim as a law’.
- 5 ‘And the President shall thereupon sign the Bill and ...’ is expressed as ‘agus air sin ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur leis an mBille agus’ (‘and thereupon the President shall sign the Bill and ...’) in the Irish text, in which text alone that phrase is preceded by a comma.
- 6 ‘Shall’ is twice expressed as ‘ní foláir’ (‘must’) in the Irish text.

Note that the original Article 27.5.2° was amended as follows by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941: ‘Every such Bill which’ was deleted and the words ‘Whenever a proposal contained in a Bill the subject of a petition under this Article’ were inserted in their place, with ‘, such Bill’ being inserted immediately after the word ‘section’. As regards the Irish text, the words ‘Gach Bille dá shórt sin a glactar’ were deleted and the phrase ‘Cibé uair a déantar togra bhíonn i mBille is siocair d’athchuinghe fán Airteagal so do ghlacadh’ was inserted in their place, and ‘an Bille sin do’ was inserted in place of the word ‘é’ where it firstly occurred in the subsection.

Commentary

Cibé This pronominal is translated as (1) ‘whoever’ and (2) ‘whatever, whichever’ in Ó Dónaill, translating ‘cibé duine, rud’ as ‘whatever person, thing’ and citing ‘cibé áit a rachaimid, wherever we go’. ‘Cá huair? cén uair?’ is translated as ‘when’. De Bhaldraithe cites ‘you may come whenever you like, féadfaidh tú teacht am ar bith, cibé am, is mian leat’.

Looking at early Acts, in s7(2) of the Censorship of Films Act, 1923, 'Whenever any such application as is mentioned in the foregoing sub-section is made to the Official Censor' is translated as 'Aon uair a cuirfar fé bhráid an Scrúdóra Oifigiúla aon iarratas den tsórt a luaidhtear sa bhfo-alt deiridh sin', 'Whenever the Official Censor is of opinion that part only of any picture in respect of which an application is made to him under this section is unfit for exhibition in public' being translated as 'Má dintar fén alt so iarratas do leaga fé bhráid an Scrúdóra Oifigiúla i dtaobh pictiúra agus gur dó leis ná fuil ach cuid den phictiúir sin gan bheith oiriúnach le taisbeáint go puiblí in s7(4).

Looking at modern Acts, 'Whenever a person holding an office in a society becomes ineligible by virtue of this section to hold office' is translated as 'Aon uair a thiocfaidh duine a shealbhaíonn oifig i gcumann chun bheith neamhcháilithe, de bhua an ailt seo, chun oifig a shealbhú' in s64(10) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'Whenever any member shall have been named by the Ceann Comhairle immediately after the commission of the offence of disregarding the authority of the chair' is translated as 'Má ainmníonn an Ceann Comhairle aon chomhalta díreach tar éis dó nó di neamhaird a thabhairt ar údarás na Cathaoireach' in s61(1) of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997).

air sin Looking at early Acts, in Article 6 of the 1922 Constitution 'and such Court or judge shall thereupon order the release of such person' is translated as 'agus órdóidh an Chúirt no an breitheamh san an duine sin do sgaoile ansan'. 'Leis sin' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'thereupon' in the 1926 Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann; in the 1997 Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann, 'the interruption shall thereupon take place' is translated as 'déanfar an stopadh láithreach'. 'And shall thereupon cease to affect the said undertaking' is translated as 'agus leis sin scuirfid de dhifir do dhéanamh don ghnó san' in s5 of the Dublin United Tramways (Lucan Electric Railways) Act, 1927. In s15(1) of the Seanad Electoral (Panel Members) Act, 1947, 'the Clerk of Dáil Éireann shall ... inform the Seanad returning officer of that fact and the Seanad returning officer shall thereupon sign and publish in the Iris Oifigiúil the register of nominating bodies prepared by him' is translated as 'cuirfidh Cléireach Dháil Éireann sin in iúl do cheann comhairimh an tSeanaid ... agus air sin sineoidh ceann comhairimh an tSeanaid, agus foilseoidh san Iris Oifigiúil, an clár de chomhluchta ainmniúcháin d'ullmhaigh sé'.

a ghlacadh 'Glacadh' is the verbal noun of 'glac' – see the commentary on subsection 1. See the commentary on Articles 13.1.2° and 13.7.3° where 'approval' is expressed respectively by 'comhaontú' and 'sásta le'. 'I approve' is translated as 'formheasaim' in Téarmaí Dlí. Commenting on 'formheasta' in the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that this is a newly-composed word which would be close in meaning to 'ardmheasta', or the like, although Professor Ó Murchú admits it is frequently found in legislation. He fears it may not be understood in the context and recommends 'faomhadh', 'faofa', which is correct as regards sense but old-fashioned. In contemporary Irish in general 'aontú', 'ceadú', 'moladh', 'toiliú', etc., would be used, according to Máirtín Ó Murchú.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2.

is siocair See the commentary on Articles 12.10.7° and 25.2.2°.

achainí See the commentary on Article 26.3.2°.

toil See the commentary on Article 27.5.1°i.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

a thairiscint See the commentary on Articles 25.1 and 26.1.2°.

a lámh a chur le See the commentary on Article 13.3.1°.

a fhógairt Verbal noun of 'fógair'. See the commentary on Articles 13.3.2° and 25.1.

Direct translation

Aon uair<sup>1</sup> a bheidh togra i mBille is ábhar d'achainí faoin Airteagal seo formheasta<sup>2</sup> ag an bpobal nó le rún ó Dháil Éireann de réir na bhforálacha sin romhainn den Airteagal seo, a luaithe is féidir tar éis an fhorheasta sin<sup>3</sup> déanfar an Bille sin a thíolacadh don Uachtarán chun é a shíniú agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhlí agus air sin<sup>4</sup> síneoidh an tUachtarán an Bille agus déanfaidh é a fhógairt go cuí ina dhlí.

Variants

- 1 'Cibé uair'
- 2 'faofa'
- 3 'tar éis a bheith formheasta/faofa amhlaidh'
- 4 'leis sin'

ARTICLE 27.6 AIRTEAGAL 27.6

TÉACS GAELIGE

I gcás gach Bille is siocair d'achainí faoin Airteagal seo, más é breith an Uachtaráin nach bhfuil aon togra ann ina bhfuil an oiread sin tábhacht náisiúnta gur chóir breith an phobail a fháil air, ní foláir dó scríbhinn faoina lámh agus faoina Shéala a chur go dtí an Taoiseach agus go dtí Cathaoirleach gach Tí den Oireachtas á chur sin in iúl dóibh, agus a lámh a chur leis an mBille sin lá nach déanaí ná aon lá dhéag tar éis an lae a meastar a ritheadh an Bille sin ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais, agus é a fhógairt go cuí ina dhlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In the case of each Bill which is ground for a petition under this Article, if it is the judgement of the President that there is no proposal in it that is of such national importance that the judgement of the people on it should be obtained, he must send a written document under his hand and under his Seal to the Taoiseach and to the Chairman of each House of the Oireachtas informing them of that, and put his hand to that Bill on a day not later than eleven days after the day that that Bill is deemed to have been passed by the two Houses of the Oireachtas, and duly promulgate it as law.

ENGLISH TEXT

In every case in which the President decides that a Bill the subject of a petition under this Article does not contain a proposal of such national importance that the will of the people thereon ought to be ascertained, he shall inform the Taoiseach and the Chairman of each House of the Oireachtas accordingly in writing under his hand and Seal, and such Bill shall be signed by the President not later than eleven days after the date on which the Bill shall have been deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas and shall be duly promulgated by him as law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The same divergences as were noted regarding Article 27.5.1°, down to ‘under his hand and Seal’ / ‘á chur sin in iúl dóibh’ in that subsection, apply here, the texts of that subsection and this section being identical except for ‘contains’ / ‘go bhfuil ... ann’ in the former and ‘does not contain’ / ‘nach bhfuil ann’ in the latter.
- 2 ‘Sign’ is again expressed as ‘put his hand to’ in the Irish text, ‘not later than’ as ‘(on) a day not later than’, ‘after the date’ as ‘after the day’ and ‘promulgate as a law’ capable of being read as ‘proclaim as a law’, as we have already seen in earlier sections of this Article.

Commentary

an oiread sin tábhacht náisiúnta One would expect ‘tábhacht’ to be in the genitive singular, i.e. ‘tábhachta’ – see the commentary on Article 27.1.

is siocair See the commentary on Article 27.5.1°.

achainí See the commentary on Article 26.3.2°.

breith See the commentary on Article 27.5.1°.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2.

a fháil See the commentary on Article 27.1.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

scríbhinn See the commentary on Article 27.5.1°.

faona láimh See the commentary on Article 12.10.3°.

a chur See the commentary on Article 26.3.2°.

in iúl See the commentary on Article 27.5.1°.

lámh a chur le See the commentary on Article 13.3.1°.

a fhógairt See the commentary on Articles 13.3.2° and 25.1.

go cuí See the commentary on Article 43.2.1°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

I gcás gach Bille is siocair d’achainí faoin Airteagal seo, más é breith an Uachtaráin nach bhfuil aon togra ann ina bhfuil an oiread sin tábhachta náisiúnta gur chóir breith an phobail a fháil air, ní foláir dó nó di scríbhinn faoina láimh agus faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala a chur go dtí an Taoiseach agus go dtí cathaoirleach gach Tí den Oireachtas á chur sin in iúl dóibh, agus a lámh a chur leis an mBille sin lá nach déanaí ná aon lá dhéag tar éis an lae a meastar a ritheadh an Bille sin ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais, agus é a fhógairt go cuí ina dhlí.

Direct gender-proofed translation

I ngach cás a gcinnfidh an tUachtarán nach bhfuil togra a ngabhann a oiread sin tábhachta náisiúnta leis<sup>1</sup> i mBille is ábhar d’achainí faoin Airteagal seo<sup>2</sup> gur chóir toil an phobail air a fhionnadh<sup>3</sup>, cuirfidh sé nó sí é sin in iúl dá réir sin don Taoiseach agus do Chathaoirleach gach Tí den Oireachtas i scríbhinn faoina láimh agus faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala, agus déanfaidh an tUachtarán an Bille sin a shíniú tráth nach déanaí ná aon lá dhéag tar éis an dáta a mheasfar an Bille a bheith rite ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais agus déanfaidh sé nó sí é a fhógairt go cuí ina dhlí.

Variants

1 ‘lena ngabhann a oiread sin tábhachta náisiúnta’

2 ‘arb ábhar achainí faoin Airteagal seo é’

3 ‘breith an phobail a fháil air’

THE GOVERNMENT AN RIALTAS

ARTICLE 28.1 AIRTEAGAL 28.1

TÉACS GAELIGE

Mórsheisear ar a laghad, agus cúig dhuine dhéag ar a mhéid, líon comhaltaí an Rialtais, agus is é an tUachtarán a cheapfas na comhaltaí sin de réir forálacha an Bhunreachtá seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The complement of members of the Government is at least seven (people), and at most fifteen people, and it is the President who will appoint those members in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Government shall consist of not less than seven and not more than fifteen members who shall be appointed by the President in accordance with the provisions of this Constitution.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The Government shall consist of' is expressed as 'líon comhaltaí an Rialtais' ('the complement of members of the Government') in the Irish text, the copular meaning being expressed syntactically.
- 2 'Not less than seven' is expressed as 'Mórsheisear ar a laghad' ('at least seven [people]') in the Irish text, the obsolescent term 'mórsheisear' expressing the personal number 'seven', this term now limited in speech to parts of Munster.
- 3 'Not more than fifteen members' is expressed as 'cúig dhuine dhéag ar a mhéid' ('fifteen people at most') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Who shall be appointed by the President' is expressed as 'agus is é an tUachtarán a cheapfas na comhaltaí sin' ('and it is the President who will appoint those members') in the Irish text, the preceding clause being followed by a comma in that text alone.

Note that Article 51 of the 1922 Constitution concludes as follows:

The Executive Council shall be responsible to Dáil Éireann, and shall consist of not more than seven nor less than five Ministers appointed by the Representative of the Crown on the nomination of the President of the Executive Council. Beidh an Ard-Chomhairle freagarthach do Dháil Éireann, agus is é a líon seachtar n-Airí ar an gcuid is mó dhe no cúigear Airí ar an gcuid is lú dhe ar n-a gceapa ag Ionadaí na Coróinneach ar ainmniú Uachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle.

Commentary

Mórsheisear Literally 'great six', 'mórsheisear' is translated as 'seven persons' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'mórsheisear fear, ban, seven men, women'. Dinneen cites 'tá móirsheisear cloinne aca, they have seven children', adding the following:

Móir-sheisear is in ordinary use in Munster, but though occurring in Ulster folk tales its place is taken by seachtar in Ulster and Connaught everyday speech.

See Seán Ua Súilleabháin, op. cit., p. 513, for the distribution of 'mórsheisear' in Munster Irish – usually pronounced 'muar(sh)(e)isear' from the Decies to Uíbh Ráthach, with 'múireisear' and 'mórsar' cited for Clare; in the Dingle Peninsula one finds 'seachtar', 'muarsheisear' seldom being heard.

'Mórsheisear' is a compound of 'mór' and 'seisear' – see DIL s.v. 'mórfeiser', 'a great hexad', i.e. 'a heptad, a group of seven persons (strictly of men)'. 'Fácab morfeser dia muintir' ('he left with him seven of his community') is cited from the Tripartite Life of Patrick, composed at the end of the ninth or beginning of the tenth century. This was the only way of expressing the personal number 'seven' in the earlier language – see Rudolf Thurneysen, op. cit., p. 244. According to David Greene, this formation is unparalleled in the Celtic languages – see s14.1.3.1.1 of Jadranka Gvozdanović, ed., Indo-European Numerals (1992), where Professor Green refers to Sanskrit 'mahāpañkti-', 'big five', meaning 'seven verse line'. Professor Eric P. Hamp reminds the author of 'a baker's dozen' and draws attention to the significance of 'seisear' as a half dozen in the development of 'mórfeiser'.

In s1(1) of the Schedule to the Radio and Television Act, 1988, 'The members of the Commission shall be appointed by the Government and shall be not less than seven nor more than ten in number' is translated as 'Is é an Rialtas a cheapfaidh comhaltaí an Choimisiúin agus ní lú ná seachtar ná ní mó ná deichniúr a líon'. In s3(6) of the Censorship of Films Act, 1923, 'the appeal shall be heard in the presence of not less than seven members of the Appeal Board' is translated as 'aith-éistfar an t-athchomharc i láthair seachtar ball ar a luíod den Bhord Athchomhairc'. 'Seachtar' alone is cited in the list of personal numbers in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil (p. 41).

a cheapfas The special form of the relative, third singular, future tense, of 'ceap' would be replaced by 'a cheapfaidh' according to the official standard – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative and see the commentary on Articles 6.1, 13.1.1° and 13.8.2° regarding 'ceap'.

In s3(1) of the National Treasury Management Agency Act, 1990, 'There shall be a chairman of the Committee who shall be appointed by the Minister from amongst the members of the Committee' is translated as 'Beidh cathaoirleach ar an gCoiste a cheapfaidh an tAire as measc chomhaltaí an Choiste'. In s3(1) of the Military Service

Pensions Act, 1924, 'A board of assessors ... shall be constituted under this Act and shall consist of three members who shall be appointed by the Minister' is translated as 'Bunófar bord meastóirí ... fén Acht so agus beidh sé có-dhéanta de thríúr ball a cheapfídh an tAire'.

líon comhaltaí an Rialtais In accordance with the official standard (see the commentary on Article 1), one would expect a noun in the genitive, as 'comhaltaí' is above, to be lenited before the definite noun in the genitive ('an Rialtas'). See, however, 'líon suíochán an halla, the seating capacity of the hall' in Ó Dónaill. See the commentary on Article 14.3 regarding 'líon'.

'The committee appointed under this section shall consist of not less than three or not more than five members' is translated as 'Líon nach lú na tríúr agus nach mó ná cúigear comhalta a bheidh sa choiste a cheapfar faoin alt seo' in s7(2) of the Turf Development Act, 1981, with 'Is iad a bheidh ar an bPríomh-Bhord líon nach lú ná ceathrar ná nach mó ná seisear comhaltaí arna gceapadh faoi Airteagal 5 den Chuid seo' translating 'The Central Board shall consist of not less than four or more than six members appointed under Article 5 of this Part' in s3(1) of the Second Schedule to the Fisheries Act, 1980. 'The Committee shall consist of not less than 5 nor more than 7 members ... who shall be appointed to be such members by the Minister' is translated as 'Is é a bheidh sa Choiste 5 comhalta ar a laghad agus 7 gcomhalta ar a mhéid ... a cheapfaidh an tAire chun bheith ina gcomhaltaí den sórt sin' in s1 of the Second Schedule to the National Treasury Management Agency Act, 1990.

ar a mhéid This phrase is translated as 'however great, long, etc., at most, at its biggest, of the biggest' in Dinneen, citing 'an talamh do chúm Dia i dtagadh an dias ar a mhéid ann, the land God made where the ear of corn was at its biggest'. Ó Dónaill gives the form of this phrase as 'ar a mhéad' ('at the most'), which phrase is so cited in the Glossary accompanying An Caihdeán Oifigiúil.

de réir forálacha an Bhunreacht seo This would have the form 'de réir fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo' in the official standard – see the commentary on Article 1.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Mórsheisear ar a laghad, agus cúig dhuine dhéag ar a mhéad, líon comhaltaí an Rialtais, agus is é nó is í an tUachtarán a cheapfaidh na comhaltaí sin de réir fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo.

Direct translation

Seachtar comhalta ar a laghad agus cúig chomhalta dhéag ar a mhéad, líon comhaltaí an Rialtais,<sup>1</sup> ar comhaltaí iad a cheapfaidh an tUachtarán de réir fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo.<sup>2</sup>

Variants

- 1 'Beidh an Rialtas comhdhéanta de sheachtar ar a laghad agus cúig chomhalta dhéag ar a mhéad.'
- 2 'Is é a bheidh sa Rialtas seachtar comhalta ar a laghad agus cúig chomhalta dhéag ar a mhéad, a cheapfaidh an tUachtarán de réir fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo.' 'Is é a bheidh sa Rialtas seachtar comhalta ar a laghad agus cúig chomhalta dhéag ar a mhéad, agus ceapfaidh an tUachtarán de réir fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo iad.'

ARTICLE 28.2 AIRTEAGAL 28.2

TÉACS GAEILGE

Faoi chuimsiú forálacha an Bhunreacht seo, is é an Rialtas a oibreos, nó is le húdarás an Rialtais a oibreofar, cumhacht chomhallach an Stáit.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Within the constraint/scope of the provisions of this Constitution, it is the Government that will operate, or it is with the authority of the Government that will be operated, the implemental power of the State.

ENGLISH TEXT

The executive power of the State shall, subject to the provisions of this Constitution, be exercised by or on the authority of the Government.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Executive' is expressed by a relatively unfamiliar term, an adjective formed from 'comhall', 'to fulfil, discharge, perform, implement'.
- 2 'Exercise' is expressed by 'oibrigh' ('operate') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 3 The forms corresponding to 'of the Government' and 'exercise' are repeated in the Irish text in order to express 'be exercised on the authority of the Government' – see the commentary on Article 6.2 regarding 'by or on the authority of'.
- 4 'Subject to' is expressed as 'faoi chuimsiú', 'within the constraint/scope of' in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Commentary

cumhacht chomhallach See the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the noun 'comhallacht'. The adjective 'comhallach' is translated as 'observant (ar riail, of a rule)' in Ó Dónaill, with Dinneen citing 'cómhallach' as a variant of 'cómhaltach', translated as 'fulfilling, fulfilled, keeping promises, contracts'. DIL cites 'combad chomaltach mo recht' ('that my rule might be exercised with its responsibilities'), from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster, as an example of 'comaltach', the earlier form of 'comhallach'. 'Comaltach' is based on 'comalnad', verbal noun of 'comalnaithir', translated as 'fulfils, discharges, performs (a duty, undertaking); carries into effect, brings to pass (a promise, prophecy); fulfils, observes (a law, command); satisfies' in DIL. 'Comall' is a late verbal noun of 'comalnaithir', translated as 'act of fulfilling, carrying out, discharging (a duty, obligation, etc.); fulfilment, observance' in DIL, where one example of the noun 'comallach' is cited from the Metrical Dindsenchas (translated there as 'guarantors').

As regards 'power', see Article 6.2 where 'These powers of government are exercisable only by or on the authority of the organs of State established by this Constitution' is expressed as 'Is leis na horgain Stáit a chuirtear ar bun leis an mBunreacht seo, agus leo sin amháin nó lena n-údarás, is féidir na cumhachtaí riala a oibriú'. In Article 6.1, 'All powers of government, legislative, executive and judicial' is expressed as 'gach cumhacht riala, idir reachtaíocht is comhallacht is breithiúnas'. In the Long Title of the Republic of Ireland Act, 1948, 'to enable the President to exercise the executive power or any executive function of the State' is translated as 'dá chumasú don Uachtarán cumhacht chomhallach no aon fheidhm d'fheadhma comhallacha an Stáit d'oibriú'. The Long Title of the Constitution (Amendment No. 27) Act, 1936, is as follows:

An Act to amend certain amendments of the Constitution in relation to the executive authority and power and in relation to the performance of certain executive functions. Acht chun leasúithe áirithe do dhéanamh ar an mBunreacht maidir leis an údarás agus leis an gcomhacht feidhmiúcháin agus maidir le feidhmeanna áirithe feidhmiúcháin do dhéanamh.

Note that Article 51 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

The Executive Authority of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) is hereby declared to be vested in the King, and shall be exercisable, in accordance with the law, practice and constitutional usage governing the exercise of the Executive Authority in the case of the Dominion of Canada, by the Representative of the Crown. Fógartar leis seo Údarás Feidhmiúcháin Shaorstáit Éireann do bheith sealbhúithe sa Rí, agus go bhfeidhmeofar ag Ionadaí na Coróinneach é do réir an dlí an cleachta agus an úsáid bhunreachtúil a rialúíonn feidhmiú an údarás feidhmiúcháin i gcás Thiarnais Canada.

Note, finally, that 'the executive military command and inspection of the Forces' is translated as 'feidhm-cheannas míleata agus cigireacht na bhFórsaí' in s14 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

Faoi chuimsiú forálacha an Bhunreacht seo See the commentary on Article 12.5 regarding 'faoi chuimsiú' v. 'faoi réir' (in Téarmaí Dlí). According to the official standard 'forálacha' would be lenited here after this prepositional phrase – see the commentary on Article 1.

a oibreos The special form of the relative, future tense, of 'oibrigh' – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative. Regarding 'oibrigh', 'operate', see the commentary on Article 3. Regarding the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú again draws attention to the repetition involved in 'cumhacht feidhmiúcháin ... a fheidhmiú', suggesting 'comhlíon' as well as 'oibrigh' as alternatives.

a húdarás See the commentary on Article 6.2.

Standardised Irish text

Faoi chuimsiú fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo, is é an Rialtas a oibreoidh, nó is le húdarás an Rialtais a oibreofar, cumhacht chomhallach an Stáit.

Direct translation

Déanfar, faoi réir fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo, cumhacht feidhmiúcháin<sup>1</sup> an Stáit a fheidhmiú ag an Rialtas nó ar údarás<sup>2</sup> an Rialtais.<sup>3</sup>

Variants

- 1 'fheidhmeach'
- 2 'le húdarás'
- 3 'Faoi chuimsiú fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo, déanfaidh an Rialtas cumhacht feidhmiúcháin an Stáit a fheidhmiú nó déanfar í a fheidhmiú ar údarás an Rialtais. / ar a (n-)údarás.'

ARTICLE 28.3.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 28.3.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní dleathach cogadh a fhógairt ná páirt a bheith ag an Stát in aon chogadh ach amháin le haontú Dháil Éireann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is not lawful to declare war nor for the State to partake in any war except with the agreement of Dáil Éireann.

ENGLISH TEXT

War shall not be declared and the State shall not participate in any war save with the assent of Dáil Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'War shall not be declared' is expressed as 'Ní dleathach cogadh a fhógairt' ('It is not lawful to declare war') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Ní dleathach', 'It is not lawful', also qualifies 'páirt a bheith ag an Stát in aon chogadh' ('the State having a part in any war'), with 'and the State shall not participate in any war' being expressed in the Irish text as 'ná [ní dleathach] páirt a bheith ag an Stát in aon chogadh' ('nor [it is not lawful] for the State to participate in any war').

Note that Article 49 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

Save in the case of actual invasion, the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) shall not be committed to active participation in any war without the assent of the Oireachtas. Ní cuirfear Saorstát Éireann fé oibleagáid páirt ghníomhach do thógaint in aon choga gan aontú an Oireachtais, ach amháin i gcás ionsuidhe do dhéanamh ar Éirinn.

Commentary

le haontú 'Aontú' is translated as 'assent' in Téarmaí Dlí, this being the verbal noun of 'aontaigh', the first person singular, present tense, of which is translated as 'I assent, agree' in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil. 'Aontú' is translated as 'assent, agreement' in Ó Dónaill; note, however, that although 'aontaigh' is translated there as 'assent, agree', along with 'aontú le rud, to assent to something' and 'aontú le duine faoi rud, to agree with someone about something', Ó Dónaill also cites 'aontú le peaca, to consent to sin'. Dinneen likewise translates 'aontuighim' as 'I unite, assent to, consent, agree (with le or ar); or without preposition', citing 'ro aontuigh Sadhbh a marbadh, Sadhbh consented to its being killed' from O'Grady's edition of the Fenian tale Tóruigheacht Dhiarmuda agus Ghráinne. DIL cites 'thug sí air aontughadh'

(‘caused him to yield’) from the seventeenth-century translation of Proverbs vii. 21, the only other example of ‘oentugad’ in the sense of ‘consenting, agreeing’ cited there being ‘do dhruim aontuighthe don olc’ from Keating’s seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death. DIL s.v. ‘oentu’, cites ‘tug Naoise aonta leis’ (Naoise ‘consented to this’) from Keating’s History of Ireland, examples of ‘oentu’ in the sense of ‘consent, co-operation, participation’ being cited in DIL from the Leabhar Breac (compiled in 1411 or earlier) onwards, the primary sense of ‘oentu’ being ‘oneness, one’, glossing Latin ‘unio’ and ‘unitas’ in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, being based on ‘oen’, ‘one’.

See the commentary on Article 15.8.2°, where ‘assent’ is expressed as ‘toiliú’. Looking at early Acts, in s22(1)(b) of the Agricultural Produce (Eggs) Act, 1939, ‘the personal representative of the said deceased registered proprietor or, with the assent of such personal representative, any other person shall ... be entitled’ is translated as ‘beidh ionadaí pearsanta an dílseánaigh chlárúithe éagtha san no, le haontú an ionadaí phearsanta san, aon duine eile i dteideal’, ‘le toiliú’ replacing ‘le haontú’ in the translation of the same text in s40(1)(b) of the Tourist Traffic Act, 1939. In Article 53 of the 1922 Constitution, ‘The other Ministers who are to hold office as members of the Executive Council shall be appointed on the nomination of the President, with the assent of Dáil Éireann’ is translated as ‘Is ar ainmniú an Uachtaráin le haontú na Dála, a ceapfar na hAíre eile atá chun bheith in oifig mar bhaill den Ard-Chomhairle’.

cogadh a fhógairt This phrase is translated in Ó Dónaill as ‘to declare war’, ‘declare formally’ being given as one of the senses of ‘fógair’, ‘d’fhógair siad síocháin, they proclaimed peace’ also being cited there. Dinneen cites ‘fógraim cath ar, I declare war or battle on’. DIL translates ‘fúacair cath (for nech)’ as ‘proclaims battle on, challenges (someone) to battle’, citing examples from Leabhar na hUidhre, written in Clonmacnois c. 1100, onwards. ‘Fúacair’ is based on ‘gair-’, ‘call’. ‘Cogadh’ is translated as ‘war’ in Ó Dónaill and as ‘war, battle; contention, strife’ in Dinneen. The earlier form ‘cocad’, a compound of ‘com’ and ‘cath’, is translated as ‘war, conflict; act of waging war’ in DIL, where examples are cited from the ninth-century Milan and St Gall Glosses onwards.

In Article 2 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Convention Act, 1962, ‘In addition to the provisions which shall be implemented in peace time, the present Convention shall apply to all cases of declared war or of any other armed conflict which may arise between two or more of the High Contracting Parties, even if the state of war is not recognised by one of them’, is translated as ‘I dteannta na bhforálacha a chuirfear i gcrích in aimsir shíochána, beidh feidhm ag an gCoinbhinsiún seo i gcás cogaidh fhógartha nó i gcás aon choinbhleachta armtha eile a éireoidh idir dhá cheann nó níos mó de na hArdpháirtithe Conarthacha, fiú má bhíonn ceann acu gan an staid chogaidh a aithint’.

Note that ‘dearbhaigh’ is the usual translation of ‘declare’ in the Acts, and ‘declare’ is so expressed in the Constitution – see the commentary on Articles 12.8 and 12.10.7° – examples of ‘faisnéisigh’ translating ‘declare’ in early Acts are given in the latter commentary. In s2(2) of the Seanad Electoral Act, 1928, ‘to ascertain and declare the result thereof’ is translated as ‘a thora d’fháil amach agus d’fhógairt’, with ‘roimh fhógairt toradh na vótaíochta’ translating ‘before the declaration of the poll’ in s11(1) of the Third Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923.

páirt a bheith ag In s21(1) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, ‘a building society may ... develop or participate in developing land’ is translated as ‘féadfaidh cumann foirgníochta talamh ... a fhorbairt nó bheith páirteach ina fhorbairt’. In s3(j)(ii) of Article XII of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements (Amendment) Act, 1977, ‘A member making such an agreement shall not participate in the election of Executive Directors’ is translated as ‘Aon chomhalta a dhéanfaidh comhaontú den sórt sin ní bheidh sé páirteach i dtoghadh Stiúrthóirí Feidhmiúcháin’. ‘By reason only of the fact that the holder of the office or employment might (though he does not) participate in the scheme’ is translated as ‘de bhí amháin go bhféadfadh sealbhóir na hoifige nó na fostaíochta a bheith (cé nach bhfuil sé) páirteach sa scéim’ in s235(8) of the Income Tax Act, 1967. The Margin Title of s9 of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1978, ‘Participation in agricultural projects’, is translated as ‘Páirt a ghlacadh i dtionscadail talmhaíochta’, ‘participate in’ in s9(a) being translated as ‘bheith páirteach ann’. Finally, in s65(6)(c) of the Finance Act, 1990, ‘a right to participate in the assets on a winding up’ is translated as ‘ceart chun bheith rannpháirteach sna sócmhainní i gcás foirceannadh’. Note, finally, that ‘bheith rannpháirteach’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘participate’ in translations for the Department of Education.

Ní dleathach See the commentary on Article 17.2.

Direct translation

Ní dhéanfar cogadh a fhógairt agus ní bheidh an Stát páirteach in aon chogadh ach amháin le haontú Dháil Éireann.

ARTICLE 28.3.2° AIRTEAGAL 28.3.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ach féadfaidh an Rialtas, i gcás ionraidh, aon ní a dhéanamh a mheasfaid a bheith riachtanach chun an Stát a chosaint, agus mura mbeidh Dáil Éireann ina suí ní foláir í a thionól chomh luath agus is féidir é.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

But the Government may, in the case of invasion, do anything that they consider necessary to defend the State, and if Dáil Éireann is not sitting it must be convened as soon as is possible.

ENGLISH TEXT

In the case of actual invasion, however, the Government may take whatever steps they may consider necessary for the protection of the State, and Dáil Éireann if not sitting shall be summoned to meet at the earliest practicable date.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'In the case of actual invasion' is expressed simply as 'i gcás ionraidh' ('in the case of invasion') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Take whatever steps they may consider necessary' is expressed as 'aon ní a dhéanamh a mheasfaid a bheith riachtanach' ('do anything they consider necessary') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Summoned to meet' is expressed as 'a thionól' ('convened') in the Irish text.
- 4 'At the earliest practicable date' is expressed as 'chomh luath agus is féidir é' ('as soon as is possible') in the Irish text.
- 5 'However' is expressed as 'Ach' ('but') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 6 'Ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text expresses 'shall' of the English text, as we have already seen in many earlier Articles.

Note that Article 49 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

Save in the case of actual invasion, the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) shall not be committed to active participation in any war without the assent of the Oireachtas. Ní cuirfear Saorstát Éireann fé oibleagáid páirt ghníomhach do thógaint in aon choga gan aontú an Oireachtais, ach amháin i gcás ionsuidhe do dhéanamh ar Éirinn.

Commentary

i gcás ionraidh 'Ionradh' is translated principally as 'incursion, invasion' and 'pillaging, plunder' in Ó Dónaill, 'ionnradh' being translated in Dinneen as 'an attack, invasion, incursion, destruction, ravage; act of destroying, ravaging; also a probe'. 'Invasion' is translated as 'ionradh' in Téarmaí Mileata / Military Terms. Irish 'indred' glosses Latin 'uastatio' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, this headword being translated as (a) 'incursion, foray, act of invading, laying waste, devastating, spoiling' and (b) (in general) 'injury, wrong, disadvantage' in DIL.

'Even in invaded or occupied areas' is translated as 'fiú i limistéir faoi ionradh nó faoi fhorghabháil' in Article 18 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962. Looking specifically at 'actual' in the Acts, 'without actual notice of the contravention' is translated as 'gan fógra iarbhír faoin sárú' in s56(4)(b) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, for example, 'such equivalent being calculated according to the cost in the currency of the State of the actual principal, the actual interest or the actual commission and incidental expenses' being translated as 'agus an cóimhéid sin a ríomh de réir chostas na príomhshuime iarbhír, an úis iarbhír nó an choimisiúin agus na gcaiteachas teagmhasach iarbhír ... in airgead reatha an Stáit' in s6(10)(i) of the Irish Telecommunications Investments Limited Act, 1981. 'In an actual or supposed emergency at those premises' is translated as 'in éigeandáil iarbhír nó cheaptha san áitreabh sin' in s4(5) of the Social Welfare (Occupational Injuries) Act, 1966. See the commentary on Article 16.6 for early translations of 'actual'.

a mheasfaid The synthetic form of the third person plural, future tense, of 'meas'; this would generally be replaced today by 'a mheasfaidh siad' – see the commentary on Article 14.5.1<sup>o</sup> regarding the synthetic and analytic forms of the verb in the Constitution. Though less obvious in the synthetic form, note the use of a third person, plural, inflection in referring to the collective singular noun, 'an Rialtas'; according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú this accords with normal Irish usage.

Ó Dónaill translates the verb 'meas' as 'estimate, value, judge; deem, consider', Dinneen including '(I) judge, consider, dwell upon, think, suppose' among the senses of 'measaim' and DIL translating 'mes(s)aid' as 'examines, judges, appraises', with the secondary sense of 'reckons, esteem, counts (as)'. The noun 'mes(s)', upon which this verb is based, is translated principally as 'the act of judging; a judgement, opinion' in DIL, where '[is] é a mess limm' ('this is my opinion about it') is cited from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian.

'The Minister may ... do all such things as he may consider necessary for carrying on such fishery as a commercial undertaking' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire ... gach ní a dhéanamh a mheasfaidh sé is gá chun an t-iascach sin a sheoladh mar ghnóthas trádála' in s60(1) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'may engage such consultants or advisors as it may consider necessary for the performance of its functions' being translated as 'féadfaidh sé cibé sainchomhairleoirí nó comhairleoirí a fhrúiliú a mheasfaidh sé is gá lena fheidhmeanna a chomhlíonadh' in s14(f) of the First Schedule to the National Institute for Higher Education, Dublin, Act, 1980. In s4(1) of the Censorship of Films Act, 1923, 'The Minister shall appoint such persons to be officers of the Official Censor ... as he may consider necessary for the purposes of this Act' is translated as 'Ceapfidh an t-Aire chun bheith ina n-oifighigh don Scrúdóir Oifigiúil ... pé daoine is dó leis is gá chun crícheanna an Achta so'.

a chosaint 'Cosaint' is the verbal noun of 'cosain', translated as 'defend, protect' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'an tír a chosaint, to defend the country'. 'Cosnaim' is translated as 'I defend' in Téarmaí Dlí and Dinneen translates 'cosnaim' as 'I defend, protect from (ar)'. The earlier 'con-sní' is translated as 'contends; contests, strives for, wins, gains' in DIL, only later did it also have the sense of 'defends' and 'costs', the two main senses of 'cosain' today. See the commentary on Article 40.3.1<sup>o</sup> where this verb expresses 'defend'. Note that 'to protect patrol from surprise attack' is translated as 'patról a chaomhnú ar ionsaí gan choinne' in Téarmaí Mileata, 'protection in nuclear warfare' being translated as 'caomhnú i gcogaíocht eithneach'. 'Protected transaction' is translated as 'idirbheart tearmainn' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'protection from process' being translated as 'tearmann ó phróis'.

'An order for the protection of the family home or any moneys realised from the conveyance of any interest in the family home' is translated as 'ordú chun caomhnú a dhéanamh ar áras an teaghlaigh nó ar aon airgead a réadaíodh as tiolacadh aon leasa san áras teaghlaigh' in s11(c) of the Judicial Separation and Family Law Reform Act, 1989. 'Under the terms of Article 59 of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms' is translated as 'faoi théarmaí Airteagal 59 den Choinbhinsiún chun Cearta an Duine agus Saoirsí Bunúsacha a Chaomhnú' in the Preamble to the Fourth Protocol in the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, this Convention being styled ‘an Coinbhinsiún Eorpach chun Cearta an Duine agus Saoirsí Bunúsacha a Chosaint’ in s20(a) of the Finance Act, 1973, ‘The Convention on the Physical Protection of Nuclear Material’ being styled ‘an Coinbhinsiún um Chosaint Fhisiceach Ábhair Núicléach’ in the Long Title of the Radiological Protection Act, 1991. Finally, in s20(3) of the Sugar Manufacture Act, 1933, ‘require the Company to do all such things in relation to such works as he may think necessary for the protection of the public’ is translated as ‘a cheangal ar an gCuideachtain gach ní do dhéanamh maidir leis na hoibreacha san is dóich leis is gá chun cosanta na poblíochta’. Note that ‘the defence of the State’ is translated as ‘cosaint an Stáit’ in the Defence Act, 1954, which Act is cited in Irish as ‘an tAcht Cosanta, 1954’.

Looking at early Acts regarding ‘protect’, ‘to protect its official documents ... and to protect itself and its members against any person or persons interfering with ... its members in the exercise of their duties’ is translated as ‘a scribhinní oifigiúla ... do chosaint agus é féin agus a bhail do chosaint ar aon duine no daoine a bhainfidh le n-a baill ... le linn dóibh a ndualgaisí do chó-líona’ in Article 20 of the 1922 Constitution. In s1(3) of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1923, ‘for the purposes of any and every power authority immunity and protection given by law to the Under-Sheriff’ is translated as ‘chun crícheanna aon cheann agus gach ceann de sna comhachtanna, údaráis, saoirsí agus caomhnaisí dá dtugann an dlí don bhFo-Shirriamh’, ‘assists, encourages, harbours or protects any person’ being translated as ‘cabhair, misneach, coimirce no caomhaint do thabhairt d’éinne’ in s3(b) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925, ‘na caomhaintí agus na saoirsí céanna’ translating ‘the like protections and immunities’ in s25(4) of the Public Safety Act, 1927. Finally, ‘a tree which is not necessary for the ornament or protection of the holding on which it stands’ is translated as ‘crann nach gá chun ornáidithe ná chun dídine an ghabháltais ar a bhfuil sé ina sheasamh’ in s7(5)(d) of the Forestry Act, 1928.

a thionól ‘Tionól’ is the verbal noun of ‘tionóil’, translated as ‘collect, gather; convene, assemble; muster’ in Ó Dónaill, who cites ‘cruinniú, dáil, a thionól, to convene a meeting, an assembly’. ‘Tionól neamhdhleathach’ is translated as ‘unlawful assembly’ in Téarmaí Dlí. Dinneen translates ‘tionólaím’ as ‘I gather, collect, assemble, convene’. ‘Do-inóla’ is translated as ‘gathers, collects; (of arms) musters, assembles’ in DIL, where ‘ara chind tinolsat dail’ (‘dail’ = Modern Irish ‘dail’) is cited from Saltair na Rann, composed around the year 1000. See the commentary on Articles 15.11.3° and 22.2.2°.

In s4(5) of the Defence Act, 1954, ‘If at the time an order is made under this section, either House of the Oireachtas stands adjourned, that House shall be summoned to meet as soon as conveniently may be’ is translated as ‘Más rud é, an tráth a déanfar ordú faoin alt seo, go mbeidh ceachtar Teach den Oireachtas curtha ar atráth, comórfar an Teach sin a luaithe is caothúil’. ‘As and from the day on which the Oireachtas is summoned to meet next after such general election’ is translated as ‘an lá agus ón lá gairmfear an tOireachtas chun teacht le chéile tar éis an toghacháin ghenerálta san’.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú finds ‘a thionól’ sufficient and remarks on ‘a ghairm chun tionól’ in an earlier draft that as ‘tionól’ would be understood simply as a noun rather than a verbal noun, it would be in the genitive following ‘chun’, rather than uninflected as a verbal noun following ‘chun’.

chomh luath agus is féidir é ‘And shall be transmitted free of charge by the earliest practicable post’ is translated as ‘agus seolfar ar aghaidh é in aisce leis an bpost is luaithe is féidir’ in s28(3) of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977. In s1(b) of Article XVI in the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, 1957, ‘Simultaneously with any decision to suspend the operation of any of the foregoing provisions, the Executive Directors shall call a meeting of the Board of Governors for the earliest practicable date’ is translated as ‘Nuair a cinnfear aon cheann de na forála sin thuas d’fhionraí, déanfaidh na Stiúrthóirí Feidhmiúcháin, san am chéanna, cruinniú den Bhord Rialtóirí a ghairm le tionól, an dáta is luaithe is féidir’. Note, finally, that ‘at the earliest within two months’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as ‘ar an gcuid is luaidhe dhe laistigh de dhá mhí’ in translations for the Department of Fisheries.

ní foláir See commentary on Article 11.

Standardised Irish text

Ach féadfaidh an Rialtas, i gcás ionraidh, aon ní a dhéanamh a mheasfaidh siad a bheith riachtanach chun an Stát a chosaint, agus mura mbeidh Dáil Éireann ina suí ní foláir í a thionól chomh luath agus is féidir é.

Direct translation

I gcás ionraidh iarbhír, áfach, féadfaidh an Rialtas cibé bearta a mheasfaidh siad is gá a dhéanamh chun an Stát a chosaint, agus déanfar Dáil Éireann, mura mbeidh sí ina suí, a ghairm chun tionóil<sup>1</sup> a luaithe is féidir.

Variant

1 ‘tionól’

ARTICLE 28.3.3° AIRTEAGAL 28.3.3°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní cead aon ní dá bhfuil sa Bhunreacht seo a agairt chun aon dlí dá n-achtaíonn an tOireachtas a chur ó bhail má luaitear ann gur dlí é chun slándáil an phobail a chur in áirithe agus chun an Stát a chaomhnú in aimsir chogaidh nó ceannairce faoi arm, ná chun aon ghníomh dá ndéantar nó a bheireann le tuiscint gur gníomh é a dhéantar in aimsir chogaidh nó ceannairce faoi arm de bhun aon dlí den sórt sin, a chur ar neamhní. San fho-alt seo, foláíonn “aimsir chogaidh” tráth a bheidh coinbhleacht faoi arm ar siúl nach mbeidh an Stát páirteach ann ach go mbeidh beartaithe ag gach Teach den Oireachtas ina thaobh le rún go bhfuil ann, de dheasca na choinbhleachta sin faoi arm, staid phráinne náisiúnta a dhéanann difear do bhonn beatha an Stáit agus foláíonn “aimsir chogaidh nó ceannairce faoi arm” an tréimhse aimsire sin a bheidh idir an tráth a chuirfear deireadh le haon chogadh, nó le haon choinbhleacht faoi arm den sórt sin réamhráite, nó le ceannairc faoi arm agus an tráth a bheartóidh gach Teach den Oireachtas le rún nach ann a thuilleadh don staid phráinne náisiúnta arbh é an cogadh sin, nó an coinbhleacht sin faoi arm, nó an cheannairc sin faoi arm deara é.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is not permitted to plead anything that is in this Constitution to invalidate any law which the Oireachtas enacts if it is stated in it that it is a law to ensure the security of the people and to preserve the State in time of war or armed revolt, nor to nullify any act which is done or which gives to understand that it is an act done in time of war or armed revolt in pursuance of any such law. In this subsection, “time of war” covers a time when armed conflict in which the State is not participating will be in progress but that each House of the Oireachtas will have decided by resolution in regards to it that, because of that armed conflict, a state of national emergency exists which makes a difference to the basis of the life of the State and “time of war or armed revolt” covers that period of time which there will be between the time any war, or any armed conflict of the aforementioned kind, or armed revolt is put to an end and the time that each House of the Oireachtas decides by resolution that the state of national emergency which that war, or that armed conflict, or that armed revolt caused, no longer exists.

ENGLISH TEXT

Nothing in this Constitution shall be invoked to invalidate any law enacted by the Oireachtas which is expressed to be for the purpose of securing the public safety and the preservation of the State in time of war or armed rebellion, or to nullify any act done or purporting to be done in time of war or armed rebellion in pursuance of any such law. In this sub-section “time of war” includes a time when there is taking place an armed conflict in which the State is not a participant but in respect of which each of the Houses of the Oireachtas shall have resolved that, arising out of such armed conflict, a national emergency exists affecting the vital interests of the State and “time of war or armed rebellion” includes such time after the termination of any war, or of any such armed conflict as aforesaid, or of an armed rebellion, as may elapse until each of the Houses of the Oireachtas shall have resolved that the national emergency occasioned by such war, armed conflict, or armed rebellion has ceased to exist.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘A national emergency’ is rendered in the Irish text as ‘staid phráinne náisiúnta’ (‘a national state of emergency’ or ‘a state of national emergency’), with ‘exigency’/ ‘urgency’ being the general sense of ‘práinn’, as against ‘éigeandáil’, which today generally translates ‘emergency’.
- 2 ‘The vital interests of the State’ is rendered as ‘bonn beatha an Stáit’ (‘the basis of the life of the State’) in the Irish text.
- 3 ‘The public safety’ is expressed as ‘slándáil an phobail’ (‘[the] security of the people’) in the Irish text.

- 4 ‘Time’ is variously rendered throughout the Irish text as ‘aimsir’, ‘tréimhse aimsire’ and ‘tráth’.
- 5 ‘Any law ... which is expressed to be for the purpose of’ is expressed as ‘aon dlí ... má luaitear ann gur dlí é chun’ (‘any law ... if it is expressed in it that it is a law for the purpose of’) in the Irish text.
- 6 ‘Termination’ is rendered by ‘deireadh a chur le’ (‘putting an end to’) in the Irish text, with ‘such time after the termination of any war ... as may elapse until each of the Houses of the Oireachtas shall have resolved’ being rendered as ‘an tréimhse aimsire sin a bheidh idir an tráth a chuirfear deireadh le haon chogadh ... agus an tráth a bheartóidh gach Teach den Oireachtas le rún’ (‘that period of time that will be between the time an end is put to any war ... and the time each House of the Oireachtas will decide by resolution’) in the Irish text, with a comma following ‘of an armed rebellion’ (before ‘as may elapse’) in the English text alone.
- 7 ‘Securing’ is expressed in the Irish text by ‘a chur in áirithe’, a phrase generally used today in the sense of ‘reserving’, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 8 ‘Any act ... purporting to be done’ is expressed as ‘aon ghníomh ... a bheireann le tuiscint gur gníomh é a dhéantar’ (‘any act ... which gives to understand that it is an act which is done’) in the Irish text; ‘purport’ is translated as ‘airbheartaigh’ in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 9 ‘Resolve’ is rendered by ‘beartaigh le rún’ (‘decide by resolution’) in the Irish text.
- 10 ‘Arising out of’ is rendered as ‘de dheasca’ (‘because of’) in the Irish text.
- 11 ‘In which the State is not a participant’ is rendered as ‘nach mbeidh an Stát páirteach ann’ (‘in which the State is not / will not be participating’) in the Irish text.
- 12 ‘Affecting’ is rendered as ‘a dhéanann difear do’ (‘which makes a difference to’) in the Irish text.
- 13 ‘Nothing shall ...’ is expressed as ‘Ní cead’ (‘It is not permitted’) in the Irish text, a phrase we have seen in the Irish text of some earlier Articles.
- 14 ‘Has ceased to exist’ is rendered as ‘nach ann a thuilleadh’ (‘no longer there’ / ‘no longer exists’) in the Irish text.

Note that the original subsection did not even contain the whole of the first sentence above, the words ‘in aimsir chogaidh nó ceannairc fá arm’ and ‘in time of war or armed rebellion’ being inserted respectively before ‘do bhun aon dlíghidh’ and ‘in pursuance of any such law’ by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941. The second sentence, down to ‘the vital interests of the State’, was added by the First Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1939. The corresponding Irish text, not having been prepared when this Amendment was passed, was added to the Constitution by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941 – when the remainder of the subsection was added to both Irish and English texts. The published copy of the First Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1939, does, however, include the Irish text.

Note also that Article 6 of the 1922 Constitution concludes as follows:

Provided, however, that nothing in this Article shall be invoked to prohibit, control or interfere with any act of the military forces of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) during the existence of a state of war or armed rebellion. Ar choiníoll, ámh le linn chogaidh no rebiliúntachta armtha ná gairmfear éinní dá bhfuil san Airtíogal so chun aon ghníomh dá ndéanfaidh fórsaí armtha airm Shaorstáit Éireann do chosg, do smachtú ná do thoirmeasg.

Commentary

a chur ó bhail 'Validity' is given as one of the senses of 'bail' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'gan bhail' as 'invalid, void'. Dinneen gives Donlevy's Irish Catechism (1742) as the source of his citation 'gan bhail, void, ineffective (of a sacrament)'. DIL cites 'bídh a bpósadh ar bhail' ('valid') from Ó Heoghusa's An Teagasg Críosaíochta (1611).

In s134(3) of the Central Bank Act, 1989, 'Provided that failure to comply with this subsection shall not invalidate a direction duly given ... under this section' is translated as 'Ar choinníoll nach gcuirfear ó bhail ordachán a thabharfar go cuí ... faoin alt seo, de bharr mainneachtana déanamh de réir an fho-ailt seo'. In s76 of the Land Act, 1923, 'but such annulments shall not prejudice or invalidate any matter or thing previously done under such Rules of Court' is translated as 'ach ní dhéanfaidh an nea-mbríochaint sin díth dleathachta ná dochar d'aon rud ná einní a dineadh roimhe sin fé sna Rialacha Cúirte sin'. In s2(2) of the Third Schedule to the Health Act, 1970, 'A dissolution under section 34 shall not invalidate or affect any paying order' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfaidh discaoileadh faoi alt 34 neamhbhailí aon ordú íoca ... ná ní dhéanfaidh sé difear d'aon ordú íoca', while in s13 of the Seanad Electoral (Panel Members) Act, 1954, 'the fact that a candidate has ... died or become disqualified for membership of Seanad Éireann shall not invalidate or prejudice the nomination of the candidate' is translated as 'má gheibheann iarrthóir bás nó má thagann faoi dhícháilíocht chun bheith ina chomhalta de Sheanad Éireann ... ní bheidh sin ina thrúig neamhbhailíochta ná dochair d'ainmniúchán an iarrthóra'. See further the commentary on Article 15.4.2<sup>o</sup> where 'gan bhail' expresses 'invalid'.

slándáil This headword is translated as 'security' in Ó Dónaill; it does not seem to be given as a headword in Dinneen, where 'safety, security, sanction, indemnity, guarantee, surety' are given as the principal senses of the noun 'slán', on which form 'slándáil' is based. 'Slánad', 'slánachas', 'sláinte', 'slánaigeacht' and 'sláint(ig)echt' are commonly used in the Middle and Early Modern Irish period for 'legal protection, guarantee, security', according to Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 141. The principal sense of the adjective 'slán' is 'whole, sound, unimpaired, healthy, safe' according to DIL, where 'am slán' ('I am whole') is cited from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian. See further the commentary on Article 45.2.v.

In s4 of the Third Schedule to the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1990, 'The proposed development would endanger public safety by reason of traffic hazard' is translated as 'Go gcuirfeadh an fhorbairt bheartaithe sábháilteacht an phobail i mbaol mar gheall ar chontúirt tráchta', with 'gan sábháilteacht an phobail ná an tsíocháin a chur i mbaol' translating 'without danger to the public safety or the peace' in s6(2) of the Firearms and Offensive Weapons Act, 1990. Following the current

Article, the Long Title of the Emergency Powers Act, 1976 ('An tAcht Cumhachtaí Práinne, 1976') reads as follows:

An Act for the purpose of securing the public safety and the preservation of the State in time of armed conflict in respect of which each of the Houses of the Oireachtas has adopted a resolution .... Acht chun slándáil an phobail a chur in áirithe agus chun an Stát a chaomhnú in aimsir choinbhleachta faoi arm a ndearna gach Teach den Oireachtas rún a ghlacadh ina thaobh.

'Chun an tsándáil phoiblí a chaomhaint' translates 'for securing the public safety' in the Margin Title of s276 of the Defence Act, 1954. 'The Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923' is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht chun Cosanta na Puiblíochta (Comhachta Ócáideacha), 1923'. The Long Title reads as follows:

An Act to provide for the preservation of public safety and the protection of person and property and for matters connected therewith or arising out of the present emergency. Acht chun forálacha do dhéanamh chun an phuiblíocht agus pearsa agus cuid na ndaoine do chosaint agus i gcóir nithe eile a bhaineas leis sin no a thioctfidh de bharr na hócáide atá ann fé láthair.

In s15, 'securing the public safety and restoring order throughout the country' is translated as 'an tsábháilteacht phuiblí do chosaint agus ordathacht do thabhairt thar n-ais arís ar fuaid na tíre'. Finally, 'coinneáil ó bhaol' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'safety' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1927, p. 505.

a chur in áirithe 'I n-áirithe' is translated as 'engaged, assured' in Dinneen, who translates 'cuirim i n-áirithe' as 'I engage, secure'. Ó Dónaill translates 'in áirithe' as 'reserved, engaged', citing 'suíochán a chur in áirithe, to book a seat' and 'culaith a chur in áirithe, to bespeak a suit', translating 'd'áirithe, in áirithe' as 'allotted, certain', citing 'níl a fhios ag duine cad é atá in áirithe dó, no man knows what is in store for him' and 'tá tú in áirithe do bhuaile, you are in for a hiding'. DIL cites 'go mbídh i n-áirithe a bhfuasgailte' ('so that they are assured of being released') from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death, the principal sense of the adjective 'áirithe' in DIL being 'certain, sure', with 'assurance, certainty, safe course' being the principal meaning of the noun. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'I secure' as 'cuirim ó bhaol, ar láimh shábhála', translating 'to secure someone from something' as 'duine a chaomhnú ar rud'. See also the commentary on Article 15.10, where 'cuir in áirithe' expresses 'ensure', and the commentary on Article 38.3.1<sup>o</sup> where 'secure' is expressed by the phrase 'cuir i bhfeidhm'.

'For the purpose of securing the safety of a vessel, aircraft or marine structure or of saving life' is translated as 'chun sábháilteacht soithigh, aerárthaigh nó muir-dhéanmhas a áirithiú nó chun beo daoine a shábháil' in s3(a) of Schedule Two of the Dumping at Sea Act, 1981, for example, with 'chun sábháilteacht na suiteála amach ón gcósta ... a áirithiú' translating 'for securing the safety of the offshore installation' in s35(3) of the Safety, Health and Welfare (Offshore Installations) Act, 1987.

Looking at 'secure' in early Acts, 'the mortgagee may apportion the principal money secured by the mortgage between such dwelling-houses and such other land' is translated as 'féadfadh an morgáistidhe colann an airgid a cuireadh in áirithe leis an morgáiste do roinnt ar na tithe comhnaithe sin agus ar an talamh eile' in s3(8) of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923. In s7(1) of the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1923, 'pay ... such contributions ... as are necessary to secure that there shall be not less than twelve contributions to the credit of such person' is translated as 'pé sintiúisí is gá chun deimhin do dhéanamh de ná beidh fé bhun dhá shintiús déag curtha chun creidiúna don duine sin'. Finally, 'The said purchase price ... shall be secured by a first mortgage' is translated as 'Urrófar an praghas ceannuigh sin ... le céad-mhorgáiste' in s6 of the First Schedule of the Creamery Act, 1928.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'a chosaint', 'a dhaingniú' or 'a dheimhniú'.

a chaomhnú 'Caomhnú' is the verbal noun of 'caomhnaigh', translated as 'cherish; preserve, conserve, protect' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'd'anam a chaomhnú, to preserve one's life, soul'. Dinneen translates 'caomhnaim' as 'I preserve, protect, keep, maintain, cherish'. 'Cáemnaid' is translated in DIL as 'protects, preserves, keeps, maintains', the first example of which cited there comes from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death, 'caomhantair glóir na nGaoidhiol' being cited from the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards' and 'an taon Gh. ... as fear do chaomhain 7 do chosain a thír' being cited from the Annals of the Four Masters. 'Cáemnaid' is based on 'cáemna', which is translated as 'act of protecting, keeping' in DIL. See further the commentary on Article 41.1.2°.

'Committed in a manner prejudicial to the safety or preservation of the State' is translated as 'ar dhóigh ba dhochar do shlándáil nó caomhnú an Stáit' in s29(1)(e) of the Criminal Procedures Act, 1967, with the Title of Part III of the Official Secrets Act, 1963, 'Communication of information to the prejudice of the safety or preservation of the State' being translated as 'Eolas a pháirtíú chun dochair do shlándáil nó caomhnú an Stáit'. The Long Title of the Public Safety Act, 1927, reads as follows:

An Act to make further and better provision for the maintenance and preservation of the State and the public safety. Acht chun a thuille socruithe agus chun socrú níos fearr do dhéanamh chun an Stát agus an phuiblíocht do chimeád suas agus do choinneáil ó bhaol.

See the commentary on Articles 24.1 (where 'cosain' expresses 'preserve') and 38.3.1° for early translations of 'preserve'/'preservation', 'cimeád suas' being cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'preservation (of State)' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1927, p. 505.

in aimsir chogaidh nó ceannairce faoi arm Dinneen s.v. 'aimsear', cites 'tá sé i n-aimsir codalta, it is bed-time', Ó Dónaill citing 'in aimsir na bhFiann, in the time of the Fianna' and 'in aimsir a bháis, at the time of his death'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'sowing time' as 'aimsir na curadóireachta'. DIL cites 'robói isinchaithir isind aimsir sin' ('that was in the city at that time') from the eighteenth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles s.v. 'aimser', translated principally as 'point of time', with 'period of time, span, spell', 'period, age, epoch' and

'season (of year), weather' being given as secondary senses.

'That genocide, whether committed in time of peace or in time of war, is a crime under international law' is translated as 'gur coir faoin dlí idirnáisiúnta cinedhióthú, cibé acu le linn síochána nó le linn cogaidh a dhéantar é' in Article 1 of the Schedule to the Genocide Act, 1973. In the Long Title of the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962, 'the protection of civilian persons in time of war' is translated as 'cosant daoine sibhialta in aimsir chogaidh', this phrase being translated as 'caomhaint daoine sibhialta le linn cogaidh' in the Long Title of the Prisoners of War and Enemy Aliens Act, 1956. 'The furnishing of volunteer aid to the sick and wounded of armies in time of war' is translated as 'cabhair shaoirseánach do thabhairt d'othair agus do chréachtaigh arm in aimsir chogaidh' in s4(a) of the Spanish Civil War (Non-Intervention) Act, 1937. Finally, in Article 70 of the 1922 Constitution, 'save in time of war or armed rebellion' is translated as 'ach in aimsir chogaidh no reibiliúntachta armtha', 'war period' being translated as 'tréimhse cogaidh' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1924, p. 651.

'Ceannairc faoi arm' is translated as 'armed rebellion' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'ceannairc' alone is translated as 'sedition', with 'ceannairceach' being translated as 'seditious'. Ó Dónaill translates 'ceannairc' as 'strife; mutiny, revolt', citing 'ag cumadh ceannairce, plotting rebellion'. Dinneen translates 'ceannairc' as 'strife, division; a meeting; rebellion, conspiracy'. DIL cites 'fri cocad 7 cennairc' from Leabhar Breac, compiled in 1411 or earlier, with no examples of this headword 'cennairc(e)', translated there as 'strife, contention', being cited from the earlier sources. 'Cennairc' may be a compound of 'cenn' ('head') and 'airc' ('difficulty, strait'), according to DIL.

'Faoi arm' is translated as 'under arms' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'faoi arm agus éide, in arm is in éide, armed and equipped'. Note that 'armed conflict' is translated as 'coimhlint armtha' in Téarmaí Mileata, rather than 'coimbhleacht faoi arm', as in the present subsection. DIL cites 'ba bes lasna geinti a n-adnagal fo n-armaib' (i.e. it was customary for the pagans to bury them under arms/armed) from the Tripartite Life of Patrick, composed at the end of the ninth or beginning of the tenth century.

Looking at the early Acts, in Article 70 of the 1922 Constitution, 'save in time of war, or armed rebellion' is translated as 'ach in aimsir chogaidh no reibiliúntachta armtha'. 'And to this end have created a state of rebellion' is translated as 'agus chun na críche sin gur chruthuodar staid rebeliúntachta' in the Preamble to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923, where 'for the purpose of suppressing such rebellion' is translated as 'chun deire do chur leis an rebeliúntacht san'. 'Armed rebels' is translated as '(gach) rebeliúnach armtha' in s3(16) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. See further the commentary on Article 40.4.6°.

a bheireann le tuiscint 'A bheireann' is a variant form of the present tense, third person singular, of 'tabhair'; this would be replaced by 'a thugann' according to the official standard – see the commentary on Article 12.1. See the commentary on Article 13.8.1° regarding the phrase 'a bheireann le tuiscint'.

'Every act or thing ... done or purported to be done by one Revenue Commissioner' is translated as 'Gach gníomh no ní ... do rinne no do tugadh le tuiscint do rinne Coimisinéir Ioncuim amháin' in s35(3) of the Finance Act, 1934. In s90(2) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, 'This section applies to any statement made to the auditors of a society (whether orally or in writing) which conveys, or purports to convey, any information or explanation' is translated as 'Baineann an t-alt seo le haon ráiteas a dhéanfar le hiniúchóirí cumainn (de bhéal nó i scríbhinn) agus a thugann, nó a airbheartaíonn go dtugann sé, aon fhaisnéis nó míniú'. See the commentary on Article 13.8.1<sup>o</sup> regarding 'purport' in early Acts and note that 'without proof of the signature or authority of the person by whom the same purports to have been issued' is translated as 'gan cruthúnas ar shighniú ná ar údarás an té a thabharfa sí le tuiscint a thug amach í' in s12(6) of the Arterial Drainage (Minor Schemes) Act, 1928. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú favours 'a mhaifidh' or some such verb to 'a airbheartóidh' in the direct translation below.

a chur ar neamhní 'Ar neamhní' is translated as 'null; void (adjective)' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Rud a chur ar neamhní' is translated as 'to bring something to nought; to nullify something' in Ó Dónaill. 'Cuirim ar neamh-nídh' is translated as 'I annihilate, cancel' in Dinneen. Old Irish 'nephní' is a compound of 'nem-' and 'ní' ('thing'), glossing Latin 'nihil' in the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian, 'ní du nephní' glossing 'non de nihilo' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. DIL cites 'cuirithir for neimní', in the sense of 'brings to nought', from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster ('curid a nert ar nephní').

'I nullify' is translated as 'neamhním' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Unless it is satisfied that the arbitration agreement is null and void' is translated as 'mura deimhin léi go bhfuil an comhaontú eadrána ar neamhní' in s5(1) of the Arbitration Act, 1980. In s5(1) of the Military Service Pensions Act, 1924, 'every agreement to assign or charge (any military service pension under this Act) shall ... be null and void' is translated as 'gach có-aontú chun é shanna no é chur fé mhúirear, beid gan brí gan éifeacht'. 'Such Rules of Court shall be annulled' is translated as 'beidh na Rialacha Cúirte sin ar nea-mbrí' in s76 of the Land Act, 1923, 'pass a resolution annulling such Rules of Court' being translated as 'rún do rith chun na Rialacha Cúirte sin do chur ar nea-mbrí'. Finally, 'declaration of nullity of marriage' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'faisnéis go raibh an pósa gan brí' in an early official report.

coinbhleacht This headword is translated as 'conflict' in Ó Dónaill, 'coinbhliocht' being cited as a variant. 'Coinbhliocht' is translated as 'conflict' in Dinneen. Whereas 'coinbhliocht' is masculine in Dinneen, 'coinbhleacht' is feminine in Ó Dónaill, i.e. nominative singular 'an choinbhleacht' and genitive singular 'na coinbhleachta' as against 'an coinbhleacht' and 'de dheasca an choinbhleachta' in the present subsection. 'Conblicht' comes from Latin 'conflictus' and is translated as 'conflict, battle, fight' in DIL, no example of which is cited from the earlier sources. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'coinbhleacht' and the native 'coimhlint' (< 'coimhling') may have affected one another in grammar and meaning. Professor Ó Murchú also questions whether Ó Dónaill is mistaken as regards the gender of this word as, as far as Máirtín Ó Murchú is aware, it is not found in the spoken language and it is masculine in the literary language.

'Armed conflict' is translated as 'coimhlint armtha' in Téarmaí Mileata. 'Coinbhliocht faoi airm', rather than 'faoi arm', is generally found in the Acts. 'An act of war or an armed conflict' is translated as 'gníomh cogaidh nó coinbhleacht faoi arm' in s3(c) of Article IV of Part IV of the First Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1988, with 'fiú amháin i gcás coinbhleacht faoi airm' translating 'even in case of armed conflict' in s2 of Article 39 of the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967. Finally, in s2 of the Public Hospitals (Amendment) (No. 2) Act, 1939, 'the expression "the present European war" means the armed conflict which at the passing of this Act, is being waged between certain European powers' is translated as 'cialluíonn an abairt "an cogadh so san Eoraip" an coinbhliocht fé airm atá, le linn an Acht so do rith, á thabhairt idir comhachta Eorpacha áirithe'.

páirteach This headword is translated as 'participating, sharing' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'bheith páirteach le duine i rud, to participate, share with someone in something'. Dinneen translates 'bí páirteach (linn)' as 'join in, take a hand (with us), also be partial to us'. 'Páirtech', translated as 'participant, sharing' in DIL, is based on 'pairt', which comes from Latin 'pars, part-'. See the commentary on Article 12.4.3<sup>o</sup>, where this adjective expresses 'subscribe', and on Article 29.5.1<sup>o</sup>.

In s3(1) of the Pyramid Selling Act, 1980, 'If any person who is a participant in a scheme, or has applied or been invited to become a participant in a scheme' is translated as 'I gcás aon duine is rannpháirtí i scéim nó a rinne iarratas nó a fuair cuireadh chun bheith ina rannpháirtí i scéim'. In Article XXI(c) of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements (Amendment) Act, 1977, 'The Board of Governors shall decide whether a Governor appointed by a member that is not a participant shall be entitled to vote' is translated as 'Cinnfidh an Bord Rialtóirí an mbeidh Rialtóir a ceapadh ag comhalta nach rannpháirtí i dteideal vótáil'. 'A war in which the State is not a participant' is translated as 'cogadh nach bhfuil an Stát páirteach ann' in s1(2) of the Prisoners of War and Enemy Aliens Act, 1956.

beartaithe Past participle of 'beartaigh', one of the senses of which is given as 'plan, contrive; consider' in Ó Dónaill, 'decide' being another sense, with 'ar' ('upon'). Dinneen includes 'I say, pronounce an opinion; I think, suggest, estimate' among the senses of 'beartaim', with 'beartuighim' given as a variant. 'Brandishes, flourishes; shakes, tosses; makes quake' was the sense of the earlier 'bertaigid(ir)'/ 'bertaid' – the third person plural, perfect tense, 'ro bertaignset', glosses Latin '(tela) uibrauerunt' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, and we find 'con crothsat 7 con bertsat in talmain' ('caused the ground to shake and quake'), along with 'ram-bertaign' ('he shook himself [in his pleasure]'), in the version of the Táin in the twelfth-century Book of Leinster, for example. 'Rud a bheartú i do lámh, to poise something in one's hand for throwing', cited by Ó Dónaill, illustrates the development in sense from that found in Old Irish to the principal sense of 'beartaigh' in Modern Irish, 'plan, consider' and then 'decide'.

'A society, in order to ... undertake to fulfil the engagements of another society, must resolve to do so by a special resolution' is translated as 'Ni mór do chumann, d'fhonn

... a ghealladh gealltanais chumainn eile a chomhall, a shocrú sin a dhéanamh trí rún speisialta' in s96(2) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s268(2) of the Companies Act, 1963, 'The creditors may ... resolve that all or any of the persons so appointed by the company ought not to be members of the committee of inspection' is translated as 'Féadfaidh na creidiúnaithe ... a chinneadh le rún nach ceart gach duine nó aon duine de na daoine a cheapfaidh an chuideachta amhlaidh bheith ar an gcoiste iniúchta'. In s5(2) of the Drainage Maintenance Act, 1924, 'the county council may resolve that such cost and moneys shall ... be levied as an urban charge' is translated as 'féadfidh an chomhairle contae rún do rith go ndéanfar ... an costas agus an t-airgead san do ghearra mar mhuirear baile'. Finally, looking at the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann, 'Unless it shall otherwise resolve, the Dáil shall meet every Tuesday at 2.30 p.m.' is translated as 'Mura mbeartóidh sí a mhalairt le rún, tiocfaidh an Dáil le chéile gach Máirt ar 2.30 p.m.'

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'beartú' relates to performing some deed, i.e. the primary meaning of English 'resolve', but that it has not this sense here, and recommends 'achtaigh', 'aontaigh' or 'cinn' in the direct translation below.

staid phráinne náisiúnta 'Práinn' is translated as 'hurry, rush; urgent need, exigency' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ar uair na práinne, in an exigency, in a time of emergency'. 'Práidhinn' is translated as 'urgency, a difficulty, need; trepidation, hurry, flurry, rush' in Dinneen. Though apparently long established as a borrowing of Old Norse 'bráðung', as Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú notes, instances in the literary record are relatively late, Stair Éamuinn Uí Chléirigh by Seán Ó Neachtain (1655-1728) providing the only two citations (apart from 'práidhinn, affliction' in the Glossary in the manuscript Egerton 158) given in DIL, where this headword is translated as 'urgency, difficulty, strait', a seventeenth-century translation of 1 Samuel xx. 28, providing the only citation of 'práidhinneach' (translated as 'urgent' in DIL), apart again from the Glossary in Egerton 158. See further the commentary on Article 15.8.2°.

Turning to 'staid', this headword is translated as 'state, condition' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'staid na tíre, the state of the country', with Dinneen translating 'staid' a 'state, status or condition'. The earlier 'stait' comes from Latin 'statio' and is translated principally as 'state, condition', 'i stait na nemurchoite' (i.e. in a state of innocence) being cited from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, composed in the second half of the eleventh century.

In s4 of the Defence Act, 1954, 'The Government may ... declare that a state of emergency exists' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an Rialtas ... a dhearbhu éigeandáil a bheith ann'. In s1(1) of the Protection of the Community (Special Powers) Act, 1926, 'the Executive Council may by proclamation declare that a state of national emergency exists' is translated as 'féadfidh an Ard-Chomhairle a fhaisnéis le furógra go bhfuil staid phráinne náisiúnta ann', this English sentence being translated in s1(1) of the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1926, as 'féadfidh an Ard-Chomhairle a fhaisnéis le furógra go bhfuil strus-ócáid náisiúnta ann'. We have seen in the commentary on Article 15.8.2° that 'ócáid dainseura náisiúnta' translates 'national emergency' in the Dáil Order Paper, 1926, p. 363, 'ócáid dainseura náisiúnta' being cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'state of national emergency' in translations for the Executive. Note that 'the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923' is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht chun Cosanta na Puibhlochta (Comhachta Ócáideacha), 1923', 'de bharr na hócáide atá ann fé láthair' translating 'arising out of the present emergency' in the Long Title thereof; note also that 'the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1923' is cited in Irish as 'an t-Acht um Fheidhmiú Dlí (Comhacht Ócáideach), 1923'. Finally, 'arising out of the existence of a state of war or armed rebellion, whether local or general' is translated as 'de bharr staid cogaidh no rebeliúntachta armtha, áitiúil no generálta, a bheith ann' in s1(c) of the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923.

a dhéanann difear do Earlier 'deithbir', Modern Munster 'deifir', some modern forms and the standard spelling 'difear', as here, appear to have been influenced by the English 'differ', according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú. 'Difear' is translated as 'difference' in Ó Dónaill who cites 'is beag an difear é, it makes little difference, it matters little'. Dinneen translates 'deifir' as 'a difference, a dispute; conflict', giving 'deifear' as a variant. Both 'difear' and 'deifir' (translated as 'hurry' in Ó Dónaill) come from 'deithbir', an example of which in the sense of 'distinction, difference' is cited in DIL from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster; no example, however, is found in Old Irish, according to DIL.

'A custody or access order or other order on any question affecting the welfare of an infant' is translated as 'ordú coimeáda nó ordú rochtana nó ordú eile ar aon cheist a fhearann ar leas nain' in s11(b) of the Judicial Separation and Family Law Reform Act, 1989. 'Any record or document affecting or relating to the property or affairs of the society' is translated as 'aon taifead nó doiciméad a dhéanann difear do mhaoin nó do ghnóthaí an chumainn nó a bhaineann leo' in s120(3)(a) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s1(3) of the Expiring Laws Continuance Act, 1922, 'Any unrepealed enactments amending or affecting the enactments continued by this Act' is translated as 'aon Achtanna gan aith-ghairm a dhineann leasú no éinní eile ar na hAchtanna a bhuanuítear leis an Acht so'. In Article 74 of the 1922 Constitution, 'Nothing in this Constitution shall affect any liability to pay any tax' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfaidh éinní sa Bhun-reacht so deifir d'aon fhiachas chun aon cháin ... do dhíol'. 'Nothing in this Act shall prejudice or affect any financial judgement given before the passing of this Act' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfaidh éinní san Acht so aon dochar ná cur isteach ar aon bhreithiúntas a tugadh roimh rith an Achta so' in s5 of the Indemnity (British Military) Act, 1923. Finally, in s2(2)(d) of the Barrow Drainage Act, 1927, 'the rated or other occupiers of the several lands ... proposed to be compulsorily acquired ... or otherwise interfered with or affected' is translated as 'na daoine atá ina sealbhairí rátuíthe no eile ar na tailte ..., uile agus fé seach, go moltar iad do thógaint ... no cur isteach ortha no baint leo ar aon tslí eile go héigeanta'. See the commentary on Article 44.2.4° where 'prejudicially affect' is expressed by the phrase 'dochar a dhéanamh do'.

do bhonn beatha 'Base, foundation' is one of the senses of 'bonn' included in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ó bhonn (aníos), from the foundation, ground; radically' and 'an bonn a bhaint ó rud, to undermine something', Dinneen citing 'bhain sé an bonn uaim, he cut the ground from under my feet'. The principal sense of 'bonn' is 'sole', DIL citing 'co tarla a di bond bána fair' ('so that his two white soles were turned upward' [in death]) from Leabhar na hUidhre, written in Clonmacnois c. 1100. Finally, Old Irish 'bethu' is translated principally as 'life, existence' in DIL, where 'bethu suthin' (i.e. eternal life) is cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

The 'Vital Statistics and Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration Act, 1952' is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht um Staidreamh Beatha agus um Chlárú Breitheanna, Bása agus Póstaí, 1952'. In s1(iv) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, 'registration of births, deaths and marriages and vital statistics' is translated as 'clárú beireataisí, básanna agus póstaíochta, agus statistíocht bheatha'. In s2(b) of the Statistics Act, 1926, 'vital, social and educational matters' is translated as 'cúrsaí buaine beatha, cúrsaí saoil na ndaoine, agus cúrsaí oideachais'. 'Or the removal of the engine or other such vital part' is translated as 'nó an t-inneall nó cuid riachtanach eile dá shamhail sin a bheith tugtha aisti' in s3(2) of the Road Traffic Act, 1961.

Turning to 'interests', in s26(5)(b) of the Sea Pollution Act, 1991, "related interests" means the interests of the State and the health and well-being of its citizens' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "leasanna gaolmhara" leasanna an Stáit agus sláinte agus dea-bhail a chuid saoránach'. 'Whenever he is satisfied that the interests of the State or of the public so require' is translated as 'aon uair is deimhin leis gur gá é ar mhaithe le leasanna an Stáit nó an phobail' in s7 of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1988. In s2(a) of Article 9 of the First Schedule to the Data Protection Act, 1988, 'protecting State security, public safety, the monetary interests of the State' is translated as 'slándáil an Stáit, sábháilteacht nó leasanna airgeadaíochta an Stáit a chosaint'.

faoi deara é 'Tú féin faoi deara é' is translated as 'you are the cause of it yourself, you have brought it on yourself' in Ó Dónaill, whose entry, s.v. 'deara', deals exclusively with the phrase 'faoi deara'. Dinneen translates 'fá deara' principally as 'cause, caused', citing 'mo mháthair fé ndeár é, my mother is the cause of it'. This phrase goes back to the Old Irish verb 'fo-fera', which had the general sense of 'prepares, provides, brings about', glossing Latin 'praeparare' in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, for example. In the sense 'causes', 'fo-fera' in relative clauses is commonly used with petrified infix 'd-' even when followed by the object, according to DIL, citing 'ined fodera bás domsa atimne sainemil sin?' ('is what causes death to me that excellent commandment?') from the same eighth-century collection of Glosses. In later language, 'fo-fera' becomes obsolete, only the form 'fodera' continuing in use, (a) 'as a verb in relative sentences with force either of present or preterite, which causes (caused)' or (b), 'the original significance of "fo-dera" (fa deara) being lost, it was regarded as a prepositional phrase and used with another verb' – e.g. 'tabhair faoi deara' ('notice', 'note') in Modern Irish. Finally note that 'é' in 'faoi deara é' refers to the feminine 'staid' (in 'staid phráinne náisiúnta').

'Any injury occasioned by such burning' is translated as 'aon díobháil a bhainfidh mar gheall ar an dó' in s39(5) of the Wildlife Act, 1976, 'all injury occasioned by such burning to any wood' being translated as 'gach díobháil a thioctas den dó sin d'aon choill' in s61(4) of the Forestry Act, 1946, 'gach díobháil do dhin an dógha san d'aon choill' translating 'all injury occasioned by such burning to any wood' in s13(4) of the Forestry Act, 1928. We saw earlier how 'hold office for three years from the expiration of the term of office the expiration of which occasions his election' is translated as 'i seilbh oifige go ceann trí mbliain o bheith caithte don téarma oifige gurb é a bheith caithte fé ndeár a thogha' in s19(3) of the Currency Act, 1927. 'Not to fill the vacancy occasioned by such cessor' is translated as 'gan an folúntas a thioctaidh den scur san do líonadh' in s28(5) of the Central Bank Act, 1942. Finally, 'on account of loss, inconvenience or other injury occasioned by such application' is translated as 'mar gheall ar chailteanas, ar mhoill, ar cheataí no ar dhíobháil eile do tháinig as an iarratas san' in s31(6) of the Town and Regional Planning Act, 1934.

má luaitear ann See the commentary on Article 24.1. 'Luaigh' is translated as 'mention, cite' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'rud a lua, to mention something' and 'níor luaigh tú fianaise ar bith leis, you haven't cited any evidence for it'. 'I mention, speak of, tell' are included in Dinneen among the sense of 'luadhaim'. The original sense of this verb was 'moves'; the verb 'luid' (translated as 'moves', [of birds 'flies'], in DIL), mostly found in archaic passages, was replaced early by 'lúaidid' which, while having the principal sense of 'moves', also has the sense of 'mentions, adverts to; utters, proclaims; discusses', examples of which sense are cited in DIL.

"Confidential" means that which is expressed to be confidential either as regards particular information' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "faoi rún" rud a deirtear a bheith faoi rún ó thaobh faisnéise áirithe' in s33(3) of the Forestry Act, 1988. In s22 of the Agricultural Wages Act, 1936, 'The Minister may by order make regulations in relation to any matter or thing which is expressed to be the subject of regulations under this Act' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire, le hordú, rialachán do dhéanamh i dtaobh éinní no aon ruda adeirtear is abhar do rialachán féin Acht so'. On the other hand, in s64(6) of the Corporate Tax Act, 1976, 'Where a company makes a distribution which is not expressed to be for or in respect of a specified period' is translated as 'I gcás cuideachta do dhéanamh dáileadh nach bhfuil sé sainráite gur do thréimhse shonraithe ná ina leith é', and 'a dividend which is not expressed to be paid for any specified period' is translated as 'aon díbhinn nach mbeidh sainráite í a bheith á híoc in aghaidh tréimhse sonraithe' in s14(6) of the Finance Act, 1950.

See further the commentary on Articles 12.10.1° and 14.5.2° where 'luaigh' respectively expresses 'state' and 'specify'.

nach ann a thuilleadh 'Where the Court is of the opinion that the circumstances which gave rise to the direction have ceased to exist' is translated as 'más dóigh leis an gCúirt nach ann a thuilleadh do na himthosca ba bhun leis an treoir a dhéanamh' in s38(5)(e) of the Central Bank Act, 1989. 'And the Revenue Commissioners are satisfied that abnormal economic conditions have ceased to exist in respect of the commodity' is translated as 'agus gur deimhin leis na Coimisinéirí Ioncuim deireadh do bheith le coinníollacha eacnamaíochta nea-ghnáthacha maidir leis an earra' in s3(6) of the Finance Act, 1942. In s2(1) of the Land Law (Commission) Act, 1923, 'whereby the office of Commissioner of the Irish Land Commission ceased to exist' is translated as 'tré n-ar scuir oifig Choimisinéir Choimisiún Talmhan na hÉireann de bheith ar bith'. 'Provided that such right shall as regards translations into the Irish language cease to exist' is translated as 'ach scuirfidh an ceart san de bheith ann maidir le haistriú go Gaedhilg' in s154(2)(a) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927, 'scur ó bheith ann' being cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'cease to exist' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health.

folaíonn 'Folaím' is translated as 'I include' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill gives 'include' as a secondary sense of 'foláigh', citing 'foláíonn sé iad araon, it includes both of them', the principal sense of 'foláigh' being 'hide, cover, conceal'. Dinneen translates 'foilighim' as 'I hide, cover, conceal'. The earlier form, 'fo-luigi', literally 'lays under', is translated principally as 'covers, hides, conceals' in DIL.

de bhun This phrase is translated as 'in pursuance of; on foot of; pursuant to' in Téarmaí Dlí. DIL cites 'de bhun an ghrádha' ('because of love') from a miscellaneous collection of Classical Irish poetry, Dioghluim Dána, agus 'do bhun t'impidhe' ('through beseeching thee') from the poetry of Aonghus Fionn Ó Dálaigh (c. 1520-1570).

a agairt 'Agairt' is the verbal noun of 'agair', translated principally by Ó Dónaill as 'plead, entreat', with the sense of 'sue' in Jurisprudence; 'agraim' is translated as 'I sue' in Téarmaí Dlí. See the commentary on Article 18.4.3°.

Ní cead Literally, 'it is not permitted' – see the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

Standardised Irish text

Ní cead aon ní dá bhfuil sa Bhunreacht seo a agairt chun aon dlí dá n-achtaíonn an tOireachtas a chur ó bhail má luaitear ann gur dlí é chun slándáil an phobail a chur in áirithe agus chun an Stát a chaomhnú in aimsir chogaidh nó ceannairce faoi arm, ná chun aon ghníomh dá ndéantar nó a thugann le tuiscint gur gníomh é a dhéantar in aimsir chogaidh nó ceannairce faoi arm de bhun aon dlí den sórt sin, a chur ar neamhni. San fho-alt seo, folaíonn "aimsir chogaidh" tráth a bheidh coinbhleacht faoi arm ar siúl nach mbeidh an Stát páirteach ann ach go mbeidh beartaithe ag gach Teach den Oireachtas ina thaobh le rún go bhfuil ann, de dheasca an choinbhleachta sin faoi arm, staid práinne náisiúnta a dhéanann difear do bhonn beatha an Stáit agus folaíonn "aimsir chogaidh nó ceannairce faoi arm" an tréimhse aimsire sin a bheidh idir an tráth a chuirfear deireadh le haon chogadh, nó le haon choinbhleacht faoi arm den sórt sin réamhráite, nó le ceannairce faoi arm agus an tráth a bheartóidh gach Teach den Oireachtas le rún nach ann a thuilleadh don staid práinne náisiúnta arbh é an cogadh sin, nó an coinbhleacht sin faoi arm, nó an cheannairce sin faoi arm faoi deara é.

Direct translation

Ní dhéanfar aon ní sa Bhunreacht seo a agairt chun aon dlí a achtóidh an tOireachtas a chur ó bhail ar dlí é a mbeidh sé sainráite é a bheith chun críche an tsábháilteacht phoiblí a áirithiú<sup>1</sup> agus an Stát a chaomhnú le linn cogaidh<sup>2</sup> nó ceannairce faoi airm, nó chun aon ghníomh a dhéanfar nó a airbheartóidh<sup>3</sup> a bheith ina ghníomh a dhéanfar le linn cogaidh<sup>2</sup> nó ceannairce faoi airm de bhun aon dlí den sórt sin a chur ar neamhni. San fho-alt seo, folaíonn "le linn cogaidh"<sup>4</sup> am a mbeidh coinbhleacht faoi airm ar siúl nach rannpháirtí inti an Stát ach a mbeidh beartaithe ag gach Teach den Oireachtas ina leith, go bhfuil, de dhroim na coinbhleachta<sup>5</sup> sin faoi airm, éigeandáil náisiúnta ann a dhéanann difear do leasanna beatha an Stáit agus folaíonn "le linn cogaidh"<sup>6</sup> nó ceannairce faoi airm" cibé tréimhse a imeoidh thart tar éis aon chogadh, nó aon choinbhleacht faoi airm mar a dúradh, nó aon cheannairce faoi airm a fhoirceannadh go dtí go mbeidh beartaithe ag gach Teach den Oireachtas gur scoir an cogadh, an choinbhleacht<sup>7</sup> faoi airm, nó an cheannairce faoi airm sin de bheith ann.

Variants

- 1 'a chosaint', 'a dhaingniú', 'a dheimhniú'
- 2 'in aimsir chogaidh'
- 3 'a mhaifidh'
- 4 "'aimsir chogaidh'"
- 5 'an choinbhleachta'
- 6 "'aimsir chogaidh'"
- 7 'an coinbhleacht'

ARTICLE 28.4.1° AIRTEAGAL 28.4.1°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Tá an Rialtas freagrach do Dháil Éireann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Government is answerable to Dáil Éireann.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Government shall be responsible to Dáil Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Shall' is expressed as 'tá' ('is') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 51 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

The Executive Council shall be responsible to Dáil Éireann .... Beidh an Ard-Chomhairle freagarthach do Dháil Éireann.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 207, reports as follows on reference to this section in the courts:

In Attorney General v Hamilton (No. 1) ([1993] 2 IR 250; [1993] ILMR 81) McCarthy J said that the word 'responsible' in Article 28.4.1 meant "answerable or accountable – a meaning borne out by the Irish text, 'freagrach'".

Commentary

freagrach do 'Freagrach' is translated as 'responsible' in Téarmaí Dlí and as 'answerable, accountable' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'bheith freagrach do dhuine i rud, as rud' as 'to be answerable to someone for something'. Dinneen translates 'freagarthach' as 'answerable, suitable, responsible, responsive; ready', DIL giving (a) 'responsive, quick to answer (a question or challenge)' and (b) 'corresponding (to), a counterpart' as the two senses of this headword, citing only two examples of each sense, none of which come from the earlier sources. 'Frearthach' is based on 'frecra', the verbal noun of 'fris-gair' ('answers, replies'). See the commentary on Article 13.8.1° where 'freagrach do' expresses 'answerable to'.

'But without derogating from the responsibility of the Minister for Defence to the Dáil for all the administration and business of the Department of Defence' is translated as 'gan baint, áfach, ón méid a bheidh an tAire Cosanta freagarthach don Dáil i riar agus i ngnó uile na Roinne Cosanta' in s8(1) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924. In s6(4) of the National Treasury Management Agency Act, 1990, 'The Chief Executive shall be directly responsible to the Minister for the performance of the functions of the Agency' is translated as 'Beidh an Príomhfheidhmeannach freagrach go díreach don Aire maidir le feidhmeanna na Gníomhaireachta a chomhlíonadh'.

Direct translation

Beidh an Rialtas freagrach do Dháil Éireann.

ARTICLE 28.4.2° AIRTEAGAL 28.4.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

I gcomhúdarás a thiocfaidh an Rialtas le chéile agus a ghníomhóid, agus táid go léir le chéile freagrach sna Ranna Stáit a riarar ag comhaltai an Rialtais.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is in joint authority that the Government will come together and will act, and they are all together responsible for the Departments of State that are administered by members of the Government.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Government shall meet and act as a collective authority, and shall be collectively responsible for the Departments of State administered by the members of the Government.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Collective authority' is expressed as 'comhúdarás' ('joint authority') in the Irish text, 'collective' being echoed by 'collectively' in the following clause in the English text – note, however, that 'le chéile' ('together'), in 'a thiocfaidh le chéile' ('will come together' [expressing 'meet']), is echoed by 'táid go léir le chéile' ('they are all together responsible' [expressing 'collectively responsible']) in the Irish text above.

- 'The Government shall meet and act as a collective authority' is expressed as 'I gcomhúdarás a thiocfaidh an Rialtas le chéile agus a ghníomhóid' ('the Government shall meet / come together and act in a collective/joint authority') in the Irish text.
- 'Shall be collectively responsible' is expressed as 'táid go léir le chéile freagrach' ('they are all together responsible') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 54 of the 1922 Constitution concludes as follows:

The Executive Council shall meet and act as a collective authority. Tiocfaidh an Ard-Chomhairle i gceann a chéile agus ghníomhóid in aonacht mar aon údarás.

This Article commences as follows:

The Executive Council shall be collectively responsible for all matters concerning the Departments of State administered by Members of the Executive Council. Beidh an Ard-Chomhairle freagarthach in aonacht i ngach cúrsa bhaineas leis na Ranna Stáit a bheidh á riar ag Baill den Ard-Chomhairle.

Commentary

a ghníomhóid ... táid The synthetic form of the verb 'gníomhaigh' and of the substantive verb – these would normally be replaced today by 'a ghníomhóidh siad' and 'tá siad'. See the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding the synthetic and analytic forms of the verb in the Constitution.

Ó Dónaill translates 'gníomhaigh' as 'act', with Dinneen translating 'gníomhuighim' as 'I work, act, operate'. DIL translates 'gnímaigid' as I (transitive) 'puts into operation, effects, practises' and II (intransitive) 'acts, takes effect', only citing three examples of this use, including 'gnímhaidh an re ... isin fairgí' ('the moon acts on the sea') from an Irish astronomical tract, based on a Mediaeval Latin version of a work by Messahalal. 'Gnímaigid' is based on 'gním', verbal noun of 'gníid', 'acts, works'.

'Ag gníomhú mar' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'acting as' in translations for the Department of Justice. In s8(6) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, 'The Council of Defence shall meet and act as a collective body and shall be collectively responsible to the Minister for Defence for all matters entrusted to it in its collective capacity' is translated as 'Tiocfaidh an Chomhairle Cosanta le chéile agus ghníomhóid in éineacht mar aon chólucht amháin agus beid freagarthach in éineacht don Aire Cosanta i ngach ní a cuirfar ina n-íocht mar chólucht aonair', with 'and shall meet and act as a collective authority' being translated as 'agus a thiocfaidh le chéile agus a ghníomhóidh mar aon údarás amháin' in the Preamble to that Act. 'The appointment of a person to act as a member of a committee' is translated as 'ceapadh duine chun gníomhú mar chomhalta de choiste' in s16(3) of the Irish Film Board Act, 1980, and in s35(2) of the Dairy Produce Marketing Act, 1961.

I gcomhúdarás 'Comhúdarás' is a compound of 'comh-' (translated principally as 'mutual, joint, common; co-' in Ó Dónaill) and 'údarás' ('authority') which does not appear to be given as a headword in Ó Dónaill or in Dinneen, with Ó Dónaill citing 'má tá údarás sa chás aige, if he has authority to deal with the case', and Dinneen citing 'do-ghnám rud as m'ughdarás féin, I do a thing on my own responsibility'. Old Irish 'augtartás' comes from Latin 'auctoritas' (as 'augtar', Modern Irish 'údar', comes from Latin 'auctor'), and is translated as 'authority, prescriptive right, authoritative source' in DIL, where 'ní im augtortás féin ramídar' ('not in my own authority have I judged him') is cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, where it glosses Latin 'in nomine Domini nostri'. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'collective effort' as 'comhiarracht', translating 'collective' alone as 'cnuasaitheach, teaglamach; comhchoitianta'.

'Joint authority' is translated as 'comhúdarás' in s81(a) of the Health Act, 1970, for example. In s2(c) of Article XII of the Schedule to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (Financial Support Fund) (Agreement) Act, 1976, 'repayments of the borrowing by the Fund on the quota share of the member in a collective undertaking' is translated as 'na méideanna a aisiocadh de na hiasachtaí a fuair an Ciste ar chuóta-scair an chomhalta i gcomhghéalltanais', 'comhlua' translating 'collective citation' in the Acts in general. Note that 'collective agreement' is translated as 'comhaontú comhchoiteann' in s1(1) of the Anti-Discrimination (Pay) Act, 1974, that 'breithiúnas comhchoitianta' translates 'a collective judgement' in s1(b) of Article XXIV of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods (Agreement) Act, 1969, and that 'for the collective benefit and welfare of such members' is translated as 'ar mhaithe le tairbhe agus leas comhchoiteann na gcomhaltaí sin' in s157(a)(iv) of the Defence Act, 1954.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that only 'gníomhóidh' was qualified by 'mar chomhúdarás' in the (now) variant translation below.

a riartar 'Riaraim' is translated as 'I administer (estate, justice, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'administer, manage, rule' being among the senses of this headword in Dinneen, who cites 'riaraim an pobal, I rule the people'. 'Riar' is translated principally as 'administer, manage' in Ó Dónaill. The principal sense of the earlier verb 'riaraid' contrasts with this, i.e. 'does the will of, serves', according to DIL, having the secondary senses of 'ministers to, entertains, supplies' and 'subdues'. 'Riar', on which this verb is based, is translated principally as 'will wish, often of expression of will, demand, request; decision' in DIL, where examples are cited from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards. See further the commentary on Article 44.2.5°.

In Article 11 of the 1922 Constitution '(All lands and waters ...) shall be controlled and administered by the Oireachtas' is translated as 'smachtóidh agus riarfaidh an t-Oireachtas iad'. 'Any income arising from a bonus under a scheme administered by the Minister for the Gaeltacht' is translated as 'aon ioncam ó bhónas faoi scéim a riarann Aire na Gaeltachta' in s146(1)(b)(vi) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, with 'in pursuance of an agricultural scheme administered by such committee' being translated as 'do réir scéime talmhaíochta do bhí á riar ag an gcoiste sin' in s34 of the Agricultural Act, 1931.

a thiochfaidh an Rialtas le chéile Literally 'that the Government will come together', the verb 'tar' with 'le chéile'. Note that Ó Dónaill cites 'níl an tuairisc sin ag teacht le chéile, that report is not consistent' and Dinneen cites 'gach ball de ag teacht le chéile, all his limbs harmonising'. DIL cites examples of the adverbial phrase 'le chéile' in the sense of 'together, altogether, completely', but does not appear to cite any example with 'téit'. See the commentary on Article 16.4.2° regarding 'meet'.

Standardised Irish text

I gcomhúdarás a thiochfaidh an Rialtas le chéile agus a ghníomhóidh siad, agus tá siad go léir le chéile freagrach sna Ranna Stáit a riartar ag comhaltaí an Rialtais.

Direct translation

Is mar chomhúdarás a thiochfaidh an Rialtas le chéile agus a ghníomhóidh siad, agus is i dteannta a chéile a bheidh siad freagrach as na Ranna Stáit a bheidh á riaradh ag comhaltaí den Rialtas.<sup>1</sup>

Variant

- 1 'Tiochfaidh an Rialtas le chéile agus gníomhóidh siad mar chomhúdarás, agus beidh an Rialtas freagrach i dteannta a chéile as na Ranna Stáit a riarfaidh na comhaltaí den Rialtas.'

ARTICLE 28.4.3° AIRTEAGAL 28.4.3°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní foláir don Rialtas Meastacháin ar Fháltas an Stáit agus Meastacháin ar Chaitheamh Airgid an Stáit a ullmhú i gcomhair gach bliana airgeadais, agus iad a chur os comhair Dháil Éireann chun a mbreithnithe.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Government must prepare Estimates of the Income of the State and Estimates of the Expenditure of the State for each financial year, and put them before Dáil Éireann for their consideration.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Government shall prepare Estimates of the Receipts and Estimates of the Expenditure of the State for each financial year, and shall present them to Dáil Éireann for consideration.

Note that this text is now Article 28.4.4°, the Amendment on Cabinet confidentiality (see Appendix 4) being the enrolled Article 28.4.3°.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'For consideration' is expressed as 'chun a mbreithnithe', more literally 'for their adjudication', in the Irish text; 'chun a mbreathnuighthe' is the form in the enrolled text, 'breathnaigh' being translated as 'observe, examine' in Ó Dónaill as against 'breithnigh', 'adjudge', as we noted earlier.
- 2 'Present them to Dáil Éireann' is expressed as 'iad a chur os comhair Dháil Éireann' ('put them before Dáil Éireann') in the Irish text; 'a chur faoi bhráid' rather than 'a chur os comhair' expresses 'present' in Article 17.1.1<sup>o</sup>, which refers to the same matters as the present Article.

- 3 As in Article 17.1.1<sup>o</sup>, 'receipts' is expressed by the singular noun 'fáltas', principally translated as 'income, profit' in Ó Dónaill, and 'expenditure' is now generally translated as 'caiteachas', rather than 'caitheamh airgid', with 'Estimates of the Receipts and Estimates of the Expenditure of the State' being expressed as 'Meastacháin ar Fháltas an Stáit agus Meastacháin ar Chaitheamh Airgid an Stáit' ('Estimates of the Receipts of the State and Estimates of the Expenditure of the State') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must'), as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Note that Article 54 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

The Executive Council shall prepare Estimates of the receipts and expenditure of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) for each financial year, and shall present them to Dáil Éireann before the close of the previous financial year. Ullamhóidh an Ard-Chomhairle Meastacháin d'fháltas agus de chaiteachas Shaorstáit Éireann i gcóir gach bliana airgid, agus cuirfidh ós cóir Dháil Éireann iad roimh dheire na bliana airgid roimhe sin.

Commentary

a chur os comhair Note that 'present' is expressed as 'a chur faoi bhráid' in Article 17.1.1<sup>o</sup>, with 'tairg' expressing 'present' in Article 25.1. 'Leag os comhair' expresses 'lay before' in Article 29.5.1<sup>o</sup>. 'Os comhair' is translated as 'in front of, opposite' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'os comhair na cuideachta, in front of, in the presence of, the company'. Dinneen cites 'ós cómhair breithimh, before a judge', translating 'cómhair' as 'presence', this noun being used only in prepositional phrases in Modern Irish. DIL translates 'comair' as 'in front of', citing 'comair caich' ('before every one') from the eighth-century Glosses of the Second Epistle of St Peter in Codex Taurinensis, citing 'ós cómhair cháich' from Fenian literature published in the Transactions of the Ossianic Society (1854-60) and 'as do chomhair' ('before thee') from Ó Cianáin's Flight of the Earls. See the commentary on Article 17.1 regarding 'present'. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'to present a plan to a meeting' as 'plean a chur os comhair cruinnithe', translating 'to present a bill for payment' as 'bille a thairiscint chun a íochta'.

chun a mbreithnithe See the commentary on Article 17.1.1<sup>o</sup> regarding 'breithnigh'; here we have the genitive singular of the verbal noun of 'breithnigh', 'breithniú'. In Article 17.1.1<sup>o</sup>, 'Dáil Éireann shall consider such Estimates' is expressed as 'ní foláir do Dháil Éireann na Meastacháin sin a bhreithniú'.

In s24 of the 'Offaly County Scheme' in the First Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'The re-adjustment of those is a matter for consideration at a later date' is translated as 'Rud nách mór a bhreithniú uair éigin eile isea conus ath-cheartú do dhéanamh ortha'. 'That the affairs of the society call for consideration by a meeting of the members of the society' is translated as 'gur call go mbreithneofaí gnóthaí an chumainn ag cruinniú de chomhaltaí an chumainn' in s45(1)(b) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, 'programmes being prepared for consideration by the Executive Directors' being translated as 'cláir a bheidh á n-ullmhú lena mbreithniú ag na Stiúrthóirí Feidhmiúcháin' in s1 of Article III of the Schedule to the International Development Association (Special Action Account) Act, 1978.

Meastacháin ar Fháltas an Stáit See the commentary on Article 17.1.1<sup>o</sup>. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'receipts and expenses' as 'fáil agus caitheamh', translating 'receipt' (Commerce) as 'fáltas'.

Meastacháin ar Chaitheamh Airgid See the commentary on Article 17.1.1<sup>o</sup>.

a ullmhú See the commentary on Article 25.5.1<sup>o</sup>.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an Rialtas Meastacháin ar Fháltais agus Meastacháin ar Chaiteachas an Stáit a ullmhú i gcomhair gach bliana airgeadais, agus iad a thíolacadh do Dháil Éireann chun iad a bhreithniú<sup>1</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'chun iad a bhreithniú', 'lena mbreithniú'

ARTICLE 28.5.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 28.5.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

An Taoiseach is teideal do cheann an Rialtais, .i. an Príomh-Aire, agus sin é a bheirtear air sa Bhunreacht seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Taoiseach is the title of the head of the Government, i.e. the Prime Minister, and that is what he is called in the Constitution.

ENGLISH TEXT

The head of the Government, or Prime Minister, shall be called, and is in this Constitution referred to as, the Taoiseach.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The head of the Government ... shall be called ... the Taoiseach' is expressed as 'An Taoiseach is teideal do cheann an Rialtais' ('The Taoiseach is the title of the head of the Government') in the Irish text, i.e. 'shall be called' being expressed as 'is teideal', 'has as title'.
- 2 'Or Prime Minister' is expressed as '.i. an Príomh-Aire' ('i.e. the Prime Minister') in the Irish text, this showing clearly that 'Prime Minister' is a gloss and not an alternative title for the Taoiseach.
- 3 'And is in this Constitution referred to as' is expressed as 'agus sin é a bheirtear air sa Bhunreacht seo' ('and that is what he is called in this Constitution') in the Irish text; in Article 12.1, 'hereinafter called the President' is expressed as 'ar a dtugtar an tUachtarán sa Bhunreacht seo feasta', 'a bheirtear' being a variant form of 'a thugtar'.

Note that Article 13.1.1<sup>o</sup> contains the following:

The President shall ... appoint the Taoiseach, that is, the head of the Government or Prime Minister.
Ceapfaidh an tUachtarán an Taoiseach .i. an Ceann Rialtais nó an Príomh-Aire.

Commentary

An Taoiseach This headword is translated as 'Prime minister' in Ó Dónaill, preceded by the abbreviation for 'Politics', with the historical sense of 'leader, chief; ruler' also being given. The sense 'Prime minister' is not included in Dinneen (1927), who translates this headword as 'a chief, head, leader or prince (princeps), a commander'. The adjective 'toisech' means 'first, former', according to DIL, citing 'isind epistil tóisich' ('in the first Epistle'), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that the comparative of the adjective is still current in the form 'túisce'. As a noun 'toisech' means in the first instance '(the) first, (the) foremost', Máirtín Ó Murchú citing 'is é an taoiseach orthu' (i.e. of the best in a class) for example. The meaning 'leader, chief' is found already in the Würzburg Glosses, where we get 'hore rombu thoiscech na fectae' ('because he had been the leader of the expedition'). Moses is referred to as a good 'taoiseach' in an early ninth-century hymn ascribed to Colmán, lector of Cork ('snáidsiunn Moysi degthóisech' ['May Moses the good leader protect us']) and rulers of peoples, or territories, native or foreign, are sometimes referred to as 'toisech' in the Annals – see DIL s.v. 'toisech'.

Note that while the word 'toisech' is found in early Irish law-tracts – see 'toisech cachá fine' ('taoiseach gach fine, the head of every family group' being cited in Ó Dónaill) in Ancient Laws of Ireland, vol. 5, p. 438, for example – 'flaith' is the usual term in the early Irish laws for 'political chief, ruler'. As D.A. Binchy states in the 'Legal Glossary' appended to his edition of the early Irish law-tract Críth Gablach (p. 91), 'flaith' is both absolute and concrete: 'authority, rule', and the person who exercises such authority or rule. Later a separate noun of agency, 'flaithem', is formed. According to Professor Binchy, 'flaith may be used of the king, of a noble, of a "lord" over clients, etc.' Fergus Kelly translates 'flaith' as 'ruler, king, lord' in his 'Index of Irish Terms' appended to A Guide to Early Irish Law (p. 312). The King of Ireland, 'rí Érenn', who figures so prominently in early Irish sagas, is rarely mentioned in the law-texts, according to Professor Kelly, who states (ibid., p. 18):

Though the idea of a kingship of the whole island had already gained currency by the 7th century, no Irish king ever managed to make it a reality, and most law-texts do not even provide for such a possibility.

The provincial king ('rí cóicid') is, however, recognised in the law-tracts, as is the 'rí túaithe' (king of the 'túath' or small kingdom, the political and jurisdictional unit of ancient Ireland – see Binchy, op. cit., p. 109), of whom there would probably have been at least 150 at any given date between the fifth and twelfth centuries, according to Professor Kelly (op. cit., p. 17).

Príomh-Aire 'Príomh-aire' is translated as 'prime minister' in Ó Dónaill, this compound of 'príomh-' (translated as 'first, prime, chief, principal, great' in Dinneen) and 'Aire' ('a minister of state' being given as a 'recent' sense of this headword in Dinneen) apparently not being given as a headword in Dinneen. The principal sense of 'aire' in Dinneen is 'a nobleman; one privileged', Ó Dónaill giving 'aire' in the sense of 'nobleman, chief' (sense in earlier Irish literature) and 'aire' in the sense of 'Minister (of state)' as two separate headwords. In early Irish law-tracts, 'aire' is used to describe every freeman, 'commoner' as well as noble, who possess an independent legal status, according to D.A. Binchy – see the commentary on Article 13.1.1<sup>o</sup>. Occasionally, however, 'aire' is used in the law-tracts in the more restricted sense of 'noble' (as opposed to 'commoner'), which is its usual meaning in the literature, according to Binchy. DIL cites 'aire no sainsamail' ('principal or conspicuous'), from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian (where 'aire' glosses Latin 'optimas'), as an example of 'aire' in the more general sense of 'noble, chief'. Note finally that s3 of the Second Article of the 1919 Constitution reads as follows:

Is éigean do gach Aireach bheith n-a Theachta san Dáil ....

teideal This headword is translated as 'title' in Téarmaí Dlí (along with 'caption') and in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'teideal uaisleachta, céimíochta, title of nobility, of distinction'. Dinneen translates 'teideal' as 'a title, claim, right or authority, rank, fame', citing 'a theidil is a chéimeanna, his due titles'. Old Irish 'titul' comes from Latin 'titulus', and is translated in DIL as (a) 'title, heading', citing 'is titul indí ar chiunn' ('it is the title of that which is ahead') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, (b) 'epithet, title' and (c) 'prescriptive right'. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'entitle' as 'tugaim teideal do (leabhar)'. See further the commentary on Article 34.4.1<sup>o</sup>.

'Who shall be styled and are hereinafter referred to as court messengers' is translated as 'ar a dtabharfar, agus dá ngairmtear ina dhiaidh seo anso, teachtairí cúirt' in s4(1) of the Enforcement of Court Orders Act, 1926. In s6(b) of the Tourist Traffic Act, 1970, 'a register to be called and known and in this Act referred to as the register of approved holiday cottages' is translated as 'clár ar a dtabharfar agus dá ngairfear an clár d'íostáin saoire cheadaithe agus dá dtagraítear san Acht seo faoin teideal sin'.

do cheann an Rialtais 'A head, leader, chief' is one of the senses of 'ceann' in Dinneen, who cites 'an ceann, the inspector, etc.', 'ceann cómhairle, a chairman, president' and 'ceann oirir, chief of a district, a local magnate', for example. Examples of 'ceann' ('head') in the sense of person cited by Ó Dónaill include 'ceann teaghlaigh, head of household', 'ceann foirne, chief-of-staff' and 'ceann comhairle, leader in council; Parliament. speaker'. In early Irish law-tracts the head of the kin-group ('fine') is known as the 'cenn fine' – see Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 13f. DIL gives 'chief, head person, leader' as one of the senses of 'cenn', the primary meaning being 'the human head, head of an animal'. See the commentary on Article 13.1.1<sup>o</sup>.

a bheirtear This would be replaced by ‘a thugtar’ in the current standard – see the commentary on Article 12.1. See the commentary on Article 15.1.1° regarding ‘a bheirtear (air)’.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

An Taoiseach is teideal do cheann an Rialtais, .i. an Príomh-Aire, agus sin é a thugtar air nó uirthi sa Bhunreacht seo.

Direct gender-proofed translation

An Taoiseach a thabharfar ar cheann an Rialtais, nó ar an bPríomh-Aire, agus tagrófar dó nó di amhlaidh<sup>1</sup> sa Bhunreacht seo.

Variants

- 1 ‘faoin teideal sin’

ARTICLE 28.5.2° AIRTEAGAL 28.5.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní foláir don Taoiseach eolas i gcoitinne a thabhairt don Uachtarán ar nithe a bhaineas le beartas inmheánach agus le beartas idirnáisiúnta.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Taoiseach must give information in general to the President on matters which relate to internal policy and to external policy.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Taoiseach shall keep the President generally informed on matters of domestic and international policy.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘Keep the President generally informed’ is expressed as ‘eolas i gcoitinne a thabhairt don Uachtarán’ (‘give information/knowledge in general to the President’) in the Irish text.
- 2 ‘Matters of domestic ... policy’ is expressed as ‘nithe a bhaineas le beartas inmheánach’ (‘matters which relate to internal policy’) in the Irish text.
- 3 Again we see ‘shall’ expressed as ‘ní foláir’ (‘must’) in the Irish text.

Commentary

eolas Translated as ‘knowledge’ in Ó Dónaill, citing ‘ár gcuid eolais (ar Dhia, ar an saol, orainn féin), what we know (of God, of life, of ourselves)’. Dinneen includes ‘knowledge, information’ among the senses of ‘eolas’. DIL translates ‘eolas’ principally as ‘knowledge, information, especially knowledge gained by experience or practice, acquaintance’, citing ‘maith a n-eolas’ (‘good their knowledge’) from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms (where it glosses Latin ‘patres ... certae scientiae’) and ‘isse mac dian lia eolas i nErind’ (‘the best-informed youth in Ireland’). DIL cites ‘tabair eolas dam co hairm a fuilet mo mic’ (‘direct me to the place where my sons are’), from the early Middle Irish translation of the Thebiad of Statius, as an example of ‘eólas’ in the sense of ‘knowledge of the way (place), guidance’. See further the commentary on Article 18.7.1°, where this headword expresses ‘knowledge’.

Looking at ‘information’ in early official translations, ‘bureau eolais’ translates ‘information bureau’ in Irish Oifigiúil, 1926, p. 679, ‘chun eolais duit’ being cited as translating ‘for your information’ in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms. ‘If satisfied by information on oath’ is translated as ‘más deimhin leis o scéala fé mhionn’ in s179(6) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. In s4(2)(c) of the District Justices (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, ‘Administering oaths and taking declarations, affirmations and informations’ is translated as ‘Cur fé mhóid agus faisnéisí, deimhniúcháin agus finéachtaí do thógaint’.

Turning to modern Acts, ‘The Bank shall ... keep the Minister ... informed of the general principles which guide the Bank’ is translated as ‘Déanfaidh an Banc ... an tAire ... a choinneáil ar an eolas maidir leis na príonsabail ghinearálta a bhíonn mar threoir ag an mBanc’ in s66(2) of the Central Bank Act, 1989. ‘The Administrator shall keep the EEC informed of projects’ is translated as ‘coimeádfaidh an Riarthóir eolas le CEE faoi thionscadail’ in s1 of Article III of the Schedule to the International Development Association (Special Action Account) Act, 1978. ‘Keep itself informed of the courses available to students’ is translated as ‘é féin a choimeád ar an eolas maidir leis na cúrsaí atá ar fáil ag mic léinn’ in s13(1) of the National Agricultural Advisory, Education and Research Authority Act, 1977.

beartas ‘Beartas poiblí’ is translated as ‘public policy’ in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, who translates ‘beartas’ as ‘policy’. This does not appear to be given as a headword in Dinneen nor in DIL – see the commentary on Article 28.3.3° regarding the development of senses of ‘beartaigh’.

‘Policies of insurance’ is translated as ‘polasaithe árachais’ in s11(2)(e) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. ‘Otherwise than in the interest of the public generally and as a measure of public policy’ is translated as ‘ar aon tslí eile seachas chun leasa don phuiblíocht i gcoitinne agus mar ní a bhaineann le polasaí puiblí’ in s7 of the Private Bills Costs Act, 1924. ‘Polasíocht’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘policy’ in early Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann. Note that ‘home policy’ is translated as ‘beartas (fá ghnóthaí) intíre’ in the Terms issued by the Department of Education.

‘With particular reference to its proposed policy in relation to making of loans’ is translated as ‘ag tagairt go háirithe dá bheartas beartaithe i ndáil le hiasachtaí a thabhairt’ in s103(2)(c) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, for example. ‘The general policy of such committee in relation to continuation education’ is translated as ‘polasaí generálta an choiste sin i dtaobh oideachais leanúna’ in s31(1) of the Vocational Education Act, 1930.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú questions ‘cúrsaí beartais intíre’ in the direct translation below – as against ‘cúrsaí intíre’ or ‘cúrsaí beartais’ – and recommends ‘faoina mbaineann le beartais intíre agus le beartais idirnáisiúnta’.

inmheánach See the commentary on Article 24.1.

Standardised Irish text

Ní foláir don Taoiseach eolas i gcoitinne a thabhairt don Uachtarán ar nithe a bhaineann le beartas inmheánach agus le beartas idirnáisiúnta.

Direct translation

Coimeádfaidh an Taoiseach an tUachtarán ar an eolas i gcoitinne faoi chúrsaí beartais intíre<sup>1</sup> agus idirnáisiúnta<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'bhaile', 'baile'
- 2 'agus beartais idirnáisiúnta', 'faoina mbaineann le beartais intíre agus le beartais idirnáisiúnta'

ARTICLE 28.6.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 28.6.1<sup>o</sup>TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní foláir don Taoiseach comhalta den Rialtas a ainmniú chun bheith ina Thánaiste.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Taoiseach must nominate a member of the Government to be Tánaiste.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Taoiseach shall nominate a member of the Government to be the Tánaiste.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 Syntactically, Irish would not distinguish here between 'the Tánaiste' and 'a Tánaiste'; specifically to express 'the Tánaiste' would require a construction which would significantly diverge from the English text.
- 2 As we saw in the foregoing subsection, 'shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Commentary

ina Thánaiste 'Tánaiste', in the political sense, is translated as 'deputy prime minister' in Ó Dónaill, giving 'tanist, heir presumptive' as the sense of this headword in earlier literature. Dinneen (1927) translates the noun 'tánaiste' as 'a second thing or person, a substitute or locum tenens, heir presumptive or tanist, the next best thing; state of being second or next best'. The adjective 'tanisi' glosses Latin 'secunda' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, while in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles we find the phrase 'a rath tanise' ('the second grace'). DIL translates 'tánaise', the earlier form of 'tánaiste', as I(a) 'second', II(a) 'second, next in excellence, number, etc.', III 'second in rank or dignity, heir apparent, tanist', the first example of this final sense being cited from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, composed in the second half of the eleventh century ('bid tanaise dam-se he i-m flaithius'). Compare 'taoiseach' for range of meanings (see the commentary on subsection 1 of the previous section).

ina The following examples of this use of the preposition 'i' with the possessive pronoun to express status, function, etc., are cited by Ó Dónaill: 'Tá sé ina oide, he is a teacher', 'chuaigh sé ina thoscaire ann, he went there as a delegate', 'bhí sí ina máthair mhaith acu, she was a good mother to them' and 'dá mbeifeá i do mháistir ar do cheird, if you were a master of your trade'.

'Each local authority shall nominate to be members of the electorate such (if any) number of qualified persons' is translated as 'Déanfaidh gach údarás áitiúil ... daoine cáilithe d'ainmniú chun bheith ina mbaill den lucht toghtha pé méid daoine (más aon mhéid é)' in s11(4) of the National Health Insurance and Widows' and Orphans' Pensions Act, 1936. In s37(3) of the Health (Mental Services) Act, 1981, 'The Minister shall nominate a member of a review board to be the chairman of the board' is translated as 'Ainmneoidh an tAire comhalta de bhord athbhreithnithe le bheith ina chathaoirleach ar an mbord'.

The variants given in the direct translation below illustrate the awkwardness of expressions other than 'ina' in this context. 'Bheith mar', for example, would not be correct here; as Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks, this would mean that it would not actually be the Tánaiste but somebody performing that duty for the time being, Professor Ó Murchú citing 'ní hathair dóibh an té a bheadh mar athair acu' for example.

Ní foláir ... a ainmniú Note that Article 53 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

The President of the Council shall be appointed on the nomination of Dáil Éireann. He shall nominate a Vice-President of the Council .... Ceapfar Uachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle ar ainmniú Dháil Éireann. Ainmneoidh sé sin Leas-Uachtarán den Ard-Chomhairle.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Ní foláir don Taoiseach comhalta den Rialtas a ainmniú chun bheith ina Thánaiste nó ina Tánaiste.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Déanfaidh an Taoiseach comhalta den Rialtas a ainmniú chun bheith ina Thánaiste nó ina Tánaiste<sup>1</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'chun post an Tánaiste a ghabháil air féin nó uirthi féin', 'chun an Tánaiste a dhéanamh de nó di', 'agus is é nó is í an Tánaiste a bheidh sa chomhalta sin'

ARTICLE 28.6.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 28.6.2<sup>o</sup>TÉACS GAELIGE

Má éagann an Taoiseach nó má ghabhann míthreoir bhuan é, ní foláir don Tánaiste gníomhú chun gach críche in ionad an Taoisigh nó go gceaptar Taoiseach eile.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

If the Taoiseach dies or if he becomes permanently incapacitated/deranged/confused, the Tánaiste must act for every purpose in place of the Taoiseach until another Taoiseach is appointed.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Tánaiste shall act for all purposes in the place of the Taoiseach if the Taoiseach should die, or become permanently incapacitated, until a new Taoiseach shall have been appointed.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 As we have seen in earlier Articles, 'incapacitated' is expressed in the Irish text by 'míthreoir', a term which would generally today be understood to mean 'mental confusion', though 'incapacity' is the principal sense given in Dinneen.
- 2 'A new Taoiseach' is expressed as 'Taoiseach eile' ('another Taoiseach') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Shall have been appointed' is expressed as 'ceaptar' ('is appointed') in the Irish text.
- 4 'If the Taoiseach should die' is expressed as 'Má éagann an Taoiseach' ('If the Taoiseach dies') in the Irish text, the English clause being followed by a comma not found in the Irish text.
- 5 'If the Taoiseach should ... become permanently incapacitated' is expressed as 'má ghabhann míthreoir bhuan é' ('if permanent incapacity seizes him') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 53 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

He shall nominate a Vice-President of the Council, who shall act for all purposes in the place of the President, if the President shall die, resign, or be permanently incapacitated, until a new President of the Council shall have been elected. Ainmneoidh sé sin Leas-Uachtarán den Ard-Chomhairle, a ghníomhóidh chun gach críche in ionad an Uachtaráin ar an Uachtarán d'fháil bháis, do thabhairt suas no do thuíteam fé mhí-chumas bhuan, go dtí go dtoghfar Uachtarán nua den Ard-Chomhairle.

Commentary

nó go gceaptar 'Nó go' (Middle Irish 'nó co') in the sense of 'until' was, according to Liam Breatnach (in Kim McCone et al., op. cit., p. 281), a Middle Irish innovation, all of Professor Breatnach's examples coming from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster. According to Holger Pedersen (Vergleichende Grammatik der keltischen Sprachen [1909-13], Vol. II, pp. 318-9, cited in DIL), however, 'no co' is a development of Old Irish 'na co' (followed by eclipsis), used with the subjunctive mood to join a conditional clause to a negative main clause, the original sense being 'unless', passing by degrees into that of 'until'. According to DIL, the development was probably influenced by the independent use of the conjunction 'co' (followed by eclipsis), 'until'. During the Middle Irish period, 'na co' ('no co', 'nó co') comes to mean simply 'until', according to DIL, 'and to be used with an affirmative main clause, and with the indicative mood (generally with a preterite to denote an actual fact which occurred at the end of a period indicated in the main sentence)'. DIL cites the following example from 'Siaburcharpat Con Culaind', contained in Leabhar na hUidhre (written in Clonmacnois c. 1100): '(Asbert Loegaire fri Patraic noco chreitiubsa duitsiu nách do Dia) nó copo dusce Coin Culaind' (i.e. King Loegaire said to Saint Patrick, 'I will not believe in thee nor in God until thou awake Cú Chulainn'). Turning to Modern Irish, Dinneen cites 'nó go dtagaidh mé arís, till I come again' and 'nó gur dhoirteamar le fánaidh tré fhairrge dá cárnadh, till we had run down before the wind through a turbulent sea'. Ó Dónaill cites 'beidh tú ann nó go bhfása coincleach ort, you will be there until you grow mouldy' as an example of 'nó' used pleonastically with the conjunction 'go' in the sense of 'until; so that'.

'Until further notice' is translated as 'go dtí go bhfógrófar mar gheall air arís' in Iris an Phuist, 23/3/27. In s2(a) of Article XII of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements (Amendment) Act, 1977, 'Each Governor and each Alternate shall serve until a new appointment is made' is translated as 'Fónfaidh gach Rialtóir agus gach Malartach go dtí go ndéanfar ceapachán nua'. 'Until a new seal has been provided' is translated as 'go dtí go soláthrófar séala nua' in s9(2) of the Contribution (Consequential Provision) Act, 1937. See Article 53 of the 1922 Constitution above.

éagann The verb 'éag' is translated as 'die; expire, die out, become extinct' in Ó Dónaill. 'Éagaim' is translated as 'I die, perish, expire, become quenched; I put to death (poetic); I lose my flavour, as snuff, etc.' in Dinneen – a good illustration of the disadvantage of using the first person singular as against the third person singular as the headwords of verbs in a dictionary! 'Écaid' ('dies') is the verbal form of 'éc' ('death'), especially 'a natural death' as opposed to 'aided', 'violent death', according to DIL. Unlike 'éc', we find many examples of 'bás' in the eighth- and ninth-century Glosses. See the commentary on Article 12.3.1<sup>o</sup>.

In s1 of Article 56 of the Second Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1980, 'provided, however, that if a conciliator or arbitrator should die, become incapacitated, or resign, the resulting vacancy shall be filled in accordance with the provisions of Section 2' is translated as 'ar choinníoll, áfach, má fhaigheann comhréiteoir nó eadránaí bás, nó má éiríonn sé míchumasach, nó má éiríonn sé as oifig, go líonfar an folúntas a tharlóidh dá thoradh sin de réir fhorálacha Roinn 2'.

eile This headword is translated as 'other, another; next, more, else' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'bealach eile, another, an alternative way' and 'fáth eile, another, an additional, reason'. Dinneen translates 'eile' as 'other, another, else, second, next'. Old Irish 'aile' is translated as 'other, second' in DIL, where examples are cited from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards.

In s14 of the Charities Act, 1973, 'Where for any reason the appointment of a new trustee or new trustees of any charity appears to the Board to be necessary' is translated as 'Más dóigh leis an mBord ar chúis ar bith gur gá iontaobhaí nua nó iontaobhaithe nua a cheapadh ar aon charthanas'. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'the new boys' as 'na scoláirí úra, nua' but translates 'the new guard' (military) as 'an garda (atá) ag dul ar faire'.

chun gach críche 'Críche' is the genitive singular of 'críoch' – see the commentary on Article 13.8.2<sup>o</sup>.

má ghabhann míthreoir bhuan é See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

gníomhú The verbal noun of ‘gníomhaigh’ – see the commentary on Article 28.4.2°.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Má éagann an Taoiseach nó má ghabhann míthreoir bhuan é nó í, ní foláir don Tánaiste gníomhú chun gach críche in ionad an Taoisigh nó go gceaptar Taoiseach eile.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Gníomhóidh an Tánaiste chun gach críche in ionad an Taoisigh i gcás an Taoiseach a éag<sup>1</sup>, nó buan-éagumas é nó í a ghabháil<sup>2</sup>, go dtí go mbeidh Taoiseach nua ceaptha.

Variants

- 1 ‘a fháil bháis’, ‘d’éag’
- 2 ‘dá ghabháil nó dá gabháil’

ARTICLE 28.6.3° AIRTEAGAL 28.6.3°

TÉACS GAELGE

Ní foláir don Tánaiste, fairis sin, gníomhú thar ceann nó in ionad an Taoisigh le linn eisean a bheith as láthair go sealadach.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Tánaiste must, moreover, act on behalf of or in place of the Taoiseach while he is temporarily absent.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Tánaiste shall also act for or in the place of the Taoiseach during the temporary absence of the Taoiseach.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘For’ is expressed in the Irish text by ‘thar ceann’, which phrase is translated as ‘on behalf of’ in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 ‘During the temporary absence of the Taoiseach’ is expressed as ‘le linn eisean a bheith as láthair go sealadach’ (‘while he is temporarily absent’) in the Irish text.
- 3 ‘Shall’ is expressed as ‘ní foláir’ (‘must’) in the Irish text, as in earlier subsections.

Note that Article 53 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

The Vice-President shall also act in the place of the President during his temporary absence. Gníomhóidh an Leas-Uachtarán thar ceann an Uachtaráin, leis, le linn eisean do bheith as láthair go sealadach.

Commentary

as láthair ‘Bheith as láthair (ó rud)’ is translated as ‘to be absent (from something)’ in Ó Dónaill, who translates ‘ní raibh sé aon lá as láthair’ as ‘he didn’t miss a day’. Dinneen cites ‘dul as a láthair, to leave him’ and ‘tamall

as láthair, a little distance away’. ‘Place, position’ is one of the senses of ‘láthair’ in DIL, the principal sense being ‘arrangement, disposition’. While DIL gives examples of the adverbial phrase ‘for (ar) láthair’, there appears to be no examples of ‘as láthair’ cited s.v. ‘láthair’. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates ‘he was sentenced in his absence’ as ‘teilgeadh é agus é as láthair’.

See the commentary on Article 14.1 for ‘absence’. ‘During the absence of the Chairman from any meeting of the Commission’ is translated as ‘Le linn don Chathaoirleach a bheith as láthair ó aon chruinniú den Choimisiún’ in s10(3) of the Educational Exchange (Ireland and the United States of America) Act, 1991, with ‘During the absence of the chairman of the Board from any meeting of the Board’ being translated as ‘Le linn cathaoirleach an Bhoird a bheith as láthair ó aon chruinniú den Bhord’ in s10(4) of the Scholarship Exchange (Ireland and the United States of America) Act, 1957. In s3(a) of the Second Schedule to the Garda Síochána (Complaints) Act, 1986, ‘The Board may appoint a member of the Board ... to be a member of a tribunal during the temporary absence of a member of the tribunal’ is translated as ‘Féadfaidh an Bord comhalta den Bhord ... a cheapadh chun bheith ina chomhalta den bhinse le linn do chomhalta den bhinse a bheith as láthair go sealadach’.

thar ceann This phrase is translated as ‘on behalf of’ in Téarmaí Dlí and as ‘on behalf of; for the sake of’ in Ó Dónaill, who cites ‘thar do cheann a rinne mé é, I did it on your account’ and ‘thar ceann a oinigh, for the sake of his honour’. Dinneen translates ‘thar ceann’ as ‘over and above, besides, beyond, excessive, for the sake of; instead of, in preference to; in spite of, notwithstanding, in opposition to’. DIL cites ‘dufiastar tara cenn-som’ (‘punishment will be inflicted for them’) from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms as an example of ‘tar cenn’ in the sense of ‘on behalf of, for the sake of, in return for, in lieu of, because of, for, etc.’

‘The county manager for that county shall act for and on behalf of such council’ is translated as ‘gníomhóidh an contae-bhainisteoir don chontae sin thar ceann na comhairle sin’ in s32(1) of the County Management Act, 1940, for example. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on ‘Gníomhóidh an Tánaiste freisin don Taoiseach’ in a draft of the direct translation below, states that ‘do’ in such a context would mean ‘ar mhaithe le’ (‘for the sake of’ / ‘for the good of’), citing ‘dom féin a dheineas é’ for example.

go sealadach ‘Sealadach’ is based on ‘sealad’ (earlier ‘selat’, translated principally as ‘a while, a space of time; a turn’ in DIL), which in turn is based on ‘seal’, earlier ‘sel’; DIL cites ‘cach la sel dún for imrádud dé’ (‘at one time [translated by Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú as “every other time we are”] meditating on God’), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, as an example of ‘sel’ in the principal sense of ‘turn’, this headword having the secondary sense of ‘a while, a spell’ and ‘a certain distance’. See the commentary on Article 14.1.

fairis sin This phrase is translated as ‘in addition to or beside that, also’ in Dinneen – see the commentary on Article 10.4.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Ní foláir don Tánaiste, fairis sin, gníomhú thar ceann nó in ionad an Taoisigh le linn eisean nó ise a bheith as láthair go sealadach.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Gníomhóidh an Tánaiste chomh maith<sup>1</sup> thar ceann nó in ionad an Taoisigh le linn don Taoiseach bheith as láthair go sealadach.

Variants

1 'freisin'

ARTICLE 28.7.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 28.7.1<sup>o</sup>TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní foláir an Taoiseach agus an Tánaiste agus an comhalta sin den Rialtas a bheas i mbun an Roinn Airgeadais a bheith ina gcomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Taoiseach and the Tánaiste and that member of the Government who will be in charge of the Department of Finance must be members of Dáil Éireann.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Taoiseach, the Tánaiste and the member of the Government who is in charge of the Department of Finance must be members of Dáil Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The Taoiseach, the Tánaiste and the member ...' is expressed as 'an Taoiseach agus an Tánaiste agus an comhalta sin' ('The Taoiseach and the Tánaiste and that member') in the Irish text.
- 2 'The member of the Government who is in charge of' is expressed as 'an comhalta sin den Rialtas a bheas i mbun' ('that member of the Government who will be in charge of') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Ní foláir' is usually found in the Constitution followed by the preposition 'do', which phrase literally translates 'must' but frequently expresses 'shall' in the Constitution; here, 'ní foláir', without the preposition, expresses 'must'.

Note that Article 52 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

Those Ministers who form the Executive Council shall all be members of Dáil Éireann and shall include the President of the Council, the Vice-President of the Council and the Minister in charge of the Department of Finance. Beidh Airí uile na hArd-Chomhairle 'na dteachtaí de Dháil Éireann agus beidh ortha Uachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle, Leas-Uachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle agus an t-Aire i gceannas Roinn an Airgid.

Commentary

i mbun an Roinn Airgeadais This phrase would have the form 'i mbun na Roinne Airgeadais' according to the official standard, the genitive case following the prepositional phrase 'i mbun'.

'I mbun' is translated as 'attending to, engaged in, abiding by' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'i mbun an tí, an linbh, attending to the house, the child' and 'duine a chur i mbun ruda, to put someone in charge of something'. Dinneen translates 'i mbun' as 'about, looking after, guarding', citing 'am madadh ruadh i mbun na gcearc, the fox guarding the hens'. DIL cites 'i mbun na gabla' ('beside the fork') from Leabhar na hUidhre (written in Clonmacnois c. 1100), 'bun' being 'the thick end of anything, base, butt, foot', most of the examples of 'i mbun' in DIL (these being from a later period) being in the transferred sense of 'occupied with, adhering to, in charge of, devoted to'. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'to have charge, be in charge, of something' (of official) as 'a bheith os cionn, i gceannas, ruda' and 'he was put in charge' as 'cuireadh i gceannas é' – though, as Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks, 'bun' and 'ceann' (whence 'ceannas') are semantically autonyms.

In s233(1) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, "local officer" means an officer who for the time being is in charge of a local office' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "oifigeach áitiúil" oifigeach atá, de thuras na huaire, i bhfeighil oifige áitiúla'. The member of the Government who is in charge of the Department of Economic Planning and Development shall be styled and known as ... the Minister for Economic Planning and Development' is translated as 'An tAire Pleanála agus Forbartha Eacnamaíochta ... a thabharfar ar an gcomhalta den Rialtas a bheidh i mbun na Roinne Pleanála agus Forbartha Eacnamaíochta agus a ghairfear de' in s2(3) of the Ministers and Secretaries (Amendment) Act, 1977. Section 1 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 15) Act, 1929, contains the following insertion in lieu of Article 52 of the 1922 Constitution:

The Ministers who form the Executive Council shall include the President of the Council, the Vice-President of the Council, and the Minister in charge of the Department of Finance. The President of the Council, the Vice-President of the Council, the Minister in charge of the Department of Finance, and the other members of the Executive Council shall be members of Dáil Éireann, save that one of such other members may be a member of Seanad Éireann. Ar Airí na hArd-Chomhairle beidh Uachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle, Leas-Uachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle, agus an tAire a bheidh i gceannas na Roinne Airgid. Beidh Uachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle, Leas-Uachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle, an tAire a bheidh i gceannas na Roinne Airgid, agus na baill eile den Ard-Chomhairle ina mbaill de Dháil Éireann, ach amháin go bhféadfadh duine de sna baill eile sin bheith ina bhall de Sheanad Éireann.

'I gceannas' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'in charge (of a Department, etc.)' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1927, p. 581, 'to the sergeant in charge of the Garda Síochána station nearest to such tree' being translated as 'don tsáirsint i gceannas an stáisiúin Ghárda Síochána is goire don chrann san' in s5(1) of the Forestry Act, 1928.

Ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11. Note that we usually find ‘do’ following ‘ní foláir’. Regarding ‘ní mór’ in the variant direct translation below, which phrase is sometimes found in the Acts, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that ‘ní mór’ is closer in meaning to ‘ought’.

Standardised Irish text

Ní foláir an Taoiseach agus an Tánaiste agus an comhalta sin den Rialtas a bheidh i mbun na Roinne Airgeadais a bheith ina gcomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann.

Direct translation

Ní foláir<sup>1</sup> don Taoiseach, don Tánaiste agus don chomhalta den Rialtas a bheidh<sup>2</sup> i mbun na Roinne Airgeadais a bheith ina gcomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann.

Variants

- 1 ‘Ní mór’
- 2 ‘atá’

ARTICLE 28.7.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 28.7.2<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní foláir na comhaltaí eile den Rialtas a bheith ina gcomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann nó de Sheanad Éireann ach ní dleathach thar beirt acu a bheith ina gcomhaltaí de Sheanad Éireann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The other members of the Government must be members of Dáil Éireann or of Seanad Éireann but it is not lawful that more than two of them be members of Seanad Éireann.

ENGLISH TEXT

The other members of the Government must be members of Dáil Éireann or Seanad Éireann, but not more than two may be members of Seanad Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘But not more than two may be members’ is expressed as ‘ach ní dleathach thar beirt acu a bheith ina gcomhaltaí’ (‘but it is not lawful that more than two of them be members’) in the Irish text, with a comma following the preceding clause in the English text alone; note that the original Irish text also had a comma in that position.
- 2 As in the foregoing subsection, ‘ní foláir’, but without preposition, expresses ‘must’ in this subsection, with ‘ní foláir’ followed by the preposition ‘do’ being one of the ways ‘shall’ is expressed in the Irish text in many Articles.

Commentary

thar According to the official standard, lenition follows ‘thar’, except in adverbial phrases, ‘ní raibh thar chúigear acu ann’ being cited in s4(e) of the chapter on ‘Lenition and Eclipsis’ in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil. The preposition ‘thar’ is translated principally as ‘over’ by Ó Dónaill, with the secondary sense of ‘more than’, illustrated by examples such as ‘bhain sé thar dhá lá asam, it took me more than two days’ and ‘tá sí thar na ceithre fichid, she is over eighty’. Dinneen cites ‘ní fiú thar pinginn é, it is not worth more than a penny’. DIL cites ‘nat sasai aena tar aile’ (‘that one day should not be extended beyond two days’) from the Ancient Laws of Ireland (vol. 1, p. 120, l. 18).

In s9(1) of the Greyhound Industry Act, 1958, ‘The Minister shall ... appoint six persons (of whom three, but not more than three, shall be members of the Standing Committee of the Club) to be ordinary members of the Board’ is translated as ‘Déanfaidh an tAire ... seisear daoine (ar comhaltaí de Bhuan-Choiste an Chlub triúr, agus triúr ar a mhéid, díobh) a cheapadh chun bheith ‘na ngnáth-chomhaltaí den Bhord’. ‘Seating capacity for more than 6 but not more than 14 persons’ is translated as ‘cóiríocht shuite do bhreis is 6 dhuine, agus do 14 duine ar a mhéid’ in s3(b)(i) of the Schedule to the Finance (Excise Duties) (Vehicles) Act, 1952. ‘A Judge of the Circuit Court (but not more than two such Judges at any one time) may ... be temporarily assigned by the Minister’ is translated as ‘Féadfaidh an tAire ... Breitheamh den Chúirt Chuarda (ach ní níos mó ná beirt Bhreithiún den tsórt san aon uair áirithe) do cheapadh go sealadach d’aon Chuid’ in s9(2) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1928.

Ní foláir See the previous subsection.

ní dleathach See the commentary on Articles 14.3, 15.6.2<sup>o</sup> and 17.2.

Standardised Irish text

Ní foláir na comhaltaí eile den Rialtas a bheith ina gcomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann nó de Sheanad Éireann ach ní dleathach thar bheirt acu a bheith ina gcomhaltaí de Sheanad Éireann.

Direct translation

Ní foláir<sup>1</sup> do na comhaltaí eile den Rialtas a bheith ina gcomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann nó de Sheanad Éireann, ach ní fhéadfaidh thar bheirt acu a bheith ina gcomhaltaí de Sheanad Éireann.

Variants

- 1 ‘Ní mór’

ARTICLE 28.8 AIRTEAGAL 28.8

TÉACS GAEILGE

Tá sé de cheart ag gach comhalta den Rialtas bheith i láthair agus labhairt i ngach Teach den Oireachtas.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every member of the Government has the right to be present and to speak in each House of the Oireachtas.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every member of the Government shall have the right to attend and be heard in each House of the Oireachtas.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 '(To) be heard' is expressed as 'labhairt' ('to speak') in the Irish text.
- 2 'To attend' is expressed as 'bheith i láthair' ('to be present') in the Irish text.
- 3 The English text's future 'shall have' is expressed by the present tense in the Irish text.

Note that Article 57 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

Every Minister shall have the right to attend and be heard in Seanad Éireann. Beidh de cheart ag gach Aire bheith láithreach agus éisteacht d'fháil sa Seanad.

Commentary

i láthair 'Bheith i láthair (ag rud)' is translated as 'to be present (at something)' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'dul i láthair, do láthair, na cúirte, to appear before the court'. Dinneen translates 'i láthair' as 'beside, in the presence of, present, before ...', citing 'i láthair Dé, before God, in God's presence (a common asseveration)' and 'bhíos i láthair an chómhraídh sin, I was present at that conversation'. DIL gives a few examples from earlier literature (though not from the earliest sources) of 'i láthair' in the sense of 'in (to) the presence of', including 'táinig ... i láthair Sholaimh' from the poetry of Tadhg Dall Ó Huiginn (fl. 1550-1591). See the commentary on Article 28.6.3<sup>o</sup> regarding 'as láthair'. 'I láthair' expresses 'in the presence of' in Article 12.8 and 'bheith i láthair' expresses 'appear' in Article 12.10.6<sup>o</sup>.

'I attend' is translated as 'freastalaím' in Téarmaí DLÍ, 'attendance' being translated as 'freastal'. The Margin Title of s88 of the Building Societies Act, 1989, 'Auditors' report, right of access to books and to attend general meeting', is translated as 'Tuarascáil na n-iniúcháirí, a gceart chun fáil a bheith acu ar leabhair agus chun freastal ar chruinniú ginearálta' – see below for an earlier version of this text. 'Any member of a society entitled to attend and vote at a meeting of the society' is translated as 'Aon chomhalta de chumann atá i dteideal freastal agus vótáil ag cruinniú den chumann' in s54(1) of the Building Societies Act, 1976. 'The Manager shall have the same right to attend meetings of the Council ... as if he were a member of the Council' is translated as 'Beidh ag an mBainisteoir an ceart céanna do bheadh aige dá mba bhall den Chomhairle é chun bheith i láthair ag cruinnithe den Chomhairle' in s13 of the Cork City Management Act, 1929. 'Whose name was included in a panel of jurors for attendance in any court on or after the 1st day of September, 1926' is translated as 'agus go raibh a ainm i bpainéal de choisteoirí chun teacht i láthair in aon chúirt ar an 1adh lá de Mheán Fhómhair, 1926' in s21(3) of the Juries Act, 1927, with 'and every person so appointed may attend such qualifying examination' being translated as 'agus féadfadh gach éinne a ceapfar amhlaidh bheith i láthair ag an scrúdú tástála san' in s42(2) of the Dentists Act, 1928.

labhairt The Margin Title of s163 of the Companies Act, 1963, 'Auditors' Report and right of access to books and to attend and be heard at general meetings', is translated as 'Tuarascáil na n-iniúcháirí agus a gceart chun fáil a bheith acu ar leabhair agus chun bheith i láthair agus éisteacht a fháil ag cruinnithe ginearálta'. In s8(1) of the Ministers and Secretaries (Amendment) Act, 1939, 'A parliamentary secretary who is a member of Dáil Éireann shall have the right to attend and be heard in Seanad Éireann' is translated as 'Beidh ceart ag rúnaí páirliminte is comhalta de Dháil Éireann chun bheith i láthair agus éisteacht d'fháil i Seanad Éireann'. 'Shall be entitled to appear and be heard ... at such inquiry' is translated as 'beidh teideal aige chun teacht i láthair agus éisteacht d'fháil ... ag an bhfiosrúchán san' in s9(2) of the River Owenmore Drainage Act, 1926. See the commentary on Article 26.2.1<sup>o</sup> where 'éist le' expresses 'hear'.

Tá sé de cheart See the commentary on Article 12.2.2<sup>o</sup>.

Direct translation

Beidh de cheart ag gach comhalta den Rialtas freastal ar gach Teach<sup>1</sup> den Oireachtas agus éisteacht a fháil ann<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'bheith i láthair i ngach Teach'
- 2 'freastal agus éisteacht a fháil i ngach Teach den Oireachtas'

ARTICLE 28.9.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 28.9.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Tig leis an Taoiseach éirí as oifig uair ar bith trína chur sin in iúl don Uachtarán.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Taoiseach may give up office at any time by informing the President of that.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Taoiseach may resign from office at any time by placing his resignation in the hands of the President.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'By placing his resignation in the hands of the President' is expressed as 'trína chur sin in iúl don Uachtarán' ('by informing the President of that') in the Irish text, with 'sin' ('that') referring to the resignation from office.
- 2 'May' is expressed as 'tig le' ('it is open to') in the Irish text, as it sometimes is in the Acts.

Commentary

trína chur sin in iúl 'Cuir in iúl' expresses 'report' and 'inform' respectively in Articles 22.2.6<sup>o</sup> and 27.5.1<sup>o</sup>. 'Rud a chur in iúl do dhuine' is translated in Ó Dónaill as 'to let someone know something; to give someone to understand something; to pretend something to someone'. Ó Dónaill cites 'chuir sé a bhuíochas in iúl dúinn, he expressed his gratitude to us' and 'tú féin a chur in iúl, to express oneself, to assert oneself'. Dinneen translates 'cuirim i n-iúl do' as 'I inform, give to understand', stating that 'iúl' is a bye-form of 'eol', which according to Dinneen originally meant 'home'. The principal sense of 'eól' in DIL is 'knowledge (of a person or thing); acquaintance (with person or thing); experience (in), skill', DIL also giving examples of the sense 'that which is known or familiar, especially of places, accustomed surroundings, home', citing 're huaman a himana ... da hiul agus da hoirrsleibtib firaicinti féin' ('from fear of being driven from her familiar place and her own kindly mountain pastures' [of a cow]) from the Yellow Book of Lecan, part of which manuscript was written c. 1392; DIL also cites 'ag imsoi dia eol (i. agh impos ina eol conicce in baile asa tuccad hi)', ('A cow which returns by its knowledge, i.e. a cow which returns by her own knowledge to the place from which she has been brought'), of a cow which strays back to its former home, from an early Irish law-tract. Two other senses of 'eól' are given in DIL, 'lore, history' and 'information, direction, guidance, right way'. While it would appear that no example of 'eól' is found in the Glosses of the eighth and ninth centuries, 'is eulach' glosses Latin 'expertus' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, the adjective 'eólach'/'éulach' being translated in DIL as 'knowing, learned, skilled (in), acquainted with', and 'maith a n-eulas' glosses 'patres ... certae scientiae' in the same collection of Glosses, 'eólas'/'eulas' being translated in DIL principally as 'knowledge, information, especially knowledge gained by experience or practice, acquaintance'. 'Iúl' is the dative singular form of 'eól' and the frequent use of this form is attested by the fact that the nominative form was sometimes taken to be 'iúl'. No examples of 'cuir i iúl' are cited in DIL s.v. 'eól', however. A separate headword 'umail' (later 'umhail'), 'notice, attention', is given in DIL, under which 'cuirid i n-umail' is translated as 'considers, notices', the first example of which cited there being 'agus nach cuireann tú a numhail an tsail' ('but considerest not the beam'), from a seventeenth-century translation of Matthew vii. 3. Most of the examples of this phrase cited in DIL come from Donlevy's Teagasg Críosduidhe (1742), the earliest citation being the following from the sixteenth-century manuscript Leabhar Chlainne Suibhne: 'nir chuir a numhail hé' ('it [i.e. the animal] took no heed of him'). Though the standard written form in Modern Irish is 'in iúl', common pronunciation probably derives from 'in umhail', according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú.

Turning to direct translations of 'in the hands of', 'notwithstanding that there is an execution order in the hands of a sheriff' is translated as 'd'ainneoin ordú forghníomhaithe a bheith ar lámh sirriam' in s89(1) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1988. 'Where the majority of the voting powers or shares is in the hands of those persons' is translated as 'i gcás tromlach na cumhachta vótála nó na scaireanna a bheith i lámha na ndaoine sin' in s35(4)(b) of the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975. In s141(3)(a) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'and such service shall not be valid unless there be left therewith, in the hands of the Commanding Officer, a sum of money' is translated as 'agus ní bheidh an tseirbheáil sin dleathach mara bhfágtar i lámhaibh an Oifigigh Cheannais in éineacht leis an bpróiseas, suim airgid'. 'Place in the hands of ...' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'cur i lámha ...' in translations for the Department of Lands and Agriculture. Finally, in a typescript collection of legal terms, Fasaigh Dlí-Théarmaí, 'which has come to my hands' is translated as 'a tháinig faoi mo lámh', with 'has come to the hands, possession, or knowledge, or under the control of me, this deponent' being translated as 'a theacht chun bheith ar lámh, ar seilbh, ar eolas nó faoi urlámh agamsa, an teisteoir seo'.

See the commentary on Articles 12.3.1° and 13.1.3° regarding 'resign'. As regards early translations, note that 'on the ground that he resigned or was dismissed as aforesaid solely for political reasons' is translated as 'toisc gur ar chúiseanna polaitíochta amháin a dhin sé eirghe-as nó a briseadh é mar adubhradh' in s2(1) of the Superannuation and Pensions Act, 1923, 'eirghe-as' being cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'resignation' in the Proceedings of Seanad Éireann, 28/11/23.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, states that not alone is 'trína éirí-as nó trína h-éirí-as a chur i lámha an Uachtaráin' clumsy ("beagán ceatach") but probably does not make sense; whatever about 'resignation', 'éirí-as' is not something you can place in anyone's hands. He suggests 'ach eolas/nóta/ráiteas/scríbhinn faoi sin (or "dearbhú/deimhniú air sin") a chur i lámha an Uachtaráin'.

Tig le See the commentary on Article 12.4.4°.

éirí as oifig See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

uair ar bith See the commentary on Article 13.2.3°.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Féadfaidh an Taoiseach<sup>1</sup> éirí as oifig uair<sup>2</sup> ar bith ach<sup>3</sup> dearbhú<sup>4</sup> air sin<sup>5</sup> a chur i lámha an Uachtaráin.

Variants

- 1 'Tig leis an Taoiseach'
- 2 'am', 'tráth'
- 3 'trí' (dhearbhú)
- 4 'deimhniú'
- 5 'trína éirí-as nó trína héirí-as'

ARTICLE 28.9.2° AIRTEAGAL 28.9.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Tig le haon chomhalta eile den Rialtas éirí as oifig trína chur sin in iúl don Taoiseach chun an scéal a chur faoi bhráid an Uachtaráin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any other member of the Government may give up office by informing the Taoiseach of that in order to put the matter before the President.

ENGLISH TEXT

Any other member of the Government may resign from office by placing his resignation in the hands of the Taoiseach for submission to the President.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'For submission (i.e. 'his resignation') to the President' is expressed as 'chun an scéal a chur faoi bhráid an Uachtaráin' ('in order to put the matter before the President') in the Irish text.

- 2 'By placing his resignation in the hands of the Taoiseach' is expressed in the Irish text as 'trína chur sin in iúl don Taoiseach' ('by informing the Taoiseach of that'), the same expression as we saw in the foregoing subsection.
- 3 'May' is expressed as 'tig le' ('it is open to') in the Irish text, as in the previous subsection.

Commentary

an scéal 'State of affairs, matter, circumstance' is given by Ó Dónaill as one of the senses of 'scéal', particularly preceded by the definite article, citing 'seo mar atá an scéal, this is how the matter stands' and 'ba mhór an scéal a bhás, his death was a tragic matter'. 'Piece of news, report' is another sense of 'scéal' given in Ó Dónaill, 'story' being the primary sense. Dinneen includes 'a piece of news, tidings, intelligence, message; an event or matter' among the senses of 'scéal', citing 'is olc an scéal é, it is an unfortunate thing', 'ní fios cad é an scéal é, it is not known what it is about, what is the matter' and 'oighear an scéil, the most unpleasant part of the matter'. DIL cites 'nicon chloor act for cáinseál' ('may I hear nothing but good of you'), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, as an example of 'scél' in the sense of 'information, account, statement' and translates 'imcomaircith scela di', from a later source, as 'ask her to give an account of herself'. The principal sense of Old Irish 'scél' is 'story, narration, tale', the plural 'inna scél togaitacha' glossing Latin 'fabulas' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. 'Attaat scela linn' ('we have tidings'), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses, is an early example of 'scél' in the sense of 'news, tidings'.

In s42(1) of the Industrial Relations Act, 1990, 'The Commission shall prepare draft codes of practice concerning industrial relations for submission to the Minister' is translated as 'Ullmhóidh an Coimisiún dréachtchóid chleachtais i dtaobh caidrimh thionscail lena gcur faoi bhráid an Aire'. 'The person ... shall prepare and submit to the Central Bank a report on the conduct of the election' is translated as 'Déanfaidh an duine ... tuarascáil i dtaobh stiúradh an toghcháin a ullmhú agus a chur faoi bhráid an Bhainc Ceannais' in s51(5)(a) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'Until a comprehensive reorganization of the whole law of Local Government in Saorstát Éireann can be prepared and submitted to the Oireachtas' is translated as 'go dtí go bhféadfar ath-ghléasa fórléathan ar iomlán an dlí um Rialtas Áitiúil i Saorstát Éireann d'ullmhú agus do leaga fé bhráid an Oireachtais' in the Preamble to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'To initiate proposals and schemes for submission to the Minister' is translated as 'tograí agus scéimeanna a thionscain, lena gcur faoi bhráid an Aire' in s3(i) of the Industrial Development Authority Act, 1950. Finally, in s12(1) of the Institute for Advanced Studies Act, 1940, 'Any member of the Council, may, at any time, resign his office as such member by letter sent ... to the Taoiseach for submission to the President' is translated as 'Féadfaidh aon bhall den Chomhairle ... eirghe as a oifig mar bhall den tsórt san, tráth ar bith, tré leitir ar n-a cur ... go dtí an Taoiseach chun i chur fé bhráid an Uachtaráin'.

a chur faoi bhráid See the commentary on Article 17.1.1°.

Tig le See the commentary on Article 12.4.4°.

éirí as oifig See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

trína chur sin in iúl do See the commentary on the foregoing subsection.

Direct translation

Féadfaidh aon chomhalta eile den Rialtas éirí as oifig ach dearbhú<sup>1</sup> air sin<sup>2</sup> a chur i lámha an Taoisigh lena<sup>3</sup> chur faoi bhráid an Uachtaráin<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'deimhniú'
- 2 'trína éirí-as nó trína héirí-as'
- 3 'le'
- 4 'lena thabhairt don Uachtarán'

ARTICLE 28.9.3° AIRTEAGAL 28.9.3°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní foláir don Uachtarán glacadh le haon chomhalta den Rialtas, seachas an Taoiseach, d'éirí as oifig má chomhairlíonn an Taoiseach é sin dó.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The President must accept any member of the Government, other than the Taoiseach, giving up office if the Taoiseach recommends that to him.

ENGLISH TEXT

The President shall accept the resignation of a member of the Government, other than the Taoiseach, if so advised by the Taoiseach.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'If so advised by the Taoiseach' is expressed as 'má chomhairlíonn an Taoiseach é sin dó' ('if the Taoiseach recommends that to him') in the Irish text, though it can also be read as 'if the Taoiseach so advises him'; this clause is preceded by a comma in the English text alone.
- 2 'Accept the resignation of a member of the Government' is expressed as 'glacadh le haon chomhalta den Rialtas ... d'éirí as oifig' ('accept any member of the Government resigning from office') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we have also seen in some other Articles.

Commentary

glacadh le 'Glacadh' is the verbal noun of 'glac'. 'Glacaim le' is translated as 'I accept' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Dinneen. 'Glacadh le rud' is translated as 'to accept, admit, something' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'glacadh le fianaise, le fórógra, le masla, to accept evidence, a proclamation, an insult'. See the commentary on Article 8.2.

'The President may accept or refuse to accept the resignation of his commission tendered by an officer' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tUachtarán glacadh le tairiscint oifigigh éirí as a choimisiún nó féadfaidh sé diúltú d'í a ghlacadh' in s49(2) of the Defence Act, 1954, with 'The President ... may accept or refuse to accept the tender by an officer of the resignation of his commission' being translated as 'Féadfaidh an tUachtarán ... glacadh le tairiscint a dhéanfaidh oifigeach chun eirge as a choimisiún nó diúltú dhi' in s9(2) of the Defence Forces Act, 1937. In s47(2) of the Vocational Education Act, 1930, 'A vocational education committee may from time to time accept the resignation or revoke the appointment of a banking company as treasurer' is translated as 'Féadfaidh coiste oideachais ghairme beatha o am go ham glaca le cuideachtain bhancraechna d'eirighe as bheith ina cisteoir nó a ceapa mar chisteoir do cheiliúra'. 'Glacadh le (A) d'eirge as' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'to accept resignation of (N)' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1924, p. 503 – see further the commentary on Article 13.1.3<sup>o</sup>.

má chomhairlionn 'Comhairlim' is translated as 'I advise' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'cómhairlighim' being translated as 'I counsel, advise, consult, recommend, resolve' in Dinneen. 'Comhairligh' is translated as 'advise, counsel' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'rud a chomhairliú do dhuine, comhairliú do dhuine rud a dhéanamh, to advise someone to do something; to recommend something to someone'. DIL cites 'comhairligh do chairde féin' ('give advice to your own friends') from the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards' as an example of 'comairligid' in the sense of 'advices, counsels; admonishes'. 'Comairligid', translated principally in DIL as 'consults, takes counsel (concerning)', is based on 'comairle', examples of which in its primary sense of 'advice, counsel, admonition ...' are cited from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards. 'Comairle' is the verbal noun of 'con-airlethar', which is based on 'airlithir', 'advices, counsels'.

In s7(1) of the Prosecution of Offences Act, 1974, 'The Attorney General shall ensure that barristers retained by him in his official capacity to act or advise on his behalf ... are chosen, from amongst those barristers who have indicated their willingness to so act or advise' is translated as 'Cinnteoídh an tArd-Aighne go ndéanfar na habhcóidí a áiritheoidh sé ina cháil oifigiúil chun gníomhú nó comhairle a thabhairt thar a cheann ... a roghnú, as líon na n-abhcóidí sin a mbeidh curtha in iúl acu go bhfuil siad toilteanach gníomhú nó comhairle a thabhairt amhlaidh'. 'A society proposing to convert into a company shall ... advise the Central Bank of the intention to do so' is translated as 'Aon chumann a bheartóidh comhshó a dhéanamh go cuideachta déanfaidh sé ... scéala a chur chuig an mBanc Ceannais á rá leis go bhfuil sé i gceist é sin a dhéanamh' in s101(4) of the Central Bank Act, 1989. In s10 of the Agriculture (An Chomhairle Oilíúna Talmhaíochta) Act, 1979, 'An Chomhairle shall advise the Minister on any matter relating to agricultural training or advice on which its views are requested by the Minister' is translated as 'Tabharfaidh an Chomhairle comhairle don Aire i dtaobh aon ábhar i ndáil le hoiliúint nó comhairle talmhaíochta a n-iarrfaidh an tAire tuairimí na Comhairle ina thaobh'.

'I advise' is translated as 'comhairlim' in Téarmaí Dlí.

'Comhairliú' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'advise' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1927, p. 697.

Ní foláir do See the commentary on Article 11.

éirí as oifig See the commentary on Article 12.3.1<sup>o</sup>.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Ní foláir don Uachtarán glacadh le haon chomhalta den Rialtas, seachas an Taoiseach, a éirí as oifig má chomhairlionn an Taoiseach é sin dó nó di.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Glacfaidh an tUachtarán le comhalta den Rialtas, seachas an Taoiseach, a éirí as<sup>1</sup> más amhlaidh a chomhairleoidh an Taoiseach dó nó di<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'le héirí-as comhalta den Rialtas, seachas an Taoiseach'
- 2 'má chomhairlionn an Taoiseach amhlaidh dó nó di', 'má mholann an Taoiseach sin dó nó di'

ARTICLE 28.9.4<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 28.9.4<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELGE

Tig leis an Taoiseach uair ar bith, ar ábhair is leor leis féin, a iarraidh ar chomhalta den Rialtas éirí as oifig; mura ndéana an comhalta sin de réir na hachainí sin, ní foláir don Uachtarán an comhalta sin a chur as oifig má chomhairlionn an Taoiseach dó é.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Taoiseach may at any time, for reasons which he himself considers sufficient, ask a member of the Government to give up office; if that member does not act in accordance with that request, the President must put that member out of office if the Taoiseach so advises.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Taoiseach may at any time, for reasons which to him seem sufficient, request a member of the Government to resign; should the member concerned fail to comply with the request, his appointment shall be terminated by the President if the Taoiseach so advises.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'His appointment shall be terminated by the President' is expressed as 'ní foláir don Uachtarán an comhalta sin a chur as oifig' ('the President must put that member out of office') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Request' is expressed by 'achainí', a term translated as 'petition' in Téarmaí Dlí, though it has this sense of 'request' in general usage.
- 3 'Should the member concerned fail to comply with the request' is expressed as 'mura ndéana an comhalta sin de réir na hachainí sin' ('if that member does not act in accordance with that request') in the Irish text.
- 4 'If the Taoiseach so advises' is expressed as 'má chomhairlionn an Taoiseach dó é' ('if the Taoiseach so advises him') – note that 'é sin' in the previous subsection is replaced by 'é' alone here.

- 5 'For reasons which to him seem sufficient' is expressed as 'ar ábhair is leor leis féin' ('for reasons which he himself considers sufficient') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Resign' is expressed as 'éirí as oifig' ('give up office') in the Irish text, as in the foregoing subsection.
- 7 'May' is expressed as 'tig le' ('it is open to') in the Irish text, as we saw also in the first two subsections of this section, and 'shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must').

Commentary

ar ábhair 'Cause, reason' is one of the senses of 'ábhar' given in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'tá a ábhar aige, he has cause, reason, for it', 'ar an ábhar sin, for that reason' and 'ar an ábhar go, for the reason that'. 'Cause, reason' is the principal sense of 'adhbhar' in Dinneen, followed by 'matter, stuff, material', which is the principal sense of 'ábhar' in Ó Dónaill. 'Ábhar' is translated as 'matter; subject matter' in Téarmaí Dlí. DIL cites 'ciadcobrinne moidim do dénum ní bóí adbar híc' ('though I should have desired to boast, there was no cause híc'), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, as an example of 'adbar' in the sense of 'cause, ground, reason', also citing 'ar adhbharaibh aile' ('for other reasons') from the Annals of the Four Masters. The principal sense of 'adbar' there is 'material, matter'.

In s3(5) of the National Lottery Act, 1986, 'The Minister may at any time, for reasons that seem to him to be sufficient and are stated in a notice in writing given to the licensee, revoke a licence' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire tráth ar bith, ar chúiseanna is dóigh leis is leor agus a bheidh sonraithe i bhfógra i scríbhinn a thabharfar don cheadúnaí, ceadúnas a chúlghairm'. In s10(3) of the Censorship of Publications Act, 1929, 'The Minister may if he thinks fit for reasons which appear to him sufficient grant to any person a permit in writing' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire más oiriúnach leis é, ar réasúin is dó leis is leor, cead i scríbhinn do dheona d'éinne'. Finally, in s89(3) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'Provided always that the Adjutant-General may ..., for reasons which to him seem sufficient, direct such person to be tried by Court-Martial' is translated as 'Ach mar sin féin, ... féadfaidh an Ard-Chongantóir, ar réasúin is leor dar leis féin, a ordú go dtí rialfídh Arm-Chúirt an duine sin'.

is leor leis féin 'Is leor liom é' is translated by Ó Dónaill as 'I think it is enough', citing 'ba leor liom a leath, half of it would do me' – but, more exactly, 'I would consider half of it sufficient', according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú. Dinneen translates 'is leor liom é' as 'I think it is enough, I am satisfied with it, it will do me'. DIL cites 'lour leu gníma recto dia firianugud' ('the works of the Law they deem enough to justify them'), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, as an example of the construction 'is lór la x, x considers to be enough, to be competent', with 'lór' being translated as 'enough, sufficient'.

'On account of his having seized ... more or less goods ... than would or might be sufficient to meet the full amount of the debt' is translated as 'mar gheall gur dhin sé ... níos mó nó níos lú earraí ... do ghabháil ... ná mar do bheadh no d'fhéadfadh a bheith dóthanach chun íoc do dhéanamh i lán-mhéid na bhfiacha' in s11 of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1923.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, considers 'is dóigh leis nó léi is leor' to be repetitious without any benefit as regards the sense, 'is leor leis nó léi' sufficing.

mura ndéana The present subjunctive of 'déan' – this would generally be replaced by 'mura ndéanfaidh' today – see the commentary on Article 12.3.1°. According to the official standard, the form of the future tense can be used in place of the present subjunctive when it does not have an optative function – see the initial page of the chapter on the 'Verb' in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil (p. 46 of the 1995 edition). Ó Dónaill cites 'mura mbaine, mbainfidh, taisme dó, unless he meets with an accident' and 'mura n-íní, n-imeoidh, tú gan mhoill, if you don't leave soon' as examples of the conjunction 'mura' with present subjunctive or future indicative to express future condition. Dinneen gives 'mura' as a variant of 'muna', translated there as 'unless, if not'. DIL cites 'mini' from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles as an example of the conjunction 'má' with negative, 'mani' being the standard Old Irish form, with 'mane', 'mana', 'maine' 'meni', 'min-e, -a' and 'mun-i, -a' being found in Middle Irish. 'Mura' is the standard Modern Irish form, being included in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil.

In s4(b)(ii) of the Finance Act, 1981, 'such person continues ... to fail to comply with the provision' is translated as 'go leanfaidh an duine sin ... ag mainneachtain an fhoráil a chomhlíonadh'. In s3(3) of the Licensing (Renewal of Licences) Act, 1923, 'Any person who shall fail to comply with an order of a District Court' is translated as 'Éinne ná có-líonfídh ordú a dhéanfaidh Cúirt Dúitche'. 'And if the Controller is satisfied that a holder has failed to comply with a request under this subsection' is translated as 'agus más deimhin leis an Rialaitheoir gur mhainnigh sealbhóir iarraidh faoin bhfo-alt seo a chomhlíonadh' in s16(3) of the Plant Varieties (Proprietary Rights) Act, 1980. 'If the Court is satisfied that the patentee has without reasonable cause failed to comply with the request of the Minister to make, use, exercise or vend the patented invention for the service of the State' is translated as 'más deimhin leis an gCúirt gur loic an paitinní, gan chúis réasúnach, déanamh de réir iarraidh an Aire an t-áireagán paitinnithe a dhéanamh, a úsáid, a fheidhmiú nó a dhíol le haghaidh seirbhís an Stáit' in s34(2) of the Patents Act, 1964.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, remarks that 'mainnigh' = 'neglect' and therefore does not suit the sense here, and recommends 'mura ndéanfaidh an comhalta sin mar a iarrfar air nó uirthi'. Commenting on the direct translation of the similar Article 30.5.3°, Professor Ó Murchú remarks that 'mainnigh' is not a very common word and, insofar as literary convention goes, 'ag' or 'faoi' would be used to link it with a substantive phrase as indirect object, i.e. 'mainneachtain ag déanamh' or 'mainneachtain faoi dhéanamh'.

de réir na hachainí 'Achainí' is translated as 'petition' in Téarmaí Dlí, and as 'request, entreaty, petition' in Ó Dónaill, 'athchuinge' being translated as 'request, petition, entreaty' in Dinneen – see the commentary on Article 22.2.3°. 'De réir' is translated as 'in accordance with' in Téarmaí Dlí, and as 'in accordance with, according to' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'déanamh de réir ruda' as 'to act in accordance with, to comply with, something' – see the commentary on Article 1.

a chur as oifig See the commentary on Article 13.1.3° where this phrase also expresses 'terminate the appointment'. 'The Minister may ... suspend the Acting Chief Executive from office or terminate his appointment as Acting Chief Executive' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire ... an Príomhfheidhmeannach Gníomhach a fhionraí óna oifig nó a cheapachán mar Phríomhfheidhmeannach Gníomhach a fhoirceannadh' in s6(7)(d) of the National Treasury Management Agency Act, 1990. In s9(5)(a) of the Prosecution of Offences Act, 1974, 'The Taoiseach may terminate an appointment under this section at any time' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an Taoiseach ceapachán faoin alt seo a fhoirceannadh tráth ar bith'. In s9(5) of the Local Authorities (Combined Purchasing) Act, 1939, 'but such revocation shall not terminate or affect any other appointment of such official contractor' is translated as 'ach ní chuirfidh an ceiliúradh san deireadh le haon cheapadh eile ná ní dhéanfaidh deifir d'aon cheapadh eile ag ceapadh an chonnrathóra oifigiúil sin'. Finally, in s13 of the 'Sligo County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'The following offices and employments are, under this section, terminated' is translated as 'Cuirtar ar ceal fén alt so na hoifigí agus na fostaíochta so leanas'.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the direct translation below, regards 'foirceannadh' as too final for this context and recommends 'scor'.

éirí as oifig Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'éirí as', without 'oifig', in the direct translation below, would also have the sense of 'desist'.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Tig leis an Taoiseach uair ar bith, ar ábhair is leor leis féin nó léi féin, a iarraidh ar chomhalta den Rialtas éirí as oifig; mura ndéanfaidh an comhalta sin de réir na hachainí sin, ní foláir don Uachtarán an comhalta sin a chur as oifig má chomhairlíonn an Taoiseach dó nó di é.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Féadfaidh an Taoiseach, tráth ar bith, ar chúiseanna is leor leis nó léi<sup>1</sup>, iarraidh ar chomhalta den Rialtas éirí as<sup>2</sup>; más rud é go mainneoidh an comhalta lena mbaineann an iarraidh a chomhlíonadh<sup>3</sup>, déanfaidh an tUachtarán a cheapachán nó a ceapachán<sup>4</sup> a fhoirceannadh<sup>5</sup> má chomhairlíonn an Taoiseach amhlaidh<sup>6</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'is dóigh leis nó léi is leor', 'leis féin nó léi féin'
- 2 'éirí as oifig'
- 3 'déanamh de réir na hiarrata', 'mura ndéanfaidh an comhalta sin mar a iarfar air nó uirthi'
- 4 'an ceapachán'
- 5 'a scor'
- 6 'más é sin / más amhlaidh sin a mholfaidh/chomhairleoidh an Taoiseach dó nó di'

ARTICLE 28.10 AIRTEAGAL 28.10

TÉACS GAEILGE

Aon uair nach leanann tromlach i nDáil Éireann de bheith i dtacaíocht leis an Taoiseach, ní foláir dósan éirí as oifig mura lánscoireann an tUachtarán Dáil Éireann ar chomhairle an Taoisigh agus go n-éiríonn leis an Taoiseach tacaíocht tromlaigh i nDáil Éireann a fháil ar ationól do Dháil Éireann i ndiaidh an lánscoir.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any time that a majority in Dáil Éireann does not continue to be in support of the Taoiseach, he must give up office unless the President dissolves Dáil Éireann on the advice of the Taoiseach and the Taoiseach succeeds in getting the support of a majority in Dáil Éireann on the reassembly of Dáil Éireann after the dissolution.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Taoiseach shall resign from office upon his ceasing to retain the support of a majority in Dáil Éireann unless on his advice the President dissolves Dáil Éireann and on the reassembly of Dáil Éireann after the dissolution the Taoiseach secures the support of a majority in Dáil Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Unless on his advice the President dissolves Dáil Éireann' is expressed in the Irish text as 'mura lánscoireann an tUachtarán Dáil Éireann ar chomhairle an Taoisigh' ('unless the President dissolves Dáil Éireann on the Taoiseach's advice'); this may also be read as 'if the President does not dissolve Dáil Éireann on the Taoiseach's advice'; note that a comma follows this clause in the original Irish text.
- 2 'Upon his ceasing to retain the support of a majority' is expressed as 'Aon uair nach leanann tromlach i nDáil Éireann de bheith i dtacaíocht leis an Taoiseach' ('Any time that a majority does not continue to be in support of the Taoiseach') in the Irish text, much as we have seen in Article 13.2.2°.
- 3 'The Taoiseach secures the support of a majority' is expressed as '(go) n-éiríonn leis an Taoiseach tacaíocht tromlaigh ... a fháil' ('the Taoiseach succeeds in getting the support of a majority') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some other Articles.

Note that Article 53 of the 1922 Constitution concludes as follows:

... and he and the Ministers nominated by him shall retire from office should he cease to retain the support of a majority in Dáil Éireann .... Provided, however, that the Oireachtas shall not be dissolved on the advice of an Executive Council which has ceased to retain the support of a majority in Dáil Éireann .... agus imeoidh an t-Uachtarán agus na hAíri a ainmneoidh sé as oifig má chailleann seisean tacaíocht mhór-áirimh i nDáil Éireann .... Ar choiníoll, ámh, ná sguirfean an t-Oireachtas ar chomhairle aon Ard-Chomhairle go mbeidh tacaíocht mhór-áirimh i nDáil Éireann cailte aici.

Commentary

tromlach This headword expresses 'majority' in current usage, particularly in a political context. Ó Dónaill translates 'tromlach' as 'greater part, main body, majority' – see the commentary on Article 26.2.2°. Only a few examples of this noun are cited in DIL, none of which comes from the earlier sources, but 'trom', on which 'tromlach' is based, is cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles ('nipsa tróm for nech' ['I was not burthensome to any one']) and from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, where we find 'in toimseo truím' ('of the heavy measure') glossing Latin 'multi ponderis'. See further the commentary on Article 13.2.2°.

i dtacaíocht 'Support, backing' is the main current sense of this noun, particularly in political usage, Ó Dónaill also giving 'security, guarantee' as senses of this headword, citing 'tacaíocht a thabhairt do dhuine, to support, uphold, someone', 'rinne sé tacaíocht liom, he stood by me' and 'dul i dtacaíocht ar dhuine, to offer support to someone; to go security for someone'. 'Ceart tacaíochta' and 'ordú i dtacaíocht' are translated respectively as 'right of support' and 'order in aid' in Téarmaí Dlí. Dinneen translates 'tacaíocht' as 'support, security; a confirmed bargain', translating 'i dtacaíocht' as 'by way of security, as guarantee'. 'Taca', on which 'tacaíocht' is based, while being given as a headword in DIL, where it is translated principally as 'prop, support', is not cited from the earlier sources.

In s2(2)(f) of the Oireachtas (Payment of Members) Act, 1923, 'Any office the tenure of which is dependent on the President of the Executive Council retaining the support of a majority in Dáil Éireann' is translated as 'Aon oifig go bhfuil a sealbhíocht ag brath ar an mór-áireamh i nDáil Éireann d'fhanúint ina dtaca le hUachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle'. See further the commentary on Article 12.10.4°.

ationól Verbal noun of 'ationóil', which verb is translated as 'reconvene' in Ó Dónaill, 'ationól' as a noun being translated as 'reassembly'. 'Ationól' is a compound of the prefix 'ath-', translated principally as 're-, second' in Ó Dónaill, and 'tionól', with 'ath+ t-' > 'at-'. See further the commentary on Article 18.3 and see the commentary on Article 15.11.3° regarding 'tionól'.

In Article 18.3, following the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, 'by the Taoiseach who is appointed next after the re-assembly of Dáil Éireann' is rendered as 'ag an Taoiseach a cheapfar ar Dháil Éireann d'ationól'. In Article 24 of the 1922 Constitution, 'Dáil Éireann shall fix the date of re-assembly of the Oireachtas' is translated as 'ceapfaidh Dáil Éireann dáta aith-thionól an Oireachtas'. 'Direct the re-assembly of the Court' is translated as 'A ordú go dtiocfadh an Chúirt le chéile arís' in s115(1) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

nach leanann ... de 'Lean de' is translated as 'continue at; cling, adhere to; follow' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'leanúint de rud' as 'to continue to do something; to cling to something' and cites 'lean siad den chomhrá, they continued the conversation'. Dinneen translates 'lean de' as 'follow on, persevere' and states that, when not transitive, 'lean' generally takes the preposition 'de', but also 'ar' and sometimes 'le', translating 'lean leat, lean ort, lean díot' as 'continue on, proceed'. DIL cites 'is menand is dind insci riam lenid' ('it is clear that he adheres to the previous utterance' ['? continues with, carries on with']) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, translating 'lenaid di' as 'clings to, adheres to, cleaves to, stays with, follows'.

'Every direct representative ... shall upon his ceasing to be a registered medical practitioner' is translated as 'Gach gar-ionadaí ... beidh sé, ar scur do de bheith ina dhochtúir leighis cláruithe' in s5(2) of the Medical Practitioners Act, 1927. In s56(1) of the Local Government Act, 1925, 'such officer shall upon his ceasing ... for any reason other than misconduct or incapacity to perform the duties aforesaid, be entitled' is translated as 'ar scur don oifigeach san ... ar aon chúis nách mí-iompar ná mí-chumas de sna dualgais roimhráite do chó-líona beidh sé i dteideal' in s56(1) of the Local Government Act, 1925.

'He has ceased to retain ...' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'tá ... caillte aige' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1927, p. 697. 'The company ceases to retain the leasehold interest acquired by it' is translated as 'go scoirfidh an chuideachta leas léasachta a fuair sí a choinneáil' in s150(2)(a) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976, with 'go scoirfidh an díoltóir den leas léasach a fuair sé ón gceannaitheoir a choimeád' translating 'the vender ceases to retain the leasehold interest acquired by him from the purchaser' in s23(3)(a) of the Finance (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1968. 'Ceases to retain at least 75 per cent. of the issued share capital of the transferor company concerned' is translated as 'tar éis scor de 75 faoin gcéad ar a laghad de scairchaipiteal eisithe na cuideachta aistreora lena mbaineann a choimeád' in s72(4)(a) of the Finance Act, 1973. See further the commentary on Articles 13.2.2° and 28.11.1°.

Again Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú rejects the direct translation below, 'ar scor dó nó di tacaíocht tromlaigh i nDáil Éireann a choimeád', in that it is understood from 'scor' that the Taoiseach himself or herself would wish this when the opposite is the case. The alternatives recommended by Professor Ó Murchú are given as variants below.

go n-éiríonn leis 'For the purpose of securing sufficient support for a building erected or intended to be erected on such land' is translated as 'd'fhonn leor-thacaíocht d'áirithiú d'fhoirgint a bheidh tógtha no le tógáil ar an talamh san' in s42(1) of the Minerals Development Act, 1940, with 'as may be necessary to secure adequate support to the buildings or works or to prevent or minimise damage thereto' being translated as 'fé mar is gá chun a chur in áirithe leor-thaca do bheith leis na foirgintí no leis na hoibreacha no chun damáiste dhóibh do chosc no do laigheadú' in s30(3) of the Mines and Minerals Act, 1931. 'In consideration of or to secure a sum not more than the amount of such compensation' is translated as 'i gcomaoine suime nár mhó ná méid an chúitimh sin, no chun an tsuim sin d'fháil' in s2(6)(c) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

éirí as oifig See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

lánscoireann See the commentary on Articles 13.2.1° and 18.8.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Aon uair nach leanann tromlach i nDáil Éireann de bheith i dtacaíocht leis an Taoiseach, ní foláir dósan nó dise éirí as oifig mura lánscoireann an tUachtarán Dáil Éireann ar chomhairle an Taoisigh agus go n-éiríonn leis an Taoiseach tacaíocht tromlaigh i nDáil Éireann a fháil ar ationól do Dháil Éireann i ndiaidh an lánscoir.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Éireoidh an Taoiseach as oifig ar scor dó nó di tacaíocht tromlaigh i nDáil Éireann a choimeád<sup>1</sup> mura rud é, ar chomhairle an Taoisigh, go lánscoirfidh<sup>2</sup> an tUachtarán Dáil Éireann agus go ngnóthóidh<sup>3</sup> an Taoiseach tacaíocht tromlaigh i nDáil Éireann ar ationól Dháil Éireann.

Variants

- 1 'ar é nó í a fhágáil gan tacaíocht tromlaigh i nDáil Éireann', 'i gcás go staonfaidh tromlach i nDáil Éireann ó thacú leis nó léi', 'i gcás go stadfaidh tromlach i nDáil Éireann de thacú leis nó léi', 'i gcás go dteipfidh tacaíocht tromlaigh i nDáil Éireann air nó uirthi'
- 2 'go scoirfidh', 'go ndiscaoilfidh'
- 3 'go ngnóthaíonn'

ARTICLE 28.11.1° AIRTEAGAL 28.11.1°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Má éiríonn an Taoiseach as oifig tráth ar bith, ní foláir a mheas go n-éiríonn an chuid eile de chomhaltaí an Rialtais as oifig fairis sin; ach leanfaidh an Taoiseach agus an chuid eile de chomhaltaí an Rialtais dá ndualgais nó go gceaptar a gcomharbaí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

If the Taoiseach gives up office at any time, it must be considered that the rest of the members of the Government give up office also; but the Taoiseach and the rest of the members of the Government will continue with their duties until their successors are appointed.

ENGLISH TEXT

If the Taoiseach at any time resigns from office the other members of the Government shall be deemed also to have resigned from office, but the Taoiseach and the other members of the Government shall continue to carry on their duties until their successors shall have been appointed.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The other members of the Government' is expressed as 'an chuid eile de chomhaltaí an Rialtais' ('the rest / the other part of the members of the Government') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Shall continue to carry on their duties' is expressed in the Irish text as 'leanfaidh (siad) dá ndualgais' ('will continue with their duties' / 'will continue to do their duties').

- 3 'Shall have been appointed' is expressed as '(go) gceaptar' ('is appointed') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Shall' is again expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 53 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

... but the President and such Ministers shall continue to carry on their duties until their successors shall have been appointed .... ach leanfaidh an t-Uachtarán agus na hAirí sin ag déanamh a ndualgaisí go dtí go gceapfar a gcomharbaí.

Commentary

a gcomharbaí 'Comharba i dteideal' is translated as 'successor in title' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'successor (to office, or dignity)' and 'inheritor of property, heir' being given as senses of 'comharba' in Ó Dónaill. The entry in Dinneen s.v. 'cómharba', gives the history of the term as follows:

The term 'cómharba' ('corbe', 'coarb') was mainly used of the successor to an abbacy or ecclesiastical benefice and by extension to the lay hereditary farmer of the property assigned to the foundation and further to any successor even of a civil personage.

Dinneen cites 'cómharba Pheadair, the Pope', 'cómharba Phádraig, the primate, archbishop of Armagh, also the archbishop of Cashel (Patrick founded both sees)' and states that 'the term was applied even to females, as ban-chómharba Brighde, the abbess of Kildare'. As Fergus Kelly states in his Guide to Early Irish Law (p. 41), 'the abbot – whether in orders or not – is often referred to as the comarbae "heir" of the founder of the monastery, which term was later anglicized "coarb"'.<sup>7</sup>

Old Irish 'comarb(b)ae', translated in DIL as 'heir, successor', is a compound of 'com' and 'orbbae' (translated as 'a patrimony, heritage [of land], real estate' in DIL – 'orbbae' translates Latin 'possessio' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms) and glosses Latin 'heredes' in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles ('it sib ata chomarpí Abracham' ['it is ye that are Abracham's heirs']). Writing on inheritance of land in early Irish law, Fergus Kelly states that 'To ensure fairness in the division of an inheritance (orbae), the division is made by the youngest inheritor (comarbae), but the eldest gets the first choice, the second eldest the second choice, and so on'. Hence the legal maxim 'rannaid ósar 7 dogoa sinser' ('the youngest divides and the eldest chooses'). 'The youngest gets the last choice, so it is in his interest to divide the property into equally valuable portions', according to Professor Kelly. In exceptional circumstances lots were used in the division of land between heirs, 'berae cocrann for comranna iter comarbaib' ('cast lots for division between heirs') being cited by Fergus Kelly (op. cit., p. 209) from an early Irish law-tract.

See the commentary on Article 49.3 for citations from the Acts.

an chuid eile 'Cuid eile agaibh, den teaghlach' is translated as 'others of you, of the family' in Ó Dónaill, who also cites 'an chuid eile den scéal, the rest of the story'. Dinneen translates 'an chuid eile (againn, agaibh, 7c.)' as 'the rest (of us, you, etc.)', translating 'cuid eile' as 'others' and 'cuid ... cuid eile' as 'some ... others'. DIL cites 'ro mebaid ar in cuid ele' ('the others' were defeated) from the fifteenth-century translation of the English version of the Queste del Saint Graal. As regards the noun ‘cuit’, translated as ‘share, part, portion’, DIL cites ‘ismaith achuit occa’ (‘good is His share in it’) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

leanfaidh ... de See the commentary on the foregoing section. In s1(3) of the Ministers and Secretaries (Amendment) (No. 2) Act, 1977, ‘If the Taoiseach at any time resigns from office, a Minister of State shall be deemed also to have resigned from office, but shall continue to carry on his duties until the successor of the Taoiseach shall have been appointed’ is translated as ‘Má éiríonn an Taoiseach as oifig tráth ar bith, measfar Aire Stáit a bheith éirithe as oifig freisin, ach fanfaidh sé i mbun a dhualgas go dtí go gceapfar comharba an Taoisigh’. In s11(1) of the Electoral Act, 1923, ‘with respect to the arrangements to be made by the registration officer for carrying out his duties as to registration’ is translated as ‘i dtaobh na socrúithe a bheidh le déanamh ag an oifigeach clárathachta chun a dhualgaisí clárathachta do chó-líona’.

‘Seol’ usually translates ‘carry on’ in the modern Acts, ‘carry on activities which are outside the powers of the society’ being translated as ‘gníomhaíochtaí a sheoladh atá lasmuigh de chumhachtaí an chumainn’ in s28(2)(a)(i) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, for example, ‘chun aon ghníomhaíochta ... a sheoladh’ translating ‘to carry on any activities’ in s13(1)(g) of the Transport Act, 1950.

a mheas See the commentary on Articles 12.6.2°, 16.6 and 24.2.

fairis sin See the commentary on Article 10.4.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

Direct translation

Má éiríonn an Taoiseach as oifig tráth ar bith measfar go mbeidh éirithe as oifig ag comhaltáí eile an Rialtais chomh maith<sup>1</sup>, ach leanfaidh an Taoiseach agus na comhaltáí eile den Rialtas orthu i mbun a ndualgas go dtí go mbeidh a gcomharbaí ceaptha<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘freisin’
- 2 ‘go dtí go gceapfar a gcomharbaí’

ARTICLE 28.11.2° AIRTEAGAL 28.11.2°

TÉACS GAELGE

Na comhaltáí den Rialtas a bheas in oifig lá lánscotha Dháil Éireann, leanfaid dá n-oifig nó go gceapfar a gcomharbaí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The members of the Government who will be in office on the day of a dissolution of Dáil Éireann, they will continue in their office until their successors are appointed.

ENGLISH TEXT

The members of the Government in office at the date of a dissolution of Dáil Éireann shall continue to hold office until their successors shall have been appointed.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘(The members) ... shall continue to hold office’ is expressed as ‘leanfaid dá n-oifig’ (‘they shall continue in their office’) in the Irish text, the same phrase expressing ‘shall continue to carry on’ in the previous section; a new clause is created in the Irish text, a comma following the first clause in that text alone (no such comma being found in the original text), ‘leanfaid dá n-oifig’ referring back to ‘Na comhaltáí den Rialtas’ (‘The members of the Government’) in the Irish text.
- 2 ‘At the date of the dissolution of Dáil Éireann’ is expressed as ‘lá lánscotha Dháil Éireann’ (‘[on the] day of the dissolution of Dáil Éireann’), ‘lá’ expressing ‘date’ as we have seen in some other Articles.
- 3 ‘The members ... in office’ is expressed as ‘Na comhaltáí ... a bheas in oifig’ (‘the members ... who will be in office’) in the Irish text.
- 4 ‘Shall have been appointed’ is expressed as ‘(go) gceapfar’ (‘are appointed’) in the Irish text, as in the previous subsection.

Note that Article 53 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

... but the President and such Ministers shall continue to carry on their duties until their successors shall have been appointed .... ach leanfaidh an t-Uachtarán agus na hAíre sin ag déanamh a ndualgaisí go dtí go gceapfar a gcomharbaí.

Article 56 contains the following:

... but he shall continue in office until his successor shall have been appointed .... ach leanfa sé in oifig no go gceapfar a chomharba.

Note that s1(2) of the Ministers and Secretaries (Amendment) (No. 2) Act, 1977, reads as follows:

A person appointed to be a Minister of State shall continue to hold office so long only as he continues to be a member of a House of the Oireachtas, but a Minister of State in office at the date of a dissolution of Dáil Éireann shall continue to hold office until the successor of the Taoiseach who was in office on such date shall have been appointed. Duine a cheapfar chun bheith ina Aire Stáit ní fhanfaidh sé i seilbh oifige ach fad a fhanfaidh sé ina chomhalta de Theach den Oireachtas, ach Aire Stáit a bheidh in oifig ar dháta Dháil Éireann a lánscoir fanfaidh sé i seilbh oifige go dtí go mbeidh comharba an Taoisigh a bhí in oifig ar an dáta sin ceaptha.

Commentary

a bheas The special form of the relative, future tense, of the substantive verb – this would be replaced by ‘a bheidh’ in the Acts today. See the commentary on Article 6.1.

leanfaid The synthetic form of the third person plural, future tense, of the verb ‘lean’ – the analytic form, ‘leanfaidh siad’, would be used in the Acts today. See the commentary on Article 14.5.1°. See the commentary on the previous subsection regarding ‘lean do’.

Standardised Irish text

Na comhaltaí den Rialtas a bheidh in oifig lá lánscoirthe Dháil Éireann, leanfaidh siad dá n-oifig nó go gceaptar a gcomharbaí.

Direct translation

Leanfaidh na comhaltaí den Rialtas a bheidh in oifig ar dháta lánscoirthe<sup>1</sup> Dháil Éireann i seilbh a n-oifige go dtí go mbeidh a gcomharbaí ceaptha<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'scortha', 'discaoilte', 'tráth a lánscoirfear'
- 2 'go dtí go gceapfar a gcomharbaí'

ARTICLE 28.12 AIRTEAGAL 28.12

TÉACS GAELIGE

Is de réir dlí a rialófar na nithe seo a leanas .i. Ranna Stáit a chomheagrú agus gnó a roinnt orthu, comhaltaí den Rialtas a cheapadh chun bheith ina nAiri i mbun na Ranna sin, na feidhmeanna a bhaineas le hoifig chomhalta den Rialtas a chomhlíonadh le linn an comhalta sin a bheith tamall as láthair nó ar míthreoir, agus tuarastal comhalta an Rialtais.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The following matters will be regulated in accordance with law i.e. the organization of Departments of State and the division of business between them, the appointment of members of the Government to be Ministers in charge of those Departments, the fulfilling of the functions relating to the office of a member of the Government while that member is absent for a period or (mentally) incapacitated, and the salary of members of the Government.

ENGLISH TEXT

The following matters shall be regulated in accordance with law, namely, the organization of, and distribution of business amongst Departments of State, the designation of members of the Government to be the Ministers in charge of the said Departments, the discharge of the functions of the office of a member of the Government during his temporary absence or incapacity, and the remuneration of the members of the Government.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The designation of members of the Government' is expressed as 'comhaltaí den Rialtas a cheapadh' ('the appointment of members of the Government') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Temporary' is expressed by 'tamall' ('a while') in the Irish text, 'sealadach' translating 'temporary' in Téarmaí Dlí and expressing 'temporary' in Article 28.6.3<sup>o</sup>, for example.
- 3 'Incapacity' is expressed in the Irish text by 'míthreoir', a term which would seem primarily to connote mental incapacity, as we have seen earlier.

- 4 'The functions of the office' is expressed as 'na feidhmeanna a bhaineas le hoifig' ('the functions relating to the office') in the Irish text.
- 5 'The Ministers in charge' is expressed as '(ina) nAiri i mbun' ('Ministers in charge') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Discharge' is expressed as 'comhlíonadh', 'fulfilling', in the Irish text.
- 7 'Remuneration' is expressed as 'tuarastal', usually translated as 'salary', 'wages', in the Irish text, as we have seen earlier.
- 8 'During his temporary absence' is expressed as 'le linn an comhalta sin a bheith tamall as láthair' ('while that member is absent a while') in the Irish text.
- 9 'Namely' is expressed by '.i.', the contraction for 'id est', 'that is', in the Irish text, as we have seen earlier.

Commentary

a chomheagrú 'Comheagrú' is the verbal noun of a compound verb 'comheagraigh', which verb is not cited in Ó Dónaill or in Dinneen. 'Comheagar', which is the corresponding noun, is translated as 'co-ordination' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'comheagar a chur ar rudaí, to co-ordinate things'. Dinneen translates 'cómheagar' as 'arrangement, order, array; ornament' citing 'cath cóimheagair, a squadron in array', and giving the adjective 'cómheagartha' as a separate headword, translated as 'arranged, set with (dé)'. DIL gives an example of 'comecartha' from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster, translating this adjective as 'well-arranged'. 'Comecar', as a noun, is translated as 'array, ornament, proper arrangement' in DIL, and as 'act of arraying, adorning' as a verbal noun, with citations from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster onwards. 'Ecor'/'ecar' is the verbal noun of 'in-cuirethar' and is translated principally as 'arranging, disposing, setting in order; arrangement, array' in DIL. Modern Irish 'cuir in eagar' ('edit') is a development of this sense. See further the commentary on Articles 18.7.1<sup>o</sup>iii and 36iii, 'comheagraíocht' expressing 'organization' in the latter Article.

The 'Organisation of Working Time Act, 1997' is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht um Eagrú Ama Oibre, 1997', for example, 'seirbhísí dóiteáin a eagrú' translating 'the organisation of fire services' in the Long Title of the Fire Services Act, 1981. The Long Title of the Ministers and Secretaries (Amendment) Act, 1928, 'An Act to make certain changes in the organisation of the Department of Lands and Agriculture', is translated as 'Acht chun atharuithe áirithe do dhéanamh ar chó-ghléasa na Roinne Tailte agus Talmhaíochta', 'the organisation of the Society' being translated as 'có-ghléasadh an Chumainn' in s1(2)(b) of the Red Cross Act, 1938, for example. 'That such person was ... a member of an organisation' is translated as 'go raibh an duine sin ... ina bhall de chó-ghléasa' in s4(1)(a) of the Superannuation and Pensions Act, 1923.

tamall This headword is translated principally as 'space of time, while, spell' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'bhí mé ann tamall, I was there for a while'. Dinneen translates 'tamall' as 'a space, especially of time, a while, a time, a turn ...', translating 'tamall' as an adverb as 'for a time'. 'Tamall' is not attested in older records, DIL's first and apparently earliest citation coming from Pilib Bocht Ó hUiginn (†1487) ('do thamall', 'for a time'). See the commentary on Article 28.6.3<sup>o</sup> regarding 'temporary'.

a roinnt orthu ‘Rud a roinnt ar dhaoine’ is translated as ‘to divide something among people’ in Ó Dónaill, ‘share, apportion’ being one of the senses of ‘roinn’, ‘divide’, Ó Dónaill citing ‘roinn sí na milseáin orthu, she shared out the sweets among them’, along with ‘roinnimis an obair eadrainn, let us share the work between us’. Dinneen includes ‘(I) assign, allot, or impart to (ar)’ and ‘distribute (idir, ar)’ among the senses of ‘roinnim’, citing ‘roinnim mo chuid ar mo chlainn, I divide my means amongst my children’. Among the examples of ‘rannaid’ with the preposition ‘fri’ (Modern Irish ‘le’), in the sense of ‘divides with, shares’, passing later into the sense of ‘apportions to, bestows’, cited in DIL is ‘coro rannam á orpe fri Crist’ (‘that we may be partakers of Christ’s heritage’) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. This verb is based on ‘rann’, translated principally as ‘a part (of a whole)’ in DIL.

‘I distribute’ is translated as ‘dailim’ in Téarmaí DLi, where ‘Statutes of distribution’ is translated as ‘Reachtanna an dáilte’. ‘Distribution of business among Divisions’ is translated as ‘Gnó a roinnt idir na Ranna’ in the Margin Title of s10 of the Courts of Justice (District Court) Act, 1946. ‘To arrange the distribution and allocation of the business of the High Court’ is translated as ‘gnó na hArd-Chúirte a roinnt agus a dháileadh’ in s10(3) of the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Act, 1961. ‘With the object of facilitating the allotment and distribution of the business and undertakings of the said two Companies to and among selected Co-operative Creamery Societies’ is translated as ‘chun a chur in usacht gnó agus cúraimí an dá Chuideachtan san do riar agus do roinnt ar Chomhar-Chumainn Uachtarlainne toghtha’ in the Preamble to the First Schedule to the Creamery Act, 1928. ‘Roinnt amach’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘distribution’ in Iris an Phuist, 28/12/27. Article 67 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

The number of judges, the constitution and organisation of, and distribution of business among, the said Courts and judges ... shall be as prescribed by the laws ....
De réir na ndlíthe ... iseadh bheidh uimhir na mbreithiún, bunú agus có-ghléasa agus roint ghnótha agus údaráis imeasg na gCúirteanna agus na mbreithiún roimh-ráite.

‘To arrange the distribution of the business of the Board among its members’ is translated as ‘a shocrú go ndéanfar gnó an Bhoird a dháileadh ar a chomhaltáí’ in s6(1)(b) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1983. See further the commentary on Article 45.3.2° where ‘imdháil’ expresses ‘distribute’. Note finally that a comma follows ‘amongst’ in the original text.

a cheapadh ‘The person who has been designated to be in command of a service aircraft shall be regarded as being the captain of the aircraft’ is translated as ‘measfar gurb é an duine a bheidh ainmnithe chun bheith i gceannas ar aerárthach seirbhíse captaen an aerárthaigh’ in s6(5) of the Defence (Amendment) Act, 1987, for example. See the commentary on Articles 6.1 (where ‘ceap’ expresses ‘designate’), 13.1.1° (where ‘ceap’ expresses ‘appoint’) and 15.10 (where ‘ceap’ expresses ‘attach’). Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends ‘ceap’, stating that none of the essential sense of the English is lost in the translation ‘a cheapadh chun a bheith ina nAirí ar na Ranna sin’.

a chomhlionadh See the commentary on Articles 12.1, 13.9 and 14.5.1° regarding the verb ‘comhlíon’. ‘To ensure that the persons appointed are persons who have the knowledge and experience to discharge the functions of those offices’ is translated as ‘chun a áirithiú go bhfuil an t-eolas agus an taithí is gá chun feidhmeanna na n-oifigí sin a chomhall ag na daoine a cheapfar’ in s42(3) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s13(e) of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) (No. 2) Act, 1923, ‘the visiting of persons detained therein by reasonable persons to be appointed by the Minister who shall discharge the functions aforesaid without remuneration’ is translated as ‘fiosrú na ndaoine i gcoinneáil ionta ag daoine freagarthacha a cheapfar ag an Aire agus a fheidhmeoidh na bhfeidhmeanna roimh-ráite in aisce’. In the First Schedule of the District Justices (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, ‘I will to the best of my skill and knowledge discharge all the duties thereof’ is translated as ‘go ndéanfad mo dhícheall, do réir mo thuisgiona agus m’eolais, ... ar dhualgaisí uile na hoifige do chó-líona’.

tuarastal comhaltáí an Rialtais This would have the form ‘tuarastal chomhaltáí an Rialtais’ in the official standard, ‘comhaltáí’ being lenited and in the nominative case rather than in the genitive case – see the commentary on Article 1. As regards ‘tuarastal’, see the commentary on Article 15.9.2°. Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú argues that ‘tuarastal’ rather than the Irish legal term ‘luach saothair’ might be more appropriate here as a general sum, formally agreed on, is involved.

a bhaineas The special form of the relative in ‘-s’ – this would have the form ‘a bhaineann’ in the Acts today. See the commentary on Article 1. Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends avoiding the use of the phrase ‘de chuid’, particularly as it adds to the obscurity here, and favours retaining ‘a bhaineann le’, i.e. ‘feidhmeanna a bhaineann le hoifig comhalta den Rialtas’.

.i. See the commentary on Articles 7 and 14.2.1°.

a rialófar See the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 12.5.

as láthair See the commentary on Articles 14.1 and 28.6.3°.

ar míthreoir See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

i mbun See the commentary on Article 28.7.1°.

Standardised Irish text

Is de réir dlí a rialófar na nithe seo a leanas .i. Ranna Stáit a chomheagrú agus gnó a roinnt orthu, comhaltáí den Rialtas a cheapadh chun bheith ina nAirí i mbun na Ranna sin, na feidhmeanna a bhaineann le hoifig chomhalta den Rialtas a chomhlíonadh le linn an comhalta sin a bheith tamall as láthair nó ar míthreoir, agus tuarastal chomhaltáí an Rialtais.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Déanfar na nithe seo a leanas a rialáil de réir dlí, eadhón<sup>1</sup>, gnó a eagrú agus a dháileadh ar Ranna Stáit, comhaltáí den Rialtas a ainmniú<sup>2</sup> chun bheith ina nAirí i mbun<sup>3</sup> na Ranna sin, feidhmeanna a bhaineann le hoifig chomhalta den Rialtas<sup>4</sup> a chomhall<sup>5</sup> le linn don chomhalta sin a bheith go sealadach as láthair nó faoi éagumas, agus luach saothair<sup>6</sup> chomhaltai an Rialtais.

Variants

- 1 'mar atá', 'eadhon'
- 2 'a cheapadh'
- 3 'ar'
- 4 'feidhmeanna oifige de chuid comhalta den Rialtas'
- 5 'a chomhlíonadh'
- 6 'tuarastal'

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS CAIDREAMH IDIRNÁISIÚNTA

ARTICLE 29.1 AIRTEAGAL 29.1

TÉACS GAEILGE

Dearbhaíonn Éire gur mian léi síocháin agus comhar, de réir an chothroim idirnáisiúnta agus na moráltachta idirnáisiúnta, a bheith ar bun idir náisiúin an domhain.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Ireland affirms that she wishes peace and co-operation, in accordance with international equity and international morality, to be established between the nations of the world.

ENGLISH TEXT

Ireland affirms its devotion to the ideal of peace and friendly co-operation amongst nations founded on international justice and morality.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Its devotion to' is expressed as 'gur mian léi (a bheith ar bun)' ('that she wishes [to be established]') in the Irish text, this same phrase expressing 'its adherence to' in the next section.
- 2 'Peace and friendly co-operation amongst nations' is expressed as 'síocháin agus comhar... a bheith ar bun idir náisiúin an domhain' ('peace and co-operation being established amongst the nations of the world') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Founded on international justice and morality' is expressed as 'de réir an chothroim idirnáisiúnta agus na moráltachta idirnáisiúnta' ('in accordance with international equity and international morality') in the Irish text, the Irish term 'cothrom' literally expressing 'equity, fair play'.
- 4 'The ideal of peace and friendly co-operation' is expressed simply as 'síocháin agus comhar' ('peace and co-operation') in the Irish text, 'comhar' however, being a term specifically encompassing this feature of reciprocity and mutual assistance in Irish life over centuries.
- 5 'Affirms' is expressed here by 'dearbhaigh', which is a different term to that which expresses 'affirms' in Article 1, 'deimhnigh', the English term here echoing that of the first Article.

Commentary

Dearbhaíonn 'Dearbhaím' is translated as 'I declare' in Téarmaí Dlí, Dinneen translating 'dearbhuighim' as 'I affirm, attest, swear, prove, certify'. 'Dearbhaigh' is translated as 'declare, affirm; assure, confirm; attest, prove' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'rud a dhearbhu' as 'to affirm something'. DIL gives one citation from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death of 'derbaigid' in the sense of 'asserts, affirms', the main sense being 'makes certain, proves, verifies'. 'Derbaid' was the earlier form of the verb, DIL citing 'a n-nonderbid' ('when ye prove') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles (glossing Latin 'probantes'), along with 'derbaid ní' ('it certifies something'), from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian, translating 'derbaid' principally as 'certifies, proves, confirms, attests'. This verb is based on 'derb' (translated as 'sure, certain, fixed, determinate' in DIL), 'ar derb' glossing Latin 'pro certo' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. See the commentary on Article 12.8 where the verbal noun 'dearbhu' expresses 'declaration'.

'I affirm (decree, etc.)' is translated as 'daingnim' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'I affirm (as an unsworn witness)' being translated as 'dearbhascaim' – see the commentary on Article 1. 'Where a court imposes a fine or affirms or varies a fine imposed by another court' is translated as 'I gcás a ngearrfaidh cúirt fineáil nó a ndaingneoidh nó a n-athróidh sí fineáil a ghearr cúirt eile' in s52(1)(a) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, for example, with 'such Judge shall, if he affirms such conviction, confirm the consequential disqualification order' being translated as 'déanfaidh an Breitheamh san, má dhaingníonn an ciontú san, daingniú ar an ordú dí-cháilíochta iarmartach' in s30(5) of the Road Traffic Act, 1933. See the commentary on Article 1, where 'deimhnigh' expresses 'affirms' for early translations of 'affirms'.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'daingnigh' has no sense in the context of this Article and favours 'dearbhaíonn Éire' as a direct translation of 'Ireland affirms', adding that 'Dearbhaíonn muintir na hÉireann' would be more natural in Irish.

gur mian léi 'An rud is mian le duine' is translated by Ó Dónaill as 'what one wishes', citing 'ba mhian liom fanacht, I would like to stay'. Dinneen translates 'is mian liom' as 'I desire, intend', citing 'pé rud is mian leat, whatever you like' and 'más mian leat, if you wish'. DIL gives citations of the phrase 'is mian limm' ('I like, desire') from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac (composed in the second half of the eleventh century) onwards, translating 'mian' as 'desire, inclination; object of desire', citing 'ba mian n-ingen ocus ban' ('the darling of girls and women') from an old Irish poem in the Milan Codex.

In the Preamble to the Griffith Settlement Act, 1923, 'moved by the lifelong self-sacrifice and devotion of the late President Arthur Griffith to the people of Ireland' is translated as 'ag cuimhneamh dóibh ar an gcuma in ar dhin an t-Uachtarán, Art Ó Griobhtha, a fuair bás le déanaí, a shaol go léir do thabhairt suas le díograis ar mhaithe le muintir na hÉireann'. 'Devotion to duty' is translated as 'dúthrachtacht' in Iris an Phuist, 15/8/28.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'devotion' as 'dúthracht, dílseacht', citing 'devotion to work, dúthracht chun oibre'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú regards 'tiomantas' in a draft of the direct translation below as being too unfamiliar when one has 'dílseacht' and recommends 'dúthracht' here if it is necessary to differentiate from 'dílseacht' expressing 'adherence' in the next section.

síocháin 'An tsíocháin a choimeád, to keep the peace' and 'síocháin Dé inár measc, may the peace of God be among us' are cited in Ó Dónaill, with 'I bind to the peace' being translated as 'cuirim bannaí síochána ar' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Síocháin' is translated as 'peace, state of peace, concord' in Dinneen. 'Síthcháin' is a compound of 'síth' ('peace') and 'cáin' (in the sense of 'law, regulation, rule') and is translated as 'peace, a state of peace, a compact of peace' in DIL. No citations of 'síthcháin' are found in the earlier sources, unlike the base form 'síth'/'síth', which is cited in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles ('airde síde et cáinchomricc' ['a sign of peace and good will']).

'Having in mind ... the maintenance of international peace and security and the promotion of friendly relations among nations' is translated as 'Ag cuimhneamh dóibh ... ar an tsíocháin agus an tslándáil idirnáisiúnta a chohabháil agus ar chaidreamh cairdiúil a chur ar aghaidh idir náisiúin' in the Preamble to the First Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967. 'That I will see and cause the peace to be kept and preserved' is translated as 'go gcuirfead fé ndéar go gcoimeádfar agus go gcosnófar an tsíocháin' in the 'Form of Declaration' in the Second Schedule to the Garda Síochána Act, 1924.

comhar The prefix 'comh-', translated principally as 'mutual, joint, common; co-' in Ó Dónaill, combines with 'ar', translated as 'act of ploughing, tilling, cultivating; husbandry' in DIL, to form this compound which continues to express a distinctive feature of rural Irish life, that of partnership and co-operation in seasonal tasks. Welsh 'cyfar' is cognate with Irish 'comar', Welsh law-texts containing detailed descriptions of co-operative ploughing (see Fergus Kelly's Guide to Early Irish Law, p. 241). Dinneen translates 'cómhar na gcómharsan' as 'system of reciprocal labour among neighbours', translating the headword 'cómhar' as 'co-operation, especially in tillage, mutually borrowed labour; alliance, reciprocity; society, companionship'. 'Comhar na gcómharsan' is translated as 'neighbourly co-operation' in Ó Dónaill, 'comhar' being translated as 'combined work, mutual assistance; co-operation, partnership', Ó Dónaill citing 'dul i gcomhar le duine i rud, to combine, co-operate with someone in something' and 'an comhar a dhiol le duine, to return a service to someone, repay someone for what he has done for one'.

'The promotion of friendly relations among nations' is translated as '(ar) chaidreamh cairdiúil a chur ar aghaidh idir náisiúin' in the Preamble to the First Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, as we have seen above. 'The Registrar of Friendly Societies' is translated as 'Clárathóir na gCara-Chumann' in the First Part of the Schedule to the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, and as 'Cláraitheoir na gCara-Chumann' in the First Part of the First Schedule to the Ombudsman Act, 1980.

'Co-operation between fire authorities' is translated as 'comhoibriú idir údaráis dóiteáin' in the Margin Title of s14 of the Fire Services Act, 1981, with 'Co-operation between committees' being translated as 'Comhar idir coistí' in the Margin Title of s29 of the Agriculture Act, 1931. 'With military co-operation' is translated as 'le có-oibriú míleata' in the Preamble to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923. In s13(1)(b) of the Acquisition of Land (Allotments) Act, 1926, 'to a number of people working on a co-operative system approved by the Minister' is translated as 'chun roinnt daoine a bheidh ag obair do réir mhodha chomhair a cheadóidh an tAire'.

de réir an chothroim 'Fair play; fairness, equity' is one of the secondary senses of 'cothrom' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'an cothrom a dhéanamh le duine, to deal fairly with someone', 'cothrom na Féinne a thabhairt, a dhéanamh, do dhuine, to give, stand, someone fair play' and 'cothrom dlí a fháil, to get even-handed justice, a fair trial'. 'Equity, justice, fair play' are included in Dinneen among the senses of 'comhthrom', citing 'comhthrom do thabhairt do dhuine, to treat a person fairly, "on the level"'. The same prefix 'com-' ('comh-') which we saw in 'comhar' above, this time combines with 'trom' ('heavy') to form 'comhthrom', which as a noun has the literal and principal sense of 'equal weight or amount, equivalent', DIL citing '(co ruc) a chomhthrom de argut' ('its weight in silver') from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster. 'Justice, equity, fair treatment' is a secondary sense of this noun, DIL citing 'rannsa i gcomhthrom do chomhrádh' ('give me a fair share of your attention') from the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards'.

'Natural justice' is translated as 'ceartas aiceanta' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'miscarriage of justice' is translated as 'iomrall ceartais'. 'The President of the Permanent Court of International Justice', for example, is styled 'Uachtarán na Buan-Chúirte um Cheartas Idirnáisiúnta' in Article XVIII(c) of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, 1957. 'And justice administered in the public Courts' is translated as 'Is i sna Cúirteanna puiblí ... a riarfar ceart' in Article 64 of the 1922 Constitution, 'any judge or justice' being translated as 'aon bhreitheamh no giúistís' in Article 75. 'The Department of Justice' is styled 'An Roinn Dlí agus Cirt' in s1(iii) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, where 'public services in connection with law, justice, public order and police' is translated as 'seirbhísí puiblí a bhaineann le dlí, ceart, ordú puiblí agus póilíneacht'. See further the commentary on Articles 34.1 and 43.2.1° where 'justice' is expressed as 'ceart'.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'cóir' is the term which would be used naturally in Irish in this sense, citing Ó Néill: 'cébé duine nach biaidh leinn agus nach gcaithfe ar son na córa'.

de réir ... na moráltachta 'Moráltacht' is translated as 'morality; morals' in Ó Dónaill, with 'moráltacht' being translated as 'morality' in Dinneen. DIL cites only one example of 'moráltacht' ('docum moraltachta na diagachta', from the manuscript Egerton 88 in the British Museum), the adjective 'morálda'/'morálta' being cited from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, composed in the second half of the eleventh century ('etargna moralla' [= Latin 'moralis sensis']), the noun 'moráil', translated as 'morality, the moral interpretation', coming from Latin 'moralis'.

'Subject to public order and morality' is expressed as 'gan san a dhul chun dochair don ord phoiblí ná don mhoráltacht phoiblí' in Article 44.2.1°. 'Contrary to public order or morality' is translated as 'contrártha don ord poiblí nó don mhoráltacht phoiblí' in s15(1)(b) of the Patents Act, 1964. In Article 8 of the 1922 Constitution, 'subject to public order and morality' is translated as 'ach gan dochar don rialtacht ná don mhoráltacht phuiblí'. 'Which relates to inventions, etc., contrary to law or morality' is translated as '(alt) a bhaineann le cumadóireachtaí, etc., contrárdha don dlí nó don mhorálas' in s116(1) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. See further the commentary on Article 40.6.1°.

de réir This phrase is translated as 'in accordance with' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Articles 14.5.2° and 18.10.1°. Note that this phrase expresses 'on the system of' in Article 12.2.3°. As regards 'founded', the English text appears ambiguous as to whether this refers to 'the ideal of peace and friendly co-operation' or to 'peace and friendly co-operation'; this ambiguity renders a literal translation difficult.

'The indictment against him may include ... any counts founded on any of the documents ... and exhibits considered by the justice at the preliminary examination' is translated as 'féadfár ... aon scóir a chur sa díotáil ina choinne ar scóir iad a bheidh bunaithe ar aon cheann de na doiciméid ... agus de na foilseáin a bhreithnigh an breitheamh ag an réamhscrúdú' in s18 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1967. In Article 3 of the First Schedule to the Jurisdiction of Courts and Enforcement of Judgement (European Communities) Act, 1988, 'the rules which enable jurisdiction to be founded on the document instituting the proceedings' is translated as 'na rialacha á chumasú dlínse a bhunú ar dhoiciméad tionscanta na n-imeachtaí'.

Looking at earlier Acts, in s5(3) of the Indemnity Act, 1924, 'the committee ... shall not take into consideration any loss or damage ... founded on the loss of mere pleasure or amenity' is translated as 'ní áireoidh an coiste aon chailliúint ná diobháil ... ná raibh inti ach cailliúint phléisiúir no nómhaireachta'. 'Any civil proceedings founded on negligence' is translated as 'aon imeachta sibhialta mar gheall ar fhaillí' in s1(3)(c) of the Indemnity Act, 1923.

ar bun This phrase is translated as 'established' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'gnó a chur ar bun, to establish a business' and 'cad é atá ar bun?' what's going on?' Dinneen translates 'ar bun' as 'afoot, set up, established', citing 'tá an teanga ar bun, the language is alive'. DIL cites 'in sid do beth ar bun' from the Leabhar Breac, a manuscript compiled in 1411 or earlier, this phrase corresponding almost exactly to 'síocháin ... a bheith ar bun' in the present Article 29.1.

Direct translation

Dearbhaíonn<sup>1</sup> Éire a dúthracht<sup>2</sup> d'idéal na síochána agus an chomhair chairdiúil idir náisiúin á mbunú<sup>3</sup> ar an gceartas<sup>4</sup> agus ar an moráltacht idirnáisiúnta.<sup>5</sup>

Variants

- 1 'Daingníonn'
- 2 'dílseacht', 'tiomantas'
- 3 'bunaithe', 'arna mbunú'
- 4 'ar an gcóir', 'ar an gceartas idirnáisiúnta'
- 5 'Dearbhaíonn Éire a dúthracht d'idéal na síochána agus an chomhair chairdiúil, á mbunú ar an gceartas agus ar an moráltacht idirnáisiúnta, idir náisiúin.'

ARTICLE 29.2 AIRTEAGAL 29.2

TÉACS GAEILGE

Dearbhaíonn Éire fós gur mian léi go ndéanfaí gach achran idir náisiúin a réiteach go síochánta le headráin idirnáisiúnta nó le cinneadh breithiúnach.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Ireland further affirms that she wishes that all strife between nations should be settled peacefully by international arbitration or by judicial decision.

ENGLISH TEXT

Ireland affirms its adherence to the principle of the pacific settlement of international disputes by international arbitration or judicial determination.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The principle of the pacific settlement of international disputes' is expressed as 'go ndéanfaí gach achran idir náisiúin a réiteach go síochánta' ('that all strife between nations should be settled peacefully') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Its adherence to' is expressed as 'gur mian léi' ('that she wishes') in the Irish text, the same phrase as expresses 'its devotion to' in the foregoing section.
- 3 'Ireland affirms' is expressed as 'Dearbhaíonn Éire fós' ('Ireland further affirms') in the Irish text, the term expressing 'affirms' being the same as that in the previous section.

Commentary

achran '(Act of) quarrelling, strife' is the secondary sense of this headword in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ag achran is ag bruíon, bickering and quarrelling', the principal sense being 'tangled growth; tangle, entanglement'. Dinneen gives 'entanglement, confusion, strife, knot' as the principal sense of 'achran'. The original sense of 'achran' was 'thicket, tangled undergrowth', according to DIL, most of the examples of this sense and the sense of 'strife, dissension' which are cited in DIL coming from Tadhg Ó Conaill's translation of La Trompette du Ciel, Trompa na bhFlaitheas, c. 1755. DIL cites 'an uile achran ... a réigteach' (to settle 'every dispute') – almost the exact equivalent of 'gach achran ... a réiteach' in the present Article 29.2 – from the poetry of Aogán Ó Rathaille (1670-1726).

'Dispute' is translated as 'díospóid' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'trade dispute' is translated as 'díospóid trádála'. The Margin Title of s91 of the Building Societies Act, 1989, 'Settlement of disputes', is translated as 'Díospóidí a réiteach', for example, 'socrú díospóidí' translating 'settlement of disputes' in s23(1)(d) of the Finance (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1956, and 'Diospóidí a shocrú' translating the Heading of Article IX of the Fourth Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967.

Looking at earlier Acts, in s8(2) of the Local Elections Postponement Act, 1922, 'If any doubt, dispute, or question shall arise' is translated as 'Má tharlúionn aon amhras, achrann no cheist', with 'to inquire into ... allegations, charges, disputes or differences in respect of elections generally' being translated as 'chun curtha i leith, cúisithe, imreasáin no difríochtaí i dtaobh toghachán i gcoitinne ... d'iniúcha' in s56 of the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923. 'Every question or dispute as to whether a person is or is not a soldier' is translated as 'Gach ceist no conspóid i dtaobh ce'ca tá duine ina shaighdiúir no ná fuil' in s25(3) of the National Health Insurance Act, 1923. In s130(2) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927, 'In case of any dispute as to the making ... of an invention' is translated as 'Má bhíonn aon aighneas ann i dtaobh cumadóireacht do dhéanamh'.

eadráin This headword is translated as 'arbitration' in Téarmaí Dlí, as 'separation of combatants; intervention in dispute; mediation, conciliation' in Ó Dónaill and as 'intervention or interposition, peace-making; act of separating combatants, coming between' in Dinneen, who cites 'ní raibh cumas a eadrána aige féin, he himself had no power to prevent him (behaving in this fashion)'. This compound of the preposition 'eter' with the verbal noun 'áin' ('act of driving') is translated principally as 'interference with, meddling with, intervening between (persons quarrelling)' in DIL, where 'ná tath [leg. táet?] duini dom hétran' ('let none come to meddle with me' [i.e. my body]) is cited from Saltair na Rann (written c. 1000) and 'in fer etrana coitchend' ('an impartial person who interposes' [in a fight]) is cited from a commentary on an early Irish law-tract.

'Refer the question for arbitration' is translated as 'an cheist a tharchur le haghaidh eadrána' in s74(9)(b) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, where 'the rules shall be deemed to be an arbitration agreement within the meaning of the Arbitration Acts, 1954 and 1980' is translated as 'measfar gur comhaontú eadrána na rialacha, de réir bhri na nAchtanna Eadrána, 1954 agus 1980'. In s173(b) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'the amount of such compensation shall in the event of disagreement be determined by arbitration' is translated as 'cheal réitigh socrófar ar mhéid an chúitimh sin le headarghabháil'. 'Terms to be settled by arbitration' is translated as 'Socrófar na téarmaí le headarascán' in the Schedule (no. 6) to the State Lands Act, 1924. 'Require the matter to be referred to arbitration' is translated as 'a éileamh go gcuirfar an scéal fé mholtóireacht' in s22(6) of the Dairy Produce Act, 1924, with the Margin Title of s6 of the Dáil Éireann Courts (Winding Up) Act, 1923, Amendment Act, 1924, 'Dáil Land Court decrees may be deemed to be arbitration awards' being translated as 'Féadfar a ordú go dtuigfar gur molta eadrascáin aitheanta Dáil-Chúirte Talmhan'.

cinneadh This headword is translated as 'determination (of issue, etc.), finding (of fact, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí, with

'cineadh dáta' agus 'cinneadh coiste' being translated respectively as 'fixing of date' and 'the findings of a committee' in Ó Dónaill. 'Act of appointing, deciding, determining, resolving on' are among the senses of 'cinneadh' in Dinneen. 'Cinniud' is the verbal noun of 'cinnid' and is translated principally as 'act of fixing, defining, deciding' in DIL, where the phrase 'cinniud persine' ('defining [grammatical] person') is cited from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian, where it glosses Latin 'demonstratio'. DIL gives examples of 'cinniud' in the sense of 'decision, limit, agreement' from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster onwards.

'Bringing the proposed application to the notice of persons whose interests may be affected by the determination of the Court thereon' is translated as 'chun an t-iarratas beartaithe a chur ar a n-iúl do dhaoine a bhféadfadh cinneadh na Cúirte ar an iarratas sin difear a dhéanamh dá leasanna' in s32(4)(a) of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1988. 'If the amount of the determination is altered by the determination of the judge' is translated as 'má athraíonn breith an bhreithimh an mheasúnacht' in the Table in s69 of the Finance Act, 1974. The Margin Title of s48 of the Building Societies Act, 1976, 'Determination of disputes by arbitration', is translated as 'Diospóidí a chinneadh trí eadráin'. The Margin Title of s8 of the Public Services (Temporary Economics) Act, 1933, 'Determination of disputes, etc.', is translated as 'Aighnis, etc., do shocrú'. In s8(4) of the Finance Act, 1924, 'Any person who is aggrieved by the determination of the Revenue Commissioners' is translated as 'Éinne ar a ngoillfidh an bhreith a thabharfaidh na Coimisinéirí Incuim'. 'Any question which may arise ... shall be determined by the Minister' is translated as 'Réiteoidh an t-Aire ... aon cheist éireoidh' in s7(e) of the Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923.

breithiúnach 'Aird bhreithiúnach' and 'rogha bhreithiúnach' are translated respectively as 'judicial notice' and 'judicial discretion' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Judicial' is the principal sense of this headword in Ó Dónaill, who also gives the senses 'judicious, discerning' and 'severe, critical', Dinneen also giving the senses 'judicious, judicial, critical'. 'Brithemandu' glosses both 'iudiciali' and 'iudice' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, DIL translating 'brithemandae' as 'judicial; pertaining to judgement', that headword being based on Old Irish 'brithem', Modern Irish 'breitheamh', 'judge'.

'The Judicial Separation and Family Law Reform Act, 1989' is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht um Idirscaradh Breithiúnach agus Athchóiriú an Dlí Teaghlaigh, 1989', with 'the Public Authorities (Judicial Proceedings) Act, 1954' being cited as 'Acht na nÚdarás Poibli (Imeachta Breithiúnacha), 1954'. In Article 65 of the 1922 Constitution, 'The judicial power of the High Court' is translated as 'comhacht bhreithiúntais na hArd-Chúirte'. Note that 'judicial functions' is expressed as 'feidhmeanna breithimh' in Article 35.2.

gur mian léi See the commentary on the previous section, where this phrase expresses 'its devotion to'. As regards 'adherence to' in the Acts, 'If the Minister is satisfied that in order to maintain ... general adherence to the National Agreements it is necessary for him to do so' is translated as 'Más deimhin leis an Aire gur gá dó sin a dhéanamh ionas go leanfai i gcoitinne ... de na Comhaontuithe Náisiúnta' in s1(1) of the Regulation of Banks (Remuneration and Conditions of Employment) (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1975. In Article 17 of the 1922 Constitution, 'and (by virtue of) her adherence to and membership of the group of nations forming the British Commonwealth of Nations' is translated as '(de bhí) go leanann sí den chó-chruinniú náisiún a dhineann suas an Có-chinióchas Briotáineach'. In s4(c) of the Licensing (Renewal of Licences) Act, 1923, 'solely on account of his adherence to political principles' is translated as 'agus ná raibh de chúis aige leis sin ach é do bheith ag claoi le prionsabail pholaitigiúla'. 'Adherence to this Protocol by any State which is not a Party to the Convention shall have the effect of adherence to the Convention amended by this Protocol' is translated as 'Má ghabhann an Stát nach Páirtí sa Choinbhinsiún leis an bPrótocol seo is é a éifeacht sin gabháil leis an gCoinbhinsiún arna leasú leis an bPrótocol seo' in s2 of Article XXIII of the Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1959. 'Adherence after entry into force' is translated as 'Aontú tar éis don Chomhaontú a theacht i bhfeidhm' in the Heading of s3 of Article XXIII of the Schedule to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (Financial Support Fund) (Agreement) Act, 1976.

fós 'Again, in addition; moreover, furthermore' is a secondary sense of this adverb, according to Ó Dónaill, who cites 'deir sé fós (go), he states further (that)' and 'agus fós, and moreover', with 'yet, still' being the basic sense of 'fós'. Dinneen's entry s.v. 'fós', commences with the senses 'also, too, moreover', Dinneen stating that 'fós is used for still and yet'. 'As yet' and 'further, besides' are other senses included by Dinneen. DIL translates 'fós' as (a) 'of time still, up to the present' and (b) 'still (more, longer), further, also, in addition, likewise', citing 'Orduighem fós ...' ('Likewise we ordaine') from the seventeenth-century translation of the Rule of S. Clare. The earlier form, 'beus'/'beos', is cited in DIL, in the sense of 'further; moreover, again; besides, also, in addition to', from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles ('do irgairiu na sainte beos' ['also to forbid greed']). See the commentary on Article 15.3.2°.

Dearbhaíonn See the commentary on the previous section.

Direct translation

Dearbhaíonn<sup>1</sup> Éire a dílseacht do phrionsabal an réitigh shíochánta ar dhíospóidí idirnáisiúnta le headráin idirnáisiúnta nó le cinneadh<sup>2</sup> breithiúnach.

Variants

- 1 'Daingníonn'
- 2 'nó cinneadh'

ARTICLE 29.3 AIRTEAGAL 29.3

TÉACS GAELGE

Glacann Éire le bunrialacha gnáth-admhaithe an dlí idirnáisiúnta le bheith ina dtreoir d'Éirinn ina caidreamh le Stáit eile.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Ireland accepts the generally acknowledged fundamental rules of international law to be a guide for Ireland in its relations with other States.

ENGLISH TEXT

Ireland accepts the generally recognised principles of international law as its rule of conduct in its relations with other States.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Rule of conduct' is expressed as 'treoir' ('guide') in the Irish text, with 'as its rule of conduct' being expressed as 'le bheith ina dtreoir d'Éirinn' ('to be a guide for Ireland').
- 2 'Generally recognised' is expressed as 'gnáth-admhaithe' ('generally acknowledged') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Principles' is expressed as 'bunrialacha' ('fundamental rules') in the Irish text.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 207, reports as follows on reference to this section in the courts:

In The State (Sumers Jennings) v Furlong ([1966] IR 183) Henchy J said that the Irish version 'makes clear' that Ireland accepts the generally recognised principles of international law 'as a guide (ina dtreoir) in its relations with other states' – i.e. merely as a guide, not as a rule operating to restrict the powers of the Oireachtas.

Commentary

ina dtreoir 'Treoir' is translated as 'guidance, direction' in Ó Dónaill and as 'a guide, a helm, direction, tendency, ideal, progress of events, conduct, guidance, help ...' in Dinneen. DIL cites examples of 'treoir' in the sense of 'guidance, direction, course' from Saltair na Rann (written c.1000) onwards, citing 'ceannas feadhna Mhaoise 7 a threoir go Tir Tairngire' ('Moses' leadership and guidance to the Promised Land') from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death. See further the commentary on Article 45 where 'buntreoir' and 'gnáth-threoir' respectively express 'directive principle' and 'general guidance'.

In s14 of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923, 'The Minister for Home Affairs may make rules for the conduct of proceedings' is translated as 'Féadfidh an tAire um Ghnóthaí Dúithche rialacha do dhéanamh chun imeachta do stiúra'. In s14(a) of the Courts Act, 1981, 'Rules of Court shall provide for the conduct of proceedings in the Circuit Court under the said Act in a summary manner' is translated as 'Beidh foráil sna Rialacha Cúirte go ndéanfar imeachtaí sa Chúirt Chuarda faoin Acht sin a stiúradh ar bhealach achomair'. 'Rules governing conduct of candidates at competitions, etc.' is translated as 'Rialacha i dtaobh iompair iarrthóirí ag comórtais, etc.' in the Margin Title of s30 of the Civil Service Commissioners Act, 1956. 'Rules for Conduct of Seanad General Elections' is translated as 'Rialacha chun Olltoghcháin don tSeanad a Stiúru' in the Heading of the First Schedule to the Seanad Electoral (Panel Members) Act, 1947. 'Rialacha nós-imeachta' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'rules of procedure' in translations for the Department of Defence.

gnáth-admhaithe This adjective would be written without the hyphen today – see, for example, ‘gnáth-eolas’ (‘ordinary knowledge, experience’) in Dinneen, which is cited as ‘gnátheolas’ in Ó Dónaill. Neither Ó Dónaill nor Dinneen appear to give ‘gnáthadmhaithe’ as a headword, this being a compound of the prefix ‘gnáth-’ (translated principally as ‘usual, customary, ordinary; vulgar, common; standard’ in Ó Dónaill and as ‘usual, general, average, continual; standing, characteristic’ in Dinneen) and the past participle of ‘admhaigh’, the first person singular, present tense, of which, ‘admhaím’, is translated as ‘I acknowledge; I confess’ in Téarmaí Dlí, ‘admhuighim’ being translated as ‘I confess, admit, acknowledge’, along with ‘I say, state, proclaim’, in Dinneen. ‘Acknowledge’ is given as the principal sense of ‘admhaigh’ in Ó Dónaill, citing ‘admhaíonn an saol (go), everybody admits, agrees (that)’ and ‘admhaigh amach é, admit it openly’, along with ‘bean nach n-adhmhódh a fear féin, a woman who would not acknowledge her own husband’. DIL gives examples of the verb ‘ad-daim’ in the sense of ‘acknowledge, admits, concedes, confesses’ from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian onwards. See further the commentary on Article 43.1.2<sup>o</sup> regarding the prefix ‘gnáth-’.

In s1(f) of Article 6 of the Schedule to the International Carriage of Goods by Road Act, 1990, ‘their generally recognised description’ is translated as ‘an tuairisc orthu a aithnítear go coitianta’. ‘On conditions less favourable ... than those generally recognised in that district by good employers’ is translated as ‘faoi choinníollacha is neamhfhabhraí ... ná iad sin a aithníonn fostóirí maithe go ginearálta sa cheantar sin’ in s34(5)(c) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. ‘Works generally recognised as having cultural or artistic merit’ is translated as ‘saothair dá dtugtar aitheantas coitianta go bhfuil fiúntas cultúir nó ealaíona ... iontu’ in s2(2)(a)(ii)II of the Finance Act, 1969. In s45(1) of the Housing (Amendment) Act, 1948, ‘as advantageous to the persons employed in such erection as the appropriate rates of wages or conditions of labour generally recognised by trade unions’ is translated as ‘chomh tairbheach do na daoine a bhí ar fostú á thógáil leis na rátaí páighe nó na coinníollacha oibre iomchuí a bhí ar aithint ag ceardchumainn i gcoitinne’, this being translated as ‘chó tairbheach ... do sna daoine a bhí ar fostú sa tógáil sin agus a bheadh na rátaí oiriúnacha tuarastail no na coinníolla oiriúnacha oibre le n-ar ghlac cumainn chéirde go generalta’ in s8(3) of the Housing (Financial and Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1932.

Looking at ‘recognised’ in early Acts, ‘Admission on a certificate signed by three “recognised” persons’ is translated as ‘Daoine do leigint isteach ar theistias fé lámh thriúir “aitheanta”’ in s19 of the ‘Clare County Scheme’ in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. ‘Recognised banks’ is translated as ‘Bainc admhuithe’ in the Margin Title of s24 of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1927. In early Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann, ‘recognised University’ is translated as ‘Príomh-Scoil údarásach’.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the variant direct translation below, remarks that ‘gnáth-’ (in ‘gnáth-aitheanta’) is possibly more accurate (“cruinn”) for the sense here that ‘i gcoitinne’.

caidreamh ‘Caidreamh idirnáisiúnta’ and ‘caidreamh taidhleoireachta’ are translated respectively as ‘international relations’ and ‘diplomatic relations’ in Ó Dónaill, following the abbreviation for ‘Politics’, with ‘caidreamh poiblí’ being translated as ‘public relations’. ‘Intercourse, intimacy’ is the principal sense of this noun in Ó Dónaill, ‘caidreamh’ being the verbal noun of ‘caidrígh’, ‘speak to, be on friendly terms with’. ‘Caidreamh collaí’ is translated in Ó Dónaill as ‘sexual intercourse’, this Irish phrase being translated as ‘criminal conversation’ in Téarmaí Dlí. ‘Company, fellowship; intercourse; acquaintance; association; familiarity; partnership in trade; act of caressing; cohabitation’ are the senses of ‘caidreamh’ given by Dinneen. The earlier form, ‘coitreb’, is a compound of the prefix ‘com-’ (Modern Irish ‘comh-’, ‘mutual, co-’) and ‘treb’, translated principally as ‘house, farm, holding’ in DIL – the verb ‘trebaid’ being translated principally as ‘cultivates, tills, ploughs’, also having the sense of ‘inhabits, dwells in’. ‘Coitreb’ is the verbal noun of ‘con-treba’, which verb is based on ‘trebaid’ and is translated as ‘inhabits, frequents’ in DIL, where only two examples are cited, the earliest being from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster. In later language, ‘coitreb’ had the sense of ‘fellowship, company, association’, according to DIL, citing ‘caidreamh do dhéanamh ria’ (= deale with her’) from the seventeenth-century translation of the Rule of S. Clare.

‘In its relations with members, the Fund shall recognize that the post-war transitional period will be one of change and adjustment’ is translated as ‘Bhéarfaidh an Ciste d’aitheantas, ina chaidreamh leis na comhaltaí, gur tréimhse athrúcháin agus choigeartuithe an tréimhse tar éis an chogaidh’ in s5 of Article XIV of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, 1957. See further the commentary on Article 1.

bunrialacha Plural of ‘bunriail’, translated as ‘fundamental rule’ in Ó Dónaill, this headword being a compound of the prefix ‘bun-’ (translated principally as ‘basic, primary, elementary’ in Ó Dónaill, and as ‘principal’ in Dinneen) and ‘riail’ (‘rule’). See the commentary on Article 43.2.1<sup>o</sup>.

Standardised Irish text

Glacann Éire le bunrialacha gnáthadmhaithe an dlí idirnáisiúnta le bheith ina dtreoir d’Éirinn ina caidreamh le Stáit eile.

Direct translation

Glacann Éire le príonsabail an dlí idirnáisiúnta, mar a aithnítear i gcoitinne iad,<sup>1</sup> mar a riail iompair ina caidreamh le Stáit eile.

Variants

- <sup>1</sup> ‘le príonsabail ghnáthaitheanta an dlí idirnáisiúnta.’

ARTICLE 29.4.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 29.4.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELGE

De réir Airteagal 28 den Bhunreacht seo is é an Rialtas a oibreos, nó is le húdarás an Rialtais a oibreofar, cumhacht chomhallach an Stáit maidir lena chaidreamh eachtrach.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In accordance with Article 28 of this Constitution it is the Government which will operate, or it is with the authority of the Government that will be operated, the discharging power of the State as regards its external relations.

ENGLISH TEXT

The executive power of the State in or in connection with its external relations shall in accordance with Article 28 of this Constitution be exercised by or on the authority of the Government.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'In or in connection with its external relations' is expressed simply as 'maidir lena chaidreamh eachtrach' ('as regards its external relations') in the Irish text.
- 2 As in Article 28.2, 'executive', in 'executive power', is expressed by 'comhallach', an unfamiliar adjective that would be interpreted today as 'fulfilling'/'discharging'.
- 3 'Exercise' is expressed as 'oibrigh' ('operate') in the Irish text, as we have seen also in some earlier Articles, with '(shall) be exercised by or on the authority of the Government' being expressed as 'is é an Rialtas a oibreos, nó is le húdarás an Rialtais a oibreofar' ('it is the Government which will exercise/operate, or it is on the authority of the Government that will be exercised/operated') in the Irish text.

Commentary

eachtrach This adjective is translated as 'extern, external' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'An Roinn Gnóthaí Eachtracha, the Department of Foreign Affairs' and 'scrúdaitheoir eachtrach, extern examiner'. Dinneen does not appear to give 'eachtrach' as a headword but, like Ó Dónaill, has the adjective 'eachtrannach' as a headword, which he translates as 'foreign, exotic, alien', giving 'eachtranda' as a variant. DIL gives both 'echtranda' and 'echtrannach' as headwords, the former being translated as 'extern, foreign', with only one example of this adjective being cited (from an early Irish law-tract), the latter being translated as 'extern, external', again with only one example of this adjective being cited ('tes eachtrannach' ['external heat'] from the manuscript 23 K 42 in the Royal Irish Academy). As a noun, 'echtrannach' is translated in DIL as 'foreigner, alien, stranger'. 'Echtrann', on which the above headwords are based, glosses Latin 'externus' and 'alienus' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, and is translated as 'strange, foreign' (as adjective) and 'stranger, foreigner, alien' (as noun) in DIL, who cites 'a mbéla n-echtrann' ('the foreign language') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

The Long Title of the Republic of Ireland Act, 1948, contains both the earlier and later official translations of the phrase 'external relations', reading as follows:

An Act to repeal the Executive Authority (External Relations) Act, 1936, ... and to enable the President to exercise the executive power or any executive function of the State in or in connection with its external relations. Acht d'athghairm an Achta Údaráis Feidhmíúcháin (Caidreamh Coigríche), 1936, ... agus dá chumasú don Uachtarán cumhacht chomhallach nó aon fheidhm d'fheadhma comhallacha an Stáit maidir lena chaidreamh eachtrach d'oibríú.

'Representatives of External Governments' is translated as 'Ionadaithe do Rialtais Eachtracha' in the Second Schedule to the Appropriation Act, 1981', this phrase being translated as 'Ionadaithe Rialtais Coigríche' in Schedule B of the Appropriation Act, 1929. In the Schedule to the Appropriation Act, 1922, 'For the salaries and expenses of the Ministry of External Affairs' is translated as 'Chun tuarastail agus costais na hAireachta um Ghnóthaí Coigríche'. We find 'Aireach Gnóthaí Coigríoch' in s2 of the Second Article of the 1919 Constitution.

maidir le See the commentary on Article 15.15, where this phrase expresses 'in connection with'. 'Any costs or expenses incurred by it, or in connection with, any proceedings' is translated as 'aon chostais nó caiteachais a thabhaigh sé in aon imeachtaí, nó i ndáil le haon imeachtaí' in s47(7) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s4 of the Beet Sugar (Subsidy) Act, 1925, 'the persons employed by him in or in connection with the manufacture of the sugar' is translated as 'na daoine a bheidh ar fostú aige ag déanamh an tsiúicre, no in éinní a bhaineann le déanamh an tsiúicre'. In s14(1)(b) of the Railways Act, 1933, 'assets used in or in connection with such business' is translated as 'sócmhainní a bhíonn á n-úsáid sa ghnó san no maidir leis'.

Looking at earlier Acts, 'for the adjustment of the expenses of and in connection with the inquests of the bodies removed' is translated as 'go gcothromófar costais agus fo-chostais na gcoistí a dineadh ar na cuirp do haistríodh' in s8 of the Coroners (Amendment) Act, 1927. 'For the purpose of widening ... or otherwise improving streets in the City of Dublin in connection with the reconstruction of areas' is translated as 'chun sráideanna i gCathair Bhaile Átha Cliath do leathanú ... no d'fheabhsú ar aon tslí eile, i dteangmháil le hath-dhéanamh líomatáistí' in s1(1) of the Dublin Reconstruction (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1924.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the translation below, remarks that he favours 'maidir le' or 'i dtaca le' to 'i ndáil le', stating that outside of the legislation he sees no very certain authority for 'i ndáil le' and that it might not be understood in the direct translation below.

a oibreos Special form of the relative, future tense, of 'oibrigh' – see the commentary on Article 6.1. Note that 'oibreochas', without relative particle, is found in the original text; see the commentary on Articles 3 and 13.5.1<sup>o</sup> regarding 'oibrigh'.

maidir lena chaidreamh Note that no lenition follows 'lena' in the original text. See the commentary on the previous section regarding 'caidreamh'.

cumhacht chomhallach See the commentary on Article 28.2.

Standardised Irish text

De réir Airteagal 28 den Bhunreacht seo is é an Rialtas a oibreoidh, nó is le húdarás an Rialtais a oibreofar, cumhacht chomhallach an Stáit maidir lena chaidreamh eachtrach.

Direct translation

De réir Airteagal 28 den Bhunreacht seo, déanfaidh an Rialtas, nó is ar údarás an Rialtais a dhéanfar, cumhacht fheidhmiúcháin an Stáit ina chaidreamh eachtrach nó i ndáil lena<sup>1</sup> chaidreamh eachtrach a fheidhmiú.<sup>2</sup>

Variants

- 1 'maidir lena', 'i dtaca lena'
- 2 'De réir Airteagal 28 den Bhunreacht seo, feidhmeoidh an Rialtas, nó is ar údarás an Rialtais a fheidhmeofar, / is é an Rialtas a fheidhmeoidh, nó is ar údarás an Rialtais a fheidhmeofar, cumhacht fheidhmiúcháin an Stáit ina chaidreamh eachtrach nó i ndáil lena chaidreamh eachtrach.'

ARTICLE 29.4.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 29.4.2<sup>o</sup>TÉACS GAELGE

Ionas go bhféadfar aon fheidhm chomhallach leis an Stát a oibriú maidir lena chaidreamh eachtrach féadfaidh an Rialtas, sa mhéid go gcinnear le dlí agus faoi chuimsiú cibé coinníollacha a chinnear le dlí, má chinntear, aon organ stáit nó sás nó nós imeachta a chur chun críche nó a ghlacadh a chuirtear chun críche nó a ghlactar chun a leithéid sin de chuspóir ag na náisiúin is comhaltaí d'aon bhuíon nó d'aon chumann de náisiúin a bhfuil nó a mbeidh an Stát i gcomhlachas leo le haghaidh comhair idirnáisiúnta i gcúrsaí a bhaineas leo uile.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

So that any discharging function of the State can be operated as regards its external relations the Government will be able, to the extent that will be decided by law and within the constraint/scope of whatever conditions will be decided by law, if it is decided, to utilise or accept any organ of state or instrument or procedure which is utilized or accepted for such a purpose by the nations which are members of any group or any association of nations with which the State is or will be in coalition/alignment for international co-operation in affairs which concern them all.

ENGLISH TEXT

For the purpose of the exercise of any executive function of the State in or in connection with its external relations, the Government may to such extent and subject to such conditions, if any, as may be determined by law, avail of or adopt any organ, instrument, or method of procedure used or adopted for the like purpose by the members of any group or league of nations with which the State is or becomes associated for the purpose of international co-operation in matters of common concern.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Organ' is expressed as 'organ stáit' ('organ of state') in the Irish text.
- 2 'The members of any group or league of nations' is expressed as 'na náisiúin is comhaltaí d'aon bhuíon nó d'aon chumann de náisiúin' ('the nations which are members of any group/league or of any society/association of nations') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Avail of' is expressed by 'cuir chun críche' ('utilise') in the Irish text, this phrase also expressing 'used' further on in the subsection.

- 4 'Instrument' is translated as 'ionstraim' in Téarmaí Dlí; the term expressing 'instrument' in the Irish text, 'sás', has the sense of 'instrument', however, along with that of 'device, contrivance'.
- 5 'Method of procedure' is expressed simply as 'nós imeachta', 'procedure', in the Irish text.
- 6 'Any ... function of the State' is expressed in the Irish text as 'aon fheidhm ... leis an Stát', which phrase can also be translated as 'any function with the State'.
- 7 'Exercise' is expressed as 'oibrigh' ('operate') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some other Articles also.
- 8 As in the previous subsection, 'executive' is expressed by a term which is unfamiliar today, and which would possibly be interpreted as 'fulfilling' or 'discharging'.
- 9 'In or in connection with' is expressed simply as 'maidir le' ('as regards') in the Irish text, as in the foregoing subsection.
- 10 'For the purpose of' is expressed as 'Ionas go' ('so that') in the Irish text, with 'For the purpose of the exercise of any ... function' being expressed as 'Ionas go bhféadfar aon fheidhm ... a oibriú' ('So that any function may be operated/exercised').
- 11 'Subject to' is expressed as 'faoi chuimsiú' ('within the constraint/scope of') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 12 'For the like purpose' is expressed as 'chun a leithéid sin de chuspóir' ('for such a purpose') in the Irish text.
- 13 'With which the State is or becomes associated' is expressed as 'a bhfuil nó a mbeidh an Stát i gcomhlachas leo' ('with which the State is or will be in association') in the Irish text.
- 14 'In matters of common concern' is expressed as 'i gcúrsaí a bhaineas leo uile' ('in matters/affairs which concern them all') in the Irish text.
- 15 'Any organ, instrument, or method of procedure' is expressed as 'aon organ stáit nó sás nó nós imeachta' ('any organ or instrument or method of procedure') in the Irish text.

Commentary

a bhaineas leo The special form of the relative is '-s'; this phrase would have the form 'a bhaineann leo' today in official documents – see the commentary on Article 6.1. Regarding 'bain le', Ó Dónaill gives 'concern, relate to' as the secondary sense of this phrase, citing 'gach duine a bhaineann leat, all connected with, related to, you'. DIL cites 'is béss didu ind liacc benir ilbeim fris' ('it is the manner, then, of the stone that many blows are given to it'), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles s.v. 'benaid' (principally 'beats, strikes') – see further the commentary on Article 3.

Turning to 'concern', 'are of direct concern to members of the trade union resident in the State of Northern Ireland and do not affect members not so resident' is translated as 'a bhaineann go díreach le comhaltaí den cheard-chumann a chónaíonn sa Stát nó i dTuaisceart Éireann agus nach mbaineann le comhaltaí nach gcónaíonn sa Stát ná i dTuaisceart Éireann' in s17(2) of the Trade Union Act, 1975, with 'na sainghnéithe uile den scéim a bhaineann leis' translating 'all essential features of the scheme which concern him' in s15(2)(b) of the Finance Act, 1972. In s76 of the Land Act, 1923, 'Provided always that any Rules of Court made to carry out the provisions of this Act, in so far as they concern the relief of congestion' is translated as 'Ar choinníoll i gcomhnaí go leagfar fé bhráid gach Tighe den Oireachtas, sa mhéid go mbainid le leigheas cumhangrachta'. Note, as regards early official translations of 'common', that 'The Common Seal of the Company' is translated as 'Séala Coitiann na Cuideachtan' in the Second Schedule to the Companies (Re-Constitution of Records) Act, 1924, with 'có-shéala' translating 'common seal' in s12(1) of the Local Government Act, 1925.

In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 259), 'Member States shall regard their conjunctural policies as a matter of common concern' is translated as 'Áireoidh na Ballstáit mar ábhar comhchúraim dóibh a mbeartas in alt na huaire', with 'Féachfaidh gach Ballstát ar a bheartas maidir le rátaí malairte mar ábhar comhchúraim dóibh' translating 'Each Member State shall treat its policy with regard to rates of exchange as a matter of common concern' (ibid, p. 261). In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 25), 'Member States shall regard their economic policies as a matter of common concern' is translated as 'measfaidh na Ballstáit gur ábhar leasa choitinn a mbeartais eacnamaíocha'.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú suggests the phrase 'i bpaírt' or 'le chéile' in the direct translation of 'common' below; 'i gcoitinne' here would be understood to mean 'in general'.

má chinntear As regards 'if any', 'The register shall be kept at such place as the Minister shall direct and, subject to such conditions (if any) as may be prescribed, shall be available for inspection during office hours' is translated as 'Coimeádfar an clár cibé áit a ordóidh an tAire agus, faoi réir cibé coinníollacha (más ann) a fhorordófar, beidh sé ar fáil lena iniúchadh le linn uaire oifige' in s20(2) of the Plant Varieties (Proprietary Rights) Act, 1980. 'He may by order authorise such local authority, subject to such conditions (if any) as may be specified in such order, to carry on that business in connection with such aerodrome' is translated as 'féadfaidh, le hordú, a údarú don údarás áitiúil sin, fé réir pé coinníollacha (más aon cheann é) a luadhfar san ordú san, an gnó san do bheith ar siúl acu maidir leis an aerodróm san' in s38(1) of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1936. See further the commentary on Article 15.15.

Ionas go This phrase is translated as 'so that' in Ó Dónaill, with Dinneen translating 'ionnas go' as 'so, in order or insomuch that' – see the commentary on Article 18.2. 'Ionas go' usually translates 'so as to', 'so that' in the Acts – see s39(2) of the Finance Act, 1990, where 'so that all allowances ... shall be given effect' is translated as 'ionas go dtabharfar éifeacht do na liúntais sin'.

Turning to 'for the purpose of', 'such information as the authority may request for the purpose of the exercise of its powers and functions under this section' is translated as 'cibé faisnéis a iarfaidh an t-údarás chun a chumhachtaí agus a fheidhmeanna faoin alt seo a fheidhmiú' in s5(7) of the Casual Trading Act, 1980. 'For the purpose of the exercise of jurisdiction' is translated as 'chun dlínse a fheidhmiú' in s38(4) of the Extradition Act, 1965, with 'For the purpose of the exercise of the powers conferred on the Board by a transport works order' being translated as 'Chun na cumhachta do bhéarfad don Bhord le hordú oibreacha iompair d'fheidhmiú' in s30(2) of the Electricity (Supply) (Amendment) Act, 1945, and 'for the purpose of the exercise of any of the powers ... conferred or imposed on it by this Act' being translated as 'chun feidhmithe aon chomhachta ... dá mbronntar no dá gcuirtar air leis an Acht so' in s45(1) of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1927.

sás 'Device, contrivance; instrument, apparatus; means' are secondary senses of 'sás' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'sás le ballaí a leagan, apparatus for knocking down walls', with 'snare, trap, noose' being the principal sense. Dinneen translates 'sás' as 'a contrivance, apparatus, appliance or machine, or an engine of war, etc., means, method, accessory ...', citing 'sás dighe do bheith go buan, a way of eking out drink' along with the maxim 'sás a dhéanta chuimhnigh air, one capable of doing it it was who thought of it'. Dinneen refers to confusion of 'sós' (translated as 'science, ingenuity, experience') and 'sáthas' ('sáith') ('sufficiency') at the end of his entry s.v. 'sás', DIL also referring to 'sáith' s.v. 'sás', translated as (a) 'snare, trap (particularly for birds)', (b) 'implement, instrument, engine (of war)', (c) 'means, device, way (of doing something), something fit to, cause of' and (d) 'one fit or competent to (of persons)'. The earliest citation of this term seems to be 'Is é in immo n-iada sás' ('he is a bird round which a trap closes'), the opening line of an old Irish poem in the Codex S. Pauli attributed to St Moling – according to the version in the twelfth-century Book of Leinster; however, the verses were uttered by the Devil in reply to the Saint!

'Instrument' is translated as 'ionstraim' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'negotiable instrument' is translated as 'ionstraim soshannta'. "'Lease" means an instrument in writing' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "léas" ionstraim i scríbhinn' in s3(1) of the Landlord and Tenant (Amendment) Act, 1980. 'Any provision of this Act or statutory instrument under it' is translated as 'aon fhoráil den Acht seo nó ionstraim reachtúil faoi' in s91(1)(a) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, with 'in any statute or statutory instrument' being translated as 'in aon reacht no ionstraim reachtúil' in s6(2) of the Constitution (Consequential Provisions) Act, 1937.

Looking at the early Acts, 'the instrument creating any mortgage, charge or incumbrance' is translated as 'an úrlis le n-ar bunúidh aon mhorgáiste, muirear, no ualach' in s4 of the Land Act, 1923. 'Bank or government notes, negotiable instruments and stamps' is translated as 'nótaí bainc, instruimí ionmhalaruithe agus stampaí' in s16 of the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923. 'Instruimídí meceaniciúla ceoil' translates 'mechanical musical instruments' in the Margin Title of s169 of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927, 'gléasa ceoil' translating 'musical instruments' in the Schedule to the Dundalk Harbour and Ports Act, 1925. Finally, 'while armed with any offensive weapon or instrument' is translated as 'agus é armtha le haon arm no inneal troda' in s6 of Part II of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923.

nós imeachta This phrase is translated as 'procedure' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, 'nós' being translated as 'custom' in Téarmaí Dlí and as 'custom; manner, style' in Ó Dónaill. 'Imeachta' is the genitive singular of 'imeacht', the verbal noun of 'imigh' ('go'), with 'proceeding, trans-action' being one of the secondary senses of 'imeacht' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'imeachtaí na Dála, the Dáil proceedings'; 'imeachtaí' is translated as 'proceedings' in Téarmaí Dlí also. Dinneen cites 'nós na h-Eaglaise, rites of the Church', also giving 'ceremony' and 'practice' as senses of 'nós', and cites 'imtheachta na tromdháimhe, the proceedings of the unwieldy assembly', the title of an infamous work of prose. 'Nós' is a British loanword, DIL referring us to Welsh 'naws', 'nature, disposition'. DIL gives the general sense of 'nós' as 'custom, tradition, precedent', having the sense in early Irish law-tracts of 'regulations established by usage or authority'. DIL cites 'ni fiu leamsa in nos a leitheit sin' ('I do not deem such a proceeding becoming me' [i.e. refusal to do a menial service]) from the Lives of the Saints from the Book of Lismore (a manuscript compiled in the second half of the fifteenth century from older manuscripts) as an example of the sense of 'procedure, course of action, wont'.

Looking at early Acts, 'the procedure of the Trustees at the meetings, including the method of determination at such meetings of matters required to be determined thereat' is translated as 'nós-imeachta na nÍontaobhaithe ag a gcruinnithe, maraon leis an modh ar a socrófar ag na cruinnithe sin nithe is gá a shocrú ag na cruinnithe sin' in s23(b) of the Slaughtered Animals (Compensation) Act, 1928. The Margin Title of s125 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'Power of Minister to make rules of procedure', is translated as 'Comhacht don Aire chun rialacha nós-imeachta do dhéanamh'. Note that in s1(b) of Article 6 of the Second Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1980, 'adopt the rules of procedure for the institution of conciliation and arbitration proceedings' is translated as 'glacfaidh si leis na rialacha nós imeachta chun imeachtaí comhréitigh agus eadrána a thionscnamh'. In s21 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924, 'so far as relates to the manner of procedure such proceedings or any of them may be continued' is translated as 'chó fada is bhaineann le nós-imeachta leanfar de sna himeachta san'.

In s8 of the 'Kerry County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'and the procedure provided by Article 45 ... be adapted for the purpose' is translated as 'agus an tslí a forálar le hAirtíogal 45 ... do chur in oiriúint chun na críche sin'. 'Or to carry out any other preliminary procedure before obtaining a supply of any commodity' is translated as 'no gabháil tré aon roimh-chúrsa eile sara bhfagháis soláthar d'aon earra' in s5(2) of the Local Authorities (Combined Purchasing) Act, 1925.

Finally, 'Regulations may provide for any matters of procedure in relation to appeals' is translated as 'Féadfaidh foráil a bheith i rialacháin faoi aon ábhair a bhaineann le nós imeachta i ndáil le hachomhairc' in s42(a) of the Local Development (Planning and Development) Act, 1976. See further the commentary on Article 36.iii.

a chur chun críche 'Cuirim rud chun críche' is translated as 'I utilise a thing, turn it to a definite use' in Dinneen. 'Ag teacht chun críche' is translated as 'coming to an end; coming to pass' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'tháinig sé chun críche, it came to pass'. DIL cites 'chuige sin ... do thabhairt chun críche' from the seventeenth-century Párlaimint na mBan as an example of phrases with 'crích' meaning 'act of completing, fulfilling', with 'end; aim, purpose' being one of the principal senses of 'crích' – see the commentary on Article 2.

'A fire authority may ... provide services for or avail of the services of any body' is translated as 'Féadfaidh údarás dóiteáin ... seirbhísi a sholáthar d'aon chomhlacht ... nó féadfaidh sé leas a bhaint as a seirbhísi siúd' in s10(5)(a) of the Fire Services Act, 1981. 'Notice of intention to avail of paragraph (a) of this subsection' is translated as 'fógra go bhfuiltear ar intinn leas a bhaint as mír (a) den fho-alt seo' in s45(4) of the Industrial Relations Act, 1946. In s28(2) of the Central Bank Act, 1971, 'An act of bankruptcy ... may be availed of ... by any creditor ... for the purpose of having the judgment debtor adjudicated bankrupt' is translated as 'I gcás aon ghníomh féimheachta ... féadfaidh aon chreidiúnaí ... é a ghlacadh de dheis ... lena chur faoi deara an féichiúnaí breithiúnais a bhreithniú ina fhéimheach'.

'Avail of' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'd'úsáid' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1927, p. 615, with 'to avail of (the provisions of an Act)' cited as being translated as 'buntáiste do bhaint as' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health.

de chuspóir 'Cuspóir' is translated as 'object (i.e. of contract)' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'comhchuspóir nó comhrún' being translated as 'common purpose or design'. 'Object; objective, purpose' are secondary senses of 'cuspóir' in Ó Dónaill, the primary sense being 'thing aimed at, target'. Dinneen gives the senses of 'cuspóir' as 'an object, a target, a model, a theme; an ideal ... an aim'. 'Cuspóir' comes from Latin 'cuspis' and is translated as 'target, purpose, aim, object' in DIL, the earliest citation of which is 'co rabi fed cusboir etorro' (i.e. so that there was the 'distance of a bow shot' between them) from the eleventh-century Cogadh Gaedhel re Gallaibh, DIL also citing 'cuspóir curata' ('knightly purpose') from the seventeenth-century poetry of Dáibhí Ó Bruadair.

'Or any other act has been done for the like purpose' is translated as 'nó go mbeidh aon bheart eile déanta chun na críche céanna' in s137(3) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976, with 'and also of other persons upon trial for the like purpose' being translated as 'agus fós chun daoine eile do ghlaca isteach ar a dtriail chun na críche céanna' in the Preamble to the Methodist Church in Ireland Act, 1928. Regarding 'like' in early Acts, 'the word "barge" includes a lighter or like vessel' is translated as 'foluionn an focal "báirse" lictéir no ártach dá shamhail' in s1 of the Oil in Navigable Waters Act, 1926. 'The issue of like securities' is translated as 'go dtabharfar amach urrúis den tsaghas chéanna' in the Long Title of the Damage to Property (Compensation) (Amendment) Act, 1926.

d'aon chumann 'Cumann' is translated as 'society' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'association; club, society' being one of the secondary senses ('of organised body') of 'cumann' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'cumann sóisialta, polaitíochta, social, political, club'. Dinneen includes 'society, club' among the senses of 'cumann', citing 'cumann na naomh, the "Communion of Saints", the principal sense of 'cumann' being given as 'affection, love', citing 'cumann mí-mhéine, an illicit attachment'. 'Communn' comes from Latin 'commentum' and is translated as 'alliance, pact, union, friendship (in some examples pejoratively); company, band', with 'love, affection' being a later sense. DIL cites 'roboi commant n-etarru du denam uilc frimmaccu Israhel' ('there was a covenant between them to do evil to the Children of Israel') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms.

Turning to 'league', 'Secretary-General of the League of Nations' is styled 'Ard-Rúnaí Chumainn na Náisiún' in s25(1) of the Dangerous Drugs Act, 1936, and 'Ard-Rúnaí Chumann na Náisiún' in s1 of the First Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1954. 'The League of Nations' is styled 'Cumann na Náisiún' in s20(2) of the Misuse of Drugs Act, 1977, with 'the League of Nations (Guarantee) Act, 1923' being cited in Irish as 'an tAcht Cumann Náisiún (Urraíochta), 1923', and 'required by Article 1 of the Covenant of the League of Nations' being translated as 'do réir Airtíogail 1 de Chumhant Chumann na Náisiún' in the Preamble to that Act. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'The League of Nations' as 'Conradh na Náisiún', which title is found in Ó Dónaill.

The 'Irish League of Credit Unions' is officially styled 'Comhchumann na gComhar Creidmheasa in Éirinn' in Irish. 'Associated or combined or in league with the person or persons by whom the injury was committed for the committal of that injury' is translated as 'i gcoidreamh no i gcombáidh no i gcumann leis an duine no na daoine a dhin an díobháil agus gur chun an díobháil sin ... do dhéanamh do mhaoín do bhí sé amhlaidh' in s9(a) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú notes that while 'léig' is established in Téarmaí Staire, etc., it is not found in Ó Dónaill or in any other source for the general reader.

i gcomhlachas leo 'Comhlachas' is simply translated as 'association' in Ó Dónaill, 'airteagail chomhlachais' and 'meabhrán comhlachais' being translated respectively as 'articles of association' and 'memorandum of association'. This word does not appear to be given as a headword in Dinneen.

'In determining for the purposes of this section the assets and liabilities of a society with which another body corporate is associated' is translated as 'Le linn sócmhainní agus dliteanais cumainn, a bhfuil comhlacht corpraithe eile i gcomhlachas leis, a bheith á chinneadh' in s39(8) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s3(1) of the Executive Authority (External Relations) Act, 1936, 'so long as Saorstát Éireann is associated with the following nations' is translated as 'fáid a bheidh Saorstát Éireann i gcomhlachas leis na náisiúin seo leanas'.

d'aon bhuíon 'Buíon' is translated as 'band, company' in Ó Dónaill, who cites principally 'buíon saighdiúirí, band, troop, of soldiers' and 'buíon cheoil, band of musicians'. Dinneen translates 'buidhean' as 'a crowd, multitude, a retinue, a troop, a company', DIL translating 'buiden' as 'band, group, collection of persons; of warriors troop, company', citing 'ho buidnib' (i.e. from troops/companies) from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, where this phrase glosses Latin 'copis'. See the commentary on Article 19 regarding 'group', expressed as 'dream' in that Article.

a ghlacadh 'Glacadh le' expresses 'adopt' in Article 12.10.4°, with 'Atáimid leis seo ag gabháil an Bhunreachta seo chugainn' expressing 'Do hereby adopt ... this Constitution' in the Preamble.

leis an Stát The preposition 'le' can express 'belonging to' – Ó Dónaill cites 'tá leabhar leat agam, I have a book of yours', 'maraíodh bó leis, a cow belonging to him was killed' and 'an té ar leis an áit, the person who owns the place', for example. See the commentary on Article 10.1, where 'le' expresses 'vested in'.

a oibriú See the commentary on Articles 3 and 13.5.1°. The use of 'aon fheidhm fheidhmiúcháin ... a fheidhmiú' would be avoided in the direct translation below by retaining 'oibrigh'.

faoi chuimsiú See the commentary on Article 12.5.

organ See the commentary on Article 6.2.

comhair See the commentary on Article 29.1.

maidir le See the commentary on Article 29.4.1°.

chomhallach See the commentary on Article 28.2.

Standardised Irish text

Ionas go bhféadfar aon fheidhm chomhallach leis an Stát a oibriú maidir lena chaidreamh eachtrach féadfaidh an Rialtas, sa mhéid go gcinnear le dlí agus faoi chuimsiú cibé coinníollacha a chinnear le dlí, má chinntear, aon organ stáit nó sás nó nós imeachta a chur chun críche nó a ghlacadh a chuirtear chun críche nó a ghlactar chun a leithéid sin de chuspóir ag na náisiúin is comhaltai d'aon bhuíon nó d'aon chumann de náisiúin a bhfuil nó a mbeidh an Stát i gcomhlachas leo le haghaidh comhair idirnáisiúnta i gcúrsaí a bhaineann leo uile.

Direct translation

Chun críche aon fheidhm fheidhmiúcháin leis an Stát<sup>1</sup> a fheidhmiú<sup>2</sup> ina chaidreamh eachtrach nó i ndáil<sup>3</sup> lena chaidreamh eachtrach,<sup>4</sup> féadfaidh an Stát, sa mhéid agus faoi réir cibé coinníollacha, más ann, a chinnear le dlí, aon orgán, ionstraim, nó modh nóis imeachta a úsáid nó a ghlacadh a úsáidtear nó a ghlactar chun na críche céanna ag comhaltai aon ghrúpa nó aon léige náisiúin a bhfuil nó a dtiocfaidh an Stát i gcomhlachas leo chun críche an chomhair idirnáisiúnta in ábhair a bhaineann leo i bpáirt<sup>5</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'den Stát'
- 2 'a oibriú'
- 3 'i dtaca'
- 4 'Chun críche aon fheidhm fheidhmiúcháin leis an Stát ina chaidreamh eachtrach nó i ndáil lena chaidreamh eachtrach a fheidhmiú.'
- 5 'le chéile'

ARTICLE 29.4.3° AIRTEAGAL 29.4.3°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Tig leis an Stát a bheith ina chomhalta den Chomhphobal Eorpach do Ghual agus Cruach (a bunaíodh le Conradh a síníodh i bPáras an 18ú lá d'Aibreán, 1951), de Chomhphobal Eacnamaíochta na hEorpa (a bunaíodh le Conradh a síníodh sa Róimh an 25ú lá de Mhárta, 1957) agus den Chomhphobal Eorpach do Fhuinneamh Adamhach (a bunaíodh le Conradh a síníodh sa Róimh an 25ú lá de Mhárta, 1957). Tig leis an Stát an Ionstraim Eorpach Aonair (a síníodh thar ceann Bhallstáit na gComhphobal i Lucsamburg an 17ú lá d'Fheabhra, 1986, agus sa Háig an 28ú lá d'Fheabhra, 1986) a dhaingniú. Ní dhéanann aon fhoráil atá sa Bhunreacht seo aon dlíthe a d'achtaigh, gníomhartha a rinne nó bearta lenar ghlac an Stát, de bhíthin riachtanais na n-oibleagáidí mar chomhalta de na Comhphobail, a chur ó bhail dlí ná cosc a chur le dlíthe a d'achtaigh, gníomhartha a rinne nó bearta lenar ghlac na Comhphobail, nó institiúidí de na Comhphobail, ó fheidhm dlí a bheith acu sa Stát.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State may be a member of the European Coal and Steel Community (which was established by a Treaty signed in Paris on the 18th day of April, 1951), of the European Economic Community (which was established by a Treaty which was signed in Rome on the 25th day of March, 1957) and of the European Atomic Energy Community (which was established by a Treaty which was signed in Rome on the 25th day of March, 1957). The State may ratify the Single European Instrument (which was signed on behalf of the Member States of the Communities in Luxembourg on the 17th day of February, 1986, and in the Hague on the 28th day of February, 1986). No provision which is in this Constitution deprives of legal validity any laws enacted, acts done or actions which the State accepted, because of the necessities of the obligations as a member of the Communities, nor prohibits laws enacted, acts done or actions accepted by the Communities, or institutions of the Communities, from having legal force in the State.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State may become a member of the European Coal and Steel Community (established by Treaty signed at Paris on the 18th day of April, 1951), the European Economic Community (established by Treaty signed at Rome on the 25th day of March, 1957) and the European Atomic Energy Community (established by Treaty signed at Rome on the 25th day of March, 1957). The State may ratify the Single European Act (signed on behalf of the Member States of the Communities at Luxembourg on the 17th day of February, 1986, and at the Hague on the 28th day of February, 1986). No provision of this Constitution invalidates laws enacted, acts done or measures adopted by the State necessitated by the obligations of membership of the Communities or prevents laws enacted, acts done or measures adopted by the Communities, or institutions thereof, from having the force of law in the State.

Note that the enrolled text is that of the amended subsection – the Stationery Office text commented on here and given above is the text published prior to the amendment of the subsection – see Appendix 4.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'May become' is rendered as 'Tig leis ... a bheith' ('may be') in the Irish text, 'may' being rendered by

- 'tig' in the Irish text, as in some other Articles and sometimes in the Acts.
- 2 'Or institutions thereof' is rendered as 'nó institiúidí de na Comhphobail' ('or institutes/institutions of the Communities') in the Irish text, 'foras' rather than 'institiúid' expressing 'institution' in Articles 18.4.2°, 41.1.1° and 45.1 in particular, 'fundúireacht' expressing 'institution' in Articles 42.4 and 44.2.5°.
- 3 'Treaty' is rendered by 'Conradh', which is translated simply as 'contract' in Téarmaí Dlí, this term rendering 'agreement' in the next section; this term is also used in the Acts for 'treaty'.
- 4 'Invalidates laws' is rendered as 'aon dlíthe a chur ó bhail dlí' ('deprives any laws of legal validity') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Member' is rendered as 'comhalta', with 'Member States' being rendered as 'Ballstáit' ('ball' combined with 'stát').
- 6 'Necessitated by the obligations of membership' is rendered as 'de bhíthin riachtanais na n-oibleagáidí mar chomhalta' ('because of the necessities of the obligations as a member') in the Irish text, this clause being preceded by a comma in the Irish text alone.

This is a new subsection, the original text containing no Article 29.4.3°. The first and the third of the three sentences in this subsection were added to the text by the Third Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1972, the third sentence been subsequently struck out by the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1992. The second sentence was added to the text by the Tenth Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1987. See Appendix 4 on this subsection and on further subsections added to this section by the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1992.

Commentary

Conradh This headword is translated as 'contract' in Téarmaí Dlí and in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil. 'Conradh' is translated principally as 'agreement, contract; treaty' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'conradh a dhéanamh' as 'to enter into an agreement, make a contract', citing 'conradh síochána, peace treaty'. Dinneen translates 'conradh' as 'an agreement, a covenant; a bargain; a condition', citing 'Connradh na Gaedhilge, the "Gaelic League"' – note that 'agreement' is translated as 'comhaontú' in Téarmaí Dlí, following five of the ten Irish Legal Terms Orders made between 1947 and 1956. DIL translates 'cundrad' as (a) '(act of) trading, buying and selling; trade, commerce', citing 'lucht in chundartha' (= mercatores') from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac (composed in the second half of the eleventh century), and (b) 'bargain, pact, covenant, contract, terms'. In his Guide to Early Irish Law (p. 158, n. 1), Fergus Kelly states that 'cundrad' seems to be used particularly of commercial agreements, 'cundrad' serving to explain Latin 'merx' ('merchandise') in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms and the compound 'i cundrath-tig' translating Latin 'in macello' ('in the food-market') in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

'Cor' was another common Old Irish term for 'contract', this sense of the word continuing to a degree today in the compounds 'sochar' and 'dochar', while earlier had the sense of 'a good or valid contract' and an 'unfair or disadvantageous contract' respectively. Professor Kelly (ibid, p. 158) writes as follows:

The commonest legal act in early Irish society was no doubt the verbal contract or cor bél (lit. 'putting of lips' [translated by Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú as 'spoken undertaking']) often referred to simply as cor. The term covers all commercial undertakings as well as agreements to marry, to foster, to engage in co-operative farming, to enter clientship, etc.

In his recent edition of the eighth-century Irish law-tract, 'Di Astud Chor' ('On the Binding of Contracts'), under the title Early Irish Contract Law (p. 205f.), Neil McLeod comments as follows on the phrase 'cor cundartha' ('of contracts [and] bargains') in the law-tract:

This phrase recognises a distinction between cor 'contract', and cundrad, 'bargain'. According to DIL, cundrad may be from **com-di-rath* which would suggest an instantaneous exchange of considerations (lit. 'joint-from-grant'). Such a word might well be restricted, in its primary sense at least, to contracts of trade and commerce as indicated in DIL. The term cor, on the other hand, would appear to have the wider sense of 'binding promise'. As such it applies to service contracts, promissory gifts, and all kinds of executory contracts as well as the mainly executed contracts covered by the narrower term cundrad.

Turning to the Acts, 'the Articles of Agreement for a Treaty between Great Britain and Ireland' is translated as 'na hAirtíogail Chó-aontuithe do Chonradh idir an Bhreatain Mhóir agus Éire' in s2 of the Constitution of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) Act, 1922. 'Treaty for the Renunciation of War' is translated as 'Connra chun Diúltú do Choga' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1929, p. 20. 'The Treaty (Confirmation of Amending Agreement) Act, 1925' is cited in Irish as 'Acht an Chonnartha (Daingniú ar an gCó-aontú Leasathach), 1925'. "'The EEC Treaty" means the Treaty establishing the European Economic Community' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "Conradh CEE" an Conradh ag bunú Chomhphobal Eacnamaíochta na hEorpa' in s17(b) of the Finance Act, 1981, for example.

an Ionstraim Eorpach Aonair In styling this an 'Instrument', Irish follows the French title rather than the English 'Single European Act'. 'Ionstraim' is translated as 'instrument' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'ionstraim soshannta' is translated as 'negotiable instrument'. 'Ionstraim' is simply translated as 'instrument' in Ó Dónaill, with Dinneen following this translation with 'especially a musical instrument', citing 'ionstraim órdha, a golden instrument' from his own edition of the poems of Piaras Ferriter (c. 1610–1653), and giving 'ionstruimint' as a variant. DIL gives but one citation of 'instrúim' ('instrument'), i.e. 'gach instrúim ceóil' (from a work published in Timthridh Chroidhe Neamhtha Íosa, 1911- ) but cites examples of various forms of the headword 'in(n)struimint', from Latin 'instrumentum', from Maghnas Ó Domhnaill's Life of Colm Cille (written in 1532) onwards, translating this headword as 'instrument, utensil, implement; (figurative) means'.

'Article 2 ... and Title III of the Single European Act signed in Luxembourg on 17 February 1986 and in The Hague on 28 February 1986 are hereby repealed' is translated as 'Aisghairtear leis seo Airteagal 2 ... agus Teideal III den Ionstraim Eorpach Aonair arna shíniú i Lucsamburg ar an 17 Feabhra 1986 agus sa Háig ar an 28 Feabhra 1986' in the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 138).

den Chomhphobal 'Comhphobal' is a compound of the prefix 'comh-' ('mutual, joint, common; co-') and 'pobal', translated principally as 'people, community' in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Article 12.2.1° regarding 'pobal'. Ó Dónaill gives 'comhphobal' as a headword, simply translated as 'community'. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'the community' as 'an Stát, an pobal', citing 'all classes of the community, gach uile aicme den phobal'. 'The Protection of the Community (Special Powers) Act, 1926', is cited in Irish as 'Acht Caomhanta na nDaoine (Comhachta Speisialta), 1926'.

In s17(b) of the Finance Act, 1981, for example, "'the EEC Treaty" means the Treaty establishing the European Economic Community, signed at Rome on the 25th day of March, 1957' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "Conradh CEE" an Conradh ag bunú Chomhphobal Eacnamaíochta na hEorpa, a síníodh sa Róimh an 25ú lá de Mhárta, 1957'. In s1(1) of the European Communities Act, 1972, "'the European Communities" means the European Economic Community, the European Coal and Steel Community and the European Atomic Energy Community' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "na Comhphobail Eorpacha" Comhphobal Eacnamaíochta na hEorpa, an Comhphobal Eorpach do Ghual agus Cruach agus an Comhphobal Eorpach do Fluinneamh Adamhach'.

thar ceann Bhallstáit na gComhphobal Eorpach Note here how 'Ballstáit' is lenited and in the nominative plural, this following the official standard, as against the general practice in the Constitution of normal genitive after the prepositional phrase – see the commentary on Article 1.

Regarding 'Ballstáit' itself, this would appear to be a relatively recent compound of 'ball' ('member') and 'stát' ('state'), currently used specifically in reference to the European Communities/Union – it is not given as a headword even in Ó Dónaill (1977), where 'ball de chumann, a member of a society' is cited. 'Member-state' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'ball-stát' in translations for the Department of External Affairs. In Article 9 of the Second Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1954, 'The present Convention may be denounced on behalf of any Member of the League or non-Member State' is translated as 'Féadfar an Coinbhinsiún seo a shéanadh thar ceann aon Chomhalta de Chumann na Náisiún nó aon Stáit nach Comhalta'. 'If required by the member state whether he was or was not actually using the vehicle at the material time' is translated as 'má cheanglaíonn an comhalta air é, cé acu a bhí nó nach raibh sé ag úsáid na feithicle iarbhir an tráth ábhartha' in s107(4) of the Road Traffic Act, 1961. In s72(5) of the Finance Act, 1973, 'only where the effective centre of management ... of the transferor company concerned is in a Member State' is translated as 'ach amháin i gcás gur i mBallstát atá lárionad éifeachtach bainistí ... na cuideachta aistreora lena mbaineann'. Finally, in s3 of Article 18 of the Schedule to the Data Protection Act, 1988, 'invite any non-member State of the Council of Europe ... to be represented by an observer at a given meeting' is translated as 'a iarraidh ar aon Stát nach Ballstát de Chomhairle na hEorpa ... breathnadóir a bheith aige mar ionadaí ag cruinniú áirithe'.

a dhaingniú Verbal noun of 'daingnigh', the first person singular, present tense, of which, 'daingnim', is translated as 'I affirm (decree, etc.); I confirm; I make absolute (a conditional order); I ratify' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill cites 'conradh a dhaingniú, to ratify an agreement', translating 'daingnigh' as 'fortify; strengthen, secure; make fast, fix; confirm, consolidate'. 'Daingnighim' is translated as 'I make firm, I fortify, strengthen, repair, establish; I fence, make enclosures' in Dinneen, who cites 'daingnighim an doras, I make fast the door'. Examples of 'daingnidir' in the metaphorical sense of 'strengthens, confirms, fortifies, binds, fixes' are cited in DIL from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms (where 'conundaingnigese' [that Thou mayest fortify me] glosses Latin 'communias'). The primary sense of this verb is 'makes fast, fixes', based on 'daingen', 'firm, fast, strong, solid'.

'Any appointment which is not ratified by the County Council' is translated as 'Aon cheapa ná daingneoidh an Chomhairle Chontae' in s10 of the 'Galway County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. The Margin Title of s33 of the Land Act, 1939, 'power to ratify exchanges of portions of holdings', is translated as 'Comhacht chun malairtithe déanfar ar choda de ghabhálaí do dhaingniú', with 'the right to ratify a contract or other transaction' being translated as 'an ceart chun daingniú a dhéanamh ar chonradh nó idirbheart eile' in s45(1)(f) of the Land Act, 1965.

de bhíthin The earlier form of this phrase, 'fo bith', literally means 'under the stroke of', 'bith' being an old verbal noun of 'benaid' ('béim' being the later one), translated as 'act of striking; wounding' in DIL, citing 'fo bar mbid-si' ('on account of you') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. In later language we find 'ar', 'do' and 'tre' with 'bithin', translated as 'because of, on account of, for the sake of' (as preposition) and as 'because, for, since' (as causal conjunction) in DIL. Dinneen cites 'dá bhíthin, dá bhíthin sin, on that account' and Ó Dónaill cites 'dá bhíthin sin, for that reason'.

'And which necessitates an alteration in any part of any transmission system' is translated as 'agus gur gá dá dhruim atharú do dhéanamh ar aon pháirt d'aon chóir iompair' in s100 of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1927. 'All members of the Defence Forces shall be instructed in giving and receiving in the Irish language such commands and directions as are necessitated by the routine duties of their ranks and appointments' is translated as 'Bhéarfar do gach comhalta d'Óglaigh na hÉireann teagasc ar na horduithe agus na treora is gá le haghaidh gnáth-dhualgas a chéime agus a cheapacháin a thabhairt agus a ghlacadh i nGaeilge' in s28(2) of the Defence Act, 1954. In the Schedule to the Imposition of Duties (Confirmation of Orders) Act, 1972, 'Miscellaneous technical changes in the customs tariff necessitated by amendments in the Brussels Tariff Nomenclature' is translated as 'Athruithe teicniúla ilghnéitheacha ar an gcáinliosta custam atá riachtanach mar gheall ar leasuithe in Ainmníocht Tharaife na Bruiséile'. See further the commentary on Article 37.2 where 'de bhíthin amháin' renders 'by reason only (of the fact)'.

na n-oibleagáidí 'Oibleagáid' is translated as 'obligation' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'tá sé d'oibleagáid orm (é a dhéanamh), I am obliged to do it' and 'd'oibleagáidí a chomhlíonadh, to fulfil one's obligations'. Dinneen translates 'oibleagáid' as 'an injunction, an obligation; an injunction in the legal sense'. Only two examples of the late Romance loanword 'oibleagáid' ('obligation') are cited in DIL, both from Fr Antaine Gearnon's Parthas an Anna, printed in Louvain in 1645 – '(ar son an lochta) do chuir oibliogáid speisialta orm' (= who rendered me special service', according to DIL) and 'sgrúdaim ... m'oibleagáidí'.

'And be subject to the obligations of such citizenship' is translated as 'agus tuitfidh air na hoibleagáidí a ghabhann leis an saoránacht san' in Article 3 of the 1922 Constitution. 'Humbly acknowledging our obligations to our Divine Lord' is translated as 'ag admháil go huiriseal a mhéid atáimid faoi chomaoín ag Íosa Críost' in the Preamble to the 1937 Constitution. 'The obligations of the federal Government shall to this extent be the same' is translated as 'is iad na hoibleagáidí céanna a bheidh ar an Rialtas cónaidhme ina leith sin' in Article XI(a) of the First Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1980, for example.

ó fheidhm dlí See the commentary on Article 17.1.2°, where 'feidhm dlí' expresses 'effect'. Note that Ó Dónaill cites 'duine a chosc ar rud a dhéanamh, to prevent someone from doing something'. 'Nothing in this Article shall prevent special provisions being made by the Parliament' is translated as 'Ní choiscfidh éinní san Airtíogal so ar an Oireachtas forálacha speisialta do dhéanamh' in Article 4 of the 1922 Constitution. 'Interfering with or preventing ... the lawful occupation, use or enjoyment of any land or premises' is translated as 'Cuir-isteach no cosc do dhéanamh ... ar aon talamh no áitreabh do shealbhú no d'úsáid go dleathach no ar thairfe do bhaint as go dleathach' in s9 of Part II of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1923. 'Impede or prevent the free exercise of the franchise by any elector' is translated as 'aon toghthóir do chosc no do thoirmeasc ar feidhm do bhaint as an reacht-shaoirse' in s5 of the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923, with 'if the working of the invention ... is being prevented or hindered' being translated as 'má bhíonn oibriú na cumadóireachta ... á chosc no á thoirmeasc' in s43(2)(b) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927.

Looking at modern Acts, 'If any person ... conceals or prevents ... any person from appearing before ... a person' is translated as 'Duine ar bith ... a dhéanfaidh aon duine a cheilt nó a chosc ... ar láithriú os comhair duine' in s114(4) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. In s11(4) of the Holidays (Employees) Act, 1973, 'If any person ... prevents ... any person from appearing before ... an inspector' is translated as 'Aon duine ... a chuirfidh cosc ... le haon duine ó láithriú os comhair ... cigire'.

bearta See the commentary on Article 42.5 regarding 'bearta', expressing 'means' in that Article. Measures adopted for' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as having been translated as 'na slite a ceapadh chun' and 'na rudaí a dineadh chun' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health. 'To secure the preparation, effective carrying out, and co-ordination of measures conducive to the health of the people' is translated as 'chun a chur in áirithe go n-ullamhófar, go gcuirfar i bhfeidhm go héifeachtúil, agus go gcuirfar i gcó-ordú le n-a chéile seifteanna a raghadh chun maítheasa do shláinte na ndaoine' in s18 of the Local Government Act, 1925. In s7(2)(c) of the Unfair Dismissals Act, 1977, 'the measures (if any) adopted by the employee' is translated as 'na bearta (más aon bhearta iad) a rinne an fostai'. 'And of the administrative measures adopted to ensure its application' is translated as 'agus ar na bearta riaracháin chun é a chur i bhfeidhm' in Article 99 of the Fourth Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962.

den Chomhphobal Eorpach do Fhuinneamh Adamhach Generally 'do' would become d' before a lenited 'f' – note, for example, how 'de Fheabhra' becomes 'd'Fheabhra' in the present subsection. 'The International Atomic Agency' is styled 'an Ghníomhaireacht Idirnáisiúnta do Fhuinneamh Adamhach' on the Dáil Order Paper, 21/5/69. See the commentary on Article 10.1 regarding 'fuinneamh'.

institiúidí 'Institiúid' is translated as 'institute' in Ó Dónaill, Dinneen not appearing to give this word as a headword. See the commentary on Article 18.4.2° where 'foras' expresses 'institution'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'foras' has too material a sense ("brí ró-ábhartha") for what is involved here, i.e. 'established official organization'. He remarks that 'institiúid' is not perfect either, in that it is merely a more elegant modern word ("focal níos galánta nua-aimseartha") for what is expressed by 'foras' or 'fondúireacht'. Professor Ó Murchú notes that De Bhaldraithe avoids using 'institiúid' in the sense involved here, but as the phrase 'institiúid an phósta' is sometimes heard and as it is in the original text, Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends retaining it in the direct translation below.

Tig leis an Stát a bheith See the commentary on Article 12.4.4° regarding 'tig le'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'teacht chun bheith', given below as a variant direct translation, is very unnatural and also remarks on how 'tig le' was used in the original text rather than 'féadfaidh'.

a chur ó bhail dlí See the commentary on Article 28.3.3°. Note that 'invalid' is translated as 'neamhbhailí' in Téarmaí Dlí.

de Chomhphobal Eacnamaíochta See the commentary on Article 1 regarding 'eacnamaíocht'.

ina chomhalta See the commentary on Article 12.2.2°.

Direct translation

Tig leis an Stát a bheith<sup>1</sup> ina bhall den Chomhphobal Eorpach do Ghual agus Cruach (a bunaíodh<sup>2</sup> le Conradh a síníodh<sup>3</sup> i bPáras an 18ú lá d'Aibreán, 1951), de Chomhphobal Eacnamaíochta na hEorpa (a bunaíodh<sup>2</sup> le Conradh a síníodh<sup>3</sup> sa Róimh an 25ú lá de Mhárta, 1957) agus den Chomhphobal Eorpach do Fhuinneamh Adamhach (a bunaíodh<sup>2</sup> le Conradh a síníodh<sup>3</sup> sa Róimh an 25ú lá de Mhárta, 1957). Féadfaidh an Stát an Ionstraim Eorpach Aonair (a síníodh<sup>3</sup> thar ceann Bhallstáit na gComhphobal i Lucsamburg an 17ú lá d'Fheabhra, 1986, agus sa Háig an 28ú lá d'Fheabhra, 1986) a dhaingniú. Ní dhéanann aon fhoráil den Bhunreacht seo dlíthe a d'achtaigh, gníomhartha a rinne nó bearta a ghlac an Stát ba ghá mar gheall ar oibleagáidí na ballraíochta de na Comhphobail<sup>4</sup> ná dlíthe a d'achtaigh, gníomhartha a rinne ná bearta a ghlac na Comhphobail, nó institiúidí<sup>5</sup> den chéanna, a chosc ó fheidhm dlí a bheith acu sa Stát.

Variants

- 1 'Féadfaidh an Stát teacht chun bheith'
- 2 'arna bhunú'
- 3 'arna shiniú'
- 4 'mar gheall ar oibleagáidí a bhain le ballraíocht sna Comhphobail'
- 5 'forais'

ARTICLE 29.5.1° AIRTEAGAL 29.5.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní foláir gach Conradh idirnáisiúnta ina mbeidh an Stát páirteach a leagan os comhair Dháil Éireann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every international treaty in which the State will be participative must be laid before Dáil Éireann.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every international agreement to which the State becomes a party shall be laid before Dáil Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Agreement' is expressed in the Irish text by the term which expresses 'treaty' in Article 29.4.3°, i.e. 'conradh'; 'agreement' is translated as 'comhaontú' in Téarmaí Dlí, following five of the ten Irish Legal Terms Orders, though 'conradh' also has the sense of 'agreement', as well as that of 'treaty'; we find both 'conarthaí' and 'comhaontuithe' together in subsection 3 of this section.
- 2 'Becomes' is expressed as '(ina) mbeidh' ('will be') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 207, reports as follows regarding reference to Article 29.5 in the courts:

In The State (Duggan) v Tapley ([1952] IR 62; (1951) 85 ILTR 22) Gavan Duffy P pointed to the Irish text as putting beyond doubt that only future international agreements were within the section's contemplation.

Commentary

os comhair See the commentary on Article 28.4.3° where 'cuir os comhair' expresses 'present'. 'Every Order made by the Executive Council under this Act shall be laid before each House of the Oireachtas forthwith' is translated as 'Gach Ordú a dhéanfaidh an Árd-Chomhairle fén Acht so déanfar é do leaga fé bhráid gach Tighe den Oireachtas láithreach' in s19 of the Adaptation of Enactments Act, 1922. 'Do leaga os cóir' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'to lay ... before' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 11/1/24. In s47(3) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, 'The Minister may lay the report under subsection (1) before each House of the Oireachtas' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire an tuarascáil faoi fho-alt (1) a leagan faoi bhráid gach Tí den Oireachtas'.

páirteach See the commentary on Articles 12.4.3° and 28.3.3°. Ó Dónaill cites 'bhí sé páirteach sa choir, he was a party to the offence'. DIL cites 'pairtech 'na rúinibh' from the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards', translating 'pairtech' as 'participant, sharing'. 'Páirtí' translates 'party' in Téarmaí Dlí.

Ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

conradh See the commentary on Article 29.4.3°.

Direct translation

Déanfar gach comhaontú idirnáisiúnta a dtiocfaidh an Stát chun bheith ina pháirtí ann<sup>1</sup> a leagan faoi bhráid Dháil Éireann.

Variants

- 1 'i bpáirtíocht ann'

ARTICLE 29.5.2° AIRTEAGAL 29.5.2°

TÉACS GAELGE

Aon chonradh idirnáisiúnta a chuirfeadh costas ar an gciste poiblí ní bheidh sé ina cheangal ar an Stát mura dtoilí Dáil Éireann le téarmaí an chonartha.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any international treaty which would incur an expense to the public fund (it) will not be binding on the State unless Dáil Éireann consents to the terms of the treaty.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall not be bound by any international agreement involving a charge upon public funds unless the terms of the agreement shall have been approved by Dáil Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Involving a charge upon public funds' is expressed as 'a chuirfeadh costas ar an gciste poiblí' ('which would incur an expense on the public fund') in the Irish text, 'charge' being translated as 'muirear' in Téarmaí Dlí rather than 'costas'.
- 2 'The State shall not be bound by any international agreement' is expressed as 'Aon chonradh idirnáisiúnta ... ní bheidh sé ina cheangal ar an Stát' ('Any international agreement ... it shall not be a bind on the State') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Unless ... shall have been approved by Dáil Éireann' is expressed as 'mura dtoilí Dáil Éireann le' ('unless Dáil Éireann consents to ...') in the Irish text, 'toilím' being translated as 'I consent' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'I approve' being translated as 'formheasaim'.
- 4 As in the foregoing subsection, 'agreement' is expressed by the same term which expresses 'treaty' in Article 29.4.3°.

Commentary

a chuirfeadh costas ar 'Muirear' expresses 'charge' in Article 11, this being the Irish legal term for 'charge' – which fact was the subject of comment in the courts, as we saw in the commentary on Article 11. 'Land improvement charge', for example, is translated as 'muirear feabhsaithe talún' in Téarmaí Dlí.

'Costas a chur ar dhuine' is translated as 'to put someone to expense' in Ó Dónaill, 'ar mo chostas féin' being translated as 'at my own expense' and 'costas' being translated as 'cost, expense'. 'Ar chostas Sheáin, at John's expense' is cited in Dinneen s.v. 'costas', the senses of 'cost, expense, cost of maintenance' being included under this headword. The plural 'costais' is translated as 'costs' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Costus' comes from English 'costs' and is translated as (a) 'provisions, provender' and (b) 'wealth; cost' in DIL, citing 'coláiste ... ar costus rígh na Spáinne' (a college 'financed by the king of Spain') from Ó Cianáin's Flight of the Earls.

Regarding 'involve' in early legislation, 'not including cases which involve questions as to the validity of any law' is translated as 'lasmuich d'aon chás do thabharfadh ceist dlisteanachta aon dlí anuas' in Article 66 of the 1922 Constitution. 'These changes will involve:-' is translated as 'De bharr na n-atharuithe sin ní foláir' in s8 of the 'Laoighis County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. In s207 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'Any regulations of the Minister under this Act which involve a charge on public funds' is translated as 'Aon rialacháin a dhéanfidh an tAire féin Acht so agus as a leanfidh muirear a chur ar chistí phuiblí'. 'Where the exercise of any of the powers conferred by subsection (1) of this section involve a charge on public funds' is translated as 'I gcás feidhmiú aon chumhachta dá dtugtar le fo-alt (1) den alt seo do chur muirir ar chistí poiblí' in s30(2) of the Defence Act, 1954. 'Regulations under this Act involving a direct or indirect charge on or a payment into public funds' is translated as 'rialacháin faoin Acht seo a bhéarfás muirear go díreach nó go neamhdhíreach ar chistí poiblí nó íocaíocht isteach iontu' in s9 of the Prisoners of War and Enemy Aliens Act, 1956.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'muirear' does not especially relate to 'financial cost' ('costas airgid'); it is a charge or care ('cúram') which might involve a financial cost. Máirtín Ó Murchú therefore recommends 'a mbainfidh costas ar an gciste poiblí leis' in the direct translation below.

ina cheangal 'Bond, obligation' is given as a secondary sense of 'ceangal' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'níl ceangal orm a leithéid a dhéanamh, I am not obliged to do any such thing'. Dinneen cites 'tá sé de cheangal orm go, I am under the obligation of'. 'Cengal' comes from Latin 'cingulum' and is translated as (a) 'bond, tie, binding, fetter, fastening' and (b) 'act of binding, tying, fixing, contracting' in DIL, where examples are cited from the twelfth-century manuscript, the Book of Leinster, onwards, including 'Uair ní dhligh ri Temhra agrai no cengal for a ngiallaibh-seom' ('For the King of Tara has no right to put bond (?) or fetter upon their hostages') from Cóir Anmann, compiled perhaps as early as the eleventh century.

'And every such determination of the said Court shall be final, binding and conclusive to all intents and purposes' is translated as 'agus chun gach intinne agus críche gach socrú den tsórt san a dhéanfaidh an Chúirt sin beidh sé gan aon dul thairis ach é ina cheangal agus ina shocrú deiridh' in s89 of the Dundalk Harbour and Port Act, 1925. 'The Certificate ... shall be binding and conclusive on all parties' is translated as 'Beidh an deimhniú ... ina cheangal ar na páirtithe go léir agus ní bheidh aon dul thairis' in s32 of the Land Act, 1927, with 'whose decision shall be final and binding on all parties' being translated as 'agus ní bheidh dul thar a bhreith agus beidh ar gach n-aon géille don bhreith sin' in s15(3) of the Adaptation of Enactments Act, 1922.

Turning to modern Acts, in s213(1) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, 'the health board shall not be bound by anything contained in sections 206 to 210' is translated as 'ní bheidh an bord sláinte faoi cheangal ag aon ní atá in ailt 206 go 210'. 'But the defendant shall not be bound by such apportionment' is translated as 'ach ní bheidh an cosantóir faoi cheangal ag an gcionroinnt sin' in s38(11) of the Civil Liability Act, 1961.

ar an gciste poiblí 'Ciste' is translated as 'fund' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'ciste (an) stáit, treasury, state funds' being cited by Ó Dónaill. 'Ciste' is translated as 'a chest; a cist; a store; treasure ...' in Dinneen. Anglo-Saxon 'ciste' is the source of Irish 'ciste', this headword being translated as 'chest, treasure, riches' in DIL, citing 'i ciste choitchend na sruthí' ('the Corbona') from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac (composed in the second half of the eleventh century). See Article 11 where 'a chur in aon chiste amháin' expresses 'form one fund'. See above for an example from the Acts of 'a charge on public funds', translated as '(muirear) ar chistí poiblí'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, remarks that the English plural should not be imitated here in Irish.

mura dtoilí The present subjunctive of 'toiligh' after 'mura'; the future today has replaced the present subjunctive after 'mura' generally – see the commentary on Article 28.9.4°. 'Toilim' is translated as 'I consent' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'toilighim' being translated as 'I will, assent, agree to' in Dinneen, 'toiligh' being translated as 'will, consent, agree' in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Article 15.8.2°. See the commentary on Article 13.1.2° regarding 'approve' and the frequent use of 'ceadaigh' rather than 'formheas'; Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú favours 'ceadaithe' or 'faofa' to 'formheasta' in the direct translation below.

Standardised Irish text

Aon chonradh idirnáisiúnta a chuirfeadh costas ar an gciste poiblí ní bheidh sé ina cheangal ar an Stát mura dtoileoidh Dáil Éireann le téarmaí an chonartha.

Direct translation

Ní bheidh an Stát faoi cheangal ag aon chomhaontú idirnáisiúnta a mbainfidh muirear<sup>1</sup> ar an gciste<sup>2</sup> poiblí leis<sup>3</sup> mura mbeidh téarmaí an chomhaontaithe formheasta<sup>4</sup> ag Dáil Éireann.

Variants

- 1 'costas'
- 2 'ar chistí'
- 3 'lena mbainfidh muirear ar an gciste poiblí'
- 4 'ceadaithe', 'faofa'

ARTICLE 29.5.3° AIRTEAGAL 29.5.3°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní bhaineann an t-alt seo le conarthaí ná le comhaontuithe ar chúrsaí teicnice agus riaracháin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

This section does not concern treaties nor agreements on technical and administrative matters.

ENGLISH TEXT

This section shall not apply to agreements or conventions of a technical and administrative character.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Conventions' is expressed in the Irish text as 'comhaontuithe', the plural form of the Irish legal term for 'agreement'; 'agreements', on the other hand, is expressed, as in the two previous subsections, by the plural form of the Irish legal term for 'contract'.
- 2 'Agreements ... of a technical and administrative character' is expressed as 'comhaontuithe ar chúrsaí teicnice agus riaracháin' ('agreements on technical and administrative matters') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Technical' is expressed in the Irish text by 'teicnice', the genitive singular of the noun translated as 'technics' in Ó Dónaill.
- 4 The future 'shall not' is expressed in the present tense in the Irish text.

Commentary

ar chúrsaí teicnice 'Teicnic' is translated as 'technics' in Ó Dónaill. This headword does not appear to be given in Dinneen, who adds the abbreviation for 'recent' after the entry 'teicneamhail, technical'.

As regards 'character' in early Acts, 'Whenever the Revenue Commissioners are satisfied that any cinematograph film ... is of an educational character' is translated as 'Más deimhin leis na Coimisinéirí Ioncuim gur cabhair chun oideachais aon scannán cinematografach áirithe' in s11(2) of the Finance Act, 1926. 'Making on his farm improvements of a permanent character' is translated as 'buan-fheabhsuithe do dhéanamh ar a fheirm' in s12(1)(a) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1927. Turning to 'technical', 'administered by the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction' is translated as 'atá fé riar na Roinne um Thalmhuíocht agus Theagasc Teicniceach' in the Schedule to the Appropriation Act, 1922. 'Vocational and technical training' is translated as 'tréineáil chun gairme agus tréineáil teicniúil' in s1(v) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, 'téarmaí teicniúla' translating 'technical terms' in s4(3) of the Criminal Justice (Administration) Act, 1924, and 'ceard-oideachas' translating 'technical education' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1923, p. 317.

In s14(3)(c) of the Censorship of Publications Act, 1929, and in s3(7)(c) of the Illegitimate Children (Affiliation Orders) Act, 1930, 'in any publication of a technical character bona fide intended for circulation among members of the legal profession' is translated as 'in aon fhoillseachán de shaghas teicniúil a bheidh ceaptha bona fide chun a chúrsuithe imeasc dligheadóirí'.

comhaontuithe In the Amendment following the Belfast Agreement, 'Comhaontú na Breataine-na hÉireann' renders 'the British-Irish Agreement' in Article 29.7. 'Comhaontú' is translated as 'agreement' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Under a treaty or international convention to which the State or the Government is a party' is translated as 'faoi chonradh nó coinbhinsiún idirnáisiúnta inar páirtí an Stát nó an Rialtas' in s2(1)(c) of the Hallmark Act, 1981. In s1(1)(d) of the European Communities Act, 1972, 'the Convention on certain Institutions common to the European Communities, signed at Rome on the 25th day of March, 1957' is translated as 'an Coinbhinsiún ar Institiúidí áirithe is coiteann do na Comhphobail Eorpacha, a síníodh sa Róimh an 25ú lá de Mhárta, 1957'. In s9(1)(i) of the Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1926, 'securing compliance with the provisions ... of any convention in relation to wireless telegraphy entered into by the Government of Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'chun a chur in áirithe go ngéillfar d'fhorálacha aon chonvensiún idirnáisiúnta i dtaobh radio-theleagraíochta ina mbeidh Rialtas Shaorstáit Éireann páirteach'.

riaracháin Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that 'de chineál ... riaracháin' would have the sense of 'a kind of administration' and recommends 'riarthach' (translated as 'administrative; dispensing, distributive' in Ó Dónaill) as an adjective which would match 'teicniúil'.

ná Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú comments that 'ná' is preferable to 'nó', in the direct translation below, in the case of two separate things being involved.

Ní bhaineann ... le 'Bain le' is translated as 'concern, relate to' in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Article 3.

Direct translation

Ní bhainfidh an t-alt seo le<sup>1</sup> comhaontuithe nó<sup>2</sup> le coinbhinsiúin de chineál teicniúil agus de chineál riarthach<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'Ní bheidh feidhm ag an alt seo maidir le'
- 2 'ná'
- 3 'de chineál teicniúil riarthach'

ARTICLE 29.6 AIRTEAGAL 29.6

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní bheidh aon chonradh idirnáisiúnta ina chuid de dhlí inmheánach an Stáit ach mar a chinnfidh an tOireachtas.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

No international treaty will be part of the internal law of the State except as the Oireachtas/Legislature determines.

ENGLISH TEXT

No international agreement shall be part of the domestic law of the State save as may be determined by the Oireachtas.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Domestic' is expressed as 'inmheánach', 'internal', in the Irish text.
- 2 'Agreement' is again expressed in the Irish text as 'conradh', which has meanings in the range 'contract'/'treaty'/'agreement', as in s5 of this Article.

Commentary

ina chuid de See Ó Dónaill s.v. 'i' for the use of this preposition with the possessive pronoun to express 'parts', along with 'arrangement' and 'numbers' – Ó Dónaill cites 'tá sé briste ina dhá chuid, ina smidiríní, it is broken in two parts, in smithereens', as against 'ina iomláine, in its entirety'. See the commentary on Article 15.1.2°.

'Real estate included ... in a residuary gift ... shall be deemed to be a part of the residue of his estate' is translated as 'eastát réadach a bheidh ar áireamh ... i mbronntanas iarmhartach ... measfar gur cuid é d'iarmhar a eastáit' in s450(1)(c) of the Income Tax Act, 1967, this same English text being translated as 'estát réalta bheidh ... ina chuid de thabhartas iarmhartach ... tuigfear gur cuid é d'iarmhar a eastáit' in s8(1)(c) of the Finance Act, 1938.

inmheánach Dinneen translates 'inmheadhónach', the form in the original text, principally as 'internal, inward', citing 'an bheatha inmheadhónach, the interior life'. DIL cites 'ond rainn inmedonich hisin ind airebthado' ('from that internal part of the possessor') from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian. The noun 'inmedón' is cited only from Classical and Modern Irish in DIL; 'medón', however, is cited from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian and from Old and Middle Irish sources. See the commentary on Article 24.1, where 'inmheánach' again expresses 'domestic'.

Direct translation

Ní bheidh aon chomhaontú idirnáisiúnta ina<sup>1</sup> chuid de dhlí intíre<sup>2</sup> an Stáit ach mar a chinnfidh an tOireachtas<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'mar'
- 2 'baile'
- 3 'ach mar a chinnfear ag an Oireachtas'

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL AN tARD-AIGHNE

ARTICLE 30.1 AIRTEAGAL 30.1

TÉACS GAEILGE

Beidh Ard-Aighne ann, agus is é is comhairleach don Rialtas i gcúrsaí dlí agus tuairimí dlí, agus ní foláir dó gach cumhacht, gach feidhm agus gach dualgas dá mbronntar nó dá gcuirtear air leis an mBunreacht seo nó le dlí a oibriú agus a chomhlíonadh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

There will be an Attorney General, and it is he who is adviser to the Government in matters of law and legal opinions, and he must operate and fulfil every power, every function and every duty which is conferred or imposed on him by this Constitution or by law.

ENGLISH TEXT

There shall be an Attorney General who shall be the adviser of the Government in matters of law and legal opinion, and shall exercise and perform all such powers, functions and duties as are conferred or imposed on him by this Constitution or by law.

Note that s6(1) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, which section deals specifically with the Attorney General, reads as follows:

There shall be vested in the Attorney-General of Saorstát Éireann (who shall be styled in Irish Príomh-Atúrnae Shaorstáit Éireann and shall be appointed by the Governor-General on the nomination of the Executive Council) the business, powers, authorities, duties and functions formerly vested in or exercised by the Attorney-General for Ireland, ... the Law Adviser to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland ... together with the duty of advising the Executive Council and the several Ministers in matters of law and of legal opinion. Dílseofar i bPríomh-Atúrnae Shaorstáit Éireann (a ceapfar ag an Seanascal ar ainmniú ón Ard-Chomhairle) an gnó, na comhachta, na húdaráis, na dualgaisí agus na feidhmeanna a bhí dílsithe roimhe seo i bPríomh-Atúrnae na hÉireann, ... sa Chomhairleach Dlí do Lord Lieutenant na hÉireann, ... maraon le n-a bheith de dhualgas air an Ard-Chomhairle agus gach duine de sna hAíre do chomhairliú i gcúrsaí dlí agus oipineoin dlí.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Beidh Ard-Aighne ann', expressing 'There shall be an Attorney General', is made a statement in itself in the Irish text, followed by a comma not found in the English text.
- 2 'Who shall be the adviser of the Government' is expressed as 'agus is é is comhairleach don Rialtas' ('and it is he who is / shall be the adviser to the Government') in the Irish text.

- 3 'Legal opinion' is expressed in the plural in the Irish text.
- 4 'All such powers, functions and duties' is expressed as 'gach cumhacht, gach feidhm agus gach dualgas' ('all powers, all functions and all duties' / 'every power, every function and every duty') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Exercise and perform' is expressed by 'oibrigh agus comhlíon' ('operate and fulfil/perform') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 6 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Commentary

Ard-Aighne Translated as 'Attorney-General' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, this compound does not appear to be given as a headword in Dinneen, who translates 'aighne' as 'a pleader', giving the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards' as source. Ó Dónaill translates 'aighne' as 'pleader, advocate'. According to Fergus Kelly (op. cit., p. 56, n. 137), the etymology of Old Irish 'aigne' is obscure, early Irish law-texts distinguishing two types of professional lawyer, the 'brithem' and the 'aigne', these being assigned to separate parts of the court. Professor Kelly writes as follows (p. 56):

If the brithem fulfils some of the functions of a modern judge, the aigne can be equated with the modern barrister or advocate. His job is to plead the case of his client in court, and – if successful – he is entitled to one third of his client's award.

D.A. Binchy suggested that the original function of the 'aigne' may have been 'to steer the claimant through the shoals and quicksands of the law of distraint' (op. cit., p. 185). DIL translates 'aigne' as 'one learned in law or in the practice of law, lawyer, advocate, pleader'. 'Aignes' ('arguing, pleading; argument'), Modern Irish 'aighneas' (in 'aighneas a chur ar dhuine, to accost someone; to start an argument with someone'), is based on 'aigne', as is 'aighneacht' ('submission' in Téarmaí Dlí, not given as a headword in Ó Dónaill).

'The Attorney General' was styled in Irish 'an tÁrd-Atúrnae', 'an Príomh-Atúrnae' and 'an tArd-Aighne' in turn. For the salaries and expenses of the Office of the Attorney General' is translated as 'le haghaidh tuarastail agus costais Oifig an Ard-Aighne' in the Second Schedule to the Appropriation Act, 1981, for example, with 'For the Salaries and Expenses of the Office of the Attorney-General' being translated as 'Chun Tuarastail agus Costaisí Oifig an Phríomh-Atúrnae' in Schedule B of the Appropriation Act, 1934. The Margin Title of s44 of the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923, 'Inquiry by Attorney-General into alleged corrupt or illegal practices', is translated as 'An tArd-Atúrnae do dhéanamh fiosrúchán i gcleachtanna cuirpthe no nea-dhleathacha adéarfara a bhí ar siúl'. In the Long Title of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, 'declaring the functions and powers of the Attorney-General' is translated as 'feidhmeanna agus comhachta an Phríomh-Atúrnae d'fhaisnéis'. The 'Attorney-General of Saorstát Éireann' is styled 'Príomh-Atúrnae Shaorstáit Éireann' in the Long Title of the Erasmus Smith Schools Act, 1938, 'An Act to make provision for regulating the salaries of ... the Attorney-General' being translated as 'Acht chun socruithe do dhéanamh i dtaobh tuarastal ... an Ard-Aighne ... do rialáil' in the Long Title of the Ministerial and Parliamentary Offices Act, 1938.

comhairleach 'Cómhairleach' is translated as 'an adviser, a counsellor, a mentor' in Dinneen, who cites 'is olc an comhairleach air tú, you are a bad mentor to him'. Dinneen gives 'cómhairleoir' as a separate headword, translated as 'a counsellor, an adviser, member of a council', citing 'cómhairleoir cathrach, a city councillor'. Ó Dónaill gives 'comhairleoir' as the standard form of the noun 'comhairleach', translating 'comhairleoir' as (1) 'adviser, counsellor', citing 'comhairleoir dlí, legal adviser' and (2) 'councillor', citing 'comhairleoir contae, county councillor'. DIL gives but one citation of 'comairlightheóir' ('counsellor, adviser') – 'comhairlightheóir Herean' being cited from the Annals of Inisfallen, s.a. 1281. The noun 'comairlech', translated as 'adviser, counsellor' in DIL, is cited there from the ninth-century wisdom-text, Tecosca Cormaic, also citing 'is tu ... bus comairlech ... doib'. 'Comairlech' is based on 'comairle', verbal noun of 'con-airlethar' ('consults, takes counsel, advises').

'Any fees due to a consultant or adviser engaged pursuant to this section shall be paid by an tÚdarás out of moneys at its disposal' is translated as 'ioclfaidh an tÚdarás as airgead a bheidh faoina réir aige aon táill a bheidh dlite do shainchomhairleoir nó do chomhairleoir a fostaíodh de bhun an ailt seo' in s13(1) of the Údarás na Gaeltachta Act, 1979. In s107(3) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'A Courts-Martial may ... cause a legal adviser to be removed from the Court' is translated as 'Féadfidh Arm-Chúirt ... a chur fé ndéar comhairleach dlí do chur amach as an gCúirt'. We find 'comhairleoir' in the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1927, s26(1) of which commences as follows:

The Board may from time to time employ such technical or other advisers as it thinks fit to advise it in regard to any matter or thing .... Féadfidh an Bord ó am go ham pé comhairleoirí teicniúla no comhairleoirí eile is oiriúnach leis d'fhostú chun comhairle do thabhairt do i dtaobh éinní no aon ruda.

'The Chief Engineering Adviser of the Department of the Environment' is styled 'Príomh-Chomhairleoir Innealtóireachta na Roinne Comhshaoil' in 25(2)(e) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1983.

dá gcuirtear air 'Imposes on, subject to' is given in Ó Dónaill as one of the senses of 'cuir ar' (literally 'place on'), citing 'cúram, dualgas, a chur ar dhuine, to place a responsibility, a duty, on someone'. Dinneen translates 'cuirim ar' as 'I impose as an injunction on, ascribe to ...'. From an early Irish law-tract, DIL s.v. 'fo-ceird', cites 'turfochruic flathu foceird for doim' ('which he grants to an indigent person [i.e. one of the seven bestowals not recoverable by law]).

'All or any of the powers and duties conferred on the Registrar of Titles by this Part may be exercised and performed by such of his officers as the Minister may authorise in that behalf' is translated as 'Féadfaidh cibé oifigeach de chuid Chláraitheoir na dTeideal a bheidh údaraithe chuige sin ag an Aire gach ceann nó aon cheann de na cumhachtaí agus de na dualgais a bhronntar nó a chuirtear ar Chláraitheoir na dTeideal leis an gCuid seo a chomhlíonadh' in s25 of the Landlord and Tenant (Ground Rents) (No. 2) Act, 1978. In s7(3) of the Adaptation of Enactments Act, 1922, 'bodies whose or any of whose jurisdictions, powers or duties are by such Order conferred or imposed on such Board' is translated as 'na cóluchtaí eile go ndineann an t-Ordú san a n-údaráis, a gcomhachtanna no a ndualgais no aon cheann aca do bhronna no do chur ar an mBórd san'. 'Any undertaking, duties or powers, established, imposed or exercised under any order having the force of an Act of Parliament' is translated as 'aon toisc, dualgaisí no comhachtanna a bheadh bunuithe, nasctha no á bhfeidhmiú fé aon ordú 'na mbeadh feidhm Achta Pháirliminte aige' in s1(j) of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923.

tuairimí dlí In s6 of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, 'in matters of law and legal opinion' is translated as 'i gcúrsaí dlí agus oipineoin dlí', as we saw above. 'Legal opinion (high)' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'tuairim árd-bharánta dhlí' in a Report of the Public Accounts Committee, 1928. 'To meet the cost of obtaining second medical opinions' is translated as 'chun íoc do dhéanamh i gcostas athbharúla leagha d'fháil' in s2(a) of the National Health Insurance Act, 1928. In s30 of the Third Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, 'a request shall be made for an advisory opinion on any legal matter involved' is translated as 'iarrfar tuairim chomhairleach ar aon cheist dlí a bheidh ann'. See the commentary on Articles 22.2.1° and 24.1 as regards 'tuairim'.

gach ... dá See the commentary on Article 13.3.2°. Looking at the Acts as regards 'all such', 'The Supreme Court shall have all such powers as are conferred by this Part on the Court' is translated as 'Beidh ag an gCúirt Uachtarach na cumhachta uile a bheirtear don Chúirt leis an gCuid seo' in s53 of the Arbitration Act, 1954, for example. Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends translating 'and shall exercise and perform all such powers, functions and duties as are conferred or imposed on him by this Constitution or by law' more naturally as 'feidhmeoidh agus comhlíonfaidh sé nó sí a dtabharfar dó nó di, nó a gcuirfeair air nó uirthi, leis an mBunreacht seo nó le dlí de chumhachtaí, d'fheidhmeanna, agus de dhualgais'.

ní foláir do See the commentary on Article 11.

a oibriú agus a chomhlíonadh See the commentary on Articles 3 and 12.1.

dá mbronntar air See the commentary on Article 13.1.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Beidh Ard-Aighne ann, agus is é nó is í is comhairleach don Rialtas i gcúrsaí dlí agus tuairimí dlí, agus ní foláir dó nó di gach cumhacht, gach feidhm agus gach dualgas dá mbronntar nó dá gcuirtear air nó uirthi leis an mBunreacht seo nó le dlí a oibriú agus a chomhlíonadh.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Beidh Ard-Aighne ann ar comhairleoir an Rialtais i gcúrsaí dlí agus tuairimí dlí é nó í,<sup>1</sup> agus déanfaidh sé nó sí na cumhachtaí, na feidhmeanna agus na dualgais sin uile<sup>2</sup> a thabharfar dó nó di, nó a chuirfear<sup>3</sup> air nó uirthi, leis an mBunreacht seo nó le dlí, a fheidhmiú agus a chomhlíonadh<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'Beidh Ard-Aighne ar comhairleoir an Rialtais i gcúrsaí dlí agus tuairimí dlí é nó í ann,' 'Beidh Ard-Aighne ann a bheidh mar chomhairleoir / ina chomhairleoir nó ina comhairleoir don Rialtas i gcúrsaí dlí agus tuairimí dlí.'
- 2 'go léir'
- 3 'a fhorchuirfear'
- 4 'feidhmeoidh agus comhlíonfaidh sé nó sí a dtabharfar dó nó di, nó a gcuirfear air nó uirthi, leis an mBunreacht seo nó le dlí de chumhachtaí, d'fheidhmeanna, agus de dhualgais'

ARTICLE 30.2 AIRTEAGAL 30.2

TÉACS GAELIGE

Is ag an Uachtarán a cheapfar an tArd-Aighne arna ainmniú sin ag an Taoiseach.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is by the President that the Attorney General will be appointed on his having been nominated by the Taoiseach.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Attorney General shall be appointed by the President on the nomination of the Taoiseach.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'On the nomination of the Taoiseach' is expressed as 'arna ainmniú sin ag an Taoiseach' ('on his having been nominated by the Taoiseach') in the Irish text.

Note that 'There shall be vested in the Attorney-General of Saorstát Éireann (who shall be styled in Irish Príomh-Atúrnae Shaorstáit Éireann and shall be appointed by the Governor-General on the nomination of the Executive Council)' is translated as 'Dilseofar i bPríomh-Atúrnae Shaorstáit Éireann (a cheapfar ag an Seanascal ar ainmniú ón Ard-Chomhairle)' in s6(1) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924.

Commentary

arna ainmniú sin See the commentary on Article 13.1.1°. 'Arna' is a compound of the preposition 'ar' and the possessive adjective 'a', and is used with the verbal noun to express 'on his, its, having been ...' – Ó Dónaill cites 'arna chríochnú dom, when I had completed it' and 'arna fhoilsiú ag, published by'. Turning to 'sin', Ó Dónaill cites 'a mhac sin, that man's son' and 'lena dtaobh sin, as compared to those' as examples of 'sin' with the third person possessive adjective followed by a noun. DIL cites 'a fíus sin' ('knowledge of that') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. In the present instance, according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, the exact nuance would be expressed in English by stressing 'his'.

In s6(3)(b) of the Córas Beostoic agus Feola Act, 1979, 'three persons who shall represent the producers of bovine animals and sheep who shall be appointed by the Minister on the nomination of such organisations as the Minister considers to be representative of such producers' is translated as 'triúr a bheidh ionadaitheach do tháirgeoirí bó-ainmhithe agus caorach agus a cheapfaidh an tAire ar ainmniú cibé eagraíochtaí a mheasfaidh an tAire a bheidh ionadaitheach do na táirgeoirí sin'.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Is ag an Uachtarán a cheapfar an tArd-Aighne arna ainmniú nó arna hainmniú sin ag an Taoiseach.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an tUachtarán an tArd-Aighne a cheapadh<sup>1</sup> ar ainmniú an Taoisigh<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'An tUachtarán a cheapfaidh an tArd-Aighne', 'Ceapfaidh an tUachtarán an tArd-Aighne'
- 2 'ar an Ard-Aighne a ainmniú ag an Taoiseach', 'ar ainmniú ón Taoiseach'

ARTICLE 30.3 AIRTEAGAL 30.3

TÉACS GAELIGE

I gcás gach coir agus cion dá dtugtar in aon chúirt a bhunaítear faoi Airteagal 34 den Bhunreacht seo, ach amháin cúirt dlínse achomaire, is in ainm an Phobail agus ar agra an Ard-Aighne, nó ar agra dhuine éigin eile a údaraítear ina chomhair sin de réir dlí, a dhéanfar an cúiseamh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In the case of every crime and offence that is brought in any court which is established under Article 34 of this Constitution, except a court of summary jurisdiction, it is in the name of the People and at the suit of the Attorney General, or at the suit of some other person who is authorised for that in accordance with law, that the charge will be made.

ENGLISH TEXT

All crimes and offences prosecuted in any court constituted under Article 34 of this Constitution other than a court of summary jurisdiction shall be prosecuted in the name of the People and at the suit of the Attorney General or some other person authorised in accordance with law to act for that purpose.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Prosecuted' is expressed as '(dá) dtugtar', '(that is) brought', in the Irish text; 'I prosecute' is translated as 'tugaim ar aghaidh' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'Shall be prosecuted in the name of the People' is expressed as 'is in ainm an Phobail ... a dhéanfar an cúiseamh' ('it is in the name of the People that the charge will be made') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Authorised in accordance with law to act for that purpose' is expressed as 'a údaraítear ina chomhair sin de réir dlí' ('authorised for that in accordance with law') in the Irish text.
- 4 'All crimes and offences' is expressed as 'I gcás gach coir agus cion' ('In the case of every crime and offence') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Constituted' is expressed as 'a bhunaítear', 'established', in the Irish text.

J.M. Kelly (op. cit., p. 207) reports as follows on reference made to this section in the courts:

In The State (Ennis) v Farrell ([1966] IR 107), where what was in issue was the question whether the right of a common informer had survived the constitutional provision restricting the bringing of prosecutions to the Attorney General 'or some other person authorised in accordance with law to act for that purpose', Ó Dálaigh CJ (with whom the rest of the Supreme Court agreed) pointed out that the Irish counterpart of 'authorised', namely 'a údaraítear' was:

'quite express as a present autonomous form in negating the idea of the authorisation required being such only as might be made in the future.'

He contrasted Article 34.4.3 (on the right of appeal to the Supreme Court from High Court decisions), where the clear future form of the Irish verb 'ordófar' put the future sense of the phrase 'as may be prescribed' beyond doubt. On the word 'prosecuted' in the same section, he said this was to be understood in its widest sense; this was confirmed by the Irish text, where the equivalent used was 'tugtar' = 'brought'.

J.M. Kelly comments on the above as follows:

It must be seriously doubted whether the Constitution will stand up to such minute linguistic exegesis, or whether one's sense of reality – bearing in mind the history of the Irish version – can remain suspended in the face of it. If the words of Ó Dálaigh CJ mean, as they seem to, that the use of the present form imports a situation existing in 1937, it suggests – to remain with Article 30 – that the regulation of the Attorney General's office was to be contained in post-1937 legislation ('is de réir dlí a rialófar oifig an Ard-Aighne'), whereas the basic legislation on the office is contained in s6 of the Ministers and Secretaries Act 1924. Another instance is Article 16.5: while the Irish version says, in regard to fixing a shorter period than seven years for the maximum duration of a Dáil, 'féadfar ré is giorra ná sin a shocrú le dlí,' the actual five-year term observed from 1937 until the enactment of s10 of the Electoral Act 1963, was that prescribed by s7 of the Electoral (Amendment) Act 1927. These examples could be much extended.

Commentary

Igcás gach coir agus cion One would expect the genitive to follow the prepositional phrase 'i gcás', i.e. 'i gcás gach coire agus ciona', but in such a sequence of nouns avoidance of inflection is unexceptionable, according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú.

'Coir' is translated as 'crime' in Téarmaí Dlí, as 'crime, offence; fault, transgression' in Ó Dónaill, and as 'sin, crime, accusation, trespass' in Dinneen. 'Caire' is translated as 'crime, fault, sin' in DIL, where 'in cairi' is cited from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, glossing Latin 'notam iniquitatis puplicae'.

'Cion' is translated as 'offence' in Téarmaí Dlí, as 'offence, transgression; blame' in Ó Dónaill and as 'sin, transgression, a fault, guilt; passion, desire' in Dinneen, who cites 'catha na gcean sríanach, the hosts of restrained desires' from the poetry of Pádraigín Haicéad (c. 1600-1654). DIL cites 'ní nach cin aile' ('it is not any other fault') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, translating 'cin' as 'guilt, fault, crime' and, in legal contexts, 'offence, crime, etc. for which the doer is answerable at law, hence with meaning liability, guilt, incurred penalty'. In his 'Index of Irish Terms' appended to A Guide to Early Irish Law, Fergus Kelly cites 'cin comocuís, the crime of a kinsman', 'cin súilo, the crime of an eye (i.e. culpable onlooking)', 'sensmúr cinad, the old embers of an offence', 'duinechin, human offence' and 'ropchin, animal offence', along with the maxim 'marbaid cach marb a chinta' ('every dead man kills his offences') – i.e. liability for a man's personal offences does not pass on to his heirs after his death (ibid, p. 157). See further the commentary on Article 38.1.

Turning to the Acts, 'promotes, encourages, or advocates the commission of crimes or offences' is translated as 'go gcuireann sé ar aghaidh, go misníonn sé, no go molann sé coirthe no ciontaí do dhéanamh' in s4(1)(e) of the Public Safety Act, 1927. 'Genocide and the other acts enumerated in article III shall not be considered as political crimes for the purpose of extradition' is translated as 'Ní mheasfar gur coireanna polaitiúla chun críche eiseachadta cinédhíothú ná na gníomhartha eile a áirítear in airteagal III' in Article VII of the Genocide Act, 1973.

Looking at 'offence' in association with 'prosecute', 'nothing in this section ... shall operate to affect the power of any person ... to prosecute in respect of any offences under the Principal Act' is translated as 'ní oibreoidh éinní san Alt so ... chun deifir do dhéanamh do chomhacht aon duine ... chun cúisimh do dhéanamh maidir le haon chiontaí féin bPríomh-Acht' in s31(4) of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1931. 'Without prejudice to the powers or functions of any other prosecuting authority, to bring or prosecute proceedings in relation to offences under the Acts' is translated as 'gan dochar do chumhachtaí ná d'fheidhmeanna aon údaráis ionchúisimh eile, imeachtaí a thionscnamh nó a thabhairt ar aghaidh i ndáil le ciontaí faoi na hAchtanna' in s9(6)(h) of the Consumer Information Act, 1978. In s1(4) of the Courts (No. 3) Act, 1986, 'any person authorised by or under statute to prosecute the offence' is translated as 'aon duine a bheidh údaraithe le reacht nó faoi reacht chun cion a ionchúiseamh'. In the Table accompanying s72 of the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'An offence under any provision of this Act, may, if prosecuted summarily, be prosecuted by the Minister' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire cion faoi aon fhoráil den Acht seo a ionchúiseamh más go hachomair a ionchúiseofar é'. Finally, 'An offence under this Act may be prosecuted by the Minister' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire cion faoin Acht seo a ionchúiseamh' in s11 of the Milk (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1979, with 'Féadfaidh an Cumann inchúiseamh a dhéanamh i leith ciona faoin Acht seo' translating 'An offence under this Act may be prosecuted by the Society' in s77(1) of the Solicitors Act, 1954.

Note that 'coir' translates 'offence' in Article 71 of the 1922 Constitution, where 'shall not be tried by any Court Martial ... for an offence cognisable by the Civil Courts' is translated as 'ní thrialfaidh aon Chúirt Airm ... é in aon choir intrialta ag sna Cúirteanna Síbhialta'. In s13(2) of the Adaptation of Enactments Act, 1922, however, 'he shall be guilty of an offence under the Customs Act' is translated as 'beidh sé ciontach i gcionnta fé Achtanna na gCustum'.

dá dtugtar 'Tugaim ar aghaidh' is translated as 'I prosecute (appeal, proceedings, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Give', 'take' and 'bring' are the three principal senses of 'tabhair' in Ó Dónaill.

'Local authority's power to prosecute' is translated as 'Cumhacht ag údarás áitiúil ionchúiseamh a thionscnamh' in the Margin Title of s31 of the Local Government (Water Pollution) Act, 1977, which section reads as follows:

Where under this Act a local authority may prosecute for an offence, the authority may so prosecute whether or not the offence occurred in ... the authority's ... functional area. I gcás a bhféadfaidh údarás áitiúil faoin Acht seo ionchúiseamh i gcion a thionscnamh, féadfaidh an t-údarás an t-ionchúiseamh a thionscnamh amhlaidh cibé acu i limistéar feidhmiúcháin an údaráis ... nó nach ea a tharla an cion.

In s17(3) of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1927, 'the Board may sue or prosecute and be sued or prosecuted as the owner of the said works' is translated as 'féadfidh an Bord dul chun dlí nó dlí do chur ar dhuine agus féadfar dul chun dlí leis an mBord no dlí do chur air mar únaer ar na hoibreacha san'.

Looking at early Acts, 'Provided that nothing in this Act shall be construed to prevent any person from instituting or prosecuting any proceedings under the Indemnity Act, 1920' is translated as 'Ach ní léireofar éinní san Acht so chun éinne do chosc ar aon imeachta do bhunú no do chur ar aghaidh fén Acht Slánuíochta, 1920' in s1 of the Indemnity (British Military) Act, 1923. 'Fails to prosecute any proceedings with due diligence and effect' is translated as 'do dhéanamh faillí ar aon imeachta do phróiseacht le dícheall agus le héifeacht chuibhe' in s41(1)(c) of the Land Act, 1923. 'In case the action is one fit to be prosecuted in the High Court' is translated as 'más aicsean é is oiriúnach le plé san Ard-Chúirt' in s48 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. Finally, 'The Prosecuting Officer' is styled in Irish 'An tOifigeach Cúisimh' in s93(3) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks, regarding the direct translation below, that the phrase 'a thabharfar ar aghaidh' is very awkward to handle in the whole syntax ('an-aimlithe le láimhseáil sa chomhréir iomlán') and therefore almost unintelligible, this however being the phrase given in Téarmaí Dlí. Although admitting that 'cúiseamh' is not the precise corresponding term, Professor Ó Murchú suggests translating the clause here as 'a dhéanfar cúiseamh ar gach coir agus cion dá ndéanfar cúiseamh orthu in aon chúirt'.

cúirt dlínse achomair This phrase is translated as 'court of summary jurisdiction' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'dlínse achomair' (translated as 'summary jurisdiction') being in the genitive case following 'cúirt'. See the commentary on Article 3 regarding 'dlínse'. 'Athchomair' is translated as 'near, approximate; concise, compendious, quick, sudden' in Dinneen. DIL translates 'athchumair' as 'concise, brief', no examples being cited from the earlier sources; 'cum-mair', to which a prefix has been added in 'athchumair', is a compound of 'com' and 'berr' ('short'), and is cited in DIL from the Tripartite Life of Patrick, composed at the end of the ninth or beginning of the tenth century. See further the commentary on Article 38.2.

'Summary jurisdiction' is translated as 'dlínse achomair' in the Margin Title of s12 of the Criminal Law (Rape) Act, 1981, s12(1) reading as follows:

A justice of the District Court shall have jurisdiction to try summarily an offence to which section 10 or 11 relates .... Beidh dlínse ag breitheamh den Chúirt Dúiche cion lena mbaineann alt 10 nó 11 a thriail go hachomair.

'Courts of Summary Jurisdiction' is translated as 'Cúirteanna Údaráis Achmair' in Article 75 of the 1922 Constitution, 'the Summary Jurisdiction Acts' being translated as 'na hAchtanna Údaráis Achmair' in s4(6) of the Interpretation Act, 1923. 'All penalties costs and expenses under bye-laws may be recovered by the Board before a Court of summary jurisdiction' is translated as 'féadfidh an Bord gach fineáil, costas, agus caitheachas fé fho-dhlithe do bhaint amach i láthair Cúirte dlíghinse achmair' in s37(2)(ii) of the Dublin Port and Docks (Bridges) Act, 1929. See the commentary on Article 13.6 regarding 'cúirt dlínse coire', 'court of criminal jurisdiction'.

ar agra dhuine éigin According to the official standard, 'duine' would be unlenited following a verbal noun preceded by a preposition – see s6(I) of the chapter headed 'Séimhiú agus Urú' in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, where 'ar thógáil cathrach' is cited.

'Agra' is translated as 'suit' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'ar agra' is translated as 'at the suit of'. 'Agra dlí' is translated as 'lawsuit' in Ó Dónaill. 'Agradh' agus 'agra', along with 'agairt' agus 'agar', are given as forms of the verbal noun of 'agraim' in Dinneen, 'I sue' being given as one of the senses of 'agraim', citing 'agraim é san chion, I sue him for the crime'. As Fergus Kelly (op. cit., p. 190, n. 3) states, 'Old Irish "acrae" is the verbal noun of "ad-gair", literally "calls to", i.e. "sues, takes legal action"'. DIL translates 'acra(e)' as 'act of suing, prosecuting, bringing an action, urging a claim; action, suit, process', citing 'ní bethe fria acre' ('ye should not be seeking redress for it') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

'In this Act "the prosecutor", in relation to an offence, means the person by whom the offence is prosecuted, being the Attorney General, a person prosecuting at the suit of the Attorney General or a person authorised by law to prosecute' is translated as 'San Acht seo ciallaíonn "an t-ionchúisitheoir", maidir le cion, an duine atá ag ionchúiseamh an chiona, arb é an tArd-Aighne é, duine ag ionchúiseamh ar agra an Ard-Aighne nó duine atá údaraithe le dlí ionchúiseamh a dhéanamh' in s4 of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1967. In s59 of the Juries Act, 1927, 'The following provisions shall have effect in every trial of a criminal issue which is tried with a jury and is prosecuted at the suit of the Attorney-General of Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'Beidh éifeacht ag na forálacha so a leanas i ngach triail cheiste coiriúla a trialfar le giúiré agus gur ar agra Phríomh-Atúrnae Shaorstáit Éireann a beifear á cur ar aghaidh'. In s9(1) of the Criminal Justice (Administration) Act, 1924, 'All criminal charges prosecuted upon indictment in any court shall be prosecuted at the suit of the Attorney-General of Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'Is ar agra Phríomh-Atúrnae Shaorstáit Éireann a cuirfar ar aghaidh gach cúiseamh coiriúil a cuirfar ar aghaidh ar dhíotáil in aon chúirt'. 'In proceedings at the suit of the State or any Minister' is translated as 'in imeachta a bhunóidh an Stát no aon Aire' in s48(vii) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. 'In all suits, matters and proceedings to which the Congested Districts Board is a party' is translated as 'i ngach cúis dlí, ní agus imeacht go bhfuil Bord na gCeanntar gCumhang ina pháirtí ionta' in s10 of the Land Law (Commission) Act, 1923, 'the suit' being translated as 'an t-agra' in s1 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1928. Finally, 'the offence shall be taken to be prosecuted at the suit of the convening authority' is translated as 'measfar an cion a bheith á inchúiseamh ar agra an údarás chomórtha' in s188 of the Defence Act, 1954.

cúiseamh Dinneen translates 'cúisim' as 'I accuse, charge, prosecute', giving 'cúisighim' as a variant, 'cúisiughadh' being given as the verbal noun. DIL only gives one example of the verbal noun of 'cúisigid' ('cuid do gnimartaib na corp nádurda nach eider do cuiisgiud o na duilib' ['Some actions ... which cannot be traced to the elements']), from the Catalogue of Gaelic Manuscripts in the Advocates Library, Edinburgh, translating the verb 'cúisigid' as 'causes, induces'. This verb is based on 'cúis', which comes from Latin 'causa', DIL giving 'cause, case; debate, controversy' and more specifically 'law, (law) case, suit, charge' as a secondary sense of 'cúis', citing examples of the general sense from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles onwards. See the commentary on Articles 12.10.2° and 38.1.

ina chomhair sin The prepositional phrases 'faoi chomhair' and 'i gcomhair' are translated by Ó Dónaill as 'for, intended for; to get', citing 'i gcomhair an turais, for the journey'. See the commentary on Article 14.4.

a bhunaítear See the commentary on Article 14.1 where 'comhdhéan' expresses 'constitute', along with the commentary on Articles 18.1 and 18.4.1°, 'cóirigh' expressing 'constitute' in the latter.

Standardised Irish text

I gcás gach coire agus ciona dá dtugtar in aon chúirt a bhunaítear faoi Airteagal 34 den Bhunreacht seo, ach amháin cúirt dlínse achomaire, is in ainm an Phobail agus ar agra an Ard-Aighne, nó ar agra duine éigin eile a údaraítear ina chomhair sin de réir dlí, a dhéanfar an cúiseamh.

Direct translation

Is in ainm an Phobail agus ar agra an Ard-Aighne nó ar agra duine éigin eile a údarófar de réir dlí chun gníomhú chun na críche sin<sup>1</sup> a dhéanfar gach coir agus cion a thabharfar ar aghaidh<sup>2</sup> in aon chúirt a bheidh bunaithe<sup>3</sup> faoi Airteagal 34 den Bhunreacht seo, seachas cúirt dlínse achomaire, a thabhairt ar aghaidh.<sup>4</sup>

Variants

- 1 'chuige sin'
- 2 'a dhéanfar cúiseamh ar gach coir agus cion dá ndéanfar cúiseamh orthu'
- 3 'arna bunú', 'ama comhdhéanamh'
- 4 'Déanfar gach coir agus cion a thabharfar ar aghaidh in aon chúirt a bheidh bunaithe faoi Airteagal 34 den Bhunreacht seo, seachas cúirt dlínse achomaire, a thabhairt ar aghaidh in ainm an Phobail agus ar agra an Ard-Aighne nó ar agra duine éigin eile a údarófar de réir dlí chun gníomhú chun na críche sin.'

ARTICLE 30.4 AIRTEAGAL 30.4

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní cead an tArd-Aighne a bheith ina chomhalta den Rialtas.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Attorney General's being a member of the Government is not permitted.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Attorney General shall not be a member of the Government.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Shall not' is expressed as 'Ní cead' ('It is not permitted') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Note that Article 63 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

He shall not be a member of the Oireachtas .... Ní bheidh sé 'na bhall den Oireachtas.

Commentary

Ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°; DIL cites 'is cet' ('it is allowable') from earlier literature. Note that s6(2) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, contains the following:

The Attorney-General may be or become a member of Dáil Éireann, and if he is a member of Dáil Éireann at the time of his appointment he shall not be under any obligation to resign his seat or to submit himself for re-election. Féadfaidh an Príomh-Atúrnae bheith no teacht chun bheith ina bhall de Dháil Éireann, agus más ball de Dháil Éireann é le linn a cheaptha ní bheidh sé fé aon oblagáid a shuíochán do thabhairt suas ná dul fé aththogha.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú suggests translating this section simply as ‘Ní comhalta den Rialtas an tArd-Aighne’, thereby avoiding gender-proofing and also being as exact a translation of ‘shall not’ as ‘ní bheidh’ in the direct translation below.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Ní cead an tArd-Aighne a bheith ina chomhalta nó ina comhalta den Rialtas.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ní bheidh an tArd-Aighne ina chomhalta nó ina comhalta den Rialtas.<sup>1</sup>

Variant

1 ‘Ní comhalta den Rialtas an tArd-Aighne.’

ARTICLE 30.5.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 30.5.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Tig leis an Ard-Aighne éirí as oifig uair ar bith trína chur sin in iúl don Taoiseach chun an scéal a chur faoi bhráid an Uachtaráin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Attorney General may give up office at any time by informing the Taoiseach of that in order to put the matter before the President.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Attorney General may at any time resign from office by placing his resignation in the hands of the Taoiseach for submission to the President.

Divergences between the official texts

The same divergences as noted as regards Articles 28.9.1<sup>o</sup> and 28.9.2<sup>o</sup> apply here.

Commentary

See the commentary on Articles 28.9.1<sup>o</sup> and 28.9.2<sup>o</sup>.

Direct translation

Féadfaidh an tArd-Aighne uair<sup>1</sup> ar bith éirí as oifig ach dearbhú<sup>2</sup> air sin<sup>3</sup> a chur i lámha an Taoisigh lena chur<sup>4</sup> faoi bhráid an Uachtaráin.

Variants

- 1 ‘tráth’
- 2 ‘deimhniú’
- 3 ‘trína éirí-as nó trína héirí-as’
- 4 ‘le cur’

ARTICLE 30.5.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 30.5.2<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Tig leis an Taoiseach, ar ábhair is leor leis féin, a iarraidh ar an Ard-Aighne éirí as oifig.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Taoiseach may, for reasons which he himself considers sufficient, ask the Attorney General to give up office.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Taoiseach may, for reasons which to him seem sufficient, request the resignation of the Attorney General.

Divergences between the official texts

The same divergences as noted regarding the first half of Article 28.9.4<sup>o</sup> apply here.

Commentary

See the commentary on Article 28.9.4<sup>o</sup>.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Tig leis an Taoiseach, ar ábhair is leor leis féin nó léi féin, a iarraidh ar an Ard-Aighne éirí as oifig.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Féadfaidh an Taoiseach, ar chúiseanna is leor leis féin nó léi féin<sup>1</sup>, iarraidh ar an Ard-Aighne éirí as<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘ar chúiseanna is leor leis nó léi’
- 2 ‘éirí as oifig’

ARTICLE 30.5.3<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 30.5.3<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Mura ndéana an tArd-Aighne de réir na hachainí sin ní foláir don Uachtarán é a chur as oifig má chomhairlionn an Taoiseach dó é.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

If the Attorney General does not act in accordance with that request the President must put him out of office if the Taoiseach recommends it to him.

ENGLISH TEXT

In the event of failure to comply with the request, the appointment of the Attorney General shall be terminated by the President if the Taoiseach so advises.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘In the event of failure to comply with the request’ is expressed in the Irish text as ‘Mura ndéana an tArd-Aighne de réir na hachainí sin’ (‘If the Attorney General does not act in accordance with that request’), the English text being followed by a comma, which we do not find in the Irish text. The comma is found in this position in the very similar Article 28.9.4°, where the same Irish text (with ‘an comhalta sin’ replacing ‘an tArd-Aighne’) expresses ‘should the member concerned fail to comply with the request’.

- 2 ‘The appointment of the Attorney General shall be terminated by the President’ is expressed in the Irish text as ‘ní foláir don Uachtarán é a chur as oifig’ (‘the President must put him out of office’), a phrase we have already seen in Article 28.9.4°.
- 3 ‘If the Taoiseach so advises’ is expressed as ‘má chomhairlions an Taoiseach dó é’ (‘if the Taoiseach recommends it to him’) in the Irish text, as also in Article 28.9.4°.

Commentary

See the commentary on Article 28.9.4°. As regards ‘In the event of’ in the Acts see the commentary on Article 12.3.3°, where we find the phrase ‘má tharlaíonn’. ‘Or, in the event of failure to deliver such statement or return’ is translated as ‘nó, i gcás mainneachtain ráiteas nó tuairisceán den sórt sin a sheachadadh’ in s18(2)(ii) of the Finance Act, 1983. ‘An order for the revocation of a patent under this section may be made so as to take effect either unconditionally, or in the event of failure to comply, within such reasonable period as may be specified in the order’ is translated as ‘Féadfar ordú ag cúlghairm paitinne faoin alt seo a dhéanamh ar dhóigh go mbeidh éifeacht leis gan choinníoll, nó i gcás nach gcomhlionfar, laistigh de cibé tréimhse réasúnach a shonrófar san ordú’ in s43(2) of the Patents Act, 1964. ‘And in the event of failure so to do will repay to the Minister’ is translated as ‘agus, má theipeann air san do dhéanamh, go n-aisíocfaidh leis an Aire’ in s113(2) of the Vocational Education Act, 1930.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Mura ndéanfaidh an tArd-Aighne de réir na hachainí sin ní foláir don Uachtarán é nó í a chur as oifig má chomhairlions an Taoiseach dó nó di é.

Direct gender-proofed translation

I gcás mainneachtana ar dhéanamh<sup>1</sup> de réir na hiarrata<sup>2</sup>, déanfaidh an tUachtarán ceapachán an Ard-Aighne a fhoirceannadh<sup>4</sup> má chomhairlions an Taoiseach amhlaidh<sup>5</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘mainneachtain déanamh’
- 2 ‘ar an iarraidh a chomhlíonadh’, ‘ar ghéilleadh don iarraidh’
- 3 ‘I gcás mainneachtana faoi ghéilleadh don iarraidh.’
- 4 ‘a scor’, ‘scoirfidh an tUachtarán ceapachán an Ard-Aighne’
- 5 ‘más é sin / más amhlaidh a mholfaidh/chomhairleoidh an Taoiseach dó nó di’

ARTICLE 30.5.4° AIRTEAGAL 30.5.4°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní foláir don Ard-Aighne dul as oifig ar éirí as oifig don Taoiseach, ach tig leis leanúint dá dhualgais nó go gceaptar comharba an Taoisigh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Attorney General must leave office on the Taoiseach’s giving up office, but he may continue with his duties until the Taoiseach’s successor is appointed.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Attorney General shall retire from office upon the resignation of the Taoiseach, but may continue to carry on his duties until the successor to the Taoiseach shall have been appointed.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘Retire from office’ is expressed as ‘dul as oifig’ (‘leave office’) in the Irish text; ‘I retire’ is translated as ‘scoirim as oifig’ in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 ‘Upon the resignation of the Taoiseach’ is expressed as ‘ar éirí as oifig don Taoiseach’ (‘upon the Taoiseach giving up office’) in the Irish text, as we have already seen in Article 28.11.1°.
- 3 ‘May’ is expressed as ‘tig le’ (‘can’), as we have also seen in earlier sections of this Article, ‘shall’ being expressed as ‘ní foláir’ (‘must’) in the Irish text, as we have seen in many earlier Articles.
- 4 As we have already seen in Article 28.11.1°, ‘continue to carry on his duties’ is expressed as ‘leanúint dá dhualgais’ (‘continue with his duties’) and ‘shall have been appointed’ is expressed as ‘(go) gceaptar’ (‘is appointed’) in the Irish text.

Commentary

dul as oifig Note that we find ‘éirí as oifig’ in the very similar Article 28.11.1°. Ó Dónaill cites ‘dul, éirí, as oifig, to leave, retire from, office’, also citing ‘dul as baile, to leave home’ and ‘ná téigh as láthair, don’t absent yourself’. DIL cites ‘Annas 7 Coefas ... bliadain no bitis ina n-oifig’, from the Leabhar Breac (compiled in 1411 or earlier) as the first of two examples of ‘oifig’ in the sense of ‘tenure of office’, the other citation coming from the seventeenth-century Annals of the Four Masters (‘an ccein baóí D. i n-oificc’). ‘Oifig’ comes from Latin ‘officium’. Téarmaí Dlí translates ‘scoirim as oifig’ as ‘I retire’ – Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that this phrase would seem to have a transitive sense, i.e. ‘scoirfeair an bainisteoir as oifig’, for example.

‘He shall retire from office at the first annual general meeting of the society’ is translated as ‘scoirfidh sé dá oifig ag an gcéad chruinniú bliantúil den chumann’ in s124(13) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. ‘At the first annual general meeting of the company all the directors shall retire from office’ is translated as ‘Ag an gcéad chruinniú ginearálta bliantúil den chuideachta scoirfidh na stiúrthóirí go léir dá n-oifig’ in s92 of Table A in the Schedule to the Companies Act, 1963. In Article 53 of the 1922 Constitution, ‘the Ministers nominated by him shall retire from office should he cease to retain the support of a majority in Dáil Éireann’ is translated as ‘imeoidh ... na hAirí a ainmneoidh sé as oifig má chailleann seisean tacúocht mhór-áirimh i nDáil Éireann’. ‘The age of retirement’ is translated as ‘aois oifige d’fhágaint’ in Article 68. In s3(1) of the Comptroller and Auditor-General Act, 1923, ‘The Comptroller and Auditor-General shall retire from office upon attaining the age of seventy years' is translated as 'Imeoidh an t-Árd-Scrúdaí as oifig ar shlánú a dheich mbliain is trí fichid do'. Finally, 'eirighe as oifig' translates 'retire from office' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1927, p. 781, 'dul as feadhmanas' being cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms from early Proceedings of Dáil Éireann (exact reference unclear).

éirí as oifig See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°. See the commentary on Article 12.4.2° regarding 'retire'.

tig leis See the commentary on Article 12.4.4°.

Ní foláir do See the commentary on Article 11.

leanúint dá dhualgais See the commentary on Article 28.11.1°.

nó go gceaptar comharba See the commentary on Article 28.11.1°.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Ní foláir don Ard-Aighne dul as oifig ar éirí as oifig don Taoiseach, ach tig leis nó léi leanúint dá dhualgais nó dá dualgais nó go gceaptar comharba an Taoisigh.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Scoirfidh an tArd-Aighne dá oifig nó dá hoifig<sup>1</sup> ar éirí as don Taoiseach, ach féadfaidh sé nó sí leanúint air nó uirthi i mbun a dhualgas nó a dualgas<sup>2</sup> go dtí go mbeidh an comharba<sup>3</sup> ar an Taoiseach ceaptha.

Variants

- 1 'd'oifig an Ard-Aighne'
- 2 'leanúint air nó uirthi lena dhualgais nó lena dualgais', 'ag seoladh a dhualgas nó a dualgas'
- 3 'go mbeidh comharba'

ARTICLE 30.6 AIRTEAGAL 30.6

TÉACS GAEILGE

Faoi chuimsiú na bhforálacha sin romhainn den Airteagal seo is de réir dlí a rialófar oifig an Ard-Aighne, maille leis an tuarastal is iníochta leis an té a bheas i seilbh na hoifige sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Within the constraint of the foregoing provisions of this Article it is in accordance with law that the office of the Attorney General will be regulated, along with the salary which is payable to the person who will hold that office.

ENGLISH TEXT

Subject to the foregoing provisions of this Article, the office of Attorney General, including the remuneration to be paid to the holder of the office, shall be regulated by law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The office of Attorney General' is expressed in the Irish text as 'oifig an Ard-Aighne' ('the office of the Attorney General'), in line with normal Irish syntax.

- 2 'Including' is expressed as 'maille le' ('along with') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Remuneration' is expressed as 'tuarastal' ('salary') in the Irish text, as we saw earlier – 'remuneration' being translated as 'luach saothair' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 'To be paid' is expressed as 'is iníochta' ('which is payable') in the Irish text.
- 5 'The holder of the office' is expressed as 'an té a bheas i seilbh na hoifige sin' ('the one/person who will hold that office') in the Irish text.
- 6 A comma follows 'Article' in the English text, no corresponding comma being found in the Irish text.
- 7 'By law' is expressed as 'de réir dlí' ('in accordance with law') in the Irish text.

Commentary

i seilbh na hoifige sin 'I seilbh' is translated as 'in possession of, in a position to' in Dinneen s.v. 'sealbh', 'seilbh' being given as the dative of 'sealbh', this form often being used as the nominative. Ó Dónaill translates 'rud a bheith i do sheilbh agat' as 'to possess something'. DIL cites examples of 'i seilbh' in the sense of 'in the possession of' from the Glossary of Cormac mac Cuilleáin († 908) (i.e. 'i seilbh charat Cairpri') onwards. 'Selb' is translated as follows in DIL: I(a) (in concrete sense) 'property, appurtenance, domain, possessions', (b) 'a flock, a herd', (c) (in abstract sense) 'possession, ownership', and II (in early Irish law) (a) 'property, estate', (b) 'ownership, possession'. In his Guide to Early Irish Law (p. 89, n. 176), Fergus Kelly refers to 'mac-shealbh' ('son-property'), the term expressing the donation of cattle and other goods a fosterchild received from his parents and fosterparents. Professor Kelly quotes Campion, writing in the sixteenth century, as follows:

They (the Irish) love tenderly their fosterchildren and bequeathe to them a child's portion whereby they nourish sure friendship, so beneficial every way, that commonly five hundredth kyne and better are given in reward to winne a nobleman's childe to foster.

See further the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

The Margin Title of s2 of the Court Officers (Temporary Appointments) Act, 1924, 'Person appointed under this Act to have powers of holder of office', is translated as 'Duine a ceapfar fén Acht so beidh comhachta sealbhóir na hoifige aige'. 'Or in respect of the death of any subsequent holder who had been the registered holder of such security' is translated as 'no i dtaobh báis aon tsealbhóra 'na dhiaidh sin a bhí 'na shealbhóir cláruithe ar an urrús san' in s13(6) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. 'For the payment to the last holder of the Office of Governor-General' is translated as 'Chun na híocaíochta leis an duine ba dhéanaí bhí i seilbh Oifige mar Sheanascair' in Schedule (B) of the Appropriation Act, 1937. 'There shall be paid to the holder of the office of Ombudsman the same remuneration and allowances for expenses as are paid to a judge of the High Court' is translated as 'Íocfar le sealbhóir oifig an Ombudsman an luach saothair céanna agus na liúntais chéanna i leith caiteachas a íoctar le breitheamh den Ard-Chúirt' in s3(1) of the Ombudsman Act, 1980.

an té The indefinite personal pronoun 'té', used with the article, is translated as 'the person (who)' in Ó Dónaill, citing ‘an té a dúirt é, the person who said it’. Dinneen translates ‘an té’ as ‘he who, the one who, whosoever’, citing the maxim ‘an té bhrathas is é mharbhas, he who betrays slays’ and ‘an Té is feárr, the Best, God’. ‘An té’ developed from ‘int-í’, the article combined with the demonstrative particle ‘í’ used substantively; on the analogy of ‘é’ and ‘sé’, ‘int-í’ became ‘int-é’, this form appearing as early as Saltair na Rann (composed c. AD 1000), according to DIL, where ‘intii labrathar ilbéire’ (‘he who speaks many languages’) is cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

oifig an Ard-Aighne ‘The office of Attorney General’ is translated as ‘oifig an Ard-Aighne’ in s15(a) of the Oireachtas (Allowances to Members) and Ministerial and Parliamentary Offices (Amendment) Act, 1973, and in s3(7)(c) of the Oireachtas (Allowances to Members) Act, 1938. ‘For the salaries and expenses of the Office of the Attorney General’ is translated as ‘Le haghaidh tuarastail agus costais Oifig an Ard-Aighne’ in the Second Schedule to the Appropriation Act, 1981, and as ‘Chun Tuarastail agus Costaisí Oifig an Phríomh-Atúrnae’ in Schedule (B) of the Appropriation Act, 1934. Note that ‘The Office of the Registrar of the Supreme Court’ is styled ‘Oifig Chláraitheoir na Cúirte Uachtaraí’ in s3(1) of the Court Officers Act, 1926, and ‘Oifig Chláraitheora na Cúirte Uachtaraí’ in Iris Oifigiúil, 1926, p. 781. Note also that while ‘oifig an phoist’ generally translates ‘post office’, ‘that post office’ would be translated as ‘an oifig phoist sin’.

Faoi chuimsiú This phrase is translated as ‘within the scope of’ in the Glossary accompanying An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, and generally expresses ‘subject to’ in the Constitution; ‘subject to’ is translated as ‘faoi réir’ in Téarmaí Dlí. See the commentary on Articles 12.5 and 18.7.2°.

a rialófar Literally ‘will be ruled’/‘controlled’, this phrase generally expressing ‘will be regulated’ in the Constitution, ‘rialáil’ rather than ‘rialaigh’ generally translating that verb in the Acts. See the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 12.5.

a bheas The special form of the relative, future tense, of the substantive verb, would generally be replaced by ‘a bheidh’ today – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in ‘-s’.

tuarastal See the commentary on Article 15.9.2°. Again Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú favours ‘tuarastal’ to Téarmaí Dlí’s ‘luach saothair’.

maille leis See the commentary on Articles 2 and 10.1.

Standardised Irish text

Faoi chuimsiú na bhforálacha sin romhainn den Airteagal seo is de réir dlí a rialófar oifig an Ard-Aighne, maille leis an tuarastal is iníoctha leis an té a bheidh i seilbh na hoifige sin.

Direct translation

Faoi réir na bhforálacha sin romhainn den Airteagal seo, déanfar oifig an Ard-Aighne<sup>1</sup>, ar a n-áirítear<sup>2</sup> an luach saothair a bheidh le híoc<sup>3</sup> le sealbhóir na hoifige, a rialáil le dlí.

Variants

- 1 ‘an oifig Ard-Aighne’
- 2 ‘lena n-áirítear’
- 3 ‘a iocfar’

THE COUNCIL OF STATE AN CHOMHAIRLE STÁIT

ARTICLE 31.1 AIRTEAGAL 31.1

TÉACS GAEILGE

Beidh Comhairle Stáit ann chun cabhair is comhairle a thabhairt don Uachtarán i dtaobh gach ní dá gcuirfidh an tUachtarán ina gcomhairle, maidir le hé d'oibriú is do chomhlíonadh na gcumhachtaí is na bhfeidhmeanna a luaitear sa Bhunreacht seo a bheith inoibrithe is inchomhlíonta aige tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, agus fós chun aon fheidhmeanna eile a bhromtar ar an gComhairle sin leis an mBunreacht seo a chomhlíonadh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

There will be a Council of State to give help and advice to the President concerning every matter which the President will seek their counsel on, as regards his operating and fulfilling the powers and the functions which are stated in this Constitution are to be operated and fulfilled by him after taking counsel with the Council of State, and moreover to perform any other functions which are conferred on that Council by this Constitution.

ENGLISH TEXT

There shall be a Council of State to aid and counsel the President on all matters on which the President may consult the said Council in relation to the exercise and performance by him of such of his powers and functions as are by this Constitution expressed to be exercisable and performable after consultation with the Council of State, and to exercise such other functions as are conferred on the said Council by this Constitution.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 While the first occurrence of 'exercise' is expressed by a term which is translated as 'operate' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'oibriú', as we have seen in some earlier Articles, with 'exercisable' being expressed as 'inoibrithe ... aige' ('workable, operable... by him'), 'to exercise' in the final clause is expressed by the verbal noun 'comhlíonadh', which earlier in the section expresses 'performance', and is so translated in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'And to exercise such other functions' is expressed as 'agus fós chun aon fheidhmeanna eile ... a chomhlíonadh' ('and moreover to perform/exercise any other functions') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Such of his powers ... as are by this Constitution expressed' is expressed as 'na cumhachtaí ... a luaitear sa Bhunreacht seo' ('the powers ... which are stated in this Constitution') in the Irish text.
- 4 'On all matters on which the President may consult the said Council' is expressed as 'i dtaobh gach ní dá gcuirfidh an tUachtarán ina gcomhairle' ('on every matter that the President will seek their counsel on') in the Irish text, with 'after consultation' being expressed as 'tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh' ('after taking counsel'); while no comma follows 'the said Council' in the English text, we find a comma after 'ina gcomhairle' in the Irish text.

- 5 'To aid and counsel the President' is expressed as 'chun cabhair is comhairle a thabhairt don Uachtarán' ('to give aid/help and counsel/advice to the President') in the Irish text.

Commentary

Dá gcuirfidh ... ina gcomhairle 'Rud a chur i gcomhairle duine' is translated as 'to ask someone's advice about something' in Ó Dónaill, with Dinneen citing 'cuirim an scéal 'na chomhairle, I take his advice on the matter'. DIL cites 'dá gcuireadh im chomhairle' ('were [he] to ask my advice') from a miscellaneous collection of Classical Irish poetry. See the commentary on Article 13.1.3<sup>o</sup> regarding 'comhairle'; 'consultation' is translated as 'comhchomhairle' in Téarmaí Dlí.

Provided however that if immediate action by the Bank is called for it shall not be necessary for the Bank to consult as aforesaid' is translated as 'Ar choinníoll áfach, má bhíonn gá le gníomhaíocht láithreach ón mBanc, nach gá don Bhanc dul i gcomhairle mar a dúradh' in s34(5) of the Central Bank Act, 1989. Section 11(1) of the Defence Act, 1954, reads as follows:

There shall stand established a body to be called the Council of Defence ... to aid and counsel the Minister on all matters in relation to the business of the Department of Defence on which the Minister may consult the Council. Beidh comhlucht arna bhunú ar a dtabharfar an Chomhairle Chosanta ... chun cabhair agus comhairle a thabhairt don Aire i ngach ní maidir le gnó na Roinne Cosanta a n-iarrfaidh an tAire a gcomhairle faoi.

comhairle a thabhairt See the commentary on Article 13.1.3<sup>o</sup> regarding 'comhairle'. 'Aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of the offence of personation' is translated as 'cabhrú, sprioca no comhairliú chun cionta na pearsanála do dhéanamh, no an cionta san do chur á dhéanamh' in s1(3)(a) of the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923. 'Such owner shall be deemed to aid, abet, counsel, or procure the commission of an offence' is translated as 'tuigfear an t-únaer san do chabhrú no do neartú le cionta do dhéanamh no do chomhairliú cionta do dhéanamh no do chur cionta á dhéanamh' in s54(1) of the Road Traffic Act, 1933. In s115(1)(c) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, 'Where a person aids, abets, counsels or procures an employee of his to commit any offence' is translated as 'Má chabhraíonn nó má neartaíonn duine le fostaí dá chuid, nó má chomhairlíonn dó nó má thugann air, aon chion ... a dhéanamh’.

inoibrithe is inchomhlíonta See the commentary on Articles 3, 12.1 and 13.9 regarding the verbs ‘oibrigh’ and ‘comhlíon’ expressing ‘exercise’ and ‘fulfil’ almost completely consistently in the Constitution, ‘oibrím’ being translated as ‘I operate’ in Téarmaí Dlí, while ‘comhlíonaim’ is translated as ‘I perform’ in Téarmaí Dlí, also being translated there as ‘I comply with’ and ‘I conform with’, having the general (and literal) sense of ‘I fulfil’. Ó Dónaill translates ‘inoibrithe’ as ‘workable, practicable’ but appears not to give ‘inchomhlíonta’ – note that ‘in-chomhbhrúite, compressible’, ‘in-chomhshóite, convertible’ and ‘in-chomhthomhaiste, commensurable’ are all hyphenated, the rule being that a hyphen is usually inserted between two prefixes (see An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, ‘Na Rialacha’, s24(c) (iii)). Dinneen gives many examples of the separable prefix ‘ion-, in-’ with the genitive of verbal nouns, ‘denoting fitness, aptitude, worthiness, and sometimes possibility and probability’, but does not appear to cite ‘inoibrithe’ or ‘inchomhlíonta’. See the commentary on Article 12.3.2° regarding ‘intofa’ in DIL.

‘And those powers, duties and functions shall become exercisable and performable by those authorities ... in accordance with the agreement’ is translated as ‘agus beidh na cumhachtaí, na dualgais agus na feidhmeanna sin infheidhmithe agus inchomhlíonta ag na húdaráis sin ... de réir an chomhaontaithe’ in s10(1) of the Local Government (Toll Roads) Act, 1979. In s45 of the Air-Raid Precautions Act, 1939, ‘The powers and duties conferred or imposed on an essential undertaker by or under this Act ... shall be exercisable and performable by such essential undertaker’ is translated as ‘Na comhachta bronntar no bronntar agus na dualgaisí forchuirtear no forchuirfear ar ghnóthaire riachtanach leis an Acht so no fé ... beid infheidhmithe agus ionchóilíonta ag an ngnóthaire riachtanach san’. Finally, ‘na comhachta agus na dualgaisí do bheadh infheidhmithe agus ionchóilíonta’ translates ‘the powers and duties which would be exercisable and performable’ in s8(2) of the Milk and Dairies Act, 1935.

maidir le hé d’oibriú This would be an unfamiliar construction today, possibly written as ‘maidir leis-sean d’oibriú’ or with repetition of the noun, i.e. ‘maidir leis an Uachtarán d’oibriú’. ‘Maidir le’ is translated as ‘as for, as regards’ in Ó Dónaill and as ‘as to, as for, about, regarding, considering ...’ in Dinneen, who cites ‘maidir le Seán, as to John’. See the commentary on Articles 15.15 and 29.4.1°. As regards ‘a’ replacing ‘d(o)’ see the commentary on Article 15.8.2°.

cabhair This headword is translated as ‘help, assistance’ in Ó Dónaill, who translates ‘cabhair a thabhairt do dhuine’ as ‘to give help to someone’. DIL cites ‘ropo chobair dond Éirinn / tichtu Patraicc’ (‘A help to Ireland was Patrick’s coming’) from Fiacc’s hymn on St Patrick, composed c. AD 800, as an example of ‘cobair’, translated as ‘help, assistance’, with the preposition ‘do’; DIL also cites ‘lase dombeir dia cobrith n-occo’ (‘when God gives help therein’) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. ‘I aid and abet’ is translated as ‘cabhraim agus neartaím le’ in Téarmaí Dlí.

‘Every person who shall make or cause to be made or aid or assist in making any signal or warning to any person engaged in fishing illegally of the approach of any bailiff’ is translated as ‘Gach éinne a thabharfidh no a chuirfidh fé ndéar go dtabharfar no a chuideoidh no a chabhróidh chun go dtabharfar aon chomhartha no foláramh d’éinne atá ag iascach go nea-dhlíthiúil go bhfuil aon bháille ... ag teacht’ in s33 of the Fisheries Act, 1925. ‘Knowingly aiding, abetting, assisting in, or encouraging the commission of, or conspiring to commit, any of the offences’ is translated as ‘Cabhrú le héinne, é ghríosú, cuidiú leis no é mhisniú, no cogar do dhéanamh, chun aon chionta ... do dhéanamh, ... agus san go feasach’ in s13 of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1926.

a luaitear ‘Luaigh’ expresses ‘state’, ‘specify’ and ‘express’ respectively in Articles 12.10.1°, 14.5.2° and 24.1 – see the commentary on Article 12.10.1°. ‘Luaim’ is translated as ‘I cite’ in Téarmaí Dlí, Dinneen including the senses ‘I mention, speak of, tell’ s.v. ‘luadhaim’. The principal sense of ‘lúaidid’ is ‘moves across, traverses, goes along’, DIL citing ‘intan luaithfidir a chaingen som’ (‘when his case shall be agitated’), from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary of the Psalms, as an example of the sense of ‘sets in motion, brings about, initiates, instigates’. ‘Lúaidid’ is based on ‘lúad’, which itself is the verbal noun of ‘luid’, ‘moves’.

The adjective ‘express’ is translated as ‘sainráite’ in Téarmaí Dlí, with ‘expressly’ translated as ‘go sainráite’. See the commentary on Article 24.1. Regarding the phrase qualified here, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú suggests the variant translation given below, ‘a chomhlíonadh na coda sin dá chumhachtaí ... a bhfuil sé sainráite ...’.

d’oibriú is do chomhlíonadh See the commentary on Articles 3, 12.1 and 13.9 regarding ‘oibrigh’ and ‘comhlíon’.

tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh See the commentary on Article 13.2.3°.

fós See the commentary on Articles 15.3.2° and 29.2.

a bhronntar See the commentary on Article 13.11.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Beidh Comhairle Stáit ann chun cabhair is comhairle a thabhairt don Uachtarán i dtaobh gach ní dá gcuirfidh an tUachtarán ina gcomhairle, maidir leis an Uachtarán a oibriú is a chomhlíonadh na gcumhachtaí is na bhfeidhmeanna a luaitear sa Bhunreacht seo a bheith inoibrithe is in-chomhlíonta aige ní aici tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, agus fós chun aon feidhmeanna eile a bhronntar ar an gComhairle sin leis an mBunreacht seo a chomhlíonadh.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Beidh Comhairle Stáit ann chun cabhrú leis an Uachtarán agus chun an tUachtarán a chomhairliú maidir le<sup>1</sup> gach ní a bhféadfaidh an tUachtarán dul i gcomhairle<sup>2</sup> leis an gComhairle sin ina leith i ndáil leis<sup>3</sup> an Uachtarán a fheidhmiú agus a chomhlíonadh na gcumhachtaí sin agus na bhfeidhmeanna sin<sup>4</sup> dá chuid nó dá cuid<sup>5</sup> a bhfuil sé sainráite sa Bhunreacht seo go bhfuil siad infheidhmithe agus in-chomhlionta tar éis dul i gcomhairle<sup>2</sup> leis an gComhairle Stáit, agus chun cibé feidhmeanna eile a bhronntar ar an gComhairle<sup>6</sup> sin leis an mBunreacht seo a fheidhmiú.

Variants

- 1 'i dtaobh'
- 2 'i gcomhchomhairle', 'i ndáil chomhairle'
- 3 'maidir leis'
- 4 'na gcumhachtaí agus na bhfeidhmeanna sin'
- 5 'leis nó léi', 'a chomhlíonadh na coda sin dá chumhachtaí agus dá fheidhmeanna, nó dá cumhachtaí agus dá feidhmeanna.'
- 6 'a thugtar don Chomhairle'

ARTICLE 31.2 AIRTEAGAL 31.2

TÉACS GAELIGE

Is iad na daoine seo a leanas a bheas ina gcomhaltaí den Chomhairle Stáit:

- i De bhua oifige: an Taoiseach, an Tánaiste, an Príomh-Bhreitheamh, Uachtarán na hArd-Chúirte, Cathaoirleach Dháil Éireann, Cathaoirleach Sheanad Éireann, agus an tArd-Aighne.
- ii Gach duine ar cumas dó agus ar fonn leis gníomhú ina chomhalta den Chomhairle Stáit, agus a bhí tráth ina Uachtarán nó ina Thaoiseach nó ina Phríomh-Bhreitheamh, nó ina Uachtarán ar Ard-Chomhairle Shaorstát Éireann.
- iii Aon daoine eile a cheapfar ag an Uachtarán faoin Airteagal seo, má cheapfar aon duine, chun bheith ina gcomhaltaí den Chomhairle Stáit.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is the following people who will be members of the Council of State:

- i By virtue of office: the Taoiseach, the Tánaiste, the Chief-Justice, the President of the High-Court, the Chairman of Dáil Éireann, the Chairman of Seanad Éireann, and the Attorney General.
- ii Every person who has the capability and who wishes to act as a member of the Council of State, and who was at one time (a) President or (a) Taoiseach or (a) Chief-Justice, or (a) President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State.
- iii Any other people who will be appointed by the President under this Article, if any person is appointed, to be members of the Council of State.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Council of State shall consist of the following members:

- i As ex-officio members: the Taoiseach, the Tánaiste, the Chief Justice, the President of the High Court, the Chairman of Dáil Éireann, the Chairman of Seanad Éireann, and the Attorney General.
- ii Every person able and willing to act as a member of the Council of State who shall have held the office of President, or the office of Taoiseach, or the office of Chief Justice, or the office of President of the Executive Council of Saorstát Éireann.
- iii Such other persons, if any, as may be appointed by the President under this Article to be members of the Council of State.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'As ex officio members' is expressed as 'De bhua oifige' ('By virtue of office') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Willing' is expressed as 'ar fonn leis' ('who wishes') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Who shall have held the office of President' is expressed as 'agus a bhí tráth ina Uachtarán' ('and who was once [a] President') in the Irish text, the latter text alone being preceded by a comma, with 'the office of Taoiseach', 'the office of Chief Justice' and 'the office of President of the Executive Council' being expressed simply as 'ina Thaoiseach' ('[a] Taoiseach'), 'ina Phríomh-Bhreitheamh' ('[a] Chief Justice') and 'ina Uachtarán ar Ard-Chomhairle Shaorstát Éireann' ('[a] President of the Supreme/High Council of the Irish Free State').
- 4 'Such other persons' is expressed as 'Aon daoine eile' ('any other persons/people') in the Irish text.
- 5 'The Council of State shall consist of the following members' is expressed as 'Is iad na daoine seo a leanas a bheas ina gcomhaltaí den Chomhairle Stáit' ('The following people will be members of the Council of State') in the Irish text.

Commentary

de bua oifige 'De bhua' is translated as 'by virtue of' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'de bhua tuillteanais' being translated as 'on the merits'. Ó Dónaill also translates 'de bhua (ruda)' as 'by virtue of (something)', giving 'virtue, merit' as one of the secondary senses of 'bua'. Dinneen translates 'buaidh' as 'victory; conquest; success; virtue, excellence, an attribute'. DIL cites examples of 'búaid' in the sense of (a) 'victory, triumph' and (b) 'special quality or attribute, gift, virtue ...' from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles (where we find 'búaid precepte' ['the gift of teaching'], for example) onwards.

'Ex officio' is generally simply italicised in the Irish version of the Acts. 'To enable ex officio members of the Council to be appointed' is translated as 'cumas a thabhairt comhaltaí ex officio den Chomhairle a cheapadh' in the Preamble to the Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland (Charter Amendment) Act, 1966. 'The Advisory Council shall consist of the Keeper of Irish Antiquities in the National Museum and an officer of the Commissioners nominated for the purpose from time to time by the Minister as ex-officio members' is translated as 'Isiad a bheidh ar an gComhairle Chomhairleach ná Cimeádaí Sean-seod Éireann sa Mhúsaeum Náisiúnta agus oifigeach do sna Coimisinéirí ainmneoidh an tAire chuige sin o am go ham, mar bhail ex-officio' in s21(2) of the National Monuments Act, 1930. In s7 of the 'Longford County Scheme' in the First Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'with Chairman and Vice-Chairman as ex-officio Members of Committee' is translated as 'maraon leis an gCathaoirleach agus an Leas-chathaoirleach a bheidh ina mBaill ex officio den Choiste'.

an Príomh-Bhreitheamh See the commentary on Article 14.2.1°. 'Príomh-Bhreitheamh' is translated as 'the Chief Justice' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'príomh-bhreitheamh' being translated as 'chief justice' in Ó Dónaill. This compound of ‘príomh-’ (translated as ‘first, prime, chief, principal, great’ in Dinneen) and ‘breitheamh’ (translated as ‘a judge, a brehon; an arbiter; a judge of assize; a lawgiver’) does not appear to be given as a headword in Dinneen. Old Irish ‘brithem’ is a noun of agency, literally ‘maker of judgements’, the suffix ‘-em’ being added to ‘breth’ (‘judgement’) – like ‘flaithem’ (‘a ruler’) from ‘flaith’ (‘lordship’) – see Rudolf Thurneysen, op. cit., p. 172. According to D.A. Binchy, in his ‘Legal Glossary’ to the early Irish law-tract Críth Gablach (p. 79), the ‘brithem’ resembles the Roman ‘iuris consultus’ rather than the modern judge. Professor Binchy writes:

He is a man ‘learned in the law’ (which he has studied in one of the law schools) who, while as a rule holding no official authority, functions as arbitrator in cases which the parties agree to submit to him. On the other hand in every túath (‘territory’, ‘petty kingdom’) the king appoints a special brithem to deal with cases of what we now call public law.

‘Brithem’ glosses Latin ‘iudex’ and ‘arbiter’ in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. In his Guide to Early Irish Law (p. 53), Fergus Kelly quotes the following explanatory aside on Irish law found in Conell Mageoghagan’s 1627 translation of the Annals of Clonmacnois:

The brehons of Ireland were divided into several tribes and families, as the McKiegans, O’Deorans, O’Brisleams, & McTholies, every contry had his peculiar brehan dwelling within itself, that had power to decide the cases of that contry & to maintaine their controversies against their neibor-contries; by which they held their lands of the lord of the contry where they dwelt; this was before the lawes of England were of full force in this contry or land, and before the kingdome was divided into shires.

Finally, note that the term expressing ‘chief judge’ in the earlier language was ‘ollam br(e)ithemen’ – in the Annals of the Four Masters, s.a. 1378, for example, Tadhg mac Aedhagáin is described as ‘ollam breitheman Íochtair Connacht’ (‘chief judge of Lower Connacht’) – see Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 254, n.63.

ar cumas dó ‘Gan bheith i gcumas’ expresses ‘is unable’ in Article 14.2.2°. ‘Gan ar gcumas dó’ is translated as ‘not in his power’ in Dinneen, who translates ‘níl sé ar mo chumas’ as ‘I am not able to do it, I have it not in my power or at my disposal’, stating that ‘ar chumas (or gcumas) dom, im’ chumas’ has the very same meaning. Note that Dinneen cites ‘dá mbeith ar chumas do chách, if it suited the general convenience’ from Keating’s seventeenth-century History of Ireland. Ó Dónaill cites ‘dá mbeadh sé ar, i, mo chumas, if it were in my power’ and ‘rud a chur ar chumas duine, ar a chumas do dhuine, i gcumas do dhuine, to enable someone to do something’. The usual sense of the earlier ‘commus’, according to DIL, is ‘power, ability, capacity’, ‘comus’ glossing Latin ‘potentia’ in the ninth-century Codex Latinus Monacensis. DIL cites ‘a-tá ar comus don choimhdhigh (gan m’éra)’ (‘it is in the Lord’s power ...’) from the Bardic Syntactical Tracts. ‘Commus’ is in the verbal noun of ‘con-midethar’, translated as (a) ‘is competent, able; rules, governs, controls’ and (b) ‘adjudges, estimates, appoints’ in DIL. See further the commentary on Articles 14.2.2° and 34.5.1°.

‘And there are no trustees of such share able and willing to act’ is translated as ‘agus nach mbeidh aon iontaobhaithe i leith na scaire sin ábalta agus toilteanach gníomhú’ in s57(1) of the Succession Act, 1965. In s3(2) of the Institution of Civil Engineers of Ireland (Charter Amendment) Act, 1960, ‘Provided always that if at any time the number of Past-Presidents able and willing to act as members of the Council shall be less than four’ is translated as ‘Ar choinníoll i gcónaí, más lú ná ceathrar aon tráth an lion Iar-Uachtarán a bheidh ábalta agus toilteanach ar ghníomhú mar chomhaltaí den Chomhairle’. In s1 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 12) Act, 1930, ‘and a Chairman who shall be the senior judge of the Supreme Court able and willing to act’ is translated as ‘agus mar Chathaoirleach ortha an Breitheamh is aoirde céim den Chúirt Uachtarach a bheidh ábalta agus toilteanach ar fheidhmiú’, this English text (with ‘with’ replacing ‘and’ in the opening) being translated as ‘agus mar Cheann Comhairle ortha an breitheamh is aoirde céim den Chúirt Uachtarach a bheidh ábalta agus toilteanach ar fheidhmiú’ in Article 35 of the 1922 Constitution.

ar fonn leis ‘Más fonn leat é’ is translated as ‘if you wish’ in Ó Dónaill, where ‘fonn a bheith ort rud a dhéanamh’ is translated as ‘to be eager to do something’, ‘fonn’ being translated as ‘desire, wish, inclination, urge’ – among Ó Dónaill’s citations with ‘ar’, rather than ‘le’, and substantive rather than copula, are the following (note the varying translations): ‘tá fonn cainte orthu, they are in humour for talking’, ‘bhí fonn troda air, he was looking for a fight’, ‘má tá fonn siúil ort, if you are in a mood for walking’ and ‘bhí fonn caointe uirthi, she wanted to cry’. Dinneen translates ‘fonn’ as ‘longing desire, fancy, liking, pleasure, delight’, citing examples followed by the preposition ‘le’. According to DIL, ‘fonn’, translated as ‘desire, fondness, pleasure (in something)’, seems confined to comparatively late Middle Irish and Modern Irish texts. ‘Fonn’ in the sense of ‘melody, song’ is perhaps a later development of ‘fonn’, ‘desire’. Certain scholars have claimed ‘fonn’ to be the origin of English ‘fun’ – see DIL s.v. ‘fonn’.

‘Wilful’ is translated as ‘toiliúil’ in Téarmaí Dlí, ‘wilfully’ being translated as ‘go toiliúil’. ‘A list of persons willing to act as proxy’ is translated as ‘liosta de na daoine a thoiligh gníomhú mar sheachvótálaí’ in s54(6) of the Building Societies Act, 1976. ‘The Minister shall ... nominate that number ... of persons willing to act as ordinary members’ is translated as ‘ainmneoidh an tAire ... an méid sin ... de dhaoine bheidh toilteanach chun gníomhú mar ghnáth-bhaill’ in s80(m) of the Pigs and Bacon Act, 1936. ‘The expression “market value” means the price which the property might be expected to fetch if sold by a willing seller at the price prevailing in a free market for such property at the time of the award’ is translated as ‘cialluíonn an focal “marga-luach” an praghas ba dhó le duine a gheofí ar an maoin dá mba dhíoltóir toilteanach do dhíolfadh í agus gur ar an bpraghas do bheadh ag imeacht i gcóir maoine den tsórt san aimsir an mhola do dhéanamh do dhíolfadh sé í’ in s10(13) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923.

tráth ‘Na cairde a bhí againn tráth’, the friends we once had’ and ‘ba mhór an ceannaire é tráth, he was a great leader once upon a time’ are cited by Ó Dónaill as examples of 'tráth' as an adverb, Dinneen also translating 'tráth', as an adverb, as 'once'. DIL translates 'tráth' as 1(a) 'period of time; hour, point of time', (b) 'day' and (d) 'canonical hour', citing 'celebrad tratha' ('celebration of the canonical hour'), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses in the Pauline Epistles, as an example of the latter sense.

Looking at 'who shall have' in the Acts, 'each party shall appoint its Assessor (who shall have expressed his willingness to act as such)' is translated as 'ceapfaidh gach páirtí a Mheasúnóir (a bheas tar éis a chur in iúl é a bheith toilteanach gníomhú amhlaidh)' in s3 of the Second Schedule to the Agreement in the Erne Drainage and Development Act, 1950. 'Shall be paid by the vendor or other person who shall have received the dividends on the land bonds' is translated as 'íocfaidh an díoltóir é no an duine eile bheidh tar éis na ndíbhinní d'fháil ar na bannaí talmhan' in s10(2)(d)(iii) of the Land Act, 1939. 'And in lieu thereof it is hereby enacted that no person who shall have taken out a licence for a rod for a calendar year in any district shall be entitled to angle with a rod for salmon in any other district' is translated as 'agus achtuítear ina ionad leis seo ná beidh ag éinne, 'na mbeidh ceadúnas slaithe tógtha amach aige i gcóir bliana caileandair in aon cheanntar, teideal chun bradáin d'iascach le slait in aon cheanntar eile' in s12(4) of the Fisheries Act, 1925. See further the commentary on Article 16.2.3° where 'aon tráth' expresses 'at any time'.

Ard-Chomhairle 'Ardchomhairle' is translated as 'supreme council' in Ó Dónaill, 'ard-chomhairle' being translated as 'a supreme council or parliament' in Dinneen, as well as 'an excellent advice'. Besides its use in literal sense, 'ard' in compounds often indicates pre-eminence in rank or excellency over others of the same designation, according to DIL, where 'ardlathi' (i.e. 'ard' + 'flaith', 'chief princes') is cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. Note that 'the Supreme Court' is styled 'an Chúirt Uachtarach' in Irish – see the commentary on Article 13.4, where 'ardcheannas' expresses 'supreme command'.

Article 51 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

There shall be a Council to aid and advise in the government of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) to be styled the Executive Council. Beidh Comhairle ann dá ngoirfean ar Ard-Chomhairle chun cabhrúithe agus comhairlithe i rialú Shaorstáit Éireann.

Section 3(1) of the Constitution (Consequential Provisions) Act, 1937, reads as follows:

From and after the coming into operation of the Constitution, the Department of the President of the Executive Council shall be styled and known as the Department of the Taoiseach and the Taoiseach shall be the Minister who is head of that Department. Ó dháta an Bhunreacht do theacht i ngníomh agus dá éis sin, isé bheidh mar ainm agus mar theideal ar Roinn Uachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle ná Roinn an Taoisigh agus isé an Taoiseach an tAire is ceann ar an Roinn sin.

The functions, powers and duties conferred or imposed on the Government under sections 7 ... and 15 of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1931, are hereby transferred to the Minister and, accordingly, references in those sections to the Executive Council ... shall be construed as references to the Minister' is translated as 'Aistrítear leis seo chun an Aire na feidhmeanna, na cumhachtaí agus na dualgais a bhronntar nó a fhorchuirtear ar an Rialtas faoi ailt 7 ... agus 15 den Acht Marcanna Earraí Ceannaíochta, 1931, agus, dá réir sin, déanfar tagairtí sna hailt sin don Ard-Chomhairle ... a fhorléiriú mar thagairtí don Aire' in s7 of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1970.

'The President of the Executive Council of the Irish Congress of Trade Unions' is styled 'Uachtarán Chomhairle Feidhmiúcháin Chomhar Ceardchumann na hÉireann' in s5(2)(f) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1983. Note that 'The Executive Authority of the Irish Free State' is translated as 'Údarás Feidhmiúcháin Shaorstáit Éireann' in Article 51 of the 1922 Constitution. Finally, 'the National Executive' is styled 'an Coiste Náisiúnta' in s13(1) of the Slaughtered Animals (Compensation) Act, 1928.

aon daoine eile 'The exchange shall ... notify the Bank and such other persons (if any) as the Bank indicates are to be notified of the measures being taken' is translated as 'déanfaidh an malartán ... scéala a chur chuig an mBanc agus chuig cibé daoine eile (más ann) a déarfáidh an Banc leis scéala a chur chucu' in s106(3)(b) of the Central Bank Act, 1989. 'And to such other persons (if any) as may be prescribed' is translated as 'agus chun cibé daoine eile (más ann) a fhorordófar' in s121(3) of the Registration of Title Act, 1964. In s12 of the First Schedule to the Seanad Electoral Act, 1928, 'and such other persons (if any) as the Seanad returning officer may permit to be present' is translated as 'agus pé daoine eile (más ann dóibh) dá gceadóidh ceann comhrimh an tSeanaid bheith i láthair amhlaidh'. Finally, 'and other expenses (if any) necessary to maintain the dwelling-house in its actual state' is translated as 'agus costaisí eile (dá mb'ann dóibh) ba ghá chun an tigh do chimeád ar an staid ina bhfuighfí é' in s3(6) of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923.

Is iad ... Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, remarks that 'Beidh na comhaltaí seo a leanas ar an gComhairle Stáit' does not express that that is their full complement. He recommends either of the following: 'is iad seo a leanas na comhaltaí a bheidh ar an gComhairle Stáit' or 'Beidh mar bhallraíocht ar an gComhairle Stáit na comhaltaí seo a leanas'.

a bheas The special form of the relative, future tense, of the substantive verb (see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s') – this would normally be replaced by 'a bheidh' in the Acts today.

má cheaptar aon duine See the commentary on Articles 15.15 and 29.4.2°.

ina gcomhaltaí See the commentary on Article 28.6.1°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Is iad na daoine seo a leanas a bheidh ina gcomhaltaí den Chomhairle Stáit:

- i De bhua oifige: an Taoiseach, an Tánaiste, an Príomh-Bhreitheamh, Uachtarán na hArd-Chúirte, Cathaoirleach Dháil Éireann<sup>1</sup>, Cathaoirleach Sheanad Éireann, agus an tArd-Aighne.
- ii Gach duine ar cumas dó nó di agus ar fonn leis nó léi gníomhú mar chomhalta den Chomhairle Stáit, agus a bhí tráth i seilbh oifige mar Uachtarán nó mar Thaoiseach nó mar Phríomh-Bhreitheamh, nó mar Uachtarán ar Ard-Chomhairle Shaorstát Éireann.
- iii Aon daoine eile a cheapfar ag an Uachtarán faoin Airteagal seo, má cheapfar aon duine, chun bheith ina gcomhaltaí den Chomhairle Stáit.

Variant

- 1 'an Ceann Comhairle' – following the gender-proofed English text.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Is iad seo a leanas na comhaltaí a bheidh ar an gComhairle Stáit:<sup>1</sup>

- i Mar chomhaltaí ex-officio: an Taoiseach, an Tánaiste, an Príomh-Bhreitheamh, Uachtarán na hArd-Chúirte, Cathaoirleach Dháil Éireann<sup>2</sup>, Cathaoirleach Sheanad Éireann, agus an tArd-Aighne.
- ii Gach duine a bheidh ábalta<sup>3</sup> agus toilteanach gníomhú mar chomhalta den Chomhairle Stáit agus ar duine é nó í<sup>4</sup> a bhí i seilbh oifige an Uachtaráin nó oifige an Taoisigh, nó oifige an Phríomh-Bhreithimh, nó oifige Uachtarán Ard-Chomhairle Shaorstát Éireann.
- iii Cibé daoine eile a cheapfaidh an tUachtarán faoin Airteagal seo, má cheapann, chun bheith ina gcomhaltaí den Chomhairle Stáit.

Variants

- 1 'Beidh na comhaltaí seo a leanas ar an gComhairle Stáit.', 'Beidh an Chomhairle Stáit comhdhéanta de na comhaltaí seo a leanas.'
- 2 'an Ceann Comhairle'
- 3 'cumasach'
- 4 'is duine'

ARTICLE 31.3 AIRTEAGAL 31.3

TÉACS GAELGE

Tig leis an Uachtarán uair ar bith agus ó am go ham cibé daoine eile is oiriúnach leis, as a chomhairle féin, a cheapadh le barántas faoina láimh is faoina Shéala chun bheith ina gcomhaltaí den Chomhairle Stáit, ach ní dleathach thar mórshéisear a cheapfar ar an gcuma sin a bheith ina gcomhaltaí den Chomhairle Stáit san am chéanna.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The President may at any time and from time to time appoint whatever other people he deems suitable, / are deemed suitable by him, from his own counsel, by warrant under his hand and under his Seal to be members of the Council of State, but it is not lawful that there be more than seven people who are appointed in that way as members of the Council of State at the same time.

ENGLISH TEXT

The President may at any time and from time to time by warrant under his hand and Seal appoint such other persons as, in his absolute discretion, he may think fit, to be members of the Council of State, but not more than seven persons so appointed shall be members of the Council of State at the same time.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Not more than seven person ... shall be' is expressed as 'ní dleathach thar mórshéisear ... a bheith' ('it is not lawful that more than seven members be') in the Irish text.
- 2 'As ... he may think fit' is expressed in the Irish text as 'is oiriúnach leis', '(whom) he deems suitable'.
- 3 'In his absolute discretion' is expressed as 'as a chomhairle féin' ('from his own counsel') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 4 'So appointed' is expressed as 'a cheapfar ar an gcuma sin' ('that are appointed in that way') in the Irish text.

Commentary

is oiriúnach leis The preposition 'le' is sometimes used to express 'state of mind, opinion', Ó Dónaill citing 'b'fhada leo an lá, they thought the day was long' and 'ní maith liom é, I don't like it', for example. Dinneen cites 'is fada liom an oidhche, I find the night long' and 'is cáis liom é, I think it is sad' as examples of this use of 'le' with adjectives and nouns denoting 'a judgement or mental attitude'. DIL cites 'ished aperficere lesson' ('[to do] this he deems perficere') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles and 'is peccad diabul lesom' ('he considers it a double sin'), along with 'robu maith leu' ('they would have liked'), from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, as examples of 'la' with copula in the sense of 'according to, in the opinion of'. DIL states that this construction is very common at all periods to indicate possession of opinion, notion, feeling, desire, impulse, etc.

Both Ó Dónaill and Dinneen cite 'oiriúnach (oireamhnach) le baint, ready for cutting', Ó Dónaill also citing 'oiriúnach le caitheamh, ready to wear' and Dinneen translating 'oireamhnach le' as 'ready to or for', with verbal noun. Ó Dónaill translates 'oiriúnach' principally as 'suitable, fitting', citing 'má tá sé oiriúnach duit, if it suits you', Dinneen translating 'oireamhnach do' as 'suitable to, fitting', neither sources citing 'oiriúnach' in the 'is ... le' construction. The seventeenth-century works of Keating are the principal source of DIL's citations of 'oireamhnach', translated as 'agreeing (with), adapted (to), suitable, convenient', this adjective being based on 'oiremain', verbal noun of the intransitive verb 'oirid', 'is suited (to), corresponds (to), is in keeping with', no examples of which are cited from the earlier sources.

'The Minister may by order assign to the Authority such of his functions as he may think fit in relation to Council Directive No. 72/159/EEC' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire le hordú ... cibé feidhmeanna dá chuid is oiriúnach leis i ndáil le Treoir Uimh. 72/159/CEE ... a shannadh don Údarás' in s20 of the National Agricultural Advisory, Education and Research Authority Act, 1977. 'Subject to such conditions as he may think fit' is translated as 'faoi réir cibé coinníollacha is cuí leis' in s46(2) of the Building Societies Act, 1976, 'cuí' currently translating 'fit' in the modern Acts. 'Or in such other manner as he may think fit' is translated as 'no i pé slí eile is oiriúnach leis' in s57(b) of the Conditions of Employment Act, 1936. Finally, in s41(3) of the Land Act, 1923, 'and appoint such other person or persons as he may think fit in the place of the person so removed' is translated as 'agus pé duine no daoine is oiriúnach leis do cheapa in áit an duine a cuireadh chun siúil mar sin' in s41(3) of the Land Act, 1923.

san am chéanna This would be replaced by 'san am céanna' following the official standard, 'am' being a masculine noun – see the commentary on Article 45. 'Not more than three committees shall stand established under this section at the same time' is translated as 'Ní bheidh thar trí choiste arna mbunú faoin bhfo-alt seo i gcomhthráth' in s10(1)(c) of the Health Authorities Act, 1960, 'not more than sixty-four individuals shall be entitled to be registered at the same time as owners of any one ship' being translated as 'ní bheidh teideal ag lion is mó ná seasca is ceithre pearsa chun a gcláruithe i gcomhthráth mar únaerí aonloing áirithe' in s24(b) of the Mercantile Marine Act, 1955. In s109(3) of the Central Bank Act, 1989, 'a person shall not, at the same time be the holder of a licence ... and a person to whom a subsisting authorisation ... relates' is translated as 'ní cead do dhuine bheith, an tráth céanna, ina shealbhóir ceadúnais ... agus ina dhuine lena mbaineann údarú marthanach'. In Article 16 of the 1922 Constitution, 'No person may be at the same time a member both of Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann' is translated as 'Ní fhéadfaidh éinne bheith 'na bhall de Dháil Éireann agus de Sheanad Éireann in aonacht'.

barántas This headword is translated as 'warrant' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, who also gives 'warranty, authority' as a secondary sense, citing 'gan bharántas, unwarranted'. Dinneen translates 'barántas' as 'a warrant; authority; protection; leadership; a mock warrant generally written in poetry' – poems in this genre that flourished mainly in Munster in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries have been collected and edited by Pádraig Ó Fiannachta in An Barántas (1978). 'Barántas', translated as 'authority, command' in DIL, is based on 'baránta', this being either a French or English loanword according to DIL, where 'baránta' is translated as 'warrant, authority, guarantee', with examples cited from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac (composed in the second half of the eleventh century) onwards.

In s22 of the Whale Fisheries Act, 1937, 'The Minister may by warrant under his seal of office appoint such and so many persons as he thinks fit as his agents' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire, le barántas fé n-a shéala oifige, pé daoine agus pé méid daoine is oiriúnach leis do cheapadh o am go ham mar ghníomhairí dhó'. In s4(1) of the District Justices (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'The Minister may from time to time by warrant under his hand appoint and remove such and so many fit and proper persons as he shall think expedient in each County to be called "Peace Commissioners"' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire ó am go ham le barántas fé na láimh pé daoine cearta oiriúnacha agus pé méid diobh is oiriúnach leis, daoine ar a nglaofar "Coimisinéirí Síochána", do cheapa i ngach Contae'.

faoina láimh The dative singular of 'láimh' after the preposition 'faoi'; the words 'bos, bróg, cluas, cos, lámh' are mentioned in particular in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil as a group of words of the second declension which always have the special form of the dative singular, the nominative singular generally replacing the special slenderised dative form in this declension. See the commentary on Article 12.10.3<sup>o</sup> regarding 'faoi lámh' expressing 'signed by'.

thar mórshéar 'Mórshéar' means literally 'a big six' – see the commentary on Article 28.1. Note that 'thar' usually lenites in qualified or particularised references – see Ó Dónaill and note 'ní raibh thar chúigear acu ann' in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, chapter entitled 'Séimhiú agus Urú', s4(e).

as a chomhairle féin See the commentary on Article 13.2.2<sup>o</sup>; Dinneen translates 'as mo chomhairle féin' as 'on my own initiative, doing as I like'.

ní dleathach See the commentary on Articles 10.1, 14.3, 15.6.2<sup>o</sup>, 17.2 and 25.5.1<sup>o</sup>; 'dleathach' is translated as 'lawful' in Téarmaí Dlí.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Tig leis an Uachtarán uair ar bith agus ó am go ham cibé daoine eile is oiriúnach leis nó léi, as a chomhairle nó as a chomhairle féin, a cheapadh le barántas faoina láimh is faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala chun bheith ina gcomhaltá den Chomhairle Stáit, ach ní dleathach thar mhórshéar a cheaptar ar an gcuma sin a bheith ina gcomhaltá den Chomhairle Stáit san am céanna.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Féadfaidh an tUachtarán tráth ar bith agus ó am go ham le barántas faoina láimh agus faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala cibé daoine eile is cuí leis nó léi, dá rogha féin amháin<sup>1</sup>, a cheapadh ina gcomhaltá den Chomhairle Stáit, ach ní bheidh thar sheachtar a cheapfar<sup>2</sup> amhlaidh ina gcomhaltá den Chomhairle Stáit in éineacht<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'dá rogha iomlán féin'
- 2 'arna gcheapadh'
- 3 'in aon am'

ARTICLE 31.4 AIRTEAGAL 31.4

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní foláir do gach comhalta den Chomhairle Stáit, an chéad uair a bheidh sé ar thionól den Chomhairle sin ina chomhalta di, an dearbhú seo a leanas a dhéanamh agus a lámh a chur leis:

"I láthair Dia na nUilechumhacht, táimse, , á ghealladh agus á dhearbú go sollúnta agus go fírinneach mo dhualgais i mo chomhalta den Chomhairle Stáit a chomhlionadh go dílis coinsiasach."

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Each member of the Council of State, the first time he will be at an assembly of that Council as a member of it, must make the following declaration and put his hand to it:

“In the presence of God the Almighty, I , am promising and declaring solemnly and truthfully to fulfil my duties as a member of the Council of State faithfully (and) conscientiously.”

ENGLISH TEXT

Every member of the Council of State shall at the first meeting thereof which he attends as a member take and subscribe a declaration in the following form:

“In the presence of Almighty God I, , do solemnly and sincerely promise and declare that I will faithfully and conscientiously fulfil my duties as a member of the Council of State.”

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘Take and subscribe a declaration in the following form’ is expressed as ‘an dearbhú seo a leanas a dhéanamh agus a lámh a chur leis’ (‘make the following declaration and put his hand to it’) in the Irish text, this same Irish text expressing ‘taking and subscribing ... the following declaration’ in Article 12.8.
- 2 ‘Sincerely’ is expressed in the Irish text by ‘firinneach’, a term generally translating ‘truthfully’, as we have seen in the commentary on Article 12.8.
- 3 ‘Fulfil’ is expressed by the term ‘comhlíon’, which generally expresses ‘perform’ in the Constitution, ‘fulfil’ being the literal meaning, while ‘perform’ is one of the senses given in Téarmaí Díl.
- 4 ‘At the first meeting thereof which he attends as a member’ is expressed as ‘an chéad uair a bheidh sé ar thionól den Chomhairle sin ina chomhalta di’ (‘the first time he will be at an assembly of that Council as a member of it’) in the Irish text.
- 5 ‘That I will ... fulfil’ is expressed as ‘a chomhlíonadh’, ‘to fulfil’, in the Irish text.
- 6 ‘Shall’ is expressed as ‘Ní foláir’ (‘must’) as we have seen in many earlier Articles.

Commentary

ina chomhalta ... i mo chomhalta Here we have the preposition ‘i’ with the possessive pronoun to express ‘status, function’, Ó Dónaill citing ‘chuaigh sé ina thoscaire ann, he went there as a delegate’, Dinneen citing ‘imtheochad im’ chuaichín ar fuaid an tsaoghail, I will go through the world a disappointed girl’ and ‘i n-a n-aon-mhnáibh, as women unescorted’ as examples of ‘i’ with possessive pronoun to express ‘state or condition’. Among the examples DIL gives of nouns in apposition preceded by ‘i’ plus possessive pronoun is ‘úair is áes comhchotaig dúinni ‘nar nUltaib’ (‘for they are allies of us Ulstermen’), this being said by Fergus to Medb early on in the version of the Táin Bó Cúailgne contained in the manuscript Leabhar na hÚidhre (written in Clonmacnois c. 1100). This construction is a development of the older use of the dative without preposition – DIL cites ‘ro bámarni .xu. feraib 7 ar cúic súilí déc desa do chaechad dó’ (‘we fifteen men were being blinded by him in our fifteen right eyes’) from the version of the tale Togail Bruidne Da Derga in the Yellow Book of Lecan, this version having been compiled in the eleventh century, according to Rudolf Thurneysen.

‘A person who is not of full age ... may be admitted as a member of a society’ is translated as ‘Féadfar duine nach bhfuil aois iomlán aige ... a ghlacadh mar chomhalta de chumann’ in s16(5) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, with ‘shall not be regarded as a member of the society’ being translated as ‘ní mheasfar gur comhalta den chumann’ in s16(6)(e), and ‘any dispute between a building society and a member of the society in his capacity as a member’ being translated as ‘(le) haon diospóid idir cumann foirgníochta agus comhalta den chumann ina cháil mar chomhalta’ in s91(1)(a). ‘A person shall not ... disclose any information obtained by him while performing duties as a member, officer or servant of ... the Board’ is translated as ‘Ní nochtfaidh aon duine ... aon eolas a fuair sé agus é ag comhlíonadh dualgas mar chomhalta den Bhord nó mar oifigeach nó seirbhíseach ... don Bhord’ in s20(1) of the Gas Act, 1976. ‘To hold office on terms and conditions ... not least favourable than those on which he held office as a member of the panel aforesaid’ is translated as ‘i seilbh oifige ar théarmaí agus coinníollacha ... nach neamhfhabharaí ná iad sin ar ar shealbhaigh sé oifig mar chomhalta den phainéal réamhraite’ in s2(4) of the Property Values (Arbitrations and Appeals) Act, 1960. Finally, ‘in the course of his duty as a member of the forces’ is translated as ‘agus é i mbun a dhualgais mar bhall de sna fórsaí’ in s15(1)(a) of the Army Pensions Act, 1927.

Note finally that no comma follows ‘ina chomhalta di’ in the original text.

I láthair Dia na nUilechumhacht See the commentary on Article 12.8. Note that no comma follows this phrase in the original text.

a chomhlíonadh See the commentary on Articles 12.1 and 13.9.

go dílis coinsiasach See the commentary on Article 12.8.

Ní foláir do See the commentary on Article 11.

dearbhu See the commentary on Article 12.8.

a lámh a chur leis See the commentary on Article 12.8.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Ní foláir do gach comhalta den Chomhairle Stáit, an chéad uair a bheidh sé nó sí ar thionól den Chomhairle sin ina chomhalta nó ina comhalta di, an dearbhú seo a leanas a dhéanamh agus a lámh a chur leis:

“I láthair Dhia na hUilechumhachta, táimse, , á ghealladh agus á dhearbhu go sollúnta agus go firinneach mo dhualgais i mo chomhalta den Chomhairle Stáit a chomhlíonadh go dílis coinsiasach.”

Direct gender-proofed translation

Déanfaidh gach comhalta den Chomhairle Stáit dearbhú san fhoirm seo a leanas a thabhairt<sup>1</sup> agus a shíniú ag an gcéad chruinniú den Chomhairle Stáit a bhfreastalóidh sé nó sí mar chomhalta air<sup>2</sup>:

“I láthair Dhia na hUilechumhachta, táimse, , á ghealladh agus á dhearbhu go sollúnta firéanta go gcomhlíonfaidh mé mo chuid dualgas<sup>3</sup> mar chomhalta den Chomhairle Stáit go dílis coinsiasach.”

Variants

- 1 'a ghlacadh'
- 2 'ar a bhfreastalóidh sé nó sí mar chomhalta'
- 3 'mo dhualgais'

ARTICLE 31.5 AIRTEAGAL 31.5

TÉACS GAELIGE

Gach comhalta den Chomhairle Stáit a cheapfar ag an Uachtarán beidh sé i seilbh oifige nó go dté comharba an Uachtaráin a cheap é i gcúram a oifige, is é sin mura dtarlaí roimhe sin go n-éagfaidh an comhalta sin, nó go n-éireoidh as oifig, nó go ngeobhaidh míthreoir bhuan é, nó go gcuirfear as oifig é.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every member of the Council of State who will be appointed by the President (he) will hold office until the successor of the President who appointed him takes up his office, that is unless it happens before that that that member dies, or gives up office, or that permanent mental incapacity befalls him, or that he is put out of office.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every member of the Council of State appointed by the President, unless he previously dies, resigns, becomes permanently incapacitated, or is removed from office, shall hold office until the successor of the President by whom he was appointed shall have entered upon his office.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Becomes permanently incapacitated' is expressed as '(go) ngeobhaidh míthreoir bhuan é' ('permanent mental incapacity befalls him'); as we have already stated in regard to some earlier Articles, 'míthreoir' today does not appear to have the sense of 'physical incapacity', its primary sense in Dinneen; unlike the phrase accompanying two earlier citations of 'míthreoir', the official standard future tense of 'gabh', 'gabhfaidh', is not found here.
- 2 'Unless he previously dies' is expressed as 'mura dtarlaí roimhe sin go n-éagfaidh an comhalta sin' ('that is unless it happens before that that that member dies') in the Irish text, this whole clause being taken to the end of the section in the Irish text.
- 3 'Shall have entered upon his office' is expressed as '(go) dté ... i gcúram a oifige' ('takes up the responsibility of his office') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Resigns' is expressed by 'éirigh as oifig' ('resigns from / gives up office') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Commentary

go ngeobhaidh míthreoir ... é See the commentary on Article 12.3.1° regarding 'míthreoir'. The verb 'gabh' is found in association with 'míthreoir' on four occasions in the Constitution. 'Or becomes permanently incapacitated' is expressed as 'nó go ngabhfaidh míthreoir bhuan é' in Article 12.3.1° and as 'nó má ghabhann míthreoir bhuan é' in Article 28.6.2°. In Article 12.3.3°, 'but in the event of ... permanent incapacity established as aforesaid' is expressed as '(nó) má tharlaíonn dó ... míthreoir bhuan arna suíomh mar a dúradh dá ghabháil' and 'in the event of ... permanent incapacity' is expressed as '(má tharlaíonn) ... go ngabhfaidh míthreoir bhuan é' in Article 12.7°. We find 'míthreoir' without 'gabh' in Articles 33.5.1° and 35.4.1°, where 'except for stated misbehaviour or incapacity' is expressed as 'ach amháin de dheasca mí-iompair nó míthreora(ch) a luafar'. In Article 14.1, '(In the event of ...) his temporary incapacity, or his permanent incapacity' is expressed as 'má bhíonn ar míthreoir go sealadach, nó má bhíonn ar míthreoir go buan' and in Article 28.12, 'during his temporary absence or incapacity' is expressed as 'le linn an comhalta sin a bheith tamall as láthair nó ar míthreoir'. 'Who is not placed under disability or incapacity' is expressed as 'nach gcuirtear faoi mhíchumas nó faoi mhíthreoir' in Article 16.1.1° and 'placing any citizen under disability or incapacity' is expressed as 'a chuirfeadh saoránach ar bith ... faoi mhíchumas nó faoi mhíthreoir' in Article 16.1.3°.

'Geobhaidh' is the earlier form of the third person singular, future tense, of 'gabh', the later and standard Irish form of which is 'gabhfaidh', cited above from Articles 12.3.1° and 12.7, in association with 'míthreoir'. Dinneen cites 'Cá ngeobhfáir leo? Where will they go? what will become of them?' and 'geobhfáir ort, you will be flogged', Ó Dónaill citing 'gabhfáidh drochbhail, droch-chríoch, orthu, they will be left in a bad way, come to a bad end'. The form 'geobhaidh' might today be confused with 'gheobhaidh', the form of the future tense of 'faigh', although this changes to 'go bhfaighidh'.

nó go dté 'Go dté' is the present subjunctive of 'téigh' ('to go'), with the preposition 'go'. According to the official standard (An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, chapter headed 'An Briathar'), the future tense can be used in place of the present subjunctive except when it has an optative function, as in 'go dté tú an céad, may you live to a hundred', cited in Ó Dónaill, or 'go dtéighidh tú slán, safe home, success attend you' in Dinneen. 'Nó go dté ... i gcúram a oifige' would today be replaced by 'nó go rachaidh ... i gcúram a oifige'. See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

i seilbh oifige See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

i gcúram a oifige See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

mura dtarlaí See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Gach comhalta den Chomhairle Stáit a cheapfar ag an Uachtarán beidh sé nó sí i seilbh oifige nó go rachaidh comharba an Uachtaráin a cheap é nó í i gcúram a oifige nó a hoifige, is é sin mura dtarlóidh roimhe sin go n-éagfaidh an comhalta sin, nó go n-éireoidh as oifig, nó go ngabhfaidh míthreoir bhuan é nó í, nó go gcuirfear as oifig é nó í.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Mura n-éagfaidh sé nó sí, mura n-éireoidh sé nó sí as, mura dtiocfaidh sé nó sí chun bheith faoi bhuan-éagumas<sup>1</sup>, nó mura gcuirfeadh as oifig é nó í roimhe sin, beidh gach comhalta den Chomhairle Stáit a cheapfaidh an tUachtarán<sup>2</sup> i seilbh oifige go dtí go rachaidh comharba an Uachtaráin a cheap é nó í<sup>3</sup> i mbun oifige<sup>4,5</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'faoi éagumas buan'
- 2 'arna cheapadh nó arna ceapadh ag an Uachtarán', 'Beidh gach comhalta den Chomhairle Stáit a cheapfaidh an tUachtarán, mura n-éagfaidh sé nó sí, / an comhalta sin, mura n-éireoidh sé nó sí as, mura dtiocfaidh sé nó sí chun bheith faoi bhuan-éagumas, nó mura gcuirfeadh as oifig é nó í roimhe sin'
- 3 'an comhalta sin'
- 4 'a oifige nó a hoifige'
- 5 'Gach comhalta den Chomhairle Stáit a cheapfaidh an tUachtarán, mura n-éagfaidh sé nó sí, mura n-éireoidh sé nó sí as, mura dtiocfaidh sé nó sí chun bheith faoi bhuan-éagumas, nó mura gcuirfeadh as oifig é nó í roimhe sin, beidh sé nó sí i seilbh oifige go dtí go rachaidh comharba an Uachtaráin a cheap é nó í i mbun oifige.'

ARTICLE 31.6 AIRTEAGAL 31.6

TÉACS GAELGE

Aon chomhalta den Chomhairle Stáit dá gceapfaidh an tUachtarán tig leis éirí as oifig trína chur sin in iúl don Uachtarán.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any member of the Council of State of those whom the President will appoint (he) may give up office by informing the President of that.

ENGLISH TEXT

Any member of the Council of State appointed by the President may resign from office by placing his resignation in the hands of the President.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'By placing his resignation in the hands of the President' is expressed as 'trína chur sin in iúl don Uachtarán' ('by informing the President of that') in the Irish text, as we have already seen in Article 28.9.1°.

Commentary

tig leis See the commentary on Article 12.4.4°.

dá gceapfaidh See the commentary on Article 13.3.2° regarding 'dá' and on Articles 6.1 and 13.1.1° regarding 'ceap'.

éirí as oifig See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

trína chur sin in iúl See the commentary on Article 28.9.1°.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Aon chomhalta den Chomhairle Stáit dá gceapfaidh an tUachtarán tig leis nó léi éirí as oifig trína chur sin in iúl don Uachtarán.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Féadfaidh aon chomhalta den Chomhairle Stáit a cheapfaidh an tUachtarán<sup>1</sup> éirí as oifig trí<sup>2</sup> dhearbhu<sup>3</sup> air sin<sup>4</sup> as a chur i lámha an Uachtaráin.

Variants

- 1 'arna cheapadh nó arna ceapadh ag an Uachtarán'
- 2 'ach' (dearbhu)
- 3 'dheimhniú'
- 4 'trína éirí-as nó trína héirí-as'

ARTICLE 31.7 AIRTEAGAL 31.7

TÉACS GAELGE

Tig leis an Uachtarán, ar ábhair is leor leis féin, duine ar bith dár cheap sé don Chomhairle Stáit a chur as oifig le hordú faoina láimh agus faoina Shéala.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The President may, for reasons/grounds which are sufficient to himself, put any person of those whom he appointed to the Council of State out of office by an order under his hand and under his Seal.

ENGLISH TEXT

The President may, for reasons which to him seem sufficient, by an order under his hand and Seal, terminate the appointment of any member of the Council of State appointed by him.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Terminate the appointment of any member of the Council of State appointed by him' is expressed as 'duine ar bith dár cheap sé don Chomhairle Stáit a chur as oifig' ('put any person [of those whom] he appointed to the Council of State out of office') in the Irish text, this same phraseology being found in Articles 13.1.3° and 28.9.4°.
- 2 'For reasons which to him seem sufficient' is expressed as 'ar ábhair is leor leis féin' ('for reasons which are sufficient to himself') in the Irish text, again as we have seen earlier.

Commentary

Tig leis See the commentary on Article 12.4.4°.

ar ábhair is leor leis féin See the commentary on Article 28.9.4°.

faoina láimh See the commentary on Articles 12.10.3° and 31.3.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Tig leis an Uachtarán, ar ábhair is leor leis féin nó léi féin, duine ar bith dár cheap sé nó sí don Chomhairle Stáit a chur as oifig le hordú faoina láimh agus faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Féadfaidh an tUachtarán, ar chúiseanna is leor leis féin nó léi féin, ceapachán aon chomhalta den Chomhairle Stáit a bheidh ceaptha aige nó aici a fhoirceannadh<sup>1</sup> le hordú faoina láimh agus faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala.

Variants

- 1 Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that ‘ceapachán ... ceaptha’ is a bit unsightly (“beagán mishlachtmhar”) and that ‘foirceannadh’ is too different (“ró-éagsúil”) in such a context as this; Professor Ó Murchú therefore recommends the following less direct translation: ‘... aon chomhalta den Chomhairle Stáit a bheidh ceaptha / dá mbeidh ceaptha aige nó aici a chur as oifig’.

ARTICLE 31.8 AIRTEAGAL 31.8

TÉACS GAEILGE

Tig leis an Uachtarán an Chomhairle Stáit a chomóradh cibé áit agus am a shocróidh sé chuige.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The President may convene the Council of State (in) whatever place and time he will arrange for it.

ENGLISH TEXT

Meetings of the Council of State may be convened by the President at such times and places as he shall determine.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘Meetings of the Council of State may be convened by the President’ is expressed as ‘Tig leis an Uachtarán an Chomhairle Stáit a chomóradh’ (‘The President may convene the Council of State’) in the Irish text.
- 2 ‘At such times and places as he shall determine’ is expressed as ‘cibé áit agus am a shocróidh sé chuige’, ‘(in) whatever place and time he will arrange for it’, in the Irish text; the verb ‘socráim’, however, is translated as ‘I settle’ in Téarmaí Díl.

Commentary

a chomóradh ‘Comóradh’ is the verbal noun of ‘comóir’, translated as ‘convene, assemble’ in Ó Dónaill, who cites ‘cruinniú a chomóradh, to convene a gathering’. Dinneen gives ‘convene (an assembly)’ as one of the senses of ‘comóiraim’, citing ‘comóiraim aonach, I convene an assembly’. DIL cites ‘sealg ... do commórad la Find’ (‘a chase [hunt] was held by Finn’) from the opening of the Fenian tale, ‘The Chase of Slieve na mBan and the Death of Finn’, contained in the manuscript Egerton 1782 (written in Carlow in 1419), the earliest of but a few citations in DIL being from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster. ‘Commóraid’ is based on ‘móraid’, the primary sense of which is ‘makes great, magnifies, exalts, glorifies’, this verb also having the sense of ‘assembles, musters, invokes’, DIL citing ‘ro morad aenach Tailtean la Daire’ (i.e. the assembly/fair of Tailtiu was held/celebrated by Daire) from the Book of Ballymote (written around 1400). See further the commentary on Article 12.3.3°.

‘Unless ... he shall have convened a meeting of the Council of State’ is expressed as ‘mura gcomóra sé an Chomhairle Stáit’ in Article 32. See the commentary on Article 13.2.3°, where ‘The President may at any time ... convene a meeting of either or both of the Houses of the Oireachtas’ is expressed as ‘Tig leis an Uachtarán uair ar bith ... ceachtar de Thithe an Oireachtais, nó iad araon, a chomóradh’.

Turning to the Acts, ‘the directors of the society shall ... proceed duly to convene a general meeting of the society for a day not more than 18 days after such service’ is translated as ‘déanfaidh stiúrthóirí an chumainn ... cruinniú ginearálta den chumann a thionól go cúil le haghaidh lá nach mó ná 28 lá i ndiaidh na seirbhéala sin’ in s86(2) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. ‘The President ... of the Council may convene a meeting of the Council on his own initiative’ is translated as ‘Féadfaidh Uachtarán ... na Comhairle cruinniú den Chomhairle a ghairm ar a thionscnamh féin’ in s11 of the Second Schedule to the Medical Practitioners Act, 1978. In s12(4) of the Institution of Civil Engineers of Ireland (Charter Amendment) Act, 1969, ‘the Provisional Council shall convene a further General Meeting to consider objections’ is translated as ‘déanfaidh an Chomhairle Shealadach Cruinniú Ginearálta eile a thoghairm d’fhonn agóidí ... a bhreithniú’. ‘Cruinniú a chomóradh iad féin’ translates ‘may themselves convene a meeting’ in s132(3) of the Companies Act, 1963. Finally, in s30(4) of the Electoral Act, 1923, ‘by the person by whom or on whose behalf the meeting is convened’ is translated as ‘pé duine do dhin, no gur dineadh thar a cheann, an cóthlán do chomóra’. See further the commentary on Articles 13.2.1° and 13.2.3° regarding ‘comóir’ and on Article 16.5 regarding ‘meeting’.

cibé áit agus am ‘The registration authority shall arrange for the provision of application forms at such times and places as are specified in a notice’ is translated as ‘Déanfaidh an t-údarás clárúcháin socrú maidir le foirmeacha iarratais a chur ar fáil ag cibé tráthanna agus i cibé ionaid a bheidh sonraithe i bhfógra’ in s7 of the Electoral (Amendment) (No. 2) Act, 1986. In s162(2) of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act, 1959, ‘Lists of persons holding Part x licences shall be published at such times and places and in such manner and form as the Minister may from time to time direct’ is translated as ‘Déanfar liostaí de na daoine a bhfuil ceadúnais faoi Chuid x acu a fhoilsiú cibé tráthanna agus i cibé áiteanna agus i cibé slí agus foirm a ordóidh an tAire ó am go ham’. Finally, in s7(b) of the First Schedule to Electoral Act, 1923, ‘to attend and furnish such information as may be required at the revision of claims and objections under these rules at such times and places as may be ordered by the registration officer’ is translated as ‘bheith i láthair ag an ath-fhéachaint ar éilithe agus ar agóidí fé sna rialacha so sna háiteanna agus na haimseara san a ordóidh an t-oifigeach clárathachta agus aon eolas is gá do thabhairt uaidh’.

‘Delivery at such time and place as aforesaid’, in s180(4) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, is translated as ‘(aon charráiste no capall den tsórt san roimhráite) do sheachada an uair sin agus san áit sin roimhráite’. Finally, ‘An appeals officer may ... require the person to attend at such time and place as is specified’ is translated as ‘Féadfaidh oifigeach achomhairc ... a cheangal ar an duine teacht i láthair cibé tráth agus i cibé áit a bheidh sonraithe' in s298(8) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú agrees with the author in avoiding prepositions with 'cé', 'cibé', etc., examples of which are given in a variant direct translation below.

a shocróidh See the commentary on Articles 8.3 and 15.2.º regarding 'socraigh' and on Article 1 regarding 'determine', there expressed by 'cinn'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú finds the direct translation below unfinished as a sentence without the addition of 'chucu' – or of either 'dóibh' or 'chucu' in the case of 'socraigh' replacing 'ceap', i.e. '... a shocróidh sé nó sí dóibh/chucu'.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Tig leis an Uachtarán an Chomhairle Stáit a chomóradh cibé áit agus am a shocróidh sé nó sí chuige.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Féadfaidh an tUachtarán cruinnithe den Chomhairle Stáit a chomóradh cibé tráthanna agus cibé ionaid<sup>1</sup> a cheapfaidh<sup>2</sup> sé nó sí<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'ag cibé tráthanna agus i cibé ionaid'
- 2 'a chinnfidh', 'a shocróidh'
- 3 'sé nó sí chucu'

ARTICLE 32 AIRTEAGAL 32

TÉACS GAELGE

Cumhachtaí nó feidhmeanna ar bith a luaitear ina dtaobh sa Bhunreacht seo gur dleathach don Uachtarán iad a oibriú nó a chomhlíonadh tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, ní cead don Uachtarán aon chumhacht ná feidhm díobh a oibriú ná a chomhlíonadh mura gcomóra sé an Chomhairle Stáit i ngach cás roimh ré, agus éisteacht leis na comhaltaí den Chomhairle sin a bheas i láthair.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any powers or functions which it is mentioned concerning them in this Constitution that it is lawful for the President to operate or to fulfil them after taking counsel from the Council of State, the President is not permitted to operate or fulfil any power or function of them unless he convenes the Council of State in every case beforehand, and listens to the members of that Council who will be present.

ENGLISH TEXT

The President shall not exercise or perform any of the powers or functions which are by this Constitution expressed to be exercisable or performable by him after consultation with the Council of State unless, and on every occasion before so doing, he shall have convened a meeting of the Council of State and the members present at such meeting shall have been heard by him.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'To be exercisable or performable by him after consultation with the Council of State' is expressed in the Irish text as 'gur dleathach don Uachtarán iad a oibriú nó a chomhlíonadh tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit' ('that it is lawful for the President to operate or fulfil them after taking counsel with the Council of State').
- 2 'And the members present at such meeting shall have been heard by him' is expressed in the Irish text as 'agus éisteacht leis na comhaltaí den Chomhairle sin a bheas i láthair' ('and listens to the members of that Council who will be present').
- 3 'Unless, and on every occasion before so doing, he shall have convened' is expressed as 'mura gcomóra sé ... i ngach cás roimh ré' ('unless he convenes ... in every case beforehand') in the Irish text.
- 4 'He shall have convened a meeting of the Council of State' is expressed as 'mura gcomóra sé an Chomhairle Stáit' ('unless he convenes the Council of State') in the Irish text, much as we have seen in the foregoing section.
- 5 'Expressed' is expressed as 'luaitear', 'mentioned', in the Irish text, as we have already seen in earlier Articles.
- 6 'Exercise' is expressed by 'oibrigh' ('operate') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 7 'Shall not' is expressed as 'ní cead' ('it is not permitted to') in the Irish text, again as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Commentary

éisteacht Verbal noun of 'éist', which verb with the preposition 'le' is translated as 'listen to' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'éisteacht le duine' as 'to listen, pay attention, to someone; to heed someone' and 'ní éistfeadh siad liom' as 'they would not hear me, let me speak'. Dinneen translates 'éist liom' as 'listen to me'. The earlier form, 'éitsecht', is the verbal noun of 'in-túaisi' (DIL gives one example of 'túaisid', 'is silent' ['tóe' translating 'silence']) – see the commentary on Article 26.2.1º.

'As to the costs of the parties to or persons heard by the court in proceedings relating to an application' is translated as 'i dtaobh costas na bpáirtithe, nó na ndaoine a fhaigheann éisteacht sa chúirt, in imeachtaí' in s7(3)(b) of the Local Government (Water Pollution) (Amendment) Act, 1990. 'An order under subsection (1) shall not be made without the person proposing to be named in the order being given an opportunity of being heard by the District Court' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfar ordú faoi fho-alt (1) gan caoi a thabhairt don duine atá le hainmniú san ordú éisteacht a fháil sa Chúirt Dúiche' in s10(3) of the Local Government (Water Pollution) Act, 1977. Finally, in s10(12) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923, 'the Judge may ... allow any local authority to appear and be heard by solicitor' is translated as 'féadfidh an Breitheamh ... leigint d'aon údarás áitiúil teacht i láthair agus éisteacht d'fháil tré atúrnae'. See further the commentary on Article 26.2.1º.

mura gcomóra sé The present subjunctive, third person singular, of 'comóir' – see the commentary on the foregoing section regarding this verb. 'Mura' is used with the present subjunctive or future indicative to express future condition, according to Ó Dónaill, who cites 'mura mbaine, mbainfidh, taisme dó, unless he meets with an accident' and 'mura n-imí, n-imeoidh, tú gan mhoill, if you don't leave soon'. As we have seen already, the future tense can be used in place of the present subjunctive when it does not have an optative function and this is the current practice in the Acts, with phrases such as 'mura gcomóra sé' being replaced by 'mura gcomórfaidh sé' – see the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

a bheas The special relative form of the future tense of the substantive verb, this now generally replaced by 'a bheidh' in the Acts – see the commentary on Article 6.1 for the special form of the relative in '-s'.

roimh ré i ngach cás Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'roimh ré i ngach cás', as against the more literal variant given below.

a luaitear See the commentary on Articles 12.10.1° and 24.1.

gur dleathach See the commentary on Articles 14.3 and 15.6.2°.

a oibriú See the commentary on Articles 3 and 13.5.1°.

a chomhlíonadh See the commentary on Articles 12.1 and 13.9.

comhairle a ghlacadh See the commentary on Article 13.2.3°.

ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Cumhachtaí nó feidhmeanna ar bith a luaitear ina dtaobh sa Bhunreacht seo gur dleathach don Uachtarán iad a oibriú nó a chomhlíonadh tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh leis an gComhairle Stáit, ní cead don Uachtarán aon chumhacht ná feidhm díobh a oibriú ná a chomhlíonadh mura gcomórfaidh sé nó sí an Chomhairle Stáit i ngach cás roimh ré, agus éisteacht leis na comhaltaí den Chomhairle sin a bheidh i láthair.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ní fheidhmeoidh ná ní chomhlíonfaidh an tUachtarán aon cheann de na cumhachtaí nó feidhmeanna<sup>1</sup> a bhfuil sé sainráite leis an mBunreacht seo gur tar éis dul i gcomhairle<sup>2</sup> leis an gComhairle Stáit atá siad infheidhmithe nó in-chomhlíonta aige nó aici<sup>3</sup> mura mbeidh, roimh ré i ngach cás,<sup>4</sup> cruinniú den Chomhairle Stáit comórtha aige nó aici agus go mbeidh éisteacht tugtha aige nó aici do na comhaltaí<sup>5</sup> a bheidh i láthair ag an gcrúinniú sin<sup>6</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'aon cheann de na cumhachtaí nó de na feidhmeanna', 'aon chumhacht nó feidhm de na cumhachtaí agus feidhmeanna'
- 2 'i gcomhchomhairle', 'i ndáil chomhairle'
- 3 'Ní dhéanfaidh an tUachtarán aon cheann de na cumhachtaí nó feidhmeanna a fheidhmiú nó a chomhlíonadh a bhfuil sé sainráite leis an mBunreacht seo go bhfuil siad infheidhmithe nó in-chomhlíonta aige nó aici tar éis dul i gcomhairle leis an gComhairle Stáit'
- 4 'agus ar gach ócáid sula ndéanfaidh sé nó sí amhlaidh,'
- 5 'agus éisteacht tugtha do na comhaltaí'
- 6 'áirithe sin'

THE COMPTROLLER AND AUDITOR GENERAL AN tARD-REACHTAIRE CUNTAS AGUS CISTE

ARTICLE 33.1 AIRTEAGAL 33.1

TÉACS GAELGE

Beidh Ard-Reachtaire Cuntas agus Ciste ann chun gach caitheamh airgid a rialú thar ceann an Stáit, agus chun iniúchadh a dhéanamh ar gach uile chuntas ar airgead a riartar ag an Oireachtas nó faoi údarás an Oireachtais.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

There will be a Comptroller and Auditor General to regulate all expenditure on behalf of the State, and to make an audit of every account of money which is administered by the Oireachtas or under the authority of the Oireachtas.

ENGLISH TEXT

There shall be a Comptroller and Auditor General to control on behalf of the State all disbursements and to audit all accounts of moneys administered by or under the authority of the Oireachtas.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Rialaigh', the term expressing 'control' in the Irish text, generally expresses 'regulate' in the Constitution, this verb, however, being translated as 'control' (and 'rule') in Téarmaí Dlí; 'to control on behalf of the State all disbursements' is expressed as 'chun gach caitheamh airgid a rialú thar ceann an Stáit' ('to control all disbursements on behalf of the State') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Disbursements' is expressed by 'caitheamh airgid', which term expresses 'expenditure' earlier in the Constitution.
- 3 'All accounts of moneys' is expressed as 'gach uile chuntas ar airgead' ('every account of money') in the Irish text.
- 4 The Irish text has a comma after the first clause, no corresponding comma being found in the English text.

Note that Article 62 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

Dáil Éireann shall appoint a Comptroller and Auditor-General to act on behalf of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann). He shall control all disbursements and shall audit all accounts of moneys administered by or under the authority of the Oireachtas .... Ceapfaidh Dáil Éireann Ard-Sgrúdaí chun gníomhuíthe ar son Shaorstáit Éireann. Smachtóidh sé díoluíocht agus scrúdaíocht cuntas gach airgid a riartar ar ordú no fé údarás an Oireachtais.

Commentary

Ard-Reachtaire Cuntas agus Ciste The current official phrase expressing 'Comptroller and Auditor General' in Irish. This compound of 'ard' and 'reachtaire' does not appear to be given as a separate headword in Ó Dónaill nor in Dinneen, the latter having a headword 'áird-reacht', translated as 'supreme law'. Besides its use in the literal sense, 'ard' often indicates pre-eminence in rank or excellency over others of the same designation, according to DIL, citing 'ardlathí' ('chief princes', i.e. 'ard' + plural of 'flaith') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. Ó Dónaill, for the word 'reachtaire', includes the senses from earlier literature of 'controller (of royal household); administrator, steward' and 'dairy-farmer renting land and stock' in his entry, also including the ecclesiastical sense of 'rector' and the sense (in schools) of 'auditor', citing 'reachtaire (cumainn), auditor (of society)'. Dinneen's entry on 'reachtaire' elaborates in particular on the earlier senses above; regarding the sense of 'dairyman', for example, Dinneen says, 'that is, a small farmer or farm-labourer who rents a number of milch-cows, with grazing, house, facilities for crops, pig-raising, etc., from a big farmer, the letting being called a "dairy"'. Dinneen also gives the following senses of 'reachtaire': 'a lawgiver or administrator, a steward, manager, comptroller or agent, a beadle, rector or court official, an auditor or president of a society (recent)'. In his Guide to Early Irish Law (p. 65), Fergus Kelly refers to the 'reachtaire' ('steward, agent') as the most important functionary in the household of a king or lord, being described in one text as 'the man who arranges seating, lying [i.e. sleeping accommodation] and food for all', also being responsible for collecting the rent. DIL translates 'reachtaire' as 'a steward, bailiff, administrator' stating that in Irish heroic literature the 'reachtaire' was 'the major-domo of a king or chief, who directed his household and whose duties sometimes included collecting food-dues or tributes'. Lindgadan is called 'primreachtaire fer nHerend' (i.e. principal 'reachtaire' of the men of Ireland) in the twelfth-century Book of Leinster, for example. 'Reachtaire' is also used of deputies or governors appointed by a ruler over a city or province. DIL cites 'rectire in rí' from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, where it glosses Latin 'praepositus regis'. The noun 'recht(a)ire' is formed from 'recht' ('law' – as in 'bun-reacht', 'constitution') with the suffix '(a)ire', one of the two forms in which the Latin suffix '-arius' appears in Irish, the other being as '-óir' ('candleóir' ['candelarius', 'candlebearer'], for example) – see Rudolf Thurneysen, op. cit., s269.

Turning to 'cuntas', this headword is translated as 'account' in Téarmaí Dlí, this also being one of the two main senses in Ó Dónaill, 'count' being the primary sense. Ó Dónaill cites 'cuntas a choinneáil ar rud, to keep an account of something'. 'Cunntas' is translated as 'an account, a bill; a count, a computation; check, limit; a description, information, news; act of counting' in Dinneen. Anglo-Norman 'cuntes' is the source of Irish 'cuntas', translated as '(ac)count, reckoning, computation' in DIL, Maghnas Ó Dómhnaill's Life of Colmcille, written in 1532, being the source of the first citation of this headword in DIL. See further the commentary on Article 22.1.1°.

'Ciste', as we saw in relation to earlier Articles, is translated as 'fund' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'ciste (an) stáit, treasury, state funds' being cited in Ó Dónaill. This word comes from Anglo-Saxon 'ciste' and is translated as 'chest, treasure, riches' in DIL – see further the commentary on Article 29.5.2°.

Literally, therefore, 'Ard-Reachtaire Cuntas agus Ciste' would be 'the Chief Comptroller of Accounts and Fund'. We see above that 'Árd-Sgrúdaí' translates 'Comptroller and Auditor-General' in the 1922 Constitution, 'the Comptroller and Auditor-General Act, 1923' being cited in Irish as 'Acht an Árd-Scrúdóra, 1923'. Section 1 of that Act reads as follows:

From and after the passing of this Act, it shall be lawful for Dáil Éireann from time to time by resolution carried by a majority of the members present and voting, to appoint a Comptroller-General of the Receipt and Issue of the Exchequer of Saorstát Éireann and Auditor-General of Public Accounts who shall be styled and known as the Comptroller and Auditor-General (Árd-Scrúdóir) and who shall act on behalf of Saorstát Éireann .... Ó aimsir riththe an Achta so agus tar a héis beidh sé dleathach do Dháil Éireann duine a bheidh in' Árd-Smachtóir ar Fháiltas agus Caiteachas Stát-Chiste Shaorstáit Éireann agus in' Árd-Scrúdóir ar Chuntaisí Puiblí do cheapa ó am go ham le rún a rithfidh mór-áireamh de sna baill a bheidh láithreach agus ag vótáil agus an t-Árd-Scrúdóir a bheidh mar theideal air sin agus is mar sin aithneofar é agus gníomhóidh sé thar ceann Shaorstáit Éireann.

Note that we find the following in the Fourth Article of the 1919 Constitution:

Scrúdaidhe nó Scrúdaidhthe toghtha ag an Dáil a dheunfaidh an mionscrúdadh.

'The Comptroller and Auditor General (Amendment) Act, 1944', is cited in Irish as 'Acht an Árd-Reachtaire Cuntas agus Ciste (Leasú), 1944', 'Chun Tuarastail agus Costaisí Oifig an Ard-Reachtaire Cuntas agus Ciste' translating 'For the Salaries and Expenses of the Office of the Comptroller and Auditor General' in Schedule (B) of the Appropriation Act, 1938, following the 1937 Constitution, as against 'Chun Tuarastail agus Costaisí Oifig an Ard-Scrúdóra' in the Appropriation Act of the previous year. In s19(2) of the Central Bank Act, 1989, 'The Comptroller and Auditor General shall audit, certify, and report upon every statement of accounts transmitted to him by the Bank' is translated as 'Déanfaidh an tArd-Reachtaire Cuntas agus Ciste gach ráiteas cuntas a chuir an Bank chuige ... a iniúchadh agus a dheimhniú agus tabharfaidh sé tuarascáil air'.

'Comptroller of industrial and commercial property' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'ceannasaí maoinne tionnscail agus tráchtála' on the Dáil Order Paper, 1926, p. 375, with 'auditor' being translated as 'iniúcháir' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health.

iniúchadh See the commentary on Article 22.1.1°. This headword is translated as 'audit' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'iniúchadh cuntas' being translated as 'audit of accounts' in Ó Dónaill.

The sense of 'auditing (accounts)' is followed by the abbreviation for 'recent' in Dinneen, who translates 'infiúchadh' as 'act of looking closely and attentively at, viewing, prying, closely examining; choosing, selecting'. This word does not appear to be given as a headword in DIL.

Looking at the Acts, 'the appropriation, ... issue or audit of accounts of public money' is translated as 'airgead puiblí do chur i leithreas, ... do thabhairt amach no a chuntaisí do scrúdú' in Article 35 of the 1922 Constitution. 'Iniúcha' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating the verb 'audit' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health.

'Audit of accounts of committees of agriculture' is translated as 'Cuntais coistí talmhaíochta a iniúchadh' in the Margin Title of s71 of the National Agricultural Advisory, Education and Research Authority Act, 1977, 'in relation to the auditing of accounts of local authorities' being translated as 'i ndáil le hiniúchadh cuntas údarás áitiúil' in that section. In s3(1)(c) of the Friendly Societies (Amendment) Act, 1977, 'provide that a person shall not audit the accounts of a registered society' is translated as 'a fhoráil nach ndéanfaidh duine cuntais cumainn chláráithe ... a iniúchadh'.

caitheamh arigid See the commentary on Article 17.1.1° where this phrase expresses 'expenditure'. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'disbursement' as 'iocaíocht, díolaíocht, caitheamh (airgid)'. We see above that 'díolaíocht' translates 'disbursement' in the 1922 Constitution. 'To disburse moneys for or on behalf of the local authority' is translated as 'airgead do chaitheamh don údarás áitiúil nó ar a shon' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1924, p. 107. In s21(1) of the Slaughtered Animals (Compensation) Act, 1928, 'The Trustees shall ... prepare an account showing all payments into and disbursements from the compensation fund' is translated as 'ullamhóidh na hÍontabhairthe cuntas a thaisbeánfidh gach iocaíocht a cuireadh isteach sa chiste chúitimh agus gach iocaíocht a tugadh amach as'. 'Master's disbursements, including disbursements made by skippers' is translated as 'eisiocaíochtaí Máistir, lena n-áirítear eisiocaíochtaí a rinne seoladóirí' in s1(n) of Article 1 of the First Schedule to the Jurisdiction of Courts (Maritime Conventions) Act, 1989. In s4 of Article 1 of the Schedule to the International Development Association (Special Action Account) Act, 1978, 'in order to meet disbursements of Special Action Credits' is translated as 'chun eisiocaíochtaí Creidmheasaí Gníomhaíochta Speisialta a íoc'.

a rialú 'Rialú' is the verbal noun of 'rialáigh', 'rialáim' being translated as 'I control; I rule' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 12.5. 'It shall be the duty of the Comptroller and Auditor-General to control all disbursements' is translated as 'Beidh sé de dhualgas ar an Árd-Scrúdóir smachtú do dhéanamh ar dhíolaíocht ... gach airgid' in s7(1) of the Comptroller and Auditor-General Act, 1923. In s6(1) of the National Institute for Higher Education, Limerick, Act, 1980, 'the Governing Body shall manage and control all the affairs and property of the Institute' is translated as 'déanfaidh an Comhlacht Ceannais gnóthaí agus maoin uile an Fhorais a bhainisti agus a rialú'.

Direct translation

Beidh Ard-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste ann chun rialú a dhéanamh thar ceann an Stáit ar gach eisíocaíocht<sup>1</sup> agus chun na cuntais go léir i leith airgid a riartar<sup>2</sup> ag an Oireachtas nó faoi údarás an Oireachtais a iniúchadh<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'chun gach eisíocaíocht a rialú thar ceann an Stáit'
- 2 'atá á riaradh', 'a bheidh á riaradh'
- 3 'chun iniúchadh a dhéanamh ar na cuntais go léir i leith airgid a riartar ag an Oireachtas nó faoi údarás an Oireachtais'

ARTICLE 33.2 AIRTEAGAL 33.2

TÉACS GAEILGE

Is ag an Uachtarán a cheapfar an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste, arna ainmniú sin ag Dáil Éireann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is by the President that the Comptroller and Auditor General will be appointed, on being nominated by Dáil Éireann.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Comptroller and Auditor General shall be appointed by the President on the nomination of Dáil Éireann.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'On the nomination of Dáil Éireann' is expressed as 'arna ainmniú sin ag Dáil Éireann' ('on being nominated by Dáil Éireann') in the Irish text, the same construction as we see in Article 30.2, but here preceded by a comma, no corresponding comma being found in the English text.

Commentary

arna ainmniú sin See the commentary on Article 30.2

Gender-proofed Irish text

Is ag an Uachtarán a cheapfar an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste, arna ainmniú nó arna hainmniú sin ag Dáil Éireann.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an tUachtarán an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste a cheapadh<sup>1</sup> ar ainmniú Dháil Éireann<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'Is é nó is í an tUachtarán a cheapfaidh an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste'
- 2 'ar ainmniú ó Dháil Éireann', 'ar é nó í a ainmniú ag Dáil Éireann'

ARTICLE 33.3 AIRTEAGAL 33.3

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní cead an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste a bheith ina chomhalta de cheachtar de Thithe an Oireachtais, ná a bheith in aon oifig ná post sochair eile.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Comptroller and Auditor General is not permitted to be a member of either of the Houses of the Oireachtas, nor to be in any other beneficial post or office.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Comptroller and Auditor General shall not be a member of either House of the Oireachtas and shall not hold any other office or position of emolument.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Any other office or position of emolument' is expressed as 'aon oifig ná post sochair eile' ('any other beneficial position or office') in the Irish text, the word expressing 'emolument', 'sochar', having this sense of 'emoluments' only in earlier Irish writings; while both texts raise a doubt as to whether 'emoluments'/'sochar' is qualified by both 'office' and 'position', as 'eile'/'other' clearly qualifies both these nouns, 'sochar' would also appear to qualify both nouns.
- 2 'And shall not hold any other office' is expressed as 'ná a bheith in aon oifig ... eile' ('nor to be in any other office') in the Irish text; note that 'Ní cead don Uachtarán aon oifig ná post sochair a bheith aige seachas a oifig Uachtaráin' expresses 'The President shall not hold any other office or position of emolument' in Article 12.6.3<sup>o</sup> and that we find 'ná bheith in aon oifig ná post sochair eile' in Article 35.3, as against 'ná a bheith ...' in the present Article.
- 3 'Shall not' is expressed as 'Ní cead', 'It is not permitted', in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 4 'Of either House of the Oireachtas' is expressed as 'de cheachtar de Thithe an Oireachtais' ('of either of the Houses of the Oireachtas') in the Irish text.
- 5 A comma precedes the final clause in the Irish text, no corresponding comma being found in the English text.

Note that Article 63 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

He shall not be a member of the Oireachtas, nor shall he hold any other office or position of emolument. Ní bheidh sé 'na bhall den Oireachtas ná ní bheidh aon oifig ná ionad eile sochair aige.

Section 3(2) of the Comptroller and Auditor-General Act, 1923, reads as follows:

The Comptroller and Auditor-General shall not, while holding his office, be capable of holding any other office or position of emolument, or of being elected to or of being a member of either House of the Oireachtas. Le linn é do bheith i seilbh a oifige, ní bheidh ar chumas an Ard-Scrúdóra aon oifig nó aon bheart eile sochair a bheith ar sheilbh aige, ná bheith iontoghtha ná bheith 'na bhall d'aon Tigh den Oireachtas.

Commentary

aon oifig ná post sochair See the commentary on Article 12.6.3<sup>o</sup>. Note that 'i bpost' is translated as 'in office' in Ó Dónaill.

Ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Ní cead an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste a bheith ina chomhalta nó ina comhalta de cheachtar de Thithe an Oireachtais, ná a bheith in aon oifig ná post sochair eile.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ní bheidh an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste ina chomhalta nó ina comhalta de cheachtar Teach den Oireachtas agus ní bheidh aon oifig ná post sochair<sup>2</sup> eile aige nó aici<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'nó'
- 2 'diolaíochta', 'éadála'
- 3 'ní bheidh sé nó sí i seilbh aon oifige nó poist sochair eile', 'ní shealbhóidh sé nó sí aon oifig ná post sochair eile'

ARTICLE 33.4 AIRTEAGAL 33.4

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní foláir don Ard-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste tuarascálacha a chur os comhair Dháil Éireann ar thrátha áirithe mar a chinnfear le dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Comptroller and Auditor General must put reports before Dáil Éireann at certain times as (will be) determined/decided by law.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Comptroller and Auditor General shall report to Dáil Éireann at stated periods as determined by law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Report to Dáil Éireann' is expressed as 'tuarascálacha a chur os comhair Dháil Éireann' ('put reports before Dáil Éireann') in the Irish text.
- 2 'At stated periods' is expressed as 'ar thrátha áirithe' ('at certain times') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we have seen in many earlier Articles.

Note that Article 62 of the 1922 Constitution concludes as follows:

... and shall report to Dáil Éireann at stated periods to be determined by law .... agus tabharfa sé tuairisc uaidh do Dháil Éireann ar uairibh áirithe a socrófar le dlí.

Commentary

tuarascálacha 'Tuarascáil' is translated as 'account, report, description' in Ó Dónaill and as 'act of describing; description, report, history, repute, character, rumour' in Donneen, who cites 'tuarascbháil chailín an tuarastail ghránna ná faghann mar phádh acht caidhp 'san ráithe, report of the servant girl with the wretched wages, she only gets a new cap every three months'. The earlier form, 'tuarascbáil', is the verbal noun of 'do-fúarascáib', 'discloses, reveals, describes, makes known', the third person singular, present indicative, of which verb is found in 'imbas forosnai', the name applied to the rite practised by the seer and which originally applied to the inspired wisdom of the seer, according to T.F. O'Rahilly, Early Irish History and Mythology (1976 [1946], p. 339), who writes as follows (p. 323):

One of the ways in which divination was practised in pagan Ireland is described by Cormac [mac Cuileannáin, King-Bishop of Cashel, who died in 908] in a well-known article in his Glossary. The fili chewed a piece of the raw flesh of a pig, dog, or cat, and then chanted an incantation over it, and offered it to the gods, whom he invoked. He then slept, and in his sleep the knowledge that he sought was revealed to him. Cormac's name for this rite is imbas forosnai.

In Pagan Past and Christian Present in Early Irish Literature (1990, p. 168), Kim McCone translates 'imbis for-osnai' as 'a great knowledge that lights up' and states (p. 169) that 'poetic understanding is not only itself "cooked" for human ingestion but also transforms its recipient by a kind of culinary process, as is implied by its very name imbis for-osnai "great knowledge which lights up, kindles"'.<sup>1</sup>

DIL translates 'tuarascbáil' as (a) 'art of giving an account of, describing' and (b) 'account, description', giving 'news, report; trace, vestige' as a sense of this noun in Modern Irish, citing 'ar n-a cloistin sin d'Ua Néill 7 d'a t-sluagh, do fhilleat fó tuarascbáil na crech sin' ('... at the tidings of those plunders') from the Annals of Ulster.

Turning to the Acts, 'Every account of expenditure prepared pursuant to this section shall be transmitted to the Comptroller and Auditor-General, and shall be audited and reported on by him as an appropriation account' is translated as 'Gach cuntas caiteachais a hullamhófar do réir an ailt seo cuirfar chun an Ard-Scrúdóra é agus déanfaidh seisean é iniúcha agus tuarascbháil do thabhairt air mar chuntas leithreasa' in s3(2) of the Telephone Capital Act, 1924. 'The Comptroller and Auditor General shall audit, certify, and report upon every statement of accounts transmitted to him by the Bank' is translated as 'Déanfaidh an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste gach ráiteas cuntas a chuir an Banc chuige faoin alt seo a iniúchadh agus a dheimhniú agus tabharfaidh sé tuarascáil air' in s19(2) of the Central Bank Act, 1989. 'He shall report to the Board of Governors' is translated as 'tabharfaidh sé tuairisc don Bhord Rialtóirí' in s2(c) of Article XVIII of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements (Amendment) Act, 1977. The Margin Title of s89 of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997), 'Select Committees to report to the Committee on Procedure and Privileges', is translated as 'Roghchoistí do thuairiscíú don Choiste um Nós Imeachta agus Pribhléidí', the section itself reading as follows:

... each Select Committee shall review its procedures ... and shall report to the Committee on Procedure and Privileges at least every six months on these matters ... deanfaidh gach Roghchoiste a nósanna imeachta ... a athbheithniú ... agus tabharfaidh siad tuarascáil faoi na nithe sin don Choiste um Nós Imeachta agus Pribhléidí uair amháin ar a laghad gach sé mhí.

ar thrátha áirithe ‘Ar thráthanna áirithe, at certain times’ is cited in Ó Dónaill, who gives ‘tráthanna’ as the general form of the plural of ‘tráth’, the form ‘trátha’ being used as the nominative plural ‘in certain phrases’ – Ó Dónaill cites ‘na trátha canónta, the canonical hours’ and ‘i dtrátha na Nollag, around Christmas’. ‘Tráthanna’ is given as the form of the plural of ‘tráth’ (‘time’) in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, followed by ‘i dtrátha (a sé, etc.)’. Dinneen gives ‘trátha’, ‘tráta’, ‘tráite’ and ‘tráthanna’ as forms of the plural. See the commentary on Article 31.2 regarding ‘tráth’, the commentary on Article 12.3.1° regarding ‘period’ and on Articles 12.10.1° and 25.4.2° regarding ‘stated’.

In s57(1)(b)(i) of the Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1927, ‘at any time except during stated period or periods not exceeding in the whole seven hours’ is translated as ‘aon uair ach i rith pé tréimhse no tréimhsí nách sia ar fad ná seacht n-uair a’ chluig’. ‘But different periods may be stated for different components of any goods’ is translated as ‘ach féadfar tréimhsí éagsúla a dhearbhu le haghaidh comhphárteanna éagsúla d’aon earraí’ in s16(3) of the Sale of Goods and Supply of Services Act, 1980. ‘The term “life annuity” means a stated sum payable periodically at stated times during life or during a specified or ascertainable period of time’ is translated as ‘Ciallaíonn an téarma “blianacht saoil” suim áirithe is iníoctha go tréimhsiúil ag tráthanna áirithe, ar feadh saoil nó ar feadh tréimhse sonraithe nó tréimhse infhionnta’ in s3 of Article XII of the Second Schedule to the Finance Act, 1950. Finally, ‘a copy of the proposed plan ... may be inspected at a stated place and at stated times during a stated period’ is translated as ‘(go) bhféadfar cóip den phlean beartaithe ... a iniúchadh in ionad a bheidh luaite agus ag tráthanna a bheidh luaite le linn tréimhse a bheidh luaite’ in s48(2)(a) of the Air Pollution Act, 1976.

a chinnfear See the commentary on Articles 1 and 12.11.2°.

Standardised Irish text

Ní foláir don Ard-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste tuarascálacha a chur os comhair Dháil Éireann ar thráthanna áirithe mar a chinnfear le dlí.

Direct translation

Tuairisceoidh an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste<sup>1</sup> do Dháil Éireann ag tréimhsí<sup>2</sup> sainráite<sup>3</sup> mar a chinnfear le dlí.

Variants

- 1 ‘Tabharfaidh an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste tuarascáil’
- 2 ‘ar thráthanna’
- 3 ‘a bheidh sainráite’

ARTICLE 33.5.1° AIRTEAGAL 33.5.1°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní cead an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste a chur as oifig ach amháin de dheasca mí-iompair nó mithreora a luafar, ná an uair sin féin mura rithid Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann rúin á éileamh é a chur as oifig.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is not permitted to put the Comptroller and Auditor General out of office except as a result of misbehaviour or mental incapacity which will be cited, nor even then unless Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann pass resolutions demanding that he be put out of office.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Comptroller and Auditor General shall not be removed from office except for stated misbehaviour or incapacity, and then only upon resolutions passed by Dáil Éireann and by Seanad Éireann calling for his removal.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘Incapacity’, as we have seen earlier, is expressed in the Irish text by a term (‘míthreoir’) which does not appear to have quite this sense today, although this is the primary sense of the word in Dinneen and consistently expresses ‘incapacity’ in the Constitution.
- 2 ‘Calling for his removal’ is expressed as ‘á éileamh é a chur as oifig’ (‘demanding he be put out of office’) in the Irish text, ‘removed from office’ being expressed earlier in the subsection as ‘a chur as oifig’ (‘put out of office’) also.
- 3 ‘And then only upon resolutions passed by Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann’ is expressed as ‘ná an uair sin féin mura rithid Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann rúin’ (‘nor even at that time unless Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann pass resolutions’) in the Irish text.
- 4 ‘Shall not’ is expressed as ‘Ní cead’ (‘It is not permitted’) in the Irish text, as we have seen in s3 and in some earlier Articles.

Note that Article 63 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

The Comptroller and Auditor-General shall not be removed except for stated misbehaviour or incapacity on resolutions passed by Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann. Ní cuirfear an t-Ard-Sgrúdaí as oifig ach mar gheall ar dhroch-iompar no mí-chumas a luadhfar agus ar rúin a rithfidh Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann.

Commentary

a chur as oifig ‘Duine a chur as obair, as a phost’ is translated by Ó Dónaill as ‘to put someone out of work, out of his job’. ‘Scoilim as oifig’ is translated as ‘I retire’ in Téarmaí Dlí, with Dinneen translating ‘cuirim as ionad, áit’ as ‘I dislocate, displace’. DIL cites ‘ro curthea gai a Herind re lind ...’ (‘spears were banished’ from Ireland during ...) from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster and ‘conacca ... dorralla inna huili fiadmila asin fidbaid’ (‘... that all the wild animals had come out of the wood’) from the eleventh-century version of the Táin contained in the Yellow Book of Lecan.

See the commentary on Article 12.10.7° for ‘do chur as oifig’ translating ‘remove from office’ in early official translations, along with ‘cur as feidhmanas’, ‘brise’ and ‘cur chun siúil’. ‘An officer or representative of the Central Bank ... shall not be removed from office without the consent of the Bank’ is translated as ‘Ní dhéanfar oifigeach nó ionadaí don Bhanc Ceannais ... a chur as oifig gan toiliú an Bhainc’ in s109(12) of the Central Bank Act, 1989. ‘A person appointed to be the Ombudsman ... may be removed from office by the President but shall not be removed from office except for stated misbehaviour, incapacity or bankruptcy and then only upon resolutions passed by Dáil Éireann and by Seanad Éireann calling for his removal' is translated as 'Aon duine a bheidh ceaptha le bheith ina Ombudsman ... féadfaidh an tUachtarán é a chur as oifig ach ní chuirfear as oifig é ach amháin mar gheall ar mhí-iompar sonraithe, éagumas nó féimheacht ná ansin féin ach tar éis do Dháil Éireann agus do Sheanad Éireann rúin a rith ag éileamh é a chur as oifig' in s2(3) of the Ombudsman Act, 1980.

an uair sin féin This phrase is translated by Ó Dónaill as 'even at that time' and cited as an example of the use of 'féin' as an adverb to express 'even, only', Dinneen stating that 'féin' is regularly translated in English by the adverbs 'even, truly', citing 'agus gurbh' inimtheachta aiste an uair sin féin, and that they should have left it even then' from a version of Oidhe Chloinne Uisnigh (the story of Deirdre of the Sorrows). DIL cites 'na cnuic fen' ('even those hills') from Maghnas Ó Domhnaill's Life of Colmcille (written in 1532), and 'aniu féin' ('even now') from the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards', as examples of this sense of 'even'. DIL gives examples of 'fadéin, féin' as emphasizing pronoun or adjective – '(my, thy, etc.) -self' – from the Glosses onwards, including 'in tain ronicub féin' ('when I myself shall come') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

As we saw above, 'and then only upon resolutions passed by Dáil Éireann and by Seanad Éireann calling for his removal' is translated as 'ná ansin féin ach tar éis do Dháil Éireann agus do Sheanad Éireann rúin a rith ag éileamh é a chur as oifig'. Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú favours the original 'an uair sin' to 'ansin' as being clearer and more precise.

a éileamh 'Éilim' is translated as 'I claim; I demand' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'éilighim' being translated as 'I look for, demand, call to account, sue for; I make a friendly quest for; I visit; pursue' in Dinneen. As in Téarmaí Dlí, 'éiligh' is translated primarily as 'claim, demand' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'éileamh ar dhuine rud a dhéanamh, to require someone to do something'. DIL translates 'éiligid' as (I) 'accuses, charges, sues, impeaches' and (II) 'impugns, refutes, contradicts', with seventeenth-century works by Keating providing the only two examples there of the verbal noun 'éiligud' in the sense of 'claiming; demanding; a claim' ('ag éiliughadh a raibhe ó Shliabh E. go Luimneach' from Keating's History of Ireland and 'éiliughadh an éaga ar gach aon' from his Three Shafts of Death).

'Or be called upon by a resolution of the Conference to resign the office of trustee' is translated as 'no nuair a hiarrfar air, le rún ón gCódháil, eirghe as a oifig mar iontaobhaí' in the Schedule to the Methodist Church in Ireland Act, 1928. In s2 of the Broadcasting Authority (Amendment) Act, 1976, 'A member of the Authority may be removed by the Government from office for stated reasons, if, and only if, resolutions are passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas calling for his removal' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an Rialtas comhalta den Údarás a chur as oifig ar chúiseanna sonraithe, má ritheann, agus amháin má ritheann, dhá Theach an Oireachtais rúin á iarraidh é a chur as oifig'.

mura rithid The third person plural, synthetic form, of the present subjunctive (also the form of present indicative) of 'rith', this would currently be written as 'mura rithfidh (siad)' in the Acts – see the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding the synthetic and analytic forms of the verb and on Article 12.3.1° regarding the use of the future for the present subjunctive.

Ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

de dheasca mí-iompair ... a luafar See the commentary on Article 12.10.1°.

míthreoir See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Ní cead an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste a chur as oifig ach amháin de dheasca mí-iompair nó míthreorach a luafar, ná an uair sin féin mura rithfidh Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann rúin á éileamh é nó í a chur as oifig.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ní chuirfear an tArd-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste as oifig ach amháin de dheasca mí-iompair nó éagumas shonraithe<sup>1</sup>, ná an uair sin<sup>2</sup> féin ach tar éis do Dháil Éireann agus do Sheanad Éireann rúin a rith á iarraidh<sup>3</sup> é nó í a chur as oifig.

Variants

- 1 'mar gheall ar mhí-iompar nó éagumas sonraithe'
- 2 'ansin'
- 3 'ag éileamh'

ARTICLE 33.5.2° AIRTEAGAL 33.5.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Rúin ar bith den sórt sin a rithfid Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann ní foláir don Taoiseach scéala a thabhairt don Uachtarán ina dtaobh go cuí, agus cóip de gach rún den tsamhail sin a sheoladh chuige faoi theastas Chathaoirleach an Tí den Oireachtas a rith é.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any resolutions of that kind which Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann will pass the Taoiseach must duly give an account of them / information on them to the President, and send him a copy of every resolution of that kind under the certification of the Chairman of the House of the Oireachtas which passed it.

ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Taoiseach shall duly notify the President of any such resolutions as aforesaid passed by Dáil Éireann and by Seanad Éireann and shall send him a copy of each such resolution certified by the Chairman of the House of the Oireachtas by which it shall have been passed.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Notify the President' is expressed as 'scéala a thabhairt don Uachtarán ina dtaobh' ('give an account/

- information concerning them to the President') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Certified by' is expressed as 'faoi theastas' ('under the certification of') in the Irish text, 'deimhním' translating 'I certify' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'deimhniú' rather than 'teastas' translating 'certificate' therein.
  - 3 'Any such resolutions as aforesaid' is expressed as 'Rúin ar bith den sórt sin' ('Any resolutions of that kind') in the Irish text; 'such' appears further on in the English text and is expressed by 'den tsamhail sin' rather than the usual 'den sórt sin' in the Irish text.
  - 4 'Shall have passed' is expressed simply as 'a rith' ('passed') in the Irish text.
  - 5 No comma is found in the English text corresponding to the one in the Irish text before the final clause.
  - 6 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we have seen in s4 and in many earlier Articles.

Commentary

faoi theastas 'Teastas' is translated as 'testimonial, certificate' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'teastas pósta, báis, marriage, death, certificate', along with 'teastais aitheantais, credentials'. Dinneen translates 'teastas' as 'a proof, testimony, certificate, attestation, character, report, fame'. The principal sense of 'testas' in DIL is 'testimony, witness', 'do thabirt testassa airibsi' ('to give evidence for you') being cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 208, refers to 'gúthestas', 'false testimony', in early Irish law-tracts. 'Praise, fame, reputation' is the secondary sense of 'testas' in DIL, this word being based on 'teist', which comes from Latin 'testis'; according to DIL, 'a witness, one capable of giving evidence' (the meaning of Latin 'testis') is presumably the original sense of 'teist', the more usual sense being that of Latin 'testimonium', 'evidence'.

'Boyle Branch Hospital Committee to furnish the County Home Committee with monthly bills or accounts of all expenditure incurred by them, duly certified' is translated as 'Coiste Brains-óspideul Mhainistir na Búille do thabhairt billí no cuntaisí míosúla cuibhe-dheimhniithe do Choiste an Teaghlaigh Chontae ar a gcaitheachas go léir' in s10 of the 'Roscommon County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'As certified by medical certificate' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'ar a bhfuarthas deimhniú dochtúra' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health.

'A Bill the purpose of which as expressed in the Long Title is to consolidate existing Statute Law on a particular matter, and is so certified by the Attorney General in a certificate which shall accompany the Bill on introduction' is translated as 'Bille a mbeidh sé ráite sa Teideal Fada gurb é is cuspóir dó an Dlí Reachtúil maidir le hábhar áirithe a chomhdhlúthú, agus a mbeidh sin deimhniithe ina thaobh ag an Ard-Aighne i ndeimhniú a bheidh ag gabháil leis an mBille ar é a thabhairt isteach' in s129(1) of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997). 'Copies of every such resolution, certified by the President and the Secretary of the Conference for the time being' is translated as '(Déanfar) cóipeanna de gach rún den tsórt san, agus iad deimhniithe ag Uachtarán agus ag Rúnaí na Códhála de thurus na huairé' in s4 of the Methodist Church in Ireland Act, 1928. Finally, in s6(3)(c) of the Designated Investment Funds Act, 1985, 'have attached thereto a copy of the resolution, certified by the proper officer of such company' is translated as 'beidh ag gabháil leis cóip den rún, arna dheimhniú ag oifigeach cuí na cuideachta sin'.

scéala See the commentary on Article 33.5.3°, along with that on Article 13.9, where this term expresses 'communication'. 'Notify' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'cur in iúil' in the 1926 Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann and as 'cur in iúl' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1922/23. 'Fógra do thabhairt ina dtaobh' is cited as translating 'notify (to notify diseases)' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health.

Looking at modern Acts, 'he shall duly notify the holder of the licence of his proposal' is translated as 'cuirfidh sé in iúl go cuí do shealbhóir an cheadúnais go bhfuil sin beartaithe aige' in s5(1) of the Employment Agency Act, 1971. 'A rights commissioner shall notify the Tribunal of any recommendation he makes under this section' is translated as 'Tabharfaidh coimisinéir cirt fógra don Bhinse faoi aon mholadh a dhéanfaidh sé faoin alt seo' in s8(7) of the Unfair Dismissals Act, 1977. 'Which shall notify all signatory and acceding States of the deposit of any such instruments' is translated as 'a chuirfidh taisceadh aon ionstraimí den sórt sin in iúl do na Stáit shínitheacha agus aontacha go léir' in Article II of the Second Schedule to the Jurisdiction of Courts (Maritime Conventions) Act, 1989.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks on the direct translation below that the nominative and accusative following each other is confusing ('Cuirfidh an Taoiseach an tUachtarán ar an eolas go cuí') and suggests the variant given below to avoid this.

a sheoladh 'Seoladh' is the verbal noun of 'seol', translated as 1. 'sail', 2. 'send, dispatch; direct, guide' and 3. 'address' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'litir a sheoladh chuig duine, to address a letter to someone'. 'I sail, send, steer' are the three principal senses of 'seolaim' in Dinneen. DIL gives examples of 'séolaid' in the sense of 'sails, steers' from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster onwards, this verb being based on 'séol' ('sail') which comes from Old English 'segel', 'séol' glossing Latin 'uelum' and 'carbasus' in the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian.

'The directors of a society shall send a copy of the annual accounts for the last financial year to the Central Bank' is translated as 'Cuirfidh stiúrthóirí cumainn cóip de na cuntaisí bhliantúla don bhliain airgeadais deiridh chuig an mBanc Ceannais' in s82(2) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. See further the commentary on Article 23.1 and note that 'seol' expresses 'address' in Article 24.1, while 'cuir go' expresses 'send' in Article 22.2.4°.

den tsamhail sin Ó Dónaill cites 'nó rud den tsamhail sin, or some such thing', with Dinneen citing 'de'n tsamhail seo, of this kind'. DIL cites 'don tsamhuil sin' ('of that kind') from Donlevy's An Teagasg Críosduidhe (1742), 'samail' being translated principally as 'likeness, similarity', citing 'far samail-si fri talmain' ('your likening to earth') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. See the commentary on Article 13.7.2° regarding 'den sórt sin'.

a rithfid The third person plural, synthetic form, of the future of ‘rith’; this would generally be replaced by ‘rithfidh (siad)’ today – see the commentary on Article 14.5.1°.

go cuí See the commentary on Article 43.2.1°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Rúin ar bith den sórt sin a rithfidh Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann ní foláir don Taoiseach scéala a thabhairt don Uachtarán ina dtaobh go cuí, agus cóip de gach rún den tsamhail sin a sheoladh chuig an Uachtarán faoi theastas chathaoirleach an Tí den Oireachtas a rith é.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Cuirfidh an Taoiseach an tUachtarán ar an eolas go cuí<sup>1</sup> i dtaobh aon rún den sórt sin a dúradh<sup>2</sup> a rithfidh Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann agus seolfaidh sé nó sí cóip de gach rún den sórt sin chuige nó chuici arna dheimhniú<sup>3</sup> ag Cathaoirleach an Tí den Oireachtas a mbeidh sé rite aige.

Variants

- 1 ‘Tabharfaidh an Taoiseach eolas cuí don Uachtarán’
- 2 ‘mar a dúradh’
- 3 ‘arna deimhniú’

ARTICLE 33.5.3° AIRTEAGAL 33.5.3°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Láithreach d’éis na scéala sin agus cóipeanna de na rúin sin a fháil don Uachtarán ní foláir dó, le hordú faoina láimh is faoina Shéala, an tArd-Reachtaire Cuntas agus Ciste a chur as oifig.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Immediately after the President receives that report and copies of those resolutions he must, by order under his hand and under his Seal, put the Comptroller and Auditor General out of office.

ENGLISH TEXT

Upon receipt of such notification and of copies of such resolutions, the President shall forthwith, by an order under his hand and Seal, remove the Comptroller and Auditor General from office.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘Upon receipt of ..., the President shall forthwith’ is expressed as ‘Láithreach d’éis ... a fháil don Uachtarán ní foláir dó’ (‘Immediately after the President receives ... he must’) in the Irish text, ‘shall’ being again expressed as ‘ní foláir’ (‘must’) as we have seen in previous subsections and in many earlier Articles.
- 2 ‘Notification’ is expressed in the Irish text as ‘scéala’, the meaning of which is ‘tidings, message, information’; ‘notify’ is expressed as ‘scéala a thabhairt ina dtaobh’ (‘give news regarding them’) in the previous subsection.

- 3 ‘Remove from office’ is expressed as ‘a chur as oifig’ (‘put out of office’) as we have already seen in subsection 1.

Commentary

scéala This form is given as a separate headword in Ó Dónaill; in origin a plural form of ‘scéal’, in the specific sense of ‘tidings, message, information’ the form has long been treated as a separate word and frequently even as a singular, as Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks. Dinneen also gives ‘scéala’ as a separate headword, stating that it is sometimes used as plural of ‘scéal’, but that it is properly a separate word. DIL cites ‘attaat scela linn’ (‘we have tidings’) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, also citing the singular formation ‘an sgéala’. See the commentary on Articles 13.9 and 33.5.2°.

Turning to ‘notification’ in the Acts, ‘after notification to the county council concerned’ is translated as ‘tar éis fógra thabhairt don chomhairle contae sin’ in s3(5) of the Local Government (Rates on Agricultural Land) Act, 1924. ‘Fógrán’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘notification’ in translations for the Department of Fisheries. ‘And, on receipt of such notification, the said registering authority shall cause ...’ is translated as ‘agus, ar an bhfógra sin d’fháil, cuirfidh an t-údarás cláráitheachta sin faoi ndear’ in s30(18) of the Land Act, 1950.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks regarding the direct translation below that as ‘eolas’ is used earlier in the direct translation in this context, ‘eolas’ should be retained here and suggests the variant translation given below.

a chur as oifig See the commentary on s5.1° above.

d’éis See the commentary on Article 10.4.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

faoina láimh See the commentary on Articles 12.10.3° and 31.3.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Láithreach d’éis an scéala sin agus cóipeanna de na rúin sin a fháil don Uachtarán ní foláir dó nó di, le hordú faoina láimh is faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala, an tArd-Reachtaire Cuntas agus Ciste a chur as oifig.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ar fhógra den sórt sin agus cóipeanna de rúin den sórt sin<sup>1</sup> a fháil,<sup>2</sup> déanfaidh an tUachtarán láithreach,<sup>3</sup> le hordú faoina láimh agus faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala, an tArd-Reachtaire Cuntas agus Ciste a chur as oifig.

Variants

- 1 ‘de na rúin sin’
- 2 ‘Ar an eolas sin a fháil, i dteannta cóipeanna de na rúin sin,’
- 3 ‘, láithreach,’

ARTICLE 33.6 AIRTEAGAL 33.6

TÉACS GAELGE

Faoi chuimsiú na nithe sin romhainn, is le dlí a chinnfear coinníollacha agus cúinsí oifig an Ard-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Within the constraint/scope of the foregoing, it is by law that the conditions and circumstances of the office of the Comptroller and Auditor General will be determined.

ENGLISH TEXT

Subject to the foregoing, the terms and conditions of the office of Comptroller and Auditor General shall be determined by law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Terms and conditions' is expressed as 'coinníollacha agus cúinsí' ('conditions and circumstances') in the Irish text; 'term' is translated as 'téarma' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'condition' is translated as 'coinníoll'.
- 2 'Subject to' is expressed as 'Faoi chuimsiú' ('Within the constraint/scope of'), as we have seen in many earlier Articles.

Note that Article 63 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

Subject to this provision, the terms and conditions of his tenure of office shall be fixed by law. Gan dochar don bhforáil seo socrófar le dlí téarmaí agus coinníollacha sealbhúochta a oifige.

Commentary

cúinsí 'Pretext, condition' is one of the senses of 'cúinse' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ar aon chúinse, in any, under no, circumstances', with 'show, circumstance; (plural) affairs' also being given as a sense of this headword, Ó Dónaill citing 'bhí sé ag cur cúinsí orainn, he was enquiring about our circumstances'. Dinneen includes 'a condition; an understanding; agreed terms' among the senses of 'cúinse', citing 'beidh cealla 'gus úird gan chúinse ag Papists, Papists will have churches and clergy unconditionally'. DIL translates 'cuin(n)síu' as 'face, countenance, aspect', citing this term from the Táin, for example – Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú questions whether 'cuin(n)síu' has any connection with Modern Irish 'cúinse'.

Turning to the Acts, 'The term of office of all existing Councillors, Commissioners and members of any council' is translated as 'Téarma oifige na gComhairleoirí, na gCoimisinéirí agus na mball sealbhacha d'aon Chomhairle' in s3 of the Local Elections Postponement Act, 1923. 'To supply electricity to those premises upon such terms and subject to such conditions as the Board shall think fit to prescribe' is translated as 'leictreachas do sholáthar don áitreabh san ar pé téarmaí agus fé réir pé coinníollacha is oiriúnach leis an mBord d'ordú' in s69(1) of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1927. In Article 3 of the 1922 Constitution, 'and the conditions governing the future acquisition and termination of citizenship in the Irish Free State ... shall be determined by law' is translated as 'agus socrófar le dlí na coinníollacha a rialóidh feasta saoránacht d'fháil agus do chríochnú i Saorstát Éireann'. Finally, the Margin Title of s1 of the Second Schedule to the Restrictive Practices Act, 1972, 'Terms and conditions of office', is translated as 'Téarmaí agus coinníollacha oifige'.

coinníollacha See the commentary on Articles 16.1.2°, where 'coinníoll' expresses 'provision', and 36ii, where this headword again expresses 'term'.

Faoi chuimsiú See the commentary on Articles 12.5 and 18.7.2°, 'faoi chuimsiú na fostaíochta' being translated as 'within the scope of the employment' in Téarmaí Dlí.

na nithe sin romhainn See the commentary on Articles 14.4 and 18.10.1°.

a chinnfear See the commentary on Articles 1 and 12.11.2°.

Direct translation

Faoi réir na nithe sin romhainn, déanfar téarmaí agus coinníollacha oifig an Ard-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste a chinneadh le dlí.

THE COURTS NA CÚIRTEANNA

ARTICLE 34.1 AIRTEAGAL 34.1

TÉACS GAEILGE

Is i gcúirteanna a bhunaítear le dlí agus ag breithiúna a cheaptar ar an modh atá leagtha amach sa Bhunreacht seo a riarfar ceart, agus is go poiblí a dhéanfar sin ach amháin sna cásanna speisialta teoranta sin a ordófar le dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is in courts which are established by law and by judges who are appointed in the manner that is set out in this Constitution that justice will be administered, and it is publicly that that will be done except in those special limited cases that will be enjoined by law.

ENGLISH TEXT

Justice shall be administered in courts established by law by judges appointed in the manner provided by this Constitution, and, save in such special and limited cases as may be prescribed by law, shall be administered in public.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Justice' is rendered as 'ceart' in the Irish text, the traditional term, usually in this sense with the article, though 'ceartas' translates 'justice' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'Justice shall be administered in courts established by law by judges appointed ...' is rendered as 'Is i gcúirteanna a bhunaítear le dlí agus ag breithiúna a cheaptar ...' ('Justice shall be administered in courts established by law and by judges appointed ...') in the Irish text, introducing a further clause to the text.
- 3 'Sna cásanna speisialta teoranta sin' ('in such special and limited cases') can be read as 'in those special limited cases' in the Irish text, though 'and' is regularly unexpressed between adjectives in Irish and 'such' is often translated by 'sin' ('that') in the Acts, for example.
- 4 'As may be prescribed by law' is rendered as 'a ordófar le dlí' ('as will be enjoined by law') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Provided by this Constitution' is rendered as 'leagtha amach sa Bhunreacht seo' ('set out in this Constitution') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 34.1 of the 1937 Constitution was inserted by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, the original section reading as follows:

Justice shall be administered in public courts established by law by judges appointed in the manner provided by this Constitution. Is i gcúirteannaibh go poiblidhe a bunuighthear le dligheadh, agus ag breitheamhnaibh a ceaptar ar an modh atá leagtha amach sa Bhunreacht so, a riarfar Ceart.

Note also that Article 64 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

The judicial power of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) shall be exercised and justice administered in the public Courts established by the Oireachtas by judges appointed in the manner hereinafter provided. Is i sna Cúirteanna puiblí a bhunóidh an t-Oireachtas a cuirfead comhacht bhreithiúntais Shaorstáit Éireann i bhfeidhm agus a riarfar ceart le breithiúin a ceapfar i slí a fhorálar 'na dhiaidh seo.

Commentary

Na cúirteanna Plural of 'cúirt', translated simply as 'court' in Téarmaí Dlí, this being the principal sense in Ó Dónaill, with Dinneen giving the senses of 'a court, a palace, a royal residence; a mansion; a law-court; a yard'. DIL cites 'cúirt', originally written as 'coirt', from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian, where it glosses Latin 'curta', Low-Latin 'cortis' being the source of the Irish, according to the editors of the Glosses. Latin 'cōrti, cohorti' has also been claimed as the source of 'cúirt'. Later, in Classical Irish verse, according to DIL, 'cúirt' is a separate Romance loanword from Anglo-Norman 'curt'. DIL translates 'cúirt' as 'court, manor, palace; court of law', and cites 'Piláit ... i tig na cuirti' from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, composed in the second half of the eleventh century.

'Airecht' expressed 'court' in early Irish law-tracts. D.A. Binchy has the following entry s.v. 'airecht', in his 'Legal Glossary' appended to Crith Gablach, p. 73:

... the public assembly of freemen whose functions include the transaction of certain important legal business; hence the word is often used in the more specialized sense of 'court'.

In a chapter on 'Procedure' in his Guide to Early Irish Law (pp. 192-3) Fergus Kelly writes on the fourth stage of a law-case as follows:

The pleading (tacrae) takes place in a court (airecht) before one or more judges .... The judge's house is the most probable location for the hearing of minor cases, but cases involving large numbers of witnesses, supporters, etc. would presumably be held in the open air at a regular site. Later English sources refer to the hearing of law-cases by brehons on hill-tops, and this may have also been common practice in the Old Irish period.

The seating arrangement of the various persons in a law-court is described in an Old Irish law-text, edited by Professor Kelly in Peritia 5 (1986), pp. 74-106. At the back of the court ('cúl-airecht') sit the provincial king, the bishop and the chief poet, while in the side-court (‘táeb-airecht’) are historians (‘because the court relies upon the traditional lore [senchas] and clarification of the historians [senchaid]’), overkings, hostages, ráth-sureties and aitire-sureties. In the waiting court (airecht airnaide) sit the plaintiff and defendant with their advocates, while naidm-sureties, ráth-sureties, witnesses, and sureties to contracts sit in ‘the court apart’ (airecht fo leith). Finally, the judges sit in ‘the court itself’ (airecht fodesin) – see Fergus Kelly, A Guide to Early Irish Law, pp. 193f. The word ‘oireachtas’ comes from ‘airechtas’ which is based directly on ‘airecht’; DIL states that ‘airecht’ was sometimes used with ‘dáil’, the distinction between them not being clear.

‘The Courts Act, 1979’, for example, is cited in Irish as ‘Acht na gCúirteanna, 1979’. ‘The Dáil Éireann Courts (Winding-up) Act, 1923’ is cited in Irish as ‘Acht Cúirteanna Dháil Éireann (Criochnú a nGnótha), 1923’.

go poiblí This phrase is translated as ‘publicly, openly’, in Ó Dónaill, where ‘trial phoiblí’ is translated as ‘public trial’ – see the commentary on Article 15.8.1°. Most of DIL’s examples of ‘puiplide’ (‘pertaining to the people, public’) come from seventeenth-century texts. DIL cites only one example of ‘poplach’ (‘pertaining to the people, public’), this being based directly on ‘popul’, which comes from Latin ‘populus’. In O’Reilly’s Irish-English Dictionary (1821), ‘poiblidheacht’ is translated as ‘a republic’, giving the lie to Lloyd George’s assertion that Irish had no term for ‘republic’ (currently rendered as ‘poblacht’).

‘In public’ is translated as ‘go poiblí, os comhair an tsaoil’ in De Bhaldraithe, ‘publicly’ being similarly translated. ‘The whole or any part of proceedings under this section may be heard otherwise than in public’ is translated as ‘féadfar na himeachtaí go léir nó aon chuid d’imeachtaí faoin dlí seo a éisteacht ar shlí seachas go poiblí’ in s40(6) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s13 of the Censorship of Films Act, 1923, ‘The expression “in public” means at any exhibition, show or entertainment to which the public are admitted’ is translated as ‘Cialluíonn an focal “go poiblí” ar aon taisbeántas, seo no siamsa ‘na leigfar an phuiblíocht isteach chuige’.

teoranta This adjective is translated as ‘limited, restricted’ in Ó Dónaill and as ‘definite, limited, bounded’ in Dinneen. ‘Teoranta’ is based on ‘teorainn’ (‘boundary, limit; border, frontier’), Old Irish ‘tórann’ being the verbal noun of ‘do-foirndea’, the common meaning of which in Middle Irish was ‘traces, marks out, [delimits]’ – see the commentary on Article 2.

In s4 of the ‘Mayo County Scheme’ in the First Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, ‘Portion of the Hospital ... to be set aside as a District Hospital for a limited number of cases only’ is translated as ‘Cuid den Ospideul ... do choinneáil mar Ospideul Ceanntair do roinnt áirithe cásanna amháin’. ‘Notwithstanding any rule of law by which the scope of the defendant’s duty is limited to cases where the plaintiff has not been guilty of contributory negligence’ is translated as ‘d’ainneoin aon riail dlí lena ndéantar réim dualgais an chosantóra a theorannú chun nach mbainfeadh sé ach le cásanna nach raibh an gearánaí ciontach i bhfaillí rannphárteach iontu’ in s34(2)(e) of the Civil Liability Act, 1961. Finally, ‘Limited certificates of competency for special cases’ is translated as ‘Deimhnithe inniúlachta teoranta le haghaidh cásanna speisialta’ in the Margin Title of s22 of the Road Traffic Act, 1968.

ar an modh atá leagtha amach See the commentary on Article 18.6. ‘Every insured person shall be insured in the manner provided by this Part against intermittent unemployment’ is translated as ‘Ní mór gach duine árachaithe bheith faoi árachas in aghaidh breac-dhífhostaíochta sa tslí a fhoráiltear leis an gCuid seo’ in s239 of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. ‘Unless he has been nominated in the manner provided by this Act’ is translated as ‘mura mbeidh sé ainmnithe mar a fhoráiltear leis an Acht seo’ in s4(1) of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977. ‘Amhail is dá mba ar an modh a fhorálas an tAcht seo a cláraíodh iad’ translates ‘as if they were registered in the manner provided by this Act’ in s17(1) of the Mercantile Marine Act, 1955.

a ordófar See the commentary on Articles 25.4.2° and 27.2. The Tenth Amendment of the Constitution Bill, 1986, proposed that Article 41.3.2° would read as follows:

Where, and only where, such court established under this Constitution as may be prescribed by law is satisfied that .... Igcás gur deimhin le cibé cúirt do bunuigheadh faoin mBunreacht so agus a ordóchar le dligheadh, agus sa chás san amháin.

In Article 66 of the 1922 Constitution, ‘and subject to such regulations as may be prescribed by law’ is translated as ‘Gan dochar do pé rialacha agus maille le pé eisceachtaí a cinnfear le dlí’. See the commentary on Article 15.9.1°, where ‘prescribe’ is expressed by ‘leag amach’, for other translations of ‘prescribed’ in the Acts.

ceart See the commentary on Articles 12.2.2°, 38.3.1° and 43.2.1° regarding ‘ceart’ and on Article 29.1 regarding ‘justice’, expressed there as ‘cothrom’. Note that Old Irish ‘cert’ is translated as ‘justice’ by Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 191. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recalls Merriman’s lines: ‘Caithfidh an neart gan cheart seo striocadh / Is caithfidh an ceart ina cheart bheith suite’.

Direct translation

Déanfar an ceartas a riar i gcúirteanna a bhunófar le dlí ag breithiúna a cheapfar sa tslí a fhoráiltear<sup>1</sup> leis an mBunreacht seo, agus, ach amháin sna cásanna speisialta teoranta sin a fhorordófar le dlí, déanfar é a riar go poiblí<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘atá á foráil’
- 2 ‘agus déanfar é a riar go poiblí ach amháin sna cásanna speisialta teoranta sin a fhorordófar le dlí’, ‘agus is go poiblí a riarfar é, ach amháin sna cásanna speisialta teoranta sin a fhorordófar le dlí’

ARTICLE 34.2 AIRTEAGAL 34.2

TÉACS GAELGE

Beidh ar na cúirteanna sin Cúirteanna Céadchéime agus Cúirt Achomhairc Dheiridh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Those courts will include Courts of First Instance and a Court of Final Appeal.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Courts shall comprise Courts of First Instance and a Court of Final Appeal.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The Courts shall comprise' is expressed as 'Beidh ar na cúirteanna sin' ('Among those courts will be / Those courts will include') in the Irish text; the Irish text has lower-case 'c' in 'cúirteanna', the English text having an initial capital 'C' in 'Courts'.

Note that Article 64 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

The Courts shall comprise Courts of First Instance and a Court of Final Appeal to be called the Supreme Court. Beidh ar na Cúirteanna so Cúirteanna Céad-Chéime agus Cúirt Aith-éisteachta Deire dá ngairmfear an Chúirt Uachtarach.

Commentary

Cúirteanna Céadchéime 'Cúirt chéadchéime' is translated as 'court of first instance' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill. This compound of 'céad' ('first') and 'céim' ('step') does not appear to be given as a headword in Dinneen. DIL cites 'céim' in the literal sense of 'stage in a process' from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac (composed in the second half of the eleventh century [na céimenda as i ndéantar in t-adaltras .i. silled 7 comrad]) and Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú cites the metaphorical phrase by Eochaidh Ó hEoghusa 'is mé go haoinchéim ar ndul sa dréimire' (i.e. with only one stage of his training course remaining). 'Céim' is the verbal noun of 'cingid', 'steps, paces, proceeds, goes'.

Section 2(1) of the Courts (Establishment and Constitution) Act, 1961, reads as follows:

On the commencement of this Act, the Court of First Instance referred to in Article 34 of the Constitution as An Ard-Chúirt (The High Court) shall stand established. I dtosach feidhme an Achta seo, beidh an Chúirt Chéadchéime ar a dtugtar an Ard-Chúirt (The High Court) in Airteagal 34 den Bhunreacht seo arna bunú.

In s1(4) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923, 'as well as to proceedings in and decrees of a court of first instance' is translated as 'chó maith le himeachta agus le haitheanta aon chúirte chéad-chéime'. Note, finally, that 'instance' is translated both as 'cás' and 'iarratas' in early official translations, with 'in the first instance' being translated as 'sa chéad dul-sios', 'i dtosach bára' and 'ar dtúis', and 'instances of wrongful usage have been detected' cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as having been translated as 'fuarthas amach samplaí d'úsáid eagrach' in a 1929 Report of the Public Accounts Committee.

Cúirt Achomhairc Dheiridh This phrase is translated as 'court of final appeal' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'cúirt achomhairc' being translated as 'court of appeal' in Ó Dónaill and 'achomharc' being translated as 'appeal' both in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill. 'Athchomarc' is translated as 'act of asking, enquiry; request, question' in DIL, citing 'arrufoitea epistli uaidib som co n-aidchomarcaib cucisiom' ('for letters had been sent from them with questions to him') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, glossing Latin 'questionibus'. In one early Irish law-tract, 'cóir n-athchomairc' ('proper enquiry') is included as one of the five 'paths' along which a case must be pursued – see Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 191.

Section 1(1) of the Courts (Establishment and Constitution) Act, 1961, reads as follows:

On the commencement of this Act, the Court of Final Appeal, which in pursuance of Article 34 of the Constitution is to be called An Chúirt Uachtarach (The Supreme Court), shall stand established. I dtosach feidhme an Achta seo, beidh an Chúirt Achomhairc Dheiridh, dar teideal de bhun Airteagal 34 den Bhunreacht An Chúirt Uachtarach (The Supreme Court), arna bunú.

We see above that 'Cúirt Aith-éisteachta Deire' translates 'Court of Final Appeal' in the 1922 Constitution. 'No appeal shall lie from the decision of the Court of Appeal' is translated as 'ní luighfidh aon ath-chomharc i dtaobh breithe na Cúirte Aith-éisteachta' in s16(4) of the Electoral Act, 1923. In s24(8) of the Land Act, 1923, however, 'may appeal from such decision to the Court of Appeal' is translated as 'féadfa sé athchomharc a dhéanamh chun na Cúirte Athchomhairc i gcoinnibh na breithe sin'. See further the commentary on Article 34.4.3°.

As regards 'final' in early Acts, note that 'Every action or proceeding for the recovery of money ... and in which no final judgement shall have been given before the passing of this Act' is translated as 'Gach aicsean no imeacht chun airgead d'fháil thar n-ais ... agus nár tugadh crích-bhreith ann roimh rith an Achta so' in s2(2) of the Gaming Act, 1923, with 'any proceedings for enforcing ... any final judgement given by any Court in Saorstát Éireann' being translated as 'aon imeachta chun aon bhreith bhartha a thug aon Chúirt i Saorstát Éireann' in s1(3)(f) of the Indemnity Act, 1923.

ar na cúirteanna sin 'Among' is one of the senses expressed by the preposition 'ar', Ó Dónaill citing 'ar an triúr a tháinig aréir, among the three who came last night' and Dinneen citing 'tá sé ar na fearaibh is fearr, he is one of (among) the best men'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'comprise' as 'cuimsíonn; áirítear (ar, i)', citing 'the house comprises nine bedrooms, tá naoi seomra codlata sa teach'.

'The following district electoral divisions shall comprise the Gaeltacht for the purposes of this Chapter' is translated as 'Is é a bheidh sa Ghaeltacht chun críche na Caibidle seo na toghranna ceantair seo a leanas' in s288 of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. 'Unless ... the spirits comprise a blend of two or more distillates' is translated as 'mura cumasc de dhá dhriogáit nó níos mó an bhíotáille' in s1(2)(a) of the Irish Whiskey Act, 1980. 'References to the trade shall apply also to any other trade of which the activities comprise the activities of the first-mentioned trade' is translated as 'beidh feidhm freisin ag tagairtí don trádáil maidir le haon trádáil eile a gcuimsítear gníomhaíochtaí na trádála chéadluaite ina gníomhaíochtaí' in s20(1) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976.

Looking at early Acts, 'The Committee shall be comprised as follows' is translated as 'Beidh an Coiste co-dhéanta dhiobh so a leanas' in s6 of the 'Mayo County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'The Department of the President of the Executive Council which shall comprise the business, powers, authorities, duties and functions by the Constitution ... conferred on ... the Minister' is translated as 'Roinn Uachtarán na hArd-Chomhairle 'na mbeidh ag gabháil léi an gnó, na comhachta, na húdarais, na dualgaisí agus na feidhmeanna 'na ndintar leis an mBunreacht ... iad do bhronna ... don Aire' in s1(i) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924. Finally, 'by forming a joint board under the name of the Cork Port Sanitary Authority consisting of twenty representative members of the several component authorities therein specified' is translated as 'tré chó-bhord do bhunú fé ainm Údarás Sláintíochta Puir Chorcaighe ar a mbeadh fiche ball ionadathach o sna húdarais có-pháirteacha uile agus fé seach atá luaidhte san ordú san'.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú finds fault with the original text in that one has to read it through to be sure it is not a phrase of necessity ("frása riachtanais") – Ó Dónaill cites 'tá orm labhairt leis, I must speak to him', for example. Máirtín Ó Murchú faults the direct translation below in that it is not clear from it that two distinct classes of courts are involved.

Direct translation

Ar na Cúirteanna beidh! Cúirteanna Céadchéime agus Cúirt Achomhairc Dheiridh.

Variants

1 'Is é a bheidh sna Cúirteanna'

ARTICLE 34.3.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 34.3.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELGE

Beidh ar na Cúirteanna Céadchéime sin Ard-Chúirt ag a mbeidh lándlínse bhunaidh, agus cumhacht chun breith a thabhairt, i ngach ní agus ceist dlí nó fíorais cibé sibhialta nó coiriúil iad.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Those Courts of First Instance will include a High-Court which will have full fundamental jurisdiction, and power to give a judgement, in every matter and question of law or fact whether they are civil or criminal.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Courts of First Instance shall include a High Court invested with full original jurisdiction in and power to determine all matters and questions whether of law or fact, civil or criminal.

Divergences between the original texts

1 'All matters and questions whether of law or fact, civil or criminal' is expressed in the Irish text as '(i) ngach ní agus ceist dlí nó fíorais cibé sibhialta nó coiriúil iad' ('every matter and question of law or fact whether they are civil or criminal'); the Irish text reads as if 'gach' ní' ('every matter') was not qualified by 'dlí nó fíorais' ('of law or fact'), this phrase only qualifying 'ceist', 'question'.

- 2 'To determine' is expressed as 'chun breith a thabhairt' ('to give a judgement') in the Irish text, which makes a separate clause, enclosed within commas, of the equivalent of 'and power to determine' ('agus cumhacht chun breith a thabhairt'), no corresponding commas being found in the English text.
- 3 'Invested with' is expressed simply as 'ag a mbeidh' ('which will have') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Shall include' is expressed in the Irish text by the same phrase as expresses 'shall comprise' in the foregoing section, i.e. 'Beidh ar'.

Note that Article 64 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

The Courts of First Instance shall include a High Court invested with full original jurisdiction in and power to determine all matters and questions whether of law or fact, civil or criminal .... Ar na Cúirteanna Céad-Chéime beidh Ard-Chúirt, ag a mbeidh lán-údarás bunaidh agus comhacht chun socruithe gach cúrsa agus gach ceiste bhaineas le dlí no le firinne, pe'ca sibhialta no coiriúil.

J.M. Kelly (op. cit., p. 207) reports as follows on reference made to this subsection in the courts:

In The People (Attorney General) v Conmey ([1975] IR 341) O'Higgins CJ rejected a submission based on a supposed distinction between a 'determination' of the Supreme Court (in the sense of its 'power to determine' in Article 34.3.1) and a 'decision' of the High Court (in the sense of its 'decisions' in Article 34.4.3); he observed that the Irish text uses the word 'breith' in both equivalent phrases, and said it followed 'that no distinction or difference is indicated' between the functions envisaged by those two subsections.

Commentary

sibhialta This adjective is translated as 'civil' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, with Dinneen translating 'sibhialta' as 'civil, polite, affable, gracious, obliging, courteous, complaisant, civilised', the latter sense followed by the abbreviation for 'recent'. 'Sibialta' is based on English or Romance, according to DIL, where this headword is translated as 'civil, pertaining to the state', the 'long title' of the Irish version of Lucan's Pharsalia, 'In Cath Catharda', providing the earliest of but three citations in DIL, i.e. 'Do chogadh siualta na Romhanach, dia ngoireid Gaoidheil in Cath Cathardha'. See further the commentary on Article 43.2.1<sup>o</sup>.

In defending proceedings, whether civil or criminal' is translated as 'ag cosaint imeachtaí, sibhialta nó coiriúil' in s114(2) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s26(2) of the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923, 'No action or proceeding, civil or criminal, shall lie against any returning officer' is translated as 'Ní luighfidh aon aicsean ná imeacht eile, sibhialta ná coiriúil, i goinnibh aon chinn chomhrimh'. 'Every issue, whether civil or criminal, which is triable with a jury by the High Court' is translated as 'Gach saincheist, sibhialta nó coiriúil, is intrialte le giúiré ag an Ard-Chúirt' in s2(1) of the Juries Act, 1961, with 'Every issue, whether civil or criminal, which is triable with a jury by a Judge of the High-Court' being translated as 'Gach cúis, sibhialta no coiriúil, is intrialta le coiste dhá réag ag Breitheamh den Ard-Chúirt' in s3(3) of the Juries (Dublin) Act, 1926.

Regarding early official translations of 'civil', note that 'the Civil Service of Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'Seirbhís Sibhialta Shaorstáit Éireann' in s57(3)(c) of the Electoral Act, 1923, the current Irish term for 'Civil Service' being found in s51(1) of the Local Government Act, 1925, where 'the Civil Service of the Government of Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'Stát-Sheirbhís Rialtais Shaorstáit Éireann'. 'Civil Prison' is translated as 'Príosún Stáit' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1924, p. 706. 'For the purpose of providing soldiers ... with ... benefits ... after their return to civil life' is translated as 'Chun sochair ... do sholáthar do shaighdiúirí ... tar éis fillte thar n-ais dóibh ar a ngnáth-shaol' in s20(1) of the National Health Insurance Act, 1923. Finally, 'in consequence of civil strife in the years 1922, or 1923' is translated as 'de bharr imris chathardha sa bhliain 1922 no 1923' in s4(b) of the Railways (Existing Officers and Servants) Act, 1926. See further the commentary on Article 38.4.2°.

ingach ní See the commentary on Article 13.7.1° regarding 'ní'. 'Matter' is translated as 'ábhar' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'All matters and questions relating to any relief so measured' is translated as 'gach ábhar agus ceist a bhaineann le haon fhaoiseamh atá tomhaiste amhlaidh' in s432(1)(c)(ii) of the Income Tax Act, 1967. '(The Circuit Court) ... shall have power and exclusive jurisdiction to hear and determine all matters and questions arising on or incidental to any such claim' is translated as '(agus) is aici amháin a bheidh dlíghinse chun gach ní agus ceist eireoidh as aon éileamh den tsórt san no bhaineann leis d'éisteacht agus chun breithe do thabhairt ortha' in s36(1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1934.

See the commentary on Article 13.7.1° regarding 'matter' in early Acts. Note that 'ceist' sometimes translates 'matter', 'All matters in each House shall ... be determined' being translated as 'Socrófar gach ceist i ngach Tigh' in Article 22 of the 1922 Constitution, for example. Note, finally, in passing, that 'matter of fact' is translated as 'dátán' in s24(4) of the Fisheries Act, 1925, where 'which certificate shall be conclusive evidence in every court of all such matters of fact as aforesaid stated therein' is translated as 'agus beidh an deimhniú san ina fhianaise dho-chlaoite i ngach cúirt i gcúrsaí gach dátáin den tsórt roimhráite a luaidhtear ann'.

Ard-Chúirt 'An Ard-Chúirt' is translated as 'the High Court' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'ardchúirt' being translated as 'high court' in Ó Dónaill – the hyphen is used in titles such as 'an Príomh-Bhreitheamh' and 'an tArd-Aighne' according to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil (s24(d) of 'Litriú na Gaeilge'), the hyphen being found in Ó Dónaill in terms such as 'Ard-Fheis' and 'Ard-Aifreann' ('High Mass').

Section 11(1) of the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Act, 1961, reads as follows:

The High Court exercising the criminal jurisdiction with which it is invested shall be known as An Príomh-Chúirt Choiriúil (The Central Criminal Court) and is in this Act referred to as the Central Criminal Court. An

Príomh-Chúirt Choiriúil (The Central Criminal Court) a ghairfear den Ard-Chúirt agus í ag oibriú na dlínse coiriúla a dhílsítear di agus san Acht seo tugtar an Príomh-Chúirt Choiriúil uirthi.

'The High Court' is styled 'an Ard-Chúirt' in Article 6 of the 1922 Constitution also.

lándlínse bhunaidh 'Lándlínse' is a compound of 'lán' ('full') and 'dlínse' ('jurisdiction') – see the commentary on Article 3 regarding 'dlínse'. 'Dlínse bhunaidh' is translated as 'original jurisdiction' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill. Dinneen gives 'bunaidh' as a headword, this being the genitive singular of 'bunadh' functioning as an adjective, translated as 'original, primitive, own', with Ó Dónaill giving 'original, fundamental; basic, basal' as the sense of the genitive singular of 'bunadh' as an attributive adjective. Téarmaí Dlí also cites '(doiciméad, etc.) bunaidh, original (document, etc.)'. DIL cites 'amal ind cláinn bunid' ('like the original clan') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles as an example of this 'very frequent' use of 'bunad', principally translated as 'origin, base, source', this word being based on 'bun', 'the thick end of anything, base, butt, foot'.

In s17 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924, 'The High Court shall be a superior court of record with such original jurisdiction as is prescribed by the Constitution' is translated as 'Beidh an Ard-Chúirt ina cúirt breacacháin árd-chéime agus pé údarás bunaidh aici a horduítear leis an mBunreacht', this same English text (with 'and other' following 'original') being translated as 'Is uaschúirt taifid an Chúirt Uachtarach agus beidh dlínse achomhairc agus dlínse eile aici mar a ordáitear leis an mBunreacht' in s8(1) of the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Act, 1961. 'The Council as at present constituted shall have full power and jurisdiction in the management of the affairs of the Institution' is translated as 'beidh ag an gComhairle, mar atá sí comhdhéanta faoi láthair, lán-chumhacht agus lán-dlínse chun gnóthaí na hInstitiúide a bhainistí' in s5 of the Institution of Civil Engineers of Ireland (Charter Amendment) Act, 1960.

We also find 'bun' as a prefix translating 'original' in early official translations. Parts II. and III. of this Act shall apply to every re-hearing under this section as they would have applied thereto if such re-hearing had been an original hearing commenced after the passing of this Act' is translated as 'Bainfidh Cuideanna II. and III. den Acht so le gach ath-éisteacht féin alt so chó hiomlán is do bhainfidís léi dá mba bun-éisteacht a tosnuíodh tar éis riththe an Achta so an ath-éisteacht san' in s2(4) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. 'And diverted the original course or channel of the said river' is translated as 'agus gur chasadar céad-chúrsa no céad-chainéal na habhann san' in the Preamble to the Dundalk Harbour and Port Act, 1925. Finally, 'seana-riocht' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'original condition' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1926, p. 226.

breith a thabhairt 'Breith' is translated as 'decision' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'judgement' being translated as 'breithiúnas'. Ó Dónaill translates 'breith' as 'judgement, decision', citing 'tabhair do bhreith ar, say what you think of it' and 'is réidh agaibh breith a thabhairt orm, it is easy for you to judge me'. Dinneen translates 'breith' principally as 'judgement, decision, sentence'. 'Breth' is the verbal noun of 'beirid', translated principally as 'act of carrying, bearing' in DIL, but with the sense of 'act of judging, deciding; judgement, legal ruling, interpretation' found in the Glosses, DIL citing 'is ón spirut rouiccus brith' ('it is from the Spirit I have passed judgement') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, this being an example of 'figura etymologica', the verb here also being based on 'beirid'. See further the commentary on Article 15.11.1°.

'I determine' is translated as 'cinnim' in Téarmaí Dlí, which verb expresses 'determine' in Article 1. 'The Circuit Court may hear and determine a dispute under this section' is translated as 'féadfaidh an Chúirt Chuarda díospóid faoin alt seo a éisteacht agus a chinneadh' in s91(2) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'The Circuit Court shall ... have jurisdiction to hear and determine proceedings under section 6' is translated as 'Beidh dlínse ag an gCúirt Chuarda ... chun imeachtaí faoi alt 6 ... a éisteacht agus a chinneadh' in s8(1) of the Family Law Act, 1981. 'To determine all matters relating to the appointment and distribution of any monies lodged with the court' is translated as 'chun gach ní a chinneadh a bhaineann le ceapadh agus le dáileadh aon airgead a taisceadh leis an gcúirt' in s10(e) of the Oil Pollution of the Sea (Civil Liability and Compensation) Act, 1988. 'To hear and determine all matters and questions arising on any such claim' is translated as 'chun gach ní agus ceist eireoidh as aon éileamh den tsórt san ... d'éisteacht agus chun breithe do thabhairt ortha' in s36(1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1934.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'breith a thabhairt ar' in the direct translation below, suggesting 'cinneadh a dhéanamh faoi' as an alternative in that context.

ceist dlí nó fíoras 'Ceist dlí' is translated as 'question of law' and 'ceist fíoras' as 'question of fact' in Téarmaí Dlí, the headword 'fíoras' being translated as 'fact'. Ó Dónaill translates 'ceist dlí' as 'a question, a point, of law', giving 'point, problem' as a secondary sense of 'ceist', with 'fíoras' being translated as 'fact'. 'Fíoras' (the genitive singular form 'fíris' being found in the original text) does not appear to be given as a headword in Dinneen, who translates 'ceist' as 'a question, a problem, a difficulty, anxiety; shyness, regard'. 'Ceist' comes from Latin 'quaestio', 'inna cestae sin' glossing 'questioni' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, DIL translating 'ceist' as 'question, problem, enquiry' – see the commentary on Article 22.2.2°. 'Fíoras' is based on 'fíor', Old Irish 'fír', translated as 'true, veracious' in DIL, where 'is fáss dúnni a pridchimme manid fír' ('void for us is what we preach unless it is true') is cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

In s18(1) of the Railways Act, 1924, 'to hear and determine all matters, whether of law or fact' is translated as 'chun gach ní, i ndlí no i bhfírinne, ... d'éisteacht agus do shocrú', the same English text being translated as 'chun éisteacht do dhéanamh agus breith do thabhairt ar gach ní, pe'ca le dlí no le fírinne a bhaineann sé' in s20(1) of the Dáil Éireann Courts (Winding-up) Act, 1923. "Security" includes any loan stock or similar security whether of any government or of any public or local authority or of any company and whether secured or insecured' is translated as 'folaíonn "urrús" aon stoc iasachta nó urrús dá shamhail de chuid aon rialtais nó aon údarais phoiblí nó údarais áitiúil nó de chuid aon chuideachta, cibé acu urraithe nó neamhurratithe don chéanna' in s3(2) of the Second Schedule to the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975. 'To do any act (whether of commission or omission) which is contrary to this Act' is translated as 'aon ní a dhéanamh (trí ghníomh ná trí neamhghníomh) atá contrártha don Acht seo' in s118(3) of the First Schedule to the European Elections Act, 1977, with 'penalties for acts (whether of commission or omission) in relation to income tax' being translated as 'pionóisí, mar gheall ar ghníomhartha (a dineadh no a fágadh gan déanamh) maidir le cáin ioncuim' in s10(5) of the Finance Act, 1925.

'Ní' being masculine and 'ceist' being feminine affects the nouns and adjectives qualifying these nouns and perhaps dictates the form of the Irish text here.

coiríúil This adjective is translated as 'criminal' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, 'coireamhail' being translated as 'guilty' in Dinneen, 'coir' (upon which the adjective is based) being translated as 'sin, crime, accusation, trespass', as against 'crime' alone in Téarmaí Dlí. Note that 'coireach' is the form in the original text, which adjective is translated as 'wicked' in Dinneen (to which Ó Dónaill adds 'sinful' and 'guilty'). We also find the form 'coirtheach', which is given as a headword in both Dinneen and Ó Dónaill, the reader being referred to 'coireach'. DIL translates 'caire' as 'crime, fault, sin', citing 'in cairi' from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, where it glosses Latin 'notam iniquitatis publicae'. DIL gives two relatively late examples of the adjective 'cairech', 'criminal, guilty; sinful'. See the commentary on Article 30.3 regarding 'coir'. Note that 'criminal matters' is expressed as 'cúrsaí coireachta' in Article 37.1.

Beidh ar See the commentary on the previous section regarding the preposition 'ar' in this context. 'Every summary financial statement shall include a statement of the auditor's opinion' is translated as 'Beidh i ngach ráiteas airgeadais achomair ráiteas faoi thuairim na n-iniúcháirí' in s79(5) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'Such arrangements shall include a provision for giving ... credit in respect of such knowledge' is translated as 'beidh sna comhshocraíochtaí sin foráil go dtabharfar ... creidiúint i leith an eolais sin' in s18(1) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1978. In s24(4)(c) of the Industrial Training Act, 1967, 'provide that the ordinary members shall include a specified number of workers' members' is translated as 'a fhoráil go mbeidh ar lion na ngnáth-chomhaltaí lion sonraithe comhaltaí oibrithe'. 'Their duties shall include' is translated as 'beidh ar a ndualgaisí' in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms, citing 'go bhfuil ar a dhualgaisí cinn a mbaineann le' as translating 'whose duties might include or relate to' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health.

Regarding 'áireofar' expressing 'include' in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that this term was not very precise referring to a permanent categorical state ("staid seasta chatagóireach").

ag a mbeidh In s1 of the Oil in Navigable Waters Act, 1926, 'being proprietors of or entrusted with the duty or invested with the power of constructing ... a harbour' is translated as 'atá ina ndílseánaigh ar chuan, no go bhfuil sé de dhualgas orthu cuan do dhéanamh, ... no go bhfuil comhacht dílsithe ionta chuige sin'. 'The persons to be invested, as officers, with military command over the Defence Forces' is translated as 'na daoine dá dtabharfar, mar oifigigh, ceannas míleata ar Óglaigh na hÉireann' in s17(3) of the Defence Act, 1954. 'The High Court exercising the criminal jurisdiction with which it is invested' is translated as '(den) Ard-Chúirt agus í ag oibriú na dlínse coiriúla a dhílsítear di' in s11(1) of the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Act, 1961. Note, incidentally, that 'invest', in the financial sense, is translated as 'súncáil' in early Acts, 'investments' being translated as 'súncálanna'.

Direct translation

Ar na Cúirteanna Céadchéime beidh Ard-Chúirt dá ndilseofar<sup>1</sup> lándlínse bhunaidh agus cumhacht chun cinneadh a dhéanamh faoi<sup>2</sup> gach ábhar agus faoi<sup>3</sup> gach ceist, cibé acu a bhaineann siad le dlí nó le fíoras, cibé acu sibhialta nó coiriúil dóibh.<sup>4</sup>

Variants

- 1 'dá dtabharfar'
- 2 'breith a thabhairt ar'
- 3 'ar'
- 4 'Ar na Cúirteanna Céadchéime beidh Ard-Chúirt dá ndilseofar lándlínse bhunaidh i ngach ábhar agus ceist cibé acu is ábhar nó ceist dlí nó fíorais, sibhialta nó coiriúil, atá ann agus cumhacht chun iad a chinneadh.'

ARTICLE 34.3.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 34.3.2<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Taobh amuigh de chás dá socraítear a mhalairt leis an Airteagal seo, beidh dlínse ag an Ard-Chúirt maidir leis an gceist sin bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar aon dlí áirithe ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo, agus ní cead aon cheist den sórt sin a tharraingt anuas (trí phléadail ná argóint ná eile) i gCúirt ar bith, arna bunú faoin Airteagal seo nó faoi aon Airteagal eile den Bhunreacht seo, seachas an Ard-Chúirt nó an Chúirt Uachtarach.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Apart from a case for which the contrary is provided by this Article, the High Court will have jurisdiction as regards that question of any particular law having or not having validity having regard to the provisions of this Constitution, and no question of that kind is permitted to be raised (through pleading or argument or otherwise) in any Court, established under this Article or under any other Article of this Constitution, except the High Court or the Supreme Court.

ENGLISH TEXT

Save as otherwise provided by this Article, the jurisdiction of the High Court shall extend to the question of the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of this Constitution, and no such question shall be raised (whether by pleading, argument or otherwise) in any Court established under this or any other Article of this Constitution other than the High Court or the Supreme Court.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The jurisdiction of the High Court shall extend to the question' is rendered as 'beidh dlínse ag an Ard-Chúirt maidir leis an gceist sin' ('the High Court will have jurisdiction as regards that question') in the Irish text.
- 2 'The validity of any law' is rendered as 'bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar aon dlí áirithe' ('any particular law having or not having legal validity') in the Irish text, 'bail' rather than 'bailíocht' being found here, unlike the following subsection.
- 3 'Save as otherwise provided by this Article' is rendered as 'Taobh amuigh de chás dá socraítear a mhalairt leis an Airteagal seo' ('Apart from a case for which the contrary is provided by this Article') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Under this or any other Article' is rendered as 'faoin Airteagal seo nó faoi aon Airteagal eile' ('under this Article or under any other Article') in the Irish text.
- 5 'No ... shall be' is rendered as 'ní cead' ('it is not permitted') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Note that both this subsection and ss3<sup>o</sup> were inserted following the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, replacing the original subsection which read as follows:

The jurisdiction of the High Court shall extend to the question of the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of this Constitution, and in all cases in which any such matter shall come into question the High Court alone shall exercise original jurisdiction. Beidh dlíghinse ag an Ard-Chúirt maidir leis an gceist sin bail do bheith nó gan a bheith ar aon dlíghleadh, ag féachaint d'fhoráiltibh an Bhunreacht seo, agus i ngach cás ina mbeidh ní den tsórt sin i gceist is í an Ard-Chúirt amháin oibreochas dlíghinse bhunaidh.

Note also that Article 65 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

The judicial power of the High Court shall extend to the question of the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of the Constitution. In all cases in which such matters shall come into question, the High Court alone shall exercise original jurisdiction. Raghaidh comhacht bhreithiúntais na hArd-Chúirte chó fada le ceist dlisteanachta aon dlí maidir le forálacha an Bhunreacht. Is í an Ard-Chúirt amháin a chuirfidh údarás bunaidh i bhfeidhm i ngach cás 'na dtiocfaidh cúrsaí den tsórt san i gceist.

Commentary

bail a bheith nó gan a bheith See the commentary on Article 15.4.2<sup>o</sup> where 'invalid' is expressed as 'gan bhail'. Following the wording of the present Article, 'or a question of the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of the Constitution' is translated as 'ná ceist i dtaobh bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar aon dlí áirithe ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreacht' in s7(4) of the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Act, 1961. In s42(a) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1976, 'A person shall not ... question the validity of ... a decision of the Minister on any appeal' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfaidh duine ... bailíocht chinneadh an Aire ar aon achomharc a cheistiú'. In s22(3) of the Prosecution of Offences Act, 1974, 'Nothing in this section shall affect the functions of the Attorney General in relation to any question as to the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of the Constitution' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfaidh aon ní san alt seo difear d'fheidhmeanna an Ard-Aighne maidir le haon cheist i dtaobh bailiocht aon dlí ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreachta'. 'Such company shall not be entitled to question the validity of the policy' is translated as 'ní bheidh an chuideachta san i dteideal dleathacht an pholasaí ... do chonspóid' in s61(5)(a) of the Insurance Act, 1936, with 'ní fheidhmeoidh aon rún den tsórt san chun dochair do dhleathacht éinní a déanfar roimis sin fén Ordú san' translating 'no such resolution shall operate to prejudice the validity of anything previously done under such Order' in s19 of the Adaptation of Enactments Act, 1922. 'Validity of purchases from Under Sheriff' is translated as 'Éifeachtúlacht ceannuochtanna ó Fho-Shirriamh' in the Margin Title of s8 of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1923. Note, finally, that 'or any valid private interest therein' is translated as 'no d'aon cheart dlísteanaigh príobháideach 'na leith' in Article 11 of the 1922 Constitution. See further the commentary on Article 44.4.3<sup>o</sup>.

a tharraingt anuas 'Tarraingt' is the verbal noun of 'tarring', Ó Dónaill translating 'tarring anuas' as (1) 'pull, draw, down' and (2) 'introduce, bring forward', citing 'scéal a tharraingt anuas, to introduce a subject'. Dinneen translates 'tarringim anuas' as 'I pull down, introduce or mention'. The simple verb 'tarring' comes from 'do-srenga', 'draws, drags, pulls', this being based on 'sreng' ('string, cord', Modern Irish 'sreang'), which itself comes from Old Norse 'strengr'. DIL cites 'co motairngend suas ... in lia sain co na drolaibh' ('draws up ...') from the Book of Ballymote, written c. 1400. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'a tharraingt anuas' is the equivalent expression in Irish of 'raise' here, citing 'tharraing sé ceist eile anuas'.

'Where a person other than the Seanad returning officer proposes to raise a question at the completion of the panels' is translated as 'Má bheartaíonn duine seachas ceann comhairimh an tSeanad ceist a tharraingt anuas le linn comhlánú na rollaí' in s39(2) of the Seanad Electoral (Panel Members) Act, 1947. 'An auditor ... may ... raise any such question as is mentioned in the foregoing sub-section' is translated as 'Féadfaidh iniúchóir ... aon cheist den tsórt a luaidhtear sa bhfo-alt san roimhe seo ... do tharrac anuas' in s12(2) of the Local Services (Temporary Economies) Act, 1934. 'Any such question may be raised' is translated as 'Féadfar aon cheist den sórt sin a thógáil' in s166(3) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, with 'Where a question is raised as to the disqualification of a person to receive old age pension' being translated as 'I gcás ina dtógfar ceist i dtaobh duine a dhícháiliú chun pinsean seanaoise a fháil' in the following subsection. 'No question as to its correctness shall be raised on the hearing of an appeal' is translated as 'ní chuirfeá a chirt faoi cheist le linn éisteacht ... a bheith á thabhairt d'achomharc' in s73(2) of the Income Tax Act, 1967. Note, finally, that 'to raise a question' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'ceist do thógaint' in translations for the Department of Agriculture.

trí phléadáil 'Pléadail' is translated as 'plea' in Téarmaí Dlí, this being the verbal noun of 'pléadail', translated as 'plead' in Ó Dónaill, who also gives the sense of 'disputation, wrangle'. Dinneen translates 'pléidéal' as 'act of disputing, wrangling, jibing, pleading', being followed by the abbreviation for 'Ulster'. DIL gives but two citations of 'pléidéal', 'pleading (a suit)', both from O'Molloy's Lucerna Fidelium (1676), this word perhaps being a formation from English 'plead', according to DIL, with 'plé' ('pleading [a suit], arguing, disputing') almost certainly coming from 'plea', according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú.

'Without amendment of any writ, pleading, or other document' is translated as 'gan aon eascaire, pléadail nó doiciméad eile a leasú' in s107(2)(h) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'The repeal of any enactment by this Act shall not ... affect any established jurisdiction, form or course of pleading, practice or procedure derived from the repealed enactment' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfaidh aisghairm aon achtacháin leis an Acht seo ... difear d'aon dlínse, foirm nó cúrsa pléadála, cleachtas nó nós imeachta atá bunaithe agus a tháinig ón achtachán aisghairthe' in s9(5) of the Succession Act, 1965.

Looking at early Acts, 'but nothing in this Act shall prevent any registered decree being pleaded and given in evidence by way of defence or set off in any proceeding' is translated as 'ach ní choisfidh éinní san Acht so aon aithne chlárúithe do phléidéal agus do thabhairt mar fhianaise chun cosanta no mar chur in aghaidh ní eile in aon imeachta' in s5(5) of the Dáil Éireann Courts (Winding-Up) Act, 1923. Note that 'pléidéal' also translates 'plea', with 'In any such action tender of amends before the action was commenced may, in lieu of or in addition to any other plea, be pleaded' being translated as 'In ionad no i dteanta aon phléidéal eile féadfar a phléidéal in aon aicsean den tsórt san gur tairgeadh sásamh sarar tosnuíodh an t-aicsean' in s200(2) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

argóint This headword is translated as 'argument' in Téarmaí Dlí, citing 'argóint dhlíthiúil, legal argument'. Ó Dónaill gives 'argóint' as a verbal noun of 'argóin', the noun 'argóint' being translated simply as 'argument'. 'Argóint' is the form of the headword in Dinneen ('argóint' given as a variant), translated as 'act of arguing', Dinneen also giving 'argúinteacht, argumentation'.

'After hearing argument on the appeal' is translated as 'tar éis argóint ar an achomharc a éisteacht' in s431(1) of the Income Tax Act, 1967, with 'tar éis argóna ar an athchomharc san d'éisteacht' translating 'after hearing argument on such appeal' in s9(1) of the Finance Act, 1932.

Taobh amuigh de chás dá socraítear a mhalairt 'Save as otherwise provided by this Act' is translated as 'Ach amháin mar a fhoráiltear a mhalairt leis an Acht seo' in s3(2)(b) of the Criminal Justice Act, 1990, this same English phrase being translated as 'Ach amháin sa chás dá bhforálar a mhalairt san Acht so' in s157(1) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. See further the commentary on Articles 13.9, 15.11.1<sup>o</sup> and 25.2.1<sup>o</sup>.

beidh dlínse 'The jurisdiction under section 685 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, shall not extend to an application for compensation under this Act' is translated as 'Ní shroichfidh an dlínse faoi alt 685 den Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, chun iarratas ar chúiteamh faoin Acht seo' in s24 of the Malicious Injuries Act, 1981. In s1 of Article 24 of the Second Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1980, 'The jurisdiction of the centre shall extend to any legal dispute arising directly out of an investment' is translated as 'Sroichfidh dlínse an Lárionaid chuig aon díospóid dhlíthiúil a eascróidh go díreach ó infheistíocht'. Finally, in s69(3) of the Land Act, 1923, 'the jurisdiction of the County Court shall extend to any such proceedings' is translated as 'leathfidh údarás na Cúirte Contae chun na n-imeachta san', with 'Provided that the liability of a Clerk of the Crown and Peace ... shall not extend to any such increase in salary' being translated as 'Ach an ceangal a bheidh ar Chléireach Coróinneach agus Síochána ... ní shroisfe sé aon mhéadú tuarastail den tsórt san' in s14 of the Electoral Act, 1923.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú favours the variant 'bainfidh dlínse na hArd-Chúirte le' as being more intelligible than 'sroichfidh dlínse na hArd-Chúirte chun'.

ná eile 'To recover any sum not exceeding £2,500 due to or recoverable by or on behalf of the State whether by way of penalty, debt or otherwise' is translated as 'chun aon suim a ghnóthú nach mó ná £2,500 atá dlite don Stát nó inghnóthaithe ag an Stát nó thar a cheann, cibé acu ar mhodh pionóis, féich nó eile' in s6(a)(iii) of the Courts Act, 1981. 'In relation to an order under this section creating a fisheries region (whether by union, subdivision or otherwise)' is translated as 'i ndáil le hordú faoin alt seo ag cruthú réigiúin iascaigh (trí nascadh, foroinnt nó ar dhóigh eile)' in s10(13) of the Fisheries Act, 1980.

Looking at 'otherwise' in early Acts, 'shall be administered by the District Councils or otherwise as the County Council ... may determine' is translated as 'riarfár é ag na Comhairlí Ceanntair no ar aon chuma eile a cheapfidh an Chomhairle Chontae' in s12 of the 'Galway County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, with 'The Accounts of the Committee shall be audited half-yearly by the Auditor of the Local Government Department, or otherwise in accordance with such Orders or Regulations as may be made by that Department' being translated as 'Iniúchfar Cuntaisí an Choiste uair sa leath-bhliain ag Iniúchóir Roinn an Rialtais Áitiúla no, neachtar acu, do réir pé Orduithe no Rialacháin a dhéanfaidh an Roinn sin' in s15. 'And otherwise to enable the Trust to carry out the purposes of the said section' is translated as 'agus chun a chur ar chumas an Chóluchta ar shlite eile crícheanna an ailt sin do thabhairt chun críche' in the Preamble to the Land Trust Powers Act, 1923. Finally, 'an authorised undertaker shall not divest himself, by transfer or otherwise, of any such power ... as is mentioned' is translated as 'ní scarfidh gnóthaire údaruithe, tré aistriú ná eile, le haon chomhacht ... a luaidhtear' in 70(2) of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1927.

dá socraítear See the commentary on Articles 8.3 and 15.5.2° regarding 'socraigh'; 'dá' is a compound of the preposition 'do' and the relative particle 'a'.

ag féachaint d(o) See the commentary on Article 16.2.4°.

ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

Direct translation

Ach amháin mar a fhoráiltear<sup>1</sup> a mhalairt leis an Airteagal seo, sroichfidh dlínse na hArd-Chúirte chun<sup>2</sup> ceist bhailíocht aon dlí ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo, agus ní ardófar aon cheist den sórt sin (cibé acu trí phléadáil, trí argóint nó eile) in aon Chúirt arna bunú faoin Airteagal seo nó faoi aon Airteagal eile seachas san Ard-Chúirt nó sa Chúirt Uachtarach<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'mar a bhforáiltear'
- 2 'bainfidh dlínse na hArd-Chúirte le'
- 3 'seachas an Ard-Chúirt nó an Chúirt Uachtarach'

ARTICLE 34.3.3° AIRTEAGAL 34.3.3°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní bheidh dlínse ag Cúirt ar bith chun bailíocht dhlí nó fhorála ar bith de dhlí a chur in amhras is dlí a ndearna an tUachtarán an Bille lena aghaidh a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoi Airteagal 26 den Bhunreacht seo, ná chun bailíocht fhorála de dhlí a chur in amhras má rinne an tUachtarán an fhoráil chomhréire sa Bhille le haghaidh an dlí sin a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoin Airteagal sin 26.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

No Court will have jurisdiction to put in doubt the validity of a law or of any provision of a law which is a law that the President submitted the Bill for it to the Supreme Court for decision under Article 26 of this Constitution, nor to put in doubt the validity of a provision of a law if the President submitted the corresponding provision in the Bill for that law to the Supreme Court for decision under that Article 26.

ENGLISH TEXT

No Court whatever shall have jurisdiction to question the validity of a law, or any provision of a law, the Bill for which shall have been referred to the Supreme Court by the President under Article 26 of this Constitution, or to question the validity of a provision of a law where the corresponding provision in the Bill for such law shall have been referred to the Supreme Court by the President under the said Article 26.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'To question' is twice rendered as 'a chur in amhras' ('to put in doubt') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Referred to the Supreme Court' is twice rendered as 'a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí' ('submitted to the Supreme Court for determination/decision') in the Irish text, as we have seen earlier.

Note that this is a new subsection inserted by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941.

Commentary

bailíocht dhlí nó fhorála ar bith de dhlí According to the official standard, 'dlí' would not be lenited here in the genitive case following ‘bailíocht’ – d, t, s are usually not lenited after d, n, t, l, s, according to s6(I) of the chapter entitled ‘Séimhiú agus Urú’ in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, ‘cúirt dúiche’ being the relevant example cited there. One could also argue that ‘forála’, being qualified by ‘ar bith’, should also remain unlenited, the rule being that if followed by an adjective (and ‘ar bith’ here functions as an adjectival phrase) the noun in the genitive case following a feminine noun remains unlenited (see s6(I)(c), ibid, where ‘scian coise duibhe’ is given as an example).

Note that ‘the question of the validity of any law’ is rendered as ‘(maidir leis) an gceist sin bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar aon dlí áirithe’ in the previous subsection – see the commentary on Article 34.3.2°.

a chur in amhras ‘Amhras a chur i rud, to cast doubt on something’ is cited in Ó Dónaill, who translates ‘amhras’ primarily as ‘doubt’, with the secondary sense of ‘suspicion’, citing ‘amhras a tharraingt, a chaitheamh ar dhuine, to draw, cast, suspicion on someone’. Dinneen translates ‘amhras’ as ‘doubt, suspicion, anxiety, distrust’, with ‘sochar an amhrais’ being translated as ‘benefit of the doubt’ in Téarmaí Dlí. The earlier form ‘am(a)ires’, literally ‘unbelief’, is composed of the negative particle ‘am-’ and ‘iress’ (‘faith’), and in Old Irish had the (theological) sense of ‘lack of faith’ (with the sense ‘religious doubt’ in later religious contexts), with the general sense of ‘doubt, disbelief, incredulity’. DIL cites ‘arna tarta amiris ... don lobur hiressach’ (‘lest he bring unfaith ... to the weak believer’) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

‘If any person aggrieved by a compulsory purchase order ... desires to question its validity’ is translated as ‘Aon duine arb éagóir leis ordú ceannaigh éigeantaigh ... agus ar mian leis a bhailíocht a chur i gceist’ in s78(2) of the Housing Act, 1966. ‘To question the validity of such election of such person’ is translated as ‘chun dleathacht an toghacháin sin an duine sin do chonspóid’ in s4(1) of the Local Authorities (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1936. In s17(3) of the Housing (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1931, ‘If any person aggrieved by an order desires to question its validity’ is translated as ‘Más mian le héinne ar a ngoillfidh ordú amhras do chaitheamh ar dhleathacht an ordúithe sin’. ‘Nor shall the verdict thereon be impeached or questioned on account of the return of such person as a juror’ is translated as ‘ná ní déanfar breith an choiste sa triail sin do choiriú ná do chur in amhras mar gheall ar an duine sin do bheith cláruithe mar choisteoir’ in s3(3) of the County Courts (Amendment) Act, 1923. Finally, ‘Certificate of validity questioned’ is translated as ‘Deimhniú ar dhleathacht do theacht i gceist’ in the Margin Title of s132 of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927, with ‘that the validity of any claim in the specification of the patent came in question’ being translated as ‘go dtáinig dleathacht aon éilimh in áireamhacht na paitinne i gceist’ in s132(1).

an fhoráil chomhréire ‘Comhréire’ is the genitive singular of ‘comhréir’ as attributive adjective. Ó Dónaill translates ‘comhréir’ as (1) ‘accord, congruity’, (2) ‘proportion’ – translating ‘i gcomhréir (le)’ as ‘proportioned (to)’ – and (3) ‘syntax’. ‘I gcomhréir le’ is translated as ‘consistent with’ in Téarmaí Dlí. ‘Cómhréir’ is translated as ‘congruity, construction, syntax, concord, analogy; uniformity’ in

Dinneen, while DIL translates ‘comríar’ as ‘submission, control, attendance’, this headword being based on ‘ríar’, translated principally as ‘will, wish, demand, request, decision’ in DIL.

‘As a reference to the corresponding provision of this Act’ is translated as ‘mar thagairt don fhoráil chomhréire den Acht seo’ in s124(4) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, as in s97(5) of the Building Societies Act, 1976. ‘A reference to the corresponding provision’ is translated as ‘tagairt don fhoráil chomhréireach’ in s24(1)(b) of the Finance (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1968, with ‘there shall be substituted a reference to the corresponding provision contained in Part II’ being translated as ‘cuirfar tagairt don fhoráil chó-réire atá i gCuid II’ in the Third Schedule to the Finance Act, 1929. See the commentary on Article 19.1, where ‘comhrollaí’ expresses ‘corresponding panels’, for early citations from the Acts.

a chur faoi bhreith ‘Cás a chur faoi bhreith duine’ is translated as ‘to submit a case to someone for determination’ in Ó Dónaill. DIL cites ‘ní nár dhuit dol fár mbreithne’ (‘... to yield to our judgment’) from the seventeenth-century ‘Contention of the Bards’. See the commentary on Articles 15.11.1°, 26.3.1° and 34.3.1° regarding ‘breith’ and the commentary on Article 26 regarding ‘a chur faoi bhreith’.

Standardised Irish text

Ní bheidh dlínse ag Cúirt ar bith chun bailíocht dlí nó forála ar bith de dhlí a chur in amhras is dlí a ndearna an tUachtarán an Bille lena aghaidh a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoi Airteagal 26 den Bhunreacht seo, ná chun bailíocht fhorála de dhlí a chur in amhras má rinne an tUachtarán an fhoráil chomhréire sa Bhille le haghaidh an dlí sin a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí faoin Airteagal sin 26.

Direct translation

Ní bheidh dlínse ag Cúirt ar bith chun bailíocht dlí, nó aon fhorála de dhlí, a cheistiú, a mbeidh an Bille lena aghaidh tarchurtha<sup>1</sup> chun na Cúirte Uachtaraí ag an Uachtarán faoi Airteagal 26 den Bhunreacht seo, nó chun bailíocht forála dlí<sup>2</sup> a cheistiú a mbeidh an fhoráil chomhréire sa Bhille le haghaidh an dlí sin tarchurtha<sup>1</sup> chun na Cúirte Uachtaraí ag an Uachtarán faoin Airteagal 26 a dúradh<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘curtha’
- 2 ‘forála de dhlí’
- 3 ‘faoin Airteagal sin 26’

ARTICLE 34.3.4° AIRTEAGAL 34.3.4°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Beidh ar na Cúirteanna Céadchéime, fairis sin, Cúirteanna ag a mbeidh dlínse theoranta áitiúil maille le ceart achomhairc ina n-aghaidh faoi mar a chinnfear le dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Among the Courts of First Instance, moreover, will be Courts which will have limited local jurisdiction along with a right of appeal against them as will be determined by law.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Courts of First Instance shall also include Courts of local and limited jurisdiction with a right of appeal as determined by law.

Note that Article 34.3.4° was originally Article 34.3.3° before the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'With a right of appeal' is expressed as 'maille le ceart achomhairc ina n-aghaidh' ('along with a right of appeal against them') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Courts of local and limited jurisdiction' is expressed as 'Cúirteanna ag a mbeidh dlínse teoranta áitiúil' ('Courts which will have limited local jurisdiction') in the Irish text, though this can also be read as 'Courts which will have limited and local jurisdiction', the conjunction 'agus' sometimes not being written between two qualifying adjectives.
- 3 'The Courts ... shall include' is expressed as 'Beidh ar na Cúirteanna' ('Among the Courts will be') in the Irish text, as we saw in Articles 34.2 and 34.3.
- 4 'Also' is expressed as 'fairis sin', 'along with that', as we have seen in some earlier Articles; this phrase is preceded and followed by commas in the Irish text alone.

Note that Article 64 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

The Courts of First Instance shall include a High Court ..., and also Courts of local and limited jurisdiction, with a right of appeal as determined by law. Ar na Cúirteanna Céad-Chéime beidh Ard-Chúirt, ... agus fós Cúirteanna go mbeidh a n-údarás go háitiúil agus go teoranta maille le ceart aith-éisteachta mar a cinnfear le dlí.

Commentary

faoi mar 'Faoi mar' is translated as 'according as' by Ó Dónaill s.v. 'mar', citing 'faoi mar atáimid ag dul ar aghaidh, at the rate at which we are progressing', with the conjunction 'mar' being translated as 'as'. Ó Dónaill s.v. 'faoi', translates 'faoi mar' as 'as if, as', citing 'faoi mar a bheadh fearg air, as if he were angry' and 'faoi mar ba ghnáth leis, as was usual for him'. Dinneen gives 'féibh mar', 'fé mar' and 'fá mar' as 'strengthened forms' of 'mar', translating these forms as 'just or exactly as', citing 'féibh mar léighear, as we read'. The original sense of 'feb' may be 'way, manner, kind', the meaning implicit in the adverbial use, according to DIL, the only form in the Glosses being the dative singular 'feib'/'fíb' (with force of a relative adverb), which Thurneysen regards as the dative singular of 'fui' ('quality, worth'). DIL cites the following from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian as an example of the dative in the sense of 'as, according as, in like manner as': 'feib fondúair som la auctora' ('as he has found it in authors'). 'Mar' comes from 'immar', which is not found in the Old Irish Glosses, DIL citing examples of 'mar' as a conjunction in the sense of 'as, like as' ('expressing manner or implying a comparison') from Leabhar na hUídhre (written in Clonmacnois c. 1100) onwards.

Turning to the Acts, in s208(1) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, 'In the case of a person who has no means as determined by this Chapter' is translated as 'I gcás duine gan acmhainn mar a bheidh cinnte leis an gCaibidil seo'. 'Order him to pay ... a sum not exceeding the full value of the article as determined by the court' is translated as 'a ordú dó suim nach lú ná luach iomlán an earra, mar a chinnfidh an chúirt é, a íoc' in s25(2) of the Pawnbrokers Act, 1964. Finally, 'to pay in respect of the dwelling a rent equal to the lawful rent of the dwelling as determined by the said order' is translated as 'cíos a íoc i leith na teaghaise is comhionann le cíos dleathach na teaghaise mar a cinneadh sin leis an ordú sin' in s23(1)(c)(iii) of the Rent Restrictions Act, 1960. See Article 64 of the 1922 Constitution above.

áitiúil This adjective is translated as 'local' in Ó Dónaill, 'áiteamhail' being similarly translated in Dinneen. 'Áitiúil' is based on 'áit', 'átt' being perhaps the original form of this word, DIL translating 'áitt' as 'place, situation, position, dwelling', citing 'co cach inchruth a thige inna átaib córaib' ('with all the furniture of the house in its proper position') from the law-text Críth Gablach, compiled in the opening years of the eighth century. Note, in passing, that 'locally' is translated as 'ina cheantar féin' in Iris an Phoist, 14/3/28, with 'locally' in the sense of 'from local office' being translated as 'ón oifig áitiúil' in Iris an Phoist, 28/4/26. 'If work is done locally' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'má dintear an obair cois baile' in translations for the Department of Finance.

maille le This phrase is translated as 'with, along with' in Ó Dónaill, as 'together with, along with, by means of, because' in Dinneen – see the commentary on Articles 23 and 10.1.

Beidh ar See the commentary on Article 34.2.

fairis sin See the commentary on Article 10.4.

dlínse See the commentary on Articles 3 and 34.3.2°.

teoranta See the commentary on Article 34.1.

Direct translation

Ar na Cúirteanna Céadchéime beidh<sup>1</sup> Cúirteanna dlínse áitiúla teoranta<sup>2</sup> chomh maith<sup>3</sup> a mbeidh ceart achomhairc acu mar a chinnfear le dlí.

Variants

- 1 'Áireofar ar na Cúirteanna Céadchéime'
- 2 'Cúirteanna dlínse áitiúla agus teoranta'
- 3 'chomh maith, 'freisin'

ARTICLE 34.4 AIRTEAGAL 34.4

TÉACS GAEILGE

1° An Chúirt Uachtarach is teideal don Chúirt Achomhairc Dheiridh.

- 2° An Príomh-Bhreitheamh is teideal d'uachtarán na Cúirte Uachtaraí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

- 1° It is the Supreme Court which is the title of the Court of Final Appeal. / The Supreme Court is the title of the Court of Final Appeal.
2° It is the Chief Justice which is the title of the president of the Supreme Court. / The Chief Justice is the title of the president of the Supreme Court.

ENGLISH TEXT

- 1° The Court of Final Appeal shall be called the Supreme Court.
2° The president of the Supreme Court shall be called the Chief Justice.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Shall be called' is expressed as 'is teideal do', 'is the title of', in the Irish text.

Note that Article 64 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

These Courts shall comprise Courts of First Instance and a Court of Final Appeal to be called the Supreme Court. Beidh ar na Cúirteanna so Cúirteanna Céad-Chéime agus Cúirt Aith-éisteachta Deire dá ngairmfear an Chúirt Uachtarach.

Commentary

is teideal do 'Teideal' is translated as 'title' in Ó Dónaill and in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 28.5.1°. 'Titul' is translated in DIL as (a) 'title, heading', (b) 'epithet, title', citing 'gairm 7 teidiol Chríost' from Keating's seventeenth-century Eochair-sgiath an Aifrinn, and (c) 'prescriptive right, title (in legal sense)'. The phrase 'is teideal do' parallels the common 'is ainm do'.

In s2(1) of the Sixth Amendment of the Constitution (Adoption) Act, 1979, for example, following earlier Acts amending the Constitution, 'The amendment of the Constitution effected by this Act shall be called the Sixth Amendment of the Constitution' is translated as 'An Séú Leasú ar an mBunreacht a bhéarf ar an leasú a dhéantar ar an mBunreacht leis an Acht seo'. 'A body established under the said subsection (1) shall be called and known by such title as may be specified in the establishment order' is translated as 'Is é cibé teideal a shonrófar san ordú bunaithe a thabharfar ar chomhlacht, agus a ghairfear de chomhlacht, a bhunófar faoin bhfo-alt sin (1)' in s3(5) of the Local Government Services (Corporate Bodies) Act, 1971. In s13(1) of the Health Act, 1970, 'There shall be appointed ... a person who shall be called and shall act as the chief executive officer of the board' is translated as 'Ceapfar ... duine ar a dtabharfar príomh-oifigeach feidhmiúcháin an bhoird agus a ghníomhóidh mar phríomh-oifigeach feidhmiúcháin don bhord'. Finally, 'The central office shall be under the management and control of an officer who shall be called the Registrar of Titles' is translated as 'Beidh an phríomhoifig faoi bhainistíocht agus urlámhas oifigigh dá ngairfear Cláraitheoir na dTeideal' in s9(1) of the Registration of Title Act, 1964.

An Príomh-Bhreitheamh See the commentary on Articles 14.2.1° and 31.2.

Direct translation

- 1° An Chúirt Uachtarach a thabharfar ar an gCúirt Achomhairc Dheiridh.
2° An Príomh-Bhreitheamh a thabharfar ar uachtarán na Cúirte Uachtaraí.

ARTICLE 34.4.3° AIRTEAGAL 34.4.3°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Taobh amuigh de cibé eisceachtaí agus faoi chuimsiú cibé rialacha a ordófar le dlí, beidh dlínse achomhairc ag an gCúirt Uachtarach ar bhreitheanna uile na hArd-Chúirte agus, fairis sin, ar na breitheanna sin ó chúirteanna eile a ordófar le dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Apart from whatever exceptions and within the constraint/scope of whatever rules that will be enjoined by law, the Supreme Court will have appellate jurisdiction on all the judgements of the High Court and, moreover, on those judgements by other courts that will be enjoined by law.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Supreme Court shall, with such exceptions and subject to such regulations as may be prescribed by law, have appellate jurisdiction from all decisions of the High Court, and shall also have appellate jurisdiction from such decisions of other courts as may be prescribed by law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Regulations' is expressed as 'rialacha', 'rules', in the Irish text.
- 'Appellate jurisdiction from' is expressed as 'dlínse achomhairc ... ar' ('appellate jurisdiction on') in the Irish text, with 'appellate jurisdiction' being repeated in the English text alone.
- 'As may be prescribed by law' is twice expressed as 'a ordófar le dlí' ('as will be enjoined by law') in the Irish text, as we have seen earlier.
- 'With such exceptions' is expressed as 'Taobh amuigh de cibé eisceachtaí' ('apart from whatever exceptions') in the Irish text, 'such regulations' being expressed as 'cibé rialacha' ('whatever rules').
- 'And shall also' is expressed as 'agus, fairis sin,' ('and, moreover,') in the Irish text, the comma preceding the 'and' in the English text, no comma following 'also'.
- 'Subject to' is expressed as 'faoi chuimsiú' ('within the constraint/scope of') in the Irish text, as we have seen in many earlier Articles.

Note that Article 66 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

The Supreme Court of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) shall, with such exceptions (not including cases which involve questions as to the validity of any law) and subject to such regulations as may be prescribed by law, have appellate jurisdiction from all decisions of the High Court. Gan dochar do pé rialacha agus maille le pé eisceachtaí a cinnfear le dlí (lasmuich d'aon chás do thabharfadh ceist dlísteacht aon dlí anuas) beidh údarás aith-éisteachta ag Cúirt Uachtarach Shaorstáit Éireann ar gach breith den Ard-Chúirt.

Commentary

dlínse achomhairc This phrase is translated as 'appellate jurisdiction' in Tearmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, 'achomhairc' ('appeal') as an attributive genitive – see the commentary on Article 34.2 regarding 'achomharc'. 'With such appellate jurisdiction as is prescribed by the Constitution' is translated as 'agus pé údarás achomhairc aici a horduítear leis an mBunreacht' in s18 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. 'Whether in a court of first instance or a court having appellate jurisdiction in respect of such proceedings' is translated as 'pé'ca i gcúirt chéad-chéime é no i gcúirt go ndlínse athchomharcach maidir leis na himeachta san' in s2(3) of the Electricity (Supply) (Amendment) Act, 1935. 'No appeal from any order made under subsection (5) shall be brought after the expiration of one month from the date of perfection of the order' is translated as 'Ní thionscnófar aon achomharc i gcoinne aon ordaithe faoi fho-alt (5) tar éis mí a bheith caite ón dáta ar cuireadh an t-ordú i gcrích' in s105(7) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'An order made by a court on appeal from another court shall be treated as if it had been made by that other court' is translated as 'déileálfar le hordú a rinne cúirt ar achomharc ó chúirt eile ionann is dá mba í an chúirt eile sin a rinne é' in s1(2) of the Family Law (Protection of Spouses and Children) Act, 1981.

a ordófar See the commentary on Article 27.2. 'Such court established under this Constitution as may be established by law' is rendered as 'cibé cúirt do bunuighthead faoin mBunreacht so agus a ordóchar le dligthead' in the new subsection 2° of Article 41.3 proposed by the Tenth Amendment of the Constitution Bill, 1986 [as outlined in s1 of Part II of the Electoral (Amendment) Act, 1986] to be substituted for Article 41.3.2°. 'Or such other sum as may be prescribed by the Central Bank in regulations' is translated as 'nó cibé suim eile a fhorordóidh an Banc Ceannais i rialacháin' in s17(10) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'Within such period as may be prescribed by regulations under this section' is translated as 'laistigh de cibé tréimhse a fhorordófar le rialacháin faoin alt seo' in s11(1) of the Maternity Protection of Employees Act, 1981.

eisceachtaí The plural form of 'eisceacht', translated as 'exception' in Tearmaí Dlí, Ó Dónaill and Dinneen, DIL giving examples of 'uisgeacht' from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death, stating that the first edition of that work had 'eisceacht'. See the commentary on Article 11.

rialacha See the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding 'riail' and see the commentary on Article 12.5 regarding 'rialáigh', 'regulate'. 'Rialachán' translates 'regulation' in the modern Acts. Note that De Bhaldraithe, while translating this sense of 'regulation' as 'rialachán', cites 'hospital regulations, rialacha ospidéil'.

faoi chuimsiú See the commentary on Articles 12.5 and 18.7.2°.

fairis sin See the commentary on Article 10.4.

Direct translation

Beidh ag an gCúirt Uachtarach, leis na heisceachtaí sin agus faoi réir na rialachán sin<sup>1</sup> a fhorordófar le dlí, dlínse achomhairc ó chinntí uile na hArd-Chúirte, agus beidh dlínse achomhairc aici chomh maith<sup>2</sup> ó na cinntí sin<sup>3</sup> le<sup>4</sup> cúirteanna eile a fhorordófar le dlí.

Variants

- 1 'le cibé eisceachtaí agus faoi réir cibé rialachán'
- 2 'freisin'
- 3 'ó cibé cinntí'
- 4 'de chuid'

ARTICLE 34.4.4° AIRTEAGAL 34.4.4°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní cead aon dlí a achtú a chuirfeadh ar an taobh amuigh de dhlinse achomhairc na Cúirte Uachtaraí cásanna ina mbeadh ceisteanna le réiteach i dtaobh bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar aon dlí, ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is not permitted to enact any law which would put beyond the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court cases in which questions needed to be settled regarding any law's having validity or not, having regard to the provisions of this Constitution.

ENGLISH TEXT

No law shall be enacted excepting from the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court cases which involve questions as to the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of this Constitution.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Cases which involve questions' is expressed as 'cásanna ina mbeadh ceisteanna le réiteach' ('cases in which questions needed to be settled') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Excepting from the ... jurisdiction' is expressed as 'a chuirfeadh ar an taobh amuigh de dhlinse ...' ('which would put on the outside of the ... jurisdiction') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Questions as to the validity of any law' is expressed as 'ceisteanna ... i dtaobh bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar aon dlí' ('questions regarding any law having or not having validity') in the Irish text, this Irish expression being also found earlier.

- 4 'No ... shall be' is expressed as 'Ní cead' ('It is not permitted') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Commentary

ar an taobh amuigh de 'Taobh amuigh de' is generally used, without preceding article, in the sense of 'outside of', 'apart from', as we have seen in the previous subsection – 'Taobh amuigh de cibé eisceachtaí', literally 'Apart from such exceptions'. Ó Dónaill cites 'taobh amuigh den gheata, outside the gate' and 'taobh amuigh de sin, apart from that', translating 'ar an taobh amuigh de' as 'at most'. Ó Dónaill translates 'an taobh amuigh' as 'the outside, the exterior', citing 'bíodh an taobh amuigh agat, get out'. 'Ar an dtaobh amuigh de' is translated as 'on the outside, at most' in Dinneen, who cites 'taobh amuigh de sin, not counting that'. DIL cites 'ataid don taobh amuigh don Eaglais' from Parrhas an Anma (1645). See the commentary on Articles 12.3.3° and 13.9 regarding 'taobh amuigh/istigh'. Modern Irish 'amuigh' comes from Middle Irish 'ammaig', earlier 'immaig', literally 'in the plain' ('mag', Modern Irish 'maigh'/'má' ('plain') as in 'Maigh Nuad', 'Maynooth') – in early Irish laws, 'in fer amuigh' (literally, 'the man outside') refers to the 'plaintiff'. See the commentary on Articles 21.2.2° and 48 respectively regarding 'istigh' and 'amach'.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'except' as 'eiscim, déanaim eisceacht de, fágaim amach, fágaim as', translating 'present company excepted' as 'ach amháin a bhfuil láithreach'. 'Power of High Court ... to except innocent act from being illegal practice' is translated as 'Comhacht ag an Ard-Chúirt ... gníomh nea-chiontach d'eisceacht o bheith ina chleacht nea-dhleathach' in the Margin Title of s28 of the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923. 'This Act applies to every company which ... is not excepted from this Act by the next sub-section' is translated as 'Baineann an tAcht so le gach cuideachtain ... ná dintar í eisceacht ón Acht so leis an gcéad fho-alt eile' in s1(1) of the Companies (Re-Constitution of Records) Act, 1924.

Looking at modern Acts, 'the regulations may provide ... for excepting from the obligation to pay levy any specified class or classes of persons' is translated as 'féadfaidh na rialacháin foráil a dhéanamh ... maidir le haon aicme nó aicmí sonraithe daoine ... a eisiamh ón oibleagáid tobhach a íoc' in s12(6) of the Bord Glas Act, 1990. In s56(1) of the Copyright Act, 1963, 'make regulations excepting from the provisions of this subsection ... publications wholly or partly in the nature of trade advertisements' is translated as 'rialacháin a dhéanamh ag eisceadh foilseachán ó fhorálacha an fho-ailt seo ... is foilseacháin arb éard iad ar fad nó go formhór cineál fógraí trádála'.

Ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

de dhlínse achomhairc See the commentary on the previous subsection.

réiteach See the commentary on Article 23.1.2°.

bail a bheith nó gan a bheith See the commentary on Articles 15.4.2° and 34.3.2°.

ag féachaint d(o) See the commentary on Article 16.4.2°.

Direct translation

Ní dhéanfar aon dlí a achtú<sup>1</sup> a dhéanfadh cásanna lena ngabhann ceisteanna i dtaobh bhailíocht<sup>2</sup> aon dlí ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo a eisiamh<sup>3</sup> ó dhlínse achomhairc na Cúirte Uachtaraí.<sup>4</sup>

Variants

- 1 'Ní achtófar aon dlí'
- 2 'bailíochta'
- 3 'eisceadh'
- 4 'Ní dhéanfar aon dlí a achtú a dhéanfadh eisceacht, maidir le dhlínse achomhairc na Cúirte Uachtaraí, de chásanna lena ngabhann ceisteanna i dtaobh bhailíocht aon dlí ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo.'

ARTICLE 34.4.5° AIRTEAGAL 34.4.5°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Is é a chraolfas breith na Cúirte Uachtaraí ar cheist i dtaobh bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar dhlí ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo ná an duine sin de bhreithiúna na Cúirte sin a cheapfaidh an Chúirt sin chuige sin, agus ní cead tuairim ar bith eile ar an gceist sin, ag aontú nó ag easaontú leis an mbreith sin, a chraoladh ná ní cead a nochtadh tuairim ar bith eile den sórt sin a bheith ann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

He who will announce the judgement of the Supreme Court on a question regarding a law's having validity or not having regard to the provisions of this Constitution is that one of the judges of that Court which that Court will appoint for that (purpose), and it is not permitted to announce any other opinion on that question, agreeing or disagreeing with that decision, nor is it permitted to disclose there being any other opinion of that kind.

ENGLISH TEXT

The decision of the Supreme Court on a question as to the validity of a law having regard to the provisions of this Constitution shall be pronounced by such one of the judges of that Court as that Court shall direct, and no other opinion on such question, whether assenting or dissenting, shall be pronounced, nor shall the existence of any such other opinion be disclosed.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Pronounce' is rendered by 'craol', the term generally used today to translate 'broadcast'; 'craol' also has the sense of 'announce, proclaim'; 'I pronounce (judgement)' is translated as 'fógraím' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'As that Court shall direct' is rendered in the Irish text as 'a cheapfaidh an Chúirt sin chuige sin', 'which that Court shall appoint for that (purpose)'.
- 3 'A question as to the validity of a law' is rendered in the Irish text as 'ceist i dtaobh bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar dhlí' ('a question regarding a law having validity or not'), the same phraseology as in the previous section.
- 4 'No ... shall' is again rendered as 'Ní cead' ('It is not permitted') in the Irish text, as we have seen in the previous subsection and in some earlier Articles.

Note that this subsection was inserted into the text following the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941.

Commentary

a chraolfas The special relative form of the future tense of 'craol' – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special relative in '-s'. Ó Dónaill translates 'craol' as 'announce, proclaim', citing 'rud a chraoladh ón altóir, to announce something from the altar', with secondary ('wireless telephony and telegraphy') sense of 'broadcast', this being the usual current usage of 'craol'. Dinneen translates 'craolaim' as 'I announce, especially from the altar or pulpit', followed by the abbreviation for 'Waterford' and referring the reader to 'creidhill', 'a knell', 'creidhill báis' being translated as 'the death-knell; death, news of death'; 'a proclamation' is also given as a sense of 'creidhill', Dinneen referring to 'do chrael (chraol) sé ón altóir é, he announced it from the altar', giving Most Rev. Dr Michael Sheehan, Sean-chaint na nDéise (1906) as source. DIL does not appear to give the verb 'craol' as a headword, and gives English 'knell' as the source of 'creidil'; DIL also has a headword 'craidail', translated as 'proclamation, announcement', referring the reader to English 'cry' as a possible source.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú has kindly written the following note (which is translated here) on 'craol':

Apparently this is another unhistorical form (see the note on 'aiceanta' in the commentary on Article 10.1). It would appear that it is from Dinneen that the drafters and others of that generation took the word. Dinneen got it from Mícheál Ó Sióthcháin, but 'craol' is the form he had in Sean-Chaint na nDéise, and Sean-Chaint na nDéise II shows that it was pronounced 'craeil' /kre:l'/; that was also the form of the verbal noun.

As recognised by DIL, it probably contains some trace of English 'cry', in the sense of 'proclaim publicly' ('fógairt os ard'). Conchobhar Ó Sióthcháin has a clear illustration of that range of sense and terminology in his account of his first trip to Skibbereen:

'A Mhuire! arsa mise 'godé a chuir an bhéic as?' 'Arú', arsa duine de sna fearaibh, 'sin é an craidhire, agus gach uair a bhuaifidh an clog geobhaidh sé thríd an sráid ag callaireacht ar an gcuma san, go maidean gheal amáireach ...'.

Of the two words, 'craidhire' (< 'cry' + (a)ire) and 'callaire(acht)' (< 'call' + aire), the first one has received little formal recognition, though the second one is fully recognised. Most likely it is following the diversification of the sense of 'callaire' that 'craidhire' was introduced in the particular sense and, therefore, also that it appeared to lexicographers of this time that 'callaire' was more native ('níos tíorachasúla'). 'Craobh-scaoileadh' is the older term in this range of sense – 'go bhfuil an reacht go foirleathan arna chraobh-scaoileadh 7 arna fhógra' (TBGB, l. 3488-9); 'cryer'/'creidher' is found in the same clause with 'craobh-scaoileadh' in Pairlement Chloinne Tomás ('tugsad rena gcaobhscaoileadh don chreidher', ll. 1561-2, Williams) – and perhaps some trace of this, in sense and form, is found in the Decies 'craeil'. It is clear, at any rate, that Mícheál Ó Sióthcháin, and perhaps his informants, recognised some connection between the two words.

Turning to the Acts, 'as security for the satisfaction of any judgement which may eventually be pronounced by a Court having jurisdiction so to decide' is translated as 'mar urrús chun aon bhreithiúnas a shásamh a fhógróidh Cúirt faoi dheoidh ag a mbeidh dlínse cinneadh a dhéanamh amhlaidh' in s2 of Article 7 of the First Schedule to the Jurisdiction of Courts (Maritime Conventions) Act, 1989. 'Until ... the date upon which the decision of the Court is pronounced' is translated as 'go dtí an dáta a bhfógrófar breith na Cúirte' in s21(5)(b) of the Fire Services Act, 1981. See further the commentary on Article 26.2.1<sup>o</sup> where 'breith a thabhairt' expresses 'pronounce a decision'; see the commentary on Articles 13.3.2<sup>o</sup> and 25.1 regarding 'fógair'.

ag aontú nó ag easaontú See the commentary on Article 26.2.2<sup>o</sup>. 'Aontú' is the verbal noun of 'aontaigh', 'easaontú' being the verbal noun of 'easaontaigh', the latter verb being composed of the negative prefix 'eas-' (generally indicating 'a ceasing to be what the second element implies', according to Dinneen, as distinguished from the prefixes 'an-', 'éa-' or 'dí-') combined with 'aontaigh'. 'Aontaím' is translated as 'I assent' in Téarmaí Díl, 'aontuighim' being translated as 'I unite, assent to, consent, agree' in Dinneen, who translates the verbal noun 'easaontughadh' as 'act of disagreeing', giving 'schism' as the sense of the noun 'easaontughadh'. Ó Dónaill translates 'easaontaigh' with the preposition 'le' as 'disagree (with), dissent (from)', citing 'easaontú le duine, to disagree with someone' and 'easaontú le teagasc, to dissent from a doctrine'. 'Aontaigh' followed by 'le' is translated as 'assent, agree' by Ó Dónaill. The earlier 'oentaigid', based on 'oen' ('one'), is translated principally as 'unites, joins with, consorts with, makes one' in DIL, 'aentochmaid le', from one early source, being translated as 'we shall be one with thee'. DIL cites only one example of the verb 'esóentaigid' ('disagrees, opposes'): 'ro chinnsat a comairli 7 nir easaentaig in t-ardflaith 'na n-agaid sein' ('... did not dissent from them)', from the Banquet of Dún na nGedh and the Battle of Magh Rath.

'The decision of the Court shall be pronounced by the chairman or such other member as the chairman shall authorise for the purpose, and no other opinion, whether assenting or dissenting, shall be pronounced nor shall the existence of any such other opinion be disclosed' is translated as 'Is é an cathaoirleach nó pé comhalta eile a údarós an cathaoirleach chuige sin a chraolfas breith na Cúirte, agus ní craolfar aon tuairim eile, ag aontú nó ag easaontú leis an mbreith sin, ná ní nochtfar tuairim ar bith eile den tsórt sin a bheith ann' in s20(4) of the Industrial Relations Act, 1946. Note in passing from the early Acts that 'and the verdict of such nine members or upwards shall be taken and recorded as the verdict of the jury, without disclosure of dissentients, if any such there be' is translated as 'agus déanfar breith-fhocal an naonúir sin no níos mó do thógaint agus do chur ar breaca mar bhreith-fhocal ón gcoiste, gan scéith ar an méid nár aontuigh léi, má bhí a leithéidí ann' in s95 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. 'And every person having such turbary rights shall have the like rights of making objections to and of expressing assent to or dissent from the scheme as are conferred on such occupiers by virtue of this Act' is translated as 'agus gach duine ag á mbeidh cirt mhóna den tsórt san beidh aige na cirt chéanna a bronntar ar na sealbhairí sin de bhua an Achta so chun cur i gcoinnbh na scéime no chun a rá ce'ca aontúid leis an scéim no ná haontúid' in s18(c) of the Arterial Drainage (Minor Schemes) Act, 1928, with 'for the purpose of determining whether the number of dissents from the scheme is or is not sufficient to prevent the confirmation of the scheme' being translated as 'chun a dhéanamh amach ce'ca is leor no nách leor chun cosc do chur le daingniú na scéime an líon daoine ná haontóidh leis an scéim' in s18(d).

a cheapfaidh 'The amendment must be directed to' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'ní foláir an leasú do bheith ceaptha chun' in the 1926 Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann, with 'the amendment must be directed to omitting words' being translated as 'caithfidh an leasú bheith ar intinn focail do leigeant ar lár'. 'I am directed by ... to acknowledge receipt of your letter' is cited as being translated as 'dubhairt ... liom a rádh leat go bhfuair sé do litir' in translations for the Department of Industry and Commerce. 'I direct (jury)' is translated as 'treoraím' in Téarmaí Dlí.

Looking at modern Acts, 'under the control of such other person ... as the court shall direct' is translated as 'faoi urlámh cibé duine eile ... a ordóidh an chúirt' in s40(1)(b) of the Status of Children Act, 1987. 'Such notice of an application under this section as the High Court shall direct' is translated as 'cibé fógra i dtaobh iarratas faoin alt seo a ordóidh an Ard-Chúirt' in s21(3) of the Plant Varieties (Proprietary Rights) Act, 1980.

See the commentary on Articles 6.1, 13.1.1° and 15.10 where 'ceap' respectively expresses 'designate', 'appoint' and 'attach'. Note that 'stiúir' expresses 'direct' in Article 12.8 and 'ordaigh' renders direct in Article 40.4.4° – see the commentary on that Article for further examples of official translations of 'direct'.

nochtadh See the commentary on Articles 26.2.2° and 40.6.1°i and note that 'nochtaim' is translated as 'I disclose' in Téarmaí Dlí.

tuairim See the commentary on Article 40.6.1°i.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Is é nó is í a chraolfaidh breith na Cúirte Uachtaraí ar cheist i dtaobh bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar dhlí ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo ná an duine sin de bhreithiúna na Cúirte sin a cheapfaidh an Chúirt sin chuige sin, agus ní cead tuairim ar bith eile ar an gceist sin, ag aontú nó ag easaontú leis an mbreith sin, a chraoladh ná ní cead a nochtadh tuairim ar bith eile den sórt sin a bheith ann.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh cibé duine de bhreithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí a ordóidh an Chúirt sin breith na Cúirte sin a fhógairt ar cheist maidir le bailíocht<sup>1</sup> dlí ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo,<sup>2</sup> agus ní fhógrófar aon tuairim eile ar an gceist sin, cibé acu ag aontú nó ag easaontú,<sup>3</sup> ná ní nochtfaí aon tuairim eile den sórt sin<sup>4</sup> a bheith ann.

Variants

- 1 'faoi bhailíocht'
- 2 'Déanfaidh cibé duine de bhreithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí a ordóidh an Chúirt sin breith na Cúirte sin ar cheist maidir le bailíocht dlí, ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo, a fhógairt.'

3 'cibé acu ag aontú nó ag easaontú leis an tuairim sin.'

4 'a leithéid sin eile de thuairim'

ARTICLE 34.4.6<sup>O</sup> AIRTEAGAL 34.4.6<sup>O</sup>

TÉACS GAELGE

Ní bheidh dul thar breith na Cúirte Uachtaraí i gcás ar bith.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

There will be no passing over / bypassing the judgement of the Supreme Court in any case.

ENGLISH TEXT

The decision of the Supreme Court shall in all cases be final and conclusive.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The decision ... shall be final and conclusive' is expressed as 'Ní bheidh dul thar breith' ('there will be no passing over / bypassing the judgement') in the Irish text.
- 2 'In all cases' is expressed as 'i gcás ar bith', 'in any case', in the Irish text.

Note that Article 66 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

The decision of the Supreme Court shall in all cases be final and conclusive .... Ní bheidh dul thar breith na Cúirte Uachtaraíge in aon chás.

Commentary

dul thar breith na Cúirte 'Breith' would be lenited here according to the official standard, 'thar' leniting except in the case of adverbial phrases like 'thar bráid, thar sáile', etc. – see An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, s4(e) of the chapter entitled 'Séimhiú agus Urú'. According to Ó Dónaill, 'thar' lenites in qualified or particularised references, citing 'dul thar dhuine sa tsráid, to pass someone on the street'.

'Dul' is the verbal noun of 'téigh'. Ó Dónaill translates 'téigh thar' principally (literally) as 'go, pass, over', giving 'exceed' and 'surpass' as secondary senses, citing 'ná téigh thar ceart, don't go beyond what is right' and 'ní féidir dul thairis, it can't be surpassed' respectively – Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that this latter sense is not the sense involved in the present Article 34.4.6°. Ó Dónaill also cites 'níl dul thairis agat, you can't evade it' s.v. 'thar'. Dinneen cites 'ní raghainn thársta, I would not ask any better than these'. DIL gives 'exceeds, surpasses' as a secondary sense of 'téit tar', citing 'ní thét a ccu dar cona' ('their Hound outstrips hounds no more') from the Wasting Sickness of Cú Chulainn in Leabhar na hUídhre (written in Clonmacnois c. 1100), giving examples of the senses 'goes over, across, past' and 'transgresses, violates (a law, etc.)' from the Glosses of the eighth and ninth centuries onwards.

'Conclusive evidence' and 'conclusive presumption' are translated respectively as 'fianaise dochloíte' and 'toimhde dochloíte' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'final order' being translated as 'ordú críochnaitheach'. 'The decision of the local pension committee ... shall be final and conclusive' is translated as 'Is cinneadh críochnaitheach, dochloíte cinneadh an choiste phinsin áitiúil' in s164(2) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, for example. See further the commentary on Article 22.2.1°.

Standardised Irish text

Ní bheidh dul thar bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí i gcás ar bith.

Direct translation

Cinneadh críochnaitheach, dochloíte<sup>1</sup> a bheidh i gcinneadh na Cúirte Uachtaraí i ngach cás.<sup>2</sup>

Variants

- 1 'críochnaitheach dochloíte'
- 2 'Is cinneadh críochnaitheach, dochloíte cinneadh na Cúirte Uachtaraí i ngach cás.'

ARTICLE 34.5.1° AIRTEAGAL 34.5.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Gach duine a cheapfar chun bheith ina bhreitheamh faoin mBunreacht seo ní foláir dó an dearbhú seo a leanas a dhéanamh agus a lámh a chur leis:

"I láthair Dia na nUilechumhacht táimse, , á ghealladh agus á dhearbhu go sollúnta agus go firinneach go gcomhlíonfad go cuí agus go dílis, chomh maith agus is eol agus is cumas dom, oifig an Phríomh-Bhreithimh (nó de réir mar a oireas) gan eagla gan claonadh, gan bá gan drochaigne chun duine ar bith, agus go gcumhdód Bunreacht agus dlíthe Éireann. Dia do mo stiúradh agus do mo chumhdach."

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every person who will be appointed to be a judge under this Constitution (he) must make the following declaration and put his hand to it:

"In the presence of God the Almighty I, , (am) promising and declaring solemnly and truthfully that I will duly and faithfully perform, to the best of my knowledge and ability, the office of Chief-Justice (or according as suits) without fear or bias, without partiality or malevolence/ill-will to anyone, and that I will uphold the Constitution and laws of Ireland. God direct and protect me."

ENGLISH TEXT

Every person appointed a judge under this Constitution shall make and subscribe the following declaration:

"In the presence of Almighty God I, do solemnly and sincerely promise and declare that I will duly and faithfully and to the best of my knowledge and power execute the office of Chief Justice (or as the case may be) without fear or favour, affection or ill-will towards any man, and that I will uphold the Constitution and the laws. May God direct and sustain me."

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Affection' is expressed as 'bá, 'partiality, friendship', in the Irish text, whereas 'gean' translates 'affection' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'Favour' is expressed as 'claonadh', 'bias', in the Irish text.
- 3 'The Constitution and the law' is expressed as 'Bunreacht agus dlíthe Éireann' ('the Constitution and laws of Ireland') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Execute the office' is expressed by 'oifig a chomhlíonadh' ('perform/fulfil the office') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Sincerely' is expressed by 'go firinneach', more usually 'truthfully', in the Irish text, again as we already saw in Article 12.8.
- 7 'Subscribe' is expressed as 'a lámh a chur le' ('put his hand to') in the Irish text, as we have already seen in Article 12.8.
- 8 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 9 'Any man' is expressed as 'duine ar bith' ('any person') in the Irish text.
- 10 'As the case may be' is expressed as 'nó de réir mar a oireas' ('or according as suits') in the Irish text.

Note that s99 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924, reads as follows:

The Declaration to be taken on appointment by every Judge of the Supreme Court, the High Court and the Circuit Court and by every Justice of the District Court shall be as follows:-

I do solemnly and sincerely before God promise and declare that I will duly and faithfully and to the best of my skill and power execute the office of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court (or President of the High Court ... or Justice of the District Court as the case may be) of Saorstát Éireann without fear or favour, affection or ill-will towards any man, and that I will uphold the Constitution of Saorstát Éireann as by law established.

Mar leanas a bheidh an Fhaisnéis a dhéanfidh gach Breitheamh den Chúirt Uachtaraigh, den Ard-Chúirt, agus den Chúirt Chuarda, agus gach Breitheamh den Chúirt Dúithche, tar éis a gceaptha:-

Dinim-se a gheallúint agus a fhaisnéis go solamanta agus go macánta i láthair Dé go bhfeidhmeod go cuibhe agus do dílis agus chó fada lem' éirim agus lem' chomhacht oifig Phríomh-Breitheamh Chúirt Uachtarach (no Uachtarán Ard-Chúirt ... no Breitheamh de Chúirt Dúithche, pe'ca aca é) Shaorstáit Éireann gan faitios ná fabhar, gan grá ná fuath d'éinne, agus go seasód le Bunreacht Shaorstáit Éireann mar atá sé bunuithe do réir dlí.

Commentary

gan claonadh The preposition 'gan' lenites a following single word unless it begins with d, t, s or f, according to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil (s4(c) of the chapter headed 'Séimhiú agus Urú), where 'gan chuid, gan chiall' are cited. Ó Dónaill cites 'gan chaint gan chomhrá, without talk or conversation', along with 'gan tús gan deireadh, without beginning or end, in utter confusion', these also being examples of the repetition of 'gan' in the sense of 'without ... or'. Dinneen cites 'gan aithne, gan urlabhra, unconscious and speechless'. As 'claonadh' and 'bá' here are linked with 'gan duine ar bith' they would remain unlenited here, according to Ó Dónaill, who cites 'gan cúis chóir, without just cause', for example.

'Claonadh' is translated as 'inclination; tendency, trend' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'claonadh chun na trócaire, leaning toward mercy'. 'Claonadh' is the verbal noun of 'claon', Dinneen translating 'claonaim' as 'I incline, slant, diverge; bend, pervert, turn away; am inclined', citing 'ó chlaonais le Lútar, since you turned over to Luther'. The earlier form, 'cláenad', verbal noun of 'cláenaid', is translated principally as 'act of bending, bringing low, inclining; inclination' in DIL, where 'clointa cinn sòn' ('of bending the head') is cited from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, glossing Latin 'hoc gestu'. The adjective 'cláen', upon which the verb 'cláenaid' is based, is translated in DIL as 'uneven, crooked, sloping; aslant, bending, stooped; curving, curved', with the moral sense of 'iniquitous, perverse, unjust, biased'.

The following Declaration is found in the First Schedule to the District Justices (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923:

"I ..... do swear that I will well and truly serve the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) in the office of District Justice without favour or affection, malice or ill-will; that I will see and cause the peace to be preserved; that I will prevent to the best of my power all offences against the same; that while I shall continue to hold the said office I will to the best of my skill and knowledge discharge all the duties thereof in the execution of Warrants and otherwise faithfully according to law ... So help me God." "Bheirimse ..... mo mhóid go dtabharfad seirbhís mhaith mhacánta uaim do Shaorstát Éireann in oifig Ghiúistís Dúithche gan fabhar ná páirt, gan maílís ná droch-aigne; go bhféachfad chuige agus go ndéanfar an tsíocháin do chimeád agus do choinneáil; go gcoiscfead chó fada lem' chumas gach cionta i gcoinnibh an chéanna; go ndéanfad mo dhícheall, do réir mo thuisgiona agus m'eolais, an fhaid a bhead i seilbh na hoifige roimh-ráite, ar dhualgaisí uile na hoifige do chó-líona go macánta do réir dlí maidir le feidhmiú Barántas agus gach ní eile ... A Dhia dem' neartú."

The 'Form of Declaration' in the Second Schedule to the Gárda Síochána Act, 1924, commences as follows:

"I ..... do solemnly and sincerely before God declare and affirm and my word and honour pledge that I will be faithful to the utmost of my ability in my employment by the Executive Council of Saorstát Éireann in the office of ... in the Gárda Síochána and that I will render good and true service and obedience to Saorstát Éireann and its constitution and government as by law established without favour or affection, fear, malice or ill-will, and that I will see and cause the peace to be kept and preserved, and that I will prevent to the best of my power all offences against the same, and that while I shall continue to hold the said office, I will to the best of my knowledge discharge all the duties thereof faithfully according to law ...". "Dinim-se ..... a fhaisnéis agus a dheimhniú agus m'fhocal agus

m'onóir do thabhairt, go solamanta agus go macánta i láthair Dé, go mbead dílis chó fada lem' chumas sa bhfostaíocht ina bhfuil Ard-Chomhairle Shaorstáit Éireann am chur in oifig ... sa Ghárda Síochána agus go dtabharfad seirbhís agus go mbead umhal, go maith agus go dílis macánta, do Shaorstát Éireann agus dá bhunreacht agus dá rialtas fé mar a buníodh do réir dlí, gan báidh ná páirt, gan eagla, mailís ná droch-aigne, agus go bhféachfad chuige agus go gcuirfad fé ndéar go gcimeádfar agus go gcosnófar an tsíocháin, agus chó fada lem' dhícheall go gcoiscfead gach cionta in aghaidh an chéanna, agus an fhaid a bheadh an oifig sin agam go ndéanfad chó fada lem' eolas gach dualgas a bhaineann leis do chó-líona go dílis do réir dlí ..."

Finally, 'performing their duty according to their oath without fear or favour' is translated as 'a ndualgas do chó-líona do réir a mionna gan fabhar gan faitcheas' in s7(5) of the Juries (Protection) Act, 1929.

gan bá See the commentary on 'gan claonadh' above regarding lenition after 'gan'. Ó Dónaill translates 'bá' as 'sympathy, liking', citing 'tá bá agam leis, I like him'. Dinneen cites 'tá báidh agam leat, I have a feeling of friendship for you', translating 'báidh' as 'love, friendship, hospitality; leniency; humanity'. DIL translates 'báid' as 'affection, fondness, attachment, partiality', with the object of affection expressed by the genitive or the preposition 'fri' ('la', Modern Irish 'le'), 'i' or 'im(m)'. DIL cites the phrase 'breith le báidh' ('partial judgement') from the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards'. Originally, according to DIL, 'báid' may not have been distinct from 'bág', 'boast, threat, promise, undertaking, declaration'.

In the 'Form of Declaration to be made by a Commissioner for Offices' in Schedule 17 of the Income Tax Act, 1967, 'that I will judge and determine upon all matters and things which shall be brought before me under the said Acts without favour, affection or malice' is translated as 'agus go ndéanfaidh mé breithiúnas agus cinneadh gan fabhar, dáimh ná mailís ar gach uile ábhar agus ní a thabharfar os mo chomhair faoi na hAchtanna sin', with 'gan fabhar ná dáimh' translating 'without favour or affection' in another such 'Form of Declaration' in the same Schedule. 'Natural love and affection' is translated as 'grá agus gean nádúrtha' in Téarmaí Dlí.

gan drochaigne This compound of 'droch' and 'aigne' is translated as 'evil disposition, evil mind; ill-will, malevolence' in Ó Dónaill, 'droch-aigne' being translated as 'malevolence; malice, evil disposition, ill-will' in Dinneen, who cites 'ag bailiughadh droch-aigne chum, cherishing ill-will towards' and 'corp droch-aigne, sheer spite'. 'Aigne' comes from the earlier form 'aicned', the primary sense of which is 'inherent quality, essence, nature', DIL citing 'combad aicned nindib a nolc' ('that the evil is natural to them'), from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, where it glosses Latin 'naturalis'. The first citation in DIL of the sense 'mind, spirit, feeling' is from the Irish version of Lucan's Pharsalia, where it is linked with 'ergna' ('understanding, discrimination, discernment') and 'intlucht' ('intellect') – see further the commentary on Article 10.1.

do mo stiúradh ... do mo chumhdach See the commentary on Article 12.8. Note that Ó Dónaill cites 'Dia ár gcumhdach, God protects us' and 'Go gcumhdai Dia sibh, may God help you' as examples of the sense 'keep, preserve' s.v. 'cumhdaigh', and 'an dlí a chumhdach, to uphold the law' as an example of the sense of 'uphold'. DIL cites 'Dia mór romc[h]umhdaighfeá' as an example of the sense 'protects, preserves' of 'con-utaincc' in later language, the principal sense being 'builds, constructs'.

go gcomhlionfad ... go gcumhdód The synthetic forms, first person singular, future tense, of 'comhlíon' and 'cumhdaigh' respectively – see the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding the synthetic and analytic forms of the verb, the commentary on Articles 12.1 and 13.9 regarding the verb 'comhlíon' (generally expressing 'perform' in the Constitution), and on Article 12.8 regarding 'cumhdaigh'.

'There shall be paid to any person who shall have executed the office of Comptroller and Auditor-General' is translated as 'aon duine a bheidh tar éis oifig an Árd-Scrúdóra do chó-líona díolfar leis ...' in s2(2) of the Comptroller and Auditor-General Act, 1923. In s5 of the Ministers and Secretaries (Amendment) Act, 1980, 'to execute the office of a Minister of the Government having charge of a Department of State' is translated as 'chun oifig Aire Rialtais i gceannas ar Roinn Stáit a fheidhmiú'. 'That I will truly, faithfully, impartially and honestly, according to the best of my skill and knowledge, execute the powers and authorities vested in me as a Commissioner for Offices' is translated as 'go ndéanfaidh mé go firinneach, go fireata, go cothrom agus go macánta, feadh iomlán mo chumais agus m'eolais, na cumhachtaí agus na húdaráis a dhílsítear dom mar Choimisinéir d'Oifigí ... a fhorghníomhú' in Schedule 17 of the Income Tax Act, 1967.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that he recognises no sense in 'oifig ... a fhorghníomhú' and that De Bhaldraithe associates 'forghníomhú' with 'order'. However deficient, according to Máirtín Ó Murchú, the original verb 'comhlíon' is the best available.

is eol 'Is eol dom (go)' is translated as 'I know (that)' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'déan é mar is eol duit, do it as best you know'. Dinneen translates 'mar is eol dom' as 'as best I know how to'. 'Eól' is translated as 'knowledge (of a person or thing); acquaintance (with person or thing); experience in, skill' in DIL, where the phrase 'is eol dom' is translated as 'I know, am experienced; skilled', with 'in eól dúib a dindshenchas?' ('know ye its legend?') being cited from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster.

Regarding early citations of 'knowledge' and 'ability', 'unless it is proved that the copies were to his knowledge pirated copies' is translated as 'mara gcruthúitear gur chóipeanna píoráidithe na cóipeanna go bhfios do' in s184(1) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. 'Shall to the best of his knowledge, ability, or belief (as the case may require) duly and correctly fill up or otherwise complete such document' is translated as 'déanfa sé, chó fada le n-a eolas, le n-a chumas no le n-a thuairim (pe'ca aca é), an scribhinn sin do líona no do chríochnú ar an slí eile sin go cuibhe agus go cóir' in s7(1) of the Statistics Act, 1926. 'That such person is fully qualified as to age, sex, health, character, knowledge, and ability for that situation' is translated as 'go bhfuil an duine sin lán-cháilithe i gcóir an phoist sin maidir le haois, innsin, sláinte, carachtar, eolas, agus ábaltacht' in s3 of the Civil Service Regulations (Amendment) Act, 1926. 'That ... I will in all respects act diligently and honestly, and without favour or affection, to the best of my knowledge and belief' is translated as 'go ndéanfaidh mé ... gníomhú i ngach slí go dícheallach agus go macánta gan fabhar ná dáimh de réir mar is fearr is eol dom agus mar a chreidim' in a 'Form of Declaration' in Schedule 17 of the Income Tax Act, 1967, with 'that I will diligently and faithfully execute the office of clerk according to the Acts relating to income tax, to be best of my knowledge and judgement' being translated as 'go ndéanfaidh mé go dícheallach agus go fireata oifig chléirigh a fhorghníomhú de réir na nAchtanna a bhaineann le cáin ioncain, feadh m'eolais agus mo bhreithiúnais' in another such 'Form of Declaration' in that Schedule.

is cumas 'Cumas' is translated as 'capability, power' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'rud a chur ar chumas duine, ar a chumas do dhuine, i gcumas do dhuine, to enable someone to do something', along with 'de réir a chumais, as far as he is able, according to his means'. Ó Dónaill also cites 'chomh maith agus a bhí ar a chumas, to the best of his ability' s.v. 'chomh'. Dinneen cites 'ní'l sé ar mo chumas, ar chumas (or gcumas) dam, im' chumas, I am not able to do it, I have it not in my power or at my disposal', translating 'do réir a chumais' as 'all things considered in regard to him'. 'Commus' is the verbal noun of 'con-midethar' ('is competent, able; rules, governs, controls'), and is translated as (a) 'act of controlling, arranging, directing' and (b) 'power, ability, capacity' in DIL, the latter senses being the usual senses according to DIL. David Greene (in his edition of Fingal Rónáin and Other Stories [1955, p. 42]) translates 'Ad coimse mo chrod dot chainmacniu' as 'you are capable (of taking) my cattle for your fair sons' in a rhetorical passage in the Old Irish story 'Esnada Tige Buchet'. See further the commentary on Articles 14.2.2° and 31.2.

a oireas The special form of the relative, present tense, of 'oir' – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s'. Ó Dónaill translates 'oir' as 'suit, fit, become', citing 'oireann sé don chás, it suits the case'. The intransitive verb 'oirid' is translated as 'is suited or adapted (to), corresponds (to), is in keeping (with)' in DIL, the first of but a few relatively late examples cited there being 'don droing oirios annró' ('the gang whose just lot might be misery') from O'Grady's Catalogue of Irish Manuscripts in the British Museum. In Article 45.4.2° 'nach n-oireann dá ngné' expresses 'unsuited to their sex'. As regards 'as the case may be' in the Acts, 'At the end of the accounting period or, as the case may be, at the beginning of an immediately succeeding accounting period' is translated as 'i ndeireadh tréimhse cuntasaióchta nó, de réir mar a bheidh, i dtosach tréimhse cuntasaióchta díreach ina dhiaidh sin' in s9(c) of the Finance Act, 1990, for example.

I láthair Dia na nUilechumhacht See the commentary on Article 12.8° and note that this phrase is followed by a comma in that Article, as in Article 31.4, unlike the present Article.

go cuí 'I gcúrsa cuí' is translated as 'in due course', for example, in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 43.2.1°.

de réir This phrase is translated as ‘in accordance with’ in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 1.

dearbhú See the commentary on Article 12.8°.

a lámh a chur leis See the commentary on Article 12.8°.

go sollúnta agus go fireannach See the commentary on Article 12.8.

go dílis See the commentary on Article 31.4.

Bunreacht Éireann See the commentary on Article 12.8.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Gach duine a cheapfar chun bheith ina bhreitheamh nó ina breitheamh faoin mBunreacht seo ní foláir dó nó di an dearbhú seo a leanas a dhéanamh agus a lámh a chur leis:

“I láthair Dhia na hUilechumhachta táimse, , á ghealladh agus á dhearbhú go sollúnta agus go firinneach go gcomhlíonfaidh mé go cúí agus go dílis, chomh maith agus is eol agus is cumas dom, oifig an Phríomh-Bhreithimh (nó de réir mar a oireann) gan eagla gan claonadh, gan bá gan drochaigne chun duine ar bith, agus go gcumhdóidh mé Bunreacht agus dlíthe na hÉireann. Dia do mo stiúradh agus do mo chumhdach.”

Direct gender-proofed translation

Gach duine a cheapfar ina bhreitheamh nó ina breitheamh faoin mBunreacht seo déanfaidh agus síneoidh sé nó sí an dearbhú seo a leanas:<sup>1</sup>

“I láthair Dhia na hUilechumhachta, táimse, á ghealladh agus á dhearbhú go sollúnta fireata go ndéanfaidh mé<sup>2</sup> oifig an Phríomh-Bhreithimh (nó de réir mar a bheidh) a fheidhmí<sup>3</sup> go cúí agus go dílis agus ar feadh m’eolais agus mo chumais, gan eagla ná fabhar, gean ná drochaigne<sup>4</sup> i leith aon duine,<sup>5</sup> agus go gcumhdóidh mé an Bunreacht agus na dlíthe. Go stiúraí agus go gcumhdaí Dia mé.”

Variants

- 1 ‘Déanfar an dearbhú seo a leanas agus síneofar é ag gach duine a cheapfar ina bhreitheamh nó ina breitheamh faoin mBunreacht seo.’
- 2 ‘déanaimse, a ghealladh agus a dhearbhú go sollúnta fireata’
- 3 ‘a chomhlíonadh’, ‘a fhorghníomhú’
- 4 ‘eagla nó fabhar, gean nó drochaigne’
- 5 ‘gan eagla gan fabhar, gan gean gan drochaigne chun duine ar bith.’

ARTICLE 34.5.2° AIRTEAGAL 34.5.2°

TÉACS GAELGE

Is i láthair an Uachtaráin a dhéanfaidh an Príomh-Breitheamh an dearbhú sin agus a chuirfidh a lámh leis, agus is sa chúirt go poiblí agus i láthair an Phríomh-Bhreithimh nó an bhreithimh den Chúirt Uachtarach is sinsearaí dá mbeidh ar fáil a dhéanfaidh gach breitheamh eile den Chúirt Uachtarach agus gach breitheamh den Ard-Chúirt agus de gach Cúirt eile an dearbhú sin agus a chuirfidh lámh leis.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is in the presence of the President that the Chief Justice will make that declaration and put his hand to it, and it is in the court publicly and in the presence of the Chief Justice or of the most senior judge of the Supreme Court who will be available that every other judge of the Supreme Court and every judge of the High Court and of every other Court will make that declaration and put his hand to it.

ENGLISH TEXT

This declaration shall be made and subscribed by the Chief Justice in the presence of the President, and by each of the other judges of the Supreme Court, the judges of the High Court and the judges of every other Court in the presence of the Chief Justice or the senior available judge of the Supreme Court in open court.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘In open court’ is expressed as ‘sa chúirt go poiblí’ (‘in the court publicly’) in the Irish text, ‘i gcúirt oscailte’ translating ‘in open court’ in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 ‘The senior available judge of the Supreme Court’ is expressed by ‘an breitheamh den Chúirt Uachtarach is sinsearaí dá mbeidh ar fáil’ (‘the most senior judge of the Supreme Court who will be available’) in the Irish text.
- 3 ‘Each of the other judges of the Supreme Court, the judges of the High Court and the judges of every other Court’ is rendered as ‘gach breitheamh eile den Chúirt Uachtarach agus gach breitheamh den Ard-Chúirt agus de gach Cúirt eile’ (‘every other judge of the Supreme Court and every judge of the High Court and of every other Court’) in the Irish text.
- 4 The phrase expressing ‘This declaration shall be made and subscribed’ is repeated in the Irish text alone, ‘subscribe’ being expressed as ‘a chuirfidh (a) lámh leis’ (‘put [his] hand to’).

Note that the words ‘den Chúirt Uachtaraigh is sinsearaigh dá mbeidh ar fagháil a dhéanfaidh gach breitheamh eile den Chúirt Uachtaraigh agus’ were inserted following the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, replacing ‘is neasa sinsearach dó a bheas ar fagháil de bhreitheamhnaibh na Cúirte Uachtaraigh a dhéanfaidh’, no corresponding amendment being made to the English text.

Note also that s99 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924, contains the following:

Such declaration shall be made and subscribed by the Chief Justice in the presence of the Governor-General and by each of the other judges and justices in the presence of the Chief Justice in open court. Déanfar agus síghneofar an thaisnéis sin ag an bPrímh-Breitheamh i bhfianaise an tSeanascail agus ag gach duine de sna breithimh roimhráite i bhfianaise an Phrímh-Bhreithimh sa chúirt go hoscailte.

Commentary

is sinsearaí The superlative of the adjective ‘sinsearach’, which adjective is translated as (a) ‘senior’ and (b)

'ancestral' in Ó Dónaill. While Dinneen gives two headwords 'sóisear', 'junior', as both adjective and noun, he does not appear to give an adjectival form of 'sinsear' as a headword. DIL s.v. 'sinserda', gives one (late) example of the senses (a) 'ancestral' and (b) 'olden, of yore', this adjective being based on 'sinser', 'the elder, the eldest, a senior; in plural elders, ancestors, forefathers'. The opposite of this, 'ósar', has the same ending as 'sinser' combined with 'óa', the comparative of 'oac'/'óc', Modern Irish 'óg', 'young' – as Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks, 'ósar' later became 'sósar' and eventually 'sóisear'.

'All proofs ... shall be held by or at the order and disposal of the judge or the senior of the judges by or before whom such suit or matter is heard' is translated as 'Gach cruthúnas ... cimeádfar iad i seilbh no fé ordú agus fé dheighleáil an bhreithimh no sinsir na mbreithiún ag á mbeidh no gur ina láthair a bheidh an chúis no an ní sin á éisteacht' in s65(3) of the Court Officers Act, 1926. 'By the senior ordinary Judge of the Supreme Court' is translated as 'isé gnáth-Bhreitheamh sinsearach na Cúirte Uachtaraí a dhéanfaidh san' in s2 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1928. 'With a Chairman who shall be the senior judge of the Supreme Court able and willing to act' is translated as 'agus mar Cheann Comhairle ortha an breitheamh is aoirde céim den Chúirt Uachtarach a bheidh ábalta agus toilteannach ar fheidhmiú' in Article 35 of the 1922 Constitution. Finally, 'All jurisdictions, powers, authorities and functions for the time being vested in him ... shall be exercised or performed by the senior ordinary judge of the High Court who is for the time being available' is translated as 'déanfaidh an gnáth-bhreitheamh den Ard-Chúirt is sinsearaí a bheidh ar fáil de thuras na huairé na dlínsí, na cumhachtaí, na húdaráis agus na feidhmeanna go léir a bheidh dílsithe dó de thuras na huairé ... a fheidhmiú nó a chomhlíonadh' in s18(2) of the Courts Act, 1981. See further the commentary on Article 40.4.4°.

a chuirfidh a lámh leis See the commentary on Articles 12.8 and 13.3.1° and note that we find 'a chuirfidh lámh leis' at the end of this subsection.

go poiblí See the commentary on Article 26.2.1°. 'Hearing in open court' is translated as 'éisteacht i gcúirt oscailte' in Téarmaí Dlí.

an dearbhú See the commentary on Article 12.8.

sin See the commentary on Articles 6.2 and 13.1.1°.

Direct translation

Déanfar an dearbhú seo agus síneofar é<sup>1</sup> ag an bPríomh-Bhreitheamh<sup>2</sup> i láthair an Uachtaraín, agus ag gach duine de na breithiúna eile den Chúirt Uachtarach, ag breithiúna na hArd-Chúirte agus ag breithiúna gach Cúirte eile i gcúirt oscailte i láthair an Phríomh-Bhreithimh nó i láthair an bhreithimh is sinsearaí<sup>3</sup> den Chúirt Uachtarach a bheidh ar fáil.

Variants

- 1 'Déanfar agus síneofar an dearbhú seo'
- 2 'Déanfaidh agus síneoidh an Príomh-Bhreitheamh an dearbhú seo'
- 3 'an bhreithimh sinsir'

ARTICLE 34.5.3° AIRTEAGAL 34.5.3°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní foláir do gach breitheamh an dearbhú a dhéanamh agus a lámh a chur leis sula dté i gcúram dualgas a oifige, agus cibé scéal é, ar dháta nach déanaí ná deich lá tar éis lae a cheaptha, nó dáta is déanaí ná sin mar a chinnefidh an tUachtarán.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every judge must make the declaration and put his hand to it before (he) takes up the responsibilities of the duties of his office, and at any rate, on a date not later than ten days after the day of his appointment, or a date which is later than that as the President will decide.

ENGLISH TEXT

The declaration shall be made and subscribed by every judge before entering upon his duties as such judge, and in any case not later than ten days after the date of his appointment or such later date as may be determined by the President.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Before entering upon his duties as such judge' is expressed as 'sula dté i gcúram dualgas a oifige' ('before he takes up responsibility of the duties of his office') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Not later than ten days after the date of his appointment' is expressed as 'ar dháta nach déanaí ná deich lá tar éis lae a cheaptha' ('on a date not later than ten days after the day of his appointment') in the Irish text, 'lá' ('day') expressing 'date' as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 3 'Subscribe' is expressed as 'a lámh a chur leis' ('put his hand to') as we have seen in the two previous subsections.
- 4 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Commentary

cibé scéal é This phrase is translated as 'anyhow' in Ó Dónaill, who similarly translates 'pé scéal é'. Dinneen translates 'pé scéal é' as 'anyhow, at any rate, in any case'. The earlier form of 'cibé', 'cia bé', is cited in DIL in 'cia bé a mmet' ('however great it may be') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. Note, incidentally, that 'cip' with 'cruth' had the sense of 'however it be, at all events', DIL citing 'cipcruth bíid páx libsí' ('however it be, let there be pax with you') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

'The landlord shall, as soon as may be, and in any case not later than six months after the expiration of such fourteen days, execute and complete ... the improvement mentioned therein' is translated as 'déanfaidh agus críochnóidh an tiarna talún an feabhsúchán a luaitear sa gheallúint feabhsúcháin sin chomh luath agus is féidir é, agus in aon chás tráth nach déanaí ná sé mhí tar éis na ceithre lá dhéag sin a bheith caite' in s51(2) of the Landlord and Tenant (Amendment) Act, 1980. In s7(2) of the Transport Act, 1958, 'to conduct its undertaking so that, as soon as may be, and in any case not later than the 31st day of March, 1964' is translated as 'a ghnóthas a stiúradh ar chuma go dtarlóidh, a thúsce is féidir, agus ar aon chor ar dháta nach déanaí ná an 31ú lá de Mhárta, 1964'. 'As soon as may be after, and in any case not later than the second week day after, whichever of the following events first occurs' is translated as 'chó luath agus is féidir tar éis pé trátha aca so leanas is túsce agus ar aon chuma uair nach déanaighe ná an dara lá seachtaine tar éis an trátha san' in s3(2)(b) of the General Elections (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1943.

i gcúram dualgas a oifige According to the official standard, 'dualgas' would be lenited and remain in the nominative (plural) rather than the genitive (plural), as above, after the prepositional phrase 'i gcúram', 'oifig' (as it is preceded by a possessive pronoun) being a definite noun – see the commentary on Article 1 regarding the nominative in place of the genitive. See the commentary on Article 12.3.1<sup>o</sup>, where 'enter office' is expressed by 'dul i gcúram oifige', regarding 'i gcúram'.

'He possesses the requisite knowledge and ability to enter on the discharge of his duties in that situation' is translated as 'go bhfuil an t-eolas agus an ábaltacht san aige is gá dho a bheith aige chun dul i mbun a dhualgais sa phost san' in s3(2)(d) of the Civil Service Regulation Act, 1923. In s13(2) of the Veterinary Surgeons Act, 1931, 'The Council shall meet at the time and place appointed under this section for their meeting and shall thereupon enter upon their duties under this Act' is translated as 'Tiocfaidh an Chomhairle le chéile san am agus san áit a ceapfar fén alt so dá gcrúinniú agus leis sin tosnóid ar a ndualgais fén Acht so do chóilónadh'. 'Internees so elected shall enter upon their duties after their election has been approved by the detaining authorities' is translated as 'Rachaidh na himtheorannaithe a thoghfáir amhlaidh i mbun a ndualgas tar éis na húdaráis choinneála a ghlacadh lena dtoghadh' in Article 102 of the Fourth Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962. 'The head of a consular post shall not enter upon his duties until he has received an exequatur' is translated as 'ní rachaidh ceann poist chonsalachta i mbun a dhualgas go dtí go mbeidh exequatur faighte aige' in s3 of Article 12 of the Second Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967.

Regarding 'as such judge' following 'entering upon his duties' in the English text, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú questions the meaning of this phrase, which is unexpressed in the Irish text. Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends a translation such as the following in place of the direct translation given below: '... sula rachaidh an breitheamh sin i mbun a dhualgas nó a dualgas'.

a chinnfidh See the commentary on Article 1; 'cinnim' is translated as 'I determine (issue etc.), I find (as a fact, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'And the scheme as so amended shall have effect from such date as may be determined by the Minister' is translated as 'agus beidh éifeacht ag an scéim agus i leasuithe amhlaidh ón dáta a cheapfaidh an tAire' in s4(2) of the National Health Insurance Act, 1942. 'Or on such earlier date as may be determined by the Council at its discretion' is translated as 'nó ar pé dáta is luaithe ná sin a chinnfeas an Chomhairle dá rogha féin' in s5(3) of the Medical Practitioners Act, 1955.

sula dté The present subjunctive of 'téigh', the future tense now usually expressing the present subjunctive except in the case of the optative (e.g. 'go dté tú slán, safe home') – see the commentary on Article 12.3.1<sup>o</sup>.

tar éis lae a cheaptha As above, this would read as 'tar éis lá a cheaptha' according to the official standard, 'lá' remaining in the nominative case in place of the genitive, but unlike 'dualgas' above no lenition is shown in the case of 'lá'.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Ní foláir do gach breitheamh an dearbhú a dhéanamh agus a lámh a chur leis sula rachaidh i gcúram dhualgais a oifige nó a hoifige, agus cibé scéal é, ar dháta nach déanaí ná deich lá tar éis lá a cheaptha nó a ceaptha, nó dáta is déanaí ná sin mar a chinnfidh an tUachtarán.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Déanfaidh agus sineoidh gach breitheamh an dearbhú' sula rachaidh sé nó sí i mbun a dhualgas nó a dualgas mar bhreitheamh den sórt sin,<sup>2</sup> agus in aon chás tráth nach déanaí ná deich lá tar éis dháta a cheaptha nó a ceaptha nó cibé dáta is déanaí a chinnfidh<sup>3</sup> an tUachtarán.

Variants

- 1 'Déanfaidh gach breitheamh an dearbhú agus sineoidh sé nó sí é', 'Déanfar agus sineofar an dearbhú ag gach breitheamh'
- 2 'sula rachaidh an breitheamh sin i mbun a dhualgas nó a dualgas,'
- 3 'mar a chinnfidh'

ARTICLE 34.5.4<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 34.5.4<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELGE

Aon bhreitheamh a dhiúltós nó a fhailleos an dearbhú réamhráite a dhéanamh ní foláir a mheas go bhfuil scartha aige lena oifig.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any judge who will refuse or neglect to make the aforesaid declaration (it) must be deemed that he has relinquished his office.

ENGLISH TEXT

Any judge who declines or neglects to make such declaration as aforesaid shall be deemed to have vacated his office.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'To make such declaration as aforesaid' is expressed as 'an dearbhú réamhráite a dhéanamh' ('to make the aforesaid declaration') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Declines to' is expressed as 'a dhiúltós' ('refuses to') in the Irish text.
- 3 'To have vacated his office' is expressed as 'go bhfuil scartha aige lena oifig' ('to have relinquished his office') in the Irish text.

- 4 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we have seen in the previous subsection and in many earlier Articles.

Note that s99 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924, concludes as follows:

Any judge or justice who declines or neglects to take the declaration aforesaid in the manner aforesaid shall be disqualified from entering on and shall be deemed to have vacated his office of judge or justice (as the case may be). Aon bhreitheamh a eiteoidh no a leigfidh i bhfaillí an fhaisnéis roimhráite a dhéanamh ar an gcuma roimhráite beidh sé gan teideal chun dul i mbun an oifige mar bhreitheamh agus tuigfar é bheith tar éis an oifig sin d'fhágaint.

Commentary

a dhiúltós nó a fhailleos The special form of the relative, future tense, of 'diúltaigh' and 'failligh' – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s'.

'Diúltaim' is translated as 'I refuse' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'diúltuighim' being translated as 'I deny, refuse, oppose' in Dinneen. Ó Dónaill translates 'diúltaigh' principally as 'deny, refuse', translating 'diúltú rud a dhéanamh' as 'to refuse to do something'. DIL translates 'diúlta(ig)id' as 'refuses, rejects', this verb being based on the verbal noun of the earlier compound verb 'do-sluindi', which verb has the sense of 'denies' (i.e. 'refuses to believe'), glossing Latin 'negare' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, DIL also citing 'is ed insin dorosloinn ic n-erum-sa, ised insin dorosluind cainchomrac ar mu chnamaib-se' ('that denied healing to me ... that denied peace to my bones'), from the same collection of Glosses, as an example of the sense of 'refuses (a request, gift, etc.)'. See the commentary on Article 26.3.1° where 'diúltaigh do' expresses 'decline'.

'Any officer of the Forces who declines or neglects to take an oath or make the declaration aforesaid in the manner aforesaid, shall be deemed to have resigned his commission and appointment as an officer in the Forces' is translated as 'Aon oifigeach de sna Fórsaí dhiúltóidh no fhailleoidh an mionn roimhráite do thabhairt no an dearbhú roimhráite do dhéanamh sa tslí roimhráite, tuigfear é d'eirghe as a choimisiún agus a cheapachán mar oifigeach sna Fórsaí' in s6(3) of the Defence Forces Act, 1937. 'This paragraph shall not have effect if the Minister declines to reappoint him because of stated misconduct or incapacity' is translated as 'Ní bheidh éifeacht ag an mír seo má éarann an tAire é d'athcheapadh de dheasca mí-iompair nó éagumais shonraithe' in s4(b) of the Schedule to the Industrial Development Authority Act, 1950. In s4 of Article 12 of the First Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1936, 'if the consignee declines to accept the consignment note or the goods' is translated as 'má dhiúltaíonn an consighní an nóta consighneachta no na hearraí do ghlacadh'. Finally, 'where the person has declined to retain one of the sealed containers' is translated as 'i gcás ar dhiúltaigh an duine ceann de na coimeádáin shéalaithe a choimeád' in s20(3) of the Road Traffic (Amendment) Act, 1978.

'Failligh' is translated as 'neglect; omit, delay' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'rud a fhaillíú, to neglect something'.

Dinneen translates 'faillighim' as 'I fail, neglect, delay', citing 'ná failligh do dhinnéar go háirthid, do not neglect your dinner anyway' from Inis Meáin. DIL cites 'arna follaigdis gudi nDae' ('they should not neglect to pray to God') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, translating 'follaigid'/'fallaigid' as 'neglects, omits, fails (to do)'. In early Irish laws, this verb is used in the sense of 'omission, evasion', DIL citing the following from an early Irish law-tract: 'cuic seoit hi lobud cachá hathgabala ... noch fil tri seota cachá tratha ro follaighther' ('five "seds" for neglecting [to redeem] every distress ... and there are three "seds" for every day that it is neglected [to be redeemed]'). In his Guide to Early Irish Law (p. 152), Fergus Kelly states that the early Irish law-texts employ a number of terms to cover various forms of negligence, 'most commonly étged, anfot, anfaitches, and díchell', the phrase 'aithgein cach étged' ('every negligence requires restitution') being quoted in a number of texts – Professor Kelly explains this phrase as 'an offence against property through negligence requires merely the replacement of the object damaged or destroyed'. See the commentary on Article 41.2.2° regarding 'faillí'.

'Where any registration officer ... refuses, neglects, or fails without reasonable cause to perform his duties in that behalf' is translated as 'Má dhineann aon oifigeach clárathachta ..., gan cúis réasúnta, có-líona na ndualgaisí sin a bheidh air d'oba no do leigint i bhfaillí no gan déanamh' in s63(1) of the Electoral Act, 1923. 'Unlawfully inducing ... any officer of the Government of Saorstát Éireann to refuse, neglect or omit to discharge his duty as such officer' is translated as 'Aon oifigeach do Rialtas Shaorstáit Éireann do mhealla ..., go nea-dhleathach, chun có-líona a dhualgais mar oifigeach den tsórt san do dhiúltú no chun é leigint i bhfuair no i bhfaillí' in s2 of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Powers of Arrest and Detention) Temporary Act, 1924. In s141(1)(b) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, 'if he fails or neglects to comply with the provisions of paragraph (a)' is translated as 'má mhainníonn sé nó má fhaillíonn sé forálacha mhír (a) a chomhlíonadh'.

scartha ... le 'Scartha' is the past participle of 'scar', 'scaraim le' being translated as 'I relinquish' in Téarmaí Dlí and as 'I part with, leave, give up, go away from, escape' in Dinneen, who cites 'scaraim le céill, I take leave of my senses', translating 'scartha le' as 'separated from, parted from, through with, done with, devoid of', citing 'táim scartha le céird, I have given up my trade'. DIL cites 'in corp marbde frissa roscar-som' ('the mortal body from which He has parted'), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, as an example of the sense of 'relinquishes, gives up, is without, desists from' of 'scaraid', the principal sense being 'separates, parts'. See further the commentary on Article 12.6.2° and note that 'vacate' is expressed by 'éirigh as' in Article 15.14.

'The office of any judge of the High Court ... may be vacated by resignation in writing under his hand' is translated as 'Féadfar oifig aon bhreithimh den Ard-Chúirt ... d'fholamhú tríd an mbreitheamh féin d'eirghe aisti le scribhinn uaidh fé n-a láimh' in s11 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924, with 'Every Circuit Judge who resigns or otherwise for any cause vacates his office' being translated as 'Gach Breitheamh Cuarda a imeoidh as oifig no a fhágfidh a oifig ar aon tslí eile ar chúis ar bith' in s41. 'Ag imeacht as oifig' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'vacating office' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1922/23. Finally, 'he shall thereupon vacate his office and give notice in writing to the society concerned ... that he has vacated his office by reason of such disqualification' is translated as 'scarfaidh sé air sin lena oifig agus tabharfaidh sé fógra i scríbhinn don chumann lena mbaineann ... go bhfuil scartha aige lena oifig mar gheall ar an dicháilocht sin' in s87(3) of the Building Societies Act, 1989.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Aon bhreitheamh a dhiúltóidh nó a fhailleoidh an dearbhú réamhráite a dhéanamh ní foláir a mheas go bhfuil scartha ag an mbreitheamh sin lena oifig nó lena hoifig.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Aon bhreitheamh a dhiúltóidh nó a fhailleoidh dearbhú den sórt sin a dhéanamh mar a dúradh measfar go mbeidh scartha aige nó aici lena oifig nó lena hoifig.

Variants

1 'go bhfuil'

ARTICLE 35.1 AIRTEAGAL 35.1

TÉACS GAELGE

Is ag an Uachtarán a cheapfar breithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí, na hArd-Chúirte agus an uile Chúirte eile a bhunaítear de bhun Airteagal 34 den Bhunreacht seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is by the President that the judges of the Supreme Court, the High Court and every other Court which is established in pursuance of Article 34 of this Constitution will be appointed.

ENGLISH TEXT

The judges of the Supreme Court, the High Court and all other Courts established in pursuance of Article 34 hereof shall be appointed by the President.

Divergences between the official texts

1 'Article 34 hereof' is expressed as 'Airteagal 34 den Bhunreacht seo' ('Article 34 of this Constitution') in the Irish text, the more natural construction in the language.

Note that Article 68 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

The judges of the Supreme Court and of the High Court and all other Courts established in pursuance of this Constitution shall be appointed by the Representative of the Crown on the advice of the Executive Council. Is é Ionadaí na Coróinneach a cheapfaidh ar chomhairle na hArd-Chomhairle breithiúin na Cúirte Uachtaraige agus na hArd-Chúirte agus na gCúirteanna eile go léir a bunófar do réir an Bhun-reachta so.

Commentary

breithiúna ... an uile Chúirte eile This would generally be written today as 'breithiúna ... na huile Chúirte eile', Ó Dónaill citing 'tobar na huile mhaitheasa, the fount of all goodness' and 'aiséirí na n-uile mharbh, the resurrection of the dead', with Dinneen citing 'thugadar rátha na n-uile dúl, they cited all the elements as surities'. Ó Dónaill translates 'uile' as 'all, every', translating 'an uile ní' as 'all things'. Dinneen translates 'uile' as 'all, whole', translating 'an uile/'gach uile' as 'every, each', and 'an uile nidh' as 'everything'. DIL translates 'uile' as 'every, the whole', citing 'esseirge inna nuile marb' from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, the very phrase Ó Dónaill cites in Modern Irish.

'For the purposes of this paragraph and for the purposes of all other provisions of this Act' is translated as 'Chun críocha na míre seo agus chun críocha gach forála eile den Acht seo' in s3(2) of the First Schedule to the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975, for example, with 'chun críocha gach ailt eile den Acht sin' translating 'for the purposes of all other sections of that Act' in s2(3) of the Diseases of Animals (Bovine Tuberculosis) Act, 1957.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'uile' can be omitted if one wishes, having only a reinforcing sense ("bri threisithe") in this context.

den Bhunreacht seo 'On the date hereof' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'ar an dáta atá air seo' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health. 'Subject to subsection (2) hereof' is translated as 'Faoi réir fho-alt (2) den alt seo' in s27(1) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, for example, as in s22(1) of the Wildlife Act, 1976. 'Provided that on the happening of any of the events specified in Paragraph 5 hereof' is translated as 'Ach ar tharla d'éinní dá luaidhtear i Mír 5 de seo' in s6 of the Second Schedule to the Creamery Act, 1928.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the direct translation below, remarks that 'den Bhunreacht seo' is perhaps clearer but 'de seo' is as correct and as clear as the English text's 'hereof'.

de bhun This phrase is translated as 'in pursuance of; on foot of; pursuant to' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 28.3.3°. Note that we find the genitive singular 'Airteagail' following this phrase in the original text.

Standardised Irish text

Is ag an Uachtarán a cheapfar breithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí, na hArd-Chúirte agus na huile Chúirte eile a bhunaítear de bhun Airteagal 34 den Bhunreacht seo.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an tUachtarán breithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí, na hArd-Chúirte agus gach uile Chúirte<sup>1</sup> eile a bhunófar de bhun Airteagal 34 de seo<sup>2</sup> a cheapadh.<sup>3</sup>

Variants

- 1 'gach Cúirte'
- 2 'den Bhunreacht seo'
- 3 'Is é nó is í an / An tUachtarán a cheapfaidh breithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí, na hArd-Chúirte agus gach uile Chúirte eile a bhunófar de bhun Airteagal 34 de seo.'

ARTICLE 35.2 AIRTEAGAL 35.2

TÉACS GAEILGE

Beidh gach breitheamh saor neamhspleách maidir lena fheidhmeanna breithimh a oibriú, gan de smacht air ach an Bunreacht seo agus an dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every judge will be free (and) independent as regards the operation of his judicial functions, with no restriction on him except this Constitution and the law.

ENGLISH TEXT

All judges shall be independent in the exercise of their judicial functions and subject only to this Constitution and the law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Independent' is expressed as 'saor neamhspleách', 'free (and) independent', in the Irish text.
- 2 'Subject only to' is expressed as 'gan de smacht air ach' ('with no restriction/control on him except') in the Irish text, 'subject to' being translated as 'faoi réir' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 3 'In the exercise of' is expressed as 'maidir le ... a oibriú' ('as regards exercising/operating'), the verb 'oibrigh' being translated as 'operate' in Téarmaí Dlí but here expressing 'exercise', as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 4 'Judicial' is expressed by the attributive genitive singular of 'breitheamh' ('judge'), 'judicial' being translated as 'breithiúnach' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 5 'All judges ... their' is expressed as 'gach breitheamh ... a [plus lenition]' ('each judge ... his') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 69 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

All judges shall be independent in the exercise of their functions, and subject only to the Constitution and the law. Le linn feidhmíthe dhóibh beidh na breithiúin uile nea-spleách agus fé riail an Bhun-reachta agus an dlí amháin.

Commentary

gan de smacht air The preposition 'de', used mainly with the substantive verb and copula, expresses 'extent', Ó Dónaill citing 'ní raibh de chiall aige ach seasamh, he had no more sense than to stand'. Dinneen cites 'tá sé de bhuidh, de chéill, de chéird, agam, I have the virtue of, the good senses to, the art of' as examples of 'de' in appositions in the sense of 'as, by way of'. Turning to 'smacht', Dinneen cites 'tá smacht orm-sa, I am not my own master' and 'beidh siad le smacht ar dhaoine, they will be rulers of men', translating 'smacht' as 'control (often parental control), restraint, authority, sway, institute, discipline, chastisement, oppression'. Ó Dónaill translates 'smacht' as 'rule, dominion, sway; subjection' and 'control, restraint, discipline', citing 'smacht a bheith agat ort féin, to be able to control oneself'. DIL translates 'smacht' principally as 'rule, ordinance, regulation, command, stipulation', citing 'tect fo smachtu rechtó' ('to go under the rules of the Law') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. In early Irish laws, 'smacht' had the sense of 'penalty, fine for breach of law, trespass, non-payment of debt, etc.' (DIL) – according to one law-tract, for example, if an advocate changes from one 'path' to another when pleading a case, he must pay a 'smacht' of one cow (see Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 192).

'Subject to' is translated as 'faoi réir' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Except upon the terms of making that person ... if the Court thinks fit, subject only to the same liabilities and obligations as if the lease had been assigned to that person at that date' is translated as 'ach amháin ar théarmaí lena guirfear an duine sin ... más cuí leis an gCúirt é, faoi réir na ndliteanas agus na n-oibleagáidí céanna sin amháin a mbeadh an duine sin faoina réir dá sannfaí an léas dó ar an dáta sin' in s56(8) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1988. 'The decision of the returning officer ... shall be final, subject only to reversal on a petition questioning the Assembly election' is translated as 'Is cinneadh críochnaitheach cinneadh an cheann comhairimh ... agus ní fhéadfar é a fhreaschur ach amháin le hachainí ag tabhairt an toghcháin Tionóil faoi cheist' in s67 of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977. 'The allowance or disallowance by the Seanad returning officer of any application ... shall be final and conclusive, subject only to such appeal as is provided for by this Act' is translated as 'Nuair a lamhálfas nó a dhílamhálfas ceann comhairimh an tSeanaid don iarratas ... is breith chriochnaitheach dosháruithe an lamháil nó an dílamháil sin, agus ní féadfar achomharc a dhéanamh ina coinne ach amháin mar forálfar leis an Acht seo' in s11(8) of the Seanad Electoral (Panel Members) Act, 1947. Finally, 'subject only to the proviso that the action taken by the Central Bank shall not be such as to render compliance with the conditions of the licence more onerous' is translated as 'faoi réir an choinníll, agus faoina réir sin amháin, nach ndéanfaidh an Banc Ceannais gníomh a fhágfaidh go mbeidh sé níos dochraidí coinníollacha an cheadúnais a chomhlíonadh' in s12(3)(d) of the Trustee Savings Bank Act, 1989.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where the final clause was translated as 'agus ní bheidh siad ach faoi réir an Bhunreachta agus an dlí amháin', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that this would correspond to an English text which read 'they will be just subject to the Constitution and the law'. Commenting on the variant 'agus gan iad faoi réir ach ag an mBunreacht seo agus ag an dlí amháin', Professor Ó Murchú remarked that the syntax requires that 'faoi réir' have a headword, e.g. 'faoi réir aon ní'. Máirtín Ó Murchú notes the merits of the syntax involving 'gan' in the neat original text and suggests 'gan de threoir/smacht/d'fhorlámhas/d'údarás orthu ach an Bunreacht seo agus an dlí'.

saor neamhspleách As regards 'neamhspleách', see the commentary on Article 5, 'Ireland is a sovereign, independent, democratic state' being expressed in that Article as 'Is Stát ceannasach, neamhspleách, daonlathach Éire'. 'Conraitheoir neamhspleách' is translated as 'independent contractor' in Téarmaí Dlí, for example. The adjective 'saor' is translated primarily as 'free' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'na tíortha, na ciníocha, atá saor; the countries, the races, that are free' as an example of the sense of 'independent'. Dinneen cites 'saor slán, safe and sound'.

'The Board shall be independent in the exercise of its functions' is translated as 'Beidh an Bord neamhspleách ag feidhmiú a fheidhmeanna' in s1(2) of the First Schedule to the Garda Síochána (Complaints) Act, 1986, for example. Regarding 'in the exercise of', note that 'Where this Act, or the Central Bank in the exercise of its functions under this Act, requires' is translated as 'I gcás ina gceanglaíonn an tAcht seo, nó an Banc Ceannais i bhfeidhmiú a fheidhmeanna faoin Acht seo' in s36(16) of the Building Societies Act, 1989.

lena fheidhmeanna breithimh 'Breithimh' is the genitive singular of 'breitheamh' as an attributive adjective. Note that Téarmaí Dlí gives 'breithiúnach' as an adjectival form of 'breitheamh', citing 'aird bhreithiúnach, judicial notice' and 'rogha bhreithiúnach, judicial discretion', for example, Ó Dónaill also having this headword. Dinneen gives 'breitheamhdha' as a headword, translating that adjective as 'judicial, judge-like'. See the commentary on Article 29.2, where 'judicial determination' is expressed as 'cinneadh breithiúnach', regarding 'judicial'.

'Judicial functions' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'feidhmeanna breithiúntais' in a 1928 Report of the Public Accounts Committee. 'The Judicial Separation and Family Law Reform Act, 1989', is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht um Idirscaradh Breithiúnach agus Athchóiriú an Dlí Teaghlaigh, 1989', for example, with the 'Public Authorities (Judicial Proceedings) Act, 1954' being cited as 'Acht na nÚdarás Poiblí (Imeachta Breithiúnacha), 1954'. 'For so long as he continues to hold the judicial office held by him' is translated as 'fad a shealbhóidh sé an oifig bhreithiúnach a shealbháigh sé' in s2 of the Courts (No. 2) Act, 1981, with 'in the said judicial office' being translated as 'san oifig bhreithiúntais sin' in s17(b) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1936.

a oibriú See the commentary on Articles 3 and 13.5.1<sup>o</sup>; again Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the direct translation below, recommends using 'oibrigh' in order to avoid 'feidhmeanna ... a fheidhmiú'.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Beidh gach breitheamh saor neamhspleách maidir lena fheidhmeanna, nó lena feidhmeanna, breithimh a oibriú, gan de smacht air nó uirthi ach an Bunreacht seo agus an dlí.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Beidh na breithiúna go léir<sup>1</sup> neamhspleách le linn a bhfeidhmeanna<sup>2</sup> breithiúnacha a fheidhmiú<sup>3</sup> agus iad faoi réir an Bhunreacht seo agus an dlí amháin<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'uile'
- 2 'Beidh gach breitheamh neamhspleách le linn a fheidhmeanna nó a feidhmeanna'
- 3 'a oibriú', 'Beidh na breithiúna go léir neamhspleách ag feidhmiú / i bhfeidhmiú a bhfeidhmeanna breithiúnacha'
- 4 'agus gan iad faoi réir ach ag an mBunreacht seo agus ag an dlí amháin', 'agus gan de threoir/smacht/d'fhorlámhas/d'údarás orthu ach an Bunreacht seo agus an dlí'

ARTICLE 35.3 AIRTEAGAL 35.3

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní cead aon bhreitheamh a bheith ina chomhalta de cheachtar de Thithe an Oireachtais, ná bheith in aon oifig ná post sochair eile.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is not permitted that any judge be a member of either of the Houses of the Oireachtas, nor be in any other gainful post or office.

ENGLISH TEXT

No judge shall be eligible to be a member of either House of the Oireachtas or to hold any other office or position of emolument.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Eligible to be a member' and '(eligible) to hold' are expressed in the Irish text simply as 'a bheith ina chomhalta' ('to be a member') and 'bheith in' ('to be in'), these same Irish phrases expressing 'be a member' and '(to) hold' rather than 'eligible to be a member' and '(eligible) to hold' in Article 33.3.
- 2 'Or to hold any other office' is expressed as 'ná bheith in aon oifig ... eile' ('nor to be in any other office') in the Irish text, this being preceded by a comma not found in the English text.
- 3 See the divergences noted in the commentary on Article 33.3 regarding 'any other office or position of emolument' and 'No ... shall'.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 211, writing on 'Conflicts which have not yet surfaced' between the texts of the Constitution, remarks:

Another discordance appears to exist in Article 35.3, where the English text makes a judge "ineligible" to be a member of the Oireachtas (i.e. arguably, debarred from standing for election) while the Irish text merely says he may not be a member ("bheith ina chomhalta").

See the Report of the Constitution Review Group (May 1996, p. 182):

It seems to the Review group that the English phrase more accurately reflects the underlying purpose of this section, in that a serving judge would be simply debarred from standing for election. The Irish text should be brought into conformity by substituting "intofa mar chomhalta" for "ina chomhalta".

Note that Article 69 of the 1922 Constitution concludes as follows:

A judge shall not be eligible to sit in the Oireachtas and shall not hold any other office or position of emolument. Ní bheidh breitheamh iontoghtha chun suidhe san Oireachtas, agus ní bheidh aon oifig ná ionad eile sochair aige.

Commentary

a bheith See the commentary on Articles 12.3.2<sup>o</sup> and 12.4.1<sup>o</sup> respectively, where 'intofa' expresses 'eligible for re-election' and 'eligible for election'. 'Inghlactha' expresses 'eligible' (to become) in Article 18.2. 'A person shall not be eligible to be a member of the Governing Body' is translated as 'Ní bheidh duine i dteideal bheith ina chomhalta den Chomhlacht Ceannais' in s6(b) of the First Schedule to the National Institute for Higher Education, Limerick, Act, 1980, for example. Regarding 'hold', 'Where a pensionable officer of a local authority ceases to hold any office under them' is translated as 'Má scoireann oifigeach inphinsin d'údarás áitiúil d'aon oifig a shealbhú fúthu' in s9 of the Local Government Superannuation Act, 1956. 'I seilbh oifige' expresses 'hold office' in Article 12.3.1°, with 'hold' expressed simply by 'ina' in the following subsection. See also the commentary on Article 13.5.2° regarding 'hold'.

As 'eligible' occurs only once in the English text, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'i dteideal ar' in the direct translation below, with the repetition of 'ar' in the final clause, i.e. 'Ní bheidh aon bhreitheamh i dteideal ar a bheith ina chomhalta ... ná ar aon oifig ... eile a ghlacadh'.

post sochair The genitive singular of 'sochar' as an attributive adjective, 'sochar an amhrais' and 'sochar míchumais' being translated respectively in Téarmaí Dlí as 'benefit of the doubt' and 'disablement benefit' – see the commentary on Article 33.3.

ná While the English text has 'or', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'ná' ('nor') is essential in the Irish text when two separate things are involved.

ná bheith in aon oifig Note that we find 'ná a bheith in aon oifig' in Article 33.3, which agrees substantially with the present Article.

Ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Ní cead aon bhreitheamh a bheith ina chomhalta nó ina comhalta de cheachtar de Thithe an Oireachtais, ná a bheith in aon oifig ná post sochair eile.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ní bheidh aon bhreitheamh i dteideal<sup>1</sup> bheith ina chomhalta nó ina comhalta de cheachtar Teach den Oireachtas ná<sup>2</sup> i dteideal aon<sup>3</sup> oifig nó post sochair<sup>4</sup> eile a bheith aige nó aici<sup>5</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'i dteideal ar'
- 2 'nó'
- 3 'ná ar aon', 'ná aon'
- 4 'díolaíochta'
- 5 'bheith i seilbh aon oifige nó poist sochair eile', 'aon oifig nó post sochair eile a shealbhú'

ARTICLE 35.4.1° AIRTEAGAL 35.4.1°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní cead breitheamh den Chúirt Uachtarach ná den Ard-Chúirt a chur as oifig ach amháin de dheasca mí-iompair nó míthreorach a luafar, ná an uair sin féin mura rithid Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann rúin á éileamh é a chur as oifig.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is not permitted to put a judge of the Supreme Court nor of the High Court out of office except because of misconduct or mental disability which will be mentioned, nor even at that time unless Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann pass resolutions demanding he be put out of office.

ENGLISH TEXT

A judge of the Supreme Court or the High Court shall not be removed from office except for stated misbehaviour or incapacity, and then only upon resolutions passed by Dáil Éireann and by Seanad Éireann calling for his removal.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Disability', as in previous Articles, is expressed in the Irish text by 'míthreoir', a term which would today be interpreted more as '(mental) disability/incapacity' though 'disability' is the primary sense of the term in Dinneen.
- 2 'Be removed from office' and 'calling for his removal' are expressed respectively as 'a chur as oifig' ('be put out of office') and 'á éileamh é a chur as oifig' ('demanding he be put out of office') in the Irish text, as we have already seen in Article 33.5.1°, which is substantially the same as the present Article.
- 3 Again as in Article 33.5.1°, 'and then only upon resolutions passed by Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann' is expressed as 'ná an uair sin féin mura rithid Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann rúin' ('nor even at that time unless Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann pass resolutions') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Shall not' is expressed as 'Ní cead' ('It is not permitted'), as we have seen in the previous section and in some earlier Articles, with the following 'or' then being expressed as 'ná', 'nor', in the Irish text.

Note that Article 68 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

The judges of the Supreme Court and of the High Court shall not be removed except for stated misbehaviour or incapacity, and then only by resolutions passed by both Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann. Ní cuirfear breithiúin na Cúirte Uachtaraige ná na hArd-Chúirte as oifig ach mar gheall ar mhí-iompar no mhí-chumas a luadhfar, agus ansan féin le rúin a rithfead ag Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann araon.

Commentary

de dheasca ... míthreorach Note that we find 'de dheasca ... míthreora' in Article 33.5.1° (which is substantially the same as this Article); 'treorach' is given as the form of the genitive singular of 'treoir' in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil (chapter headed 'An tAinmfhocal', section on 'An Cúigiú Díochlaonadh'), 'míthreoir' being listed in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil as being a noun of the fifth declension, the genitive of such nouns ending in a broad consonant (-ch, -d, (n)n or -r). Ó Dónaill also gives 'míthreorach' as the form of the genitive, Dinneen giving ‘treora’, ‘treoire’ and ‘treorach’ as forms of the genitive singular of ‘treoir’. DIL cites examples of both ‘treora’ and ‘treorach’ as forms of the genitive of ‘treoir’, both forms being found in the Irish Lives of the Saints, for example (‘aingéal Dé ag deanamh tréora dhó’ and ‘inraic treorach do Caoimgin’ [‘excellent of guidance to Coemgen’]).

Ní cead breitheamh Note that we find ‘Ní cead aon bhreitheamh’ in the previous section; Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that the more emphatic expression with ‘aon’ was possibly suggested by the English form ‘no judge’.

See further the commentary on Article 33.5.1° for this subsection in general.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Ní cead breitheamh den Chúirt Uachtarach ná den Ard-Chúirt a chur as oifig ach amháin de dheasca mí-iompair nó míthreorach a luafar, ná an uair sin féin mura ritheann Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann rúin á éileamh é nó í a chur as oifig.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ní chuirfear breitheamh den Chúirt Uachtarach nó den Ard-Chúirt as oifig ach amháin de dheasca mí-iompair nó éagumais shonraithe<sup>1</sup>, ná an uair sin<sup>2</sup> féin ach tar éis do Dháil Éireann agus do Sheanad Éireann rúin a rith á iarraidh<sup>3</sup> é nó í a chur as oifig.

Variants

- 1 ‘mar gheall ar mhí-iompar nó éagumas sonraithe’
- 2 ‘ansin’
- 3 ‘ag éileamh’

ARTICLE 35.4.2° AIRTEAGAL 35.4.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Rúin ar bith den sórt sin a rithfidh Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann ní foláir don Taoiseach scéala a thabhairt don Uachtarán ina dtaobh go cuí agus cóip de gach rún díobh a sheoladh chuige faoi theastas Chathaoirleach an Tí den Oireachtas a rith é.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any resolutions of that kind which Dáil Éireann and Seanad Éireann will pass the Taoiseach must duly give account of them to the President and send a copy of each of those resolutions to him under the certification of the Chairman of the House of the Oireachtas that passed it.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Taoiseach shall duly notify the President of any such resolutions passed by Dáil Éireann and by Seanad Éireann, and shall send him a copy of every such resolution certified by the Chairman of the House of the Oireachtas by which it shall have been passed.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 This subsection is substantially the same as Article 33.5.2°. Note, however, that we do not find ‘as aforesaid’ in the English text here, as we did in Article 33.5.2°; that phrae was not specifically expressed in the Irish text, the initial clause of which corresponds directly to the initial clause of the Irish text of the present subsection. Whereas there is no comma in the English text of Article 33.5.2° corresponding to that before the final clause in the Irish text, the reverse situation occurs in the present Article 35.4.2°. ‘Each such resolution’ in the former Article appears as ‘every such resolution’ in the English text above; the Irish text’s ‘gach rún den tsamhail sin’ in the former Article appears as ‘gach rún díobh’ above.
- 2 Apart from the above, the same divergences noted as regards Article 33.5.2° also apply in regard to the present Article.

Commentary

See the commentary on Article 33.5.2°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Rúin ar bith den sórt sin a rithfidh Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann ní foláir don Taoiseach scéala a thabhairt don Uachtarán ina dtaobh go cuí agus cóip de gach rún díobh a sheoladh chuige nó chuici faoi theastas chathaoirleach an Tí den Oireachtas a rith é.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Cuirfidh an Taoiseach an tUachtarán ar an eolas go cuí<sup>1</sup> i dtaobh aon rún den sórt sin a rithfidh Dáil Éireann agus Seanad Éireann, agus seolfaidh sé nó sí cóip de gach rún den sórt sin chuige nó cuici arna dheimhniú ag Cathaoirleach an Tí den Oireachtas a mbeidh sé rite aige.

Variants

- 1 ‘Tabharfaidh an Taoiseach eolas cuí don Uachtarán’

ARTICLE 35.4.3° AIRTEAGAL 35.4.3°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Láithreach d’éis na scéala sin agus cóipeanna de na rúin sin a fháil don Uachtarán ní foláir dó, le hordú faoina láimh is faoina Shéala, an breitheamh lena mbainid a chur as oifig.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Immediately after the President receives that account and copies of those resolutions he must, by order under his hand and under his Seal, put the judge to whom they relate out of office.

ENGLISH TEXT

Upon receipt of such notification and of copies of such resolutions, the President shall forthwith, by an order under his hand and Seal, remove from office the judge to whom they relate.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The Irish text is substantially the same as that of Article 33.5.3°, with ‘an breitheamh lena mbainid’ replacing ‘an tArd-Reachtaire Cuntas agus Ciste’, and ‘remove from office the judge to whom they relate’ replacing ‘remove the Comptroller and Auditor General from office’ in the English text. Otherwise the same divergences as noted regarding Article 33.5.3° also apply to the present Article 35.4.3°.

Commentary

lena mbainid The third person plural, synthetic form, of the present indicative of ‘bain’ – see the commentary on Article 14.5.1° as regards the synthetic and analytic forms in the Constitution.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Láithreach d’éis an scéala sin agus cóipeanna de na rúin sin a fháil don Uachtarán ní foláir dó nó di, le hordú faoina láimh is faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala, an breitheamh lena mbaineann siad a chur as oifig.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ar fhógra den sórt sin agus cóipeanna de rúin den sórt sin<sup>1</sup> a fháil,<sup>2</sup> déanfaidh an tUachtarán láithreach,<sup>3</sup> le hordú faoina láimh agus faoina Shéala nó faoina Séala, an breitheamh lena mbaineann siad a chur as oifig.

Variants

- 1 ‘de na rúin sin’
- 2 ‘Ar an eolas sin a fháil, i dteannta cóipeanna de na rúin sin,’
- 3 ‘, láithreach.’

ARTICLE 35.5 AIRTEAGAL 35.5

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní cead laghdú a dhéanamh ar thuarastal breithimh an fad is bheidh in oifig.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is not permitted to reduce the salary of a judge while (he) is in office.

ENGLISH TEXT

The remuneration of a judge shall not be reduced during his continuance in office.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘Remuneration’ is again expressed as ‘tuarastal’ (‘salary’) in the Irish text, ‘luach saothair’ translating ‘remuneration’ in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 ‘During his continuance in office’ is expressed as ‘an fad is bheidh in oifig’ (‘while [he] is in office’) in the Irish text.
- 3 ‘Shall not’ is again expressed as ‘Ní cead’, ‘it is not permitted’, in the Irish text.

Note that Article 68 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

Such remuneration may not be diminished during their continuance in office. Ní féadfar an luach saothair sin do luigheadú an fhaid a leanfaid in oifig.

Commentary

an fad is bheidh in oifig The third person singular personal pronoun is understood, this allowing for ‘sé’ or ‘sí’ referring to the judge. Regarding ‘an fad is bheidh’, this phrase would generally be written today as ‘fad a bheidh’ or ‘fad is a bheidh’. Ó Dónaill gives ‘fad (is), a fhad (is)’, translating that phrase as ‘as long as’, citing ‘fad is a bhí mé ann, while I was there’. Dinneen cites ‘an fhaid is bheidh airgead agat, while you have money’, translating ‘fad’, as an adverb, as ‘while, as long as’, with ‘fad is (or an fad)’ having the same sense, Dinneen citing ‘fad do bhí sé ann, while (as long as) he was there’, giving ‘faid, an fhaid’ as variants. DIL cites ‘figlis fut baí’ (‘[he kept vigil] as long as he existed’) from Leabhar na hUidhre (written in Clonmacnois c. 1100) as an example of ‘fot’/‘fat’ as a relative adverb.

‘Whether during his continuance in office or afterwards’ is translated as ‘cibé acu le linn dó bheith fós i seilbh oifige nó dá éis sin’ in s4(2) of the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) (Amendment) Act, 1991. ‘Every order ... which ... regulates the continuance in office of holders of any office’ is translated as ‘Gach ordú ... le n-a rialálar i dtaobh sealbhóirí aon oifige áirithe do leanúint in oifig’ in s14 of the Local Government Act, 1941.

Note that ‘fanacht i seilbh oifige’ expresses ‘continue in office’ in Article 12.10.7°, with ‘lean dá oifig’ expressing ‘continue to hold office’ in Article 18.9.

tuarastal See the commentary on Article 15.9.2°. Again Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that he sees no reason why ‘tuarastal’ should not be used when it is a set general figure (“suim sheasta choiteann”) which is involved.

Standardised Irish text

Ní cead laghdú a dhéanamh ar thuarastal breithimh an fad a bheidh in oifig.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ní laghdófar luach saothair<sup>1</sup> breithimh<sup>2</sup> le linn dó nó di bheith<sup>3</sup> fós i seilbh oifige<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘tuarastal’
- 2 ‘Ní dhéanfar luach saothair breithimh a laghdú’, ‘Ní dhéanfar laghdú ar luach saothair breithimh’
- 3 ‘fad a bheidh sé nó sí’
- 4 ‘in oifig’, ‘i mbun oifige’, ‘fad a leanfaidh sé nó sí in oifig’

ARTICLE 36 AIRTEAGAL 36

TÉACS GAEILGE

Faoi chuimsiú na bhforálacha sin romhainn den Bhunreacht seo a bhaineas leis na Cúirteanna is de réir dlí a rialófar na nithe seo a leanas .i.

- i líon breithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí, agus na hArd-Chúirte, tuarastal, aois scortha agus pinsin na mbreithiúna sin,
- ii líon breithiúna gach Cúirte eile, agus na coinníollacha faoina gceaptar iad, agus
- iii comhdhéanamh agus comheagraíocht na gCúirteanna sin, roinnt na dlínse agus na hoibre ar na Cúirteanna sin agus ar na breithiúna sin, agus gach ní a bhaineas le nós imeachta.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Within the constraint/scope of the foregoing provisions of this Constitution which relate to the Courts it is in accordance with law(s) that the following matters will be regulated i.e.

- i the number of judges of the Supreme Court, and of the High Court, the salary, age of retirement and pensions of those judges,
- ii the number of judges of every other Court, and the conditions under which they are appointed, and
- iii the constitution and the co-ordination of those Courts, the division of jurisdiction and work among those Courts and among those judges, and everything that relates to procedure.

ENGLISH TEXT

Subject to the foregoing provisions of this Constitution relating to the Courts, the following matters shall be regulated in accordance with law, that is to say:-

- i the number of judges of the Supreme Court, and of the High Court, the remuneration, age of retirement and pensions of such judges,
- ii the number of the judges of all other Courts, and their terms of appointment, and
- iii the constitution and organization of the said Courts, the distribution of jurisdiction and business among the said Courts and judges, and all matters of procedure.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Their terms of appointment' is expressed as 'na coinníollacha faoina gceaptar iad' ('the conditions under which they are appointed') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Organization' is expressed by the compound 'comh' + 'eagraíocht', the force of the prefix 'comh-' in a context such as this where a single entity is concerned being normally intensive, according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, i.e. 'fully, in every detail'; 'comheagraíocht' is the abstract noun, i.e. 'the activity of organizing fully' – the verbal noun 'comheagrú' is found in Article 28.12 in the expression of the English 'organization'.
- 3 'Business' is expressed by 'obair' in the Irish text, which term is translated as 'work' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'gnó' translates 'business'.
- 4 'All matters of procedure' is expressed as 'gach ní a bhaineas le nós imeachta' ('everything that relates to procedure') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Of all other Courts' is expressed as 'gach Cúirte eile' ('of every other Court') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Remuneration' is again expressed as 'tuarastal', 'salary', in the Irish text.

- 7 'That is to say' is expressed by the native abbreviation for Latin 'id est' ('that is') in the Irish text, no comma preceding the abbreviation corresponding to the comma in the English text.
- 8 'Regulate' is expressed by 'rialaiú', the term for 'rule'/'control' in Téarmaí Dlí, as seen in many earlier Articles.
- 9 'Matters' is expressed in the Irish text by 'nithe', 'things'; 'matter' is translated as 'ábhar' rather than 'ní' in Téarmaí Dlí, however.
- 10 'Subject to' is expressed as 'Faoi chuimsiú' ('within the scope/constraint of') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles, this phrase being translated as 'faoi réir' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 11 A comma follows 'Courts' in the English text, no corresponding comma being found in the Irish text.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 208, reports as follows on reference made to Article 36iii in the courts:

In The State (Walshe) v Murphy ([1981] IR 275) Finlay P used the Irish equivalent "comhdhéanamh" in order to construe the English word "constitution" (of the courts), so as to make it include (via "comhdhéanamh" = "I make up") the determination of qualifications for judicial appointment.

Note that Article 67 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

The number of judges, the constitution and organisation of, and distribution of business and jurisdiction among, the said Courts and judges, and all matters of procedure shall be as prescribed by the laws for the time being in force and the regulations made thereunder. De réir na ndlíthe bheidh i bhfeidhm de thuras na huairé agus do réir na rialacha a déanfar fútha iseadh bheidh uimhir na mbreithiún, bunú agus có-ghléasa agus roinnt ghnótha agus údarais imeasg na gCúirteanna agus na mbreithiún roimh-ráite, agus gach ní bhaineas le nós imeachta.

Article 68 contains the following:

The age of retirement, the remuneration and the pension of such judges on retirement and the declarations to be taken by them on appointment shall be prescribed by law .... The terms of appointment of the judges of such other courts as may be created shall be prescribed by law. Socrófar le dlí aois oifige d'fhágaint, luach saothair agus pinsean a leithéid de bhreithiún ar oifig d'fhágaint dóibh agus an dearbtha a thabharfaid uatha le linn a gceaptha .... Socrófar le dlí téarmaí ceaptha breithiún aon chúirteanna eile a bunófar.

Commentary

líon breithiúna na Cúirte ... gach Cúirte According to the official standard one would expect 'breithiúna' to be lenited here, the nominative replacing the genitive, as 'Cúirt' is a definite noun – see the commentary on Article 1. Note, however, that Ó Dónaill cites 'líon suíochán an halla, the seating capacity of the hall', 'suíochán' being the genitive plural, 'líon suíochán' being taken as a unit.

Notwithstanding the increase made by this section in the number of the judges of the Supreme Court' is translated as 'D'ainneoin an mhéaduithe deintear leis an alt so ar líon breithiún na Cúirte Uachtaraighe' in s4(3) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1936, with 'So much of section 37 ...

as limits the number of the Judges of the Circuit Court' being translated as 'An méid d'alt 37 ... a chuireann teora le líon Breithiún na Cúirte Cuarda' in s9(1) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1928. 'It shall be necessary ... that the number of the members of the planning authority voting in favour of the resolution exceeds one-third of the total number of the members of the planning authority' is translated as 'Is gá ... gur mó ná trian de líon iomlán comhaltaí an údaráis phleanála a vótálfaidh i bhfabhar an rúin' in s39(d) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1976. Note that 'The number of the directors of the Agency shall be eleven' is translated as 'Aon duine dhéag is líon do stiúthóirí na gníomhaireachta' in s7(1) of the Youth Employment Agency Act, 1981. See further the commentary on Articles 14.3 and 16.2.2°.

aois scortha 'Scortha' is the past participle and adjectival form of the verb 'scoir'; 'scoir' is the genitive or attributive form of the noun, or verbal noun, 'scor'. Both forms may function interchangeably as attributes, e.g. 'am scoir' or 'am scortha', the second possibly giving slightly more emphasis to the action, according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú. Ó Dónaill gives the following examples of usage: 'ordú scoir, retirement order', 'cead scoir, permission to leave off work' and 'am scoir, leaving off time'. Dinneen, in addition to 'scoir' ('scur') and 'scortha', the latter being given a separate entry, lists 'scora' as a variant genitive/attributive inflection of the noun 'scor', and gives the following examples of usage: 'gan dáil scuir, for ever' and 'in am scora nó gabhála an iarainn, when removing or fixing the coulters'.

'Scoirim as oifig' is translated as 'I retire from office' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'scor as oifig de réir oird' is translated as 'retirement by rotation'. Ó Dónaill gives 'release, dismiss' as one of the senses of 'scoir', citing 'duine a scor as a phost, to retire someone from his post', with 'scor éigeantach, compulsory retirement' being cited s.v. 'scor'. This specific sense of 'retire' is not found in Dinneen, who cites 'tá siad ag scor indiu, they are removing their furniture, breaking up camp, etc., to-day', the principal sense of 'scoraim' there being 'I unyoke or unharness, unloose, unbind'. Dinneen gives 'freed from duty' as one of the senses of the participial adjective 'scortha', along with 'separated, divorced', citing 'an bhlonagach mhná so bhfullim scortha go fáilteach as a cúram, this obese woman from whose care I am, I am glad to say, set free' – Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'responsibility for whom', rather than 'from whose care', is what is involved here. 'Scor' is translated principally as 'act of unyoking, unharnessing (horses)' in DIL, where 'cosmulius tuib arataat ilsenman do suidiu ... is sain fri cath sain fri scor' ('a similitude of a trumpet: for it hath many sounds ... it is different for battle, different for unyoking') is cited from the eighteenth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. DIL cites 'mo nert do scor ó nirt mná' ('to let loose my strength [that my strength should vanish(?) on account of the strength of a woman]', from the version of the Wasting-Sickness of Cú Chulainn contained in Leabhar na hUidhre (written in Clonmacnois c. 1100), as an example of the sense of 'act of desisting from, ceasing, coming to an end', with 'nir scuir dind fhognam' ('she ceased not from the service') being cited from a later text.

Looking at early Acts, 'The ordinary day of retirement of county councillors shall be the seventh day after the ordinary day of election of such councillors' is translated as 'Is é a bheidh mar ghnáth-lá do chomhairleoirí contae chun dul as oifig ná an seachtú lá tar éis an ghnáth-lae thoghacháin do chomhairleoirí den tsórt san' in s7(1) of the Local Elections Act, 1927. 'Continuance in office, retirement, and election of certain members of the Board' is translated as 'Baill áirithe den Bhord do leanúint in oifig, d'fhágáil oifige, agus a dtogha' in the Margin Title of s6 of the Dublin Port and Docks Act, 1925, with 'to a county registrar on retirement' being translated as 'do chláirathóir chontae ... ar imeacht as oifig do' in s35(5) of the Court Officers Act, 1926. The current term, 'scur', is found in s16(b) of the Garda Síochána Act, 1924, where 'the promotion, retirement, degradation, dismissal, and punishment of members of the Garda Síochána' is translated as 'baill den Ghárda Síochána d'árdú, do scur, d'isliú, do bhriose, agus do chur fé phionós'. 'Eirighe as' translates 'retirement' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1928, p. 575.

'The age of retirement of a judge of the Circuit Court shall be seventy years' is translated as 'Seachtó bliain an aois scortha do bhreitheamh den Chúirt Cuarda' in s18(1) of the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Act, 1961. 'But that age of retirement may ... be extended by the Minister for Justice' is translated as 'ach féadfaidh an tAire Dlí agus Cirt ... an aois scortha sin a fhadú' in s9(7) of the Registration of Title Act, 1964. See further the commentary on Article 12.4.2°.

nós imeachta See the commentary on Article 29.4.2°. 'Regulations may provide for any matters of procedure in relation to appeals to the Minister' is translated as 'Féadfaidh foráil a bheith i rialacháin faoi aon ábhair a bhaineann le nós imeachta i ndáil le hachomhairc' in s42(a) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1976, for example. In s24(5) of the Housing (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1992, 'Regulations ... may make provision in relation to matters of procedure and administration' is translated as 'Féadfar, le rialacháin ..., foráil a dhéanamh i ndáil le nithe a bhaineann le nós imeachta agus riarachán'. 'Regulating any matters of procedure' is translated as 'ag rialáil aon ábhar maidir le nós imeachta' in s31(3)(b) of the Solicitors (Amendment) Act, 1960. Finally, 'divers matters of procedure' is translated as 'cúrsaí áirithe nós imeachta' in the Margin Title of s195 of the Defence Act, 1954.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below containing the phrase 'gach ábhar nós imeachta', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that this type of arrangement ("comhghléas"), i.e. Noun<sup>1</sup> + indefinite Noun<sup>2</sup> + indefinite Noun<sup>3</sup>, was very unusual and on the border as regards grammar ("ar imeall na gramadúlachta"). Professor Ó Murchú states that, while Dinneen has 'fear mine cáirde' and Ó Dónaill has 'arán mine cruithneachta', usually one would find, even from the best speakers in Munster, 'arán min choirce' (cf. the form from 1954 above). Whatever about Noun<sup>2</sup> being in the genitive, Máirtín Ó Murchú doubts whether the construction would be found except in old established phrases and remarks that, at any rate, Noun<sup>1</sup> and Noun<sup>2</sup> must be grammatical ("gramadúil") in themselves, or in agreement with the whole sense. Professor Ó Murchú maintains that 'ábhar nós' is not what is involved here but 'ábhar a bhaineann le nós', and recommends 'na nithe uile a bhaineann le nós imeachta' as a direct translation of the final clause.

comheagraíocht See the commentary on Article 28.12 regarding ‘a chomheagru’ expressing ‘organization’. This compound of ‘comh’ and ‘eagraíocht’ does not appear to be given as a headword either in Ó Dónaill or in Dinneen, the former having a headword ‘comheagar’, translated as ‘co-ordination’, citing ‘comheagar a chur ar rudaí, to co-ordinate things’, the latter translating ‘cómheagar’ as ‘arrangement, order, array; ornament’, citing ‘cath cóimheagair, a squadron in array’, also giving the indeclinable adjective ‘cómheagartha’ as a headword, translated as ‘arranged, set with (de)’. ‘Eagraíocht’ is translated as ‘organization’ in Ó Dónaill, ‘eagras’ being cited as a variant, and ‘eagrú’ being the verbal noun of ‘eagraigh’ (‘arrange, organize’), translated as ‘arrangement, organization’. ‘Eagraim’ is translated as ‘I set in order; digest, ordain, regulate, I edit (as a book, etc.); I set with (as jewels)’ in Dinneen, ‘eagairt’ and ‘eagar’ being given as forms of the verbal noun. The earlier form of ‘eagar’, ‘ecor’/‘ecar’, is the verbal noun of ‘in-cuirethar’ and is translated principally as ‘arranging, disposing, setting in order; arrangement, array (of persons, places, things)’ in DIL, where ‘a n-ecor<sub>7</sub> a corugud’ (‘their array’ [of the host of Heaven]) is cited from Leabhar na hUidhre (compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100).

comhdhéanamh This headword is translated as ‘constitution, structure, composition’ in Ó Dónaill, being the verbal noun of the compound verb ‘comhdhéan’, ‘make up, constitute’ – see the commentary on Article 15.1.1°. ‘The convening and constitution of Courts Martial’ is translated as ‘Có-ghairm agus córú Arm-Chúirteanna’ in s125(1)(b) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. ‘In regard to its constitution, membership, employers, organisation and activities’ is translated as ‘maidir le cóiriú, comhaltas, fostaithe, eagraíocht agus gníomhaíocht an chumainn’ in s38(1)(a) of the Adoption Act, 1952. ‘Constitution and Organisation of the Defence Forces’ is translated as ‘Comhdhéanamh agus Eagraíocht Óglaigh na hÉireann’ in the Heading of Part III of the Defence Act, 1954.

roinnt ... na hoibre ‘Obair’ is translated as ‘work’ in Téarmaí Dlí, while ‘business premises’ is translated as ‘áitreabh gnótha’ – ‘ráiteas gnóthaí’, however, is translated there as ‘statement of affairs’. ‘Opar’ (‘opair’) comes from Latin ‘opera’, the dative plural ‘oiprib’ being cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles in DIL, where this headword is translated principally as ‘work, activity, employment, occupation’. See the commentary on Article 3 regarding ‘oibrigh’.

na coinniollacha See the commentary on Article 16.1.2°, where ‘coinnioll’ expresses ‘provision’, and on Article 33.6 where ‘coinnioll’ expresses ‘term’, as in the present Article. ‘The remuneration, terms of appointment and conditions of service of the Chairman ... may be fixed by contracts’, for example, is translated as ‘Féadfar luach saothair, téarmaí ceapacháin agus coinniollacha seirbhíse an Chathaoirleach ... a shocrú trí chonarthaí’ in s24 of the Industrial Development Act, 1969, following s4(5) of the Industrial Development Authority Act, 1950.

a bhaineas ... a leanas The special form of the relative, present indicative, of ‘bain’ and ‘lean’ respectively, the latter form being always used in this phrase – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative.

roinnt ... ar See the commentary on Article 28.12, where ‘gnó a roinnt orthu’ expresses ‘distribution of business amongst Departments of State’.

na hArd-Chúirte Note that a semi-colon follows this phrase in the first paragraph in the original Irish text.

de réir This phrase is translated as ‘in accordance with’ in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 1.

Faoi chuimsiú See the commentary on Articles 12.5 and 18.7.2°.

a rialófar See the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 12.5.

.i. See the commentary on Article 7.

Standardised Irish text

Faoi chuimsiú na bhforálacha sin romhainn den Bhunreacht seo a bhaineann leis na Cúirteanna is de réir dlí a rialófar na nithe seo a leanas, .i.

- i líon breithiúna na Cúirte Uachtaraí, agus na hArd-Chúirte, tuarastal, aois scortha agus pinsin na mbreithiúna sin,
- ii líon breithiúna gach Cúirte eile, agus na coinniollacha faoina gceaptar iad, agus
- iii comhdhéanamh agus comheagraíocht na gCúirteanna sin, roinnt na dlínse agus na hoibre ar na Cúirteanna sin agus ar na breithiúna sin, agus gach ní a bhaineann le nós imeachta.

Direct translation

Faoi réir na bhforálacha sin romhainn den Bhunreacht seo a bhaineann leis na Cúirteanna, déanfar na hábhair seo a leanas a rialáil de réir dlí, is é sin le rá:-

- i líon bhreithiúna<sup>1</sup> na Cúirte Uachtaraí, agus na hArd-Chúirte, luach saothair<sup>2</sup>, aois scoir agus pinsin na mbreithiúna sin,
- ii líon bhreithiúna<sup>1</sup> na gCúirteanna eile go léir, agus téarmaí a gceapacháin, agus
- iii comhdhéanamh agus eagrú na gCúirteanna sin, dáileadh dlínse agus gnó ar na Cúirteanna sin agus ar na breithiúna sin, agus gach ábhar<sup>3</sup> a bhaineann le nós imeachta.

Variants

- 1 ‘breithiúna’
- 2 ‘tuarastal’
- 3 ‘na nithe uile’

ARTICLE 37.1 AIRTEAGAL 37.1

TÉACS GAELGE

Aon duine nó aon dream a n-údaraitear go cuí dóibh le dlí feidhmeanna agus cumhachtaí teoranta breithiúnais a oibriú i gcúrsaí nach cúrsaí coireachta, má oibríid na feidhmeanna agus na cumhachtaí sin ní bheidh an t-oibriú sin gan bhail dlí de bhithin aon ní sa Bhunreacht seo, siúd is nach breitheamh ná cúirt a ceapadh nó a bunaíodh mar bhreitheamh nó mar chúirt faoin mBunreacht seo an duine nó an dream sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any person or any group who are duly authorized by law to operate limited functions and powers of judgement in matters that are not criminal matters, if they operate those functions and powers that operation will not be without legal validity by reason of anything in this Constitution, even though that person or group is not a judge or a court which was appointed or established as a judge or as a court under this Constitution.

ENGLISH TEXT

Nothing in this Constitution shall operate to invalidate the exercise of limited functions and powers of a judicial nature, in matters other than criminal matters, by any person or body of persons duly authorised by law to exercise such functions and powers, notwithstanding that such person or such body of persons is not a judge or a court appointed or established as such under this Constitution.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Nothing in this Constitution shall operate to invalidate the exercise of such functions and powers' is expressed as 'má oibrí na feidhmeanna agus na cumhachtaí sin ní bheidh an t-oibriú sin gan bhail dlí de bhithin aon ní sa Bhunreacht seo' ('if they operate those functions and powers that operation will not be without legal validity by reason of anything in this Constitution') in the Irish text, 'exercise' being expressed by 'oibrigh', which term is translated as 'operate' in Téarmaí Dlí, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 2 'Functions and powers of a judicial nature' is expressed simply as 'feidhmeanna agus ... cumhachtaí ... breithiúnais' ('judicial functions and powers') in the Irish text.
- 3 'In matters other than criminal matters' is expressed in the Irish text as 'i gcúrsaí nach cúrsaí coireachta' ('in matters that are not criminal matters'), with 'coireacht', the term expressing 'criminal', being the abstract noun generally translated as 'wickedness, guiltiness', 'coiriúil' translating 'criminal' in Téarmaí Dlí; this phrase is preceded by a comma in the English text alone.
- 4 'Body of persons' is expressed by 'dream', the same term that expresses 'group' in earlier Articles; Ó Dónaill translates 'dream' principally as 'body of people', however.
- 5 'Notwithstanding that' is expressed as 'siúd is (nach)', 'even though', in the Irish text, 'notwithstanding that' being translated as 'd'ainneoin go' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 6 'Appointed or established as such' is expressed as 'a ceapadh nó a bunaíodh mar bhreitheamh nó mar chúirt' ('appointed or established as a judge or as a court') in the Irish text.

Commentary

siúd is nach 'Siúd is go' is translated as 'even though' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'siúd is go raibh an ceart agat, granted that you were right' and 'siúd is nach bhfaca mé iad, even though I didn't see them'. Dinneen translates 'siúd is go (nach)' as 'granted that (not), although (not), even if (not)', citing 'siúd is ná beadh sé uaithe, even if she did not want it', stating that 'siúd = biodh siúd'. DIL cites 'sud 7 nach mbiadh sé air ar gcumas' ('what if it should not be in our power') from Donlevy's An Teagasc Críosduidhe (1742).

'Notwithstanding that' is translated as 'd'ainneoin go' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Notwithstanding the existence of the patent or registration' is translated as 'd'ainneoin an phaitinn no an clárú do bheith ann' in s130(1) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927, for example. 'To drive during the Congress period ... any motor car of that class notwithstanding that such person is not the holder of a driving licence' is translated as 'gluaisteán ar bith den tsaghas san do thiomáint le linn tréimhse an Chomórtha, d'ainneoin gan ceadúnas tiomána do bheith ag an duine sin' in s6(2) of the Eucharistic Congress (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1932. 'Such certificate ... may be given in respect of a person notwithstanding that such person ... has retired' is translated as 'Féadfar an deimhniú san ... do thabhairt alos duine d'ainneoin gur tharla ... an duine sin d'éirge as' in s8(2) of the Superannuation Act, 1936. See further the commentary on Article 14.3 where 'd'ainneoin' expresses 'notwithstanding'.

dream See the commentary on Article 10.1, where this term expresses 'body', and on Article 19 where 'dream' expresses 'group'. Note that Ó Dónaill translates 'dream' principally as 'body of people'. 'Comhlacht' expresses 'body' in Article 13.8.2°. 'The word "employer" includes any employer being a body of persons, corporate or unincorporate, as well as an employer who is an individual' is translated as 'foluionn an focal "fostathóir" aon fhostathóir is cólucht daoine, ionchorpruithe no neamh-ionchorpruithe, chó maith le fostathóir is duine aonaránach' in s47(2) of the Finance Act, 1925. 'It shall be unlawful for any person or body of persons ... to carry on business as the promoter of a trading stamp scheme' is translated as 'Ní dleathach d'aon duine ná d'aon chomhlacht daoine ... gnó a sheoladh mar thionscnóir scéime stampaí trádála' in s2(1) of the Trading Stamps Act, 1980.

feidhmeanna ... breithiúnais 'Breithiúnais' is the genitive singular of 'breithiúnas' used attributively. 'Breithiúnas' is translated as 'judgment' in Téarmaí Dlí (where 'Cúirt Bheithiúnais' is translated as 'Court of Justice') and in Ó Dónaill. 'Breitheamhas' is translated as 'a decision, a judgment; the office of a brehon' in Dinneen, Old Irish 'brithemnas', based on 'breithem' ('judge'), being translated as 'adjudication, judgment; jurisdiction' in DIL. The nineteenth-century story 'The Conversion of Loígure' refers to 'brithem fri brithemnas ar roscadaib 7 fasaigib' ('a judge for judgement based on roscaids [legal verses] and fasachs [maxims] – see Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 196, n. 39). See the commentary on Article 29.2 regarding 'judicial', expressed in that Article by 'breithiúnach; 'breithimh' expresses 'judicial' in Article 35.2.

In s5(b) of the Prohibition of Incitement to Hatred Act, 1989, 'proceedings publicly heard before a court, or a tribunal exercising functions or powers of a judicial nature' is translated as 'imeachtaí a éisteadh go poiblí os comhair cúirte nó binse a bheidh ag feidhmiú feidhmeanna nó cumhachtaí de chineál breithiúnach'. As regards other examples of 'nature' in this context, 'other assets of a financial nature', for example, is translated as 'sócshainní eile de chineál airgeadais' in s4(2) of the Fifth Schedule to the Finance Act, 1990. 'Five shall form a quorum for any business which, in the opinion of the Chairman of the Committee, may be considered of a special nature' is translated as 'cúigear is quorum i gcóir aon ghnótha is gnó speisialta dar le Cathaoirleach an Choiste' in s6 of the 'Mayo County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. The Long Title of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925, 'An Act to declare divers acts of a treasonable nature ... to be offences', is translated as 'Acht chun a fhaisnéis gur ciontaí gníomhartha áirithe de shaghas tréasúnta'.

cúrsaí coireachta 'Matter, affair; circumstance' is given by Ó Dónaill as a secondary sense of 'cúrsa' (primarily 'course'), citing 'cúrsaí dlí, creidimh, legal, religious matters'. Dinneen also gives 'affair, matter, event' as one of the senses of 'cúrsaí', translating 'cúrsaí dlíghidh' as 'legal proceedings (or matters)' – see the commentary on Article 15.12.

'Coireacht' is translated as 'wickedness, guiltiness' in Ó Dónaill and simply as 'guiltiness' in Dinneen, 'coireamhlacht' being similarly translated, and Ó Dónaill translating 'coiriúlacht' as 'criminality, guiltiness'. 'Coireach', on which 'coireacht' is based, is translated as 'offender, transgressor', as noun, and as 'wicked, sinful; guilty' as an adjective, in Ó Dónaill. 'Coir' is translated as 'crime, offence; fault, transgression' in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Article 30.3. See also the commentary on Article 34.3.1° where 'criminal' is expressed as 'coiriúil'.

The adjective 'criminal' is translated as 'coiriúil' in Téarmaí Dlí. In the Long Title of the Criminal Justice Bill, 1997, '... to amend the law relating to proceedings in criminal matters', is translated as '... do leasú an dlí a bhaineann le himeachtaí in ábhair choiriúla', with 'mutual assistance in criminal matters' being translated as 'cúnamh frithpháirteach in ábhair choiriúla' in s2 of Article 11 of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1975. In s4 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1926, 'The Central Criminal Court shall have and may exercise every jurisdiction in criminal matters for the time being vested in the High Court' is translated as 'Beidh ag an bPríomh-Chúirt Choiriúil gach údarás a bheidh ag an Ard-Chúirt de thuras na huairé i gcúrsaí coiriúla'.

a oibríú ... má oibríú See the commentary on Article 3 regarding 'oibrigh' and on Article 14.5.1° regarding the synthetic ('oibríú') and analytic ('oibríonn siad') form of the verb.

a n-údaraitear See the commentary on Article 37.2.

teoranta See the commentary on Article 31.1.

gan bhail dlí See the commentary on Articles 15.4.2° and 34.3.2°.

de bhíthin See the commentary on Article 23.2.1°.

Standardised Irish text

Aon duine nó aon dream a n-údaraitear go cuí dóibh le dlí feidhmeanna agus cumhachtaí teoranta breithiúnais a oibríú i gcúrsaí nach cúrsaí coireachta, má oibríonn siad na feidhmeanna agus na cumhachtaí sin ní bheidh an t-oibríú sin gan bail dlí de bhíthin aon ní sa Bhunreacht seo, siúd is nach breitheamh ná cúirt a ceapadh nó a bunaíodh mar bhreitheamh nó mar chúirt faoin mBunreacht seo an duine nó an dream sin.

Direct translation

Ní oibreoidh aon ní sa Bhunreacht seo chun feidhmiú<sup>1</sup> feidhmeanna agus cumhachtaí teoranta de chineál breithiúnach, in ábhair seachas ábhair choiriúla, ag aon duine nó ag aon chomhlacht daoine a bheidh údaraithe go cuí le dlí chun na feidhmeanna agus na cumhachtaí sin a fheidhmiú, a chur ó bhail, d'ainneoin nach breitheamh ná<sup>2</sup> cúirt a bheidh ceaptha nó bunaithe mar sin<sup>3</sup> faoin mBunreacht seo a bheidh sa duine nó sa chomhlacht daoine sin.

Variants

- 1 'oibríú'
- 2 'nó'
- 3 'nach breitheamh a bheidh ceaptha mar bhreitheamh nó cúirt a bheidh bunaithe mar chúirt'

ARTICLE 37.2 AIRTEAGAL 37.2

TÉACS GAELGE

Ní raibh ná ní bheidh aon uchtáil ar dhuine a ghlac éifeacht nó a bhfuil sé sainráite gur ghlac sí éifeacht aon tráth tar éis don Bhunreacht seo a theacht i ngníomh faoi dlíthe a d'achtaigh an tOireachtas agus is uchtáil de bhun ordú a rinne nó údarú a thug aon duine nó aon dream a bhí sonraithe leis na dlíthe sin chun na feidhmeanna agus na cumhachtaí sin a oibríú ó bhail dlí de bhíthin amháin nár bhreitheamh ná cúirt a ceapadh nó a bunaíodh mar bhreitheamh nó mar chúirt faoin mBunreacht seo an duine nó an dream sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

No adoption of a person which took effect or which is expressed to have taken effect at any time after the coming into operation of this Constitution under laws which the Oireachtas enacted and which is an adoption in pursuance of an order made by or an authorisation given by any person or any group which was specified by those laws to operate those functions and powers did not nor will not lack legal validity for the sole reason that that person or that group was not a judge or a court which was appointed or established as a judge or a court under this Constitution.

ENGLISH TEXT

No adoption of a person taking effect or expressed to take effect at any time after the coming into operation of this Constitution under laws enacted by the Oireachtas and being an adoption pursuant to an order made or an authorisation given by any person or body of persons designated by those laws to exercise such functions and powers was or shall be invalid by reason only of the fact that such person or body of persons was not a judge or a court appointed or established as such under this Constitution.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Taking effect or expressed to take effect' is rendered as 'a ghlac éifeacht nó a bhfuil sé sainráite gur ghlac sí éifeacht' ('which took effect or which is expressed to have taken effect') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Body of persons' is rendered as 'dream', 'group', as in the previous section.
- 3 'Designated' is rendered as 'sonraithe' ('specified') in the Irish text, 'sonraim' being translated as 'I specify' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 'Exercise' is rendered in the Irish text by 'oibrigh', which term is translated as 'operate' in Téarmaí Dlí, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 5 'Invalid' is rendered as 'ó bhail dlí' ('lacking legal validity'); 'invalid' is translated as 'neamhbhailí' in Téarmaí Dlí; note that 'invalidate' is expressed as 'gan bhail dlí' in the previous section.
- 6 'By reason only of the fact that' is rendered simply as 'de bhithin amháin' ('for the sole reason that') in the Irish text.
- 7 'Appointed or established as such' is rendered as 'a ceapadh nó a bunaíodh mar bhreitheamh nó mar chúirt' ('appointed or established as a judge or as a court') in the Irish text, as we saw in the previous section.

Note that this section was added to the text following the Sixth Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1979.

Commentary

sainráite The past participle of a compound of 'sain-' ('special, particular, specified, characteristic') and 'abair' ('say'), as a participial adjective, is translated as 'express' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, where 'barántas sainráite, express warranty' and 'coinníoll sainráite, express condition' are cited, for example. This compound does not appear to be given as a headword in Dinneen. The prefixed adjectival 'sain-' as an independent adjective is translated as 'different, distinct, separate' in DIL, where 'sain dán cáich' ('different [is] every one's gift') is cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, with 'ní nomsainmesca ó mac Dé' ('whatever sunders me from the Son of God') being cited from a later source as an example of 'sain' compounded with a verb ('mescaid', also here with the preverb 'no' and infix pronoun).

'As from the said date from which the certificate is expressed to take effect' is translated as 'ón dáta san o n-a deirtar sa deimhniú go bhfuil an deimhniú le bheith in éifeacht' in s62(2) of the Court Officers Act, 1926, this same English text (without 'said') being translated as 'amhail ón dáta a mbeidh sainráite sa deimhniú éifeacht a bheith aige uaidh' in s3(2)(b) of the Court Officers Act, 1951. 'The expiration of a period of four months from the date on which the resolution is expressed to take effect' is translated as 'tréimhse ceithre mhí a bheith caite ón dáta a déarfadh an rún a bheidh sé le teacht in éifeacht' in s85(1) of the Finance Act, 1974. See further the commentary on Article 24.1.

'Luaign' consistently expresses 'express' in the original text of the Constitution: 'a Bill expressed to be a Bill containing a proposal to amend the Constitution' is expressed as 'Bille a luaitear a bheith ina Bhille a bhfuil togra ann chun an Bunreacht a leasú' in Articles 24.1, 25.1, 26 and 27, 'má luaitear ann' expressing 'which is expressed to be' in Article 28.3.3°, 'a luaitear sa Bhunreacht a bheith' expressing 'as are by this Constitution expressed' in Article 31.1, 'a luaitear ina dtaobh sa Bhunreacht seo' expressing 'which are by this Constitution expressed' in Article 32, 'Every Bill shall be expressed to be' being expressed as 'Ní foláir a lua i ngach Bille' in Article 46.3 and, finally, 'Dlíthe ... a mbeidh luaite iontu' expressing 'Laws ... expressed to' in Article 50.2. Note also how 'democratically expressed', in the new Article 3 contained in Article 29.7, is rendered as 'á chur in iúl go daonlathach'.

de bhun ordú ... nó údarú The genitive would normally follow the prepositional phrase 'de bhun', but as 'ordú' and 'údarú' are both verbal nouns following directly after the compound preposition they are not inflected – see An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, chapter headed 'Form of the Nominative in place of the Genitive', s5(b), where 'tá an lá ag dul chun síneadh' is cited as example. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú comments, regarding a draft of the direct translation below, that the genitive inflection is unnecessary.

Looking at 'authorisation' in early Acts, 'Where any person duly authorised by a sanitary authority has reasonable cause to suppose' is translated as 'Má bhíonn ag éinne dar thug údarás sláintíochta údarás cuibhe cúis réasúnta chun a cheapa' in s20(3) of the Local Government Act, 1925. 'Authorisation of contracts in reference to road motor services' is translated as 'Údarú connartha bhaineann le seirbhísi gluaisteáin ar bhóithre' in the Margin Title of s7 of the Railways (Road Motor Service) Act, 1927. In s60(4) of the Pigs and Bacon Act, 1935, 'The Minister may at any time revoke an authorisation given under this section' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire, uair ar bith, údarú do tugadh fén alt so ... do cheiliúradh'.

Looking at modern Acts, in s3 of the Tea (Purchase and Importation) (Amendment) Act, 1966, 'imports it under and in accordance with an authorisation given by the Minister' is translated as 'é a allmhairiú faoi réim agus de réir údaráis ón Aire'. Finally, in s6(7) of the Animals Act, 1985, 'on foot of an authorisation given in a notice' is translated as 'de dhroim údarú a tugadh i bhfógra'.

uchtáil This headword is translated as 'adoption' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'uchtú' being given as the standard form in Ó Dónaill. 'Leanbh a uchtú, to adopt a child' is cited by Ó Dónaill as an example of 'uchtú' as a verbal noun, 'uchtú' as a noun being translated as 'adoption'. In a list of additional headwords appended to the Glossary in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, however, we find 'uchtáil' as the verbal noun of 'uchtáigh'. Dinneen does not give either verbal noun or verb as a separate headword, but s.v. 'ucht-', i.e. 'breast-', in compounds, he includes the following: 'ucht-mhac, an adopted son', 'uchtcach, adoptive', 'uchtcacht (uchtcandacht), adoption', 'uchtcadh, adopting' and 'uchtcaim, I adopt as a son'. Dinneen refers to the glossary appended to the second edition of Bedell's Irish Bible, 1690, as his source, where we find 'athargadh, ochdmhacadh' – this is cited in DIL s.v. 'ucht', 'breast, bosom', where the compound 'uchtmacadh' is translated as 'adoption', with 'uchtmhacadh, the adoption of a son' being cited from the transcript of Peter O'Connell's Irish-English Dictionary in the Royal Irish Academy.

In early Irish law 'mac fáesma' expressed 'adopted son', one of the senses of 'fáes(s)am' in DIL being 'taking into protection, adopting'. In his 'Index of Irish Terms' in A Guide to Early Irish Law, Fergus Kelly translates the earlier form 'fóesam', verbal noun of 'fo-sisedar' ('stands under, acknowledges, protects'), as 'legal protection, adoption into kin' and states (ibid., p.105):

Rights of inheritance may be acquired by a person adopted into a kin-group, either through payment of an adoption fee (lóg fóesma) or through invitation .... His adoption (fóesam lit. 'taking into protection') is a contract which must be bound by sureties, and ratified by the head of the kin .... a man may disinherit a son who fails to carry out his filial duties (goire) and adopt another person in his stead.

In s9 of the Status of Children Act, 1987, 'any order made or decree granted outside the State, providing for the adoption of a person' is translated as 'aon ordú arna dhéanamh, nó foraithe arna deonú, lasmuigh den Stát, lena ndéantar socrú maidir le huchtáil duine'. In s1 of the Adoption Act, 1991, "'foreign adoption" means an adoption of a child who ... was under the age of 21 years' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "uchtáil choigríche" uchtáil linbh a bhí ... faoi bhun 21 bliain d'aois'.

ó bhail dlí 'Validity' is given as one of the senses of 'bail', principally translated as 'prosperity' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ionas go mbeadh bail ar a fhaoistin, so that his confession might be valid', translating 'gan bhail' as 'invalid, void'. 'Invalid' is translated as 'neamhbhailí' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'bailí' is translated as 'valid' and 'I validate' is translated as 'déanaim bailí'. Dinneen translates 'gan bhail' as 'void, ineffective (of a sacrament)', giving Donlevy's Irish Catechism (1742) as source; Dinneen does not appear to give 'bailí' as a headword. DIL cites 'bidh buil ar an bpósadh gan fhios, gan fhiadhain' ('a clandestine marriage is valid'), from Parrthas an Anma (Gearnon, 1645), as an example of the sense 'of the efficacy of a sacrament or judgement' of 'bal', also citing 'bidh a bpósadh ar bhail' ('valid') from Ó Heoghusa's An Teagasg Críostaidhe (1611). See further the commentary on Article 40.4.3°.

In Article 28.3.3°, 'Nothing in this Constitution shall be invoked to invalidate any law enacted by the Oireachtas' is expressed as 'Ní cead aon ní dá bhfuil sa Bhunreacht seo a agairt chun aon dlí dá n-achtaíonn an tOireachtas a chur ó bhail', with 'No provision of this Constitution invalidates laws enacted' being rendered as 'Ní dhéanann aon fhoráileamh atá sa Bhunreacht seo aon dlíthe a d'achtaigh ... a chur ó bhail dlí' in Article 29.4.7°. 'Gan bhail' expresses 'invalid' in Articles 15.4.2°, 'gan bhail dlí' expressing 'invalidate' in Article 37.1. In Article 40.4.3°, however, following the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, 'but that such law is invalid' is rendered as 'ach an dlí sin a bheith neamhbhailí'.

Turning to the Acts, 'No such resolution shall be invalid or, in the case of any such resolution passed before the passing of this Act, ever have been invalid by reason only of the failure to give such notice' is translated as 'ní bheidh aon rún den tsórt san nea-mbailidhe no, i gcás aon rún den tsórt san do ritheadh roimh an Acht so do rith, ní tuigfear é bheith nea-mbailidhe riamh de bhíthin gan an fógra san do thabhairt' in s6 of the Town and Regional Planning (Amendment) Act, 1939. Finally, in s6(6) of the Schedule to the Pilotage Order Confirmation Act, 1927, 'No act or proceeding of the Committee shall be invalid on account of any vacancy in their body' is translated as 'Ní bheidh aon ghníomh ná imeacht de chuid an Choiste nea-dhleathach de dheascaibh aon fholúntais ar a measc'. See further the commentary on Article 15.4.2°.

de bhíthin amháin See the commentary on Article 29.4.3° where 'de bhíthin' renders 'necessitated by'. 'A notice of appeal ... shall not be invalid by reason only of the fact that an appeal town ... did not stand specified' is translated as 'Fógra achomhairc ... ní bheidh sé neamhbhailí toisc amháin nach raibh baile achomhairc ... sonraithe' in s1(2)(b) of the Courts Act, 1986. In s6(1) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1982, 'A permission or approval granted on appeal ... shall not be, and shall not be regarded as ever having been, invalid by reason only of the fact that the development concerned contravened, or would contravene, materially the development plan' is translated as 'Aon chead nó ceadú a bheidh tugtha ar achomharc ... ní bheidh sé, agus ní mheasfar go raibh sé riamh, neamhbhailí de bhíthin amháin gur sháraigh, nó go sáródh an fhorbairt áirithe, ar mhodh ábhartha, an plean forbartha'.

Standardised Irish text

Ní raibh ná ní bheidh aon uchtáil ar dhuine a ghlac éifeacht nó a bhfuil sé sainráite gur ghlac sí éifeacht aon tráth tar éis don Bhunreacht seo a theacht i ngníomh faoi dhlíthe a d'achtaigh an tOireachtas agus is uchtáil de bhun ordaithe a rinne nó údaraithe a thug aon duine nó aon dream a bhí sonraithe leis na dlíthe sin chun na feidhmeanna agus na cumhachtaí sin a oibriú ó bhail dlí de bhíthin amháin nár bhreitheamh ná cúirt a ceapadh nó a bunaíodh mar bhreitheamh nó mar chúirt faoin mBunreacht seo an duine nó an dream sin.

Direct translation

Ní raibh ná ní bheidh aon uchtáil ar dhuine a ghlacfaidh éifeacht nó a bhfuil sé sainráite go nglacfaidh sí éifeacht tráth ar bith tar éis don Bhunreacht seo teacht i bhfeidhm faoi dhlíthe arna n-achtú ag an Oireachtas agus is uchtáil de bhun ordú<sup>1</sup> a rinne nó údarú<sup>2</sup> a thug aon duine nó comhlacht daoine a bheidh ceaptha ag na dlíthe sin chun na feidhmeanna agus na cumhachtaí sin a oibriú<sup>3</sup> neamhbhailí toisc amháin gurbh amhlaidh nár bhreitheamh ná nár chúirt a bhí ceaptha nó bunaithe mar sin faoin mBunreacht seo an duine sin nó an comhlacht daoine sin.

Variants

- 1 'ordaithe'
- 2 'údaraithe'
- 3 As Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks, some punctuation would be an addition to the easier reading of the above text, a comma here following 'a oibriú', for example.

TRIAL OF OFFENCES TRIAIL I gCIONTA

ARTICLE 38.1 AIRTEAGAL 38.1

TÉACS GAELGE

TRIAIL I gCIONTA

Ní cead aon duine a thriail in aon chúis choiriúil ach mar is cuí de réir dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

TRIAL IN OFFENCES

It is not permitted to try any person in any criminal case/prosecution except as is proper according to law.

ENGLISH TEXT

TRIAL OF OFFENCES

No person shall be tried on any criminal charge save in due course of law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The title 'Trial of Offences' is expressed as 'Triail i gCionta' ('Trial in Offences') in the Irish text, the same preposition 'i' following 'triail' expressing 'on' in the section itself ('a thriail in aon chúis', 'tried on any ... charge'); note that we find 'cionta a thriail' expressing 'trial of offences' in s3.1° of this Article.
- 2 While the Irish term expressing 'charge', 'cúis', has this sense, this term also renders 'case' ('lawsuit'), and is translated simply as 'cause' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'charge (i.e. criminal)' is translated as 'cúiseamh' rather than 'cúis'.
- 3 'In due course of law' is expressed as 'mar is cuí de réir dlí' ('as is proper/due according to law') in the Irish text.
- 4 'No ... shall' is expressed as 'Ní cead' ('It is not permitted to') in the Irish text, as we have seen in many earlier Articles.

Note that Article 70 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

No one shall be tried save in due course of law .... Ní trialfar éinne ach do réir chúrsaí cuibhe na dlí.

Article 72 commences as follows:

No person shall be tried on any criminal charge without a jury .... Ní trialfar aon duine in aon chúis choiriúil gan choiste.

Commentary

Triail ... a thriail 'Triail' is translated as 'trial' and 'trialaim' as 'I try (i.e., a case)' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Triailim' is translated as 'I try juridically, test, put to ordeal, prove myself ...' in Dinneen, who translates 'triail' as 'act of trying, judging, testing, venturing; a trial (juridical), a test or ordeal ...'. Ó Dónaill cites 'cás a thriail, to try a case' and 'triaileadh os comhair coiste é, he was tried before a jury' as examples of the sense of 'triail', 'try, test', in Jurisprudence, 'triail' being the verbal noun of 'triail'. DIL does not appear to cite any examples of either verb or verbal noun 'triail' which, being borrowed from English is, according to Dinneen, influenced by the Irish word 'triail' – 'attempts, endeavours' is one of the senses of the verb 'triailaid' in DIL.

Note that De Bhaldraithe, while translating 'try' as 'trialaim (cúis, príosúnach)' cites 'He was tried for theft, cuireadh cúirt as gadaíocht air'. The Margin Title of s231 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'Trial of offences', is translated as 'Ciontaí do thriail', 'Triail chiontaí' being found in the Margin Title of s73 of the Foyle Fisheries Act, 1952, and 'Cionta a thriail' in the Margin Title of s21 of the Fisheries (Statute Law Revision) Act, 1956, as in the Margin Title of s49 of the Fisheries Act, 1980.

igcionta 'Cion' is translated as 'offence' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 30.3. Ó Dónaill cites 'cion sa chion, as an eye for an eye' and Dinneen cites 'cion san chion, trespass for trespass (part of the lex talionis)'. DIL cites 'brithemnacht forsin cin-sa' ('judgment on this crime') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. 'Do bhreitheamhnus for na huile chin doní gach cintach' ('On judgement on every crime which an offender commits') is the late title of a fragmentary early Irish law-text which deals mainly with the liability of relatives for a person's crimes – see Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 273. See further the commentary on Article 47.2.1°.

aon chúis 'Case, charge' is a secondary sense of 'cúis', primarily 'cause', in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'cúis dlí, lawsuit' along with 'cúis a bheith agat ar dhuine, to have a case against someone' and 'cúis a chur in aghaidh duine, to lay a charge against someone'. 'Cúis' is translated simply as 'cause' in Téarmaí Dlí. Dinneen gives 'case in the courts' as a sense of 'cúis', also giving 'charge, accusation; cause of quarrel', citing 'cúis dlíghidh, lawsuit, legal process' and 'do glaodhadh an chúis, the case was called'. DIL gives 'cause, case; debate, dispute, controversy' as one of the senses of 'cúis' (which comes from Latin 'causa'), citing 'doracartmar cois caích' ('we have argued the cause of every one') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. 'Dia fis cíá is breitheamh i ngach cúis' ('To find out who is a judge for every case') is the late title of an early Irish law-text on the duties of a judge – see Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 267. See the commentary on Article 12.10.2°.

de réir dlí See the commentary on Article 1 regarding 'de réir'. 'Or otherwise to allow to be paid out of his assets in due course of law (any money due from the bankrupt) is translated as ‘nó chun a cheadú ar dhóigh eile go n-íofar é as a eastát i gcúrsa cuí an dlí’ in s211(a) of the Companies Act, 1963, with ‘until discharged or delivered over in due course of law’ being translated as ‘go dtí go scaoilfear nó go seachadfar anonn iad i gcúrsa cuí an dlí’ in s231(1) of the Defence Act, 1954. Finally, in s9(2) of the Finance Act, 1927, ‘that the whole or any part of the amount of such uncollected tax shall be deemed to have been discharged in due course of law’ is translated as ‘go dtuigfar méid iomlán no aon chuid de mhéid iomlán na cánach nea-bhailithe sin do bheith glanta go cuibhe do réir dlí’.

aon chúis choiriúil The adjective ‘coiriúil’ is translated as ‘criminal’ in Tearmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, who cites ‘cúis choiriúil, criminal charge’. Dinneen translates ‘coireamhail’ as ‘guilty’. This adjective is based on ‘coir’, ‘crime’ – see the commentary on Article 34.3.1°.

Ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

cuí See the commentary on Article 43.2.1°.

Direct translation

CIONTA A THRIAIL

Ní dhéanfar aon duine a thriail ar aon chúiseamh coiriúil ach i gcúrsa cuí an dlí.

ARTICLE 38.2 AIRTEAGAL 38.2

TÉACS GAELGE

Féadfar mionchionta a thriail ag cúirteanna dlínse achomaire.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Minor offences may be tried at courts of summary jurisdiction.

ENGLISH TEXT

Minor offences may be tried by courts of summary jurisdiction.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 There appears to be no divergences between these two texts, though ‘ag cúirteanna’ can also be read as ‘at courts’ rather than ‘by courts’.

Note that Article 72 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

No person shall be tried on any criminal charge without a jury save in the case of charges in respect of minor offences triable by law before a Court of Summary Jurisdiction .... Ní trialfar aon duine in aon chúis choiriúil gan choiste ach i gcás cúiseanna timpeal mion-choirthe atá intrialta le dlí i láthair Chúirt Udaráis Achmair.

Commentary

mionchionta ‘Mionchion’ is translated as ‘minor offence’ in Tearmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, this being a compound of the prefix ‘mion’, translated as ‘small, minute; minor, petty; micro-’ in Ó Dónaill, and ‘cion’, translated as ‘offence’ in Tearmaí Dlí – see the commentary on the previous section. DIL translates ‘min’ as ‘small (of size and quantity), minute, fine; petty, trivial’, ‘minpeccad’ (‘a venial sin’) being given as an example of a compound with ‘min’, the accusative plural of which, ‘minpeccthu’, is cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

‘If ... the Justice shall be of opinion that the facts proved against the accused constitute a minor offence fit to be tried summarily’ is translated as ‘má sé barúil an Bhreithimh gur mion-chionta is intrialta ar an sli achmair an méid a cruthúidh i gcoinnibh an duine chúisithe’ in s77B of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. ‘If the Justice is of opinion that the facts proved or alleged against a defendant charged with such an offence constitute a minor offence fit to be tried summarily’ is translated as ‘má é tuairim an Bhreithimh gur mionchion is intrialta go hachomair na fíorais a cruthaíodh nó a líomhnaíodh i gcoinne chosantóir a bheidh cúisithe i gcion den sórt sin’ in s8(2)(a) of the Dumping at Sea Act, 1981.

cúirteanna dlínse achomaire ‘Cúirt dlínse achomaire’ is translated as ‘court of summary jurisdiction’ in Tearmaí Dlí, ‘dlínse achomair’ being translated as ‘summary jurisdiction’ and the adjective ‘achomair’ as ‘summary’ – see the commentary on Article 30.3. Ó Dónaill gives ‘summary’ as a secondary sense of ‘achomair’, translated principally as ‘concise, brief’, ‘athchomair’ being translated in Dinneen as ‘near, approximate; concise, compendious; quick, sudden’. Note that ‘achoirme’ rather than ‘achomaire’ is the form of the genitive singular in Ó Dónaill. ‘Athchummair’ is translated as ‘concise, brief’ in DIL; this headword is a compound of the prefix ‘ath-’, usually with the sense of ‘second, a further’ when combined with nouns, and ‘cumair’ (‘short, brief’), which is itself a compound of ‘com’ plus ‘berr’ (‘short’, ‘berraid’ being translated as ‘shears, clips; shaves’).

In s4(5) of the Interpretation Act, 1923, ‘the expression “court of summary jurisdiction” shall mean a District Court’ is translated as ‘ciallóidh an focal “cúirt údaráis achmair” Cúirt Dúithche’. ‘All the penalties under this Act may be recovered and enforced in manner directed by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts before a Court of Summary Jurisdiction’ is translated as ‘Féadfar na pionóisí uile fén Acht so do bhaint amach agus d’fhoirfheidhmiú, sa tslí a horduitear leis na hAchtanna Dlíghinse Achmair, os cóir Cúirte Dlíghinse Achmair’ in s27 of the Cork Milling Company Railway Act, 1935, with ‘os cóir cúirte dlínse achomaire’ translating ‘before a court of summary jurisdiction’ in s38(2) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) (No. 2) Act, 1940.

ag The principal sense of this preposition is ‘at’, Ó Dónaill citing ‘ag baile, at home’ and ‘ag Bealach an Doirín, at, when at, Ballaghadereen’, these being examples of this preposition not being followed by the definite article. ‘Ag’ is also used in the sense of ‘agent or instrument’, Ó Dónaill citing ‘tá sé briste agat, you have broken it’ and ‘caite ag an aois, worn out by age’. Dinneen states that this preposition ‘denotes the agent of actions going on or finished’, citing ‘tá sé scríobhtha agam, I have written it’ and ‘cad tá agat dá scríobhadh? what are you writing’. Dinneen adds the following:

[Ag] is not used of agent generally except after past participle constructions or the verbal corresponding to the present participle in English. When the tense of the verb expressing the action is simply stated with a past participle or a verbal corresponding to the English present participle ag is not used. Thus we do not say ithtear agam é, it is being eaten by me.

DIL gives examples of 'oc', 'almost in sense of agent', stating:

Strictly, oc indicates, not the agent, but the quarter, group of individuals, etc., in which the action takes place or has its origin. With passive often employed instead of do where that preposition is needed in another sense. (In Modern Irish ag is commonly used to denote the agent after a participle in periphrasis for perfect tense: atá an litir scríobhtha agam, I have written.)

From earlier literature, DIL cites 'co torchair acu iarsin iar cur a n-áir' ('he fell at their hands after slaying many of them') and 'cia coa [recte oca?] ndernad in chet-long?' ('by whom was the first ship made?') Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú cites 'ní maith do gabhadh an creidiomh sin ag Tomás' from Pairlement Chloinne Tomáis (Bergin, l. 40).

'Such person may be tried by any class of court-martial' is translated as 'féadfaidh aon chineál armchúirte ... an duine sin a thriail' in s121(a) of the Defence Act, 1954, with 'féadfar é a thriail ag ceachtar acu' translating '(A person) may be tried by either of them' in s243(4).

Direct translation

Féadfar mionchionta a thriail ag cúirteanna dlínse achomaire.<sup>1</sup>

Variants

- 1 'Féadfaidh cúirteanna dlínse achomaire mionchionta a thriail.'

ARTICLE 38.3.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 38.3.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Féadfar cúirteanna faoi leith a bhunú le dlí chun cionta a thriail i gcásanna a gcinneadh ina dtaobh, de réir an dlí sin, nach leor na gnáthchúirteanna chun riaradh cirt a chur i bhfeidhm le héifeacht agus chun síocháin agus ord poiblí a chaomhnú.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Specific courts may be established by law to try offences in cases regarding which it will be determined, in accordance with that law, that the ordinary courts are not adequate to enforce effectively the administration of justice and to preserve public order and peace.

ENGLISH TEXT

Special courts may be established by law for the trial of offences in cases where it may be determined in accordance with such law that the ordinary courts are inadequate to secure the effective administration of justice, and the preservation of public peace and order.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Faoi leith' in the Irish text is usually taken to mean 'specific', 'separate', 'distinct'; 'special' is translated simply as 'speisialta' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'Where it may be determined' is expressed as 'a gcinneadh ina dtaobh' ('regarding which it will be determined') in the Irish text.
- 'Are inadequate' is expressed as 'nach leor' ('are not adequate') in the Irish text, 'leor' generally expressing 'enough, sufficient', whereas 'inadequate' is translated as 'neamhleor' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'To secure the effective administration of justice' is expressed as 'chun riaradh cirt a chur i bhfeidhm le héifeacht' ('to enforce [the] administration of justice effectively') in the Irish text, 'secure' being expressed by 'cuir i bhfeidhm' ('enforce'), and 'le héifeacht' ('effectively') qualifying 'a chur i bhfeidhm' rather than 'riaradh cirt' ('the administration of justice'), as in the English text.
- 'Public' qualifies both 'peace' and 'order' in the English text (though one might perhaps read the text as if only 'peace' was so qualified), but as 'poiblí' in the Irish syntax cannot be regarded as qualifying 'síocháin' ('poiblí' being unlenited), it necessarily qualifies 'ord' only, i.e. the Irish means 'peace and public order'.
- 'Justice' is expressed by 'ceart', which term is translated simply as 'right' in Téarmaí Dlí, though it has the sense of 'justice' in general usage, while 'justice' is specifically translated as 'ceartas' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'De réir an dlí sin' ('in accordance with such law') is preceded and followed by a comma in the Irish text, no corresponding commas being found in the English text, which text alone has a comma following 'justice', before the final clause.

Commentary

faoi leith See the commentary on Articles 12.3.3<sup>o</sup> and 15.9.1<sup>o</sup> regarding 'ar leith'. Ó Dónaill translates 'ar leith, faoi leith' as 'apart, separate; several, distinct; remarkable, special', citing 'cás ar leith, separate, exceptional, case' and 'aire ar leith, special care'. Dinneen translates 'ar leith' as 'apart, separately, severally', citing 'do rónsadh sluaigh ar leith díobh féin, they formed themselves into a distinct host'. DIL cites 'gnáe far leth' from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian (where this phrase glosses Latin 'separatim'), as an example of the quasi-adjectival use of 'leth' with 'for' in the sense of 'apart, separate, different, special'.

Turning specifically to 'special', 'special agent' is translated as 'gníomhaire speisialta' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'the Special Criminal Court' is styled 'an Chúirt Choiriúil Speisialta' and 'special sitting' is translated as 'suí speisialta'. Looking at early Acts regarding 'special', 'unless the Court on any special ground shall otherwise order' is translated as 'mara n-ordóidh an Chúirt a mhalairt mar gheall ar aon chúis fé leith' in s18(1) of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923. In Schedule (B) of the Appropriation Act, 1923, however, 'For the salaries and other expenses of Temporary Commissions, Committees and Special Inquiries' is translated as 'chun tuarastail agus costais eile Coimisiún Sealadach, Coistí agus Fiosrúcháin Speisialta'. The title of Part III of the Public Safety Act, 1927, 'Proclamation Authorising Special Courts' is translated as 'Furógra Ag Údarú Cúirteanna Speisialta'.

riarach cirt 'Riaradh' is given as a variant of 'riar', verbal noun of the verb 'riar', in Ó Dónaill, citing 'riar cirt, administration of justice'. 'Riaraim' is translated as 'I administer (estate, justice, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí. Dinneen gives both 'riar' and 'riarach' as forms of the verbal noun of this headword, 'act of administering' being given as one of the senses of a separate headword 'riarach'. The earlier 'riarad', verbal noun of 'riaraid', is translated in DIL as (a) 'serving' and (b) 'ministering to, attending on, supplying', the verb being based on 'riar', translated principally as 'will, wish, often of expression of will, demand, request, decision' in DIL, where 'mad mo riar-sa dogneithe' ('if it were my will that ye did') is cited from the eighteenth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. 'Uraicecht na Ríar' ('the Primer of the Stipulations') is the title of an early Irish law-tract which deals with the qualifications of the various grades of poet – see the 1987 edition and translation by Liam Breatnach.

See the commentary on Articles 34.1 and 43.2.1° regarding 'ceart' (genitive singular 'cirt'), translated as 'right' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'ceartas' translates 'justice'. Following this subsection, however, 'ar mhaithe le riaradh cirt ag Cúirt' renders 'in the interests of the administration of justice by a Court' in Article 28.4.3°, which subsection was added to the text by the Seventeenth Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1997. 'Proceedings before the High Court ... shall be as informal as is practicable and consistent with the administration of justice' is translated as 'Beidh imeachtaí os comhair na hArd-Chúirte ... chomh neamh-ghoimíúil agus is féidir agus i gcomhréir le riaradh ceartais' in s29(4) of the Child Care Act, 1991. 'Persons concerned with administration of justice' is translated as 'Daoine a bhfuil baint acu le riaradh ceartais' in the heading in Schedule 1 of the Juries Act, 1976. In s48(a) of the Offences Against the State Act, 1939, 'that the ordinary Courts are ... inadequate to secure the effective administration of justice and the preservation of public peace and order' is translated as 'nach leor na gnáth-chúirteanna chun a chur in áirithe go riarfaí ceart go héifeachtúil agus go gcoimeádfai an tsíocháin agus an t-ord puiblí'. The Long Title of the Courts of Justice Act, 1936, 'An Act to make further and better provision in relation to the administration of justice', is translated as 'Acht chun socrúithe bhreise agus fheabhsa do dhéanamh maidir le riaradh cirt', with 'for purposes relating to the better administration of justice' being translated as 'chun crícheanna a bhaineas le feabhsú riaradh cirt' in the Long Title of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. 'Whenever the Executive Council is of opinion that it is necessary in order to secure the due administration of justice and the sure punishment of crime' is translated as 'Pé uair gurb é tuairim na hArd-Chomhairle, chun a chur in áirithe go riarfar ceart go cuibhe agus go bpionósar coirthe go siúrála' in s20(1) of the Public Safety Act, 1927. Note finally that 'justice' is expressed as 'cothrom' in Article 29.1.

a chur i bhfeidhm 'I bhfeidhm' is translated as 'in force' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'cuirim i bhfeidhm' is translated as 'I enforce', this phrase being translated as 'I carry out (as an order), use (as a tool), make operative (as an Act of Parliament)' in Dinneen. 'Rud a chur i bhfeidhm' is translated as 'to put something into operation' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'caithfean an dlí a chur i bhfeidhm, the law must be enforced'. The primary meaning of 'feidhm' seems to be 'load, stress, strain', passing into the senses of 'utmost effort, effort, exertion, burden, service, function' according to DIL.

See the commentary on Article 28.3.3° regarding 'secure' (expressed in that Article by 'cuir in áirithe') and note above s.v. 'riarach cirt', how this is translated as 'a chur in áirithe' in the present context in s20(1) of the Public Safety Act, 1927. 'To facilitate the proper administration of justice, secure the observance of police regulations' is translated as 'chun cuí-riarach an cheartais a urasú, chun a áirithiú go gcomhallfar rialacháin phóilíneachta' in s21 of the Third Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967.

Regarding the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú comments that he would prefer 'a dheimhniú', or even 'a chinntiú', to 'a áirithiú'.

le héifeacht 'Rud a dhéanamh le héifeacht' is translated as 'to do something competently, effectively' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'labhair sé le héifeacht, he spoke strongly, to good effect'. Dinneen translates 'éifeacht' as 'force, point, substance; avail; sense, wisdom; maturity', citing 'cé file tú le héifeacht, though you are a poet composing with sense', concluding his entry, s.v. 'éifeacht' with 'cf. effect'. DIL translates 'éifeacht' as 'efficacy, vigour, substance, meaning, purport', seventeenth-century texts being the source of most of DIL's citations.

Looking at early translations of 'effective', 'A person shall not receive any part of a grant which may be made in pursuance of this Act for non-effective services' is translated as 'Ní bhfaghaidh neach aon chuid de dheontas a déanfar ar aon seirbhísí neamh-fheidhmiúla do réir an Achta so' in s4 of the Appropriation Act, 1922. 'Every act, matter and thing done ... shall ... be as valid and effective as if the same had been regularly done by a Magistrate' is translated as 'Gach gníomh, rud agus ní dineadh ... beidh chó stóinsithe agus chó héifeachtach is dá ndintí an céanna go rialta ag Máistreoir' in s9(2) of the District Justices (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

Turning to the modern Acts, 'local facilities and services for the proper and effective administration of the assistance' is translated as 'saoráidí agus seirbhísí logánta chun an cúnamh a riar ar bhealach íomchuí agus éifeachtach' in s(b) of Article 3 of the Second Schedule to the Radiological Protection Act, 1991, for example. 'And generally for the effective administration of the Scheme' is translated as 'agus, i gcoitinne, chun an Scéim a riaradh go héifeachtúil' in s5 of the Employment Premium Act, 1975.

a chaomhnú See the commentary on Article 28.3.3°. Ó Dónaill cites 'nós, teanga, a chaomhnú, to preserve a custom, a language'. The verb 'cáemnaid' is based on 'cáemna', translated primarily as 'act of protecting, keeping' in DIL, where 'sírchóemna m'anmasa' is cited from Leabhar na hUídhre, compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100.

See the commentary on Article 24.1 as regards 'preservation'. Note that 'that in the interests of the preservation of public peace and order it is expedient that the sale of intoxicating liquor in any town or village should immediately cease' is translated as 'go bhfuil sé oiriúnach, chun síocháin agus ordú puiblí do chimeád, stad do chur láithreach le deocha meisciúla do dhíol in aon bhaile no sráidbhaile' in s2 of the Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1924. 'Lawfully engaged on duties relating to the preservation of peace and order' is translated as 'bheidh ag gabháil go dleathach do dhualgaisí bhainfidh le síocháin agus ordú do choimeád' in s3 of the Treason Act, 1939, with 'a chó-líonann, go dleathach, dualgaisí a bhaineann le síocháin agus ordú do chimeád' translating the above in s2 of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925. 'That I will see and cause the peace to be kept and preserved' is translated as 'go bhféachfad chuige agus go gcuirfad fé ndéar go gcimeádfar agus go gcosnófar an tsíocháin' in the 'Form of Declaration' in the Fourth Schedule to the Police Forces Amalgamation Act, 1925. Note finally that 'cosain' expresses 'preserve' in Article 24.1.

ord poiblí 'Ord' is translated basically as 'order' in Ó Dónaill, who does not cite this phrase. Dinneen translates 'órd' as 'order, arrangement, series; custom, law, practice, procedure; ordo, ritual, office, liturgy ...'. Old Irish 'ord(d)' is a learned loanword from Latin 'ordo', translated as 'order, sequence' in DIL, where examples are cited from the eighth-century Glosses onwards – see the commentary on Article 40.6.1°.

'Subject to public order and morality' is translated as 'gan dochar don rialtacht ná don mhoráltacht phuiblí' in Article 8 of the 1922 Constitution. 'The officer so appointed shall keep order at his station' is translated as 'déanfaidh an t-oifigeach a ceapfar amhlaidh órdathacht do chimeád ina stáisiún' in s19 of the Fifth Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923. 'Any message or communication subversive of public order' is translated as 'aon teachtaireacht no conbharsáid a bheadh díobhálach don ordú phuiblí' in s11(1)(b) of the Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1926. 'The Criminal Justice (Public Order) Act, 1994' is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht um Cheartas Coiriúil (Ord Poiblí), 1994'. 'In the interests of public order or security or safety' is translated as 'ar mhaithe le dea-ord poiblí nó slándáil nó sábháilteacht' in s10(1) of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1988. 'To aid the civil power in the preservation of public order' is translated as 'chun cabhrú leis an gcumhacht sibhialta chun an t-ord poiblí a choimeád' in s273(9) of the Mental Treatment Act, 1945. See further the commentary on Article 40.6.1°.

nach leor 'Is leor sin' is translated as 'that is enough' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'Is leor a rá (go), suffice it to say (that)'. Dinneen cites 'an leor sain? is that enough? is leor sain, enough'. DIL translate 'lór' as 'enough, sufficient; also adequate, competent', citing 'am loor fri each reit' (I am 'competent to deal with any eventuality') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. 'Inadequate consideration' is translated as 'comaoin neamhleor' in Téarmaí Dlí.

'If it appears to the Minister for Justice that the provisions of this section are inadequate to prevent the negligent or fraudulent handling of money for a client' is translated as 'Más dealraitheach don Aire Dlí agus cirt nach leor forálacha an ailt seo chun cosc a chur le failli agus calaais ag láimhsiú airgid do chliant' in s5(9)(a) of the Auctioneers and House Agents Act, 1967. 'If and wherever and so often as the Government is satisfied that the ordinary courts are inadequate to secure the effective administration of justice and the preservation of public peace and order' is translated as 'Más deimhin agus pé uair agus chó minic agus is deimhin leis an Riaghaltas nach leor na gnáth-chúirteanna chun a chur in áirithe go riarfar ceart go héifeachtúil agus go gcoimeádfar an tsíocháin agus an t-ord poiblí' in s35(2) of the Offences Against the State Act, 1939.

a gcinnfear See the commentary on Articles 1 and 12.11.2°.

Direct translation

Féadfar cúirteanna speisialta a bhunú<sup>1</sup> le dlí chun cionta a thriail i gcásanna ina gcinnfear de réir an dlí sin nach leor<sup>2</sup> na gnáthchúirteanna chun riaradh<sup>3</sup> éifeachtach ceartais a áirithiú<sup>4</sup>, agus síocháin phoiblí agus ord poiblí a chaomhnú.

Variants

- 1 'a chur ar bun'
- 2 'gur neamhleor'
- 3 'riar'
- 4 'a dheimhniú', 'a chinntiú'

ARTICLE 38.3.2° AIRTEAGAL 38.3.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Is le dlí a shocrófar comhdhéanamh, cumhachtaí, dlínse agus nós imeachta na gcúirteanna faoi leith sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is by law that the constitution, powers, jurisdiction and procedure of those specific courts will be arranged.

ENGLISH TEXT

The constitution, powers, jurisdiction and procedure of such special courts shall be prescribed by law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Prescribe' is expressed by 'socraigh', which term is translated as 'settle' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'Special' is expressed by 'faoi leith', 'specific', as in the previous subsection, with 'speisialta' translating 'special' in Téarmaí Dlí, as we have seen.

Commentary

a shocrófar See the commentary on Articles 27.2 and 34.4.3°, where 'prescribe' is expressed by 'ordaigh'. Again Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the direct translation below, favours 'ordaigh' to the term generally used in the modern Acts, 'forordaigh', remarking that 'for-' adds nothing but affectation of expression ("forcamás friotail") to that version.

nós imeachta See the commentary on Articles 29.4.2° and 36iii.

faoi leith See the commentary on the previous subsection.

comhdhéanamh See the commentary on Article 36iii.

dlínse See the commentary on Article 3.

Direct translation

Déanfar comhdhéanamh, cumhachtaí, dlínse agus nós imeachta na gcúirteanna speisialta sin a fhorordú<sup>1</sup> le dlí.

Variant

<sup>1</sup> 'a ordú'

ARTICLE 38.4.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 38.4.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELGE

Féadfar binsí míleata a bhunú chun daoine a thriail i gcionta in aghaidh dlí mhíleata a deirtear a rinneadar le linn a mbeith faoi dhlí mhíleata, agus fós chun broic le heisith nó le ceannairc faoi arm.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Military benches may be established to try people in offences against military law which it is said they did while they were under military law, and moreover to cope with unrest or with armed rebellion.

ENGLISH TEXT

Military tribunals may be established for the trial of offences against military law alleged to have been committed by persons while subject to military law and also to deal with a state of war or armed rebellion.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'For the trial of offences ... committed by persons' is expressed as 'chun daoine a thriail i gcionta ... a rinneadar' ('to try people in offences ... they committed/did') in the Irish text, whereas 'chun cionta a thriail' expresses 'for the trial of offences' in s3.1<sup>o</sup> of this Article.
- 2 'Offences ... alleged to have been committed' is expressed as 'cionta ... a deirtear a rinneadar' ('offences ... said to have been committed [by them]') in the Irish text; 'I allege' is translated as 'líomhnaím' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 3 'Subject to military law' is expressed as 'faoi dhlí mhíleata' ('under military law') in the Irish text, 'subject to' being translated as 'faoi réir' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 The phrase expressing 'military law' in the Irish text, 'dlí míleata', can also be read as 'martial law'.
- 5 'To deal with' is expressed in the Irish text by a phrase generally understood to be 'to tolerate', 'broic le', having the earlier sense of 'to meddle with'.
- 6 'State of war' is expressed by 'eisith', a term literally meaning 'non-peace' and, while it is translated by Dinneen as 'state of war', in Ó Dónaill it is translated as 'lack of peace; dissension, strife, quarrel'.
- 7 The final clause is preceded by a comma in the Irish text, no corresponding comma being found in the English text.

Note that Article 70 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

... extra-ordinary military courts shall not be established, save only such Military Tribunals as may be authorised by law for dealing with Military offenders against military law. The jurisdiction of Military Tribunals shall not be extended to or exercised over the civil population save in time of war or armed rebellion .... ní bunófar cúirteanna nea-choitianta, ach amháin pé Binsi Airm a údarófar le dlí chun lucht airm a bhrisfidh dlí airm a thriail. Ní shroichfidh údarás na mBinsi Airm chun an phobail shibhialta ná ní cuirfear i bhfeidhm ortha é ach in aimsir chogaidh no rebiliúntachta armtha agus mar gheall ar ghníomhartha a déanfar in aimsir chogaidh no rebiliúntachta armtha.

Commentary

binsí 'Binse' is translated as 'tribunal' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'barántas binse' is translated as 'bench warrant'. Ó Dónaill gives the following senses of 'binse' in Jurisprudence: 'An Binse, the Bench', 'binse breithimh, judge's bench; tribunal', citing 'idir barra is binse, in open court'. 'Binse' is translated as 'a seat, a bench; bench in court' in Dinneen and 'bein(n)se'/'béinse' is translated as 'bench, table; the Judicial Bench' in DIL, this word being either a French or an English loanword. DIL cites 'do Justis beinnsi an rígh' ('King's bench') from the Annals of the Four Masters.

'Binse Airm' translates 'Military Tribunal' in the 1922 Constitution and in the Long Title of the Indemnity Act, 1923, which commences as follows:

An Act to restrict the taking of legal proceedings in respect of certain acts and matters done during the suppression of the state of armed rebellion created by the attempt to overthrow by force the lawfully established Government of Saorstát Éireann, and to validate sentences imposed by military tribunals established in the course of the suppression of the state of armed rebellion aforesaid .... Acht chun teora do chur le himeachta dlí do bhunú i dtaobh gníomhartha agus nithe áirithe a dineadh le linn cur-ar-ceal do bheith á dhéanamh ar an staid rebiliúntachta armtha a tháinig as an iarracht a tugadh fén Rialtas a bunúidh go dleathach do Shaorstát Éireann do threascairt, agus chun dleathacht do thabhairt do bhreitheanna a thug binsí airm a bunúidh le linn an staid rebiliúntachta armtha san do bheith á chur ar ceal.

'The Minister, if he so thinks fit, may direct in writing that the charge shall be dealt with by a military tribunal' is translated as 'féadfaidh an tAire, más oiriúnach leis é, a ordú i scríbhinn gur binse míleata a thriailfeas an cúiseamh' in s7(1) of the Prisoners of War and Enemy Aliens Act, 1956. As regards 'tribunal' alone, the 'Tribunals of Inquiry (Evidence) (Amendment) Act, 1979' is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht um Binsí Fiosrúcháin (Fianaise) (Leasú), 1979', for example.

faoi dhlí mhíleata On the lenition of the adjective in the dative case, following a masculine noun, see the commentary on Article 45. 'Míleata' is translated as 'military; soldierly, martial' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'seirbhís mhíleata, military service' and 'iompar míleata, soldierly bearing', citing 'dlí míleata, martial law' s.v. 'dlí'. Dinneen translates 'míleata' as 'knightly, valorous, military'. DIL translates 'míleata' as 'pertaining to or befitting a warrior, martial', citing 'co barrúachtar a dondfúathróci donddergí míleata' ('[reaching] to the top of his dark apron, dark-red, soldierly') from the description of Cú Chulainn in the version of the Táin in Leabhar na hUidhre (compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100). This adjective is based on 'mil' ('a soldier'), which is an early loanword from Latin 'miles', the dative plural form, 'do míledaib', being cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. We find 'mílid' as the form of the nominative singular in Middle Irish, this being the form of the accusative singular in Old Irish. 'Mílid Espáine' ('soldier of Spain') was the name given to Golam son of Bile, 'mythical ancestor of the Góidil', i.e. the Gaels or the Milesian stock in Ireland and Scotland. Dr Dáithí Ó hÓgáin writes as follows in his encyclopaedia of the Irish folk tradition, Myth, Legend & Romance (1990, p. 296) s.v. 'Mil':

Fictional ancestor of the Irish people. His full name is given as Mil Easpáine and is an invention of the historians, patterned on the Latin term 'miles Hispaniae' (soldier of Spain). Though it is possible that there was a character called Mil in genuine Celtic mythology, the idea of such a Spanish ancestor developed from the fanciful derivation of the Latin word for Ireland, Hibernia, from Ibēria or Hibēria.

The expression 'meic (clann, etc.) Míled' (= 'Gaels, Irishmen') is common in poetry – see DIL s.v. 'mil'.

Looking at early official translations, we see above in 'Binse Airm' translating 'Military Tribunal' that the genitive singular of 'arm' acted as an attributive adjective to translate 'military'. We find other phrases similarly translated, such as 'military districts' ('ceanntair airm') and 'military reward' ('duais airm') in Acts of 1923. Note that 'in occupation of the military' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'i seilbh an airm' in a 'Cover' of an Official Report of Dáil Debates, 17/1/24. Note, finally, that 'martial court' is translated as 'armchúirt' in Téarmaí Dlí.

'Forms part of a force which is engaged in operations against the enemy or is engaged in military operations in a place wholly or partly occupied by the enemy' is translated as 'ina chuid d'fhórsa atá ag oibriú i gcoinnibh an namhad no atá ag déanamh oibre cogaidh in áit atá fé ghabháil go hiomlán no go leathrannach ag an namhaid' in s16 of the Army Pensions Act, 1923. The form 'mileata' – a historically inaccurate form, as Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks – is found in the 1923 Acts, with 'the Irish Military College' styled 'An Coláiste Mileata' in s23(2) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, and 'Ceannas Mileata in aimsir cogaidh' translating 'Military Command in time of war' in the Margin Title of s27, for example. As regards more modern Acts, 'the Military Service Pensions (Increase) Act, 1962' is cited in Irish as 'Acht na bPinsean Seirbhíse Mileata (Méadú), 1962', for example.

broic le 'Broic' is the verbal noun of the verb 'broic' which, with the preposition 'le', is translated as 'bear, tolerate' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'bheith ag broic le rud, to put up with something'. 'Broicim (le)' is translated as 'I tolerate, endure' in the 'additional words' added to the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'broic' implies a sense of 'struggle', and has more explicitly that meaning in the poetry of Dáibhí Ó Bruadair (1625-1698): 'sagart súgach mé gan Laidin / lé ní bhroicim', where the editor (not very accurately, according to Máirtín Ó Murchú) translated 'ní bhroicim' as 'I don't bother with it', and 'broic re rámhain i n-aois úcaidh', where the editor (equally inaccurately, according to Professor Ó Murchú) translated 'broic' as 'meddling' ('meddling with a spade ...'); as a consequence these meanings are given for 'broic' in Dinneen and DIL.

'Déileáil' generally translates 'deal (with)' today, and is found in s21(5) of the Electoral Act, 1923, where 'in sending out, receiving and otherwise dealing with the ballot papers of postal voters' is translated as 'Ag cur amach agus ag fáil páipéirí ballóide post-vótáluithe dho, agus ag deighleáil leo ar shlite eile dho'. 'To assist in the planning and implementation of measures to deal with radiological emergencies' is translated as 'cabhrú chun bearta le déileáil le héigeandálaí raideolaíocha a phleanáil agus a chur i gcrích' in s7(1)(e) of the Radiological Protection Act, 1991, for example. Note, finally, as we saw above, that 'The Minister, if he so thinks fit, may direct in writing that the charge shall be dealt with by a military tribunal' is translated as 'féadfaidh an tAire, más oiriúnach leis é, a ordú i scríbhinn gur binse míleata a thriailfeas an cúiseamh' in s7(1) of the Prisoners of War and Enemy Aliens Act, 1956.

a deirtear The passive, present indicative, of 'abair', 'say'. Ó Dónaill gives the sense of 'state, allege' as one of the senses of 'abair', citing 'deir sé go bhfuil ocraas air, he says he is hungry' and 'sin é a deir na húdair, that is what the authorities state'. DIL translates 'as-beir' simply as 'says, speaks'. See the commentary on Article 40.4.2° where 'á rá' expresses 'alleging'.

'I allege' is translated as 'líomhnaim' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'líomhnaim' being translated by Dinneen as 'I impute (a crime, etc., to ar), inculcate, ascribe to', as well as 'I woo, have carnal intercourse with (ar)' – Keating's seventeenth-century History of Ireland being cited as source of the latter sense. Dinneen also cites 'ní féidir coir im' leith do líomhnadh, ní dheárnas goid ná broid ná bruighneas, no crime can be imputed to me, I have not robbed, plundered nor quarrelled' from the eighteenth-century Clare poet, Andrew MacCurtin. Ó Dónaill translates 'líomhain' principally as 'allege, impute'. The verb 'líamnaid' is translated as 'charges, accuses' in DIL, citing 'file ... do bhí ag Conchubhar ... do liamhnadh ar Mhaghain bean Chonchubhair' ('... he was accused of carrying on an intrigue with ...'). 'Líamnaid' is based on 'líamain', which is translated in DIL as (a) 'reproach, fault' and (b) 'act of imputing, slandering', frequently of accusation of sexual misdemeanour, according to DIL, citing 'oc liamain a fir for mnaí aile' from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster. 'Líamain' itself is a late verbal noun of the verb 'líid', translated as 'charges, accuses, imputes to' in DIL, where 'liimse forrusom díltud esséirge Crist' ('I accuse them of denying Christ's resurrection') is cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

'Deir' translates 'allege' in early Acts. In s1(3)(b) of the Indemnity Act, 1923, 'any proceedings in respect of any alleged rights under, or breaches of, any contract' is translated as 'aon imeachta i dtaobh aon chearta adeirtar atá ann fé aon chonrra no i dtaobh aon bhriseanna ar aon chonrra'. 'An alleged invention' is translated as 'rud go ndeirtear gur cumadóireacht é' in s3 of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927, with 'satisfies him that such allegation is untrue' being translated as 'a chur ina luighe air nách fíor an rud san adubhradh' in s6(1) of the Public Safety (Punishment of Offences) Temporary Act, 1924. 'Whether the allegations made by the person making the claim are or are not true' is translated as 'ce'ca fíor nó bréagach na ráitísí a dhin an té a bheas ag déanamh an éilimh' in s6(2) of the Indemnity Act, 1924. In s9(1) of the Oil in Navigable Waters Act, 1926, 'Where any offence under this Act is alleged to have been committed by the master of a vessel' is translated as 'Má deirtar aon chionta fén Acht so do bheith déanta ag máistir áirthaigh'. Note that 'Alleged personation' is translated as 'Pearsanú do chur i leith duine' in the Margin Title of s25 of the Fifth Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923. Finally, to give an example from modern Acts, 'in relation to an offence alleged to have been committed by a person acting on behalf of a trade union' is translated as 'maidir le cion a líomhnaítear a rinne duine ag gníomhú dó thar ceann ceardchumainn' in s9(6) of the Electricity (Special Provisions) Act, 1966. See further the commentary on Article 40.4.2°.

le linn a mbeith This phrase would generally be replaced by 'le linn dóibh bheith' today. Dinneen cites 'le linn iad do bheith ag dul thar brághaid, just as they were passing'. 'Where imported goods ... are supplied while warehoused' is translated as 'I gcás ina ndéanfar earraí allmharaithe ... a sholáthar le linn dóibh bheith i stóras' in s12(4) of the Value-Added Tax (Amendment) Act, 1978, for example, with 'a fuair bás le linn dó a bheith ag fónamh sna fórsaí' translating 'died while serving in the forces' in s11(1)(b) of the Army Pension Act, 1973.

a rinneadar The synthetic form of the third person plural, perfect tense, of 'déan' – see the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding the synthetic and analytic (i.e., 'a rinne siad') forms of the verb.

le heisíth See the commentary on Article 40.4.6°, 'eisíth' being translated as 'lack of peace; dissension, strife, quarrel' in Ó Dónaill and 'eisíoth' being translated as 'state of war' in Dinneen.

ceannairc faoi arm See the commentary on Articles 28.3.3° and 40.4.6°, 'ceannairc faoi airm' being translated as 'armed rebellion' in Téarmaí Dlí.

fós See the commentary on Articles 15.3.2° and 29.2. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú favours 'fós' to 'freisin' in the direct translation below.

Standardised Irish text

Féadfar binsí míleata a bhunú chun daoine a thriail i gcionta in aghaidh dlí mhíleata a deirtear a rinne siad le linn iad a bheith faoi dhlí míleata, agus fós chun broic le heisíth nó le ceannairc faoi arm.

Direct translation

Féadfar binsí míleata a bhunú chun cionta in aghaidh dlí mhíleata a thriail ar cionta iad a líomhnaítear a rinne daoine le linn dóibh a bheith faoi réir dlí mhíleata agus fós<sup>1</sup> chun déileáil le staid chogaidh nó ceannairc faoi airm.

Variant

<sup>1</sup> 'freisin'

ARTICLE 38.4.2° AIRTEAGAL 38.4.2°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Duine de na Fórsaí Cosanta nach bhfuil ar fianas ní cead é a thriail i láthair aon armchúirte ná binse míleata eile i gcion is intrialte sna cúirteanna sibhialta, mura cion é atá faoi dhlinse aon armchúirte nó binse míleata eile faoi aon dlí chun smacht míleata a chur i bhfeidhm.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

A person of the Defence Forces who is not on (military) service it is not permitted to try him before any army court or other military bench in an offence that can be tried in the civil courts, unless it is a crime which is under the jurisdiction of any army court or other military bench under any law to enforce military discipline.

ENGLISH TEXT

A member of the Defence Forces not on active service shall not be tried by any courtmartial or other military tribunal for an offence cognisable by the civil courts unless such offence is within the jurisdiction of any courtmartial or other military tribunal under any law for the enforcement of military discipline.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'A member' is expressed as 'Duine', 'A person' / 'One', in the Irish text.
- The Irish phrase expressing 'on active service', 'ar fianas', can be read as 'on a military expedition' or simply as 'on service'; it is a term which carries echoes of early Irish history and society.
- 'Tried by any court martial' is expressed as 'a thriail i láthair aon armchúirte' ('tried before any court martial') in the Irish text.
- 'The Defence Forces' are styled 'Óglaigh na hÉireann' in the Acts, rather than the literal translation, 'na Fórsaí Cosanta', as here.
- 'Tried ... for an offence' is expressed as 'a thriail ... i gcion' ('tried ... in an offence') in the Irish text, the phrase we find in the heading of this Article, for example.
- As in the Acts, 'cognisable by the civil courts' is expressed as 'is intrialte sna cúirteanna sibhialta' ('that can be tried in the civil courts') in the Irish text, this being followed by a comma in that text alone.
- 'Any court martial or other military tribunal' is expressed as 'aon armchúirte ná binse míleata eile' ('any court martial nor other military tribunal') in the Irish text.
- 'Within the jurisdiction' is expressed as 'faoi dhlinse ...' ('under the jurisdiction') in the Irish text.
- 'Shall not' is expressed as 'ní cead' ('it is not permitted to') in the Irish text, as we have seen in many earlier Articles.

Note that Article 71 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

A member of the armed forces of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) not on active service shall not be tried by any Court Martial or other Military Tribunal for an offence cognisable by the Civil Courts, unless such offence shall have been brought expressly within the jurisdiction of Courts Martial or other Military Tribunal by any code of laws or regulations for the enforcement of military discipline which may be hereafter approved by the Oireachtas. Aon duine d'fhórsaí armtha Shaorstáit Éireann ná beidh ar seirbhís chogúil ní thrialfaidh aon Chúirt Airm ná aon Bhinse eile Airm é in aon choir intrialta ag sna Cúirteanna Sibhialta mara dtabharfar an choir sin go speisialta laistigh d'údarás Chúirteanna Airm, no aon Bhinse eile Airm, le haon chórus dlíthe no rialacha chun smacht airm do chur i bhfeidhm a mholfaidh an t-Oireachtas 'na dhiaidh seo.

Commentary

ar fianas 'Fiannas' is given as the standard form of 'fianas' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'ar fiannas' as 'on a military expedition'. The principal sense of 'fiannas' in Ó Dónaill is 'the profession of a warrior, of a soldier', being preceded by the abbreviation indicating that this use is found only in earlier literary sources. 'Active service' is given as the secondary sense of 'fiannas', preceded by the abbreviation for 'Military'. Dinneen translates 'ar fiannas' as 'with the Fiann, on service, on the warpath'. DIL translates 'fianas' as 'the profession of a roving hunter and warrior; military service in a "fian"; warfare as a calling (especially of roving, of irregular warfare)', citing 'doluid Creidne ... for fiannas' ('Creidne entered upon fiannas') from the twelfth-century manuscript Rawlinson B 502. This term is based on 'fian', explained in DIL as follows:

A band of roving men whose principal occupations were hunting and war, also a troop of professional fighting-men under a leader. In later application especially the warrior-bands under Finn son of Cumall, who are described as constituting a military caste.

See also Dáithí Ó hÓgáin, op. cit., p. 203:

The word 'fianna' was used in early times for young hunter-warriors. Such groups of young men were a social reality in many early societies, as it was part of a warrior's training to live for a period in the wilderness in order to learn how to hunt and fight. The singular of 'fianna' was 'fian', a cognate of the Latin 'venatio' ('hunting') and of the word which appears in English as 'win'. Originally, it had no connection with the name 'Fionn', but when the Leinsterman used Fionn as a symbol of their efforts in the 5th-6th centuries to regain the Boyne valley from their Uí Néill foes, it is apparent that a Leinster version of the hunter-warrior cult got especially connected with Fionn. Thus in narrative Fionn came to be regarded as a great 'feinnidh', or leader of a troop of fianna.

'Comhaltáir ar fiannas' translates 'Members on active service' in the Margin Title of s4 of the Defence (Amendment) Act, 1990, with 'a member who is on active service' being translated as '(do) chomhalta atá ar fiannas' in that section. 'Unless such offence was committed while such person was on active service' is translated as 'mura le linn don duine sin a bheith ar fianas a rinneadh an cion sin' in s5(3) of the Genocide Act, 1973. 'If he commits such offence not on active service and is an officer, dismissal with ignomy from the Defence Forces' is translated as 'murab ar fianas a dhéanfas sé an cion sin agus más oifigeach é, é a dhífhostú faoi aithis as Óglaigh na hÉireann' in s126(2)(ii) of the Defence Act, 1954, with 'and if the offence was committed not on active service, dismissal with ignomy' being translated as 'agus ná raibh sé ar seirbhís chogúil agus é ag déanamh an chionta, féadfar é do chur as an arm fé aithis' in s38(1) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. In the Sixth Schedule to the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) (No. 2) Act, 1940, we find the following:

If committed on active service, death. If committed when not on active service, penal servitude. I gcás an cionta do dhéanamh le linn seirbhíse cogúla – an bás. I gcás an cionta do dhéanamh tráth ar bith eile – pian-tseirbhís.

'Seirbhís chogaidh' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'active service' in translations for the Department of Defence.

smacht 'References to military discipline shall be construed as references to naval discipline' is translated as 'déanfar tagairtí do smacht míleata a léiriú mar thagairtí do smacht cabhlaigh' in s8(1)(a)(v) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1947. Looking at early Acts regarding 'discipline', 'She shall exercise supervision over discipline in the Institution' is translated as 'Déanfa sí maoirseacht ar an smachtúchán sa bhFúndúireacht' in the 'Galway County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, with 'and to maintain proper order and discipline in the sick wards in her charge' being translated as 'agus í do chimeád rialtacha agus disciplín mar is cóir sna haireagail a bheidh féna cúram' in the same Schedule.

i láthair aon armchúirte 'Dul i láthair na cúirte' is translated as 'to appear before the court' in Ó Dónaill, with 'dul i láthair an bhreithimh (na cúirte), to appear before the judge (court)' being cited by Dinneen. DIL s.v. 'láthair', translates 'i láthair' as 'in(to) the presence of' – see the commentary on Article 28.8. 'Armchúirt' is translated as 'court martial' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, with 'cúirt airm, court-martial' being cited in the latter s.v. 'cúirt'. This compound of 'arm' and 'cúirt' does not appear to be given as a headword in Dinneen.

'The Courts-Martial Appeals Act, 1983' is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht um Achomhairc Armchúirteanna, 1983'. 'Proceedings before a court (including a courtmartial) exercising jurisdiction under the law of any legislature' is translated as 'imeachtaí os comhair cúirte (lena n-áirítear armchúirt) a mbeidh dlínse á hoibriú aici faoi dhlí aon reachtais' in s4 of the Second Schedule to the Defamation Act, 1961. 'He shall remand the accused for trial by General Court-martial' is translated as 'déanfa sé an duine cúisithe do chur siar chun go dtrialfaidh Arm-Chúirt Ghinearálta é' in s5 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1925.

sibhialta See the commentary on Article 34.3.1°. 'Civil proceedings' is translated as 'imeachtaí sibhialta' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'ordinary civil process' being translated as 'gnáthphróis sibhialta'. 'The expression "Civil Court" means with respect to any crime or offence, a Court of ordinary criminal jurisdiction' is translated as 'Cialluíonn an focal "Cúirt Sibhialta", maidir le haon choir no cionta, Cúirt ghnáth-udaráis choiriúla' in s3(18) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'Unless the existing laws of the Detaining Power expressly permit the civil courts to try a member of the armed forces' is translated as 'mura rud é go gceadaíonn dlíthe na Cumhachta Coinneála faoi láthair do na cúirteanna sibhialta duine d'fhórsaí armtha na Cumhachta Coinneála a thriail' in Article 84 of the Third Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962, for example.

intrialte This compound of the separable prefix 'in-' with the genitive, 'denoting fitness, aptitude, worthiness', according to Dinneen, and the genitive of 'trial' ('try'), is not given as a headword either in Téarmaí Dlí or in Ó Dónaill. In s9(2) of the Courts-Martial Appeals Act, 1983, 'For the purpose of hearing and determining any particular appeal cognisable by the Court' is translated as 'Chun aon achomharc ar leith is intrialte ag an gCúirt a éisteacht agus a chinneadh'. 'To sit on the hearing of any appeal to or other matter cognisable by the Supreme Court' is translated as 'suí le linn éisteacht aon achomhairc chun na Cúirte Uachtaraí nó aon ábhair eile is intrialte ag an gCúirt Uachtarach' in s1(4) of the Courts (Establishment and Constitution) Act, 1961. 'Any appeal to or other matter cognisable by the Supreme Court may be heard and determined by such number' is translated as 'féadfaidh líon ... (de sna breithiúin) aon athchomharc chun na Cúirte Uachtaraíge no ní eile is intrialta ag an gCúirt Uachtaraigh d'éisteacht agus breith do thabhairt air' in s4(3) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1936. In the Preamble to the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'a member of the armed forces of Saorstát Éireann not on active service shall not be tried by any court-martial or military tribunal for an offence cognisable by the Civil Courts', following Article 71 of the 1922 Constitution, is translated as 'ná déanfidh aon arm-chúirt ná aon bhínse eile airm aon duine d'fhórsaí armtha Shaorstáit Éireann ná beidh ar seirbhís chogúil do thriail in aon choir intrialta ag na Cúirteanna Sibhialta'.

Note that 'except by Order of the Dáil or of a tribunal having cognizance of petitions complaining of undue returns or undue elections' is translated as 'ach le hOrdú ón Dáil no ó bhínse atá in aitheantas ar achuingíocha a ghearánann i dtaobh tortha nea-chuibhe no i dtaobh toghachána nea-chuibhe' in s39 of the Fifth Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923. 'The expression "election tribunal" means a court lawfully having cognizance of petitions complaining of undue return or undue election at a Seanad election' is translated as 'cialluíonn an focal "binse toghacháin" cúirt ag á mbeidh údarás go dleathach deighleáil le hachuingheacha ag gearán mar gheall ar thuairisciú nea-chuibhe no ar thogha nea-chuibhe i dtoghchán Seanad' in s33 of the First Schedule to the Seanad Electoral Act, 1928.

binse míleata eile In both cases of its usage here this phrase is in the genitive, following the prepositional phrases 'i láthair' and 'faoi dhlínse'. In both the Glossary accompanying An Caighdeán Oifigiúil and in Ó Dónaill, 'binse' is given as a masculine noun, and the adjective qualifying it in the genitive singular would therefore be lenited. 'Binse' is given as feminine in Dinneen, however. DIL gives the earlier 'bein(n)se'/'béinse' as masculine – see the commentary on the previous subsection regarding this term.

a chur i bhfeidhm 'Cuir i bhfeidhm' expresses 'secure' in Article 38.3.1°. Looking at 'enforce' in early Acts, 'A contract ... shall not be enforceable against a candidate at such election' is translated as 'ní féadfar é do chur i bhfeidhm i gcoinnibh iarrthóra sa toghachán sin' in s32(2) of the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923. 'The Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers), Act, 1923' is cited in Irish as 'an t-Acht um Fheidhmiú Dlí (Comhacht Ócáideach), 1923', with 'to provide for the better enforcement of law' being translated as 'chun soláthair do dhéanamh d'fheabhas-fheidhmiú an dlí' in the Long Title. Note, finally, that 'for enforcing the attendance of witnesses' is translated as 'chun a chur fhiachaint ar fhínnithe teacht i láthair' in s5(1) of the Tariff Commission Act, 1926.

Turning to the modern Acts, 'Subject to the law relating to bankruptcy and to the enforcement of judgments and orders' is translated as 'faoi réir an dlí a bhaineann le féimheacht agus le breithiúnais agus orduithe a chur i bhfeidhm' in s121(b) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. 'Any reference in this part to the enforcement of an award' is translated as 'aon tagairt sa Chuid seo d'fhorghníomhú dámhachtana' in s7(2) of the Arbitration Act, 1980. 'An Act to make provision in relation to the reciprocal recognition and enforcement of maintenance orders as between the State and Northern Ireland ...' is translated as 'Acht do dhéanamh socrú maidir le horduithe cothabhála a aithint agus a fheidhmiú go cómhálartach idir an Stát agus Tuaisceart Éireann' in the Long Title of the Maintenance Order Act, 1974.

na Fórsaí Cosanta See the commentary on Article 13.4.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Duine de na Fórsaí Cosanta nach bhfuil ar fiannas ní cead é nó í a thriail i láthair aon armchúirte ná binse mhíleata eile i gcion is intrialte sna cúirteanna sibhialta, mura cion é atá faoi dhlínse aon armchúirte nó binse mhíleata eile faoi aon dlí chun smacht míleata a chur i bhfeidhm.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ní dhéanfar comhalta d'Óglaigh na hÉireann nach bhfuil ar seirbhís ghníomhach<sup>1</sup> a thriail ag aon armchúirt nó binse míleata eile i leith ciona atá intrialte ag na cúirteanna sibhialta mura bhfuil an cion sin laistigh de dhlínse aon armchúirte nó binse mhíleata eile faoi aon dlí chun smacht míleata a chur i bhfeidhm.

Variants

- <sup>1</sup> 'ar fiannas', 'ar seirbhís chogaidh'

ARTICLE 38.5 AIRTEAGAL 38.5

TÉACS GAELGE

Ní cead duine a thriail in aon chúis choiriúil ach i láthair choiste tiomanta, ach amháin i gcás cionta a thriail faoi alt 2, alt 3 nó alt 4 den Airteagal seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is not permitted to try a person in any criminal charge/prosecution except in the presence of a sworn committee, except in the case of trial of offences under section 2, section 3 or section 4 of this Article.

ENGLISH TEXT

Save in the case of the trial of offences under section 2, section 3 or section 4 of this Article no person shall be tried on any criminal charge without a jury.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Without a jury' is expressed as 'ach i láthair choiste tiomanta' ('except in the presence of a sworn committee') in the Irish text; while 'coiste' has the sense of 'jury', the latter term is translated as 'giúiré' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'Charge' is expressed by 'cúis', which term, although it can have this sense in general usage, is translated simply as 'cause' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'cúiseamh' translating 'charge'.
- 3 As we have seen earlier, 'tried on' is expressed as 'a thriail in', 'tried in', in the Irish text.
- 4 The order of the clauses is reversed in the two texts.
- 5 'No ... shall' is expressed as 'Ní cead' ('It is not permitted') in the Irish text, as we have seen in many earlier Articles.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 208, reports as follows on reference made to this Article in the courts:

In The People (Attorney General) v Conmey ([1975] IR 341) Walsh J emphasised that the result of a trial on indictment was not a conviction or acquittal "by" the jury, but by the court; the wording of Article 38.5 referred not to trial "by" jury but to trial "with" a jury; this interpretation, he said, was "borne out by reference to the Irish language text of the Constitution" ("i láthair choiste tiomanta"). In In re Haughey ([1971] IR 217) Ó Dálaigh CJ cited the Irish text of the section to reinforce the obviously mandatory meaning of the English text.

Note that Article 72 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

No person shall be tried on any criminal charge without a jury save in the case of charges in respect of minor offences triable by law before a Court of Summary Jurisdiction and in the case of charges for offences against military law triable by Court Martial or other Military Tribunal. Ní trialfar aon duine in aon chúis choiriúil gan choiste ach i gcás cúiseanna timpeal mion-choirthe atá intrialta le dlí i láthair Chúirt Údarás Achmair agus i gcás cúiseanna timpeall coirthe i gcoinnibh dlí airm atá intrialta ag Chúirt Airm no Binse eile Airm.

Commentary

i láthair choiste tiomanta According to the official standard, 'coiste' would not be lenited following the prepositional phrase 'i láthair', lenition following a compound preposition only in the case of a definite noun and a proper noun – see s5 of the chapter headed 'Séimhiú agus Urú' in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil. On the other hand, 'tiomanta', being a participial adjective qualifying the masculine noun 'coiste' in the genitive case, would be lenited, according to the official standard. Note, however, that while 'coiste' is given as being masculine in Ó Dónaill and in the Glossary accompanying An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, according to Dinneen, 'coiste' is sometimes feminine. 'Coiste' is given as masculine in DIL, this word coming from English 'quest(e)', according to Douglas Hyde, DIL translating this headword as 'jury', citing 'do Philip féin / fá coisde' ('being tried by jury') from the collection of bardic poems to the O'Reillys (edited by James Carney, 1950).

Dinneen translates 'coiste' as 'a deliberative body, especially a jury, a quest; a committee', citing 'coiste mór, grand jury'. 'Coiste' is translated primarily as 'jury' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'coiste crónéara, coroner's jury; coroner's inquest' and 'coiste dháréag, cúirte, common, court, jury', also citing 'coiste mór, grand jury'. 'Committee' is the secondary sense of 'coiste' given by Ó Dónaill, citing 'coiste iniúchta, stiúrtha, inspection, steering-, committee'. This is the general sense today of 'coiste', and 'coiste' is translated solely as 'committee' in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil and in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'coiste iniúchta, committee of inspection' is cited, with 'jury' being translated as 'giúiré'.

'Tiomanta' is the past participle of 'tiomain' and is translated as 'sworn; set, determined' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'tá sé tiomanta é a dhéanamh, he is sworn, determined, to do it' and the asseveration 'diabhal thiomanta duine acu, devil a one of them'. 'Tiomanta' is translated as 'bequeathed, assigned, consigned, dedicated, devoted (to, chum), sworn to or resolved on (ar); extreme' in Dinneen, who cites 'tiomanta chum oibre, devoted to work' and 'tiomanta chum óil, addicted to drink'. The earlier form of the verb 'tiomain' was 'do-im(m)na', which had 'timna' as verbal noun, one of the senses of which is 'act of bequeathing; will, testament', this being in general usage today particularly in 'an Tiomna Nua' ('the New Testament') and 'an Sean-Tiomna' ('the Old Testament').

Looking at early Acts, 'The Grand Jury (Ireland) Act, 1836' is cited in Irish as 'An t-Acht um Ard-Choisti (Éirinn), 1836' in the Second Schedule to the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. 'Coiste dáréag' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'jury' in a Bill, 13/3/24. 'Power to hold inquest without a jury in certain cases' is translated as 'Comhacht chun coiste do dhéanamh gan giúiré i gcásanna áirithe' in the Margin Title of s3 of the Coroners (Amendment) Act, 1927, which Act is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht Coróiníri (Leasú), 1927', with 'the Juries Act, 1927' being cited in Irish as 'Acht na nGiúirithe, 1927', and 'sa ghiúiré-bhosca' translating 'in the jury box' in s47(5). 'And the trial is being or to be held without a jury' is translated as 'agus go mbeidh an triail á seoladh nó le seoladh gan giúiré' in s1(1) of the Criminal Justice (Verdicts) Act, 1976. 'Any action under that Act may ... be heard ... by a judge without a jury' is translated as 'féadfaidh breitheamh gan giúiré aon aicsean fén Acht san d'éisteacht' in s83(1) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1936.

Ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

aon chúis choiriúil See the commentary on Article 38.1.

Standardised Irish text

Ní cead duine a thriail in aon chúis choiriúil ach i láthair coiste thiomanta, ach amháin i gcás cionta a thriail faoi alt 2, alt 3 nó alt 4 den Airteagal seo.

Direct translation

Ach amháin i gcás cionta a thriail faoi alt 2, alt 3 nó alt 4 den Airteagal seo ní dhéanfar aon duine a thriail in aon chúiseamh coiriúil gan ghiúiré.

ARTICLE 38.6 AIRTEAGAL 38.6

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní bhainfidh forálacha Airteagal 34 ná Airteagal 35 den Bhunreacht seo le haon chúirt ná le haon bhinse a bhunófar faoi alt 3 nó alt 4 den Airteagal seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The provisions of Article 34 nor of Article 35 of this Constitution will not concern any court nor any bench which will be established under section 3 or section 4 of this Article.

ENGLISH TEXT

The provisions of Articles 34 and 35 of this Constitution shall not apply to any court or tribunal set up under section 3 or section 4 of this Article.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Of Article 34 and 35' is expressed as 'Airteagal 34 ná Airteagal 35', '(of) Article 34 nor (of) Article 35', in the Irish text – with repetition of 'Airteagal' – and 'to any court or tribunal' is expressed as 'le haon chúirt ná le haon bhinse' ('to any court nor to any tribunal').
- 2 'Shall not apply to' is expressed as 'Ní bhainfidh ... le' ('will not concern') in the Irish text, this phrase also translating 'apply to' in the Acts.

Commentary

ná le haon bhinse Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'ná' here in the direct translation below in the case of two separate things being involved, that being the understanding of the drafters of the Irish text.

Ní bhainfidh ... le See the commentary on Article 3.

Direct translation

Ní bheidh feidhm ag forálacha Airteagal 34 agus 35 den Bhunreacht seo maidir<sup>1</sup> le haon chúirt nó<sup>2</sup> le haon bhinse a bhunófar faoi alt 3 nó alt 4 den Airteagal seo.

Variants

- 1 'Ní bhainfidh forálacha Airteagal 34 agus 35'
- 2 'ná'

ARTICLE 39 AIRTEAGAL 39

TÉACS GAEILGE

Is é amháin is tréas ann cogadh a chur ar an Stát, nó cabhrú le stát nó le duine ar bith, nó saighdeadh faoi duine, nó bheith i gcomhcheilg le duine, chun cogadh a chur ar an Stát, nó iarracht a dhéanamh le harm nó ar mhodh fhoréigneach eile ar na horgain rialtais a bhunaítear leis an mBunreacht seo a threascairt, nó páirt nó baint a bheith ag neach lena leithéid sin d'iarracht, nó aon duine a shaighdeadh nó bheith i gcomhcheilg leis chun a déanta nó chun páirt nó baint a bheith aige léi.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

What treason is solely is to undertake war against the State, or to assist any state or person whatever, or to incite a person, or to be in conspiracy with a person, to undertake war against the State, or to make an attempt with arms or in another violent manner to overthrow the organs of government which are established by this Constitution, or someone to have a part (in) or connection with such an attempt, or to incite any person or to be in conspiracy with him in order to do it or in order that he have a part (in) or connection with it.

ENGLISH TEXT

Treason shall consist only in levying war against the State, or assisting any State or person or inciting or conspiring with any person to levy war against the State, or attempting by force of arms or other violent means to overthrow the organs of government established by this Constitution, or taking part or being concerned in or inciting or conspiring with any person to make or to take part or be concerned in any such attempt.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The Irish phrase involved in expressing 'taking part or being concerned in ... any such attempt', 'páirt nó baint a bheith ag x le y', can be read simply as 'x having something to do with y', this complete English text being expressed as 'páirt nó baint a bheith ag neach lena leithéid sin d'iarracht' ('a person / one having a part [in] or connection with such an attempt') in the Irish text, 'páirt a ghlacadh i rud' usually rendering 'to take part in something'.
- 2 Although 'saighdeadh faoi' and 'a shaighdeadh' have the sense of 'inciting', 'I incite' is translated as 'gríosaim' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 3 'Any person', in the first part of the Article, is twice expressed as 'a person' ('faoi dhuine', 'le duine') in the Irish text.
- 4 'By force of arms' is expressed as 'le harm', 'with arms', in the Irish text.
- 5 'State' has a capital 'S' in 'assisting any State', a lower-case 's' corresponding to this in the Irish text.

Note that s1(1) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925, reads as follows:

Every person who commits in Saorstát Éireann any of the following acts, that is to say:-

- (a) levies war against Saorstát Éireann, or
- (b) assists any state or person engaged in levying war against Saorstát Éireann, or
- (c) conspires with any person (other than his or her wife or husband) or incites any person to levy war against Saorstát Éireann, or
- (d) attempts or takes part or is concerned in an attempt to overthrow by force of arms or other violent means the Government of Saorstát Éireann

- as established by or under the Constitution, or (e) conspires with any person (other than his or her wife or husband) or incites any person to make or to take part or be concerned in any such attempt, shall be guilty of treason and shall be liable on conviction thereof to suffer death.

Gach éinne a dhéanfidh i Saorstát Éireann aon ghníomh acu so a leanas, sé sin le rá:-

- (a) coga do dhéanamh i gcoinnibh Shaorstáit Éireann, no
(b) cabhrú le haon stát no duine a bheidh ag déanamh cogaidh i gcoinnibh Shaorstáit Éireann, no
(c) cogar do dhéanamh le héinne (seachas a bhean no a fear) no éinne do ghríosú chun coga do dhéanamh i gcoinnibh Shaorstáit Éireann, no
(d) iarracht do dhéanamh no páirt a thógaint in iarracht no baint a bheith aige le hiarracht chun Rialtas Shaorstáit Éireann, mar atá sé bunuithe leis an mBunreacht no fé, do bhrise le neart claidhimh no le fóiréigean eile, no
(e) cogar do dhéanamh le héinne (seachas a bhean no a fear) no éinne do ghríosú chun aon iarracht den tsórt san do dhéanamh no chun páirt a thógaint inti no chun baint a bheith aige léi, beidh sé ciontach i dtréasún agus ar a chiontú ann féadfar é chur chun báis.

Commentary

cogadh a chur ar This phrase is translated as 'to make war on' in Ó Dónaill, who gives 'engage in, challenge to' as one of the senses of 'cuir ar', citing 'chuir sé troid orm, he challenged me to fight'. Dinneen translates 'cuirim cogadh ar' as 'I declare war on, am aggressive towards', citing 'chuirfeadh sé cogadh ar an aonach, he would attack a whole crowd'. 'Cocad', which is a compound of 'com' (Modern Irish 'comh') and 'cath', glosses Latin 'bellum' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. The verb 'cuirid' replaced earlier 'fo-ceird' and 'do-cuirethar'; DIL cites examples of 'fo-ceird' with 'cath', etc., in the sense of 'performs, executes, wages', from Leabhar na hUidhre (compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100) and the twelfth-century Book of Leinster onwards, including the following from the latter manuscript: 'In cath il-Luchut rolá / ... for Connachta' ('The battle at Luchut he fought / ... against Connacht'). De Bhaldraithe translates 'to levy war on someone' as 'cogadh a chur ar dhuine'. 'I levy' is translated as 'toibhím' in Téarmaí Dlí, this being used in the sense of levying taxes, rent, etc. Note that 'cogadh do dhéanamh i gcoinnibh Shaorstáit Éireann' translates 'levies war against Saorstát Éireann' in s1(1) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925, above.

Note, finally, that the clause 'chun cogadh do chur ar an Stát' is followed by a semi-colon in the original text.

saighdeadh faoi dhuine ... a shaighdeadh 'Saighdeadh' is the verbal noun of 'saighid', translated as 'incite, provoke' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'duine a shaighdeadh (le rud a dhéanamh), to incite someone (to do something)' and 'saighdeadh faoi dhuine, to provoke, aggravate, someone'. Dinneen translates 'saighdim' as 'I egg on, abet, incite, provoke, thrust, push, shoot, rout'. Ó Dónaill gives 'incitation' as a secondary sense of 'saighdeadh', citing 'chuir sé saighdeadh den mhadra iontu, he set the dog at them'. The principal sense of 'saighdeadh' is 'arrow', the earlier form 'saiget' coming from Latin 'sagitta', which term it glosses in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. 'Saigteóir', Modern Irish 'saighdiúir' ('soldier'), is based on 'saiget' and originally had the sense of 'archer, Bowman', the sense 'soldier' in general probably influenced by English 'soldier', according to DIL.

'I incite' is translated as 'gríosaim' in Téarmaí Dlí with 'incitement' translated as 'gríosú'. Note that 'gríosáigh' is the verb found in s1(1)(c) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925, above. 'Inciting to commit crime' is translated as 'Duine do ghriosa chun coir a dhéanamh' in the Third Schedule to the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'Inciting persons to engage in an attempt to overthrow by violence the established form of Government of Saorstát Éireann or organising or otherwise assisting or encouraging any such attempt' is translated as 'Daoine do ghríosú chun tabhairt fé fhuirm bhunuithe Rialtas Shaorstáit Éireann do bhrise le fóiréigean no aon iarracht den tsórt san d'ullamhú no, ar aon tsli eile, cabhair no misneach do thabhairt dá leithéid d'iarracht' in s1 of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Powers of Arrest and Detention) Temporary Act, 1924. 'Attempting, conspiring or inciting another person to commit an offence there specified' is translated as 'iarracht a thabhairt ar chion a shonraítear ansin a dhéanamh, nó comhcheilg a dhéanamh nó duine eile a ghríosú le cion a shonraítear ansin a dhéanamh' in s3(1)(b) of the Criminal Law (Jurisdiction) Act, 1976. 'Whether by inciting or encouraging them to do so' is translated as 'cibé acu trína ngríosadh nó trína spreagadh chun déanamh amhlaidh' in s3(1)(a)(i) of the Video Recordings Act, 1989.

tréas This headword is translated as 'treason' in Téarmaí Dlí and as 'treason; disloyalty, rebellion' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'tréas a dhéanamh, to commit treason' and 'dul i dtréas ar Dhia, to rebel against God'. Dinneen translates 'tréas' as 'treason, treachery, wrong-doing, a treacherous deed', citing 'an tréas, treason' and 'Ábsolom d'imthigh i dtréas, Absolom who became a traitor'. Dáibhí Ó Bruadair (1625-1698) is the source of DIL's two citations of 'traos', translated simply as 'treason' – see the commentary on Article 15.13.

'Tréasún isea gníomhartha áirithe feasta' translates 'Certain acts to be treason' in the Margin Title of s1 of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925, which Act is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht um Chiontaí Tréasúnta, 1925'. 'Except in case of treason' is translated as 'ach amháin i gcás tréasúin' in Article 18 of the 1922 Constitution. 'If he is convicted of treason' is translated as 'Má fachtar ciontach i dtréasán é' in s69(1) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'Save in the case of persons charged with ... high treason, treason felony, or treasonable conspiracy' is translated as 'ach amháin i gcás daoine a cúiseofar ... in árd-thréasún, i bhfeleontacht thréasúin, no i gcogar tréasúnta' in s49 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. 'In respect of sedition, treason or treason felony' is translated as 'mar gheall ar cheannairc, ar thréasán no ar fheleontacht tréasain' in s2(2)(b) of the Military Service Pensions Act, 1934. Following the 1937 Constitution, 'the Treason Act, 1939' is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht Tréasa, 1939'. Finally, 'evidence relating to the commission or intended commission of treason' is translated as 'fianaise a bhaineann le tréas a dhéanamh nó lena bheith beartaithe é a dhéanamh' in s5 of the Criminal Law Act, 1976.

i gcomhcheilg le duine 'Comhcheilg' is translated as 'conspiracy' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, 'cómhchealg' being similarly translated in Dinneen. This is a compound of the prefix 'comh-' ('mutual, joint, common, co-') and 'cealg', translated in Ó Dónaill as 'guile, deceit; treachery', with Dinneen translating this headword as 'a sting; a plot, deceit, treachery, guile', citing 'i gceilg, treacherously', with 'ceilg' being the form of the dative singular. DIL translates 'celg' principally as 'deceit, treachery, guile, stratagem', citing 'do denam sida céici fris dia tarrachtain' (i.e. making 'false peace') from Leabhar na hUídhre, compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100, and 'mo chealg bháis chruaidh ghuit' ('o bitter piercing sting of death to me'), from the poems of Aogán Ó Rathaille (1675-1728), as an example of the later sense of 'sting'.

We see above that 'cogar do dhéanamh le héinne' translates 'conspires with any person' in s1(1) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925. 'Knowingly aiding, abetting, assisting in, or encouraging the commission of, or conspiring to commit, any of the offences mentioned in this schedule' is translated as 'cabhrú le héinne, é ghríosú, cuidiú leis no é mhisniú, no cogar do dhéanamh, chun aon chionta dá luaidhtear sa sceideal so do dhéanamh' in s13 of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Powers of Arrest and Detention) Temporary Act, 1924. 'Acting in the name of or on behalf of any combination or conspiracy for the overthrow of the late Provisional Government of Ireland' is translated as 'ag gníomhú in ainm no thar ceann aon chur-le-chéile no cogair chun Rialtas Sealadach na hÉireann do bhí ann le déanaí ... do threascairt' in s15(9)(d)(i) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. Note, finally, that 'uisce faoi thalamh' is a colloquial expression for 'conspiracy' in Irish.

Turning to modern Acts, 'proceedings are instituted against another person charging him with the offence of aiding, abetting or assisting the principal offender or of conspiring with the principal offender to commit the principal offence' is translated as 'imeachta a thionscnamh i gcoinne duine eile á chúiseamh i gcion faoi gur chabhraigh, gur neartaigh, gur chuidigh nó gur chomhcheilg sé leis an bpríomh-chiontóir chun an príomh-chion a dhéanamh' in s3(3)(b) of the Customs Act, 1956, the same English text (with 'another person' replacing 'the principal offender') being translated as 'imeachta do bhunú i gcoinne duine eile á chúiseamh sa chionta san, cabhrú, neartú, nó cuidiú nó comhcheilg do dhéanamh le duine eile chun an príomh-chionta do dhéanamh' in s3(9)(b) of the Customs (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1945.

le harm See the commentary on Article 28.3.3°, in which Article we find 'ceannairc faoi arm', this phrase being given in Téarmaí Dlí as 'ceannairc faoi airm', i.e. the plural form of 'arm'. Ó Dónaill cites 'le tine is le harm, with fire and sword' and 'faoi arm, under arms', the latter as an example of the collective sense of Irish 'arm', 'arms'. Dinneen cites 'gléasta i n-arm is i n-éide, under arms and in armour'. DIL cites 'bat armatura dei bess lib nábat nacha arm aile' ('let armatura Dei be with you; let it not be any other arms') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

Note that 'le neart claidhimh' translates 'by force of arms' in s1(1) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925, cited above. 'Every person who prevents or obstructs, or attempts or is concerned in an attempt to prevent or obstruct, by force of arms or other violent means ... the carrying on of the government of the State' is translated as 'Gach duine chuirfidh cosc no bac no bhéarfaidh fé chosc no bac do chur no go mbeidh baint aige le tabhairt fé chosc no bac do chur, tré neart airm no tré fhoiréigin eile ... le riaghaltas an Stáit ... do choimeád ar siúl' in s7(1) of the Offences Against the State Act, 1939.

ar mhodh fhoréigneach See the commentary on Article 45 regarding the lenition of the adjective following a masculine noun in the dative singular. 'Foréigneach' is translated as 'violent' in Téarmaí Dlí, and as 'violent, forcible' in Ó Dónaill, 'foréigean' being translated as 'violence' in the former source and as 'violence, force, compulsion' in the latter. Dinneen translates 'foiréigneach' as 'extremely violent, vehement, rapid', translating 'foiréigean' as 'great violence, oppression; extortion; great speed'. 'Foréicneach' is translated as 'violent, forcible, oppressive' in DIL, citing 'bás foiréigneach' ('death by violence') from Keating's seventeenth-century History of Ireland. The noun 'foréicen' ('violence, compulsion') is composed of the prefix 'for-' (translated as 'super-, over-, hyper-, great, extreme' in Dinneen) and 'éicen', which word glosses Latin 'violentia' in the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian.

Note that '(by) other violent means' is translated as 'le foiréigean eile' in s1(1) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925, above. 'By force of arms or other violent means' is translated as 'tré neart airm no tré fhoiréigin eile' in s7(1) of the Offences Against the State Act, 1939.

páirt nó baint Ó Dónaill cites 'ná biodh baint ná páirt agat leo, have nothing to do with them' and 'níl baint ná páirt agam leo, I have no connection whatever with them'. Dinneen cites 'níl aon bhaint agam leis, I have nothing to do with him', 'mo cheangal is mo pháirt leis do bhriseadh, to disrupt our mutual obligation and friendly relations' and 'tá páirt agam leat, I like you'. 'Páirt', which comes from Latin 'pars, part-', has the sense of 'part' as in 'side, party ... hence association, alliance, fellowship', according to DIL, citing 'aderit an páirt do bí acu aran saegul curab ecin dóib a beith acu thall' (= that they must needs be united after death as in life) from the Gaelic Maundeville. See the commentary on Article 3 regarding 'bain le'.

'And generally take part in the hearing of every application under the Criminal Injuries Act' is translated as 'agus bheith páirteach go generálta in éisteacht gach iarratais fé na hAchtanna um Dhíobháil Choiriúil' in s5 of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. De Bhaldraithe translates 'to be concerned in, with, something' as 'bheith i gcúram, i mbun, ruda; bheith ag plé le rud; bheith páirteach i (ngnó)'. Note that 'takes part or is concerned in an attempt' is translated as 'páirt a thógaint in iarracht no baint a bheith aige le hiarracht' in s1(1) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925, cited above, with 'protects any person engaged or taking part or concerned in any such attempt as aforesaid' being translated as 'caomhaint do thabhairt d'éinne a bheidh ag déanamh aon iarrachta den tsórt san roimhráite no ag tógaint páirte inti no i mbaint léi' in s3(1)(b).

'That he ... has acted as director of, or taken part or been concerned in the management of a company' is translated as 'gur ghníomhaigh sé ... mar stiúrthóir ar chuideachta, nó go raibh baint nó páirt aige lena bainistí' in s183(2) of the Companies Act, 1963, with '(if any person) ... directly or indirectly takes part in or is concerned in the promotion ... of any company' being translated as 'má bhíonn baint nó páirt aige go díreach nó go neamhdhíreach le tionscnamh ... aon chuideachta' in s169 of the Companies Act, 1990. 'Every collector or agent of such company who takes part or is concerned in such failure' is translated as 'gach bailitheoir no gníomhaire don chuideachta sin go mbeidh baint aige leis an teip sin no bheidh páirteach ann' in s61(3) of the Insurance Act, 1935. Finally, 'every person who shall hold or take part in or be concerned in the holding of a public meeting' is translated as 'gach duine chomórfaidh cruinniú puiblí no bheidh páirteach i gcruinniú puiblí do chomóradh no 'na mbeidh baint aige le cruinniú puiblí do chomóradh' in s24(3) of the Constitution (Amendment No. 17) Act, 1931.

a threascairt The verbal noun of 'treascair', translated as 'knock down; overthrow, vanquish; lay low, prostrate' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'tír a threascairt, to overthrow a country'. Dinneen translates 'treascraim' as 'I overthrow, knock down, lay low, defeat'. This verb comes from the compound verb 'do-scara', translated as 'overthrow, knocks down, lays low' in DIL, citing 'toscara Cú sessiur díb and' ('there Cú Chulainn overthrew six of them') from the version of the Táin in Leabhar na hUidhre (compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100).

'For the overthrow of the ... Provisional Government of Ireland' is translated as 'chun Rialtas Sealadach na hÉireann ... do threascairt' in s15(9)(d)(i) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. 'Inciting persons to engage in an attempt to overthrow by violence the established form of Government of Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'Daoine do ghríosú chun tabhairt fé fhuirm bhunuithe Rialtas Shaorstáit Éireann do bhrise le fóiréigean' in s1 of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1926.

Note, finally, that 'do threascairt' is followed by a semi-colon in the original text.

na horgain See the commentary on Article 6.2, 'orgán' rather than 'organ' being given in Ó Dónaill, for example.

Is é amháin is tréas ann Note that this clause is followed by a colon in the original text.

neach See the commentary on Article 40.4.2°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Is é amháin is tréas ann cogadh a chur ar an Stát, nó cabhrú le stát nó le duine ar bith, nó saighdeadh faoi dhuine, nó bheith i gcomhcheilg le duine, chun cogadh a chur ar an Stát, nó iarracht a dhéanamh le harm nó ar mhodh foréigneach eile ar na horgain rialtais a bhunaítear leis an mBunreacht seo a threascairt, nó páirt nó baint a bheith ag neach lena leithéid sin d'iarracht, nó aon duine a shaighdeadh nó bheith i gcomhcheilg leis nó léi chun a déanta nó chun páirt nó baint a bheith aige nó aici léi.

Direct translation

Is é<sup>1</sup> amháin is tréas ann cogadh a chur ar an Stát, nó cuidiú le haon Stát nó le haon duine nó aon duine a ghríosú nó bheith i gcomhcheilg le haon duine chun cogadh a chur ar an Stát, nó iarracht a dhéanamh le fórsa airm nó ar mhodh foréigneach eile ar na horgain<sup>2</sup> rialtais a bhunaítear leis an mBunreacht seo a threascairt, nó bheith páirteach in aon iarracht dá leithéid nó bainteach léi<sup>3</sup> nó aon duine a ghríosú nó bheith i gcomhcheilg le haon duine in aon iarracht dá leithéid nó bheith páirteach inti nó bainteach léi<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'éard'
- 2 'orgain'
- 3 'nó páirt nó baint a bheith ag duine le haon iarracht dá leithéid'
- 4 'nó páirt nó baint a bheith ag duine léi'

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS

BUNCHEARTA

ARTICLE 40.1 AIRTEAGAL 40.1

TÉACS GAEILGE

BUNCHEARTA Cearta Pearsanta

Áirítear gurb ionann ina bpearsain daonna na saoránaigh uile i láthair an dlí.

Ach ní intuigthe as sin nach bhféachfaidh an Stát go cuí, ina chuid achtachán, don difríocht atá idir daoine ina mbuanna corpartha agus ina mbuanna morálta agus ina bhfeidhm chomhdhaonnach.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

BASIC RIGHTS Personal Rights

It is reckoned that all the citizens are equal as human persons in the presence of the law.

But it is not to be understood from that that the State will not duly, in its enactments, have regard to the difference there is between people in their physical attributes and in their moral attributes and in their societal function.

ENGLISH TEXT

FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS Personal Rights

All citizens shall, as human persons, be held equal before the law.

This shall not be held to mean that the State shall not in its enactments have due regard to differences of capacity, physical and moral, and of social function.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Differences of capacity' is expressed in the Irish text as '(an) difríocht atá idir daoine ina mbuanna' ('the difference which there is between people in their gifts/attributes/accomplishments').
- 2 'Ina bpearsain daonna', expressing 'as human persons', might not so readily be understood today; as well as being a variant plural of 'pearsa' (the standard plural being 'pearsana'), 'pearsain' is also the dative singular and following 'ina' might be read literally as 'in their human person(ality)'.
3 'Shall ... be held equal' is expressed as 'Áirítear gurb ionann' ('it is reckoned that they are equal') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Before the law' is expressed as 'i láthair an dlí' ('in the presence of the law') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Held' of the first paragraph is echoed in the second paragraph of the English text alone.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 208, reports as follows on reference made to this Article in the courts:

In In re Walker, decd; O'B. v S ([1984] IR 316; [1985] ILMR 86) Walsh J referred to the Irish version of the proviso to Article 40.1 and said this made it clear that:

"the proviso refers to the difference of capacity, physical and moral, and of the social function of the citizens for whom, or in respect of whom, the State in its enactments has seen fit to have "due regard" to their differences under these headings."

Commentary

ina bpearsain daonna 'Caomhnóir ar an bpearsa' and 'foghail ar an bpearsa' are translated respectively as 'guardian of the person' and 'trespass to the person' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'pearsa' as 'person', citing 'pearsa den daonnacht, human being' and 'a pearsa is a méin, her form and disposition'. Dinneen translates 'pearsa' as 'a person or individual, ... a body, figure, form, features ...', citing 'táithe id' phearsain, near akin to thee' (from Dáibhí Ó Bruadair's seventeenth-century poetry) and 'is ait an phearsa bhíonn ar na caoirigh adharcacha, horned sheep have a curious appearance'. Old Irish 'persa', which comes from Latin 'persona', is translated as 'a person, an individual' in DIL, where 'a (i) persain', followed by the genitive, is translated as 'in the person (character, quality) of'. We have examples of this dative singular of 'persa' both in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, where we find 'labraid in spíurt noib tri giun Daid inso. i. a persainn rí inna rigsuidiu ocaldaim amuntairae' ('the Holy Spirit speaks this through the mouth of David, namely, in the character of a king upon his throne addressing his [people]') and in the St Gall Glosses on Priscian, where we find 'in tan labratar ind fílid a persin inna ndea' ('when the poets speak in the person of the gods'). Going to Modern Irish, according to the official standard (An Caighdeán Oifigiúil), the form of the dative is identical to that of the nominative (except for the Second Declension, 'pearsa' being of the Fifth Declension according to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil); therefore, 'i bpearsain' today would be replaced by 'i bpearsa'. The old dative form is also a variant plural form – see Dinneen who gives both 'pearsain' and the standard plural form today, 'pearsana'. See further the commentary on Article 45.2ii where 'pearsana' expresses 'individuals'.

As regards 'ina' in this context, Ó Dónaill cites 'chuaigh sé ina thoscaire ann, he went there as a delegate' as an example of the use of the preposition 'i' with a possessive pronoun in the sense of 'status, function, etc.' Dinneen cites 'chuaidh sé na thoscaire go dtí an tír sin, he went as an ambassador to that country', 'imtheochad im' chuaichín ar fuaid an tsaoghail, I will go through the world a disappointed girl' and 'i n-a n-aon-mhnáibh, as women unescorted'. See DIL s.v. 'i' (4):

A noun in apposition may be preceded by the preposition 'i n-' (governing dative) + possessive pronoun. This was a development of the older use of the dative without preposition.

Examples are cited in DIL from Leabhar na hUidhre (completed before 1106) onwards, including 'dobudh nár dhúinn ionur thríar Ulltach' (i.e. it was a shame 'to us three Ultonians') and 'ní iomdha dhúinn i n-ar ndaoibh' ('not many of us men').

Turning to 'daonna', 'dlí daonna' is translated as 'positive law' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'daonna' generally being translated as 'human', as in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'an cine daonna, the human race' and 'neach daonna, human being', giving 'humane, kind' as a secondary sense. Dinneen translates 'daonna' as 'human; mortal; liberal, civil, hospitable, charitable'. Old Irish 'doind(a)e' is based on 'doén', which is a poetic term for 'human being', the general term being 'duine', on which 'doén' is based – see DIL s.v.v. 'doén' and 'doénda'.

Áirítear 'Áirigh' is translated as 'count, reckon' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'duine a áireamh mar chara, to reckon someone as a friend' and 'áirim gur fíor é, I reckon that it is true'. Dinneen translates 'áirmhim' as 'I count, reckon, consider, record; I speak of, mention, take into account'. DIL only cites one example of the verb 'áirmigid' ('counts'): 'áirmhighthear sruth Tanais ar aibhnibh na Scitia' (i.e. the river T. 'is reckoned among the rivers of S.'). from Keating's seventeenth-century History of Ireland. This verb is based on 'áirem', itself the verbal noun of earlier 'ad-rimi', translated as (a) 'counts, numbers, computes', (b) 'records, recounts, mentions', 1(c) 'takes into account' and (d) 'counts as, regards; considers to be', examples of which are cited from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards – see further the commentary on Article 18.7.1<sup>iv</sup>.

In s2(c) of the Radiological Protection Act, 1991, '(a requesting State shall) hold the assisting party ... harmless in respect of legal proceedings and claims' is translated as 'glacfaidh sé leis go bhfuil an páirtí cúnta ... neamh-urchóideach maidir le himeachtaí dlí'. In Article 63 of the Treaty establishing the European Coal and Steel Community, 'undertakings shall be held responsible for infringements of their obligations by their direct agents' is translated simply as '(go) mbeidh na gnóthais freagrach as sárú aon oibleagáide faoina rachfar amhlaidh ag gníomhairí díreacha na ngnóthas'. 'Every person who holds himself out or represents himself to be a bookmaker' is translated as 'gach éinne a thabharfidh le tuisgint no a chuirfidh in úil gur geall-ghlacadóir ... é' in s2(1) of the Betting Act, 1926. See further the commentary on Article 47.1, where 'ní foláir a mheas' expresses 'shall be held'.

intuigthe This headword is translated as 'implied' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'is intuigthe as' is translated as 'it implies'. Ó Dónaill translates 'intuigthe' as 'understandable, intelligible; implied, implicit', translating 'is (é rud atá) intuigthe as sin (go)' as 'that implies, would lead one to understand (that)'. DIL cites two examples of 'intuicthe', 'to be understood', the first of which comes from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death.

Turning to the Acts, in s67 of the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, 'is cinneadh críochnaitheach cinneadh an cheann comhairimh, cibé acu sainráite dó nó intuigthe as a ghníomhartha' translates 'The decision of the returning officer, whether expressed or implied by his acts, ... shall be final'. Regarding 'hold to be' in the Acts, 'Waiver of immunity from jurisdiction in respect of civil or administrative proceedings shall not be held to imply waiver of immunity in respect of the execution of the judgment' is translated as 'Ní ghlacfar go n-urchiallaíonn tarscaoileadh diolúine ó dhlínse i leith imeachtaí sibhialta nó imeachtaí riaracháin tarscaoileadh diolúine i leith an bhreithiúnas a fhorghníomhú' in Article 32(4) of the First Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967. 'Document of any kind whatsoever containing expressions which might reasonably be held to imply that he carried on banking business' is translated as 'scribhinn d'aon chineál ar bith, ina mbeidh abairtí go bhféadfaí go réasúnta a rá go dtugaid le tuiscint go mbíonn gnó bancaerachta á dhéanamh aige' in s8 of the Moneylenders Act, 1933.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú greatly favours 'ní intuigthe as sin' to 'ní ghlacfar leis go gciallaíonn sé sin', suggesting 'níl le tuiscint as sin' as an alternative.

buanna Bua is translated as (1) 'victory, triumph', (2) 'gift, talent', (3) 'virtue, merit', (4) 'special quality' and (5) 'lot, destiny' in Ó Dónaill. As examples of sense (2) are cited 'bua cainte, ceoil, gift of speech, music' and of (3) 'is mór an bua do dhuine an tsláinte, it is a great advantage to have one's health'. Dinneen translates 'buidh' as 'victory; conquest; success; virtue, excellence, an attribute' and as 'occult mysterious property of a person or object as for heating, etc.'. DIL cites examples of 'búaid' in the sense of 'special quality or attribute, gift, virtue' from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards, including the following from the Táin: 'itáat trí búada formsa .i. búaid roisc, 7 indtliuchta 7 airdmesa' (i.e. I have three accomplishments, the accomplishment of sight, intellect and estimating). See further the commentary on Article 43.1.1<sup>o</sup>.

In the Radio and Television Act, 1988, 'Éireannaigh a bhfuil buanna acu sa cheol' translates 'Irish talent in music'. On the other hand, 'testamentary capacity' and 'capacity to contract' are translated respectively as 'inniúlacht tiomnaithe' and 'inniúlacht chonraithe' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'cáil' translating the headword 'capacity' and 'in a fiduciary capacity' being translated as 'i gcáil mhúineach'. In s55(8) of the Succession Act, 1965, 'if ... there is no trustee of a settled share, and no person of full age and capacity entitled to the income thereof' is translated as 'Más rud é ... nach bhfuil aon iontaobhaí ar scair shocraithe ann, agus nach bhfuil aon duine lánaoise agus inniúlachta i dteideal an ioncaim aisti'. In Article 5(b) of the Second Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, 'the interests of minors and other persons lacking full capacity' is translated as 'leasanna mionaoiseach agus daoine eile ar easpa inniúlachta iomláine'.

Looking at early translations of 'capacity', 'cumas' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'capacity' in translations for various Departments. 'Patients admitted to the District Hospitals shall be obliged to pay for maintenance and attendance according to capacity' is translated as 'Beidh ar othair a leigfar isteach sna hOspidéal Cheanntair beidh ortha íoc do réir a n-acfuinne as a gcimeád suas agus as freastal ortha' in s22 of the 'Mayo County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'Employed by the Local Authority in a temporary capacity' is translated as ‘ar fostú i bhfeadhmannas diombuan ag an Údarás Áitiúil’ in s11(6) of the same Act. Finally, ‘and shall be collectively responsible to the Minister for Defence for all matters entrusted to it in its collective capacity’ is translated as ‘agus beid freagarthach in éineacht don Aire Cosanta i ngach ní a cuirfar ina n-íocht mar chólucht aonair’ in s8(6) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924.

ionann This headword is translated as ‘same, identical; alike, equal’ in Ó Dónaill, who cites ‘is ionann iad, they are identical’. Dinneen translates ‘ionann’ as ‘the same, identical; equal, equivalent, similar, alike’. See the commentary on Article 15.11.2°.

In s1(b) of Part 1 of the Finance Act, 1990, ‘and proves that it does not exceed a sum equal to twice the specified amount’ is translated as ‘go gcruthóidh sé nach mó é ná suim is ionann agus dhá oiread an mhéid shonraithe’. We generally find ‘comhionann’ in this context in the Acts. In s8 of the Value-Added Tax (Amendment) Act, 1978, for example, ‘if the consideration consisted entirely of an amount of money equal to the open market price’ is translated as ‘dá mba é a bhí go huile sa chomaoin suim airgid is comhionann leis an margadh-phraghas oscailte’ and in s25 of the Wealth Tax Act, 1975, ‘be deemed to be property to which the minor children of the marriage are beneficially entitled to possession in equal shares’ is translated as ‘measfar gur maoin í a bhfuil teideal tairbhiúil seilbhe chuici i scaireanna comhionanna ag leaná mionaoiseacha an phósta’. In s2(b) of the Sugar Manufacture (Amendment) Act, 1973, ‘The reference to principal ... shall be taken as referring to the equivalent in currency of the State of the actual principal’ is translated as ‘An tagairt do phríomhshuim ... measfar gur tagairt í do mhéid is comhionann in airgead reatha an Stáit leis an bpríomhshuim iarbhir’. ‘Equal pay officers’ are styled ‘Oifigigh pá chomhionainn’ in the Anti-Discrimination (Pay) Act, 1974. In s66 of the Pensions Act, 1990, ‘the principle of equal treatment’ is termed ‘an príonsabal um dhéileáil chomhionann’. Note that in Article 18 of the First Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, ‘The procedure to be observed in each State for the reception of heads of mission shall be uniform in respect of each class’ is translated as ‘An nós imeachta a leanfar i ngach Stát chun cinn mhisiún a ghlacadh is nós imeachta comhionann a bheidh ann maidir le gach aicme’. ‘Comh-’ itself as a prefix has the sense of ‘equal’ – see Ó Dónaill, for example, and the following from the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97 (p. 34): ‘people with a disability are equal citizens of Ireland’, ‘comhshaoránaigh de chuid na hÉireann is ea na daoine a bhfuil míchumas orthu’.

nach bhféachfaidh ... do Ó Dónaill translates ‘féach do’ as ‘have regard to’, citing ‘ní fhéachann an t-éag do neach, death is no respecter of persons’ and ‘ní fhéachaim do na gnóthaí sin, I pay no attention to those matters’. Dinneen translates ‘féachaim do’ as ‘I look to, differentiate in regard to, sympathise with’. Finally, DIL translates ‘féagaid do’ as ‘looks to, heeds, has regard to, takes into account’, citing ‘mana fechainn d’onoir dom athair’ (‘had I not regard for the honour due to my father’), from the Irish version of Fierabras.

In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 927), ‘The Commission shall, before 1 April 1973 and with due regard for the provisions in force, ... determine the methods’ is translated as ‘Socróidh an Coimisiún, roimh an 1 Aibreán 1973, ag féachaint go cuí do na forálacha atá i bhfeidhm, ... na modhanna’. On p. 318, we find ‘with due regard for the provisions of this Treaty’ translated as ‘agus aird chuí aici ar fhorálacha an Chonartha seo’. Similarly, in the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97 (p. 45), ‘with due regard to environmental considerations’ is translated as ‘ag féachaint go cuí do chúrsaí comhshaoil’ while in the Joint Declaration of 15 December 1993, ‘such an examination would of course have due regard to the desire to preserve those inherited values’ is translated as ‘thabharfaí aird chuí, ar ndóigh, sa scrúdú sin, ar an mian atá ann comhaontú a dhéanamh ar na luachanna sin a fuarthas le hoidhreacht’ (p. 4). ‘The Board and the companies shall have due regard to the Board’s social role’ is translated as ‘Tabharfaidh an Bord agus na cuideachtaí aird chuí ar ról sóisialta an Bhoird’ in s8(10) of the Transport (Re-organisation of Córas Iompair Éireann) Act, 1986, with ‘the Land Commission shall have due regard to the reasonable requirements of the owner’ being translated as ‘tabharfaidh Coimisiún na Talmhan aire chuibhe do riachtanaisí réasúnta an únaera’ in s37 of the Land Act, 1923.

corpartha This adjective is translated as ‘corporal; corporeal’ in Ó Dónaill, ‘corpardha’ being translated as ‘bodily, corporal; large, bulky; material as opposed to spiritual’ in Dinneen. ‘Corporda’ is translated as ‘corporeal, bodily, physical, actual’ in DIL, being based on Latin ‘corporeus’. See further the commentary on Article 42.5.

‘Physical’ is generally translated in the Acts by the genitive singular form of ‘corp’ as an attributive adjective – see, for example, s3(2)(b) of the Judicial Separation and Family Law Reform Act, 1989, where “welfare” comprises the religious and moral, intellectual, physical and social welfare of the children’ is translated as ‘folaíonn “leas” leas creidimh agus morálta na leaná, mar aon lena leas intleachta, lena leas coirp agus lena leas sóisialta’. In s43(3)(a) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, ‘having regard to his physical and mental condition’ is translated as ‘ag féachaint dá staid choirp agus mheabhrach’.

Ó Dónaill gives ‘fisiceach’ as a headword, simply translated as ‘physical’, with the form ‘fisiciúil’ being given as a variant.

i láthair an dli ‘I láthair Dé’ and ‘i láthair duine’ are translated respectively as ‘before God, as God is my witness’ and ‘in the presence of someone’ in Ó Dónaill, with ‘presence’ being a secondary sense of ‘láthair’, principally translated as ‘place, spot; site, location’. ‘Dul i láthair na cúirte’ is translated as ‘to appear before the court’ in Ó Dónaill. Dinneen cites ‘dul i láthair an bhreithimh (na cúirte), to appear before the judge (court)’. See further the commentary on Article 28.8.

‘Os comhair’ usually translates ‘before’ in the present sense in the modern Acts. In s28 of the Second Schedule to the Health Act, 1970, ‘all questions coming or arising before the board may be ... decided by the majority of such members’ is translated as ‘féadfar gach ceist a thiocfaidh nó a éireoidh os comhair an bhoird a chinneadh ... ag tromlach na gcomhaltai sin den bhord’. In s24(b) of the same Act, ‘Any question arising before a committee’ is translated as ‘aon cheist a éireoidh os comhair coiste’.

In s14(4)(a)(iii) of the Criminal Law (Jurisdiction) Act, 1976, 'he shall be brought before a judge or justice of any court' is translated as 'tabharfar é os comhair breithimh aon chúirte'. 'I láthair' would generally translate 'in the presence of' – see, for example, s14(2) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1967, where 'The deposition shall be taken in the presence of a justice of the District Court and of the accused' is translated as 'Tógfar an teistíocht i láthair breitheamh den Chúirt Dúiche agus an chúisí'. Finally, 'on conviction before a District Justice' is translated as 'ar a chiontú i láthair Breithimh Dhúithche' in s80 of the Dundalk Harbour and Port Act, 1925.

go cuí 'Comaoin chúí' is translated as 'good consideration' in Tearmaí Dlí, where 'mionnscribhinn fhorghníomhaithe chúí' and 'sealbhóir i gcúrsa cuí' are translated respectively as 'affidavit of due execution' and 'holder in due course'. 'Cuí' currently translates 'appropriate', 'proper' and 'fit' in the Acts. See further the commentary on the Preamble.

Bunchearta See the commentary on Article 9.2 regarding the prefix 'bun-' expressing 'fundamental' in the Constitution. Note that 'Bun-chirt' is the form in the original text.

chomhdhaonnach 'Comhdhaonnach' expresses 'social' in the Constitution – see the commentary on Article 15.3.1°.

idir daoine Note that lenition follows idir in the original text.

Standardised Irish text

BUNCHEARTA

Cearta Pearsanta

Áirítear gurb ionann ina bpearsa dhaonna na saoránaigh uile i láthair an dlí.

Ach ní intuigthe as sin nach bhféachfaidh an Stát go cuí, ina chuid achtachán, don dhifríocht atá idir dhaoine ina mbuanna corpartha agus ina mbuanna morálta agus ina bhfeidhm chomhdhaonnach.

Direct translation

CEARTA BUNÚSACHA

Cearta Pearsanta

Áireofar gur<sup>1</sup> comhionann na saoránaigh uile<sup>2</sup>, mar dhaoine daonna, os comhair<sup>3</sup> an dlí.<sup>4</sup>

Ach ní ghlacfar leis go gciallaíonn sé sin<sup>5</sup> nach bhféachfaidh an Stát go cuí ina chuid achtachán do dhifríochtaí<sup>6</sup> ó thaobh inniúlachta<sup>7</sup> coirp agus morálta, agus ó thaobh feidhme<sup>8</sup> sóisialta<sup>9</sup>.

Variants

1 'Is', 'Tuigfear gur', 'Glacfar leis gur'

2 'go léir'

3 'i láthair'

4 'Glacfar leis go bhfuil na saoránaigh uile, mar dhaoine daonna, comhionann os comhair an dlí.', 'Is comhshaoránaigh / saoránaigh chomhionanna iad na saoránaigh go léir, mar dhaoine daonna, os comhair an dlí.'

5 'níl le tuiscint as sin', 'ní intuigthe as sin'

6 'nach dtabharfaidh an Stát aird chuí ina chuid achtachán ar dhifríochtaí'

7 'do dhifríochtaí inniúlachta'

8 'agus feidhme'

9 'sóisialaí'

ARTICLE 40.2.1° AIRTEAGAL 40.2.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní cead don Stát gairm uaisleachta a bhronnadh ar aon duine.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State is not permitted to confer a title of nobility on any person.

ENGLISH TEXT

Titles of nobility shall not be conferred by the State.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The Irish text contains the phrase 'ar aon duine', 'on any person', in addition to the English text.
- 2 'Titles of nobility' is expressed as 'gairm uaisleachta' ('a title of nobility') in the Irish text.
- 3 Again, the term 'Ní cead', 'Is not permitted', differs in tone from 'shall not'.

Note that Article 5 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

No title of honour in respect of any services rendered in or in relation to the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) may be conferred on any citizen of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) .... Ní bronnfar ar aon tsaoránach de Shaorstát Éireann aon teideal onóra i dtaobh aon tseirbhísí do thabhairt uaidh i Saorstát Éireann no 'na thaobh.

Commentary

gairm uaisleachta See the commentary on Article 13.5.2° regarding 'gairm', there expressing 'commission'. Ó Dónaill translates 'gairm uaisleachta' as 'title of nobility'. Dinneen translates 'gairm ríogh' as 'a king's title', citing 'thugas mo rath ar mhnaoi is gairm ríogh agam le fagháil, I left good fortune and a crown for a woman's sake'. DIL gives examples of 'gairm ríogh' ('title of king'), along with 'gairm ollaimh' (i.e. title of professor), from the earlier literature.

Ó Dónaill s.v. 'teideal', cites 'teideal uaisleachta, title of nobility', translating 'uaisleacht' as 'nobility, gentility'. Dinneen translates 'uaisleacht' as 'nobility, gentility, generosity, refinement; finery', citing 'ná satail orm im' uaisleacht, don't walk on me, I am all dressed up!' 'Uaisleacht' is translated as 'nobility, honour, greatness' in DIL, where examples are cited from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster onwards; it is based on 'úaisle', 'nobility, dignity' – DIL cites 'cu ro pinnit fo uaisli in graidh' ('in proportion to the dignity of the grade'), from a commentary on an early Irish law-tract. This form is in turn based on 'úasal', 'high, lofty' and, metaphorically, 'noble, honourable' – DIL cites 'Germán martir úasal' and 'athir Iohain uasail Baptaist' from Féilire Oengusso Céili Dé and Saltair na Rann, respectively, this form being still in use today in formal address. See further the commentary on the Preamble where ‘uaisleacht’ translates ‘dignity’.

‘Title’ is translated as ‘teideal’ in Téarmaí Dlí, this being in relation to Property Law in particular. We find this term in a relatively similar context to that in the present Article in s38(2) of the Medical Practitioners Act, 1978, where ‘The council may, from time to time specify, in relation to each speciality recognised by it, the titles and designations of qualifications in specialised medicine granted in the State’ is translated as ‘Féadfaidh an Chomhairle a shonrú, ó am go ham, i ndáil le gach speisialtacht dá dtugann sí aitheantas, teidil agus ainmiúcháin na gcáilíochtaí sa sainleigheas a dheonaítear sa Stát’. ‘Gairm’, on the other hand, is sometimes used in the Acts to translate ‘profession’ – see, for example, s21 of the Finance Act, 1990, where ‘for the purposes of a trade or profession’ is translated as ‘chun críocha trádála nó gairme’. ‘Occupational Pension Schemes’ is translated as ‘scéimeanna pinsean gairme’ in the Finance Act, 1972, for example.

Looking at early Acts, ‘in relation to the respective titles of the Chief Justice and of each of the other judges’ is translated as ‘bhaineann le teidil fé seach an Phrímh-Bhreithimh agus gach breithimh fé leith de sna breithiúin eile’ in s4(2) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1936, with ‘changes in the styles and titles of the Ministers and Departments of State affected by such redistribution’ being translated as ‘atharuithe do dhéanamh ar theidil na nAirí agus na Ranna Stáit le n-a mbainfidh an ath-roinnt sin’ in s4(2) of the Ministers and Secretaries (Amendment) Act, 1928. See the following subsection regarding ‘titles of honour’.

a bhronnadh Ó Dónaill translates ‘bronn’ as ‘grant, bestow’, translating ‘rud a bhronnadh ar dhuine’ as ‘to bestow something on someone’ and citing ‘bronnadh céim air, a degree was conferred on him’. The original sense of ‘bronnadh’ seems to have been ‘spends, consumes’, and the sense ‘give, bestow’ is thought to have been an extended application of the secondary sense of ‘bronnadh’, ‘injures, damages’ – see the commentary on Article 13.11. As we have seen (see the commentary on Article 12.1), ‘confer’ is usually translated as ‘tabhair do’ in the Acts. One cannot include the preposition which usually accompanies both ‘bronn’ and ‘tabhair’ – ‘ar’ and ‘do’ respectively – without adding ‘aon duine’, as the drafters of the Irish version of Article 40.2.1<sup>o</sup> did. Either verb rests uneasy at the end of the subsection without an accompanying indirect object.

Ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3<sup>o</sup>.

Direct translation

Ní dhéanfaidh an Stát teidil<sup>1</sup> uaisleachta a thabhairt<sup>2, 3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘gairmeacha’
- 2 ‘a bhronnadh’
- 3 ‘Ní dhéanfar teidil uaisleachta a thabhairt ag an Stát.’

ARTICLE 40.2.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 40.2.2<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní cead d’aon saoránach gairm uaisleachta ná gairm onóra a ghlacadh ach le haontú roimh ré ón Rialtas.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

No citizen is permitted to accept a title of nobility nor a title of honour except with the assent beforehand of the Government.

ENGLISH TEXT

No title of nobility or of honour may be accepted by any citizen except with the prior approval of the Government.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘Approval’ is expressed as ‘aontú’, which is translated as ‘assent’ in Téarmaí Dlí, though ‘aontú’ also has the sense of ‘approval’ in current Irish usage.
- 2 ‘Accept’ is expressed as ‘a ghlacadh’, translated as ‘receive’ in Téarmaí Dlí, where ‘accept’ is translated as ‘glac le’; in general usage ‘glac’ renders both ‘receive’ and ‘accept’.
- 3 ‘Ní cead’ differs in tone from ‘No ... may’.

Note that Article 5 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

No title of honour in respect of any services rendered in or in relation to the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) may be conferred on any citizen of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) except with the approval or upon the advice of the Executive Council of the State. Ní bronnfáir ar aon tsaoránach de Shaorstát Éireann aon teideal onóra i dtaobh aon tseirbhísí do thabhairt uaidh i Saorstát Éireann no ina thaobh ach le cead no ar mhola Ard-Chomhairle an Stáit.

Commentary

a ghlacadh ‘Glacaim’ is translated as ‘I admit (as evidence)’; ‘I receive’, in Téarmaí Dlí, where ‘glacaim maoin ghoidte’ is translated as ‘I receive stolen property’, with ‘glacaim le’ being translated as ‘I accept’. ‘Glac’ is translated as ‘take, accept’ in Ó Dónaill, where ‘bronnantas, síntiús, breab, a ghlacadh’ is translated as ‘to accept a present, a subscription, a bribe’. ‘Glacaim’ is translated as ‘I grasp, take, receive, accept, seize, take hold of, catch (disease, etc.), conceive, undertake’ in Dinneen. The verb ‘glacaid’, which is not widely attested before late Middle and early Modern Irish, is translated as (a) ‘seizes, lays hold of, takes, hires, touches’, (b) ‘receives, accepts, adopts’ and (c) ‘forms, conceives (a feeling)’ in DIL. It is based on ‘glac(c)’, ‘the fist half-opened; a hand’ (DIL). See the commentary on Article 8.2 regarding ‘glac le’.

‘May ... draw accept and endorse Bills of Exchange or other negotiable instruments’ is translated as ‘féadfid Billí Malairte nó instruimidí ionmhalartuithe eile do tarang, do ghlaca agus do chur fé chúl-scriobh’ in s17 of the Sligo Lighting and Electric Power Act, 1924. In s4(1)(f) of the National Archives Act, 1986, ‘in relation to such purchase, donation, bequest or loan as may be accepted by the Director’ is translated as ‘a bhaineann le ceannach, bronntanas, tiomnacht nó iasacht den sórt sin lena nglacfaidh an Stiúrthóir’.

gairm onóra ‘Onóir’ is translated as ‘honour’ in Ó Dónaill, and as ‘honour; pride, haughtiness; reverence, respect; thrift’ in Dinneen. It is an early Middle Irish loanword from Latin ‘honorem’ and is translated as ‘honour, respect, dignity' in DIL. We have an example of its use as a term of address in Ó Cianáin's Flight of the Earls: 'adeir bhar n-onoir-si na briathra sin'.

'Nothing in this Act shall affect the succession to any dignity or title of honour' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfaidh éinní san Acht so deifir don chomharbas in aon dighnit no teideal onóra' in s10(1) of the Legitimacy Act, 1931. In s8(1) of the Broadcasting Act, 1990, 'which constituted an attack on that person's honour or reputation' is translated as 'ar ionsaí a bhí iontu ar onóir nó dea-chlú an duine sin'.

le haontú 'Aontú' is translated as 'assent' in Téarmaí Dlí and as 'assent, agreement' in Ó Dónaill. 'Aontughadh' is translated as 'act of assenting; consent, agreement' in Dinneen. 'Oentugad' is translated as (a) 'uniting (with), joining, adhering to', (b) 'conceding, granting', (c) 'consenting, agreeing' in DIL – see the commentary on Article 28.3.1° where this noun expresses 'assent'.

Regarding 'approval', see the commentary on Article 13.1.2° where 'le comhaontú ... roimh ré' expresses 'with the previous approval'. Note that in Article 70 of the Treaty establishing the European Coal and Steel Community, 'the application of special internal rates ... shall require the prior agreement of the High Authority' is translated as 'Chun rátaí ... inmheánacha speisialta a fheidhmiú ... ní foláir aontú a fháil roimh ré ón Ard-Údarás. 'Formheas' is the term given in Téarmaí Dlí for 'approval', with 'I approve' being translated as 'formheasaim'. See the commentary on Articles 13.1.2° and 13.7.3° (where 'a bheith sásta roimh sé' expresses 'have received the approval') and note how 'ceadú' regularly translates 'approval' in the Acts cited in that commentary. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'formheas' would not have the appropriate sense in the direct translation below.

ach 'Except' is sometimes translated as 'ach amháin' in the Acts – see, for example, s4(a) of the Schedule to the Holidays (Employees) Act, 1973, where 'the 8th day of December, except when falling on a Sunday' is translated as 'an 8ú lá de Nollaig, ach amháin nuair is Domhnach é'.

Direct translation

Ní fhéadfaidh aon saoránach glacadh le teideal<sup>1</sup> uaisleachta nó onóra ach amháin le ceadú<sup>2</sup> roimh ré ón Rialtas<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'gairm'
- 2 'formheas'
- 3 'le ceadú an Rialtais roimh ré', 'le réamhcheadú an Rialtais'

ARTICLE 40.3.1° AIRTEAGAL 40.3.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ráthaíonn an Stát gan cur isteach lena dhlíthe ar chearta pearsanta aon saoránaigh, agus ráthaíonn fós na cearta sin a chosaint is a shuíomh lena dhlíthe sa mhéid gur feidir é.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State guarantees not to interfere by its laws with the personal rights of any citizen, and it further guarantees to defend and assert those rights with its laws in so far as it is possible.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State guarantees in its laws to respect, and, as far as practicable, by its laws to defend and vindicate the personal rights of the citizen.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'To respect' is expressed as 'gan cur isteach ar' ('not to interfere with') in the Irish text.
- 2 'The State guarantees in its laws to respect ...' is expressed as 'Ráthaíonn an Stát gan cur isteach lena dhlíthe ar' ('The State guarantees not to interfere by its laws, with ...') in the Irish text, the same preposition as required by Irish usage preceding 'dlíthe', 'laws', as that found expressing 'by its laws' further on in the subsection.
- 3 'As far as practicable' is expressed as 'sa mhéid gur féidir é' ('in so far as it is possible') in the Irish text.
- 4 'The citizen' is expressed as 'aon saoránach' ('any citizen') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Vindicate' is expressed as 'suíomh' ('establish') in the Irish text.
- 6 The Irish text repeats the verb 'ráthaíonn', 'guarantees', having 'ráthaíonn fós na cearta sin' ('it guarantees further ... those rights') in addition to the English text.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 208, reports as follows on reference made to this Article in the courts:

In McGee v Attorney General ([1974] IR 284) Griffin J pointed out that the Irish version: "Ráthaíonn an Stát gan cur isteach lena dhlíthe ar cheartaibh pearsanta aon tsaoaránaigh" was a guarantee not to interfere with citizens' personal rights (thus adding depth to the guarantee to "respect" them in the English version). In the same case Walsh J used the Irish "féidir" so as to treat the English "practicable" as amounting to "possible". In Pine Valley Developments Ltd. v Minister for Environment ([1987] IR 23) Henchy J referred to the Irish version of Article 40.3.2 ("chomh fada lena chumas" = "as best it may") in order to stress that the State's duty to respect and vindicate the citizens' constitutional rights was not an unqualified one.

Commentary

cur isteach 'Cuirim isteach ar' is translated as 'I molest' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'cur isteach ar dhuine' being translated as 'to interfere with, to inconvenience, someone; to interrupt someone' in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Article 15.10.

As regards 'respect', in the Joint Declaration of 15 December 1993, 'and must respect the civil rights and religious liberties of both communities' is translated as 'agus go gcaithfear urraim a thabhairt ann do chearta sibhialta agus do shaoirsí creidimh an dá phobal', with 'to create structures which, while respecting the diversity of the people of Ireland, would enable them to work together' being translated as 'struchtúir a chruthú a dhéanfaidh, agus urraim á tabhairt acu d'ilghnéitheacht mhuintir na hÉireann, iad a chumasú chun oibriú as lámha a chéile'. In s4.14 of the New Ireland Forum Report, 'which fully respects both traditions' is translated as 'ina seastar leis an dá thraidisiún'.

In the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97 (p. 13), 'and respects the individual preferences of employees' is translated as 'agus a thabharfaidh aird an rogha aonair fostaithe'. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 701), 'When taking up their duties, they shall give a solemn undertaking that ... they will respect the obligations arising therefrom' is translated as 'Nuair a rachaidh siad i mbun a ndualgas, tabharfaidh siad gealltanas sollúnta go n-urramóidh siad ... na hoibleagáidí a bheidh orthu de bharr na hoifige sin'. We also find 'each Member State undertakes to respect this principle' translated as 'gabhann gach Ballstát air féin urraim a thabhairt don phrionsabal seo' (p. 755). In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 60), 'respecting human rights' is translated as 'cearta an duine a urramú', with 'to respect this principle' being translated as 'an prionsabal sin a urramú' (p. 31). See the commentary on Articles 42.1 and 44.1 for citations from the Acts.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú questions whether the term 'urraim' is what is involved here. He remarks that 'respect' has as part of its range of meaning 'avoid harming or interfering with', citing 'to respect the environment', for example. This was the interpretation of the Irish drafters and Máirtín Ó Murchú agrees with that interpretation, noting that 'urraim' need not have any practical benefit.

sa mhéid gur féidir é This phrase expresses 'so far as practicable' in Article 16.2.3° also. 'Sa mhéid go' is translated as 'inasmuch, in so far, as' in Ó Dónaill. DIL cites examples from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards of 'méit' as a relative adverb introducing a subordinate clause in the sense of 'as much as, as far as, to the extent that' – see, for example, 'meit atan echtrainn' ('and as far as they are foreigners'), glossing Latin 'quanto externi sunt', in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, and 'meit as sochmacht' ('as much as it well can') from the ninth-century Carlsruhe Glosses on S. Augustine's Soliloquia. 'Is féidir (é)' is translated as 'it is possible' in Ó Dónaill. DIL cites examples of 'étir'/'éter' ('able; possible, feasible') from Leabhar na hUidhre (completed by 1106), but most examples are from a later period, with no citations from the Glosses, for example. 'Séitir', translated as 'vigour, energy; competency (?)' in DIL, and connected with 'séitrech' ('strong, powerful'), has been taken to be the earlier form of 'étir' (later with prothetic f).

Turning to the Acts, in s46(a) of the Finance Act, 1990, 'unless the company proves that it has, as far as possible, ... advanced to borrowers relevant principal' is translated as 'mura gruthóidh an chuideachta go ndearna sí, a mhéid ab fhéidir é, ... príomhshuim iomchuí a airleacan, d'iasachtaithe'. In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 156), 'The ECB shall respect as far as possible existing practices' is translated as 'Urramóidh BCE a mhéad is féidir cleachtais atá ann cheana'. 'Oiread agus is féidir' translates 'as far as possible' in Treaties establishing the European Communities.

Turning specifically to 'practicable', 'Tax deduction cards shall be prepared, with a view to securing that, so far as may be practicable ...', in s127(3)(a) of the Income Tax Act, 1967, is translated as 'Ullmhófar cártaí asbhainte cánach chun a áirithiú, an oiread agus is inoibrithe sin ...'. In the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97 (p. 25) 'as far as practicable' is translated as 'a mhéid is indéanta'. In s8(2) of the Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1972, 'as soon as practicable he shall cause notice of that fact to be published' is translated as 'cuirfidh sé faoi deara a luaithe is féidir fógra ina thaobh sin a fhoilsiú'. See further the commentary on Article 16.2.3°.

a shuíomh In Articles 12.3.1°, 12.10.7° and 14.1 'go suítear' expresses 'is established', and in Article 12.3.3° 'arna suíomh' expresses 'established'. 'Suím cúis' is translated as 'I show cause' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'cúis, ceart, a shuí' as 'to establish a case, a right', 'suíomh' being given as a variant verbal noun of 'suigh' by Ó Dónaill. Dinneen translates 'suidhighim' as 'I set, plant, arrange, dispose; prove, certify, establish, station (as guards)'. DIL cites examples of 'suidigidir', in the sense of 'establishes, founds, sets up, institutes', as well as 'fixes, assesses, imposes (of laws, fines, etc.)', from the eighth-century Glosses onwards.

Following this Article, in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann of 15 December, 1994, we find, in the terms of reference of a sub-Committee of the Select Committee on Legislation and Security, 'to the extent that the sub-Committee is of the opinion that such cross-examination is necessary to defend and vindicate the Constitutional rights of such witnesses' is translated as 'a mhéid a bheidh an Fochoiste den tuairim gur gá croscheistiú den sórt sin chun cearta bunreachtúla finnétithe den sórt sin a chosaint agus a shuíomh'.

Chambers English Dictionary (7th. ed., 1988) has the following entry s.v. 'vindicate':

to justify; to clear from criticism, etc.; to defend with success; to make good a claim to; to lay claim to; to maintain; to avenge (obsolete); to free (obsolete).

According to the Oxford Shorter English Dictionary this verb comes from Latin 'vindicat-, vindicare', 'to claim, set free, punish', from 'vim', acc. sing. of 'vis', 'force' and 'dic-, dicere', 'to say'. Daniel Foley's English Irish Dictionary (1855) translates 'vindicate' as 'ceartuigh, congbaigh, saoradh', translating 'vindication' as 'cosnamh, ceartughadh, díolgasuigh'. T. O'Neill Lane's English-Irish Dictionary (2nd. ed.) translates 'vindicate' as (1) 'to defend with success, cosnaim, -namh' and (2) 'to clear of a charge, glanaim ó choir', translating 'vindication' ('the act of defending with success') as 'cosnamh'. 'I vindicate' is translated as 'cosnaim, dearbhaim, seasaim ceart do' in Téarmaí Oifigiúla, followed by the abbreviation for 'Leabhráin Choiste na dTéarmaí', the terms published by the Department of Education. In one such booklet of terms, the 1934 edition of Téarmaí Staire, we find 'I vindicate' translated as 'cosnaim, dearbhughim, seasaim ceart do'. L. Mc Cionnaith s.v. 'vindicate', refers the reader to 'defend', the literal translation of which is the first term given in Téarmaí Oifigiúla above. The second term, 'dearbham', is translated as 'I declare' in Téarmaí Dlí. As regards the third term, note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'to vindicate one's rights' as 'do chearta a sheasamh' and also cites 'seasaim ceart do (dhuine)' s.v. 'vindicate'. Ó Dónaill translates 'an ceart a sheasamh do dhuine' as 'to see justice done to someone' and 'níor sheas tú ceart dom' as 'you did not stand up for me', translating 'do cheart a sheasamh' as 'to stand up for one's rights' s.v. 'seas'. Dinneen translates 'seasuighim mo cheart' as 'I maintain my right' and 'níl seasamh a chirt ann' as 'he cannot uphold his rights'.

Note that we have 'vindicate' in the following subsection, here with more than 'rights' involved: 'vindicate the life, person, good name, and property rights of every citizen'. Perhaps neither of the opposites 'seas' or 'suí' alone are suitable here; 'seas do', however, has the sense of 'stand up for' and this might be more appropriate – see Ó Dónaill who cites 'sheas siad go dílis dá dtír, they stood loyally by their country' and 'sheas sé suas dom, he stood up for me'.

Rathaíonn 'Rathaim' is translated as 'I guarantee' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'ráthaíocht' translated as 'guarantee'. Ó Dónaill translates 'ráthaigh' simply as 'guarantee', whereas Dinneen translates 'ráthuighim' as 'I guarantee, assure'. See the commentary on Article 22.1.1°. Note that in the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 9), 'the Union shall respect fundamental rights as guaranteed by the European Convention' is translated as 'urramóidh an tAontas ... na cearta bunúsacha mar atá siad áirithithe ag an gCoinbhinsiún Eorpach'.

a chosaint 'Cosnaim' is translated as 'I defend' in Téarmaí Dlí, with the noun 'cosaint' translated as 'defence'. Ó Dónaill translates 'cosain' as 'defend, protect (ar, ó, against)', citing 'duine a chosaint ar rud, to defend someone against something', 'an tír a chosaint, to defend the country' and 'do chlú a chosaint, to defend one's reputation'. Dinneen translates 'cosnaim' as 'I defend, protect from (ar); champion, seek to gain or hold, maintain'. The simple verb 'cosnaid' is a later form of the compound 'con-sní', 'contends; contests, strives for, wins, gains', later also 'defends, costs' (DIL). See the commentary on Article 24.1 (where this verb expresses 'preserve') and 28.3.2° (where 'cosain' expresses 'protect').

fós This headword is translated as 'yet, still' in Ó Dónaill, with the secondary sense of 'again, in addition, moreover, furthermore', citing 'deir sé fós (go), he states further (that)'. Dinneen translates 'fós' as 'also, too, moreover, yet, as yet, still, further, besides'. DIL gives examples of 'fós' in the sense of 'still (more, longer), further, also, in addition; likewise'. See the commentary on Article 15.3.2° and 29.2.

Direct translation

Ráthaíonn an Stát ina dhlíthe urraim a thabhairt do chearta pearsanta an tsaoirnáigh' agus iad a chosaint agus seasamh dóibh lena dhlíthe a mhéid is féidir<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'cearta pearsanta an tsaoirnáigh a urramú', 'gan cur isteach ar chearta pearsanta an tsaoirnáigh ina dhlíthe'
- 2 'agus, a mhéid is féidir, iad a chosaint agus a sheasamh lena dhlíthe'

ARTICLE 40.3.2° AIRTEAGAL 40.3.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Déanfaidh an Stát, go sonrach, lena dhlíthe, beatha agus pearsa agus dea-chlú agus maoinchearta an uile shaoránaigh a chosaint ar ionsaí éagórach chomh fada lena chumas, agus iad a shuíomh i gcás éagóra.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State will, in particular, by its laws, protect the life and person and good reputation and property rights of every citizen from unjust attack to the extent of its power, and assert them in a case of injustice.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall, in particular, by its laws protect as best it may from unjust attack and, in the case of injustice done, vindicate the life, person, good name, and property rights of every citizen.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The text corresponding to 'and, in the case of injustice done, vindicate', in the middle of the English subsection, is found at the end of the Irish subsection, where this text is expressed as 'agus iad a shuíomh i gcás éagóra' ('and vindicate them in [a] case of injustice'), with 'beatha agus pearsa agus dea-chlú agus maoinchearta an uile shaoránaigh' ('the life and person and good name and property rights of every citizen') preceding this clause in the Irish text and being referred to as 'iad' ('them') in 'agus iad a shuíomh' ('and vindicate them').
- 2 As in the previous subsection, 'vindicate' is expressed as 'a shuíomh' ('assert') in the Irish text.
- 3 'As best it may' is expressed as 'chomh fada lena chumas' ('to the extent of its power') in the Irish text.
- 4 'In particular' is expressed as 'go sonrach' ('specifically') in the Irish text, 'in particular' generally being rendered as 'go háirithe' in Irish.

Commentary

éagórach ... éagóra 'Éagóir' is translated as 'wrong', with 'éagórach' translated as 'wrongful', in Téarmaí Dlí, citing 'wrongful dismissal, dífhostú éagórach'. Ó Dónaill translates 'éagóir' as 'injustice, wrong; unfairness, inequity', citing 'éagóir a dhéanamh ar dhuine, to do an injustice to someone, to wrong someone'. 'Éagórach' is translated in Ó Dónaill as 'unjust, inequitable; wrong'. Dinneen translates 'éagóir' as 'a crime; wrong, injustice, iniquity, unrighteousness, a foul (in athletics, etc.)', translating 'éagórach' as 'unjust, wrong-doing, oppressive; strange, unusual, wrong, awry'. The adjective 'éccóir', the negative of 'cóir', is translated as 'incongruous, wrong, inaccurate, improper, unjust, unfitting' in DIL, while the noun 'éccóir' is translated as 'wrong, impropriety, injustice', examples of both adjective and noun being cited from the Old Irish Glosses onwards. Only two late examples of the adjective 'éccóir' are cited in DIL, one of which comes from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death.

Turning to the Acts, in s3(1) of the Civil Liability Act, 1941, "wrong" means a tort, breach of contract or breach of trust', is translated as 'ciallaíonn "éagóir" tort, sárú cúnaint nó sárú iontaobhais' and "wrongdoer" means a person who commits or is otherwise responsible for a wrong' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "éagóiritheoir" duine a rinne éagóir nó atá freagrach ar shlí eile in éagóir'. In Article 11 of the First Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1973, 'an act of interference, seizure, or other wrongful exercise of control of an aircraft in flight' is translated as 'gníomh toirmisc, urghabhála nó feidhmiú éagórach ar urlámhas aerárthaigh agus i ar eitilt'. 'Éagóir' is also used in translating 'aggrieved' – see for example, s7(2) of the Third Schedule to the Fisheries (Consolidation Act), 1959, where 'Any person who is aggrieved by any disallowance' is translated as 'Aon duine arb éagóir leis aon dícheadú'.

'Éagcóir' translates 'injustice' in early Acts. 'Unless it appears that injustice has been done to the person charged by reason of such contravention' is translated as 'maran rud é go ndeabhróidh sé gur dineadh éagcóir ar an duine cúisithe de dheascaibh na buniscionntachta san' in s68 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, with 'unless the required amendments cannot in the opinion of the court be made without injustice' being translated as 'maran rud é nách féidir, dar leis an gcúirt, na leasuithe riachtanacha do dhéanamh gan éagcóir do dhéanamh' in s6(1) of the Criminal Justice (Administration) Act, 1924. We sometimes find 'éagóir' translating 'injustice' in modern Acts also – 'provided such error or mistake may be rectified without injustice to any person' is translated as 'ar choinníoll go bhféadfar an earráid nó an dearmad sin a cheartú gan éagóir a dhéanamh ar aon duine' in s18(5)(a) of the Derelict Sites Act, 1990, with 'that the applicant is likely to suffer injustice if the direction is not given' being translated as 'gur dóigh go ndéanfar éagóir ar an iarratasóir mura dtabharfar an t-ordachán' in s7(5)(b) of the Criminal Law (Rape) Act, 1981.

We also find 'éigeartas' translating 'injustice'. In s23(2) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, 'for the purpose of preventing inequalities or preventing injustice' is translated as 'chun éagothromais a chosc nó chun éigeartas a chosc'. 'Éigeartas' is translated as 'injustice' in Ó Dónaill, preceded by the abbreviation for 'Philosophy'. The adjective 'éigeart' is translated as 'wrong, incorrect, unjust' in Ó Dónaill, 'éigceart' being translated simply as 'unjust' in Dinneen. 'Unjust' is translated as 'éigeart' in Téarmaí Oifigiúla, citing Seathrún Céitinn. DIL gives two citations from the works of Keating s.v. 'éccert' ('wrong, unjust'), one from his History of Ireland ('ré linn breitheamhnais éigceirt do dhéanamh') and the other from his Three Shafts of Death: 'don duine éigceart' = 'homini iniusto'. DIL gives one earlier and one later citation (the earlier from Togail na Tebe [The Thebaid of Statius]) and also cites 'éccertach' ('unjust') in the names 'Egcertach mac Anchertaigh' and 'Maol Dúin Ua hEiccertaigh'. DIL translates the noun 'éccert' as 'wrong, injustice', giving a citation from an early Irish law-tract. Etymologically, 'éigeart' renders 'wrong' and 'éagóir' renders 'unjust', but as we have seen, 'éagórach' translates 'wrongful' in Téarmaí Dlí.

L. Mc Cionnaith translates 'unjust person, deed' as 'duine, gníomh, éagórach', cited in Connacht, Ulster and Munster, but also gives 'duine, gníomh éigceart', referring to Dinneen. 'Unjust towards him, bringing an unjust charge against him' is translated as 'tá tú san éagcóir air', again with reference to Munster (which also has 'chuíge', as well as 'air', in the phrase just cited), Ulster and Connacht. L. Mc Cionnaith s.v. 'injustice', translates 'treated with injustice' as 'tá an tír fá aincheart', cited from Munster, while 'injustice' is rendered as 'aindhligheadh' in Connacht and Ulster, 'éagcóir do dhéanamh orthu' being found in the three dialects, rendering 'inflict injustice on', with 'éagcóir d'imirt ortha' also being cited from Munster. De Bhaldraithe translates 'unjust' as 'éagórach, aincheart, leatromach' and 'unjustly' as 'go héagórach', translating 'he was treated unjustly' as 'rinneadh éagóir air'. 'Injustice' is translated as 'éigeart, leatrom, éagóir' with 'you do him an injustice' translated as 'tá tú san éagóir dó, ag déanamh éagóra air'. See further the commentary on Article 45.3.2° where 'éagórach' again expresses 'unjust'.

i gcás éagóra As regards 'done' not specifically being expressed in the Irish, see, for example, s1(4) of the Prohibition of Forcible Entry and Occupation Act, 1971, where 'Nothing in this Act shall affect the law relating to acts done in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfaidh aon ní san Acht seo difear don dlí a bhaineann le gníomhartha d'intinn nó de chabhair le díospóid trádála a chur ar aghaidh'. Note that in Téarmaí Dlí s.v. 'done', 'work done and services rendered' is translated as 'obair agus seirbhísí a rinneadh'. In s54(17)(a) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'Where ... a person by trespass, fishing or otherwise interferes with anything done pursuant to an aquaculture licence' is translated as 'I gcás ... a ndéanfaidh duine trí fhoghail, iascaireacht nó eile, cur isteach ar ní a bheidh déanta de bhun ceadúnais do bharshaothraithe'. In Article 53 of the First Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, 'Done at Vienna, this eighteenth day of April one thousand nine hundred and sixty-one', in relation to the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations, is translated as 'Arna dhéanamh i Vín an t-ochtú lá déag seo d'Aibreán míle naoi gcéad seasca is a haon'.

Finally, as regards 'i gcás', in s15 of the Finance Act, 1990, for example, 'In the case of the death of a person who ... would ... have become chargeable to income tax' is translated as 'I gcás duine d'fháil bháis a thioctadh ... chun bheith inmhuirir i leith cánach ioncaim'.

go sonrach 'Go sonrach' expresses 'in particular' in Articles 41.2.1° and 45.2 also. This phrase expresses 'especially' in Article 45.2.iii and 'cosaint sonrach' expresses 'special care' in Article 45.4.1°. On the other hand, in Article 27.3, 'the particular ground or grounds' is expressed as '(ar) an ábhar nó ar na hábhair áirithe'; in Article 28.4.3° 'a particular matter' is expressed as 'ní áirithe'; in Article 40.4.4°, 'any particular case' is expressed as 'aon chás áirithe' and in Article 42.3.1° 'any particular type of school' is expressed as 'aon chineál áirithe scoile'.

'Bronntanas sonrach' and 'leagáid shonrach' are translated respectively as 'specific gift' and 'specific legacy' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'sonrach' as 'particular, specific', translating 'go sonrach' as 'particularly, notably'. Dinneen translates 'sonrach' as 'special, particular, etc.', referring the reader to 'sonnradhach', translated as 'special, specific, particular', with 'go sonnradhach' translated as 'to come to details, also chiefly, very'. DIL cites examples of 'sainredach', in the senses of 'peculiar or belonging to (an individual), characteristic of; particular, special, set apart', along with 'specific, definite', from the Old Irish Glosses onwards, citing an example of 'co sunradach' from a commentary on an early Irish law-tract, and translating a citation of 'go sunradach' as 'especially'. 'Sainredach' is based on 'sainred' ('peculiar property or characteristic, distinguishing an individual from others), which in turn is based on 'sain' ('different, distinct, separate'). See further the commentary on Article 42.5.

Turning to the Acts, in s5(2) of the Industrial Development Authority Act, 1950, 'which would involve the divulging of secret manufacturing processes or recipes or of methods peculiar to the particular undertaking of such witness' is translated as 'a bhéarfadh go scaoilfí eolas ar aon phróiseanna nó sain-oidis rúnda déantóireachta nó ar aon mhodhanna a bhaineas go sonrach le gnóthas áirithe an fhinné sin'. In general 'go sonrach' translates 'specifically' in the Acts – see, for example, 'save or otherwise specifically provided for', in s1(4) of the Health Act, 1970, which is translated as 'Ach amháin mar a bhforáiltear go sonrach dá mhalairt'. 'In particular', on the other hand, is generally translated as 'go háirithe' – see, for example, s3(1) of the Sea Pollution Act, 1991, where '(fauna) includes in particular wild birds' is translated as 'folaíonn sé go háirithe éin fhiáine' and s8(2)(a) of the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975, where 'this paragraph applies in particular to' is translated as 'baineann an mhír seo go háirithe (le)'. See the commentary on Article 42.5 for early translations.

dea-chlú Ó Dónaill translates 'dea-chlú' as 'good reputation; good name, honour', citing 'is mór ag duine a dheachlú, one's good name is to be cherished'. Dinneen translates 'deagh-chlú' as 'good repute'. DIL gives citations of 'deg-clú' ('a good reputation, good fame') from an early Irish law-tract. 'Clú' is translated as 'reputation' in Téarmaí Dlí.

Following the text of the Constitution, in the Long Title of the Defamation Bill, 1995 (introduced in the Dáil on 14 February 1995), 'to provide in accordance with the common good protection for the good name of persons' is translated as 'do thabhairt cosanta de réir na maitheasa poiblí do dheachlú daoine'. In s8(1) of the Broadcasting Act, 1990, 'which constituted an attack on that person's honour or reputation' is translated as 'ar ionsaí a bhí iontu ar onóir nó deachlú an duine sin'.

Note that Ó Dónaill includes the headword 'dea-ainm', translated as 'good name', citing 'dea-ainm an duine, a person's good name'. Dinneen also has 'deagh-ainm' as a headword, which he translates as 'a good name'. DIL gives one citation of 'deg-ainm', from the Book of Ballymote, written around 1400.

a chosaint ar 'Cosnaim' is translated as 'I defend' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'cosaint' translated as 'defence'. 'Protected transaction' is translated therein as 'idirbheart tearmainn', with 'protection from process' translated as 'tearmann ó phróis'. Ó Dónaill translates 'cosain' as 'defend, protect (ar; ó, against)', citing 'duine a chosaint ar rud, to defend someone against something' and 'sinn a chosaint ó bhaol, ar olc, to protect us from harm, from evil'. Dinneen translates 'cosnaim' as 'I defend, protect from (ar)'. See the commentary on the foregoing subsection.

'Cosain' translates 'protects' in the Acts also – in s9(5)(g) of the Consumer Information Act, 1978, for example, 'legislation providing for the protection of consumers' is translated as '(ar) fhorálacha aon reachtaíochta a dhéanann socrú le tomhaltóirí a chosaint'. See, for example of 'cosain ó', the following from the Dáil Order Paper of 24/3/1977: 'Declaration on the Protection of all Persons from being Subjected to Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment', 'Dearbhú maidir le Cosaint gach uile Dhuine óna Chéasadh agus ó Íde nó Pionós eile a fháil atá Cruálach, Mídhaoanna nó Táirchéimeachí. See the commentary on Article 45.3.2° where 'cosain ar' expresses 'protect against'.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that there is the same difference between 'cosain ó' and 'cosain ar' as there is between English 'defend from' and 'defend against'.

maoinchearta 'Maoin' is translated as 'property' in Téarmaí Dlí, the compound 'maoincheart' (unlike, for example, the compound 'móincheart', which is translated as 'right of turbary, turbary') not being given. Neither Ó Dónaill nor Dinneen cite this headword (unlike, for example, 'maoinchiste', translated as 'treasury-chest' in Ó Dónaill and simply as 'treasury' in Dinneen). See the commentary on Article 10.1 regarding 'maoin'. 'Voting rights', 'human rights', 'conjugal rights', 'drawing rights' and 'fishing rights' are translated respectively as 'cearta vótála', 'cearta an duine', 'cearta an phósta', 'cearta tarraingthe' and 'cearta iascaireachta' in the Acts. Regarding 'property' in the early Acts, we find 'maoin' translating 'property' in Article 8 of the 1922 Constitution, this now being the Irish legal term for 'property'. While '(ar) an maoin eile is le A.G. Williamson anois' translates 'other property now owned by A.G. Williamson' in s93 of the Dundalk Harbour and Port Act, 1925, in ss1, 'and shall when erected vest in her and be her property' (of a boundary wall) is translated as 'agus ar bheith tógtha dho dilseoidh sé inti agus beidh sé dá cuid féin aici'. Note finally that 'the property in such tree shall vest in the person by whom such notice was served' is translated as 'dilseoidh únaereacht an chrainn sin sa té a sheirbheáil an fógra san' in s34(4)(e) of the Local Government Act, 1925.

chomh fada lena chumas Ó Dónaill s.v., 'cumas' ('capability; power'), translates 'de réir a chumais' as 'as far as he is able; according to his means' and s.v. 'fada', translates 'chomh fada leis sin de' and 'chomh fada is nach ndéanfaidh sé aon dochar dó' respectively as 'as far as that is concerned' and 'provided he does not harm it'. Dinneen translates 'chómh fada le' as 'as long as, as far as, to, as regards', translating 'cumas' as 'adjustment' control, requisite capability or power; ability; effort; disposition' and 'do réir a chumais' as 'all things considered in regard to him'. As regards 'cumas', earlier 'commus' ('power, ability, capacity'), see the commentary on Articles 14.2.2° and 31.2. DIL translates 'do réir ... chumais na háite' as 'according to the possibility of the place' s.v. 'commus'.

In s69(3)(d) of the Building Societies Act, 1976, 'in his opinion and to the best of his information' is translated as 'de réir a thuairime agus chomh fada agus is eol dó'. In s10(5)(a) of the First Schedule to the Corporation Tax Act of the same year, 'to the best of his judgement' is translated as 'go feadh a bhreithiúnais'. In s19 of the Mines and Quarries Act, 1965, 'to the best of his ability' is translated as 'go feadh a chumais' while in s20(4)(b) of the Finance Act, 1983, 'to the best of his knowledge, information and belief' is translated as 'de réir mar is fearr is eol agus is feasach dó agus mar a chreideann sé'. Turning to the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97 (p. 43), 'to the maximum possible extent consistent with the needs of the service they must provide' is translated as 'chomh fada agus is féidir gan dochar do riachtanais na seirbhíse a chaithfidh siad a chur ar fáil', with 'the elimination as far as possible of social disadvantage' being translated as 'deireadh a chur chomh fada agus is féidir le míbhuntáiste sóisialta' (p. 2).

ionsaí This headword is translated as 'assault' in Téarmaí Dlí and principally as 'advance, approach, attack' in Ó Dónaill. 'Ionnsaighe' is translated as 'approach, assault, attack, invasion, enterprise' in Dinneen. 'Índsaigid', verbal noun of 'ind-saig' ('approaches, goes to; reaches, advances [upon], attacks'), is translated principally as 'act of approaching, attacking; an attack' in DIL.

Turning to the Acts, following Téarmaí Dlí, we find 'aggravated sexual assault' translated as 'tromionsaí gnéasach' in the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, 1957. In s8(1) of the Broadcasting Act, 1990, 'which constituted an attack on that person's honour or good reputation' is translated as 'ar ionsaí a bhí iontu ar onóir nó dea-chlú an duine sin'. See further the commentary on Article 41.3.1°. De Bhaldraithe translates 'attack' as 'ionsaí, fogha', translating 'to attack someone's rights' as 'cur isteach ar cheart duine'.

pearsa 'Caomhnóir ar an bpearsa' and 'foghail ar an bpearsa' are translated respectively as 'guardian of the person' and 'trespass to the person' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Articles 40.1 and 45.2.ii. Turning to the Acts, in Article 29 of the First Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, for example, 'The person of a diplomatic agent shall be inviolable' is translated as 'Beidh pearsa gníomhaire taidhleoireachta dosháraithe'.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an Stát, go háirithe, lena dhlíthe, beatha, pearsa, dea-ainm<sup>1</sup>, agus cearta maoine gach saoránaigh a chosaint chomh fada agus is féidir leis ar<sup>2</sup> ionsaí éigeart<sup>3</sup> agus seasfaidh sé dóibh i gcás éigeartais<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'dea-chlú'
- 2 'ó'
- 3 'éagórach'
- 4 'éagóra', 'i gcás éigeartas/éagóir a dhéanamh orthu'

ARTICLE 40.3.3° AIRTEAGAL 40.3.3°

TÉACS GAELGE

Admhaíonn an Stát ceart na mbeo gan breith chun a mbeatha agus, ag féachaint go cuí do chomhcheart na máthar chun a beatha, ráthaíonn sé gan cur isteach lena dhlíthe ar an gceart sin agus ráthaíonn fós an ceart sin a chosaint is a shuíomh lena dhlíthe sa mhéid gur féidir é.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State acknowledges the right of the unborn to their life and, having due regard to the equal right of the mother to her life, it guarantees not to interfere through its laws with that right and it guarantees further to protect and assert that right with its laws in so far as it is possible.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State acknowledges the right to life of the unborn and, with due regard to the equal right to life of the mother, guarantees in its laws to respect, and, as far as practicable, by its laws to defend and vindicate that right.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 This subsection was added to the Constitution by the Eighth Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1983; being an Amendment of the Constitution, while this text would have been translated literally, it would adhere to the terminology already in the Constitution as far as possible. Much of the wording of this section is identical with that of Article 40.3.1°; therefore, as in 40.3.1°:
  - i) 'the State ... guarantees in its laws to respect' is rendered as 'ráthaíonn sé gan cur isteach lena dhlíthe' ('it guarantees not to interfere through its laws'),
  - ii) 'vindicate' is rendered as 'a shuíomh' ('assert'), and
  - iii) 'as far as practicable' is rendered as 'sa mhéid gur féidir é' ('in so far as it is possible').

The phrase 'féach go cuí' ('have due regard') is also found in Article 40.1.

Commentary

Admhaíonn 'Admhaím' is translated as 'I acknowledge, I confess' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'admhaigh' as (1) 'acknowledge' and (2) 'confess', dividing the examples of the first sense into (a) 'admit', citing 'd'admhaigh sé go raibh an ceart agam, he admitted that I was right' and 'admhaíonn an saol (go), everybody admits, agrees (that)', (b) 'own to be', citing 'bean nach n-admhódh a fear féin, a woman who would not acknowledge her own husband' and (c) 'acknowledge receipt of', citing 'níor admhaigh tú mo litir, you did not acknowledge my letter'. Dinneen translates 'admhuighim' as 'I confess, admit, acknowledge; I say, state, proclaim'. See further the commentary on the Preamble.

In the Joint Declaration of December 1993, 'the Taoiseach also acknowledges the presence in the Constitution of the Republic of elements which are deeply resented by Northern Unionists' is translated as 'admhaíonn an Taoiseach freisin go bhfuil gnéithe de Bhunreacht na Poblachta a nglacann Aontachtaithe an Tuaiscirt olc domhain leo' and 'when the genuine feelings of all traditions in the North must be recognised and acknowledged' is translated as 'nuair nach mór braistintí macánta na dtraidisiún go léir sa Tuaisceart a aithint agus a admháil'. In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 238) 'The Conference acknowledges that the outermost regions of the Community ... suffer from major structural backwardness' is translated as 'Aithníonn an Chomhdháil go bhfuil cúlmaireacht mhór struchtúrach ar na réigiúin is forimeallaí den Chomhphobal'. See the commentary on Article 42.1 for citations from the Acts.

ceart na mbeo gan breith chun a mbeatha 'Beo' is translated principally as 'living being', with the secondary sense of 'life', in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'an beo' as 'the living', citing 'ag guí ar son na mbeo agus na marbh, praying for the living and the dead'. Dinneen gives 'na beodha' as the plural form of 'beo', 'a living person; the living ...', citing 'ní nádúrtha an beo 'ná an marbh, life is not more natural than death' and 'guidhim ar bheodhaibh is ar mharbhaibh, I pray for the living and the dead'. We have an example of the genitive plural of 'beo' from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, 'inna nóib in dithhrub in beotho oc ascnam tíre tairngiri inna mbéo' ('[of] the saints in the desert of Life, journeying to the Land of Promise of the Living'). DIL also cites 'ragaid do beo no do marb' ('you shall go dead or alive'), from the version of the Táin in the twelfth-century manuscript, the Book of Leinster.

One would perhaps expect 'gan bhreith' here, as one finds in De Bhaldraithe s.v. 'unborn'; Ó Dónaill cites 'bheith gan chlann, to be without children, childless', as well as examples with verbal nouns, such as 'gan bhaint, unsown' and 'gan bhriseadh, unbroken'. 'Gan' does not lenite with a dependent clause or phrase – see, for example, 'Tá mé gan phingin, I am without a penny, penniless', but 'gan pingin ina phóca, without a penny in his pocket' (both cited in Ó Dónaill). Dinneen cites 'gan breith ar a anáil aige, he not being able to draw his breath'. By leaving 'breith' unlenited, one anticipates a following phrase, instead of the finality of 'gan bhreith'. We have an example of the phrase 'buih cenchlaind' ('to be without children') in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. 'Bean ... atá gan phósadh' translates 'a woman who is unmarried' in s8(1) of the Social Welfare Act, 1973, for example, 'unmarried mothers' being translated as 'máithreacha neamhphósta' in the heading.

'Beatha' is translated as (1) 'life', (2) 'living, livelihood', and (3) 'food, sustenance' in Ó Dónaill and 'life, existence; food; crops; harvest; means of livelihood; property, estate' in Dinneen. 'Ceilt bhreithe' is translated as 'concealment of birth' in Téarmaí Dlí.

comhcheart 'Comhcheart iascaigh' is translated as 'common of fishery' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'ceart iascaigh' translating 'fishery (i.e. right of)'. This compound of 'comh' and 'ceart' does not appear to be given as a headword either in Ó Dónaill or in Dinneen, but is given in DIL, where we find a citation of the adjective 'comchert' from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster, 'in comainm comchert', translated as 'the appropriate name' in Edward Gwynn's Metrical Dindshenchas, iv, p. 339.

As we have seen in the commentary on Articles 18.4.2° (where 'lion comhionann' expresses 'equal number') and 40.1 (where 'ionann' expresses 'equal'), 'comhionann' is often used in the Acts to translate 'equal' – in s7(1) of the Anti-Discrimination (Pay) Act, 1974, for example, 'equal pay clause' is translated as 'clásal pá chomhionann', with the heading of the section, 'Investigation by equal pay officers', translated as 'Imscrúdú ag oifigigh pá chomhionann'. 'In equal shares' is translated as 'i scaireanna comhionanna' in s5(2)(c) of the Wealth Tax Act, 1975. The heading of Part VII of the Pensions Act, 1990, 'Equal Treatment for Men and Women' is translated as 'Déileáil go Comhionann le Fir agus Mná'. 'Equal validity' is translated as 'seasamh comhionann' in the New Ireland

Forum Report (1984, 1.2). Finally, the 'Equal Pay Commission' is styled 'An Coimisiún um Pá Comhionann' in Irish.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that he finds no fault with 'comhcheart' here.

See the commentary on Article 40.3.1° regarding 'cur isteach ar', 'suíomh' and 'sa mhéid gur féidir é' and see the commentary on Article 40.1 regarding 'féach do'.

Direct translation

Admhaíonn an Stát ceart na mbeo gan bhreith chun a mbeatha agus, ag féachaint go cuí do<sup>1</sup> cheart comhionann<sup>2</sup> na máthar chun a beatha, ráthaíonn sé ina dhlíthe an ceart sin a urramú, agus, a mhéid is féidir, é a chosaint agus seasamh dó<sup>3</sup> lena dhlíthe.

Variants

- 1 'le háird chuí ar'
- 2 'do chomhcheart'
- 3 'agus a shuíomh'

ARTICLE 40.3.3° (cont'd)

AIRTEAGAL 40.3.3° (ar lean.)

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní theorannóidh an fo-alt seo saoirse chun taisteal idir an Stát agus stát eile.

Ní theorannóidh an fo-alt seo saoirse chun faisnéis a fháil nó a chur ar fáil sa Stát maidir le seirbhísí atá ar fáil go dleathach i stát eile ach sin faoi chuimsiú cibé coinníollacha a fhéadfar a leagan síos le dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

This subsection will not limit freedom to travel between the State and another state.

This subsection will not limit freedom to get information or to make information available in the State as regards services which are lawfully available in another state but that (is) within the scope/constraint of whatever conditions that may be laid down by law.

ENGLISH TEXT

This subsection shall not limit freedom to travel between the State and another state.

This subsection shall not limit freedom to obtain or make available, in the State, subject to such conditions as may be laid down by law, information relating to services lawfully available in another state.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The above text was added to the Constitution by the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Amendments of the Constitution, 1992, the Irish text being a very literal translation of the English text. However, 'subject to' is rendered as 'ach sin faoi chuimsiú', literally 'but that within the constraint/scope of', 'subject to' being expressed as ‘faoi chuimsiú’ generally in the Constitution, rather than as ‘faoi réir’, as this phrase is translated in Téarmaí Dlí.

Commentary

ach sin faoi chuimsiú This phrase, having the literal sense of ‘but that within the constraint of’, renders ‘subject to’. ‘Ach sin’ here would have been based on both Articles 44.2.1°, where ‘subject to public order and morality’ is expressed as ‘ach gan san a dhul chun dochair don ord phoiblí ná don mhoráltacht phoiblí’, and 40.6.1°, where ‘The State guarantees liberty for the exercise of the following rights, subject to public order and morality’ is expressed as ‘Ráthaíonn an Stát saoirse chun na cearta seo a leanas a oibriú ach sin a bheith faoi réir oird is moráltachta poiblí’. While ‘subject to’ is expressed as ‘faoi réir’ in the latter example, this phrase is expressed as ‘faoi chuimsiú’ in Articles 11, 12.5, 12.10.2°, 13.10, 14.5.1°, 16.7, 18.7.2°, 18.10.1°, 22.2.1°, 28.2, 29.4.2°, 30.6, 33.6, 34.4.3°, 36 and 50.1 – see further the commentary on Article 12.5.

We find ‘subject to such conditions’ in Article 24.4.2° also, where ‘the Government may to such extent and subject to such conditions, if any, as may be determined by law’ is expressed as ‘féadfaidh an Rialtas, sa mhéid go gcinnfear le dlí agus faoi chuimsiú cibé coinníollacha a chinnfear le dlí má chinntear’. In the Amendment contained in Article 40.4.3°, however, ‘on such bail and subject to such conditions’ is rendered as ‘faoi réir na mbannaí agus na gcoinníollacha sin’. ‘Subject to’ is translated as ‘faoi réir’ in Téarmaí Dlí and, as we saw above, in Article 40.6.1°, ‘subject to’ is so expressed. In the Amendment contained in Article 29.4.6°, ‘subject to the prior approval of both Houses of the Oireachtas’ is rendered as ‘faoi réir ceadú a fháil roimh ré ó dhá Theach an Oireachtais’.

Note that in Article 10.1, ‘subject to all estates and interests therein for the time being lawfully vested in any person or body’ is expressed as ‘gan dochar do cibé eastáit agus leasanna is le haon duine nó le haon dream go dleathach in alt na huairé’. In Article 11, ‘subject to such exception as may be provided by law’ is expressed as ‘ach amháin an chuid sin de ar a ndéantar eisceacht le dlí’. Finally, ‘while subject to military law’ is expressed as ‘le linn a bheith faoi dhlí mhíleata’ in Article 38.4.1°.

Ní teorannóidh ‘Teorannaím’ is translated as ‘I limit’ in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates ‘teorannaigh’ as (1) ‘delimit’ and (2) ‘limit, restrict’. While Dinneen gives ‘teora’ and nouns and adjectives based on this, he does not appear to give ‘teorannaigh’ as a headword. DIL just cites one example of ‘tórannaidh’, in the sense of ‘borders on, marches with’. ‘Tórann’, on which this verb is based, is itself the verbal noun of ‘do-foirndea’ (*to-fo-rind- [DIL cites one example of the verb ‘do-rinda’, ‘marks out’]), the usual sense of which in Old Irish is ‘expresses, signifies’, but the common meaning in Middle Irish was ‘traces, marks out, delimitates (a design, site, etc.)’ – examples of the former sense are cited in DIL from the Old Irish Glosses onwards, and we can observe the transition in sense in some of the examples from the Glosses. See the commentary on Article 2, where ‘(a) fharraigí teorann’ expresses ‘(the) territorial seas’ and the commentary on Article 34.1 where ‘teoranta’ expresses ‘limited’.

Turning to the Acts, in s51 of the Redundancy Payments

Act, 1967, ‘in so far as it purports to exclude or limit the operation of any provision of this Act’ is translated as ‘a mhéid a airbheartaíonn sí oibriú aon fhorála den Acht seo a eisiámh nó a theorainniú’. In s10 of the Liability for Defective Products Act, 1991, ‘The liability of a producer arising by virtue of this Act to an injured person shall not be limited or excluded by any term of contract’ is translated as ‘Ní dhéanfaidh aon téarma conartha ... dliteanas táirgeora de bua an Achta seo i leith duine dhíobháilte a theorannú ná a eisiámh’. Note that in s5(2)(a) of the Companies Act, 1963, ‘a company having the liability of its members limited by the memorandum to the amount ...’ is translated as ‘cuideachta a mbeidh dliteanas a comhaltaí curtha, leis an meabhrán, faoi theorainn an mhéid ...’. Note also that in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 735), ‘Anxious to limit the number of institutions responsible for carrying out similar tasks’ is translated as ‘Ós é a miangas teorainn a chur le líon na n-institiúidí atá freagrach i gcúraimí comhchosúla a chur i gcrích’.

Looking at ‘limit’ in early Acts, ‘notwithstanding any provision in any Act now in force in relation to the fixing, limiting, restricting, compounding, or commuting of any tolls’ is translated as ‘d’ainneoin aon fhorála in aon Acht atá i bhfeidhm anois i dtaobh aon chustaim ... den tsórt san do cheapa, do theoranú, do shriana, do chó-réiteach no do luíodú’ in s7 of the State Harbours Act, 1924. ‘Whereas the Acts ... are limited to expire as respects the Acts mentioned in the First Schedule to this Act on the 31st day of December 1922’ is translated as ‘De bhí go bhfuil na hAchtanna ... fuinte chun dul in eug an chuid aca atá luaidhte sa Chéad Sceideal a ghabhann leis an Acht so ar an 31adh lá de Mhí na Nodlag 1922’ in the Preamble to the Expiring Laws Continuance Act, 1922, with ‘go bhfuilid le dul in eug an 31adh lá de Mhí na Nodlag’ translating ‘are limited to expire on the 31st day of December’ in the Preamble to the Expiring Laws Act, 1926. ‘Notwithstanding anything in any enactment limiting the granting thereof to certain classes of persons’ is translated as ‘in ainneoin éinní in aon achtachán ná leigeann fóirithin do dheonú ach d’aicmí áirithe daoine’ in s10 of the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, with ‘The admission of cases to the District Hospitals shall be strictly limited to urgent surgical and urgent medical cases’ being translated as ‘Ní leigfear isteach in aon chor sna hOspidéal Cheanntair ach deabha-chásanna chun máin-liaghais agus deabha-chásanna chun leighis’ in s21 of the ‘Mayo County Scheme’ in the First Schedule to that Act.

faisnéis This headword is translated as ‘information (sworn)’ in Téarmaí Dlí and generally translates ‘information’ in the modern Acts. Ó Dónaill translates ‘faisnéis’ as ‘information; intelligence, report’, citing ‘faisnéis a thabhairt faoi rud, to give information about something’ and ‘níl fios ná faisnéis agam orthu, I know nothing about them, have neither tale nor tidings of them’. Dinneen translated ‘faisnéis’ as ‘a narrative, statement, account, rehearsal, intelligence; act of publishing, relating, commemoration, narrating, making known; a clue; a hint; act of seeking a clue or hint’. The Old Irish form was ‘aisndís’, verbal noun of ‘as-indet’, which verb is translated as ‘declares, tells, relates’ in DIL, where examples are cited from the eighth-century Glosses onwards. In the early Irish laws, 'aisnéis' had the sense of 'act of giving information, informing (against)' – see Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 206, who cites the following example of 'aisnéis' in the sense of 'evidence' from an early Irish law-tract: 'faisneis fir omhna aidhus ég, ní fil ní na gella tar cenn anma' ('the evidence of a frightened man who fears death: there is nothing which he may not promise for the sake of his life').

'Eolas' is translated as 'knowledge, information, especially knowledge gained by experience or practice, acquaintance' and especially 'knowledge of the way (place), guidance' in DIL, where examples are cited from the eighth-century Glosses onwards. In Téarmaí Dlí 'notice requiring further information' is translated as 'fógra ag iarraidh tuilleadh eolais'. See the commentary on Article 28.5.2° where 'eolas a thabhairt' expresses 'keep informed'. 'Fis' is translated in DIL as 'the act of finding out or ascertaining; knowledge, information' and 'that which is known, knowledge', where again examples are cited from the eighth century onwards.

Turning to the Acts, in s75(4)(a) of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, 'attempts to obtain in a polling station information as to the candidate for whom any voter in the station is about to vote' is translated as 'go bhféachfaidh sé le faisnéis a fháil, i stáisiún vótaíochta i dtaobh an iarrthóra dá mbeidh vóta le tabhairt ... ag aon vótálaí sa stáisiún'. We also find 'eolas', particularly in the earlier Acts – see, for example s2 of the Statistics (Amendment) Act, 1946, where 'statistical information' is translated as 'eolas staidrimh'. In s22(8) of the Imposition of Duties (Dumping and Subsidies) Act, 1968, '... shall furnish to the Minister such information in his possession or procurement as the Minister may require for the purpose of ascertaining ... the fair market price of the goods' is translated as 'tabharfaidh sé don Aire cibé eolas a bheidh ina sheilbh nó ar fáil aige agus a bheidh ag teastáil ón Aire d'fhonn praghas margaidh cothrom na n-earraí a fháil amach', and in s71(1) of the Health Act, 1970, 'The Minister may make arrangements for the dissemination of information and advice on matters relating to health and health services' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire comhshocraíochtaí a dhéanamh chun eolas agus comhairle a leathadh i dtaobh ábhair a bhaineann le sláinte agus le seirbhísí sláinte'. 'Eolas' translates 'knowledge' in s244(1) of the Income Tax Act, 1967, where 'any activities in the fields of natural or applied science for the extension of knowledge' is translated as 'aon ghníomhaíochtaí i réim na heolaíochta nádúrtha nó feidhmiúla d'fhonn eolas a mhéadú'. In the Preamble to the Institution of Civil Engineers of Ireland (Charter Amendment) Act, 1969, 'promoting the acquisition of knowledge' is translated as 'foghlaim an eolais a chur chun cinn'.

We also find 'fios' translating 'knowledge' in the Acts. In s5(1) of the Broadcasting (Offences) Act, 1968, 'conditions as to knowledge or belief' is translated as 'coinníollacha maidir le fios agus creidiúint', 'knowledge' here referring to, for example, 'knowing, or having cause to believe, ... that broadcasts are made' in s5(3)(f), which is translated as 'a fhios a bheith aige, nó cúis réasúnach a bheith aige chun a chreidiúint ... go ndéantar craoladh aisti'. Finally, 'guilty knowledge' is translated as 'fios ciontach' in Téarmaí Dlí. See further the commentary on Article 28.5.2° regarding early official translations of 'information'.

a leagan síos Ó Dónaill does not seem to cite the phrase 'leag síos', although he gives both 'leag anuas', translated as 'lay down', citing 'curach a leagan anuas, to carry a curach down to the sea', and 'leag suas', citing 'bheith leagtha suas, to be laid up', as headwords. Dinneen translates 'leagaim síos' as 'I prostrate'.

In s8 of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997), 'apply the rules as laid down by this House in an impartial and fair manner' is translated as 'na rialacha mar atá siad leagtha síos ag an Teach seo a chur i bhfeidhm go cothrom neamhchlaonta'. 'In accordance with the principles laid down in this Act', in s99(3) of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, is translated as 'de réir na bprionsabal atá leagtha síos san Acht seo'. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 762), 'The regulations shall lay down detailed rules for each institution' is translated as 'Leagfaidh na rialacháin síos rialacha mionchruinne do gach institiúid'. Note, however, the various alternative ways 'lay down' is translated in those Treaties. 'Periods of grace based on considerations of distance shall be laid down in the rules of procedure' is translated as 'Cinnfear leis na rialacha níos imeachta tréimhsí breise a bhunófar ar an bhfad ó láthair' (p. 692). While 'under conditions laid down in rules drawn up by the Court' is translated as 'faoi choinníollacha a bheidh sonraithe i rialacha a leag an Chúirt síos' (p. 689), on p. 887, 'under the conditions laid down in those Treaties and in this Act' is translated as 'faoi na coinníollacha dá bhforáiltear sna Conarthaí sin agus san Ionstraim seo'. On p. 21, 'laying down general objectives' is translated as 'aidhmeanna ginearálta a shainiú'. While 'Notwithstanding the provisions of Article 15(1) ... laying down general rules for the grant of export refunds for sugar' is translated as 'De mhaolú ar na forálacha atá leagtha síos in Airteagal 15(1) ... ag bunú rialacha ginearálta i dtaobh aisíocaíochtaí ar onnmhairí siúcra' (p. 1395), on p. 928, 'The Commission shall ... lay down the provisions applicable to trade' is translated as 'socróidh an Coimisiún ... na forálacha is infheidhme ar an trádáil'. Finally, on p. 963, 'the provisions relating to the test laid down for animals traded within the Community' is translated as 'na forálacha maidir leis an tástáil atá ceaptha d'ainmhithe is ábhar trádála idir na Comhphobail'. We see, therefore, the many ways 'lay down' can be rendered as against being literally translated as 'leag síos', as is done in this Amendment.

a féadfar a leagan síos le dlí This is a very literal translation of 'as may be laid down by law'. Going here through the text of the Constitution, we see from the following citations that 'féad' is not always used to express 'may', the simple future of the verb it qualifies sometimes expressing 'may' (see also the commentary on Article 12.4.4°); we also see how 'provide', 'determine' and 'fix', along with 'as', are expressed in various ways in different Articles – note in particular that while in Articles 10.3 and 19, 'Provision may be made by law' is expressed as 'féadfar socrú a dhéanamh le dlí', in Article 18.4.2°, this phrase is expressed as 'féadfar foráil a dhéanamh le dlí'. In Article 16.5, 'a shorter period may be fixed by law' is expressed as 'féadfar ré is giorra ná sin a shocrú le dlí'.

In Article 11, 'subject to such exception as may be provided by law' is expressed as 'ach amháin an chuid sin de ar a ndéantar eisceacht le dlí'. In Article 12.11.2°, 'The President shall receive such emoluments and allowances as may be determined by law' is expressed as 'Gheobhaidh an tUachtarán sochair agus liúntais faoi mar a chinnfear le dlí'. In Article 16.1.2<sup>o</sup>ii (following the Ninth Amendment of the Constitution, 1984), 'such other persons in the State as may be determined by law' is rendered as 'cibé daoine eile sa Stát a chinnfear le dlí'. In Article 17.1.2<sup>o</sup>, 'Save in so far as may be provided by specific enactment in each case' is expressed as 'ach amháin sa mhéid go mbeidh a mhalairt socair i dtaobh gach cás ar leith in achtachán chuige sin'. In Article 18.4.2<sup>o</sup>, 'so many members of Seanad Éireann as may be fixed by law' is expressed as 'an líon sin comhaltaí de Sheanad Éireann a shocrófar le dlí'. 'In the manner provided by law', in Article 18.7.1<sup>o</sup>, is expressed as 'ar an gcuma a shocrófar le dlí', with 'as may be fixed by such law' being expressed as 'a chinnfear leis an dlí sin' in Article 19. In Article 29.4.2<sup>o</sup> 'the Government may to such extent and subject to such conditions, if any, as may be determined by law' is expressed as 'féadfaidh an Rialtas, sa mhéid go gcinnefear le dlí agus faoi chuimsiú cibé coinníollacha a chinnfear le dlí, má chinntear'. In Article 29.6, 'save as may be determined by the Oireachtas' is expressed as 'ach mar a chinnfidh an tOireachtas'. In Article 29.7.5<sup>o</sup> (the Amendment following the Good Friday Agreement), 'or such longer period as may be determined by law' is rendered as 'nó cibé tréimhse is faide ná sin a shocrófar le dlí'. In Article 31.2.iii, 'Such other persons, if any, as may be appointed by the President' is expressed as 'Aon daoine eile a cheapfar ag an Uachtarán faoin Airteagal seo, má cheaptar aon duine'. In Article 34.1, 'save in such special and limited cases as may be prescribed by law' is expressed as 'ach amháin sna cásanna speisialta teoranta sin a ordófar le dlí'. In Article 34.4.3<sup>o</sup>, 'subject to such regulations as may be prescribed by law' and 'such decisions of other courts as may be prescribed by law' are expressed respectively as 'faoi chuimsiú cibé forálacha a ordófar le dlí' and 'na breitheanna sin ó chúirteanna eile a ordófar le dlí'.

In Article 34.5.1<sup>o</sup>, 'as the case may be' is expressed as 'de réir mar a oireas'. In Article 34.5.3<sup>o</sup>, 'such later date as may be determined by the President' is expressed as 'dáta is déanaí ná sin mar a chinnfidh an tUachtarán'. In Article 38.3.1<sup>o</sup>, 'Special courts may be established by law for the trial of offences in cases where it may be determined in accordance with such law that ...' is expressed as 'Féadfar cúirteanna faoi leith a bhunú le dlí chun cionta a thriail i gcásanna a gcinnefear ina dtaobh, de réir an dlí sin ...'. In Article 45.2.ii, 'That the ownership ... may be so distributed ... as best to ...' is expressed as 'go roinnefear dílse ... sa chuma is fearr a ...' and, finally, in 45.2.v 'That there may be established' is expressed simply as 'go mbunófar'.

Similarly in the Acts, 'as may be' is sometimes rendered by the future of the following verb. 'In such manner and subject to such conditions as may be laid down by regulations' is translated as 'i cibé slí agus faoi réir cibé coinníollacha a leagfar síos le rialacháin' in s170(2) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, for example. 'Such other conditions, as may be laid down by the Minister for Finance' is translated as 'cibé coinníollacha eile a bheidh leagtha síos ag an Aire Airgeadais' in s9(a)(iii) of the Finance Act, 1989, with 'on such terms and conditions, if any, as may be laid down by the court' being translated as 'ar cibé téarmaí agus coinníollacha, más ann, a bheidh leagtha síos ag an gcúirt' in s177(2) of the Companies Act, 1990. In s10(3) of the Sea Pollution Act, 1991, 'subject to such conditions and such exemptions as may be prescribed' is translated as 'faoi réir cibé coinníollacha agus cibé díolúintí a bheidh forordaithe'. In s15(b) of the Value-Added Tax (Amendment) Act, 1978, 'and in such form and containing such other particulars as may be specified by regulations' is translated as 'i cibé foirm agus cibé sonraí eile ann a shonrófar le rialacháin'. Similarly, in the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 160), 'The capital may be increased by such amounts as may be decided by the Governing Council' is translated as 'Féadfar an caipiteal a mhéadú pé méid a chinnfidh an Chomhairle Rialaithe'.

taisteal The verbal noun of 'taistil', 'travel'. Ó Dónaill cites 'bíonn siad ag taisteal ar an oileán go fóill, they still make journeys to the island'. Dinneen translates 'taistealaim' as 'I travel, journey, traverse, reach, arrive, assemble (as a crowd), frequent (with í), descend from (with ó)'. 'Taistlid' is translated as 'travels, traverses' in DIL, where 'mé ag siobhal ... / sódh ar a dtaisdil mo thriail / ba mó n-aisdir dom anmoin' ('the soft path my foot travelled made my soul's journey longer') is cited from a miscellaneous collection of religious poetry, Dán Dé, and 'má thaistil i liubhraibh Scuit' ('if he be versed in Scottic books') is cited from Dáibhí Ó Bruadair's seventeenth-century poetry.

We find 'taisteal' also in Article 15.15, 'saoráid chun taisteal in aisce' expressing 'free travelling'. Turning to the Acts, in s12(1) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1953, for example, 'at any time before a judge begins to travel a High Court Circuit for the purpose of holding therein any half-yearly sittings of the High Court on Circuit' is translated as 'aon uair sara dtosnóidh breitheamh ag taisteal Cuarda Ard-Chúirte chun aon tsuíonna leathbhliantúla den Ard-Chúirt ar Cuaird a thionól ar an gcuaird sin'.

maidir le In the Amendment contained in Article 29.4.8<sup>o</sup>, 'the Agreement relating to Community Patents' is rendered as 'an Comhaontú maidir le Paitinní Comhphobail'. Note that in Article 16.1.2<sup>o</sup>, 'the law relating to the election of members' is expressed as 'an dlí i dtaobh toghcháin comhaltaí' with 'in accordance with the law for the time being in force relating to the Referendum' being expressed as 'de réir an dlí a bheas i bhfeidhm i dtaobh an Reifrinn in alt na huairé' in Article 46.2. In Article 36, on the other hand, 'Subject to the foregoing provisions of this Constitution relating to the Courts' is expressed as 'Faoi chuimsiú na bhforálacha sin romhainn den Bhunreacht seo a bhaineas leis na Cúirteanna'.

Turning to the Acts, we find 'i dtaobh' translating 'relating to' in the following example from s9(2) of the Merchant Shipping (Load Lines) Act, 1968: 'there shall be endorsed on the certificate such information relating to – (a) periodical inspection of the ship', 'formhuineofar ar an deimhniú cibé eolas i dtaobh – (a) iniúchadh tréimhsiúil ar an long'. Generally, however, 'relating to' is translated as 'a bhaineann le' or 'a bhainfidh le' in the Acts – see, for example, s25(1) of the Dublin Cemeteries Committee Act, 1970, where 'all rights, powers, and privileges relating to or connected with such property' is translated as 'na cearta, na cumhachtaí, agus na pribhléidí go léir a bhaineann nó a ghabhann le haon mhaoin den sórt sin' and note that in s9 of the Finance Act, 1990, 'provision relating to relief in respect of increase in stock values' is translated as 'foráil a bhaineann le faoiseamh maidir le méadú ar luachanna stoic'. See the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding 'bain le' expressing 'relate to'.

We find 'maidir le' translating 'relating to' in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 302), where 'in disputes relating to compensation for damage' is translated as 'i ndiospóidí maidir leis an gcúiteamh i ndamáiste'. 'Maidir le' is translated as 'in the matter of' in Tearmaí Dlí, but is used in a wide variety of contexts in the Acts, translating 'to' in 'shall apply to', for example, generally translating 'as to' and 'as regards' and sometimes translating 'regarding' and 'in respect of'. See the commentary on Articles 15.15 (where this phrase expresses 'in connection with') and 29.4.1°. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'maidir le' is as exact a rendering of English 'relating to' as possible.

go dleathach 'Dleathach' is translated as 'lawful' in Tearmaí Dlí, where 'teasargaim as coimeád dleathach' is translated as 'I rescue from lawful custody'. Ó Dónaill translates 'dleathach' as 'lawful, legal', citing 'seachadadh dleathach, legal tender'. 'Legal' is translated as 'dlíthiúil' in Tearmaí Dlí, where 'legal tender' is translated as 'dlíthairiscint'; Ó Dónaill translates 'dlíthiúil' as 'legal, juridical, lawful'. Dinneen also gives 'lawful' and 'legal' as translations of 'dleagthach', along with 'permissible'. 'Dligthech' is used in the Old Irish Glosses in the sense of 'accordant with reason or rule', Latin 'rationabilis', according to DIL, where 'dligthech' is translated as (a) 'regular, accordant with rule, right, lawful, law-abiding' and (b) 'rational, endowed with reason'. Fergus Kelly, op. cit, p. 309, translates 'dligthech' as 'lawful, legally recognised'. Only two examples of 'dligthemail' ('lawful, just') are cited in DIL, from O'Molloy's Lucerna Fidelium (1676) and Keating's seventeenth-century Eochair-sgiath an Aifrinn. Both 'dligthech' and 'dligthemail' are based on 'dliged', Modern Irish 'dlí', 'law'. See the commentary on Article 10.1.

a chur ar fáil 'Ar fáil' is translated as 'extant, available' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'rud a chur ar fáil' as 'to provide something'. Dinneen translates 'cuirim ar fagháil' as 'I make available'. 'Fagbál', verbal noun of 'fo-gaib', does not occur in the Old Irish Glosses; DIL translates 'fagbál' as 'finding, getting, obtaining', citing 'd'fhail eoluis'.

'I obtain by false pretences' is translated as 'faighim le dúmas bréige' in Tearmaí Dlí. In s75(4)(a) of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, 'obtains or attempts to obtain information' is translated as 'go bhfaighidh sé faisnéis, nó go bhféachfaidh sé le faisnéis a fháil'. Finally, in s3(1) of the Fourth Schedule to the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975, 'the making of anything available for inspection' is translated as 'aon ní a chur ar fáil lena iniúchadh'.

ar fáil In Article 34.5.2°, 'the senior available judge of the Supreme Court' is expressed as 'an breitheamh den Chúirt Uachtarach is sinsearaí dá mbeidh ar fáil', and in Article 40.4.4°, 'or, if he is not available, the senior judge of that Court who is available' is expressed as 'nó, mura mbeidh seisean ar fáil, an breitheamh is sinsearaí den Chúirt sin dá mbeidh ar fáil'. 'Available act of bankruptcy' is translated as 'gníomh féimheachta atá ar fáil' in Tearmaí Dlí. In s42(1) of the Dangerous Substances Act, 1972, 'if he is not readily available' is translated as 'mura bhfuil fáil go héasca (ar an gceadúnaí)'.

Direct translation

Ní theorannóidh an fo-alt seo saoirse chun taisteal idir an Stát agus stát eile.

Ní theorannóidh an fo-alt seo saoirse chun faisnéis i dtaobh seirbhíse atá ar fáil go dleathach i stát eile a fháil nó a chur ar fáil, sa Stát, faoi réir cibé coinníollacha a leagfar síos le dlí.

Variants

1 'a bhainfidh le', 'maidir le'

ARTICLE 40.4.1° AIRTEAGAL 40.4.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní cead a shaoirse phearsanta a bhaint d'aon saoránach ach amháin de réir dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is not permitted to take his personal freedom from any citizen except in accordance with law.

ENGLISH TEXT

No citizen shall be deprived of his personal liberty save in accordance with law.

Divergences between the official texts

1 As in some earlier Articles, 'Ní cead', literally, 'it is not permitted', expresses 'no ... shall' in the Irish text.

Note that Article 6 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

The liberty of the person is inviolable, and no person shall be deprived of his liberty except in accordance with law. Is slán saoirse an duine, agus ní bainfear a shaoirse d'aon duine ach do réir na dlí.

Commentary

a shaoirse 'Saoirse' is translated as 'freedom' in Ó Dónaill, who gives 'liberty, independence' as one set of senses, translating 'saoirse an duine' as 'human freedom'. 'Saoirse choitcheann' is translated as 'general immunity (as enjoyed by the estates of ollamhs)' in Dinneen, who translates 'saoirse a sinnsir' as 'their ancestral rights' and cites 'is do na bochtaibh ceapadh na flaithis mar shaoirse, heaven was designed to be the poor man's inheritance'. DIL translates 'sairse' as (a) 'freedom, liberty, the status of a freeman' and (b) 'exemption, immunity'. This word is similar in meaning to 'saíre', translated in DIL as I(a) 'freedom, liberty', (b) 'nobility (of race, character, etc.)', II(a) 'legal, privileges, immunity, etc., enjoyed by members of the free classes, etc.', (b) 'exemption, period of exemption', III 'holy day, saint's day, church festival, holiday', examples of I(a) being cited from the Old Irish Glosses onwards, including 'do chumtúth a sóere' ('to preserve (?) their freedom'), which glosses Latin 'pro libertate' in the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian, and examples of senses II(a) and (b) being cited from early Irish law-tracts. Fergus

Kelly, op. cit., p. 321, translates 'soíre' as 'independent legal status, immunity from claim'. 'Soíre' is based on 'saer', in Old Irish usually glossing Latin 'liber', and translated as 'free, freeman' in DIL; in early Irish law-tracts this word has the sense of an enfranchised person possessing legal status and a corresponding honour-price – see Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 9:

Three law-texts dealing with rank in early Irish society have survived .... In practice, the most important social distinctions seem to be 1) between those who are nemed "privileged", and those who are not nemed, and 2) between those who are sóer "free" and those who are dóer "unfree".

Turning to the Acts, in s8(2) of the Foyle Fisheries Act, 1952, 'freed and discharged from all estates, titles, interests, incumbrances, rights, liberties and privileges whatsoever by whomsoever held, used, exercised or enjoyed' is translated as 'saortha agus urscaoilte ó gach eastát, teideal, leas, eire, ceart, saoirse agus pribhléid d'aon tsórt, pé duine ag a bhfuil teachtadh, úsáid, feidhmiú nó sealúchas an chéanna'. 'Civil and religious liberties' is translated as 'saoirsí sibhialta agus creidimh' in the New Ireland Forum Report (1984, 4.13). Finally, note that 'liberty (to apply, etc.)' is translated as 'cead' in Téarmaí Dlí. See further the commentary on Article 15.10.

a bhaint de Ó Dónaill translates 'bain de' principally as 'take off, remove', with 'take away from' and 'deprive of' among the secondary senses, citing as an example of the latter sense, 'bhain tú Dia díom, you came between me and God'. DIL cites examples of 'benaid de' in the sense of 'takes from'.

In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 74), 'A member of the Court of Auditors may not be deprived of his office or of his right to a pension or other benefits in its stead' is translated as 'Ní fhéadfar a oifig ná a cheart chun pinsin nó sochar eile ina ionad sin a bhaint de chomhalta den Chúirt Iniúcháirí'. We also find 'bain de' translating 'deprive' in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973). Turning to the Acts, in s7 of the Old Age Pensions Act, 1932, 'No person to whom payment was made before the commencement of this Act in respect of an old age pension shall be deprived of such pension' is translated as 'Aon duine le n-ar híocadh íocaíocht ar bith alos pinsin tsean-aoise roimh thosach feidhme an Achta seo ní bainfeair an pinsean san de' and 'if he would not have been liable to suffer such deprivation', further on in the same section, is translated as 'más rud é ná beadh sé i mbaol an pinsean san do bhaint de'. In s4(4) of the National Health Insurance Act, 1942, however, 'and may provide for the reduction, suspension or deprivation of the same additional benefits' is translated as 'agus féadfaidh a fhoráil go ndéanfar na sochair bhreise sin do laghdú no do chur ar fionnraige no do chur ar neamh-ní'. In s6(4) of the Local Government (Roads and Motorways) Act, 1974, 'In any case where the closing ... of any means of access ... results in the owner of any land being deprived of the only means of access from that land to any public road' is translated as 'In aon chás ina dtiocfadh d'aon bhealach rochtana a dhúnadh ... úinéir aon talún a bheith fágtha gan aon bhealach rochtana ón talamh sin go dtí aon bhóthar poiblí'. In s146(1)(d) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1961, 'all income ... which he has directly or indirectly deprived himself in order to qualify himself for the receipt of unemployment assistance' is translated as 'an t-ioncam go léir ... a cheil sé air féin go díreach nó go neamhdhíreach le cáiliú chun cúnaimh dífhostaíochta a fháil'. 'Wrongfully depriving the plaintiff of goods' is translated as 'earraí a choinneáil go héagórach ar an ngearánaí' in Fasaigh Dlí-Théarmaí (based on forms relating to Rules of the High Court, with reference 72/1962 App B Pt. II).

Looking at early Acts, note that s2 of the Griffith Settlement Act, 1923, reads as follows:

The Trustees shall hold the Widow's Share upon trust to pay the same as and when received by the Trustees to the said Mrs. Maud Griffith for her separate use and so that she shall not have power to deprive herself thereof by anticipation. Cimeádfaidh na hIon-taobhuithe Cuid na Baintrí ar iontaoibh chun an céanna d'íoc fé mar a gheobhaidh agus nuair a gheobhaidh na hIon-taobhuithe é le Maedhbh Uí Ghriobhtha roimh-ráite chun a húsáide féin ar leithligh agus i dtreo ná beidh de chomhacht aice í féin d'fhágaint 'na éaghmuis tri bhaint leis roimh-ré.

'Deprivation of acting rank' is translated as 'A chéim ghníomhachta do chailliúint' in s81(3) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'deprive' as 'bainim (rud) de (dhuine); téim i mbarr (ruda) ar (dhuine); coinnim (rud) ó (dhuine)'. L. Mc Cionnaith s.v. 'deprive', cites 'to deprive of his ... a shaoirse 7 c. do bhaint de'. Ó Dónaill gives 'deprive of' as one of the senses of 'bain ar' from earlier literature, citing 'baineadh a radharc air, he lost his sight'. 'Baineadh clog air, a bell was rung against him' has the sense of 'he was excommunicated'. 'Cuir as' is translated as 'put out of; deprive of by Ó Dónaill; 'cuir ó' is translated as 'put from, prevent, deprive of' and 'fág gan' is translated as 'leave without, deprive of', with 'd'fhág siad gan mo chuid leabhar mé' translated as 'they deprived me of my books'. Along with the sense 'to dispossess', 'deprive' has the sense of 'to keep out of enjoyment', according to Chambers English Dictionary. This latter sense is perhaps better rendered in Irish by 'ceil' rather than 'bain de'.

de réir This phrase is translated as 'in accordance with' in Téarmaí Dlí.

Ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Ní cead a shaoirse phearsanta nó a saoirse phearsanta a bhaint d'aon saoránach ach amháin de réir dlí.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ní bhainfeair a shaoirse phearsanta nó a saoirse phearsanta d'aon saoránach<sup>1</sup> ach amháin de réir dlí.

Variants

- <sup>1</sup> 'Ní cheilfeair a shaoirse phearsanta nó a saoirse phearsanta ar aon saoránach', 'Ní choinneofar a shaoirse phearsanta nó a saoirse phearsanta ó aon saoránach'

ARTICLE 40.4.2° AIRTEAGAL 40.4.2°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Nuair a dhéanann duine ar bith gearán, nó a dhéantar gearán thar ceann duine ar bith, leis an Ard-Chúirt nó le breitheamh ar bith di á rá go bhfuil an duine sin á choinneáil ina bhrá go haindleathach, ní foláir don Ard-Chúirt agus d'aon bhreitheamh agus do gach breitheamh di chun a ndéanfar an gearán sin fiosrú a dhéanamh láithreach i dtaobh an ghearáin sin agus féadfaidh a ordú do neach coinnithe an duine sin ina bhrá an duine sin a thabhairt ina phearsain i láthair na hArd-Chúirte lá a ainmnítear agus a dheimhniú i scríbhinn cad is forais dá bhraighdeanas, agus ní foláir don Ard-Chúirt, nuair a bheirtear an duine sin ina phearsain i láthair na Cúirte sin agus tar éis caoi a thabhairt do neach a choinnithe ina bhrá ar a chruthú gur braighdeanas cóir an braighdeanas, a ordú an duine sin a scaoileadh as an mbraighdeanas sin mura deimhin leis an gCúirt sin gur de réir an dlí atáthar á choinneáil.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

When any person makes a complaint, or a complaint is made on behalf of any person, to the High-Court or to any judge of it stating that that person is being kept a prisoner unlawfully, the High Court and any judge and every judge of it to whom that complaint is made must inquire immediately concerning that complaint and may order the one keeping that person a prisoner to bring that person personally before the High Court (on a) day that is named and to certify in writing what the grounds for his imprisonment are, and the High Court must, when that person is brought personally before that Court and after giving an opportunity to the one keeping him a prisoner to prove that the imprisonment is a just imprisonment, order that that person be released from that imprisonment if that Court does not consider it certain that it is in accordance with the law that he is being held.

ENGLISH TEXT

Upon complaint being made by or on behalf of any person to the High Court or any judge thereof alleging that such person is being unlawfully detained, the High Court and any and every judge thereof to whom such complaint is made shall forthwith enquire into the said complaint and may order the person in whose custody such person is detained to produce the body of such person before the High Court on a named day and to certify in writing the grounds of his detention, and the High Court shall, upon the body of such person being produced before that Court and after giving the person in whose custody he is detained an opportunity of justifying the detention, order the release of such person from such detention unless satisfied that he is being detained in accordance with the law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Alleging' is rendered as 'á rá', 'stating', in the Irish text.
- 2 'Is being unlawfully detained' is rendered as 'á choinneáil ina bhrá go haindleathach' ('is being unlawfully kept a prisoner') in the Irish text, 'I detain'

- 3 being translated simply as 'coinním' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 3 The Irish term rendering 'unlawful', 'aindleathach', is translated [not very accurately, according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú] as 'illicit' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'unlawful' being translated as 'neamhdhleathach' there.
- 4 'The person in whose custody such person is detained' is rendered as 'neach coinnithe an duine sin ina bhrá' ('the one/person keeping that person a prisoner') in the Irish text.
- 5 'To produce the body of such person' and 'upon the body of such person being produced' are rendered in the Irish text as 'an duine sin a thabhairt ina phearsain' ('to bring that person personally') and 'nuair a bheirtear an duine sin ina phearsain' ('when that person is brought personally') respectively.
- 6 'The grounds of his detention' is rendered as 'forais dá bhraighdeanas' ('the grounds for his imprisonment') in the Irish text.
- 7 'Justifying the detention' is rendered in the Irish text as 'a chruthú gur braighdeanas cóir an braighdeanas' ('to prove that the imprisonment is a just imprisonment').
- 8 As in some other Articles, 'shall' is on two occasions rendered as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that the original Article 40.4.2° was deleted by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, and four new subsections were added in its place. The original subsection 2 read as follows:

Upon complaint being made by or on behalf of any person that he is being unlawfully detained, the High Court and any and every judge thereof shall forthwith enquire into the same and may make an order requiring the person in whose custody such person shall be detained to produce the body of the person so detained before such court or judge without delay and to certify in writing as to the cause of the detention, and such Court or judge shall thereupon order the release of such person unless satisfied that he is being detained in accordance with the law. Nuair dhéanann duine ar bith gearán, nó nuair déantar gearán thar ceann duine ar bith, go bhfuiltear dá choinneáil ina bhráighe go haindleaghthach, ní foláir don Ard-Chúirt agus d'aon bhreitheamh agus do gach uile bhreitheamh den chúirt sin fiosrú do dhéanamh láithreach i dtaobh an ghearáin sin, agus féadfaidh ordú do dhéanamh dá cheangal ar an té ag a bhfuil an bráighe i láimh an bráighe sin do thabhairt ina phearsain i láthair na cúirte nó an bhreithimh sin gan mhoill, agus fáth a bhraighdeanais d'innsint le teastas scríobhtha: agus air sin ní foláir don Chúirt nó don bhreitheamh sin ordú a thabhairt chun an bráighe sin do scaoileadh muna deimhin leo gur do réir dlíghidh atáthar dá choinneáil.

Note also that Article 6 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

Upon complaint made by or on behalf of any person that he is being unlawfully detained, the High Court and any and every judge thereof shall forthwith enquire into the same and may make an order requiring the person in whose custody such person shall be detained to produce the body of the person so detained before such Court or judge without delay, and to certify in writing as to the cause of the detention and such Court or judge shall thereupon order the release of such person unless satisfied that he is being detained in accordance with the law .... Ar aon duine do dhéanamh ghearáin no ar ghearán do dhéanamh ar a shon go bhfuiltear á chimeád go nea-dhleathach, fiosróidh an Ard-Chúirt agus aon bhreitheamh agus gach breitheamh di an gearán san láithreach agus féadfaid ordú do dhéanamh á chur d'fhiachaibh ar an nduine atá ag cimeád an duine sin corp an duine atá i gcimeád do thabhairt i láthair na Cúirte no an bhreithimh gan mhoill agus deimhniú do dhéanamh i scríbhinn i dtaobh cúise a chimeáidh agus ordóidh an Chúirt no an breitheamh san an duine sin do sgaoile ansan mara mbeifar sásta go bhfuiltear á chimeád do réir na dlí.

Commentary

gearán This headword is translated as 'complaint' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'gearán a dhéanamh (le duine)' as 'to complain (to someone)', citing 'bhí sé ina shuí ansin ag déanamh a ghearáin leis féin, he sat there feeling sorry for himself'. Dinneen translates 'gearán' as 'act of bewailing; a complaint; an accusation; a remonstrance; a grievance; supplication; a cry, a sob, a groan, a distemper, ailment' and cites the proverb 'an té nach truagh leis do chás ná déan do ghearán leis, do not make complaint to one not in sympathy with you', i.e. don't look for sympathy where there's none. The earliest examples of 'gerán' ('complaint, wailing, accusation') cited in DIL seem only to go back as far as the twelfth-century Book of Leinster.

Turning to the Acts, in s49 of the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'an offence under any provision of the Fisheries Acts ... may be heard ... by a District Justice upon the complaint, verbal or otherwise, of a member of the Garda Síochána' is translated as 'féadfaidh Breitheamh Dúiche, ar chomhalta den Gharda Síochána ... do dhéanamh gearáin de bhriathra béil nó ar shlí eile cion faoi aon fhoráil de na hAchtanna Iascaigh ... a éisteacht'. In s10 of the Trade Union Act, 1975, the heading 'Complaints to Registrar regarding resolutions' is translated as 'Gearáin chun an Chláraitheora maidir le rúin' and ss1 begins as follows: 'A member of a trade union ... may complain to the Registrar on one or more than one of the following grounds', 'Aon chomhalta de cheardchumann ... féadfaidh sé gearán a dhéanamh chun an Chláraitheora ar fhoras amháin nó níos mó díobh seo a leanas'.

ina bhrá 'Brá' is not given as a headword in Téarmaí Dlí. It is translated as 'captive, hostage' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'tá sé ina bhrá acu, they have caught, arrested, him; they are holding him prisoner'. Dinneen translates 'braighe' as 'a captive, prisoner, hostage, pledge'. DIL translates 'brága' as 'captive, prisoner, hostage', citing 'ag so brágha dheit a Dhé' ('I surrender, God, to Thee') from a miscellaneous collection of religious poetry, Dán Dé. As Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 174, states, the annals contain numerous references to hostages, 'usually giall, but also aitire, and later brágae, hostages usually being taken 'to ensure the continued submission of a territory over which a king claimed sovereignty'. 'Brága' is a development of the earlier 'brág(a)e', 'neck, throat, gullet', an example of which is cited in DIL from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian; the development in sense can be seen in the phrase 'gaibid for (ar) brágait', takes prisoner, or captive, literally, by the neck.

Regarding 'detain' in early Acts, 'Every person who is now detained in military custody or held as a military prisoner or captive ... may be detained in custody' is translated as 'Gach duine atá i gcimeád mileata anois no atá á choinneáil mar phríosúnach no cime mileata ... féadfar ... é do choinneáil i gcoimeád' in s3(1) of the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923.

braighdeanas This term is not given as a headword in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'braighdeanas' as 'captivity, bondage', translating 'bheith i mbraighdeanas' as 'to be in captivity, in custody' and 'tír a thabhairt i mbraighdeanas' as 'to reduce a country to slavery'. Dinneen translates 'braighdeanas' as 'captivity, imprisonment, slavery'. DIL cites five examples of 'bráigdenas' ('hostageship, captivity') from Irish literature, this word being based on 'brága', i.e. 'brá' in this Article.

'Custody' is translated as 'coimeád' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'I rescue from lawful custody' is translated as 'teasargaim as coimeád dleathach' and 'I take into custody' is translated as 'glacaim i gcoimeád'. 'I detain' is translated simply as 'coinnim' in Téarmaí Dlí. In s247 of the Companies Act, 1963, 'the court ... may cause the contributory to be arrested, and his books ... seized and him and them to be detained until such time as the court may order' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an chúirt ... a chur faoi deara an ranníocóir a ghabháil, agus a leabhair ... a urghabháil agus é féin agus iadsan a choinneáil go ceann cibé tréimhse a ordóidh an chúirt'. In s231(1)(e) of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act, 1959, 'to take, remove, and detain in his custody any sea-fish' is translated as 'aon iasc mara ... a thógáil, a aistriú, agus a choinneáil faoina choimeád.'

fiosrú 'Fiosraim' is translated as 'I inquire' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'rud a fhiosrú' as 'to inquire about, into, something'. Dinneen translates 'fiosruighim' as 'I ask, I inquire, I visit'. DIL translates 'físráid' as (a) 'inquires' and (b) 'visits', this last sense being rare, except in translations. The verbal noun 'físrugud' is translated as (a) 'inquiring; investigating' and (b) 'visiting', with only three examples of 'físrugud' in sense (a) being cited, the first being translated as 'to test', the second 'to seek them' and the third, 'lucht físráighí', 'scouts', none of them being of any great antiquity. 'Físráid' is based on 'fis', 'the act of finding out or ascertaining; knowledge, information' (DIL).

'Fiosrúchán' is translated as 'inquiry' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'fiosrúcháin i dtaobh eirí' is translated as 'inquiries as to incumbrances'. 'Fiosrú', the verbal noun of 'fiosraigh', is translated as 'inquiry' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'coiste físráithe, committee of inquiry', and as 'visitation'. 'Fiosrúchán' is translated as 'act of inquiring, inquisition', with 'fiosrúchán a chur, a dhéanamh, ar rud' being translated as 'to investigate, hold, an inquiry into something', 'cúirt físrúcháin' being translated as 'court of inquiry'. Dinneen, who does not seem to cite 'fiosrúchán', translates 'fiosrughadh' as 'act of inquiring, visiting; summons, visitation'.

Turning to the Acts, the form of an oath to be administered to jurors is given as follows in s19(2) of the Juries Act, 1976: "I will well and diligently inquire whether ....., the prisoner at the bar, be insane or not", "go bhfiosróidh mé go maith agus go dícheallach cibé acu is gealt nó nach gealt ..., an príosúnach ag an mbarra". In the Dáil Order Paper of 1/3/79, 'that it is expedient that a tribunal be established for inquiry into the following definite matters of urgent public importance' is translated as 'go bhfuil sé oiriúnach binse a bhunú chun na nithe áirithe seo a leanas a mbaineann deabhadh agus tábhacht phoiblí leo a fhiosrú'. We find the very same Irish text in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann of 17/12/69. Note how it was felt that 'fiosraigh' was not strong enough and 'scrúdaigh' was used in the following (from the Dáil Order Paper of 11/12/75): '... the Report of the Tribunal appointed on the 4th July, 1975, to inquire into allegations made by two Members against the Minister for Local Government in the Dáil', 'an Tuarascáil ón mBinse a ceapadh an 4 Iúil, 1975, chun liomhaintí a rinne dhá Chomhalta in aghaidh an Aire Rialtais Áitiúil sa Dáil a scrúdú'. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 559), 'The Commission shall inquire into any request made by a Member State' is translated as 'Beidh ar an gCoimisiún fiosrú a dhéanamh faoi aon iarratas a dhéanfaidh Ballstát'.

go haindleathach 'Driogadh aindleathach' is translated as 'illicit distillation' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'aindleathach' as 'illegal' – which is translated as 'neamhdhleathach' in Téarmaí Dlí, this word in turn being translated as 'unlawful, illegal' in Ó Dónaill. Dinneen translates 'aindleathach' as 'unlawful, illegal, unfair, irregular, base (as a coin)'. Ó Dónaill cites 'aindlitheach' as a variant of 'aindleathach', Dinneen giving 'aindlitheach' as a separate headword, which he translates as 'unlawful, illegal, exlex'. DIL translates 'aindlitheach' as 'unlawful, unjust', giving three examples of the adverbial usage, 'go haindlitheach', from the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

'Unlawful assembly' is translated as 'tionól neamhdhleathach' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'unlawful carnal knowledge' is translated as 'fios collaí neamhdhleathach'. In s3(1) of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1975, for example, 'a person shall be guilty of an offence if anywhere he unlawfully and intentionally ... commits on board an aircraft in flight any act of violence' is translated as 'beidh duine ciontach i gcion má dhéanann sé in áit ar bith go neamhdhleathach agus d'aonghnó ... aon gníomh foréigin ar bord aerárthaigh agus í ar eitilt'. Finally, 'fish unlawfully captured' is translated as 'iasc a gabhadh go neamhdhleathach' in s53(a) of the Fisheries Act, 1980.

neach This headword is translated as 'being' in Ó Dónaill, who gives 'person, one' as one subset of senses, citing 'ní fhaca aon neach é, no one saw him' and 'má tá aon neach ann, if there is any one there'. Dinneen translates 'neach' as 'a being, a person, one, oneself, anyone, whoever; a thing, whatever'. DIL cites examples of the indefinite pronoun 'neach' from the ninth-century Milan Glosses onwards; in Middle Irish it comes to be used as a noun in the sense of 'a person', 'often equivalent to "duine"', according to DIL. See the commentary on Article 40.3.2° regarding 'pearsa' expressing 'person'.

a scaoileadh as an mbraighdeanas In Téarmaí Dlí 'I release' is translated as 'scaoilim'. As regards the Acts, see s483(2) of the Income Tax Act, 1967, where 'the Special Commissioners shall issue their warrant to the governor of the prison in which any defaulter is detained under their warrant, directing the liberation of the defaulter, and, on receipt thereof, the governor shall forthwith release and discharge him out of custody, if he is under detention for no other cause than as set forth in the warrant of commitment' is translated as 'eiseoidh na Coimisinéirí Speisialta a mbarántas chun rialtóir an phríosúin ina mbeidh aon mhainnitheoir á choinneáil faoina mbarántas, á ordú an mainnitheoir a scaoileadh saor, agus, ar sin a fháil dó, déanfaidh an rialtóir láithreach é a scaoileadh saor ó choimeád, mura mbeidh sé faoi choinneáil ar aon chúis eile seachas í sin a bheidh sonraithe sa bharántas cimithe'. In s5(3) of the Criminal Justice Act, 1990, 'to release temporarily a person serving a sentence of imprisonment' is translated as 'duine a mbeidh pianbhreith príosúnachta á cur isteach aige a scaoileadh saor go sealadach'. Note finally that the official Irish title of 'The Release of Prisoners Commission', established in 1998, is 'An Coimisiún um Scaoileadh Saor Príosúnach'.

deimhin This headword is translated as 'sure, certain' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'is deimhin liom go bhfuil an ceart agat, I am quite sure you are right'. Dinneen translates 'deimhin' as 'certain, sure, true'. DIL translates 'is demin lim' as 'I am sure (of, that)', citing the following from the ninth-century Milan Glosses: 'is demniu liunn a n-adchiam ... oldaas an rochluinemmar' ('we regard what we see with the eyes as more certain than what we hear with the ears'). See further the commentary on Article 40.4.2° where 'i slí gur deimhin go' expresses 'as to ensure'.

Turning to the Acts, in s65(1) of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, 'in any case in which he is not satisfied as to the accuracy of any count' is translated as 'in aon chás nach deimhin leis cruinneas aon chomhairimh'. In s103(1) of the same Schedule, 'and in giving leave the court shall be satisfied that the notice ... was reasonable' is translated as 'agus nuair a bheidh an cead sin á thabhairt ag an gcúirt déanfaidh sé deimhin de go raibh réasún leis an bhfógra'. In s28 of the Finance Act, 1990, 'where they are satisfied that such permission should be given' is translated as 'i gcás ar deimhin leo gur chóir an cead sin a thabhairt'. In s1 of Article 6 of the Second Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1973, 'Upon being satisfied that the circumstances so warrant, any Contracting State ... shall take him into custody' is translated as 'Ar a bheith deimhin d'aon Stát Conarthach, ... tógfaidh sé an duine sin i gcoimeád'.

We also find phrases with 'sásta' or forms of 'sásta' translating 'satisfied'. 'Unless the Court is satisfied' is translated as 'mura gcruthaítear chun sástachta na Cúirte' in s43 of the Health Act, 1947, while 'until the court is satisfied to the contrary' is translated as 'go dtí gur deimhin leis an gcúirt a mhalairt' in s19(2) of the Misuse of Drugs Act, 1977. In s16(4) of the Finance Act, 1976, 'subject to the Revenue Commissioners being satisfied that tax ... has been paid' is translated as 'faoi réir na Coimisinéirí Ioncaim a bheith sásta gur íocadh cáin'. See further the commentary on Article 46.5 where 'upon his being satisfied that' is expressed as 'ar mbeith sásta dó gur'.

forais 'Foras' is translated as 'ground (of application, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí, this being given as a secondary sense of 'foras' (in Jurisprudence) in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ar an bhforas go, on the ground that'. The original meaning of 'forus', examples of which are cited in DIL from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards, is thought to have been 'basis, foundation, bottom', which senses are included with 'that which is stable, stability', along with 'established or fundamental principles of knowledge or science, axioms', 'the principle or enactments of a law' and 'a station, resting-place, dwelling' in DIL.

Turning to the Acts, see, for example, s5 of the Local Elections (Petitions and Disqualifications) Act, 1974, headed 'Grounds for petition', 'Forais achainí', where 'a local election may be questioned on the grounds of want of qualification' is translated as 'féadfar toghchán áitiúil a thabhairt faoi cheist ar fhoras díth cáilíochta'. See the commentary on Article 27.3, where 'ábhar' expresses 'ground'.

Note that 'foras' also expresses 'institution' – see the commentary on Article 18.4.2°. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú questions the need for the unfamiliar ("deoranta") use of 'forais' in the present Article and recommends expressing 'the ground for his detention' in the direct translation below as 'na cúiseanna lena choinneáil'.

caoi Ó Dónaill translates 'caoi a thabhairt do dhuine (ar rud a dhéanamh)' as 'to give someone the means, an opportunity (to do something)'. Dinneen translates 'níl aon chaoi agam air' as 'I have no means of doing it, of obtaining it', including 'opportunity, means' among the senses of 'caoi'. 'Way, path' may have been the original meaning of the earlier 'cáe', which was also the name of 'a social institution according to which a member of the noble grades had the right to bring a party with him on a night's coshering visit to each of his servile clients' – see DIL s.v. 'cáe', and Fergus Kelly, op. cit., s.v. 'cóe', 'winter hospitality to lord'. DIL also cites examples of 'cáe' in the sense of 'way, manner, course, means'. This is the same word 'caoi' found in the Connacht greeting, 'Cén chaoi a bhfuil tú? (How are you?)'.

Turning to the Acts, see, for example, s111(2) of the Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, where 'the court may, after giving the person or persons an opportunity of being heard to show cause ...' is translated as 'féadfaidh an chúirt, tar éis caoi éisteachta a thabhairt don duine nó do na daoine sin chun cúis a shuíomh...'. In s10(4) of the Trade Union Act, 1975, referred to above s.v. 'gearán', 'after giving the complainant and the trade union concerned an opportunity of being heard' is translated as 'tar éis deis éisteachta a thabhairt don ghearánach agus don cheardchumann lena mbainfidh'. In s20(2)(g) of the Judicial Separation and Family Law Reform Act, 1989, 'by reason of having relinquished or foregone the opportunity of remunerative activity' is translated as 'de bhíthin an deis ar ghníomhaíocht le haghaidh luach saothair a thabhairt suas nó a ligean uaidh'. In s3(d) of the Higher Education Authority Act, 1971, 'promoting the attainment of equality of opportunity in higher education' is translated as 'dlús a chur le comhdheiseanna a bheith ann ar ard-oideachas'. Both 'caoi' and 'deis' are found translating 'opportunity' in Treaties establishing the European Communities and in the Treaty on European Union also. 'Deis' sometimes translates 'device'/'contrivance' in the Acts with 'caoi' translating 'means' in 'means of escape from rooms', 'caoi éalaithe ó sheomraí', in s97 of the Mines and Quarries Act, 1965, for example.

á rá See the commentary on Article 38.4.1° where 'cionta a deirtear a rinneadar' expresses 'offences alleged to have been committed (by persons)'. Ó Dónaill gives 'state, allege' as one of the senses of 'abair', citing 'deir sé go bhfuil ocrais air, he says he is hungry' and 'tú féin a dúirt é, it was you who said it'. In s3(3) of the Local Authorities (Traffic Wardens) Act, 1975, 'he may affix to the vehicle a notice in the prescribed form stating ... that the offence is alleged to have been committed' is translated as 'féadfaidh sé fógra san fhoirm fhorordaithe a ghreamú den fheithicil á rá ... go líomhnaítear go ndearnadh an cion'. In s2(a) of Article XX in the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, 1957, 'Each government ... shall deposit with the Government of the United States of America an instrument setting forth that it has accepted this Agreement' is translated as 'Gach rialtas ... taiscfidh sé le Rialtas Stát Aontaithe Mheiriceá ionstraim á rá go bhfuil glactha aige leis an gComhaontú seo...'. Finally, in s18(2)(a) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'without giving the occupier thereof one month's previous notice in writing of its intention so to do' is translated as 'gan fógra i scríbhinn a thabhairt don áitheoir mí roimh ré á rá go bhfuil ar intinn aige sin a dhéanamh'.

'I allege' is translated as 'líomhnaím' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'líomhain' translating 'allegation'. In s231(1)(e) of the Companies Act, 1963, for example, 'to make any compromise or arrangement with creditors or persons claiming to be creditors, or having or alleging themselves to have any claim present or future' is translated as 'aon chomhréiteach nó comhshocraíocht a dhéanamh le creidiúnaithe nó le daoine a bheidh á éileamh gur creidiúnaithe iad, nó a bhfuil, nó a líomhnóidh go bhfuil, aon éileamh acu, láithreach nó todhcháí...'. In s166(5) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, 'in a case where he alleges that he is entitled to receive a pension at a higher rate' is translated as 'i gcás ina líomhnóidh sé go bhfuil sé i dteideal pinsean de réir ráta is airde a fháil'.

a thabhairt ... i láthair Literally 'to bring into place'. 'That there are reasonable grounds for believing that a person specified in the information can produce the child named in the application' is translated as 'go mbeidh cúiseanna réasúnacha ann lena chreidiúint gur féidir le duine a bheidh sonraithe san fhaisnéis an leanbh a ainmítear san iarratas a thabhairt i láthair' in s46(3) of the Child Care Act, 1991, with 'an leanbh do thabhairt i láthair na cúirte am áirithe agus in áit áirithe' translating 'to produce such child before the court at a specified time and place' in s18(1) of the School Attendance Act, 1926. 'Produce the body of the person' is translated as 'corp an duine a thabhairt i láthair' in Téarmaí Oifigiúla (with no reference given).

'I produce (documents, etc.)' is translated as 'tugaim ar aird' in Téarmaí Dlí. In s39(17)(c) of the Redundancy Payments Act, 1967, 'The Tribunal may ... require such person ... to produce any documents in his possession' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an Binse ... a cheangal ar an duine sin ... aon doiciméid a thabhairt ar aird a bheidh ina sheilbh ...'. Note that 'Whenever the registrar shall be required to produce for inspection in his office ... any document' is translated as 'Aon uair a héileofar ar an gclárathóir aon scríbhinn ... a thaisbeaint chun go n-íniúchfar í ina oifig' in s11(1) of the Companies (Re-constitution of Records) Act, 1924.

In s92 of the Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, 'and ... such personation agent ... fails to appear before the court' is translated as 'agus ... go mainneoidh an gníomhaire pearsanaíochta sin ... láithriú os comhair na cúirte'. Section 12 of the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, is headed 'General immunities of advocates appearing before Court', 'Díolúintí ginearálta d'aighní a láithreoidh os comhair na Cúirte' and reads as follows: 'Persons ... engaged in appearing before the Court as representatives of a government', 'Na daoine ... a bheidh fruilithe ag láithriú os comhair na Cúirte mar ionadaithe do Rialtas'. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 61), 'to bring an action before the Court' is translated as 'caingean a thabhairt os comhair na Cúirte.'

a chruthú gur braighdeanas cóir an braighdeanas Regarding 'justify', see s5(3) of the Criminal Justice Act, 1990, where 'such limited duration as is justified by those reasons' is translated as 'cibé fad teoranta a bheidh cóir ag féachaint do na cúiseanna sin'. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 252), 'the Council, may ... decide that aid which that State is granting ... shall be considered to be compatible with the common market, ... if such a decision is justified by exceptional circumstances' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an Chomhairle ... a chinneadh go measfar cabhair atá á tabhairt ... ag an Stát sin a bheidh ag luí leis an gcómhargadh, ... má fhágann imthosca eisceachtúla gur cinneadh cóir é sin'. In s10(5) of the Trade Union Act, 1975, 'Where the Registrar finds a complaint under this section to be justified' is translated as 'I gcás ina gcinneadh an Cláráitheoir ceart a bheidh le gearán faoin alt seo'.

We find forms based on 'fí(o)r' ('true') translating 'justify' in some sources. In s5(3)(b) of the Wealth Tax Act, 1975, 'or for any other analogous reason which, in the opinion of the Commissioners, is sufficient to justify the benefits conferred by this subsection' is translated as 'nó ar aon chúis eile den tsamhail chéanna is leor, i dtuairim na gCoimisinéirí, chun na sochair a thugtar leis an bhfo-alt seo a fhírénánu'. The verb 'fírénánu' is based on 'fírén', translated as 'just, righteous, true, genuine' in Ó Dónaill, who does not give that verb as a headword. Dinneen, however, has 'fírénánuighim', 'I justify', and 'justifiable' is translated as 'infhírénánuithe' in Téarmaí Oifigiúla. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'make righteous in the sight of God' is one of the senses of 'justify' and that that is what is rendered by 'fírénánuigh'. 'Justification (i.e. of defamatory statement)' is translated as 'firinníú' in Téarmaí Dlí, while 'justifiable homicide' is translated as 'dúnbhású dlíthiúil'. In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 19), 'to take measures which are justified on grounds of public policy or public security' is translated as 'bearta a ghlacadh a dhlítear ar fhorais an bheartais phoiblí nó na slándála poiblí'.

We also find 'call' translating 'justify'. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 554), 'it may be extended if the situation which justified its granting continues' is translated as 'féadfar é a fhadú má mhaireann na cúrsaí ba chall lena dheonú'. On p. 20, 'with no protection against competing industries that is not justified by improper action on their part' is translated as 'faoi choinníollacha a choisceann aon chosaint in aghaidh tionscal iomaíoch mura bhfuil call lena leithéid mar gheall ar ghníomh midhleathach ag na tionscail'. In s166(1)(b) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, 'when a person has been at any time ... in receipt of old age pension at a certain rate when his means exceeded the amount which justified the payment of a pension at that rate' is translated as 'an raibh duine, tráth ar bith ..., ag fáil pinsin seanaoise de réir ráta áirithe nuair ba mhó a acmhainn ná an méid ar chall pinsean a ioc de réir an ráta sin'. Following that, one might translate 'justifying the detention' as 'a léiriú go raibh call leis an gcoinneáil'.

L. Mc Cionnaith s.v. 'justify', in the sense of 'justify position, attitude, policy', refers the reader to 'defend', and 'cosain' has been used in some documents to translate 'justify'. 'He said, in justification of his attitude' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'dubhairt sé, á chosaint féin' in a 1928 Report of the Public Accounts Committee, with 'níor cheart airgead do chaitheamh air' being cited as translating 'the expenditure was not justified' in a Report from the previous year, and 'such as to justify expectation' being translated as 'de shaghas go mbeidh súil réasúnta le' in Iris on Phuist, 29/2/28. Regarding 'justify' in the sense of 'justified in doing', L. Mc Cionnaith refers the reader to 'right, proper', and we have seen above how 'ceart' and 'cóir' has been used to render 'justify'. Finally, note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'justify' as 'tugaim údar maith le (gníomh)'.

ina phearsain See the commentary on Article 40.1. Commenting on the direct translation below, and noting the examples of the use of 'corp' above, including in the 1922 Constitution, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'a dead body' is what an Irish speaker would understand by 'corp' and this is probably why the drafters of the 1937 Constitution departed from 'corp', Professor Ó Murchú regarding 'i bpearsain' as being completely satisfactory and cites 'do bhí breágha a bpearsain, gur thaitnigh mar mhnaoi ris' from Beatha Chríost, l. 124.

i dtaobh This phrase is translated as 'about, concerning' in Ó Dónaill and as 'regarding, in reference to, about' in Dinneen. Note that a comma follows the phrase 'i dtaobh an ghearáin sin' in the original Amendment.

a bheirtear According to the official standard, this would be rendered as 'a thugtar' – see the commentary on Article 12.1.

a dheimhniú 'Deimhním' is translated as 'I certify' – see the commentary on Article 1.

de réir an dlí Note 'de réir dlí' in the previous subsection.

i láthair See the commentary on Article 40.1.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Nuair a dhéanann duine ar bith gearán, nó nuair a dhéantar gearán thar ceann duine ar bith, leis an Ard-Chúirt nó le breitheamh ar bith di á rá go bhfuil an duine sin á choinneáil ina bhrá nó á coinneáil ina brá go haindleathach, ní foláir don Ard-Chúirt agus d'aon bhreitheamh agus do gach breitheamh di chun a ndéanfar an gearán sin fiosrú a dhéanamh láithreach i dtaobh an ghearáin sin agus féadfaidh a ordú do neach coinnithe an duine sin ina bhrá nó ina brá an duine sin a thabhairt ina phearsa nó ina pearsa i láthair na hArd-Chúirte lá a ainmnítear agus a dheimhniú i scríbhinn cad is forais dá bhraighdeanas nó dá braighdeanas, agus ní foláir don Ard-Chúirt, nuair a thugtar an duine sin ina phearsa nó ina pearsa i láthair na Cúirte sin agus tar éis caoi a thabhairt do neach a choinnithe ina bhrá nó a coinnithe ina brá ar a chruthú gur braighdeanas cóir an braighdeanas, a ordú an duine sin a scaoileadh as an mbraighdeanas sin mura deimhin leis an gCúirt sin gur de réir an dlí atáthar á choinneáil nó á coinneáil.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Ar aon duine a dhéanamh gearáin nó ar ghearán a dhéanamh thar ceann aon duine chun na hArd-Chúirte nó chun aon bhreithimh den Ard-Chúirt á liomhain go bhfuil an duine sin á choinneáil nó á coinneáil go neamhdhleathach, déanfaidh an Ard-Chúirt agus aon bhreitheamh agus gach breitheamh den Ard-Chúirt a ndéanfar an gearán sin chuige nó chuici an gearán sin a fhiosrú<sup>1</sup> agus féadfaidh sé nó sí a ordú don duine a bhfuil an duine sin á choinneáil nó á coinneáil faoina choimeád nó faoina coimeád corp an duine sin a thabhairt i láthair<sup>2</sup> na hArd-Chúirte lá a ainmneofar agus forais a choinneála nó a coinneála<sup>3</sup> a dheimhniú i scríbhinn, agus déanfaidh an Ard-Chúirt, ar chorp an duine sin a thabhairt i láthair<sup>4</sup> na Cúirte agus tar éis caoi<sup>5</sup> a thabhairt don duine a bhfuil sé nó sí á choinneáil nó á coinneáil faoina choimeád nó faoina coimeád an choinneáil a chosaint, a ordú an duine sin a scaoileadh saor ón gcoinneáil sin mura deimhin léi<sup>6</sup> go bhfuiltear á choinneáil nó á coinneáil de réir an dlí.

Variants

- 1 'fiosrú faoin ngearán sin'
- 2 'i láthair os comhair', '... faoina coimeád an duine sin a thabhairt i láthair i bpearsain'
- 3 'na cúiseanna lena choinneáil nó lena coinneáil', 'forais na coinneála sin'
- 4 'i láthair os comhair', 'ar an duine sin a thabhairt i láthair i bpearsain'
- 5 'deis'
- 6 'mura deimhin leis an gCúirt'

ARTICLE 40.4.3<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 40.4.3<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

I gcás duine a deirtear a bheith á choinneáil ina bhrá go haindleathach a thabhairt ina phearsain i láthair na hArd-Chúirte de bhun ordaithe chuige sin arna dhéanamh faoin alt seo agus gur deimhin leis an gCúirt sin an duine sin a bheith á choinneáil ina bhrá de réir dlí áirithe ach an dlí sin a bheith neamhbhailí ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo, ní foláir don Ard-Chúirt an cheist sin bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar an dlí sin a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí i bhfoirm cháis ríofa agus féadfaidh, le linn an cheist sin a chur faoi bhreith amhlaidh nó tráth ar bith ina dhiaidh sin, ligean don duine sin a shaoirse a bheith aige, faoi réir na mbannaí agus na gcoinníollacha sin a cheapfaidh an Ard-Chúirt go dtí go dtabharfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach breith ar an gceist a chuirfear faoina breith amhlaidh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In a case of a person who is said to be being unlawfully kept a prisoner's being brought in person before the High Court in pursuance of an order to that effect being made under this section and that the Court is certain that that person is being kept a prisoner in accordance with a particular law but that that law is invalid having regard to the provisions of this Constitution, the High Court must submit that question of whether that law is or is not valid to the Supreme Court for judgement in the form of a stated case and (it) can, while that question is being so submitted for judgement or at any time after that, allow that person to have his freedom, subject to those bonds and conditions that the High Court will appoint until the Supreme Court will give a judgement on the question which will be thus submitted for its judgement.

ENGLISH TEXT

Where the body of a person alleged to be unlawfully detained is produced before the High Court in pursuance of an order in that behalf made under this section and that Court is satisfied that such person is being detained in accordance with a law but that such law is invalid having regard to the provisions of this Constitution, the High Court shall refer the question of the validity of such law to the Supreme Court by way of case stated and may, at the time of such reference or at any time thereafter, allow the said person to be at liberty on such bail and subject to such conditions as the High Court shall fix until the Supreme Court has determined the question so referred to it.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 As in the preceding section, 'body of a person is ... produced' is rendered as 'duine ... a thabhairt ina phearsain' ('a person is brought in person') in the Irish text, 'alleged' is rendered as 'a deirtear' ('stated') and 'unlawfully detained' is rendered as 'á choinneáil ina bhrá go haindleathach' ('unlawfully kept a prisoner').
- 2 'Refer to the Supreme Court' is rendered as 'a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí' ('submit to the Supreme Court for determination') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Case stated' is rendered as 'cás ríofa' in the Irish text, 'cás sonraithe' translating 'case stated' in Téarmaí Dlí; 'by way of (case stated)' is rendered as 'i bhfoirm (cháis ríofa)', 'in the form of (case stated)', in the Irish text.
- 4 'Until the Supreme Court has determined the question' is rendered as 'go dtí go dtabharfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach breith ar an gceist' ('until the Supreme Court will give a judgement on the question') in the Irish text.
- 5 'In accordance with a law' is rendered as 'de réir dlí áirithe' ('in accordance with a certain law') in the Irish text.
- 6 'On such bail and subject to such conditions' is rendered as 'faoi réir na mbannaí agus na gcoinníollacha sin' ('subject to such bail and conditions') in the Irish text.
- 7 'The question of the validity of such law' is rendered as 'an cheist sin bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar an dlí sin' ('that question whether that law is valid or is not valid') in the Irish text.

- 8 Again 'shall' (in 'shall refer') is rendered as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text.

Note that this subsection was inserted by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941 – see the commentary on Article 40.4.2°.

Commentary

i bhfoirm cháis ríofa On two counts, according to the official standard, 'cháis' would remain unlenited here; firstly, after the prepositional phrase, an indefinite noun remains unlenited (see An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, p. 83, s5), and secondly, 'ríofa' functions adjectivally here and therefore 'cás' in the genitive following the noun 'foirm' would be treated like 'gaoth' and 'cos' in the examples 'oíche gaoithe móire' and 'scian coise duibhe' cited in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil (p. 84, s6(I)(c)).

'Cuntas ríofa' is translated as 'account stated' in Téarmaí Dlí, the verb 'ríomhaim' being translated as 'I compute'. 'Ríofa' is the genitive singular of the verbal noun of the verb 'ríomh', which verb is translated as (1) 'count, enumerate; reckon, calculate, compute' and (2) 'recount, narrate' in Ó Dónaill. 'Ríomhtha' is translated as 'reckoned, accounted, narrated' in Dinneen, who cites 'réime ríomhtha ríoghradh is réacsa, the developed lists of kings and monarchs'. DIL translates 'rimid' as (a) 'counts, reckons, estimates' and (b) 'recounts, relates', giving examples from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster and from later sources.

In s10 of the Finance Act, 1944, 'case stated' is translated as 'cás ríofa'. 'Case stated' is translated as 'cás sonraithe' in Téarmaí Dlí, however, following the Fourth Irish Legal Terms Order of 1949. In s9(v) of the Finance Act, 1983, 'and any case stated by a judge pursuant to the said s428 shall set forth the facts, the determination of the Appeal Commissioners and the determination of the judge' is translated as 'agus in aon chás a shonróidh breitheamh de bhun an ailt sin 428 leagfar amach na fíorais, cinneadh na gCoimisinéirí Achomhairc agus cinneadh an bhreithimh'. 'The case stated' and 'notice requiring a case stated' are translated respectively as 'an chás sonraithe' and 'fógra á iarraidh cás a shonrú' in Fasaigh Dlí-Théarmaí (the references given being 431/47 F.A 10 and F.A 6 respectively). 'Foras ríofa' translates 'basis of calculation' in s10(1)(c) of the Decimal Currency Act, 1970.

As regards 'i bhfoirm', 'comhaontú i bhfoirm chomhréitigh' is translated as 'agreement by way of compromise' in Téarmaí Dlí. Literally this phrase translates 'in (the) form of' – 'probate in common form', for example, is translated as 'probháid i bhfoirm choiteann' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Ar mhodh' regularly translates 'by way of' in the Acts – see, for example, s109(a)(vii) of the Finance Act, 1983, where 'where action by way of court proceedings has been taken' is translated as 'i gcás caingean ar mhodh imeachtaí cúirte a bheith tionscanta'. 'By way of distraint' is translated as 'ar mhodh tochsail' in s151(8)(c) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976, and in s18 of the Criminal Law (Jurisdiction Act) of the same year 'by way of sworn deposition' is translated as 'ar mhodh teistíochta faoi mhíon'. We also find 'i modh', 'mar' and 'trí'.

a chur faoi bhreith Ó Dónaill translates 'cuir faoi' literally as 'put under', giving 'submit to' as a secondary sense, citing 'cuir faoi do choimirce iad, place them under your protection' and 'cuireadh faoi ghúí an phobail é, the prayers of the congregation were asked for him'. Ó Dónaill also cites 'cuireadh an taibhse faoi chónaí, the ghost was laid'. Ó Dónaill s.v. 'breith', translates 'cás a chur faoi bhreith duine' as 'to submit a case to someone for determination'. Dinneen translates 'cuirim' with 'fá' and noun as 'I bind, restrain, etc.' and cites 'cuirim fá bhreitheamhnas aithrige, I enjoin as a penance upon'. In Statutory Instrument 48/111, 'submission by deed' is translated as 'cur faoi bhreith trí ghníomhas'. See the commentary on Articles 26 and 46.2.

Turning to 'refer', see the commentary on Article 22.2.2° where 'refer' is expressed as 'cuir faoi bhráid'. 'I refer (a case to the County Registrar, etc.)' is translated as 'tarchuirim (cás chun an Chláraitheora Chontae, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí. In s15 of the Electricity (Supply) (Amendment) Act, 1949, 'which section relates to the reference of disputes to the Tribunal established pursuant to that Act' is translated as 'alt a bhaineas le díospóidí a tharchur chun an Bhinse a bunaíodh de bhun an Achta sin'. In s9(11)(B)(f) of the Finance Act, 1983, to refer his application to the Appeal Commissioners' is translated as 'a iarratas a tharchur chun na gCoimisinéirí Ioncaim'. In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 68), 'The Court of First Instance shall not be competent to hear and determine questions referred for a preliminary ruling under Article 177' is translated as 'Ní bheidh an Chúirt Chéadchéime inniúil ceisteanna a tharchuirtear chun réamhrialú de bhun Airteagal 177 a éisteacht agus a chinneadh'. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 726), 'the decision of the court or tribunal of a Member State which suspends its proceedings and refers a case to the Court' is translated as 'nuair a chinnfidh cúirt nó binse de chuid Ballstáit ar a himeachtaí a fhionraí agus cás a tharchur chun na Cúirte'. As regards 'reference' towards the end of the section, see, for example 'reference order' in Téarmaí Dlí, translated as 'ordú tarchurtha', 'barántas tarchuir' translating 'transmit warrant'.

an cheist sin See, for example, s12 of the Liability for Defective Products Act, 1991, where 'Section 1 of the Courts Act, 1988, shall apply to ... a question of fact or an issue arising in such an action' is translated as 'Beidh feidhm ag alt 1 d'Acht na gCúirteanna, 1988, maidir le ... ceist fíorais nó saincheist a éireoidh i gcaingean den sórt sin'. In s10(c) of the Finance Act, 1990, 'Provided that ... the question of whether a trade is being carried on shall be determined without regard to this subsection' is translated as 'Ar choinnioll go ndéanfar ... an cheist i dtaobh trádáil a bheith á seoladh a chinneadh gan féachaint don alt seo'. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 1476), 'The question of exports of sugar from India to the Community ... must be settled by the Community' is translated as 'Déanfaidh an Comhphobal an cheist i dtaobh onnmhairí siúcra ón India chun an Chomhphobail ... a rialú ...'. See further the commentary on Article 22.2.2°.

a cheapfaidh 'Ceapaim' is translated as 'I appoint' in Téarmaí Dlí. Among the senses given in Ó Dónaill are 'fashion, shape, invent' and 'appoint, assign', with 'cheap sé aimsir chuige' translated as 'he fixed a time for it', while Dinneen includes 'resolve, determine on' s.v. 'ceapaim', citing 'do cheapas lá don chruinniughadh, I fixed upon a day for the assembly'. See the commentary on Articles 6.1, 13.1.1°, 15.10 and 34.4.5°, where this verb expresses respectively 'designate', 'appoint', 'attach' and 'direct', and see the commentary on Article 16.2.2° where 'fix' is expressed as 'socráigh'.

In s23(2) of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997), 'Such motion shall fix the period of suspension' is translated as 'Ceapfar tréimhse na fionraíochta leis an tairiscint sin'. In s78, however, 'such motion shall ... fix the number of members to serve on it' is translated as 'sa tairiscint sin ... socrófar an líon comhaltaí atá le fónamh air' and the heading above s125, 'Orders fixing date for next Stage of Bills', is translated as 'Orduithe ag socrú dáta don chéad chéim eile de Bhilí'. The standard phrase in the Acts, 'This Act shall come into operation on such day or days as may be fixed therefore by any order or orders of the Minister', in s2 of the Road Traffic Act, 1961, for example, is translated as 'Tiocfaidh an tAcht seo i ngníomh cibé lá nó laethanta a shocrófar chuige sin le hordú nó le horduithe ón Aire'. Note that in Article 40.4.5°, '(in ionad) an lae a socraíodh i dtosach' expresses 'the day originally fixed' and 'ceapfaidh an Ard-Chúirt lá' expresses 'the High Court shall appoint a day'.

Note, finally, that a comma follows the phrase 'a cheapfaidh an Ard-Chúirt' in the original Amendment.

le linn (an) This phrase usually translates 'in' in the sense of 'in the course of, while' in the Acts – see, for example, s26(5) of the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975, where 'in the course of dissolving or winding up the company' is translated as 'le linn an chuideachta a bheith á díoscaoileadh nó á foirceannadh'. In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 37), 'during the second stage' is translated as 'le linn an dara céim' – on p. 210, however, 'at the time of signature of these texts' is translated as 'tráth sinithe na dtéacsanna sin'. In s316 of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act, 1959, 'it shall not be necessary for the said Justice ... to pronounce the fact of such forfeiture at the time of adjudication' is translated as 'ní gá don Bhreitheamh sin ... an forghéilleadh sin a fhógairt tráth an bhreithnithe'. See the commentary on Articles 12.9 (where this phrase expresses 'during') and 15.5 (where 'le linn' expresses 'at the date of').

ligean don duine sin a shaoirse a bheith aige Literally 'to allow that person to have his liberty/freedom'. See the commentary on Article 45.2.iii regarding 'lig do'. In s1(c) of the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923, 'that he is satisfied that the public safety is endangered by such person being allowed to remain at liberty' is translated as 'gur deimhin leis an tsábháiltacht phuiblí do bheith i gcontúirt de bharr leigint don duine sin a shaoirse do bheith aige'. 'That the public safety would be endangered by such person being set at liberty' is translated as 'gur chontúirt don tsábháiltacht phuiblí an duine sin do leigint chun siúil' in s3(1)(b) of the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923. 'To allow him to be at liberty on such bail' is translated as 'leigint dó bheith saor fé sna bannaí sin' in s45(3) of the Offences Against the State Act, 1939. See De Bhaldraithe who translates 'at liberty' as 'saor' and 'to set someone at liberty' as 'duine a scaoileadh saor; cead a chinn a thabhairt do dhuine'. See further the commentary on Article 40.6.1°.

faoi réir na mbannaí 'I admit to bail' and 'I go bail for' are translated respectively as 'ligim faoi bhannaí' and 'téim faoi bhannaí' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'on bail' translated as 'faoi bhannaí'. In the Fisheries (Amendment) Act, 1978, 'the release on bail' is translated as 'a scaoileadh amach ar bannaí'.

go dtí go dtabharfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach breith Literally, 'until the High Court will give a judgement'. See the commentary on Article 15.11.1° where 'determine' is expressed as 'breith a thabhairt'. 'I determine (issue, etc.)' is translated as 'cinnim' in Téarmaí Dlí. See, for example, s9(d) of the Fourth Schedule to the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975, where 'enabling any such person to have the matter determined by the tribunal having jurisdiction to determine that matter if arising on an appeal against an assessment' is translated as 'a chumasóidh d'aon duine den sórt sin an t-ábhar a chur á chinneadh ag an mbinse ag a mbeidh dlínse an t-ábhar sin a chinneadh má bhíonn an t-ábhar sin ann de bharr achomharc in aghaidh measúnachta'. See the commentary on Article 1 where 'determine' is expressed by 'cinn'.

bail 'Maidir leis an gceist sin bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar aon dlí áirithe' expresses 'the question of the validity of any law' in Article 34.3.2°. 'Validity' is given as the final sense of 'bail' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ionas go mbeadh bail ar a fhaoistin, so that his confession might be valid' – see the commentary on Articles 15.4.2° and 37.2. DIL gives the principal sense of 'bal' as 'state (of affairs), condition, situation', with the secondary sense of 'prosperity, good luck, good effect'.

'Validity' is translated as 'bailíocht' in Téarmaí Dlí. In s10(1) of the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, 'The returning officer shall rule on the validity of each nomination paper within one hour after its delivery to him and may rule that it is invalid ...' is translated as 'Tabharfaidh an ceann comhairimh rialú ar bhailíocht gach páipéar ainmniúcháin laistigh d'uair a chloig tar éis a sheachadta dó, agus féadfaidh sé a rialú go bhfuil sé neamhbhailí...'. 'Bailíocht' is cited as translating 'validity' in s14(2) of the National Health Insurance Act, 1942. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 40), 'The Court shall have sole jurisdiction to give preliminary rulings on the validity of acts of the High Authority and of the Council where such validity is in issue in proceedings brought before a national court or tribunal' is translated as 'Is ag an gCúirt amháin a bheidh dlínse chun réamhrialú a thabhairt ar bhailíocht ghníomhartha an Ard-Údaráis agus na Comhairle i gcás an bhailíocht sin a bheith i saincheist in imeachtaí a thabharfar os comhair cúirte nó binse náisiúnta'.

neamhbhailí This compound is translated as 'invalid' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill. See the commentary on Articles 15.4.2° and 37.2 where 'invalid' is expressed respectively as 'gan bhail' and 'ó bhail'.

a deirtear See the commentary on the previous subsection and note that in s8(2) of the Larceny Act, 1990, 'handling property alleged to have been stolen' is translated as 'láimhseáil maoine a líomhnaítear a bheith goidte'.

go haindleathach See the commentary on the previous subsection.

a thabhairt ina phearsain i láthair See the commentary on the previous subsection.

á choinneáil ina bhrá See the commentary on the previous subsection.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

I gcás duine a deirtear a bheith á choinneáil ina bhrá nó á coinneáil ina brá go haindeleathach a thabhairt ina phearsa nó ina pearsa i láthair na hArd-Chúirte de bhun ordaithe chuige sin arna dhéanamh faoin alt seo agus gur deimhin leis an gCúirt sin an duine sin a bheith á choinneáil ina bhrá nó á coinneáil ina brá de réir dlí áirithe ach an dlí sin a bheith neamhbhailí ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreachta seo, ní foláir don Ard-Chúirt an cheist sin bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar an dlí sin a chur faoi bhreith na Cúirte Uachtaraí i bhfoirm cáis riofa agus féadfaidh, le linn an cheist sin a chur faoi bhreith amhlaidh nó tráth ar bith ina dhiaidh sin, ligean don duine sin a shaoirse a bheith aige nó a saoirse a bheith aici, faoi réir na mbannaí agus na gcoinníollacha sin a cheapfaidh an Ard-Chúirt go dtí go dtabharfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach breith ar an gceist a chuirfear faoina breith amhlaidh.

Direct gender-proofed translation

I gcás corp duine a líomhnaítear a bheith á choinneáil nó á coinneáil go neamhdhleathach a thabhairt i láthair<sup>1</sup> na hArd-Chúirte de bhun ordaithe chuige sin arna dhéanamh faoin alt seo agus gur deimhin leis an gCúirt go bhfuil an duine sin á choinneáil nó á coinneáil de réir dlí ach go bhfuil an dlí sin neamhbhailí ag féachaint d'fhorálacha an Bhunreachta seo, déanfaidh an Ard-Chúirt an cheist i dtaobh bhailíocht an dlí sin a tharchur chun na Cúirte Uachtaraí ar mhodh cáis shonraithe agus féadfaidh an Ard-Chúirt, tráth an tarchurtha sin nó tráth ar bith ina dhiaidh sin, saoirse a thabhairt don duine sin<sup>2</sup>, ar cibé bannaí agus faoi réir cibé coinníollacha a shocróidh<sup>3</sup> an Ard-Chúirt go dtí go ndéanfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach cinneadh faoin gceist<sup>4</sup> a tharchuirfear chuici amhlaidh<sup>5</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'i láthair os comhair', 'I gcás duine a líomhnaítear a bheith á choinneáil nó á coinneáil go neamhdhleathach a thabhairt i láthair i bpearsain'
- 2 'ligean don duine sin a shaoirse a bheith aige, nó a saoirse a bheith aici', 'an duine sin a scaoileadh saor', 'ligean don duine sin a bheith saor'
- 3 'a cheapfaidh'
- 4 'go dtí go dtabharfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach breith ar an gceist', 'go dtí go gcinnfidh an Chúirt Uachtarach an cheist'
- 5 'go dtí go ndéanfaidh an Chúirt Uachtarach an cheist a tharchuirfear chuici amhlaidh a chinneadh'

ARTICLE 40.4.4<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 40.4.4<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Is triúr breitheamh is Ard-Chúirt in aon chás áirithe, ina ndéantar duine a deirtear a bheith á choinneáil ina bhrá go haindeleathach a thabhairt ina phearsain i láthair na hArd-Chúirte de bhun ordaithe chuige sin arna dhéanamh faoin alt seo, má dhéanann Uachtarán na hArd-Chúirte nó, mura mbeidh seisean ar fáil, an breitheamh is sinsearaí den Chúirt sin dá mbeidh ar fáil a ordú, i dtaobh an cháis sin, an líon sin a bheith inti agus is breitheamh amháin is Ard-Chúirt i ngach cás eile den sórt sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Three judges constitute a High Court in any particular case, in which a person who is said to be being kept a prisoner unlawfully is brought in person before the High Court in pursuance of an order to that effect made under this section, if the President of the High Court or, if he is not available, the most senior judge of that Court who is / will be available orders, as regards that case, that it have that complement and one judge constitutes a High Court in every other case of that kind.

ENGLISH TEXT

The High Court before which the body of a person alleged to be unlawfully detained is to be produced in pursuance of an order in that behalf made under this section shall, if the President of the High Court or, if he is not available, the senior judge of that Court who is available so directs in respect of any particular case, consist of three judges and shall, in every other case, consist of one judge only.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The High Court ... shall, if the President of the High Court ... so directs in respect of any particular case, consist of three judges and shall, in every other case, consist of one judge only' is rendered in the Irish text as 'Is triúr breitheamh is Ard-Chúirt in aon chás áirithe ... má dhéanann Uachtarán na hArd-Chúirte ... a ordú, i dtaobh an cháis sin, an líon sin a bheith inti agus is breitheamh amháin is Ard-Chúirt i ngach cás eile den sórt sin' ('The High Court consists of three judges / Three judges constitute a High Court in any particular case if the President of the High Court directs/orders, as regards that case, that it have that complement and the High Court consists of one judge / one judge constitutes a High Court in every other case of that kind').
- 2 'The senior judge' is rendered as 'an breitheamh is sinsearaí' ('the most senior judge') in the Irish text and 'in every other case' is rendered as 'i ngach cás eile den sórt sin', 'in every other case of that kind'.
- 3 As in the two previous subsections, 'a deirtear' ('stated') renders 'alleged' in the Irish text, 'a bheith á choinneáil ina bhrá go haindeleathach' ('unlawfully kept a prisoner') renders 'unlawfully detained' and 'a thabhairt ina phearsain' ('being brought in person') renders 'the body is to be produced'.

Note that this subsection was added to the text by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941 – see the commentary on Article 40.4.2<sup>o</sup>.

Commentary

a ordú 'Ordaim' is translated as 'I order' in Téarmaí Dlí and 'orduighim' is translated as 'I order, ordain, appoint, decree, plan, dispose, direct, prescribe, arrange, wish, command ...' in Dinneen. 'Ordaigh' is translated as 'order' in Ó Dónaill. The Old Irish deponent verb 'ord(d)aigidir' is based on the noun 'ord', a learned loanword from Latin 'ordo', and is translated as 'orders, ordains, institutes', 'appoints (to an office)' and 'assigns, allots' in DIL, where examples are cited from the eighth-century Glosses onwards. See the commentary on Article 25.4.2°.

Moving on to today, in Fasaigh Dlí-Théarmaí, 'It is hereby ordered and directed' is translated as 'ordaítear leis seo' and 'the payments directed to be made' is translated as 'na híocáíochtaí a ordáíodh'. See the commentary on Article 34.4.5° where 'direct' is rendered by 'ceap'. In s328(2) of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act, 1959, 'All things which by this Act are directed to be done by ... any person' is translated as 'Gach ní a ordáítear leis an Acht seo a dhéanamh ag aon duine'. 'I direct (jury)' is translated as 'treoraím' in Téarmaí Dlí with 'direction (by judge)' translated as 'treorú'. In s79(1)(b) of the Pensions Act, 1990, 'the Court may by order direct the person' is translated as 'féadfaidh an Chúirt le hordú a threorú don duine...'. In Form 4 in the Schedule of Forms to Statutory Instrument No. 96 of 1976 (District Court [Family Law (Maintenance of Spouses and Children) Act, 1976] Rules, 1976), 'The Court Directs that the payments aforesaid be made to the District Court Clerk' is translated as 'Treoraíonn an Chúirt go n-íocfar na híocáíochtaí réamhráite leis an gCléireach Cúirte Dúiche'. Preceding this we find 'The Court Hereby Orders ...' translated as 'Ordaíonn an Chúirt leis seo'.

an breitheamh is sinsearaí Literally, 'the most senior judge'. 'Senior counsel' is translated as 'abhcóide sinsir' in Téarmaí Dlí – in s15(2) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1953, for example, 'of whom one shall be of the Senior Bar' is translated as 'agus duine díobh sin ina Abhcóide Sinsir'. In Titles (in Irish and English) of Civil Service Posts (1938), however, 'senior' is consistently rendered as 'sinsearach', from 'Senior Architectural Draughtsman' ('Línitheoir Sinnsearach Ailtireachta') to 'Senior Court Clerk' ('Cléireach Cúirte Sinnsearach') to 'Senior Legal Clerk' ('Cléireach Dlíghídh Sinnsearach') to 'Senior Translator' ('Aistrightheoir Sinnsearach'). In the Third Schedule to the Defence Act, 1954, 'Senior Chief Petty Officer' is styled in Irish 'Ard-Mhion-Oifigeach Sinsearach'. See the commentary on Article 34.5.2° where 'i láthair ... an bhreithimh den Chúirt Uachtarach is sinsearaí dá mbeidh ar fáil' expresses 'in the presence of ... the senior available judge of the Supreme Court'.

Is ... is See the commentary on Article 2 regarding 'consist' in the Acts. Note for example that 'Aon teagmhas ar diúscairt sócmhainne a bheadh ann ar leith ó mhír 2 ... is diúscairt den sórt sin í d'fhonn a chinneadh ...' translates 'An event which, apart from paragraph 2 ... would constitute a disposal of an asset shall constitute such a disposal for the purpose of determining ...' in s64(5) of the Finance Act, 1990. Note also that a comma follows the phrase 'is breitheamh amháin' in the original text.

Ard-Chúirt Unlike the previous subsection, there is no 'sineadh fada' on the 'A' in 'Ard-Chúirt', either in this or in the following subsection, in the text as published in the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941.

a deirtear See the commentary on Article 40.4.2°.

á choinneáil ina bhrá See the commentary on Article 40.4.2°.

go haindleathach See the commentary on Article 40.4.2°.

a thabhairt ina phearsain See the commentary on Article 40.4.2°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Is tríúr breitheamh is Ard-Chúirt in aon chás áirithe, ina ndéantar duine a deirtear a bheith á choinneáil ina bhrá nó á coinneáil ina brá go haindleathach a thabhairt ina phearsa nó ina pearsa i láthair na hArd-Chúirte de bhun ordaithe chuige sin arna dhéanamh faoin alt seo, má dhéanann Uachtarán na hArd-Chúirte nó, mura mbeidh seisean nó sise ar fáil, an breitheamh is sinsearaí den Chúirt sin dá mbeidh ar fáil a ordú, i dtaobh an cháis sin, an líon sin a bheith inti agus is breitheamh amháin is Ard-Chúirt i ngach cás eile den sórt sin.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Tríúr Breitheamh a bheidh san Ard-Chúirt a ndéanfar corp duine a líomhnaítear a bheith á choinneáil nó á coinneáil go neamhdhleathach a thabhairt ina láthair<sup>1</sup> de bhun ordaithe chuige sin arna dhéanamh faoin alt seo, más rud é go dtreoróidh<sup>2</sup> Uachtarán na hArd-Chúirte nó, mura mbeidh seisean nó sise ar fáil, an breitheamh is sinsearaí<sup>3</sup> den Chúirt a bheidh ar fáil, amhlaidh i leith aon cháis ar leith agus ní bheidh ach breitheamh amháin inti i ngach cás eile.

Variants

- <sup>1</sup> 'i láthair os a comhair', 'a ndéanfar duine a líomhnaítear a bheith á choinneáil nó á coinneáil go neamhdhleathach a thabhairt ina láthair i bpearsain / a thabhairt i bpearsain ina láthair'
- <sup>2</sup> 'go n-ordóidh'
- <sup>3</sup> 'cibé breitheamh sinsearach'

ARTICLE 40.4.5° AIRTEAGAL 40.4.5°

TÉACS GAELIGE

I gcás an Ard-Chúirt nó breitheamh di do dhéanamh ordaithe faoin alt seo á ordú duine faoi bhreith bháis a thabhairt i láthair ina phearsain, ní foláir don Ard-Chúirt nó don bhreitheamh sin di a ordú freisin feidhmiú na breithe báis sin a mhoilliú go dtí go dtabharfar an duine sin ina phearsain i láthair na hArd-Chúirte agus go gcinnefar an dleathach an duine sin a choinneáil ina bhrá nó nach dleathach agus má chinntear, tar éis an fheidhmithe sin a mhoilliú, gur dleathach an duine sin a choinneáil ina bhrá, ceapfaidh an Ard-Chúirt lá chun an bhreith bháis sin a fheidhmiú agus beidh éifeacht ag an mbreith bháis sin faoi réir an lá a cheapfar amhlaidh a chur in ionad an lae a socraíodh i dtosach chun an bhreith bháis sin a fheidhmiú.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In the case of the High Court or a judge of it making an order under this section ordering a person under sentence of death to be brought before (it) in person, the High Court or that judge of it must also order that the exercise of that death sentence be delayed until that person is brought in person before the High Court and it is determined whether it is lawful to keep that person a prisoner or it is not lawful and if it is determined, after delaying that implementation, that it is lawful to keep that person a prisoner, the High Court will appoint a day to implement that death sentence and that death sentence will have effect subject to the day so appointed being put in place of the day which was first arranged to implement that death sentence.

ENGLISH TEXT

Where an order is made under this section by the High Court or a judge thereof for the production of the body of a person who is under sentence of death, the High Court or such judge thereof shall further order that the execution of the said sentence of death shall be deferred until after the body of such person has been produced before the High Court and the lawfulness of his detention has been determined and if, after such deferment, the detention of such person is determined to be lawful, the High Court shall appoint a day for the execution of the said sentence of death and that sentence shall have effect with the substitution of the day so appointed for the day originally fixed for the execution thereof.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Until after the body of such person has been produced' is rendered in the Irish text as 'go dtí go dtabharfar an duine sin ina phearsain i láthair', 'until the (body of) such person is produced'.
- 2 'Be deferred' is rendered as 'a mhoilliú' ('be delayed') in the Irish text, and 'after such deferment' as 'tar éis an fheidhmithe sin a mhoilliú', 'after that implementation has been delayed'.
- 3 'Execution of the ... sentence' is rendered as 'an bhreith ... a fheidhmiú' ('implementation of ... the sentence'), the term translating 'execution' in Téarmaí Dlí being 'forghníomhú'.
- 4 'That sentence' is twice rendered as 'an bhreith bháis sin' ('that death sentence') in the Irish text.
- 5 'The lawfulness of his detention' is rendered as 'an dleathach an duine sin a choinneáil ina bhrá nó nach dleathach' ('whether it is lawful to keep that person a prisoner or not [lit. or it is not lawful]) in the Irish text.
- 6 'Sentence of death' is rendered in the Irish text more literally as 'breith bháis' ('judgement of death'), 'sentence' being translated by the compound 'pianbhreith' rather than the component 'breith' in Téarmaí Dlí, although Ó Dónaill also cites 'breith bháis' (along with 'breithiúnas báis') as 'death sentence' and we find this phrase 'breith bháis' in some earlier Acts.
- 7 'The production of the body of a person' is rendered as 'duine a thabhairt i láthair ina phearsain' ('the production of a body in person') in the Irish text, based on the previous subsection.
- 8 'Originally' is rendered as 'i dtosach' ('at first') in the Irish text.
- 9 'Where an order is made ... for ...' is rendered in the Irish text as 'I gcás ... do dhéanamh ordaithe ... á ordú' ('Where an order is made ... ordering').
- 10 'Freisin' ('Also') renders 'further' in the Irish text.

- 11 'With the substitution' is rendered as 'faoi réir ... a chur in ionad' ('subject to the substitution') in the Irish text.
- 12 'Shall' is rendered as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we have seen in other Articles also.

Note that this subsection was added to the text by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941 – see the commentary on Article 40.4.2°.

Commentary

faoi bhreith bháis 'Cion báis' and 'pionós báis' are translated respectively as 'capital offence' and 'capital punishment' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'dearbhu i mbéal báis' being translated as 'dying declaration' and 'dleachtanna báis' being translated as 'death duties'. 'Breith' is translated simply as 'decision' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'breith' as 'judgement, decision' and translates both 'breith bháis' and 'breithiúnas báis' as 'sentence of death'. Dinneen translates 'breith' as 'judgment, decision, sentence; doom, fate'. DIL gives 'act of judging, deciding; judgment, legal ruling, interpretation' as one of the senses of 'breith' – another of which is 'birth', this being the verbal noun of 'beirid' – citing examples of this sense from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards.

'Cur faoi bhreith trí ghníomhas' translates 'submission by deed' in Statutory Instrument 48/111. In Téarmaí Dlí 'I sentence' is translated as 'cuirim pianbhreith ar', with 'sentence' translated as 'pianbhreith' and 'the sentences to run concurrently (consecutively)' as 'na pianbhreitheanna le rith i gcomhthráth (as a chéile)'. In s3(1)(c) of the Criminal Law (Jurisdiction) Act, 1976, for example, 'while serving a sentence imposed on his conviction for that offence' is translated as 'le linn dó a bheith ag cur isteach pianbhreithe a tugadh air ar é a chiontú sa chion sin'. In s14 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act, 1978, 'Where a person is sent forward for trial or for sentence by a District Justice to a court other than the District Court' is translated as 'I gcás Breitheamh Dúiche do chur duine ar aghaidh chun a thrialach nó le go dtabharfaí pianbhreith air chuig cúirt seachas an Chúirt Dúiche'. In s4(6) of the Second Schedule to the Restrictive Practices Act, 1972, 'or is sentenced by a court of competent jurisdiction to suffer imprisonment or penal servitude' is translated as 'nó má chuireann cúirt dlínse inniúla pianbhreith príosúnachta nó pianseirbhíse air'.

'Death sentence' is translated as 'breith bháis' in the Margin Title of s103 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, which section reads as follows:

Sentence of death shall not be awarded save with the concurrence of three-fourths, or more, of the members of the Court. Ní gearrfar breith bháis ach le toil trí cheathrú cuid, nó breis, de bhaill na Cúirte.

In s53 of the Court Officers Act, 1926, the title 'Execution of death sentences' is translated as 'Feidhmiú breitheanna báis' and 'It shall not henceforth be the duty of any under-sheriff to carry into effect sentences of death imposed by courts of justice' is translated as 'Ní bheidh sé de dhualgas feasta ar aon fho-shirriam breitheanna báis do thug cúirteanna breithiúnais do chur in éifeacht'. In s6(1) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1928, 'In the case of a sentence of death or corporal punishment' is translated as ‘I gcás breithe báis nó breithe pionóis chuirp’ and in s6(2) ‘in the case of a conviction involving sentence of death’ is translated as ‘i gcás ciontú as a leanfadh breith bháis.’ ‘Sentence of death’ in the heading for s227 of the Defence Act, 1954, is translated as ‘Pianbhreith bháis’ and subsection (1), ‘A sentence of death passed by a court-martial and confirmed shall not be carried out unless and until the execution of the sentence has been approved by the Government’ is translated as ‘Ní cuirfear pianbhreith bháis a bhéarfais armchúirt, agus a daingneofar, i bhfeidhm mura gceadaí ná go dtí go gceadóidh an Rialtas an phianbhreith a chur i bhfeidhm’. Finally, ‘Postponement of execution of sentence of death’ is translated as ‘Forghníomhú pianbhreithe báis a iarchur’ in the Margin Title of s21 of the Courts-Martial Appeals Act, 1983, the section commencing as follows:

In the case of a sentence of death passed by a court-martial .... I gcás pianbhreith bháis arna gearradh ag armchúirt.

i dtosach ‘Tosach’ is translated as ‘commencement’ in Téarmaí Dlí. In s54(5)(a) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, ‘he may make such an order in the form originally proposed’ is translated as ‘féadfaidh sé ordú den sórt sin a dhéanamh san fhoirm a beartaíodh i dtosach’ and in s41(1) of the Finance Act, 1990, ‘where such equipment or subassemblies were originally manufactured by that company’ is translated as ‘i gcás go mba í an chuideachta sin ... a mhonaraigh an trealamh nó na fo-dhiolamaí sin i dtosach’. In s3(9)(c) of the Companies Act, 1963, however, ‘either as originally contained in that Section or as altered in pursuance of section 71 of that Act’ is translated as ‘mar a bhí i gcéadúair sa Sceideal sin nó mar a athraíodh é de bhun alt 71 den Acht sin’ and in s8(2) of the Income Tax Act, 1967, ‘as if it were a debt due from the person as against whom the deduction could originally have been made if the Act imposing tax for the year had been in force’ is translated as ‘ionann agus dá mba fhiach í a bhí dlite den duine ar ina choinne a fhéadfaí an asbhaint a dhéanamh i gcéadúair dá mbeadh an tAcht a d’fhorchuir an cháin don bhliain i bhfeidhm’. ‘I gcéadúair’ also translates ‘first’ in the Acts. Note, finally, that in s11 of the Unemployment Insurance Act, 1923, ‘under clause (a) of sub-section (1) of the said section 17 as originally enacted’ is translated as ‘fé chlás (a) d’fho-alt (1) den alt san 17 mar a achtuódh ar dtús é’.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that, while ‘i gcéadúair’ is fine as a translation of ‘originally’, it often has the sense of ‘immediately’ (“láithreach”) – see Dinneen s.v. ‘céadóir’, Ó Dónaill, id. Neither gives evidence of the sense of ‘originally’. Professor Ó Murchú recommends ‘ar dtús’ as an alternative.

a ordú freisin Literally ‘to order also’. Note how ‘further order’ is translated as ‘ordú eile’ in s18(4) of the Finance Act, 1983. While ‘thairis sin’ translates ‘otherwise’ in the Acts, it is translated as ‘moreover’ in Ó Dónaill and we find ‘but not further manufactured’, ‘but not further prepared’ and ‘but not further worked’ translated respectively as ‘gan monarú thairis sin air’, ‘ach gan ullmhú thairis sin air’ and ‘ach gan oibriú thairis sin orthu’ in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, pp. 1348, 1247 and 658), ‘thairis sin’ translating ‘furthermore’ on

p. 955. See also De Bhaldraithe s.v. ‘further’ 1(d), where he translates this adverb as ‘fós, thairis sin’, translating ‘and further, I think it right that ...’ as ‘agus thairis sin, is dóigh liom go mba cheart go ...’.

feidhmiú ... an fheidhmithe According to the official standard, ‘feidhmiú’ would not become ‘an fheidhmithe sin’ when followed by the verbal noun, but would read as ‘tar éis an feidhmiú sin a mhoilliú’ – see s2.2 of the chapter headed ‘Form of the Nominative instead of the Genitive’ in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil (p. 94 [translated by the author]): ‘When a noun or a nominal phrase is joined by the preposition a (<do) to a following verbal noun the noun is left in the nominative following a word or form which takes the genitive’.

‘Cuirim i bhfeidhm’ is translated as ‘I enforce’ in Téarmaí Dlí and ‘i bhfeidhm’ as ‘in force’. ‘Feidhmiú’, verbal noun of ‘feidhmigh’, is translated as ‘act of functioning, execution, enforcement, operation, application’, with ‘feidhmiú dlí’ translated as ‘law enforcement’ and ‘feidhmiú cumhachta’ as ‘exercise of authority’, in Ó Dónaill. ‘Feidhm-iughadh’ is translated as ‘act of accomplishing, putting into force, carry out’ in Dinneen. The verb ‘feidhmigh’ is based on ‘feidm’, the primary sense of which, according to DIL, seems to be ‘load, stress, strain’, passing into the senses of ‘utmost effort, effort, extension; burden, service, function’ – see the commentary on Article 45.

In s6(2) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1928, ‘the Court shall fix a day for the execution of the sentence’ is translated as ‘ceapfidh an Chúirt lá chun an bhreith do chur i bhfeidhm’ and ‘the sentence pronounced at the trial shall have effect as if, for the day therein mentioned, the day fixed in pursuance of this sub-section were substituted’ is translated as ‘agus beidh éifeacht ag an mbreith a tugadh ag an triail fé is dá ndintí an lá a ceapfar do réir an fho-ailt seo do chur in ionad an lae do luadhadh sa bhreith sin’. In s53 of the Court Officers Act, 1926, ‘It shall not henceforth be the duty of any under-sherriff to carry into effect sentences of death imposed by courts of justice’ is translated as ‘Ní bheidh sé de dhualgas feasta ar aon fho-shirriam breitheanna báis do thug cúirteanna breithiúnas do chur in éifeacht’. Chapter VIII of the Defence Act, 1954, is entitled ‘Execution of Sentences’, translated as ‘Pianbhreitheanna a chur i bhfeidhm’ and s227(2) reads as follows:

the confirming authority – (a) shall be responsible for the execution of the sentence, and (b) shall direct the manner in which it is to be carried out .... is é an t-údarás daingniúcháin – (a) a bheas freagrach sa phianbhreith a chur i bhfeidhm, agus (b) a threorós an modh ar a gcuirfear i bhfeidhm í.

‘A chur i bhfeidhm’ expresses ‘to secure’ in Article 38.3.1° and ‘enforcement’ in Article 38.4.2°. ‘A fheidhmiú’ renders ‘to exercise’ in the Amendment contained in Articles 29.4.6° and 29.7.2° along with the new Article 3 contained in Article 29.7, but expresses ‘the application of’ in Article 45.

Looking at ‘execution’ in general in early Acts, ‘provided such act, matter or thing was done or in good faith purported to be done in execution of the duty of the person doing the same’ is translated as ‘má dineadh no gur tuigeadh go macánta gur dineadh an gníomh no an rud no an ní sin i bhfeidhmiú dualgais an té a dhin é’ in s1 of the Indemnity (British Military) Act, 1923, with ‘requiring that the wages to be paid ... shall be such as are required in the execution of contracts with a State Department' being translated as 'éileamh gur fé mar is gá i bhfeidhmiú conracha le Roinn Stáit a bheidh an págh a íocfidh ...' in s12(1)(g) of the Local Authorities (Combined Purchasing) Act, 1925.

'I execute (i.e. an order, deed, etc.)' is translated as 'forghníomhaim' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'execution order' is translated as 'ordú forghníomhaithe', with 'affidavit of due execution' being translated as 'mionnscríbhinn fhorghníomhaithe chuí'. In ss(iii) of the Second Schedule to the Finance Act, 1976, 'the carriage of goods in the State by or on behalf of a person in execution of a contract to transfer the goods to or from a place outside the State' is translated as 'iompar earraí sa Stát ag duine nó thar ceann duine i bhforghníomhú conartha chun na hearraí a aistriú go dtí áit nó ó áit lasmuigh den Stát'. In s81 of the Succession Act, 1965, 'a person who attests the execution of a will' is translated as 'duine a fhianóidh forghníomhú uachta'.

a mhoilliú Ó Dónaill translates 'moilligh' as 'delay' and Dinneen translates 'moillighim' as 'I delay, procrastinate, retard'. DIL translates 'mallaigid' as 'makes slow, retards', this verb being based on 'mall', which translates Latin 'tardus' in the Glosses. Note incidentally that while 'malla' is a plural noun referring to animals used as beasts of burden (DIL), 'mall' itself can also be used of women or young persons, in complimentary sense, implying dignity, gentleness or modesty of demeanour – see DIL s.v. 'mall' (e).

Turning to the Acts, in s3(d) of the Second Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1936, 'deferred rights' is translated as 'cearta moillithe'. 'Deferred telegraph' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'telegraf moillithe' in translations for Oifig an Phuist, with 'telegram moille' translating 'deferred telegram' in Iris an Phuist, 22/6/1927. Usually, however, 'moill' translates 'delay' in the Acts – see, for example, s2 of Article 10 of the Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1975, where 'When ... a flight has been delayed or interrupted' is translated as 'Nuair a tharlóidh moill nó briseadh d'eitilt'.

'Deferred share' is translated as 'scair iarchurtha' in Téarmaí Dlí. In s6(2) of the Grass Meal (Production) Act, 1953, 'any preferential, deferred, qualified or special rights, privileges or conditions' is translated as 'aon chearta, pribhléidí nó coinníollacha, tosaíochta nó iarchurtha nó cáilithe nó speisialta'. 'Blianachtaí iarchurtha' translates 'deferred annuities' in s20 of the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975. In s2(5) of the Local Government (Financial Provisions) Act, 1978, 'and which enables a temporary reduction or deferment of a revision of or an increase in a valuation to be made' is translated as 'agus faoinar féidir luacháil a laghdú go sealadach nó athscrúdú luachála a chur siar nó luacháil a mhéadú'. In s3 of the Turf Development Act, 1968, 'Deferment of repayment of advances to Board' is translated as 'Aisíoc airleacan chun an Bhoird a chur siar'. 'Do chur siar' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'defer' in early Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann.

'A chur siar' consistently translates 'to defer' in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973) – see, for example, p. 982, where 'for a period of five years after accession, defer the liberalization ...' is translated as an dleathach ... nó nach dleathach 'Dleathach' is translated as 'lawful' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Dleathacht' is given in Téarmaí Oifigiúla as the translation of 'lawfulness' (without reference), this being given as a variant of 'dleathaíocht' in Ó Dónaill, that headword being translated as 'legality; justice, propriety'. Ó Dónaill translates 'dlíthiúlacht' as 'legality, lawfulness', this merely translating 'legality' in Téarmaí Dlí. Note that 'dleathacht' translates 'validity' in s36(3) of the Local Government Act, 1925, this being translated as 'bailíocht' in Téarmaí Dlí.

'léirscaoileadh a chur siar, ar feadh tréimhse chúig bliana tar éis an aontachais'. On p. 973, 'The Council may ... decide to defer the date laid down in paragraph 1' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an Chomhairle ... cinneadh ar an dáta dá bhforáiltear i mír 1 a chur siar'.

a thabhairt i láthair ... go dtí go dtabharfar ... See the commentary on Article 40.4.2° and note incidentally that Dinneen cites 'tig i láthair, come up, approach'. Regarding 'until after the body ... has been produced', see s21(7) of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann, where 'the interruption shall not take place until after the decision has been declared from the Chair' is translated as 'ní dhéanfar an stopadh go dtí go mbeidh an cinneadh fógartha ón gCathaoir', as against s85 where 'such division ... shall be postponed until after the conclusion of the division in the Dáil' is translated as 'go ndéanfar an vótáil sin ... a chur siar go dtí tar éis chríochnú na vótála sa Dáil'.

breitheamh di We see both 'de' alone and 'de' with repetition of the noun translating 'thereof' in the following from s56(1) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976:

"pigmeat product" means bacon and cuts thereof including ham, pork carcasses and pork sides and cuts thereof .... ciallaíonn "táirge muiceola" bagún agus slisní bagúin lena n-áirítear liamhás, conablaigh mhúiceola agus taobhanna muiceola agus slisní díobh....

'Den chéanna' sometimes translates 'thereof' in the Acts – see, for example, s3(1) of the Sea Pollution Act, 1991, where "'garbage" means all kinds of victual, domestic and operational waste (excluding fresh fish and parts thereof)' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "trufalais" dramháil bhia, dramháil tís agus dramháil oibríochta de gach cineál (gan iasc úr agus codanna den chéanna a áireamh)'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on drafts of direct translations in this study, advises against the use of 'den chéanna'. See further the commentary on Article 8.3.

faoi réir This phrase is translated as 'subject to' in the Acts. 'Ach' is sometimes used to express 'with' in the present context in the Acts – see, for example, s50(11)(b) of the Finance Act, 1983, where 'with the omission of the proviso' is translated as 'ach an coinníoll a fhágáil ar lár'. 'Ach dhá thrian ... do thoiliú leis' expresses 'with the assent of two-thirds' in Article 15.8.2°. 'Agus' is also used to express 'with' – see, for example, s54 of the Finance Act, 1990, where 'a return of ... the profits of the company ... specifying the income taken into account in computing those profits, with the amount from each source' is translated as 'tuairisceán ... ar bhrabúis na cuideachta ... ina sonrú ar an t-ioncam a cuireadh i gcuntas le linn na mbrabús sin a bheith á ríomh agus an méid ó gach bunadh’.

beidh éifeacht ag In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 192) ‘Articles 44 to 48 of the Statute shall have effect ... subject to the following amendments’ is translated as ‘Beidh éifeacht ag ... Airteagail 44 go 48 ... faoi réir na leasuithe seo a leanas’. On p. 191, however, ‘Paragraphs 3 to 9 shall have effect if ...’ is translated as ‘Beidh éifeacht le míreanna 3 go 9 má ...’. ‘Éifeacht le’ is the phrase generally used in the Acts also – see, for example, s36 of the Finance Act, 1990, where ‘The First Schedule shall have effect for the purpose of supplementing subsection (1)’ is translated as ‘Beidh éifeacht leis an gCéad Scedeal chun fo-alt (1) a fhorlónadh’. See the commentary on Article 3 regarding ‘éifeacht’.

do dhéanamh ordaithe ... á ordú In s3(1)(i) of the Family Law (Maintenance of Spouses and Children) Act, 1976, ‘an order for payment of alimony pending suit’ is translated as ‘ordú ag ordú ailiúntas a íoc go dtí go ndéanfar agra’. See also, however, s16(f) of the Judicial Separation and Family Law Reform Act, 1989, where ‘an order for partition of property’ is translated as ‘ordú chun maoin a pháirtíú’. See the commentary on Article 25.4.2° regarding ‘ordú’ (there expressing ‘direction’) and the commentary on Articles 27.2 and 40.4.4° regarding ‘ordaigh’, expressing respectively ‘prescribe’ and ‘direct’.

I gcás ... See, for example from the Acts, s7 of the Regulation of Banks (Remuneration and Conditions of Employment) (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1973, where ‘Where an offence under this Act is committed by a body corporate...’ is translated as ‘I gcás cion a dhéanamh faoin Acht seo ag comhlacht corpraithe’. See the commentary on Articles 12.4.5° and 24.2 respectively where ‘where’ is expressed as ‘nuair’ and ‘má tharlaíonn’.

go gcinnefar ... má chinntear ‘Cinnim’ is translated as ‘I determine (issue, etc.)’ and ‘I find (as a fact)’ in Téarmaí Díl – see the commentary on Articles 1 and 12.11.2°.

Ard-Chúirt Unlike Article 40.4.2°, there is no ‘sineadh fada’ on the initial capital ‘A’ in the original text of this Amendment in the first two citations of ‘Ard-Chúirt’ in this subsection.

ceapfaidh See the commentary on Article 40.3°.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

I gcás an Ard-Chúirt nó breitheamh di a dhéanamh ordaithe faoin alt seo á ordú duine faoi bhreith bháis a thabhairt i láthair ina phearsa nó ina pearsa, ní foláir don Ard-Chúirt nó don bhreitheamh sin di a ordú freisin feidhmiú na breithe báis sin a mhoilliú go dtí go dtabharfar an duine sin ina phearsa nó ina pearsa i láthair na hArd-Chúirte agus go gcinnefar an dleathach an duine sin a choinneáil ina bhrá nó ina brá nó nach dleathach agus má chinntear, tar éis an feidhmiú sin a mhoilliú, gur dleathach an duine sin a choinneáil ina bhrá nó ina brá, ceapfaidh an Ard-Chúirt lá chun an bhreith bháis sin a fheidhmiú agus beidh éifeacht ag an mbreith bháis sin faoi réir an lá a cheapfar amhlaidh a chur in ionad an lae a socraíodh i dtosach chun an bhreith bháis sin a fheidhmiú.

Direct gender-proofed translation

I gcás ordú a dhéanamh faoin alt seo ag an Ard-Chúirt nó ag breitheamh di<sup>1</sup> chun corp duine atá faoi phianbhreith bháis a thabhairt i láthair<sup>2</sup>, déanfaidh an Ard-Chúirt nó an breitheamh sin di a ordú thairis sin forghníomhú<sup>3</sup> na pianbhreithe báis sin a chur siar go dtí tar éis corp an duine sin a thabhairt i láthair<sup>4</sup> na hArd-Chúirte agus dleathach a choinneála nó a choinneála a chinneadh agus más rud é, tar éis an iarchuir sin, go gcinnefar gur dleathach an duine sin a choinneáil, ceapfaidh an Ard-Chúirt lá chun an phianbhreith bháis sin a fhorghníomhú<sup>5</sup> agus beidh éifeacht leis an bpiambhreith sin ach an lá a chinnefar amhlaidh a chur<sup>6</sup> in ionad an lae a socraíodh i gcéaduaire<sup>7</sup> d’fhorghníomhú an chéanna<sup>8</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘den Ard-Chúirt’
- 2 ‘chun duine atá faoi phianbhreith bháis a thabhairt i láthair i bpearsain’
- 3 ‘cur i bhfeidhm’
- 4 ‘i láthair os comhair’, ‘tar éis an duine sin a thabhairt i láthair i bpearsain’
- 5 ‘a chur i bhfeidhm’
- 6 ‘a bheith’
- 7 ‘i dtosach’, ‘ar dtús’
- 8 ‘don chéanna a chur i bhfeidhm’, ‘d’fhorghníomhú na pianbhreithe sin’

ARTICLE 40.4.6° AIRTEAGAL 40.4.6°

TÉACS GAELGE

Ach aon ghníomh de ghníomhartha na bhFórsaí Cosanta le linn eisithe nó ceannairce faoi arm, ní cead aon ní dá bhfuil san alt seo a agairt chun an gníomh sin a thoirmeasc nó a rialú nó a bhac.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

But any one of the acts of the Defence Forces during unrest or armed rebellion, it is not permitted to plead anything that is in this section to prohibit or regulate or hinder that act.

ENGLISH TEXT

Nothing in this section, however, shall be invoked to prohibit, control, or interfere with any act of the Defence Forces during the existence of a state of war or armed rebellion.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘During the existence of a state of war’ is expressed in the Irish text as ‘le linn eisithe’, ‘during unrest/non-peace’ (note, however, that Dinneen translates ‘eisíoth’ as ‘state of war’).
- 2 ‘Interfere with’ is expressed by ‘bac’, the Irish legal term for ‘stay’, a term generally understood as ‘hinder’/‘prevent’.
- 3 ‘Óglaigh na hÉireann’ as against ‘na Fórsaí Cosanta’ is the official Irish title of ‘the Defence Forces’, in the - Acts and in the Army's own Téarmaí Mileata.

- 4 'Any act' is expressed in the Irish text as 'aon ghníomh de ghníomhartha' ('any act of the acts'), a regular construction meaning 'any one of the acts', with 'an gníomh sin' ('that act') added further on.
  - 5 'Agair', the term expressing 'invoke' in the Irish text, is the Irish legal term for 'sue', the sense 'plead, entreat' being found in the Acts also.
  - 6 As we have seen in other Articles, 'ní cead' ('it is not permitted') expresses 'nothing ... shall' of the English text, and 'Ach' ('But') expresses 'however'.
  - 7 'To prohibit, control, or interfere with' is expressed in the Irish text as 'a thoirmeasc nó a rialú nó a bhac' ('to prohibit or to control or to interfere with').

Note that Article 6 of the 1922 Constitution concludes as follows:

Provided, however, that nothing in this Article contained shall be invoked to prohibit, control or interfere with any act of the military forces of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) during the existence of a state of war or armed rebellion. Ar choinioll, ámh le linn chogaidh no rebiliúntachta armtha ná gairmfear éinní dá bhfuil san Airtíogal so chun aon ghníomh dá ndéanfaidh fórsaí airm Shaorstáit Éireann do chosg, do smachtú ná do thoirmeasg.

Commentary

a bhac 'Bacaim' is translated as 'I stay (e.g. proceedings)' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'bac ar fhorghníomhú' translates 'stay of execution'. Ó Dónaill translates 'bac' as 'balk, hinder', while Dinneen translates 'bacaim' as 'I hack, I lame; I hinder, prevent, meddle with'. This verb is based on the noun 'bac', originally 'angle, bend, corner', frequently in the commentaries on the early Irish law-tracts in the phrase 'bac n-achaid', apparently '(an enclosed) corner or angle of a field (used as a shelter for horses or cattle)' and hence later 'hindrance, act of hindering'. We find an example of 'bac' in the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian where it refers to a sickle, 'bac' being applied to various hooked or angled tools or other articles, and translated as 'mattock, grub-hoe, bill-hook' in DIL. 'Baccach', 'lame', 'lame person', is also based on 'bacc'. DIL translates the verb 'baccaid' as 'hinders, prevents, impairs', given one example of the sense 'lames'.

Turning to the Acts, in s1(7) of the Air Navigation (Eurocontrol) Act, 1971, 'A person who obstructs or interferes with an officer of the Organisation' is translated as 'aon duine a choisfidh nó bhacfaidh oifigeach don Eagraíocht'. In s15(1) of the Consumer Information Act, 1978, 'A person shall not ... prevent another person from, or interfere with or obstruct another person' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfaidh duine ... cosc, bac ná araoid a chur ar dhuine eile'. See further the commentary on Article 15.10 where 'cur isteach a dhéanamh ar' expresses 'interfere with'.

'Bac' generally translates 'impede' and 'hinder' along with 'stay' in the Acts. See, for example, s3(1)(b) of the Criminal Law (Jurisdiction) Act, 1976, where 'with intent to impede the apprehension or prosecution of a person' is translated as 'le hintinn gabháil nó ionchúiseamh duine a bhac'. In s46(1) of the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, 'A person who wilfully hinders, restricts or prevents the enjoyment or exercise of inviolability or an exemption, facility, immunity, privilege or right conferred by this Act' is translated as 'Aon duine a bhacfaidh, a shrianfaidh nó a choisfidh go toiliúil dosháraitheacht, saoirseacht, saoráid, díolúine, pribhléid nó ceart a thugtar leis an Acht seo a theachtadh nó a fheidhmiú'. In s7(2) of the Maintenance Orders Act, 1974, 'The Court may ... stay the proceedings' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an Chúirt ... na himeachtaí a bhac'.

See the commentary on Article 15.10 regarding other translations of 'interfere' in the Acts. Looking at early Acts, 'opens, or otherwise interferes with any ballot box' is translated as 'aon bhosca ballóide d'oscailt no baint leis in aon tslí eile' in s46(2)(f) of the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923. 'Interfering with or preventing ... the lawful occupation, use or enjoyment of any land or premises' is translated as 'Cuir-isteach no cosc a dhéanamh ... ar aon talamh no áitreabh do shealbhú no d'úsáid go dleathach no ar tairfe do bhaint as go dleathach' in s9 of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'a bhac' is a perfect expression of 'interfere with' in the sense of 'prevent (a process or activity) continuing or being carried out properly'; 'a chur isteach air' would not be as precise as 'a bhac' and 'chun baint leis' would be rather weak. Professor Ó Murchú also remarks that 'ná' is more appropriate than 'nó' here, as different types of 'act' are involved rather than different explanatory words for the one single act.

le linn eisithe 'Eisith' expresses 'state of war' in Article 38.4.1° also – see the commentary on that Article. Ó Dónaill translates 'eisith' as 'lack of peace; dissension, strife, quarrel', translating 'bheith in eisith le duine' as 'to be in conflict with someone'. Dinneen translates 'eisíoth' as 'state of war', translating 'i n-eisith le' as 'at war with'. DIL gives examples of 'essid' from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards, translating that headword as 'unpeace, strife, dissension; hostility; destruction', also in concrete sense 'a hostile act, outrage', 'essid' being composed of 'síd' ('peace') with a negative prefix.

'State of war' is translated as 'staid chogaidh' in Foclóir Oifigiúil, followed by the abbreviation for the 'Department of Defence'. 'State of rebellion' is translated as 'staid rebiliúntachta' in the Preamble to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923, with 'arising out of the existence of a state of war or armed rebellion, whether local or general', in s1(b), being translated as 'de bharr staid cogaidh no rebiliúntachta armtha, áitiúil no generalta, a bheith ann'. This same English phrase is translated as 'a tháinig as staid cogaidh no rebiliúntachta armtha, áitiúil nó generalta, do bheith ann' in s3(1)(a) of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) (No. 2) Act, 1923. 'State of emergency/war' is translated as 'staid éigeandála/chogaidh' in Téarmaí Mileata. Finally, regarding lenition after 'staid', note that 'physical and mental condition' is translated as 'staid choirp agus mheabhrach' in s9(3)(c) of the Social Welfare (Occupational Injuries) Act, 1966.

ceannairc faoi arm See the commentary on Article 28.3.3°. In s2 of Article 39 of the First Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, 'even in case of armed conflict' is translated as 'fiú amháin i gcás coinbhleacht faoi airm'. 'Armed conflict' is translated as 'coimhlint armtha' in Téarmaí Míleata, however. 'Foghna armtha' and 'éirí amach armtha' translates 'armed attacks' and 'armed revolt' respectively in the Preamble and in s1 of Part 1 of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923; in s1(b) of that Act, as we have seen, 'arising out of the existence of a state of war or armed rebellion' is translated as 'de bharr staid cogaidh no rebeliúntachta armtha ... a bheith ann'. Note, finally, that in Article 70 of the 1922 Constitution 'save in time of war, or armed rebellion' is translated as 'ach in aimsir chogaidh no rebeliúntachta armtha'.

a agairt 'Agraím' is translated as 'I sue' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'agair' principally as 'plead, entreat', translating 'cás a agairt le duine' as 'to plead a case with someone'. Dinneen translates 'agraim' as 'I retribute, revenge, dispute, challenge, ... I pray, beg, beseech' and 'I claim; I sue' – see the commentary on Article 18.4.3°. DIL translates the earlier compound 'ad-gair' as 'sues, prosecutes, impleads, accuses', citing the following example in the sense of 'forbids, prevents' from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles: 'rafatarsa as peccad comaccobor hore adrograd' ('I know that concupiscence is sin because it has been forbidden') – this glosses 'nam concupiscentiam nesciebam nisi lex diceret: non concupisces' (Rom., vii. 7).

We see 'agair' in the sense of 'sue' in the Acts in s36 of the Companies Act, 1963, where 'every person who is a member of the company ... and may be severally sued therefor' is translated as 'beidh gach duine is comhalta den chuideachta ... agus féadfar é a agairt go leithleach ina leith'. In s5 of Article VII of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, 1957, 'Members agree not to invoke the obligations of any engagements entered into with other members prior to this Agreement in such a manner as will prevent the operation of the provisions of this Article' is translated as 'comhaontaíonn na comhaltaí nach ndéanfaid oblagáidí aon tsocrúithe a rinneadh le comhaltaí eile roimh an gComhaontú seo d'agairt ar shlí a choisfeair oibriú forál an Airteagail seo'. In s3 of Article 45 of the Second Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, 'shall preclude him from invoking immunity from jurisdiction in respect of any counter claim directly connected with the principal claim' is translated as 'dúnfaidh sin amach é ó dhíolúine a agairt ó dhlínse i leith aon fhrithéileamh a bhaineann go díreach leis an bpríomh-éileamh'. Note, however, that 'agair' was not invoked in translating Article V of the Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1965, where 'unless it is proved that he acted in a manner which, under the Warsaw Convention, prevents the limits of liability from being invoked' is translated as 'mura gcruthófar gur ghníomhaigh sé ar dhóigh a fhágann, faoi Choinbhinsiún Warsaw, nach féidir feidhm a bhaint as na teorainneacha dlíleanais'.

We find both 'a agairt' and 'leas a bhaint as' translating 'invoke' in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973) – see, p. 304, for example, where, 'any party may, in proceedings ... plead the ground specified ... in order to invoke before the Court of Justice the inapplicability of that regulation' is translated as 'féadfaidh páirtí ar bith, i gcás imeachtaí ... na forais a phléadail a shonraítear ...

d'fhonn neamhfheidhmeacht an rialacháin sin a agairt os comhair na Cúirte Breithiúnais'. On p. 572, however, 'The provisions of this Treaty shall not be invoked so as to prevent the implementation of agreements' is translated as 'Ní bhainfeair leas as forálacha an Chonartha seo chun cosc a chur le comhaontuithe'. 'Leas a bhaint as' translates 'avail' in the Acts and in Treaties establishing the European Communities, where it also translates '(to have) recourse (to)' and 'employ'. In the Treaty on European Union (1992), 'This Title shall not provide a basis for the introduction by the Community of any measure' is translated as 'Ní féidir leis an gComhphobal leas a bhaint as an Teideal seo chun aon bheart a thabhairt isteach'.

gníomh This headword is translated as 'act' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'gníomh Stáit', for example, is translated as 'act of State', while 'cúlpháirtí i ndiaidh an ghnímh' is translated as 'accessory after the fact'. Ó Dónaill gives 'action' and 'act, deed' as senses of 'gníomh'. Dinneen includes 'an act, action or deed', along with 'an act of prayer' and 'an act of unlawful indulgence' among the senses of 'gníomh'. 'Gním' is the verbal noun of 'gníid' and has the senses of 'doing, performing, executing', along with 'acting, action, activity, work', glossing Latin 'actio', for example, in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. See further the commentary on Article 15.5.

Turning to the Acts, in s11(1)(b) of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1973, for example, 'attempts to perform any such act or aids or abets a person who performs or attempts to perform any such act or counsels or procures the performance of any such act' is translated as 'a thabharfaidh faoi ghníomh den sórt sin a dhéanamh nó a chabhróidh nó a neartóidh le duine a bheidh ag déanamh aon ghnímh den sórt sin nó ag tabhairt faoina dhéanamh, nó a chomhairleoidh nó a thabharfaidh chun críche go ndéanfar aon ghníomh den sórt sin'. Note, however, s118(3) of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, where 'No returning officer ... shall be required ... to do any act (whether of commission or omission) which is contrary to this Act' is translated as 'Ní bheidh de cheangal ar aon cheann comhairimh ... aon ní a dhéanamh (trí ghníomh ná trí neamhghníomh) atá contrártha don Acht seo'.

a thoirmeasc 'Toirmiscim' is translated as 'I prohibit' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'toirmeasc' is translated as 'inhibition'. The verb 'toirmisc' is translated as 'prohibit; prevent, hinder' in Ó Dónaill, where 'toradh toirmiscithe, forbidden fruit' is cited. Dinneen translates 'toirmeascaim' as 'I hinder, prevent, prohibit, interrupt'. The compound verb 'do-airmesca' is translated as 'hinders, obstructs, restrains, checks, forbids' in DIL, citing 'cur toirmisc Medb in gním siu do dénum' (i.e. so that Meadhbh prohibited that deed's being done). Turning to the Acts, in s11(1) of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1970, 'in the case of any goods the importation of which is prohibited by or under this Act' is translated as 'i gcás earraí a bhfuil a n-allmhairiú toirmiscithe leis an Acht seo nó faoi'. See the commentary on Article 18.4.3° where 'toirmeasc a chur' expresses 'to prohibit'.

aon ní dá bhfuil san alt seo Literally 'nothing of what is in this section'. See the commentary on Article 13.3.2° regarding 'dá'. See, for an example of non-use of 'dá', s35(4) of the Extradition Act, 1965, where ‘Nothing in this section shall prejudice ...’ is translated as ‘Ní dhéanfaidh aon ní san alt seo dochar (do) ...’, a phrase found in many of the Acts.

a rialú ‘Rialáim’ is translated as ‘I control; I rule’ in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 10.3. See, for example from the Acts, the heading of Part II of the Disease and Animals Act, 1966, where ‘Control and Eradication of Disease’ is translated as ‘Galar a Rialú agus a Scriosadh’.

na Fórsaí Cosanta See the commentary on Article 13.4.

Direct translation

Ní dhéanfar aon ní san alt seo a agairt,<sup>1</sup> áfach, chun aon ghníomh a dhéanfaidh Óglaigh na hÉireann le linn staid chogaidh nó ceannairce faoi airm a thoirmeasc, a rialú, ná a bhac<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘Ní bhainfear leas as aon ní san alt seo,’
- 2 ‘ná cur isteach air’

ARTICLE 40.5 AIRTEAGAL 40.5

TÉACS GAELIGE

Is slán do gach saoránach a ionad cónaithe, agus ní cead dul isteach ann go foréigneach ach de réir dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

His place of residence is secure for every citizen, and it is not permitted to go into it forcibly except in accordance with law.

ENGLISH TEXT

The dwelling of every citizen is inviolable and shall not be forcibly entered save in accordance with law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘Dwelling’ is expressed as ‘ionad cónaithe’, ‘dwelling-place / place of residence’, in the Irish text.
- 2 ‘Inviolable’ is expressed in the Irish text as ‘slán do’, ‘safe to (him)’, with ‘The dwelling of every citizen is inviolable’ being expressed as ‘is slán do gach saoránach a ionad cónaithe’ (‘his dwelling is secure for every citizen’); this term ‘slán’ in early Irish law meant ‘free from liability’ as well as ‘whole, safe’ – in Modern Irish its range of meanings includes ‘sound, secure, intact, inviolate’.
- 3 ‘Forcibly’ is expressed as ‘go foréigneach’ (‘violently’) in the Irish text, ‘foréigneach’ being the Irish legal term for ‘violent’, while ‘go forneartach’ is the Irish legal term for ‘forcibly’.

Note that Article 7 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

The dwelling of each citizen is inviolable and shall not be forcibly entered except in accordance with law. Is slán do gach saoránach a árus comhnuithe agus ní raghfáir isteach ann le fóirneart ach do réir dlí.

Commentary

slán do Ó Dónaill translates ‘slán’ as ‘sound, healthy, safe’, citing ‘faoina bheith slán dom, if I am spared’ as an example of this principal sense, with ‘whole, complete; intact, perfect’ being a secondary sense. Dinneen cites ‘tá bliadhain is slán dóibh ann, they have spent a full year there’ and ‘go mbadh codladh slán dúinn, may our sleep be wholesome’. DIL translates ‘slán’ as (a) ‘whole, sound, unimpaired, healthy, safe’, giving examples from the eighth-century Glosses onwards, including ‘ná rab slán d’feasóig an fir’ (‘bad health to the fellow’s beard’) from the sixteenth-century poet Tadhg Dall Ó Huiginn. In early Irish law-tracts, ‘slán’ had the sense of ‘exempt, non-liable, safe’; DIL cites ‘is iat daine is slán don eclais do leagan as’ (‘the persons whom it is safe for the church to let escape’) and ‘is slán doib uile’ (‘they are all exempt’) from two early Irish law-tracts, and Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 156, n. 244, cites ‘slán cách mairnes mígním’ (‘anyone who betrays an evil deed is free from liability’). In his ‘Index of Irish Terms’ Professor Kelly translates ‘slán’ as ‘whole, safe, free from liability’.

Turning to the Acts, in s8 of the Consular Conventions Act, 1954, ‘The archives kept at a consulate ... shall be inviolable’ is translated as ‘Beidh slánadh ag na cairteacha a bheas ar coimeád i gconsalach’. ‘Dosháraithe’, however, seems to have been the preferred term in the Acts. In s5 of Article IX of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, 1957, ‘The archives of the Fund shall be inviolable’ is translated as ‘Beidh cartlanna an Chiste dosháraithe’. In Article 24 of the First Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, ‘The archives and documents of the mission shall be inviolable at any time and wherever they may be’ is translated as ‘Beidh cartlann agus doiciméid an mhisiúin dosháraithe aon tráth agus cibé áit ina mbeidh siad’. In Article 29 of the same Schedule, ‘The person of a diplomatic agent shall be inviolable’ is translated as ‘Beidh pearsa gníomhaire taidhleoireachta dosháraithe’. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 777) ‘The premises and buildings of the Communities shall be inviolable’ is translated as ‘Beidh áitribh agus foirgnimh na gComhphobal dosháraithe’. De Bhaldraithe also translates ‘inviolable’ as ‘dosháraithe’, the adverb being translated as ‘go dosháraithe’ and ‘gan sárú’.

go foréigneach ‘Foréigneach’ is translated as ‘violent’ in Téarmaí Dlí, with ‘foréigeán’ translated as ‘violence’ and ‘le foréigeán’ as ‘violently’. Ó Dónaill translates ‘foréigneach’ as ‘violent, forcible’, translating ‘le foréigeán’ as ‘by force; violently’. Dinneen translates ‘foréigneach’ as ‘extremely violent, vehement, rapid’, translating ‘ar foiréigeán’ as ‘at full speed’. DIL translates ‘foréicnech’ as ‘violent, forcible, oppressive’, based on ‘foréicen’, which itself is based on ‘éicen’, which glosses Latin ‘violentia’ in the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian.

Turning to the Acts, in s241(2) of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act, 1959, ‘If any person resists or forcibly obstructs any other person exercising any right conferred by subsection (1)’ is translated as ‘Má chuireann duine ar bith in aghaidh aon duine eile nó má choiceann go foréigneach é agus é ag feidhmiú aon chirt dá dtugtar le fo-alt (1). ‘Forcibly’ is translated as ‘go forneartach’ in Téarmaí Dlí, with ‘forcible’ translated as ‘forneartach’. ‘The Prohibition of Forcible Entry and Occupation Act, 1971’ is cited in Irish as ‘an tAcht chun Iontráil agus Áitiú le Forneart a Thoirmeasc, 1971’. In s2, ‘A person who forcibly enters land or a vehicle shall be guilty of an offence’ is translated as ‘Aon duine a iontrálfaidh nó a áiteoidh talamh nó feithicil le forneart beidh sé ciontach i gcion’.

ionad cónaithe ‘Teach cónaithe’ is translated as ‘dwelling-house’ in Téarmaí Dlí, where ‘duine gan áit chónaithe sheasta’ is translated as ‘person of no fixed abode’. ‘Ionad’ is translated as ‘place’ in Ó Dónaill, who translates ‘cónaí’ as ‘dwelling, residence’, translating ‘áit chónaithe’ as ‘place of residence’. Dinneen translates ‘áit chómhnaidhthe’ as ‘place of abode, domicile’, followed by ‘ionad cómhnaidhthe, id.’ DIL translates ‘comnaide’ (which according to Thurneysen’s Grammar of Old Irish, s846, comes from the prefix ‘com-’, with the preposition ‘ní’ [‘down’] and ‘suide’ [Modern Irish ‘suí’, ‘sit’]), as ‘act of abiding, remaining, staying; living in, inhabiting; dwelling, habitation’, citing ‘as a corpionadh ... comnaidhe’ – ‘ionad’ (in a compound with ‘corp’) followed by the genitive singular ‘comnaidhe’ – from a version of the Táin, as well as ‘a áit chomhnuidhe’ (‘his habitation’) from a later source.

‘Teach cónaithe’ translates ‘dwelling’ in s1(6) of the Local Government (Financial Provisions) Act, 1978, where ‘In case any building ... belonging to and usually enjoyed with a dwelling is a hereditament’ is translated as ‘I gcás ar oidhreachtán aon fhoirgneamh ... a bhaineann le teach cónaithe agus a theachtar de ghnáth in éineacht leis an teach cónaithe’. In the ‘Definitions’ contained in s3 of the Landlord and Tenant (Ground Rents) (No. 2) Act of the same year, we find separate entries for ‘dwelling’ and ‘dwelling house’ (‘teach cónaithe’), with “‘dwelling’ does not include a separate and self-contained flat in premises divided into two or more flats’ translated as ‘ní fholaíonn “teaghais” árasán leithleach lánscartha in áitreabh atá roinnte in dhá árasán nó níos mó den sórt sin’. In s21 of the Finance Act, 1990, ‘on the construction of farm buildings (excluding a building or part of a building used as a dwelling)’ is translated as ‘ag déanamh foirgneamh feirme (seachas foirgneamh nó cuid d’fhoirgneamh a úsáidtear mar theaghais)’. In s13(2) of the Housing Act, 1970, ‘If, in a case in which there is no tenancy in a dwelling provided by a housing authority under this Act, a person makes an entry into the dwelling’ is translated as ‘Má tharlaíonn, i gcás nach mbeidh tionóntacht i dteaghais a sholáthraigh údarás áitiúil faoin Acht seo, go ndéanfaidh duine iontráil isteach sa teaghais’, with ‘a person who ... was ordinarily resident in the dwelling’ being translated as ‘duine a raibh ... gnáthchónaí air sa teaghais’. In s11(1) of the Housing (Amendment) Act, 1948, ‘a person shall not permit premises to be used as a multiple dwelling’ is translated as ‘ní cheadóidh duine ar bith áitreabh d’úsáid mar ilteaghas’. In the Long Title of that Act, however, ‘the Small Dwellings Acquisition Acts, 1899 to 1931’ is translated as ‘(do leasú) ... na nAcht um Thithe Beaga Cónaithe d’Fháil, 1899 go 1931’, with ‘the Small Dwellings Acquisition Act, 1957’ cited in Irish accordingly as ‘an tAcht um Thithe Beaga Cónaithe d’Fháil, 1957’.

dul isteach ann In s4(3)(a) of the Merchandise Marks Act, 1970, ‘at all reasonable times enter premises’ is translated as ‘dul isteach gach tráth réasúnach in áitreabh’. In s18(7)(a) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, ‘Nothing in this section shall be construed as conferring on any person a power to enter a dwellinghouse’ is translated as ‘Ní fhorléireofar aon ní san alt seo mar ní a thugann cumhacht d’aon duine dul isteach i dteach cónaithe’. Note, finally, that ‘No action to lie against Under-Sheriff for entering or breaking premises’ is translated as ‘Ní féadfar aon aicsean do thabhairt i gcoinnibh an Fho-Shirriamh i dtaobh dul isteach in áitreabh ná i dtaobh é do bhriseadh’ in the Margin Title of s10 of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1923.

In Téarmaí Dlí, ‘I break and enter’ is translated as ‘brisim agus iontráilim’. As we have seen above s.v. ‘go foréigneach’, in s2 of the Prohibition of Forcible Entry and Occupation Act, 1971 (‘An tAcht chun Iontráil agus Áitiú le Forneart a Thoirmeasc, 1971’), ‘A person who forcibly enters land or a vehicle’ is translated as ‘Aon duine a iontrálfaidh nó a áiteoidh talamh nó feithicil le forneart’. In s13(2) of the Housing Act, 1970, ‘If ... a person makes an entry into the dwelling’ is translated as ‘Má tharlaíonn ... go ndéanfaidh duine iontráil isteach sa teaghais’. In s27(1) of the Landlord and Tenant (Ground Rents) (No. 2) Act, 1978, ‘a covenant giving the lessor a right to re-enter and take possession of the premises’ is translated as ‘cúnant a thugann ceart don léasóir athiontráil isteach san áitreabh agus seilbh a ghlacadh air’.

ach ‘Save’ is generally translated as ‘ach amháin’ in the Acts, as we find in Article 12.10.4°. See, for example, s2(1) of the Smelting Act, 1968, where ‘The smelting of ore ... is hereby prohibited save under and in accordance with a smelting licence’ is translated as ‘Toirmeascstar leis seo amh-mhianraí ... a bhruithniú ... ach amháin faoi réim agus de réir ceadúnais bhruithniúcháin’.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Is slán do gach saoránach a ionad nó a hionad cónaithe, agus ní cead dul isteach ann go foréigneach ach de réir dlí.

Direct translation

Tá teaghais gach saoránaigh dosháraithe agus ní iontrálfar é<sup>1</sup> le forneart<sup>2</sup> ach amháin de réir dlí.

Variants

- 1 ‘ní rachfar isteach ann’
- 2 ‘go forneartach’

ARTICLE 40.6.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 40.6.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELGE

Ráthaíonn an Stát saoirse chun na cearta seo a leanas a oibriú ach sin a bheith faoi réir oird is moráltachta poiblí:-

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State guarantees freedom to operate the following rights but that being subject to public morality and order:-

ENGLISH TEXT

The State guarantees liberty for the exercise of the following rights, subject to public order and morality:-

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 Technically 'poiblí' ('public') only refers to 'moráltacht' ('morality'); to be linked directly with 'oid' ('order') 'poiblí' would have to be repeated, the lenited form being used with 'oid'.
- 2 'Subject to' is expressed in the Irish text as 'ach sin a bheith faoi réir' ('but that being subject to'), having no comma preceding it corresponding to that of the English text.
- 3 'Exercise' is expressed as 'oibriú' ('operate') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Commentary

faoi réir oid 'Scor as oifig de réir oid' is translated as 'retirement by rotation' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'ord' as 'order', including 'ordered manner, rule' among the senses of this word in the earlier literature, citing 'ord ar mbeatha, the ordering of our lives' and 'ba hord san am sin (go), it was the rule at that time that'. Ó Dónaill gives 'ordú' as the standard form of 'ord' in some usages – as in the sense of 'normal state, proper condition', citing 'rudá a chur in ordú, to put things in order, in a proper state'. Among the senses of 'órd' given by Dinneen are 'order, arrangement, series; custom, law, practice, procedure', citing 'órd ar mbeathadh, the ordering of our lives', 'do réir úird, according to order or rank, in sequence' and 'iar n-órd dligtheach, in proper or legal order'. DIL gives examples of the senses (a) 'order, sequence', (b) 'order, arrangement, state, way, course, procedure' and (c) 'order, degree, rank' from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards.

In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 330), 'in the event of serious internal disturbances affecting the maintenance of law and order' is translated as 'i gcás suaitheadh tromchúiseach inmheánach a dhul i gcion ar an ord poiblí'. Similarly, in the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 23), 'with regard to the maintenance of law and order' is translated as 'maidir leis an ord poiblí a chaomhnú'. 'Law and order' is translated as 'dlí agus riail' in the New Ireland Forum Report (1984, 44), 'law and order functions', however, being translated as 'feidhmeanna dlí agus ordúlachta' (in 7.4), with 'subject only to public order' being translated as 'faoi réir riar agus reacht poiblí' (in 4.13). In the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97, 'where particular law and order problems are being experienced' is translated as 'mar a bhfuil fadhbanna sonracha dlí agus oid ann faoi láthair' (p. 39).

'An invention the publication or exploitation of which would be contrary to public order or morality' is translated as '(i leith) aireagáin a mbeadh a fhoilsiú nó a shaothrú contrártha don ord poiblí nó don mhoráltacht poiblí' in s10(a) of the Patents Act, 1992, following on s15(1)(b) of the Patents Act, 1964. In s9(1)(a) of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act, 1959, 'the regulation of the fisheries of the State and the preservation of good order amongst the persons engaged therein' is translated as 'iascaigh an Stáit a rialú agus dea-ordúlacht a choimeád i measc na ndaoine a bhíonn ag gabháil dóibh'. In s1(b) of Article 6 of the First Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1973, 'to maintain good order and discipline on board' is translated as 'chun dea-ord agus araíonacht a choimeád ar bord'. See further the commentary on Article 38.3.1°.

Note that T. O'Neill Lane translates 'order' in the sense of 'conformity with the law of decorum' as 'órdughadh', citing 'déantar na huile neithe go deaghmhaiseach agus do réir órdughthe' ('let all things be done decently and in order') from 1 Cor. xiv, 40. 'Public order' is translated as 'an t-ord poiblí' in Téarmaí Oifigiúla.

poiblí 'An mhaitheas poiblí' is translated as 'the common good' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'dualgas poiblí' and 'núis poiblí', for example, are translated respectively as 'public duty' and 'public nuisance'. Ó Dónaill translates 'poiblí' simply as 'public' and Dinneen translates 'poiblidhe' as 'public, common, well-known', citing 'droch-theist phoiblidhe, public disrepute'. Ó Cianáin's Flight of the Earls provides the first example of the word 'puiplidhe' cited in DIL, this headword being translated as 'pertaining to the people, public'. Note, as we saw above, that 'subject to public order and morality' is translated as 'ach gan dochar don rialtacht ná don mhoráltacht phuiblí' in Article 8 of the 1922 Constitution. See further the commentary on Article 40.6.1°.

saoirse See the commentary on Article 40.4.3°. Note also that 'liberty (to apply, etc.)' is translated as 'cead' in Téarmaí Dlí. In s32(2)(b) of the Industrial Training Act, 1967, 'require the employer to afford to the person time and liberty to attend ... the whole of the course' is translated as 'a cheangal ar an bhfostóir am agus saorchead a thabhairt don duine freastal ar an gcúrsa go léir'.

moráltachta See the commentary on Article 29.1. Ó Dónaill translates 'moráltacht' as 'morality; morals'. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 204), 'justified on grounds of public morality' is translated as 'más gá a leithéid ar mhaithe leis an moráltacht poiblí'.

ach sin a bheith faoi réir Literally 'but that being subject to'. See the commentary on Article 40.3.3°. 'Faoi réir' is translated as 'subject to' in Téarmaí Dlí.

a oibriú Literally 'to operate', but generally expresses 'exercise' in the Constitution – see the commentary on Articles 3, 13.5.1°, 13.9 and 14.5.1°.

Direct translation

Ráthaíonn an Stát saoirse chun na cearta seo a leanas a fheidhmiú,<sup>1</sup> faoi réir an oid poiblí agus na moráltachta poiblí:-

Variant

<sup>1</sup> 'saoirse maidir le feidhmiú na gcearta seo a leanas.'

ARTICLE 40.6.1<sup>o</sup>i AIRTEAGAL 40.6.1<sup>o</sup>i

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ceart na saoránach chun a ndeimhní is a dtuairimí a nochtadh gan bac.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The right of the citizens to reveal their certitudes and their opinions without hindrance.

ENGLISH TEXT

The right of the citizens to express freely their convictions and opinions.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'To express freely' is expressed as 'a nochtadh gan bac' ('to reveal without hindrance') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Convictions' is expressed as 'deimhní', a plural form not cited in standard dictionaries, the singular form of which would generally be read as 'certainty'.

Note that Article 9 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

The right of free expression of opinion ... is guaranteed
.... Is slán ceart oipíneon do chur in úil gan chosg.

Commentary

a ndeimhní 'Deimhin' is translated as 'certainty, assurance, proof' in Ó Dónaill and 'deimhne' as 'sureness, certainty', with no plural form given for either of the nouns, 'deimhne' being the plural of the adjective 'deimhin', 'sure, certain'. Dinneen translates 'deimhne' as Ó Dónaill translates 'deimhin' above, 'a reality' being found in place of Ó Dónaill's 'proof' in his translation of 'deimhin'. DIL gives examples of the Old Irish adjective 'demin' from the Glosses onwards.

'Their religious convictions and practices' is translated as '(dá) ndeimhní agus dá gcleachtais reiligiúin' in Article 27 of the Fourth Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962. 'Religious convictions' is translated as 'creideamh' in Téarmaí Oifigiúla, where 'deimhin-tuairimí' is also given, without reference, as a translation of 'convictions'. 'Conviction' in the sense of 'verdict of guilty' is translated as 'ciontú' in Téarmaí DLí. De Bhaldraithe translates 'conviction' in the sense of 'belief' as 'creideamh, áitiús', translating 'it is my conviction that ...' as 'is é mo thuairim láidir go ..., is é mo chreideamh go ...'. 'Conviction' is translated as 'áitiús' in Foclóir Fealsaimh also – Ó Dónaill translates 'áitiús' (pl. 'áitiúis') as 'conviction', preceded by the abbreviation for 'Philosophy'. In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 203), '(The High Contracting Parties) ... reaffirm their conviction that the structural funds should continue to play an important part in ...' is translated as 'athdhaingníonn siad a n-áitiús gur chóir go leanfadh na cistí struchtúracha de pháirt thábhachtach a imirt i ...'.

Commenting on 'áitiús' in the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú queries whether one should be so careful regarding the exact sense of 'convictions' in this context and suggests 'barúil' as an alternative.

gan bac The preposition 'gan', in general reference, lenites 'b', 'c', 'g', 'm' and 'p', according to Ó Dónaill, who cites 'gan bhaint', 'gan chlann', 'gan gharda', 'gan mhaith' and 'gan phingin' as examples. De Bhaldraithe translates 'unhindered' as 'gan bhac' and in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 612) 'The Commission may freely make use of any amounts ...' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an Coimisiún aon suimeanna ... a úsáid gan bhac'. See the commentary on Article 40.4.6<sup>o</sup> regarding 'bac'.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'freely' as (1) 'go saor, etc., gan bhac' and (2) '(labhraim) go hoscailte, go neamhbhalbh, gan eagla'. In the New Ireland Forum Report (1984, 5.2(3)), 'freely negotiated' is translated as 'a chaibidil go hoscailte' and 'all cultural, political and religious belief can be freely expressed and practised' is translated as 'a mbarrshamhla saíochta, polaitíochta agus creidimh a chur os ard agus a chleachtadh'. Along with 'gan bhac' we also find 'go héasca' and 'faoi shaoirse' translating 'freely' in Treaties establishing the European Communities, with 'the right ... to move freely within the territory of Member States' being translated as 'an ceart ... chun gluaiseacht faoi shaoirse laistigh de chríoch na mBallstát' (p. 221). In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 15), 'Every citizen of the Union shall have the right to move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States' is translated as 'Beidh an ceart ag gach saoránach den Aontas gluaiseacht agus cónaí faoi shaoirse ar chríoch na mBallstát'.

'Any other freely available and effectively usable currency' is translated as 'aon airgeadra eile atá ar fáil go héasca agus inúsáidte go héifeachtach' in Article 3(e) of the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency Act, 1988. 'Only be kept in a cage which is of sufficient dimensions to enable it to move and exercise freely' is translated as 'ní choimeádfar é ach i gcaighean a bheidh fairsing go leor chun go bhféadfaidh sé gluaiseacht agus aclaíocht a dhéanamh go héasca' in s35(5)(b) of the Wildlife Act, 1976. 'To exercise freely their ministry among prisoners of war of the same religion' is translated as 'a ministreacha a chleachtadh gan bhac i measc príosúnach cogaidh dá gcomhchreideamh' in Article 35 of the Third Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962. Finally, 'discourage such witnesses from giving their evidence freely' is translated as 'mi-mhisneach do chur ar na finithe sin a bhfianaise do thabhairt uatha gan chosc' in s7(5) of the Juries (Protection) Act, 1929.

Looking at earlier translations of 'freely', in the oath to be taken by soldiers contained in s9 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923 (Continuance and Amendment) Act, 1924, 'that I have this day freely and voluntarily enlisted as a soldier in Óglaigh na hÉireann' is translated as 'gur liostálas iniú, dem' dheoin agus dem' shaor-thoil féin, mar shaighdiúir in Óglaigh na hÉireann'. 'Go saoráideach' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'freely' in translations for the Department of Lands and Agriculture.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that perhaps 'gan bhac' better expresses what is involved here than the direct translation below, 'go saor'.

a dtuairimí 'Tuairim' is translated as 'opinion' in Téarmaí DLí, that being the primary sense of this headword in both Ó Dónaill and Dinneen, the latter citing 'bíonn na daoine ag imtheacht do réir amhrais agus tuairime acht

tagann an scéal bun ós cionn i gcómhnaidhe, people are ever suspecting and guessing, but the true facts always assert themselves'. 'Opinion' does not feature in the senses of 'túaraim' in DIL, where this headword is translated as (a) 'likelihood, promise, appearance, resemblance', (b) '(with numerals) about, approximately', (c) in phrase 'fá thúairim, towards, in the direction of'. No examples of 'túaraim' are cited from the earlier sources, the first citation being from the collection of Classical poetry, Diogluim Dána. DIL refers to 'réim' ('course') as a possible basis of 'túaraim'.

In s11(2) of the Extradition Act, 1965, 'on account of his race, religion, nationality or political opinion' is translated as 'mar gheall ar a chine, a chreideamh, a náisiúntacht nó a thúairimí polaitíochta'. Looking at earlier translations, 'rún opineoin' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'expression of opinion (in Dáil, etc.)' in early Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann, 'tuairim' being also cited for 'opinion (of the Dáil) etc.' from the 1926 Standing Orders. See further the commentary on Articles 22.2.1°, 24.1 and 30.1. Note that 'aigne an phobail' expresses 'public opinion' further on in this paragraph – see the next commentary.

nochtadh 'Nochtaim' is translated as 'I disclose' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'nochtadh mígheanasach' is translated as 'indecent exposure' – note that 'nocht' expresses 'disclose' in Article 26.2.2°. 'Make known, reveal, disclose' is given as one of the senses of 'nocht' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'rún a nochtadh, to reveal a secret' and 'níor nocht sé a intinn ar an scéal, he didn't disclose his mind on the matter' – followed, incidentally, by 'rón a nochtadh, to skin a seal', cited as an example of 'nochtadh' in the sense of 'skin'. Dinneen translates 'nochtaim' as 'I make bare, strip, uncover, unsheath, declare, tell, make manifest, explain, disclose, show, reveal ...'. DIL cites 'do nochtais t'aigne' ('you revealed your mind') from the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards' as an example of this figurative use of 'nochtadh' found in late literature generally. 'Nochta(e)', 'nakedness (want of clothing)', is found in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

Turning to the Acts, based upon the present Article, in s18(3)(b) of the Radio and Television Act, 1988, 'uphold the democratic values enshrined in the Constitution, especially those relating to rightful liberty of expression' is translated as 'tacóidh siad leis an bhfiúchas daonlathach atá cumhdaithe sa Bhunreacht, go háirithe mar a bhaineann leis an tsaoirse chun tuairimí a nochtadh'. The adjective 'express' is translated as 'sainráite' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'express condition', for example, is translated as 'coinníoll sainráite' and 'expressly' is translated as 'go sainráite'. In s67 of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, 'The decision of the returning officer, whether expressed or implied by his acts, on any question ... shall be final' is translated as 'Is cinneadh críochnaitheach cinneadh an cheann comhairimh, cibé acu sainráite dó nó intuighe as a ghníomhartha, ar aon cheist'. In the New Ireland Forum Report (1984, 4.13), 'as we saw above, 'all cultural, political and religious belief can be freely expressed and practised' is translated as 'saorhead a bheith acu a mbarrshamhla saíochta, polaitíochta agus creidimh a chur os ard agus a chleachtadh'. In 4.10, 'demand for political expression of their nationalist identity' is translated as 'an t-éileamh atá ag náisiúnaithe ar ghníomhaíocht pholaitíochta lena bhféiniúlacht náisiúnaíoch a chur in iúl' and in 4.3 'expressing its aspirations' is translated as 'a dtoilmhianta a chur in iúl'. In s34(3) of the Finance Act, 1978, 'unless the Revenue Commissioners have been required to express their opinion thereon' is translated as 'mura mbeidh iarrtha ar na Coimisinéirí Ioncaim a dtuairim ina leith a chur in iúl'. Note that the phrase 'cuir in iúl' sometimes also translates 'notify', 'indicate' and 'denote' in the Acts, though these English terms are not exclusively translated by 'cuir in iúl'.

Looking at early translations, 'express or manifest political opinions' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'tuairimí polaitíochta do luadh no do nochta' in translations for the Department of Justice, and 'have already expressed dissatisfaction at ...' is cited as being translated as 'tá ... tar éis a chur in iúl cheana ná fuilid sásta le ...' in a Report by the Public Accounts Committee, 1929. Finally, note that 'the word "statistics" includes information not expressible numerically' is translated as 'foluinn an focal "staitistíocht" eolas nách féidir a shloinne in uimhreacha' in s1 of the Statistics Act, 1926. See further the commentary on Article 24.1 where 'luaigh' expresses 'express', along with the next commentary.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú suggests, in particular in the context of translating 'convictions' as 'barúlacha' in the direct translation below, translating 'express' as 'a thabhairt' or 'friotal a chur ar'.

Standardised Irish text

Ceart na saoránach chun a ndeimhni is a dtuairimí a nochtadh gan bhac.

Direct translation

Ceart na saoránach chun a n-áitiúis<sup>1</sup> agus a dtuairimí a chur in iúl<sup>2</sup> go saor<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'a mbarúlacha'
- 2 'a nochtadh', 'a chur os ard', 'a thabhairt'
- 3 'faoi shaoirse', 'gan bhac', 'chun friotal a chur go saor ar a n-áitiúis agus a dtuairimí'

ARTICLE 40.6.1<sup>oi</sup> (cont'd)

AIRTEAGAL 40.6.1<sup>oi</sup> (ar lean.)

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ach toisc oiliúint aigne an phobail a bheith chomh tábhachtach sin do leas an phobail, féachfaidh an Stát lena chur in áirithe nach ndéanfar orgain aigne an phobail, mar shampla, an raidió is an preas is an cineama, a úsáid chun an t-ord nó an mhoráltacht phoiblí nó údarás an Stáit a bhonn-bhriseadh. San am chéanna coimeádfaidh na horgain sin an tsaoirse is dleacht dóibh chun tuairimí a nochtadh agus orthu sin tuairimí léirmheasa ar bheartas an Rialtais.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

But because the training of the mind of the people is of such importance to the welfare of the people, the State will endeavour to ensure that the organs of the public mind, for example, the radio and the press and the cinema, will not be used to break the basis of the public morality or order or the authority of the State. At the same time those organs will keep the freedom which is their right to declare opinions and including opinions evaluative of Government policy.

ENGLISH TEXT

The education of public opinion being, however, a matter of such grave import to the common good, the State shall endeavour to ensure that organs of public opinion, such as the radio, the press, the cinema, while preserving their rightful liberty of expression, including criticism of Government policy, shall not be used to undermine public order or morality or the authority of the State.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The Irish text has two separate sentences here corresponding to but one in the English text, adding 'San am chéanna ... na horgain sin' ('At the same time ... those organs') to the contents of the English text, which has this sentence as a sub-clause introduced by 'while', preceded by a comma.
- 2 'Rightful liberty of expression' is expressed as 'an tsaoirse is dleacht dóibh chun tuairimí a nochtadh' ('the freedom which is their right to reveal/express opinions') in the Irish text, with 'criticism of' expressed as 'tuairimí léirmheasa' ('evaluative opinions of'), the term 'léirmheas' being more familiar today in the context of book-reviews than of 'criticism' in general.
- 3 'Undermine' is expressed by an unfamiliar compound of 'bonn' ('basis') and 'bris' ('break').
- 4 'Education' is expressed in the Irish text as 'oiliúint', a term more associated with 'training', and 'public opinion' is expressed as 'aigne an phobail' ('the mind of the people').
- 5 'To ensure' is expressed by the phrase usually used to render 'to reserve', 'cuir in áirithe', as in some other Articles.
- 6 'The common good' is translated as 'an mhaitheas phoiblí' rather than 'leas an phobail', as in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 7 'Of such grave import' is expressed as 'chomh tábhachtach sin' ('of such importance') in the Irish text.
- 8 'However' is again expressed by 'Ach' ('But') in the Irish text.
- 9 'Such as' is expressed as 'mar shampla' ('for example') in the Irish text.
- 10 'The radio, the press, the cinema' is expressed as 'an raidió is an preas is an cineama' ('the radio and the press and the cinema') in the Irish text.

Commentary

oiliúint Ó Dónaill gives 'training, coaching' as one of the senses of 'oiliúint', citing 'oiliúint choirp agus intinne, physical and mental training'. Dinneen includes 'education, especially home-education, upbringing, fosterage, culture' among the senses of 'oileamhain(t)', and cites 'is fearr an oileamhain(t) 'ná an t-oideachas, upbringing counts for more than education' and 'is treise dúthchas 'ná oileamhain(t), instinct overcomes upbringing'. 'Ailemain' is translated as 'act of rearing, fostering; fosterage, education' in DIL, citing examples from the twelfth century or so onwards of this late verbal noun of 'ailid', the earlier verbal noun being 'altram'.

'Oiliúint' generally translates 'training' in the Acts – see, for example, s8(1)(e)(i) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, where 'facilities for training or otherwise instructing persons in any matter' is translated as 'saoráidí chun daoine a oiliúint nó a theagasc ar shlí eile ... in aon ábhar'. While 'oideachas' translates 'education' generally, 'oiliúint' is perhaps called on in this context as it is a verbal noun (of the verb 'oil', translated as 'nourish, rear, foster, train, educate' in Ó Dónaill). In s2(3) of the Army Pensions Act, 1923, for example, 'may ... be ... applied for the maintenance, education or benefit of his child' is translated as 'féadfar é ... do chur chun cimeád suas no oiliúint no tairfe a dhuine cloinne'. 'Being educated' is translated as 'ag fáil oideachais' in Article 14 of the 1922 Constitution and 'the expenses of the Department of National Education' is translated 'costaisí na Roinne um Oideachas Náisiúnta' in the Schedule to the Appropriation Act, 1922.

T. O'Neill Lane translates 'educate' as (1) 'múinim', (2) 'oilim', giving 'foghlaim', 'múineadh', 'oileamhain', 'tabhairt suas' and 'oideas', before 'oideachas', in his entry s.v. 'education'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'educate' as 1(a) 'oilim, tugaim oideachas do (dhuine)', (b)(i) 'múinim (páiste)', (ii) 'cuirim (páiste) ar scoil', 2. 'múnlaím (aigne duine)' – the verbal noun of the latter verb being used in the Constitution to express 'formation', 'aigne' being used in the present paragraph of the Constitution to express 'opinion'. On the Dáil Order Paper of 8/3/82, 'The Advisory Committee on the Education of Physically Handicapped Children' is translated as 'An Coiste Comhairleach um Oideachas Leanaí Corpéilínneacha' and on the 22/10/75 'European Agreement on the Instruction and Education of Nurses' is cited as 'Comhaontú Eorpach ar Theagasc agus Oideachas Altraí'. 'Oideachasú' is cited s.v. 'educate', in Téarmaí Oifigiúla (without reference), this allowing 'oideachas' to function as a verbal noun.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú doubted whether the word 'oideachasú' could be used with 'tuairimí' and recommended retaining 'oiliúint aigne an phobail'.

a bhonn-bhriseadh 'An bonn a bhaint ó rud' is translated as 'to undermine something' in Ó Dónaill who does not give this compound of 'bonn' (translated as (1) 'sole', (2) 'footing, foothold' and (3) 'base, foundation') and 'bris' ('break') as a headword. Ó Dónaill cites 'thug mé ó bhonn dó é, I beat, scolded, him thoroughly' and 'bhris sé bonn, he broke ground, fled'. Dinneen does not have 'bonn-bhris(eadh)' as a headword either, but cites 'cuirim (bainim) dá bhonnaibh é, I upset or undermine him' s.v. 'bonn'. 'Brisim agus iontráim' is translated as 'I break and enter' in Téarmaí Dlí. The verb 'bris(s)id' may be based on 'bres' ('fight, blow, effort'), according to DIL, 'bonn' being translated as 'sole of the foot, foot'.

L. Mc Cionnaith gives the following entry s.v. 'undermine':

tá an bonn bainte ón tigh ag an uisce (Munster); he undermined me, deprived me of influence, with the landlord, bhain sé an bonn uaim leis an tighearnna talmhan (An t-Ath. Seóirse Mac Clúin, Réiltíní Óir [1922]).

De Bhaldraithe translates 'to undermine someone's faith' as 'bonn a bhaint ó chreideamh duine'. In the New Ireland Forum Report (1984), 'for fear of undermining the Unionist system' and 'undermining constitutional politics' are translated respectively as 'ar eagla go mbainfí bonn ó chóras na n-aontachtaithe' and 'tá bonn á bhaint ó pholaitíocht bhunreachtúil' (3.10 and 4.3 respectively). We also find 'lagaigh' translating 'undermine' in the same document (see 4.11: 'undermine all efforts', 'lagú ar na hiarrachtaí go léir'), as it does in the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 223: 'that changes in Community legislation cannot undermine the derogations granted to Spain', 'nach féidir le hathruithe i reachtaíocht an Chomhphobail na méaduithe a lagú arna ndeonú don Spáinn') and in the Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1975 ('undermine the confidence of the peoples of the world in the safety of civil aviation', 'muinín phobail an domhain i sábháilteacht na heitlíochta sibhialta a lagú'). In s9(1)(d) of the Radio and Television Act, 1988, however, 'that anything which may reasonably be regarded as ... tending to undermine the authority of the State, is not broadcast by him' is translated as 'nach gcráolfaidh sé aon ní a bhféadfaí a mheas le réasún gur ... de ghné é a dhéanfaidh dochar d'údarás an Stáit'.

féachfaidh an Stát le 'Féach le' is translated as 'try to; try, attempt' in Ó Dónaill, with Dinneen translating 'féachaim le' as 'I strive to, look after'. According to DIL s.v. 'fégaid', there may have been an Old Irish verb 'fégaid', 'scrutinizes', which became confused with 'do-écci' ('looks at'); most of DIL's examples of 'fégaid' come from the post twelfth-century period.

Turning to the Acts, in s1(a) of Article XXIV of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements (Amendment) Act, 1969, 'the Fund shall seek to meet the long-term global need' is translated as 'féachfaidh an Ciste le freastal don riachtanas domhanda a bheidh ann'. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 937), 'The United Kingdom shall ... endeavour to abolish these subsidies' is translated as 'Féachfaidh an Ríocht Aontaithe ... leis na fóirdheontais a dhíothú'. In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 37), 'Member States shall endeavour to avoid excessive government deficits' is translated as 'féachfaidh Ballstáit le heasnamh rialtais iomarcacha a sheachaint'. See further the commentary on Article 42.4 where 'endeavour' is expressed as 'iarracht a dhéanamh'.

coimeádfaidh 'Coimeád' is the literal translation of 'keep' – 'coimeádam deisithe', for example, is translated as 'I keep in repair' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill gives 'retain' as one of the senses of 'coimeád', citing 'do ghreim a choimeád, to keep one's grip'. Dinneen translates 'coimheadaim'/coimeádam' as 'I hold, keep, guard, watch, detain, delay, I keep (the Law, the Sabbath, etc.)'. The verb 'coiméatad' is based on 'coimét', which is the verbal noun of 'con-eim', which is translated as 'protects, preserves, guards, keeps' in DIL, where examples are cited from the Old Irish Glosses onwards.

Turning to the Acts, we see, for example, how in s7(3) of the Credit Union Act, 1966, 'Every record required to be kept under this section shall be preserved by the credit union for a period of six years' is translated as 'Gach taifead is gá a choimeád faoin alt seo déanfaidh an comhar creidmheasa é a shlánchoimeád go ceann tréimhse sé bliana'. In s122(2) of the Mines and Quarries Act, 1965, 'Every entry made in any such book ... shall be preserved for three years, ... shall be kept at the office at the mine' is translated as 'Déanfar gach taifead a chuirfear in aon leabhar den sórt sin ... a choimeád slán go ceann trí bliana ... agus déanfar ... é a choimeád san oifig ag an mianach'. 'The preservation of continuing contracts' is translated as 'conarthaí leanúnacha a bhuanchóimeád' in s5(2)(b) of the Local Government Services (Corporate Bodies) Act, 1971, and as 'conarthaí leanúnacha ... a choimeád ar marthain' in s42(2)(b) of the Health Act, 1970.

'Caomhnaigh', however, is becoming more general as a direct translation of 'preserve' – see, for example, s26(8)(h) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1978, where 'the general preservation of the secrecy of the registers' is translated as 'rúndacht na gclár a chaomhnú i gcoitinne' as against s24(8)(h) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1947, where 'the general preservation of the secrecy of such registers' is translated as 'lánas na gclár sin go ginearálta a choimeád ina rún'. In s3(1)(b) of the First Schedule to the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975, 'in establishing, preserving or defending his title to ... the asset' is translated as 'ag bunú, ag caomhnú nó ag cosaint a theidil chun na sócmhainne'. 'To preserve peace', for example, is translated as 'an tsíocháin a chaomhnú' in the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 123). See further the commentary on Articles 24.1 and 28.3.3<sup>o</sup>, where 'cosain' and 'caomhnaigh' respectively express 'preserve'.

an cineama Ó Dónaill gives 'cineama' as a headword, simply translating it as 'cinema', also giving 'cineamascóp', 'cineamatagraf' and 'cinecheamara' as headwords, translated respectively as 'cinema-scope', 'cinematograph' and 'cine-camera'. Dinneen does not appear to give 'cineama' as a headword. De Bhaldraithe gives 'cineama; scannánaíocht' as Irish terms for 'cinema' (familiar), with 'cinema' in the sense of the building being translated as 'pictiúrlann, cineama, teach pictiúr'. Ó Dónaill translates 'pictiúrlann' as 'picture-house, cinema', also citing 'teach pictiúr, picture-house, cinema' and translates 'scannánaíocht' as (1) '(the) cinema', (2) '(act of) filming'. 'Pictiúrlann' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'cinema' in Iris an Phuist, 28/7/26. 'Taispeántas cineama' is cited as translating 'cinema exhibition' in the Health Act, 1947 (p. 147, ref. in Téarmaí Oifigiúla, where 'cinema projector' is translated as 'teilgeoir scannán'). L. Mc Cionnaith gives 'Terms from Staff of Dáil, Foclóir Oifigeamhail', as the source of his translation of 'cinema' as 'cineama'.

In s41(1) of the Finance Act, 1990, 'a film which is produced ... wholly or principally for exhibition to the public in cinema' is translated as 'scannán a thairgtear ... go hiomlán nó go príomha lena thaispeáint don phobal i bpictiúrlanna'. 'Cineama' is cited as translating 'cinema' in Statutory Instrument No. 249 of 1985 and in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 1106), while the 'International Catholic Cinema Office' is cited in Irish as 'Oifig Chaitliceach Idirnáisiúnta an Chineama'.

is dleacht dóibh 'Dleacht' is translated as 'duty' in Téarmaí

Dlí, 'dleachtanna báis' translating 'death duties', for example. Ó Dónaill translates 'dleacht' as (1) 'due', (a) 'lawful right', citing 'is é mo dhleacht é, it is my lawful right, it is due to me' and (3) '(Used as adjective with copula) Is dom is dleacht é, it is my due, it is my lawful duty; it is proper for me, An onóir is dleacht dó, the honour to which he is lawfully entitled'. Dinneen translates 'dleacht' as 'law or right, customs, due, toll, property; as adjective, lawful, due'. DIL translates 'dleacht' as 'lawful, due, rightful, permitted', translating 'dleacht do' as 'due to, right for', citing examples of this phrase from about 1400 onwards. 'Dleacht', in origin, is related to 'dliged', 'law'.

Note that, in s18(3)(b) of the Radio and Television Act, 1988 (as in s13 of the Broadcasting (Amendment) Act, 1976), 'is dleacht dóibh' was emended following 'their rightful' of the text of the Constitution being replaced in those Acts by 'rightful', reading as follows:

uphold the democratic values enshrined in the Constitution, especially those relating to rightful liberty of expression .... tacóidh sí leis an bhfiúchas daonlathach atá cumhdaithe sa Bhunreacht, go háirithe mar a bhaineann leis an tsaoirse cheart tuairimí a nochtadh.

In s262(2) of the Social Welfare (Consolidated) Act, 1981, 'that he is the rightful holder of a particular supplementary unemployment book' is translated as 'gurb é is sealbhóir dlisteanach ar leabhar difhostaíochta forliontach áirithe', this same text being translated as 'gurb é sealbhóir dleathach leabhair áirithe díomhaointis fhoirliontaigh' in s43(2) of the Insurance (Intermittent Unemployment) Act, 1942. 'Dleathach', however, is translated as 'lawful' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'The District Justice may order such goods or money to be delivered to the rightful owner thereof' is translated as 'féadfidh an Giúistís Dúithe a ordú go dtíolacfar na hearraí no an t-airgead san don té gur leis iad le ceart'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'rightful heir' as 'oighre dlisteanach' and gives 'dlisteanach, cóir' as translations of 'rightful' in the sense of 'rightful claim' – 'dlisteanach', however, is translated as 'legitimate' and 'cóir' (in 'cóir-chíos') as 'fair' in Téarmaí Dlí. De Bhaldraithe gives 'ceart' as a translation of 'rightful' in the sense of 'rightful conduct'. L. Mc Cionnaith refers the reader to 'lawful', 'legitimate' s.v. 'rightful', while T. O'Neill Lane translates 'rightful', in the sense of 'upright, just', as (1) 'dlisteanach', (2) 'dligheach' and (3) 'dleaghthach'.

tuairimí léirmheasa 'Tuairim' is translated as 'opinion' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the foregoing commentary. Ó Dónaill translates 'léirmheas' as (1) 'critical consideration, complete assessment' and (2) 'criticism, critique, review', this latter sense being the sense most commonly encountered today. Dinneen translates 'léir-mheas' as 'high esteem; a balancing consideration, estimate, judgment, decision; critical estimate, criticism', the latter word followed by the abbreviation for 'recent'. DIL gives two examples of the compound 'léirmes', s.v. 'léir' (translated as (a) 'assiduous, earnest, careful, zealous', (c) 'visible, perceptible', with 'mes(s)' being translated as 'the act of judging'), both of which come from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death, in the glossary to which 'léir-mes' is translated as 'act of closely considering, estimating', with DIL translating the compound as 'criticizing, calculating'.

Turning to current Parliamentary usage, the fourth report of the National Economic and Social Council, 'Regional Policy in Ireland: A Review', is styled 'Beartas Réigiúnach in Éirinn: Léirmheas' in Irish, while on the Dáil Order Paper, 5/7/77, 'Economic Review and Outlook' is cited as 'Léirmheas agus Ionchas an Gheilleagair'. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 260), 'to keep under review the monetary and financial situations of the Member States' is translated as 'staid airgeadaíochta agus staid airgeadais na mBallstát ... a choimeád faoi léirmheas' while, in the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 70), 'The Court of Justice shall review the legality of facts adopted jointly by the European Parliament and the Council' is translated as 'Déanfaidh an Chúirt Bhreithiúnais léirmheas ar dhlíthiúlacht ghníomhartha Pharlaimint na hEorpa agus na Comhairle arna nglacadh go comhpháirteach', with 'Judicial Control' being translated as 'Léirmheas breithiúnach' (p. 181).

Regarding 'criticism', 'it has been the subject of much expert criticism' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'do scrúduigh lucht eolais go maith é' in a Report of a Committee of the Houses of the Oireachtas. 'Criticism', in the sense of 'review', is cited as being translated as 'léirmheas' in the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927 (p. 181). 'Criticise' is translated both as 'inchreachadh' in Téarmaí Oifigiúla (MIS xii being given as source) and as 'léir-mheasaim' (no source being cited), while 'destructive criticism' is translated both as 'inchreachadh' and 'liobairt', with the booklets of terms issued by the Department of Education cited as source – Ó Dónaill translates 'inchreach' as 'reprove, rebuke, object to, criticize', followed by the abbreviation indicating that this word is cited only in earlier Irish literature. L. Mc Cionnaith translates 'criticise', in the sense of 'find fault', as 'bhí sé ag fagháil locht orm, ar an leabhar', 'bhí sé gham lochtú', indicating these phrases being current in Munster Irish. In the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 9/12/69, 'Privilege (Criticism of Ceann Comhairle)' is translated as 'Pribhléid (Lochtú ar an gCeann Comhairle)', while in the Proceedings of 12/3/70, 'Report of the Committee of Procedure and Privileges on a Magazine Item containing criticism of the Ceann Comhairle' is translated as 'tuarascáil ón gCoiste um Nós Imeachta agus Pribhléidí ar Mhír in Irisleabhar inar Cáineadh an Ceann Comhairle'.

Commenting on 'cáineadh' (literally 'censure') translating 'criticism' in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'criticism' has a fairly broad range of senses, including 'censure', but as we do not know exactly what 'criticism' in the context of the English text of the Constitution means and, as the drafters of the Irish text understood it to mean 'review' rather than 'censure', Professor Ó Murchú recommends translating 'criticism of' as 'a léirmheas'.

chomh tábhachtach sin Literally 'so important'. 'Matter of great import' is translated as 'cúrsa an-tábhachtach' in De Bhaldraithe. 'Matter' in this context is regularly translated as 'ábhar' in the Acts – see, for example, the Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1975, where 'Considering that the occurrence of such acts is a matter of grave concern' is translated as 'Á Bhreithniú Dóibh gurb ábhar mór inní é gníomhartha den sórt sin tarlú'. In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 44), 'each Member State shall treat its exchange-rate policy as a matter of common interest' is translated as 'déanfaidh gach Ballstát ... a bheartas rátaí malairte a bhreithniú mar ábhar leasa choitinn' and, on p. 248, 'the Member States agree to examine as a matter of priority the drafts submitted to them' is translated as 'comhaontaíonn na Ballstáit na dréachtaí a chuirfear faoina mbráid a scrúdú mar ábhar tosaíochta'.

'Grave' is also translated as 'tromaí' and 'tromchúiseach' in the Acts. In s13(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1967, for example, 'piracy or a grave breach such as is referred to in section 3(1)(i) of the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962' is translated as 'píoráideacht nó sárú tromchúiseach den sórt dá dtagraítear in alt 3(1)(i) den Acht um Choinbhinsiúin na Ginéive, 1962'. In s5(3) of the Criminal Justice Act, 1990, 'for grave reasons of a humanitarian nature' is translated as 'ar chúiseanna tromaí de chineál daonchairdiúil'.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'a matter of such' has no substantial sense and need not be followed closely in the translation. Professor Ó Murchú recommends translating the initial clause as 'Toisc a thábhachtaí thromchúisí don mhaitheas phoiblí atá ...'.

a nochtadh See the foregoing commentary. T. O'Neill Lane translates 'expression' in the sense of 'the act of declaring, signifying or uttering', as (a) 'labhairt', (b) 'rádh'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'expression' as 'cur (smaoineamh) i bhfocal', translating 'to give expression to his gratitude' as 'a bhuíochas a chur in iúl'. Note that 'expression' in the present context in the Constitution may refer not just to 'opinion' in 'organs of public opinion' but to 'convictions' in the opening sentence: 'The right of the citizens to express freely their convictions and opinions'. Colmán Ó Huallacháin, in his Dictionary of Philosophy (Foclóir Fealsaimh, 1958) translates 'expression' as 'léiriú', his entry s.v. 'léiriú', being as follows:

Fáltas a thabhairt i láthair a chuirfeadh eolas in iúl i dtaobh réaltachta ceilte (m. sh. cuma ar an aghaidh a thaispeánfadh staid chomhfheasa).

'Nationalist self-expression' is translated as 'féinléiriú náisiúnaíoch' in the New Ireland Forum Report (1984, 4.8). In the Programme for a Partnership Government (1993-97, p. 20), 'that both must have equally satisfactory, secure and durable, political, administrative and symbolic expression and protection' is translated as 'nach foláir go mbeadh siad araon in ann iad féin a léiriú agus cosaint a fháil i gcúrsaí polaitíochta agus riaracháin agus ar mhodh siombalach, ar bhealach chomh sásúil, chomh seasta agus chomh buan céanna'. In the Joint Declaration, December 1993, 'the right of freedom and expression of religion' is translated as 'an ceart ar shaoirse agus ar léiriú creidimh'.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'léiriú' is now generally understood as presenting something ("ábhar a chur i láthair"), that is, the manner it is made available rather than the substance. Professor Ó Murchú recommends translating this clause as 'a gcaomhnófaí dóibh i gcónaí an tsaoirse faisnéise is dleacht dóibh'.

aigne an phobail L. Mc Cionnaith's entry s.v. 'opinion', commences as follows: 'of opinion, view, bhíos ar an aigne sin, bhíos-sa ar an aigne chéadna, táim ar aon aigne leat san méid sin; tá sé ar lánaigne leat' – all of which phrases are cited from Munster and Connacht Irish. Further on he returns to 'opinion' in the sense of 'view' and cites the following: 'is é mo thuairim go ...', 'is é tuairim na ndaoine go ...', the latter expression being cited from the three main dialects, with 'is é tuairimidheacht na ndaoine go ...' being cited from the Rev. Seóirse Mac Clúin's Réilthíní Óir (1922). We find (on p. 244 of the second part of that work), s.v. 'tuairimíocht': 'Sé tuairimíocht na ndaoine anso go leanfaidh an tsíocháin = tuairimí a bhíonn ag imeacht is á ndéanamh is á gcaitheamh'. Dinneen translates 'tuairimidheacht' as 'opinion, act of guessing, expressing an opinion about' while Ó Dónaill translates 'tuairimíocht' simply as '(act of) guessing, guess-work, speculation'. De Bhaldraithe, perhaps following the Constitution, translates 'public opinion' as 'aigne an phobail'. 'Opinion' is translated as 'tuairim' in Téarmaí Dlí. T. O'Neill Lane (2nd ed.) translates 'it is the general opinion' as 'do réir gach tuairime', translating 'I am of the same opinion as yourself' as (i) 'táim ar an aigne chéadna leat féin' and (ii) 'táim ar aon intinn leat-sa'.

Ó Dónaill translates 'aigne an duine' as 'man's mind, way of thinking'. Dinneen translates 'aigne' as 'the heart, the mind; intention, desire, spirit, courage, resolution'. 'Aicned', in the sense of 'inherent quality, essence, nature', is cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses onwards, the secondary senses of 'mind, spirit, feeling' and 'mind, attention, thought' are later in date. 'Aigne' translates 'mind' in the Acts – 'infirmité of mind or body', in s5(3)(a) of the Electricity (Supply) (Amendment) Act, 1970, for example, being translated as 'éiglíocht aigne nó choirp'. In s112 of the Mines and Quarries Act, 1965, 'physically or mentally unfit for such employment' is translated as 'mí-oiriúnach ó thaobh coirp nó aigne don fhostaíocht sin'.

Turning to 'opinion' in the Acts, in s11(2) of the Extradition Act, 1965, 'an account of his race, religion, nationality or political opinion' is translated as 'mar gheall ar a chine, a chreideamh, a náisiúntacht nó a thuairimí polaitíochta'. In the New Ireland Forum Report (1984, 1.7), 'a wide range of opinion' is translated as 'éagsúlacht mhór ag baint lena dtuairimí'. See the foregoing commentary regarding early citations of 'tuairim', 'oipineon' and 'barúil'.

toisc This headword is translated as 'because, on account of' in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Article 42.3.2°. In the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 2/12/70, 'A quorum not being present after an interval of not less than three minutes, the Dáil resumed' is translated as 'Ós rud é go rabhthas fós gan chóram i gceann seal nár lú ná trí nóiméad d'athchrom an Dáil ar a gnó'.

Jena chur in áirithe See the commentary on Article 15.10; 'in áirithe' usually translates 'engaged, reserved', 'áiritim' being translated as 'I retain (council)' in Téarmaí Dlí. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'deimhniú' rather than 'áiritiú' in the direct translation below.

San am chéanna According to the official standard, the 'c' would not be lenited here, being an adjective qualifying a masculine noun in the dative singular – see the commentary on Article 45.

orgain See the commentary on Article 6.2. Note that 'human organs' is translated as 'baill bheatha dhaonna' in s24(x) of the Value Added Tax (Amendment) Act, 1978.

an t-ord See the commentary on Article 40.6.1°.

leas an phobail See the commentary on Article 12.8.

Standardised Irish text

Ach toisc oiliúint aigne an phobail a bheith chomh tábhachtach sin do leas an phobail, féachfaidh an Stát lena chur in áirithe nach ndéanfar orgain aigne an phobail, mar shampla, an raidió is an preas is an cineama, a úsáid chun an t-ord nó an mhoráltacht phoiblí nó údarás an Stáit a bhonnbhrieadh. San am céanna coimeádfaidh na horgain sin an tsaoirse is dleacht dóibh chun tuairimí a nochtadh agus orthu sin tuairimí léirmheasa ar bheartas an Rialtais.

Direct translation

Toisc gurb ábhar lena mbaineann an oiread sin tábhachta tromai<sup>1</sup> don mhaitheas phoiblí é<sup>2</sup> múnú<sup>3</sup> thuairimí<sup>4</sup> an phobail,<sup>5</sup> áfach, féachfaidh an Stát lena áiritiú<sup>6</sup> nach n-úsáidfear orgáin thuairimí an phobail, ar nós an raidió, an phreasa, an chineama, le linn dóibh a gceartsaoirse<sup>7</sup> léirithe<sup>8</sup> a chaomhnú, lena n-áirítear beartas an Rialtais a léirmheas<sup>9</sup>, chun an bonn a bhaint ón ord poiblí ná ón moráltacht phoiblí ná ó údarás an Stáit<sup>10,11</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'an oiread sin mórthábhachta'
- 2 'Toisc a thábhachtaí thromchúisi don mhaitheas phoiblí atá'
- 3 'oilíúint', 'oideachasú'
- 4 'aigne', 'thuairimíocht'
- 5 'Toisc múnú thuairimí an phobail a bheith ina ábhar atá chomh tábhachtach sin don mhaitheas phoiblí.'
- 6 'lena dheimhniú'
- 7 'a saoirse cheart'
- 8 'a gceartsaoirse chun tuairimí a chur in iúl'
- 9 'a cháineadh'
- 10 'chun an t-ord poiblí nó an mhoráltacht phoiblí nó údarás an Stáit a lagú', 'chun dochar a dhéanamh don ord poiblí nó don mhoráltacht phoiblí nó d'údarás an Stáit'
- 11 The following is the complete translation recommended by Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú: 'Toisc a thábhachtaí thromchúisi don mhaitheas phoiblí atá oiliúint aigne an phobail, féachfaidh an Stát lena dheimhniú nach mbainfear leas/úsáid as orgáin na tuairimíochta poiblí, mar atá an raidió, an preas agus an cineama, a gcaomhnófar dóibh i gcónaí an tsaoirse faisnéise is dleacht dóibh, ar a n-áireofar beartas an Rialtais a léirmheas, chun an bonn a bhaint ón ord poiblí, ná ón moráltacht phoiblí, ná ó údarás an Stáit.'

ARTICLE 40.6.1°i (contd.)

AIRTEAGAL 40.6.1°i (ar lean.)

TÉACS GAEILGE

Aon ní diamhaslach nó ceannairceach nó graosta a fhoilsiú nó a aithris is cion inphionóis é de réir dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The publication or recitation of anything blasphemous or rebellious or obscene is a punishable crime in accordance with law.

ENGLISH TEXT

The publication or utterance of blasphemous, seditious, or indecent matter is an offence which shall be punishable in accordance with law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Utterance' is expressed in the Irish text by 'aithris', which verb generally has the sense of 'recite (publicly declaim)'; qualified by the preposition 'ar' it means 'imitate'.
- 2 'Indecent' is expressed in the Irish text by the Irish legal term for 'obscene' ('graosta'), 'indecent' being translated as 'migheanasach' in Tearmaí Dlí.
- 3 'Seditious' is expressed as 'ceannairceach', the adjectival form of the term expressing 'rebellion' in Article 40.4.6°, this however being in accord with Tearmaí Dlí in both cases.
- 4 'Matter' is expressed as 'aon ní' ('anything') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Blasphemous, seditious, or indecent' is expressed in the Irish text as 'diamhaslach nó ceannairceach nó graosta', 'blasphemous or seditious or indecent'.

Commentary

a aithris In Article 15.12, 'and utterances made in either House' is expressed as 'maille le caint ar bith dá ndéantar in aon Teach díobh', while in the following section, 'and shall not, in respect of any utterance in either House, be amenable to any court' is expressed as 'agus cibé caint a dhéanfaidh comhalta in aon Teach díobh ní inchúisithe é mar gheall uirthi in aon chúirt'.

The verb 'aithris' is translated as (1) 'narrate, recite', (2) 'imitate' and (3) 'mimic' in Ó Dónaill. 'Aithrisim' is translated as 'I tell, narrate, report, repeat, recite, imitate, copy, mimic, ridicule' in Dinneen. DIL translates 'aithrisid' as (a) 'repeats, tells' and (b) 'imitates', this verb being based on 'aithris', translated as (a) 'act of telling, relating, relation, account' and (b) 'act of imitating, copying; imitation; example'. No examples of 'aithris' are cited from the early sources, this word being perhaps, according to DIL, a compound of 'aith-' ('re-') and 'aires' ('[fore-] knowledge') or 'aires' ('history, knowledge or record of events').

Turning to the Acts, 'úsáid a bhaint as aon uirlis nó fearas ... leictreach nó eile, chun glaonna éan nó glaonna mamach fiáin, a ligean nó a aithris' translates 'use an electrical or other instrument or appliance ... emitting or imitating bird-calls or the calls of wild mammals' in s35(1)(d) of the Wildlife Act, 1976, while 'Déanfar in ordú a bhaineann le comhaontú um eiseachadadh ... tearmaí an chomhaontaithe ... a aithris nó a chorprú' translates 'An order relating to an extradition agreement ... shall recite or embody the terms of the agreement' in s8(3) of the Extradition Act, 1965. 'Aithris ... ar fhógrán sonraithe' translates 'repetitions of a specified advertisement' in s42(2)(c) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, while 'aithris dhealraitheach' translates 'colourable imitation' in Tearmaí Dlí.

'I utter (a forgery)' is translated as 'rithim (brionnú)' in Tearmaí Dlí – see, for example, s39 of the Office Premises Act, 1958, where 'If any person ... knowingly utters or makes use of any such certificate so forged ... as aforesaid' is translated as 'Duine ar bith ... a rithfeas nó a úsáidfear go feasach aon deimhniú den tsaghas sin a bheas brionnaithe ... mar adúradh', with 'if any person ... willingly connives at any such forging, ... uttering ... as aforesaid' being translated as 'Duine ar bith a chúlcheadóis go toiliúil aon bhrionnú, ... rith ... mar adúradh'. In Article 18 of the 1922 Constitution, 'in respect of any utterance in either House' is translated as 'i dtaobh éinní dá ndéarfa sé in aon Tigh den dá Thigh'.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú questions whether 'a rá' can be used with 'ábhar' (i.e. literally 'to say material') – note above how we have 'éinní dá ndéarfa sé' in the 1922 Constitution, however. Professor Ó Murchú finds no fault with 'aithris', remarking that it is only with the preposition 'ar' that it has the sense of 'imitate'. Máirtín Ó Murchú also suggests using 'a aitheasc'.

inphionóis This term is translated as 'punishable' in Téarmaí Dlí. In s3(1) of the Genocide Act, 1973, 'No offence which, if committed in the State, would be punishable as genocide ... shall be regarded as a political offence' is translated as 'Ní mheasfar gur cion polaitiúil ... aon chion ab inphionóis, dá mba sa Stát a rinneadh é, mar chinedhióthú'. In s120(4) of the Succession Act, 1965, 'A person who has been found guilty of an offence against the deceased ... punishable by imprisonment for a maximum period of at least two years' is translated as 'Duine a fuarthas ciontach i gcion in aghaidh an éagaigh ... is inphionóis le príosúnacht ar feadh uastréimhse dhá bhliain ar a laghad'. In s10(1) of the Extradition Act, 1965, 'extradition shall be granted only in respect of an offence which is punishable under the laws of the requesting country ... by imprisonment' is translated as 'ní dheonófar eiseachadadh ach amháin i leith ciona atá inphionóis faoi dhlíthe na tíre iarrthaí ... le príosúnacht', while in s20(1) of the Misuse of Drugs Act, 1977, 'Any person who aids, abets, counsels or induces the commission in a place outside the State of an offence punishable under a corresponding law in force in that place' is translated as 'Aon duine a chabhróidh nó a neartóidh le duine, nó a chomhairleoidh dó nó a thabharfaidh air, cion a dhéanamh, in áit lasmuigh den Stát, atá inphionósaithe faoi dhlí comhréire a bheidh i bhfeidhim san áit sin'.

diamhaslach This headword is translated as 'blasphemous' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, 'diamhasla', literally 'god-insulting', being translated as 'blasphemy' in both sources. Dinneen translates 'dia-mhaslach' as 'blasphemous, impious'. 'Maslach' is translated as 'abusive, insolent' in DIL, with only one example being cited, 'masla'/'maslad' ('insult, opprobrium, disgrace'), on which it is based, not being cited in any of the early sources.

In s3(2) of the Censorship of Films (Amendment) Act, 1925, 'by reason of its being indecent, obscene, or blasphemous, or because the display thereof in public would convey suggestions contrary to public morality or would be otherwise subversive of public morality' is translated as 'toisc é bheith nea-náireach, draosta, no naomhaithiseach no toisc go gcuirfí smaointe in úil a bheadh contrárdha don mhóráltacht phuiblí no go millfí an mhóráltacht phuiblí ar aon chuma eile dá nochtfí go puiblí é'. 'Naomh-aithiseach' is translated as 'blasphemous, profane' in Dinneen, 'naomhaithiseach' being similarly translated in Ó Dónaill.

ceannairceach This headword is translated as 'seditious' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'ceannairc' translating 'sedition' and 'ceannairc faoi airm' translating 'armed rebellion'. See the commentary on Article 40.4.6° regarding 'ceannairc', on which this adjective is based. Ó Dónaill translates 'ceannairceach' as 'mutinous, rebellious'. While Dinneen gives 'ceannairc' as a headword, translated as 'strife, division; a meeting; rebellion, conspiracy', he does not appear to give 'ceannairceach' as a headword. DIL translates 'cennaircech' as 'contentious, quarrelsome', giving examples from the fifteenth century (this headword being translated as 'cantankerous' by the editor of Caitheáim Thoirdealbhaigh) onwards.

Turning to the Acts, in s15(9)(d)(ii) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923, '(persons) belonging to ... any unlawful or seditious association' is translated as '(daoine) do bhain le haon chumann nea-dhleathach no ceannairceach' and 'treasonable or seditious documents' is translated as 'scríbhinní tréasúnta no ceannairceacha' in s2(1) of the Public Safety Act, 1927.

graosta This adjective is translated as 'obscene' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'graosta' as 'lewd, obscene, filthy', translating 'caint ghraosta', 'scéal graosta' and 'amhrán graosta' respectively as 'bawdy talk', 'smutty story' and 'ribald song'. Dinneen gives Ó Dónaill's translation of 'graosta' in reverse order. DIL translates 'graosda' as 'obscene, lewd, licentious', giving but one example, from Ó Heoghusa's An Teagasg Críosaíde (1611) (with 'comhrádh', 'conversation'), referring to two citations in Donlevy's An Teagasg Críosaíde (1742). DIL also gives two examples of the headword 'gróesda' (translated as 'gross, obscene'), both with the plural of 'briathar' ('word'), from Aodh Mac Aingil's Scáthán Shacramuinte na hAithridhe (1618) and Flaithrí Ó Maolchonaire's Desiderius, nó Scáthán an Chrábhaidh (1616). Note that 'draosta' is the form of this headword in the original text. Ó Dónaill refers to 'graosta' as the standard form under that headword, Dinneen giving a separate entry, translating 'draosta' as 'obscene, smutty'.

'Indecent' is translated as 'míghéanasach' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'indecent assault' and 'indecent exposure' are translated respectively as 'ionsaí míghéanasach' and 'nochtheadh míghéanasach'. 'Indecent' is translated as 'míghéanasach; míchuibheasach' in De Bhaldraithe. Note that in s9(1)(d) of the Radio and Television Act, 1988, '(that) anything which may reasonably be regarded as offending against good taste or decency' is translated as '(nach gcráolfadh sé) aon ní a bhféadfaí a mheas le réasún gur ní é a ghoileann ar chaoibhéasa nó ar chuibheas'. In s2 of the Censorship of Publications Act, 1929, we find the following 'Definition':

The word 'indecent' shall be construed as including suggestive of, or inciting to sexual immorality or unnatural vice or likely in any similar way to corrupt or deprave. Léireofar an focal 'nea-náireach' mar fhocal a fholuionn rud a mheabhródh mí-mhóráltacht inscine no dubháilceas mí-nádúrtha do dhuine no a ghriósadh chuige é no is dócha a dhéanfadh in aon tslí eile den tsórt san duine do thruailliú no do chorbha.

The same English text (commencing with 'the word "indecent" includes' and 'other' inserted before 'similar') is translated as follows in s1 of the Censorship of Publications Act, 1946:

folaíonn rud a bheith ‘míghéanasach’ é bheith ina rud a mheabhródh mí-mhoráltacht chollaí nó duáilceas mí-nádúrtha do dhuine nó a chorródh chuige sin é nó is dócha a dhéanfadh in aon tslí eile den tsórt sin duine a thruailliú nó a chorbhadh.

‘That a book is indecent or obscene’ is translated as ‘go bhfuil leabhar míghéanasach nó draosta’ in s2(1) of the Censorship of Publications Act, 1967.

Returning to the early Acts, ‘Indecent Assault on Males or Females’ is translated as ‘Ionnsuidhe Mí-mhorálta ar Fhíreannaigh no ar Bhaineannacha’ in the Third Schedule to the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923 (where, incidentally, ‘Blasphemy’ is translated as ‘Diamhasla’), while in the Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1926, ‘any message or communication of an indecent, obscene, or offensive character’ is translated as ‘aon teachtaireacht no conbharsáid de shaghas náireach no draosta no maslathach’.

aon ní Literally ‘any thing’. In s11(2) of the Minimum Notice and Terms of Employment Act, 1973, ‘The decision of the Tribunal on any matter referred to it under this section shall be final and conclusive’ is translated as ‘Is cinneadh críochnaitheach dochloíte a bheidh i gcinneadh an Bhinse ar aon ní a tharchuirfear chuige faoin alt seo’. Usually, however, ‘aon ní’ translates ‘anything’ and, in the negative, ‘nothing’, in the Acts – see s3(1) of the Fourth Schedule to the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975, for example, where ‘the making of anything available for inspection’ is translated as ‘aon ní a chur ar fáil lena iniúchadh’. See also the commentary on Article 13.7.1<sup>o</sup>. ‘Matter’ is translated as ‘ábhar’ in Téarmaí Dlí and is generally translated accordingly in the Acts – see s48(h) of the above-mentioned Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975, for example, where ‘licences to use any copyright material’ is translated as ‘ceadúnais aon ábhar cóipchirt ... a úsáid’.

Direct translation

Is cion inphionóis<sup>1</sup> de réir dlí ábhar diamhaslach, ceannaireach, nó míghéanasach a fhoilsiú nó a rá<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘Is cion inphionóis é, ‘a bheidh inphionósaithe’, ‘a bheidh inphionóis’
- 2 ‘a aithris’, ‘a aitheasc’

ARTICLE 40.6.1<sup>o</sup>ii AIRTEAGAL 40.6.1<sup>o</sup>ii

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ceart na saoránach chun teacht ar tionól go sítheoilte gan arm.

Féadfar socrú a dhéanamh de réir dlí chun cosc a chur nó rialú a dhéanamh ar thionóil a gcinnfear de réir dlí gur baol briseadh síochána a theacht díobh nó gur contúirt nó cránas don phobal i gcoitinne iad, agus fós ar thionóil i gcóngar do cheachtar de Thithe an Oireachtas.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The right of the citizens to come on assembly peacefully unarmed.

Provision may be made in accordance with law to prevent or regulate assemblies from which it is determined in accordance with law that there is a danger that breach of peace will come or that they are a danger or an annoyance to the people in general, and moreover assemblies near either of the Houses of the Oireachtas.

ENGLISH TEXT

The right of the citizens to assemble peaceably and without arms.

Provision may be made by law to prevent or control meetings which are determined in accordance with law to be calculated to cause a breach of the peace or to be a danger or nuisance to the general public and to prevent or control meetings in the vicinity of either House of the Oireachtas.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘Meetings which are determined ... to be calculated to cause a breach of the peace’ is expressed as ‘tionóil a gcinnfear ... gur baol briseadh síochána a theacht díobh’ (‘meetings which are determined that there is a danger that a breach of peace will come from them’) in the Irish text.
- 2 ‘To assemble’ is expressed as ‘teacht ar tionól’ (‘to come on assembly’) in the Irish text.
- 3 ‘Peaceably and without arms’ is expressed as ‘go sítheoilte gan arm’ (‘peacefully unarmed’) in the Irish text.
- 4 The Irish term used to express ‘assemble’ (‘tionól’) is also used to express ‘meeting’, the latter term being translated as ‘cruinniú’ in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 5 ‘By law’ and ‘in accordance with law’ are both expressed as ‘de réir dlí’ in the Irish text, ‘de réir’ being translated as ‘in accordance with’ in Téarmaí Dlí – where, however, ‘scor as oifig de réir oird’ is translated as ‘retirement by rotation’.
- 6 ‘Nuisance’ is expressed as ‘cránas’ (‘annoyance’) in the Irish text, ‘núis’ translating ‘nuisance’ in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 7 ‘To prevent or control’ is repeated in the English text, the latter citation being expressed simply by ‘fós’ (‘moreover’) in the Irish text.

Note that Article 9 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

The right of free expression of opinion as well as the right to assemble peaceably and without arms, and to form associations or unions is guaranteed for purposes not opposed to public morality. Laws regulating the manner in which the right of forming associations and the right of free assembly may be exercised shall contain no political, religious or class distinction. Is slán ceart oipíneon do chur in uil gan chosg agus ceart teacht le chéile go síochánta gan airm, agus ceart cumainn no aontaisí do bhunú ar aon toisg ná fuil i gcoinne mhoráltacht phuiblí. Na dlithe a rialóidh an tslí ‘na bhféadfar ceart cumainn do bhunú agus ceart saor-theacht le chéile do chur i bhfeidhm, ní dhéanfaid aon leithreachas i dtaobh polaitíochta ná aicme.

This Article was amended as follows in s24(1) of the Constitution (Amendment No. 17) Act, 1931:

Whenever it appears to the Executive Council that the holding of public meetings in or in the vicinity of any particular building or any particular road or street is likely to lead to a breach of the peace or to be prejudicial to the maintenance of law and order... Pé uair do chítear don Ard-Chomhairle gur deallrathach gurb é thiocthadh as cruinnithe puiblí do chomóradh in aon thoirgint áirithe no ar aon bhóthar no shráid áirithe no in aice leo ná go mbrisfí an tsíocháin no go ndéanfaí dochar do dhlí agus d'ordú do choimeád.

Commentary

teacht ar tionól ... ar thionól 'After the re-assembly of Dáil Éireann' is expressed as 'ar Dháil Éireann d'ationól' in Article 18.3, with 'after a dissolution and re-assembly of Dáil Éireann' being expressed as 'I ndiaidh lánscoir agus ationól do Dáil Éireann' in Article 27.5.ii and 'on the reassembly of Dáil Éireann' being expressed as 'ar ationól do Dháil Éireann' in Article 28.10. 'The right of free assembly' is expressed as '(modh oibríthe) ... an chirt chun teacht le chéile ar saorthionól' in Article 40.6.2°. 'Tionól neamhdhleathach' is translated as 'unlawful assembly' in Téarmaí Dlí.

'Tionól' is translated as 'gathering, assembly' in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Articles 15.11.3° and 18.8. DIL translates 'tinól' as (a) 'act of collecting, gathering' and (b) 'an (armed) assembly; band, company', citing examples of sense (a) from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards. In the early Irish law-tracts, 'tinól' also had the sense of 'that part of the marriage contribution which consisted of cattle' – see DIL s.v. 'tinól' (c).

'Tionól na Dála tar éis Olltoghcháin' translates 'meeting of Dáil subsequent to General Election' in the very first heading in the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann, with s19 reading as follows:

Fiche comhalta an córam is gá chun tionól den Dáil a bheith ann. The quorum necessary to constitute a meeting of the Dáil shall be twenty members.

'The Assembly of the European Communities' is styled 'Tionól na gComhphobal Eorpach' in s1 of the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977 ('An tAcht um Thoghcháin do Thionól na hEorpa, 1977').

Turning to 'assemble', in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 2/7/69, 'The Dáil assembled at 3 p.m.' is translated as 'Tháinig an Dáil le chéile ar 3 p.m.' In the text of the Final Act in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 1461), 'The Plenipotentiaries of ... assembled at Brussels on the twenty-second day of January one thousand nine hundred and seventy-two' is translated as 'Tá na Lánchumhachtaigh ... Ar theacht le chéile dóibh sa Bhruiséil, an dóú lá is fiche d'Eanáir míle naoi gcéad seachtó a dó'. 'Teacht le chéile' translates 'assemble' in Article 9 of the 1922 Constitution and in s7(3) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925, 'If any person is present at ... an assembly of persons who ... have assembled or met together' is translated as 'Má bhíonn éinne láithreach ... i dtionól daoine ... a dhin ... teacht no cruinniú le chéile'.

'Meeting' is translated as 'cruinniú' in Téarmaí Dlí where 'annual general meeting' is translated as 'cruinniú ginearálta bliantúil'.

go sítheoilte 'Picéadú sítheoilte' is translated as 'peaceful picketing' in Téarmaí Dlí. According to Ó Dónaill,

'síthóilte' is the standard form of this adjective, translated as 'settled, peaceful'. Dinneen translates 'sítheoilte' as 'peaceful, polite, affable, refined' and s.v. 'sítheoilteacht', quotes the following from Pádraig Feiritéir of New York, formerly of the Ballyferriter district of Kerry: 'ar chumha ná ar chleas ní ghlacfaid sítheoilteacht' ('on no consideration will they be satisfied with mild measures'). DIL cites examples of the adverbial usage s.v. 'síthóilte' ('sítháilte'), mainly from the seventeenth century, the first example being 'an mbítear sunn go sítháilte' ('are men at peace [with me] here?'), from a miscellaneous collection of religious poetry, Dán Dé. 'Síthóilte'/'sítháilte' has been translated as 'peaceful joy', that is, as a compound of 'síd' and 'fáilte', but according to DIL it is a participle of the verb 'síthlaid' ('strains, filters, sifts'), meaning 'purified, clear' and hence 'settled, tranquil (?)'. 'Síthlaid' is based on 'síthal', 'a vessel for drawing water, a bucket', which comes from the Latin 'situla'.

Turning to 'peaceable' in the Acts, in s2(b) of the Prohibition of Forcible Entry and Occupation Act, 1971, '(unless) he does so with all reasonable speed and in a peaceable manner' is translated as 'mura ndéanfaidh sé sin a luaithe ariamh is réasúnach agus go síochánta'. In s10 of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1923, 'Provided always that before breaking into any dwelling house ... the Under-Sheriff shall have made reasonable efforts to enter peaceably and without violence' is translated as 'Más rud é gur dhin an Fo-Shirriamh sarar bhris sé isteach in aon tigh comhnuithe ... iarrachtaí réasúnta ar dhul isteach go síochánta agus gan foiréigean'.

baol This headword is translated as 'danger' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'is baol liom, I fear' and 'ní baol duit titim, you are in no danger of falling, you need not fear that you will fall'. Dinneen translates 'baoghal' as 'danger; a point open to attack; apprehension', citing 'baol báis, danger of death', for example. DIL translates 'báegul' as 'unguarded condition, danger, hazard, vulnerability; chance, opportunity (of taking by surprise, inflicting an injury)', giving examples from the eighth-century Glosses onwards. In early Irish law-tracts, 'báegul' had the sense of 'making a mistake (in judgement), etc.' (DIL). Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 304, translates 'báegul' as 'legal error, procedural mistake', citing the often repeated maxim in the law-tracts, 'cach brithemoin a báegul' ('to every judge his error', i.e. 'every judge must bear the responsibility for any mistakes he makes', ibid, p. 54).

Turning to the Acts, 'go mba dhóigh baol báis do bhaint le haon mhoill ag fáil an bharántais' translates 'that the delay in obtaining a warrant would be likely to endanger life' in s40(1)(c) of the Dangerous Substances Act, 1972, with 'gur léir an long a bheith neamhoiriúnach le dul chun farraige gan bheith ina baol báis do dhaoine' translating 'that the ship is manifestly unfit to proceed to sea without danger to human life' in s18(4) of the Merchant Shipping (Load Lines) Act, 1968, and 'chun go n-íoslaghdófaí an baol' translating 'to minimise the risk' in s3(2)7(c) of the Local Government (Multi-Storey Buildings) Act, 1988.

Turning to 'to be calculated to' in the Acts, in s11(3) of the Building Societies Act, 1976, 'that the name of the proposed society ... so resembles the name of another society ... as to be calculated to deceive' is translated as 'gur ainm é atá chomh cosúil sin le hainm cumainn eile

... gur dóigh dó meabhlú' and in s140(1) of the Mines and Quarries Act, 1965, 'a document so closely resembling any such certificate as to be calculated to deceive' is translated as 'doiciméad a bheidh chomh cosúil le haon deimhniú den sórt sin gur dóigh dó daoine a mheabhlú'. In s6(1)(a) of the Firearms (Proofing) Act, 1968, 'a mark so nearly resembling such a mark as to be calculated to deceive' is translated as 'marc chomh gar i gcosúlacht le marc den sórt sin gur chúis mheabhlaithe é', while in s14(2) of the Road Traffic Act, 1968, 'or a mark so nearly resembling it as to be calculated to deceive' is translated as 'Nó marc chomh garchosúil leis go rachadh sé chun meabhlaitheacht a dhéanamh ar dhuine'. In s55(1) of the Central Bank Act, 1942, 'or so nearly resembling as to be calculated to deceive' is translated as 'no bheidh chó cosúil sin le ceachtar aca san gur deallrathach go meallfaí duine léi'.

In s15(1) of the Capital Acquisitions Tax Act, 1976, 'subject to such conditions as might reasonably be calculated to obtain for him the best price for the property' is translated as 'faoi réir cibé coinníollacha ba dhóigh, le réasún, a tharraingeodh an praghas ab fhearr ar an maoin don díoltóir'. We find 'dóigh' again in s5(2)(c) of the Tourist Traffic Act, 1952, where 'which appear to the Board to be calculated to improve tourist traffic' is translated as 'is dóigh leis an mBord d'fheabhsódh an trácht cuartaíochta'. In s31(2)(a) of the Electricity (Supply) (Amendment) Act, 1945, on the other hand, 'and in such other manner as shall appear to the Minister to be calculated to bring his said attention to the knowledge of persons concerned' is translated as 'agus i pé slí eile chífear don Aire a bhéarfais le fios do dhaoine lena mbainfidh an scéal go bhfuil sé ar an intinn sin'. Finally, in s2 of the Agricultural Products (Regulation of Export) (Amendment) Act, 1935, 'as appears to him to be calculated to secure ...' is translated as 'chífear do is deallrathach a chuirfidh in áirithe'.

'He calculated she would come' is cited in Foclóir Oifigiúil as being translated as 'bhí sé ag leagan amach go dtiocfadh sí' in L. Mc Cionnaith. De Bhaldraithe translates 'news calculated to astonish him' as 'scéal a chuirfeadh iontas air' and 'words calculated to reassure us' as 'caint ar dhóigh di misneach a thabhairt dúinn'.

cránas Ó Dónaill translates 'cránas' as 'affliction; vexation, annoyance', citing 'cránas a thabhairt do dhuine, to cause affliction to someone, to annoy someone' and 'cránas a thabhairt do do cholainn, to mortify one's body'. Dinneen translates 'crádhnas' as 'annoyance, mortification, torture'. DIL cites only one example of 'craidenus' – '(frie) huatbas 7 craidenus' ('horror and affliction') – this word being based on 'crád', 'torment, anguish, misery; act of tormenting, persecuting, etc.'

'Nuisance' is translated as 'núis' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'private nuisance' and 'public nuisance' are translated respectively as 'núis phríobháideach' and 'núis phoiblí'. In s125 of the Road Traffic Act, 1961, 'Nothing in this Act shall authorise any person to use in a public place a vehicle so constructed or used as to cause a public or private nuisance' is translated as 'Ní údaróidh aon ní san Acht seo d'aon duine feithicil a úsáid in áit phoiblí a bheidh deartha nó a úsáidfear i slí a dhéanfaidh núis phoiblí nó príobháideach'. In s24(2) of the Air Pollution Act, 1987, 'The occupier of any premises shall not cause or permit an emission from such premises in such a quantity, or in such a manner, as to be a nuisance' is translated as 'Ní chuirfidh áititheoir aon áitribh faoi deara ná ní cheadóidh sé astaíocht a theacht as an áitreabh sin i gcainníocht a d'fhágfadh nó ar shlí a d'fhágfadh gur núis í' and in s32(1) of the Local Government (Sanitary Services) Act, 1948, 'If a temporary dwelling is in such a state as to be a nuisance' is translated as 'Má bhíonn teaghas sealadach sa riocht sin gur núis é'. In s39(4)(b) of the Housing (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1931, however, we find 'or is likely to become in such a state as to be a nuisance' translated as 'no is dócha thiofadh chun bheith sa riocht san go bhfuil no go mbeidh sé ina chráiteas'. Similarly, in s20(1) of the Local Government Act, 1925, 'which is in such a state as to be a nuisance' is translated as 'agus é ar a leithéid sin de staid gur cráiteas é'. Finally, 'guilty of conduct which is a nuisance or annoyance to adjoining occupiers' is translated as 'ciontach in iompar is cráiteas no is ciapa ar shealbhóirí teoranta' in s4(1)(b) of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923.

Note that L. Mc Cionnaith cites 'ba mhór an crádh é' from Connacht and Munster s.v. 'nuisance', in the sense of 'worrying thing, person', with 'is mór an núis na páistí do bheith ag déanamh torainn' ('it is a nuisance that the children are so noisy') from Connacht.

cosc a chun .... ar 'Cosc' is translated as 'obstruction' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'I obstruct' is translated as 'coiscim'. 'Cosc' is translated as 'check, restraint, prevention, prohibition' in Ó Dónaill, where 'cosc a chur ar dhuine' is translated as 'to check, restrain, someone' and 'cosc a chur le rud' is translated as 'to put a stop to something'. Dinneen translates 'cosc' as 'act of restraining, restraint; preventing, hindering, intercepting; reprimanding; correcting; a cessation; a brake; a giving up; impediment, hindrance, restriction, prohibition, stop', with 'cuirim cosc le (or ar)' translated as 'I prevent, hinder, stop'. DIL gives examples of the phrase 'do-beir (cuirid) cosc for' from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms – 'nirbuchosc coir dorratsat forru són' ('it was not a proper correction that they had inflicted upon them') glossing Latin 'correptionis' – and from later sources. 'Cosc', verbal noun of 'con-secha', is translated as (a) 'act of reproving, admonishing; correcting, reproof, correction' and (b) 'act of hindering, preventing; staunching (of wounds)' in DIL.

In the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97 (p. 28), 'chun cosc a chur ar iarratas ó chéile an céile eile a chur isteach dá (h)ainneoin' translates 'to prohibit applications for involuntary admissions made by a spouse'. 'Prevents, or attempts to prevent, any person from appearing before or being questioned by an inspector' is translated as 'chuirfidh cosc, nó a fhéachfaidh le cosc a chur, le haon duine ó láithriú os comhair nó óna cheistiú ag cigire' in s11(4)(d) of the Holidays (Employment) Act, 1973. In s26 of the Sea Pollution Act, 1991, 'Powers of Minister to prevent, mitigate or eliminate pollution' is translated as 'Cumhachtaí an Aire chun truailliú a chosc, a mhaolú nó a chealú'. 'Cosc a chur ar' translates 'obstruct' in s147 of the Electoral Act, 1922.

rialú a dhéanamh ar 'Rialú' is translated as 'ruling' in Téarmaí Dlí, where the verb 'rialaim' is translated as 'I control, I rule'. 'Rialú' is translated as 'rule, regulation; control, government' in Ó Dónaill. 'Riaghlughadh' is translated as 'the act of ruling, government, discipline, management' in Dinneen, where the following proverb is cited: 'is dual riaghlughadh do réir oideachais' ('the ruler is according to the upbringing he has received'). Old Irish 'riagol', on which 'riaglaid' is based, comes from Latin 'rēgula'. DIL gives examples of both 'riaglad' ('regulating, ruling, controlling'), verbal noun of 'riaglaid' ('regulates, orders, arranges') and 'riaghlughadh' ('regulates, orders, arranges'), verbal noun of the later verb 'riaglaigid', '= riaglaid').

In s3 of the Article VI of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, 1957, entitled 'Control of capital transfers' ('Aistrithe caipitil a rialú'), 'Members may exercise such controls as are necessary to regulate international capital movements' is translated as 'Féadfaidh na comhaltáí pé rialú a dhéanamh is gá chun gluaiseachtaí idirnáisiúnta caipitil a rialáil' and in the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97, 'we will continue to press for the development of a Community industrial policy that can control State aids' is translated as 'leanfaimid de bheith ag iarraidh beartas tionscail Comhphobail a fhorbairt faoinar féidir rialú a dhéanamh ar chúnamh Stát'. See the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 45.2.ii, where 'rialáigh' and 'urlámhas' respectively express 'control'.

Note that we find 'smachtaigh' translating 'control' in the following contexts: in s12(1) of the Local Government (Water Pollution) Act, 1977, 'where it appears to a local authority that it is necessary to do so in order to prevent or control pollution of waters' is translated as 'I gcás ar dealraitheach d'údarás áitiúil gur gá beart a dhéanamh chun truailliú uisce a chosc nó a shrianadh' and in s13 of the Fifth Schedule to the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1963, 'and the provision of such arrangements for heating and cooking as are calculated to prevent or control so far as practicable the emission of smoke or nauseous gases' is translated as 'agus cibé socrúithe a chur ar fáil chun téimh agus cócaireachta a mheasfar a choiscfidh nó a shrianfaidh an oiread agus is féidir, deatach nó gásanna díobhálacha ó a bheith ag sceitheadh amach'.

gan arm 'Le harm' expresses 'by force of arms' in Article 39 and 'ceannairc faoi arm' expresses 'armed rebellion' in Article 28.3.3<sup>o</sup>, for example, with 'coinbhleacht faoi arm' expressing 'armed conflict'. 'Armed rebellion' is translated as 'ceannairc faoi airm' in Téarmaí Dlí, however. Ó Dónaill gives 'arms (collective)' as a secondary sense of the Irish 'arm', citing 'faoi arm, under arms', the principal sense being (a) 'weapon' and (b) 'implement, tool'. Dinneen translates 'arm teineadh' as 'fire-arms'. 'Arm' comes from Latin 'arma' – see DIL s.v. 'arm', where the plural is cited (in the sense of 'weapon') after 'cen' (Modern Irish 'gan') in 'cen armu, cen fáebru' (i.e. without weapons, without sharp-edged weapons – see DIL s.v. 'fáebar') from the tale Mesca Ulad, in the twelfth-century Book of Leinster. Note that we find 'gan airm' expressing 'without arms' in Article 9 of the 1922 Constitution and finally that 'by an unarmed person' is translated as 'ag duine neamharmtha' in s2(1) of the Wildlife Act, 1976.

Regarding not having 'agus' expressing 'and' before 'arms', note that Irish regularly drops the conjunction between two adjectives.

a theacht díobh Literally 'to come from them'. 'Cause' is translated as 'cúis' in Téarmaí Dlí where 'cause of action' and 'reasonable cause' are translated respectively as 'cúis chaingne' and 'cúis réasúnach'. In s18 of the Imposition of Duties (Dumping and Subsidies) Act, 1968, 'the importation is such as to cause or threaten to cause material injury to an industry' is translated as 'gurb allmhairiú é de shórt ba chúis nó ba bhaol a bheith ina chúis le díobháil ábhartha a dhéanamh do thionscal'. In s3(1) of the Criminal Law (Rape) (Amendment) Act, 1990, 'such as to cause injury, humiliation or degradation' is translated as 'atá ina chúis le gortú, le huirisliú nó le táireadh'. See the commentary on Articles 12.10.5<sup>o</sup> and 25.5.1<sup>o</sup> where 'cúir á' and 'tabhair' respectively express 'cause'.

Regarding 'a chur faoi deara' translating 'cause' in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that this Connacht phrase is not generally used without an indirect object – e.g. 'é a chur faoi deara duit'. Professor Ó Murchú recommends either 'a tharraingt' or 'gur dóigh go mba thrúig leis an tsíocháin a bhriseadh iad', or retaining the phrase of the original text.

contúirt 'Contúirt' is translated as 'danger' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'contúirt neamhfholas' translating 'hidden danger'. In s13(2) of the Sale of Goods and Supply of Services Act, 1980, for example, 'free from any defect which would render it a danger to the public' is translated as 'saor ó aon locht a thabharfadh gur chontúirt í don phobal' and in s20(10)(b) of the Road Traffic Act, 1961, 'there was not a defect affecting the vehicle which was such that the vehicle was, when in use, a danger to the public' is translated as 'nach raibh ... locht ar an bhfeithicil a d'fhág gur chontúirt don phobal an fheithicil nuair a bheadh sí á húsáid'. 'To the extent to which such substance ... is ... a danger to the life or health of a person coming into contact therewith' is translated as 'don mhéid ... is contúirt an tsubstaint ... sin do bheo nó do shláinte duine a theagmhaíonn leis' in s6 of the Nuclear Energy (An Bord Fuinnimh Núicléigh) Act, 1971.

i gcóngar do See the commentary on Article 12.11.1<sup>o</sup> where 'ar a cóngar' expresses 'near (it)'. Ó Dónaill cites 'bheith i gcóngar áite, to the near, close to, a place' along with 'bhí an bás i gcóngar dó, death was drawing near him'. Dinneen translates 'i gcómhgar' as 'near at hand', citing 'ní'l sé i n-aon chómhgar dó, it is not all near it, there is no comparison'. 'Comgar', based on 'gar' ('short [of time or space]', 'near'), is translated as '(equally) near, ready' in DIL, citing 'i gcomhghar dhuibh', from a miscellaneous collection of Classical Irish poetry, as an example of 'comgar' in prepositional phrases with the preposition 'do', or genitive, in the sense of 'near (to)'.
Turning to the Acts, 'which may be the area in the vicinity of the court' is translated as 'a bhféadfaidh gurb é an limistéar i gcomharsanacht na cúirte é' in s14(2) of the Juries Act, 1976. In s14(1)(c)(ii) of the Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1960, 'that they are located, either, partly on that site or in the immediate vicinity' is translated as 'gur ar an láithreán sin atá cuid de nó gur ina gharchomharsanacht atá sé'. Note that in s24(1) of the Constitution (Amendment No. 17) Act, 1931, we find 'the holding of public meetings in or in vicinity of any particular building ...' translated as 'cruinnithe puiblí do chomóradh in aon fhoirgint áirithe ... no in aice leo'.

Commenting on 'i gcomharsanacht' in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that the sense of this word might be too broad for this context, i.e. outside of the gates. He therefore recommends retaining the phrase of the original text.

briseadh síochána This phrase is translated as 'breach of the peace' in Téarmaí Dlí. In s17(1)(a) of the Offences Against the State Act, 1939, 'to commit or to plan, contrive, promote, assist or conceal the commission of any crime or any breach of the peace' is translated as 'aon choir no aon bhriseadh síochána dhéanamh no san do bheartú, do thabhairt chun críche, no do chur ar aghaidh no cabhrú leis nó é cheilt'. See the commentary on Article 15.13.

Standardised Irish text

Ceart na saoránach chun teacht ar tionól go síothóilte gan arm.

Féadfar socrú a dhéanamh de réir dlí chun cosc a chur nó rialú a dhéanamh ar thionóil a gcinnfear de réir dlí gur baol briseadh síochána a theacht díobh nó gur contúirt nó cránas don phobal i gcoitinne iad, agus fós ar thionóil i gcóngar do cheachtar de Thithe an Oireachtais.

Direct translation

Ceart na saoránach chun tionól go síochánta agus gan arm.

Féadfar socrú a dhéanamh le dlí chun cruinnithe a chosc nó a rialú a gcinnfear de réir dlí gur dóigh dóibh briseadh síochána a tharraingt<sup>1</sup> nó bheith ina gcontúirt nó ina núis don phobal i gcoitinne agus chun cruinnithe i gcóngar<sup>2</sup> ceachtar Tí den Oireachtas a chosc nó a rialú.

Variants

- 1 'a chur faoi deara'
- 2 'i gcomharsanacht'

ARTICLE 40.6.1<sup>oiii</sup> AIRTEAGAL 40.6.1<sup>oiii</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ceart na saoránach chun comhlachais agus cumainn a bhunú.

Ach is cead dlíthe a achtú chun oibriú an chirt réamhráite a rialú agus a stiúradh ar mhaithe leis an bpobal.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The right of the citizens to establish associations and societies.

But it is permitted to enact laws to regulate and direct the operation of the aforesaid right for the good of the people.

ENGLISH TEXT

The right of the citizens to form associations and unions.

Laws, however, may be enacted for the regulation and control in the public interest of the exercise of the foregoing right.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Unions' is expressed as 'cumainn' in the Irish text, which is the plural form of the term translated as 'society' in Téarmaí Dlí, although 'trade union' is translated there as 'ceardchumann', the general Irish term for 'trade union'.
- 2 'To form' is expressed as 'a bhunú' ('to establish') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Exercise' is again expressed by 'oibriú', which is the Irish legal term for 'operate'.
- 4 'Regulation' is expressed as 'rialú', the verbal noun of the verb translated as 'control'/'rule' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 5 'The foregoing' is expressed as 'réamhráite' ('aforesaid'/'aforementioned') in the Irish text.
- 6 'However' is again expressed as 'Ach' ('But') in the Irish text.
- 7 'Is cead' ('it is permitted') again expresses 'may' in the Irish text.

Note that 'The right ... to form associations and unions' is translated as 'ceart cumainn nó aontaisí do bhunú' in Article 9 of the 1922 Constitution.

Commentary

cumann 'Cumann' is translated as 'society' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'cara-chumann' is translated as 'friendly society' and 'comharchumann' as 'co-operative society', with 'trade union' being translated as 'ceardchumann'. 'Association; club, society' is one of the senses of 'cumann' ('of organised body') given in Ó Dónaill, who refers to 'Cumann Lúthchleas Gael' ('the Gaelic Athletic Association'), as well as 'cumann liteartha' ('literary society'), 'cumann polaitíochta' ('political club') and 'cumann lucht tráchtála' ('chamber of commerce'). 'Society, club' are among the senses of 'cumann' given by Dinneen, who cites 'cumann na naomh' (the 'Communion of Saints') from Donlevy's Irish Catechism, 1742. 'Cumann' comes from Latin 'commentum', and examples of this word from the Old Irish Glosses of the eighth century onwards are given in DIL, including the following from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on a Latin commentary on the Psalms: 'robói commant n-etarru du denam uilc frimmaccu Israhel' ('there was a covenant between them to do evil to the Children of Israel'), which glosses Latin 'ex professo'. DIL translates 'commant' as 'alliance, pact, union, friendship; company, band; later love, affection'. As an example of the sense of 'union' above, the following is cited in DIL from a poem edited under the title 'Address to David O'Keeffe': 'aigneadh dúnta 'gun rígh ruind / ó da s(h)ín cúpla ar ccomuind' ('seeing that the king's heart has been barred against me since he strained the couplings of our union').

Turning to the modern Acts, in s30(4)(a) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'following consultation with any recognised staff associations or trade unions concerned' is translated as 'tar éis comhairle a ghlacadh le haon chomhlachais foirne nó ceardchumann aitheanta lena mbaineann' and in s33(3) of the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975, 'members of an association of persons for whose benefit the gift was made' is translated as 'comhaltai de chomhlachas daoine ar chun tairbhe dóibh a tugadh an bronntanas'.

We see above that 'cumann' translates 'association' in the 1922 Constitution. We sometimes find 'cumann' instead of the usual 'comhlachas' in titles of organisations –

'Cumann Dochtúirí na hÉireann' ('Irish Medical Association'), as against 'Comhlachas Ban Tí na hÉireann' ('Irish Housewives Association'), for example. 'Cumann' generally translates 'society' in the Acts – 'ciallaíonn "baincéir" duine a sheolann gnó baincéireachta sa Stát agus folaíonn sé cara-chumann, cumann tionscail agus soláthair, cumann foirgníochta ...' translates "'banker" means a person who carries on banking business in the State and includes a friendly society, an industrial and provident society, a building society' in s61(1) of the Finance Act, 1973, for example. 'Cumann' also translates 'union', particularly in relation to a trade union – in s1(1) of the Trade Union Act, 1975 ('An tAcht Ceardchumann, 1975'), for example, 'ciallaíonn "na cumainn chónascacháin" agus "an cumann cónasctha", faoi seach, maidir le cónascadh atá beartaithe, na ceardchumainn a bheartaíonn cónascadh agus an ceardchumann a leanfaidh as an gcónascadh atá beartaithe' translates "'the amalgamating union" and "the amalgamated union", in relation to a proposed amalgamation, mean respectively the trade unions proposing to amalgamate and the trade union which is to result from the proposed amalgamation'. In s2(1) of the Postal and Telecommunications Services Act, 1983, "'recognised unions and associations" means unions and associations recognised by the postal company' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "cumainn agus comhlachais aitheanta" cumainn agus comhlachais atá aitheanta ag an gcuideachta poist', this being defined separately from 'recognised trade unions and staff associations' ('ceardchumainn agus comhlachais foirne aitheanta'). 'Aontas' also translates 'union', 'Treaty on European Union', for example, being styled 'Conradh ar an Aontas Eorpach' in Irish, with 'The Teachers Union of Ireland' being styled 'Aontas Múinteoirí na hÉireann', and 'Allied Irish Bank' being styled 'Banc-Aontas Éireann'.

'Aontas' translates 'union' in early Acts. In s84 of the 'Tirconaill County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'Where a Union formerly comprised portions of two or more Counties' is translated as 'i gcás cuideanna de dhá Chontae no breis do bheith in aontas go dtí so' and in s2(1) of the Local Government (Rates on Agricultural Land) Act, 1924, 'for county-at-large, union, or district charges' is translated as 'i gcóir muirearacha contae iomláine, aontais no ceantair'. 'The Board of Guardians of the Dublin Union' is translated as 'Bord Caomhnóirí Aontais Bhaile Átha Cliath' in s2(1) of the Local Government (Dublin) (Amendment) Act, 1931.

réamhráite This headword is translated as 'aforesaid, aforementioned' in Ó Dónaill. 'Réamh-ráidhte' is translated as 'aforesaid, forecited, foretold' in Dinneen. DIL translates 'remráite' as 'aforesaid, above-mentioned', giving among other citations one from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster. Note incidentally that 'réamhráiteas' is translated as 'premises (i.e. part of deed preceding habendum)' in Téarmaí Dlí.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'foregoing' as 'deireanach, réamhráite, thuasluaite, roimhe seo', and 'the foregoing' as 'a bhfuil roimhe seo'. We find 'parts of the foregoing vehicles' translated as 'páirteanna de na feithiclí réamhráite' in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 1215). Generally, however, in that source, this term translates 'aforesaid', with 'aforesaid benefits' being translated as 'liúntais réamhráite' (p. 1259), for example. 'Déanta chun na críche réamhráite' translates 'constructed for the purpose aforesaid' in s10(3) of the Value-Added Tax (Amendment) Act, 1978. 'Sin roimhe seo' generally translates 'foregoing' in the Acts – see, for example, s49(d) of the Finance Act, 1990, where 'in the foregoing provisions of this section' is translated as 'sna forálacha sin roimhe seo den alt seo'.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, remarks that 'roimhe seo' would not be understood in this context and recommends retaining 'réamhráite'. See further the commentary on Article 14.4 where 'the foregoing provisions' is expressed as 'na forálacha sin romhainn'.

comhlachais 'Airteagail chomhlachais' and 'meabhrán comhlachais' are translated respectively as 'articles of association' and 'memorandum of association' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Comhlachas' is translated as 'association' in Ó Dónaill. Dinneen does not appear to give this headword. Following the Constitution, s18 of the Offences Against the State Act, 1939, reads as follows:

In order to regulate and control in the public interest the exercise of the constitutional right of citizens to form associations .... Chun stiúradh agus rialú do dhéanamh ar mhaithe leis an bpuiblíocht ar fheidhmiú an chirt atá ag saoránaigh fén mbunreacht chun comhlachaisí do bhunú.

In s65(1)(b) of the Railways Act, 1924, 'any chamber of commerce or association representative of shipping' is translated as 'aon chomhlachas tráchtála no comhlachas atá ionadach do loingseoireacht' and in s2(1) of the Public Safety Act, 1927, 'the word "association" includes any combination of persons' is translated as 'foluionn an focal "comhlachas" aon chomhluadar daoine'.

See the commentary on 'cumainn' above regarding 'aontas' translating 'union' in the Acts. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks, however, that 'aontas' is associated in Irish with large organisations, such as 'Aontas na hEorpa' ('the European Union') and 'Aontas na Sóibhéide' ('the Soviet Union'). Professor Ó Murchú therefore recommends 'cumann' in the direct translation below.

a bhunú 'Bunaigh' is translated as 'found, establish' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'teaghlach, comhlacht, a bhunú, to found a family, a company' – note that 'bunaigh' expresses 'establish' in Article 3, for example. 'Bunúighim' is translated as 'I fix, rest, dwell; I found, begin, establish ...' in Dinneen. This verb does not appear to be given as a headword in DIL, where examples are given of 'bunad', 'origin, base, source', from the Old Irish Glosses onwards, and 'bun', on which this is based, is translated as 'the thick end of anything, base, butt, foot'.

Turning to the Acts, 'Every person who shall ... form, organise, promote, or maintain any secret society' is translated as 'Gach éinne ... a bhunóidh, a chó-ghléasfidh, a chuirfidh ar aghaidh, no a choinneoidh suas aon chumann sicréideach' in s8(1) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925. In s2(1)(b)(i) of the Credit Union Act, 1966, 'other than for the purpose of forming or conducting a credit union' is translated as 'seachas chun comhar creidmheasa a bhunú nó a stiúradh'. On the other hand, in s12(2) of the Finance (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1968, 'a company or body of persons ... formed or established in the State' is translated as 'cuideachta nó comhlacht daoine ... a foirmíodh nó a bunaíodh sa Stát' and in s29(6) of the Finance Act, 1990, 'as if ... references to a partnership agreement were references to the contract forming or providing for the formation of a grouping' is translated as 'ionann is dá mba thagairtí don chonradh ag foirmiú grúpála, nó ag foráil dá foirmiú, tagairtí do chomhaontú comhpháirtíochta'. 'To form a body corporate' is translated as 'comhlacht corpraithe a fhoirmiú' in s8(6)(a) of the Údarás na Gaeltachta Act, 1979. Note that in s36(7)(c) of the Safety in Industry Act, 1980, 'the number of members of the safety committee attending such a meeting shall be at least such as is required to form a quorum' is translated as 'is é an líon de chomhaltaí an choiste sábháilteachta a fhreastalóidh ar chruinniú den sórt sin a oiread ar a laghad is gá chun córam a dhéanamh'. In s2(1)(c) of the Second Schedule to the Health Act, 1970, 'the number of councillors necessary to form a group for the purposes of this rule' is translated as 'an líon comhairleoirí is gá chun bheith ina ngrúpa chun críocha na rialach seo', this being translated as 'an líon comhairleoirí is gá chun grúpa a dhéanamh chun críocha na rialach seo' in s2(1)(d) of the First Schedule to the Health Authorities Act, 1960.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that he much prefers 'a bhunú' to 'a fhoirmiú' there. See further the commentary on Articles 11 and 18.7.1° where 'form' is expressed respectively by 'cuir i' and 'cóirigh'.

a stiúradh 'For the control of' is expressed as 'chun ... a rialú' in Articles 10.3 and 10.4, with 'to control' being expressed as 'a rialú' in Articles 33.1 and 40.4.6°, and 'rialú a dhéanamh ar' expressing 'to control' in Article 40.6.1°ii.

'Stiúradh' is the verbal noun of 'stiúir'. 'Stiúraim' is translated as 'I conduct (case, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'foirceannadh faoi stiúradh' is translated as 'winding up under supervision', with 'stiúrthóir' being translated as 'director'. The verb 'stiúir' is translated as (1) 'steer' and (2) 'guide, direct, control' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'fir oibre a stiúradh, to direct workmen' and 'gnó a stiúradh, to conduct a business'. Dinneen translates 'stiúruighim' as 'I direct, guide, steer, chastise; introduce, initiate, cause'. DIL translates 'stiúraid' as 'steers, guides, directs', this verb being based on 'stiúir', translated as (a) 'rudder, helm'; (b) 'guidance, control, government' and (c) 'guide, controller' in DIL, 'stiúir' coming from Old Norse, 'styri' – one of many Irish nautical terms which come from Old Norse.

'Stiúir' generally translates 'conduct' and 'direct' in the Acts, 'seol' also translating 'conduct'. In s4(1) of the Criminal Justice (Legal Aid) Act, 1962, for example, 'beidh an duine sin i dteideal cúnaimh dlíthiúil in aisce a fháil chun achomharc a ullmhú agus a stiúradh' translates 'the person shall be entitled to free legal aid in the preparation and conduct of an appeal'. 'Agus a stiúran bainistíocht na cuideachta sin' translates 'and directs ... the management of (any public utility) company' in s79(3)(c) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976, for example. We find 'stiúir', however, translating the verb 'control' in the earlier Acts. In s9 of the Civil Service Regulation Act, 1923, for example, 'The Minister for Finance may from time to time make regulations for controlling the Civil Service of the Government of Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an tAire Airgid rialacháin do dhéanamh o am go ham chun Seirbhís Shíbhialta Rialtais Shaorstáit Éireann do stiúra' and 'Control of Forces' is translated as 'Stiúra na bhFórsaí' in the Margin Title of s5 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

In Article 6 of the 1922 Constitution, 'to prohibit control or interfere with any act of the military forces of the Irish Free State' is translated as 'aon ghníomh dá ndéanfaidh fórsaí airm Shaorstáit Éireann do chosg, do smachtú ná do thoirmeasg'. 'Control of staff' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'rialú' in a Report of the Public Accounts Committee, 1928. 'I control' is translated as 'rialáim' in Téarmaí Dlí and is generally so translated in the modern Acts. In s10 of the Road Traffic (Amendment) Act, 1978, for example, 'while he is under the influence of an intoxicant to such an extent as to be incapable of having proper control of the vehicle' is translated as 'agus é an oiread sin faoi bhri meiscigh nach féidir leis an fheithicil a rialú i gceart'. See further the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 45.2.ii, where 'rialáigh' and 'urlámhas' respectively express 'control'. In the present Article, however, 'rialáigh' expresses 'regulate', as it does in general in the Constitution. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the direct translation below, recommends substituting 'a stiúradh' for 'a rialáil' to avoid 'a rialáil agus a rialú', particularly for stylistic reasons.

ar mhaithe leis an bpobal 'Gur chuí scrúduithe den sórt sin a dhéanamh ar mhaithe leis an bpobal' translates 'that, in the public interest, such examinations are proper' in s9(6)(b) of the Consumer Information Act, 1978. 'Ar mhaithe le' generally translates 'in the interests of' in the Acts – in s14(1) of the Criminal Procedure Act, 1967, for example, 'ar mhaithe leis an gceartas' translates 'in the interests of justice'. Note that in s37(5) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, 'that ... it is in the public interest that the fishery should be so acquired' is translated as 'gur le leas an phobail é an t-iascach a fháil amhlaidh'.

a rialú 'Rialáim' is translated as 'I control' and 'I rule' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 10.3.

oibriú 'Oibrím' is translated as 'I operate' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Articles 3 and 13.5.1°.

Direct translation

Ceart na saoránach chun comhlachais agus aontais<sup>1</sup> a fhoirmiú<sup>2</sup>.

Féadfar, áfach, dlíthe a achtú chun feidhmiú an chirt réamhráite<sup>3</sup> a rialáil agus a rialú<sup>4</sup> ar mhaithe leis an bpobal.

Variants

- 1 'cumainn'
- 2 'a bhunú', 'chun bheith ina gcomhlachais agus ina n-aontais'
- 3 'sin romhainn', 'sin roimhe seo'
- 4 'a stiúradh'

ARTICLE 40.6.2° AIRTEAGAL 40.6.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní cead aon idirdhealú, maidir le polaitíocht nó creideamh nó aicmí, a bheith i ndlíthe a rialaíos modh oibrithe an chirt chun comhlachais agus cumainn a bhunú agus an chirt chun teacht le chéile ar saorthionól.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

No distinction, with regard to politics or religion or class, is permitted in laws which will regulate the method of operating the right to establish associations and societies and the right to come together in free-assembly.

ENGLISH TEXT

Laws regulating the manner in which the right of forming associations and unions and the right of free assembly may be exercised shall contain no political, religious or class discrimination.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The emphasis in the English text is on the laws not containing discrimination, the Irish text focusing on discrimination, with no discrimination being allowed in such laws; again we find the phrase 'Ní cead' ('It is not permitted') in the Irish text expressing 'no ... shall', with 'Laws ... shall contain ... no discrimination' being expressed as 'Ní cead aon idirdhealú ... a bheith i ndlíthe' ('It is not permitted to have any discrimination ... in laws').
- 2 'Political, religious or class discrimination' is expressed as 'idirdhealú, maidir le polaitíocht nó creideamh nó aicmí' ('discrimination, as regards politics or religion or classes') in the Irish text.
- 3 As in many earlier Articles, 'regulating' is expressed in the Irish text by 'rialú', which term is translated as 'ruling'/'controlling' in Téarmaí Dlí, and 'exercise' is expressed by 'oibriú', which term is translated as 'operate' in Téarmaí Dlí – 'laws regulating the manner in which the right ... may be exercised' is expressed as 'dlíthe a rialaíos modh oibríthe an chirt' ('laws regulating the manner of operating the right') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Class' is expressed as 'aicmí' (lit. 'classes'), a plural in Irish sometimes rendering a singular in English.
- 5 As earlier, 'union' is expressed by 'cumann', which term is translated as 'society' in Téarmaí Dlí, and 'free assembly' is expressed as 'teacht le chéile ar saorthionól' ('come together in free assembly'), in the Irish text.

Note that Article 9 of the 1922 Constitution concludes as follows:

Laws regulating the manner in which the right of forming associations and the right of free assembly may be exercised shall contain no political, religious or class distinction. Na dlíthe a rialóidh an tsí 'na bhféadfar ceart cumainn do bhunú agus ceart saor-theacht le chéile do chur i bhfeidhm, ní dhéanfaid aon leithreachas i dtaobh polaitíochta ná creidimh ná aicme.

Commentary

idirdhealú This headword is translated as 'differentiation, discrimination, distinction' in Ó Dónaill, where 'idirdhealú a dhéanamh (ar)' is translated as 'to differentiate, make a distinction (between)'. Dinneen translates 'idirdhealughadh' as 'act of separating or breaking apart, discriminating; distinction, separation, difference, analysis, divorce'. DIL includes 'ga itirdeliugad no itirdethbireagad do nach du gradaib feni ... acht du na gradaib flatha' ('making the distinction that is not for the Féne grades ...'), from a commentary on an early Irish law-tract, among the examples cited of 'eterdeligid' in the sense of 'distinction, distinguishing, differentiating, dividing between', this being the verbal noun of 'eterdeligid', a compound of 'eter' ('between') and 'deligid' ('separates').

'Idirdhealú' translates 'discrimination' in particular in the Acts, with 'nach ndéanfar aon idirdhealú ar bhonn gnéis' translating 'there shall be no discrimination on the basis of sex' in s67(1) of the Pensions Act, 1990, for example. We also find 'idirdhealú' translating 'distinction' – in s12(2) of the Capital Gains Tax Act, 1975, for example, 'na forálacha go léir den Acht seo a dhéanann idirdhealú idir gnóchain inmhuirearaithe agus gnóchain nach inmhuirearaithe' translates 'all the provisions of this Act which distinguish gains which are chargeable gains from those which are not'.

In Article 8 of the 1922 Constitution, 'make any discrimination as respects State aid' is translated as 'aon deifríocht do dhéanamh i dtaobh cabhrach Stáit'. 'Eadardhealuíocht' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'discrimination' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 27/6/39. L. Mc Cionnaith refers the reader to 'distinguish, difference', s.v. 'discriminate', and cites the following s.v. 'distinction (between)': 'an bhfuil idirdheal/bhjú eatortha (Munster [M], Connacht [C]), ní féidir leat idirdheal/bhjú do dhéanamh eatortha (M,C), no distinction between them, treated as equals, ní raibh idirdheal/bhjú eatortha (C,M), distinction, déanfad idirdheal/bhjú idir mo dhaoine agus do dhaoine-sa (C,M)'. Note, finally, that a comma follows 'idirdhealú' in the original text and in a recent popular edition, no such comma being found in the 1997 popular edition.

aicmí The plural form of 'aicme', which headword is translated as (1) 'genus; class', (2) 'family, tribe', (3) 'set, clique' in Ó Dónaill and as 'a sort or kind, a class, a family, race, a tribe' in Dinneen. DIL translates 'aicme' as 'race, family, tribe; genus, class', citing 'aicme insin di flistinib' ('that [is] a tribe of the Philistines') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Psalms.

Turning to the Acts, 'a thoghadh ag aicmí nó ag cibé aicmí toghthóirí a shonrófar amhlaidh' translates '(shall) be elected by a class or by such classes of electorate as may be so specified' in s10(4)(a)(i) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, for example, and in s5(3)(b) of Part II of the Second Schedule to that Act, 'ag vótaíocht toghlacha d'aicme áirithe' translates 'at a poll of an electorate of a particular class'. In s19 of the 'Clare County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, we find the following regarding 'Admission to Public Health Institutions':

The persons whose signatures to the declaration will be 'recognised' are Clergymen, Medical Practitioners, Brehons, County Councillors, and Rural and Urban Councillors, the three signatures being of different classes. Siad daoine 'na dtabharfar 'aithint' dá sighthíthe ar an bhfaisnéis ná an Chléir, Dochúirí, Breithimh, Comhairleoirí Contae, Comhairleoirí

Tuath-cheanntair agus Comhairleoirí Baile-cheanntair, agus ní foláir na sionnitheoirí do bheith ina dtriúr de thrí haicmí fé leith.

See further the commentary on Articles 44.2.4° and 45.4.1°.

modh oibrithe ‘Oibriú’ is translated as ‘operation’ in Téarmaí Dlí, being the verbal noun of ‘oibrigh’, the first person singular of which, ‘oibrím’, is translated as ‘I operate’. ‘Modh oibrithe’ is directly descended from Latin ‘modus operandi’ in that the earlier form of ‘obair’ (‘work’), on which the verb ‘oibrigh’ is based, i.e. ‘opair’ (‘opair’), comes from Latin ‘opera’ and ‘modh’, earlier ‘mod’, comes from Latin ‘modus’ and translates ‘modus’ in the Glosses of the eighth century onwards.

Regarding ‘modh’ in the Acts, in s11(2) of the Health Act, 1970, for example, ‘Féadfaidh ordú faoin alt seo sócrú a bheith ann i dtaobh an mhodha a n-íocfar na caiteachais’ translates ‘An order under this section may provide for the manner in which expenses ... are to be met’. ‘Modh’ expresses ‘manner’ in Articles 18.6 and 34.1. See the commentary on Article 12.2.3° where ‘ar mhodh’ expresses ‘by means of’ and see further the commentary on Articles 13.5.1°, 18.6 and 34.1 regarding ‘modh’.

saorthionól This compound does not appear to be cited as a headword in Ó Dónaill nor in Dinneen. See the commentary on Article 40.6.1°iii, where ‘The right of the citizens to assemble peaceably’ is expressed as ‘Ceart na saoránach chun teacht ar tionól go sítheoilte’. ‘Tionól’ is the standard form of the verbal noun of ‘tionóil’.

a bheith Regarding ‘contain’ in the Acts, see s99(3) of the First Schedule to European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, where ‘by reason of a non-compliance with any provision contained in this Act’ is translated simply as ‘mar gheall ar neamhchomhionadh aon fhorála san Acht seo’. In s24 of the Finance Act, 1990, ‘tax contained in an assessment for any year of assessment’ is translated as ‘aon cháin a bheidh ar áireamh i measúnacht d’aon bhliain mheasúnachta’. See further the commentary on Article 46.4.

a rialaíos For the special form of the relative, see the commentary on Article 6.1. ‘Rialaim’ is translated as ‘I control, I rule’ in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 12.5.

Standardised Irish text

Ní cead aon idirdhealú, maidir le polaitíocht nó creideamh nó aicmí, a bheith i ndlíthe a rialaíonn modh oibrithe an chirt chun comhlachais agus cumainn a bhunú agus an chirt chun teacht le chéile ar saorthionól.

Direct translation

Ní bheidh aon idirdhealú polaitiúil, creidimh ná aicme i ndlíthe a rialálfaidh an modh a bhfeidhmeofar an ceart chun comhlachais agus aontais<sup>1</sup> a fhoirmiú<sup>2</sup> agus an ceart chun saorthionól<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘cumainn’
- 2 ‘a bhunú’
- 3 ‘saorthionól’

ARTICLE 41.1.1° AIRTEAGAL 41.1.1°

THE FAMILY AN TEAGHLACH

TÉACS GAELIGE

Admhaíonn an Stát gurb é an Teaghlach is buíon-aonad príomha bunaidh don chomhdhaonnacht de réir nádúir, agus gur foras morálta é ag a bhfuil cearta doshannta dochloíte is ársa agus is airde ná aon reacht daonna.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State acknowledges that the Family is the basic primary group-unit of/for society according to nature, and that it is a moral institution which has inalienable invincible rights which are more ancient and higher than any human statute.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State recognises the Family as the natural primary and fundamental unit group of Society, and as a moral institution possessing inalienable and imprescriptible rights, antecedent and superior to all positive law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘The State recognises the Family as ...’ is expressed as ‘Admhaíonn an Stát gurb é an Teaghlach is’ (‘The State recognises that it is the Family which is ...’) in the Irish text.
- 2 ‘Society’ is expressed by a term now infrequently used, ‘comhdhaonnacht’, only the adjectival form of which is cited in the main Modern Irish dictionary, this term being found in other Articles of the Constitution; ‘sochaí’ is the term in current usage rendering ‘society’. Note that ‘society’ in the English text has an initial capital as against the lower case ‘c’ of ‘comhdhaonnacht’.
- 3 ‘Unit group’ is expressed by an ad hoc compound, ‘buíon-aonad’, literally ‘group unit’; following the usual order of Irish compounds ‘unit group’ would be ‘aonadbhuíon’.
- 4 ‘Fundamental’ is expressed by the genitive singular of ‘bunadh’ as attributive, this term translating ‘original’ in Téarmaí Dlí, the sense ‘fundamental’ also being recorded in dictionaries.
- 5 ‘All positive law’ is expressed as ‘aon reacht daonna’ (‘any human statute/law’) in the Irish text – note, however, that ‘daonna’ is used in Téarmaí Dlí to express ‘positive’, ‘dlí’ replacing ‘reacht’ in the translation of ‘positive law’ in Téarmaí Dlí (i.e. ‘dlí daonna’).
- 6 ‘Dochloíte’ expresses ‘indefeasible’ in Article 1, this term being translated as ‘conclusive’ in Téarmaí Dlí, where ‘imprescriptible rights’ is translated as ‘cearta dochealaithe’.
- 7 ‘Inalienable’ is expressed as ‘doshannta’ in the Irish text, a term which is based on ‘sann’, ‘assign’ (‘sannaim’, ‘I assign’, in Téarmaí Dlí) rather than ‘alienate’ (‘coimhthím’, ‘I alienate’, in Téarmaí Dlí); Ó Dónaill lists ‘inalienable’ among the meanings of ‘doshannta’, however.
- 8 ‘Natural’ is expressed as ‘de réir nádúir’ (‘according to nature’) in the Irish text.

- 9 'Antecedent' is expressed as 'is ársa' ('more ancient') in the Irish text.
- 10 'Superior' is expressed as 'is airde' ('higher') in the Irish text.

Writing on 'Conflicts which have not yet surfaced' between the texts of the Constitution, J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 210f., remarks:

There may be another instance [i.e. of conflict] in Article 41.1, in which the rights of the family are called in English "imprescriptible", defined by Kenny J in Ryan v Attorney General ([1965] IR 294) as "that which cannot be lost by the passage of time or abandoned by non-exercise". The corresponding Irish expression, "dochloíte", does not have this meaning, and conveys only something like "irrepressible", "indomitable" (in Article 1 it is used as the equivalent of "indefeasible", and in Articles 25.4.5, 25.5.3 and 63 as the equivalent of "conclusive" in the context of evidence).

Commentary

Teaghlach 'Comhshocraíocht teaghlach' is translated as 'family arrangement' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Teaghlach' is translated as 'household, family' in Ó Dónaill, and as 'a family or household, familia or monastic family, an ethnic family or group, followers, escort; a house' in Dinneen, who cites the following from a traditional song: 'is deimhin go dtógfainn teaghlach nódh duit is chuirfinn cóir air 'dir shlinn is chloich' ('sure I would build you a new house and build it right of stone and slate'). 'Teglach' is translated as 'inmates of a house, household, family, following' in DIL, where 'óis teglig' ('folk of [His] family') is cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. 'Teglach' also had the sense of 'household troops, following, supporters, army' – see the version of the Táin in Leabhar na hUídhre (completed before 1106), for example – 'teglach' being an ancient compound of 'teg' ('house') and 'slog' ('troop') according to Rudolf Thurneysen (A Grammar of Old Irish, s130.1(a)).

Looking at early translations of 'family', 'When the proprietor sub-divides his holding for a limited period by way of family arrangement' is translated as 'Sa chás ina ndéanfidh an t-únaer a gabháltas d'fho-roinnt ar feadh tréimhse teoranta mar oiriúnaíocht dá theaghlach' in s65(3) of the Land Act, 1923. 'To inquire into the circumstances of the persons and families in receipt of outdoor relief' is translated as 'Féachaint cad is cás do sna daoine agus do sna muirineacha atá ag fáil fóirithinte allamuich' in s4 of the 'Kerry County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'The necessary wearing apparel and bedding of a person against whom an execution shall be levied, and the necessary wearing apparel and bedding of his family ... shall be exempt from liability to seizure' is translated as 'maidir le cuid éadaigh agus cóir leapan riachtanach an té go ndéanfar feidhmiúchán ina choinnibh agus cuid éadaigh agus cóir leapan riachtanach a chúraim... ní féadfar gabháil do dhéanamh ortha' in s5 of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1924. 'Without employing others except members of their own family' is translated as 'gan daoine eile ar fostú acu ach daoine dá líntighe féin' in s110(11) of the Dundalk Harbour and Port Act, 1925. Finally, 'family vault' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'boghtaine clainne' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health.

buíon-aonad 'Buíon' is translated as 'band, company' in Ó Dónaill. Dinneen translates 'buidhean-tsluagh' as 'a company' and 'd'aon bhuidhin' as 'of one accord, of the same opinion'. DIL translates 'buiden' as 'band, group, collection of persons ...' – see the commentary on Article 29.4.2<sup>o</sup>, where 'buíon' expresses 'group'.

'Aonad' is translated as 'unit' in Ó Dónaill. It does not appear to be given as a headword in Dinneen. 'The company or unit trust scheme was a non-qualifying offshore fund' is translated as 'go mba chiste eischósta neamhcháilitheach an chuideachta nó an scéim iontaobhais aonad' in s63(1)(b) of the Finance Act, 1990, with 'iontaobhas aonad' translating 'unit trusts' in the Margin Title of s37 of the Finance Act, 1979. 'To accommodate women internees who are not members of a family unit in the same place of internment as men' is translated as 'ban-imtheorannaithe nach mbaineann le teaghlach áirithe a lonnú san áit imtheorannaithe chéanna le fir' in Article 85 of the Fourth Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962. 'Any military unit (being a staff, unit or other element organised under section 22)' is translated as 'aon chomhlucht míleata (is foireann, aonad nó feadhán eile a bheas eagraithe faoi alt 22)' in s23 of the Defence Act, 1954. 'For a registration unit in a constituency' is translated as 'le haghaidh aonaid chláráitheachta i ndáilcheantar' in s6(1) of the Electoral (Amendment) Act, 1947.

'Aontán' translates 'unit' in the very early Acts, with 'each ward shall be treated as a separate registration unit' being translated as 'glacfar gach bárd díobh in' aontán clárathachta fé leith' in s1(a) of the First Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923, for example. 'The expression "unit" shall mean the energy contained in a current of one thousand amperes flowing under an electro motive force of one volt during one hour' is translated as 'ciallóidh an focal "aontán" an neart atá i sruth míle ampéir ag rith fé fhórsa leictre-thiomána volta in uair a' chluig' in the Fourth Schedule to the Sligo Lighting and Electric Power Act, 1924. Finally, 'unit of horse power' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'aontán an each-nirt' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health.

príomha 'Fianaise phríomha' and 'ordú príomha' are translated respectively as 'primary evidence' and 'primary order' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'príomha' as 'prime, primary'. Dinneen translates 'príomhdha' as 'primitive, chief, primary'. 'Prímda(e)' is translated as 'foremost, principal, pre-eminent' in DIL. The Irish adjective 'prím-', later 'príomh-', is a borrowing of the Latin 'primus'; like 'dea-', 'droch-', 'sean-', as Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks, its normal use is in prefixed position; used predicatively, it had the form 'prímdae', later 'príomhdha', and is now 'príomha'.

'The "primary fund"' is translated as 'an "ciste príomha"' in s6(1)(a) of the Fifth Schedule to the Finance Act, 1990. 'By the substitution of "primary" for "sole"' is translated as 'tri "príomh" a chur in ionad "aon"' in s3 of the Insurance Act, 1981, with 'being the primary obligation of the person under the contract' being translated as 'arb é ... príomh-oibleagáid an duine faoin gconradh'. 'Or the primary liability of the County Council' is translated as 'ná do phriomh-fhiachas na Comhairle Contae' in s9(c) of the Pier and Harbour Provisional Order Confirmation Act, 1929. See further the commentary on Article 42.1.

recht This headword is translated as 'statute' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'Reacht na dTréimhsí' translates 'Statute of Limitations'. 'Reacht' is principally translated as 'law' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'recht Dé, the law of God' and 'riail agus recht, law and order', secondly as 'statute' and thirdly as 'accepted rule', citing 'tá sé ag éirí ina recht, it is becoming the recognised rule'. 'Reacht' is translated as 'a law, decree, statute or ordinance; power, authority; régime or dispensation; a right, a principle' in Dinneen, citing 'an recht ársata, the Old Law, the ancient order of things', 'bunrecht, constitution'. DIL cites examples of 'recht' from the Old Irish Glosses onwards, including the following from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles: 'rom-soir-sa rect spirto di rect pectho' ('the law of the spirit has delivered me from the law of sin'), glossing Latin 'lex spiritus ... a lege peccati'. 'Recht' is translated as 'law, in wide sense of a collective system of prescripts, whether traditional or codified or inherent'; in the Glosses it renders Latin 'lex', later superseded by 'dliged', according to DIL. Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 319, translates 'recht' as 'law, rule; law-abiding person, person of legal status'. Latin 'rectum' ('right'), 'rego' ('rule') and English 'right' come from the same root ('reg') as 'recht' – see Alexander Macbain, op. cit., s.v. 'reachd'.

See the commentary on Article 43.1.1° regarding 'is ársa ... ná aon recht daonna'. 'Ársa' is translated as (1) 'ancient, antique' and (2) 'aged, veteran' in Ó Dónaill and as 'old, aged, ancient, antique, venerable, stable' in Dinneen. DIL cites examples of 'arsaid', 'old, ancient, aged', from the Glosses onwards, including the following from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses Latin on the Pauline Epistles: 'ni sin chomairbirt arsid' ('not in the old way of life').

bunaidh 'Fundamental political duties' is expressed as 'bundualgas polaitiúil' in Article 9.2, 'Bunchearta' expressing 'Fundamental Rights' is the heading for Articles 40-44. 'Bunaidh' is the genitive singular of 'bunadh' as attributive. 'Dlínse bhunaidh' and '(doiciméad, etc.) bunaidh' are translated respectively as 'original jurisdiction' and 'original (document, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Bunaidh' is translated as 'original, fundamental; basic, basal' in Ó Dónaill and as 'original, primitive, own' in Dinneen, who translates 'béarla bunaidh' and 'bíodhbha bunaidh' respectively as 'native speech' and 'an inveterate enemy'. DIL quotes 'amal ind cláinn bunid' ('like the original clan'), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, as an example of the genitive singular of 'bunad' as attributive adjective, which has the senses of 'original, fundamental; native, hereditary; inherent, own, proper; basic, established, certain, veritable, real', according to DIL. 'Bunad' is based on 'bun'.

L. Mc Cionnaith translates 'fundamental mistake, matters, &c.' as 'dearmhad, &c. neithe ṛc., bunaidh (Connacht, Munster)', translating 'fundamental tenets of F.' as 'bunailt an chreidimh (Connacht)' and 'fundamental custom &c.' as 'nós, ṛc. bunadhasach (Connacht)' – the standard form of the latter being 'bunúsach'. 'Fundamental discord' is translated as 'dí-chuibhdheas bunaidh' in Téarmaí Ceoil (1933).

Turning to the Acts, 'bunaidh', following Téarmaí Dlí, usually translates 'original', with 'aon athrú nó athfhoirgníú ar na foirgnimh a bhainfeadh a sainghnéithe bunaidh díobh' translating 'any alteration or reconstruction of the buildings so that they lose their original identity' in s9(2) of the Landlord and Tenant (Ground Rents) (No. 2) Act, 1978, for example. 'The Community Charter of the Fundamental Social Rights of Workers' is, however, cited in Rannóg an Aistrúcháin as being translated as 'Cairt Chomhphobail um Chearta Sóisialta Bunaidh le haghaidh Oibríthe' (1992). Turning to 'fundamental' in the Acts, this is usually translated as 'bunúsach'. 'There has been a serious departure from a fundamental rule of procedure' is translated as 'gur tréigeadh, ar mhodh tromchúiseach, riail bhunúsach nós imeachta' in Article 52(1)(d) of the Second Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1980, for example. In s20(a) of the Finance Act, 1973, 'the European Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms' is translated as 'an Coinbhinsiún Eorpach chun Cearta an Duine agus Saoirsí Bunúsacha a Chosaint'. 'For everyone's rights and fundamental freedom' is translated as 'le haghaidh ceart agus saoirsí bunúsacha do chách' in the Preamble to the Schedule to the Data Protection Act, 1988, with 'the fundamental values of the respect for privacy' being translated as 'na luachanna bunúsacha a bhaineann le hurraim don phríobháideacht'. 'Involving changes in the fundamental structure of the economic organization of members' is translated as 'a bhaineas le hathruithe bunúsacha ar eagraíocht gheilleagar chomhlachtaí' in s8 of Article XII of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, 1957. Note, finally, that 'accepted as fundamental' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'glactar mar bhun-riail' in a 1927 Report from the Public Accounts Committee.

is airde ná As regards 'superior to' in the Acts, 'any person entitled to an interest in the land held by the lessee or tenant superior to the interest of the person from whom the lessee or tenant hold the land' is translated as 'aon duine ag a bhfuil teideal chun leasa sa talamh a theachtann an léasaí nó an tionónta níos uasta ná léas an duine óna dteachtann an léasaí nó an tionónta an talamh' in s2 of the Landlord and Tenant (Ground Rates) Act, 1967. 'Any estate or interest therein superior to the leasehold interest therein' is translated as 'aon eástát no leas ann is uachtaraighe ná an leas léas-seilbhe ann' in s10 of the Creameries (Acquisition) Act, 1943. In s39 of the Land Act, 1923, 'and all interests superior to them' is translated as 'ar gach leas is aoirde ná iad', with 'whenever such bullion is of a fineness superior or inferior to the standard fineness' being translated as 'pé uair a bheidh fineáltacht an bhuilleoin sin níos aoirde nó níos ísle ná an riail-fhíneáltacht' in s5(2) of the Currency Act, 1927. Finally, note that 'uachtarach' generally translates 'superior' in the earlier Acts, with 'the owner or any superior landlord of the land' being translated as 'únaer an tailimh no aon tiarna uachtarach ar an talamh' in s34(4)(a) of the Local Government Act, 1925, for example.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on 'níos uasta' in a draft of the direct translation below, remarks that as 'highest, maximum' is the sense of the relatively unfamiliar adjective 'uasta' it does not agree very well with qualifying 'níos'. He finds no fault with 'airde'.

de réir nádúir Regarding ‘natural’ in the Acts, ‘the natural or legal person’ is translated as ‘an duine nádúrtha nó dlítheanach’ in Article 2(d) of the First Schedule to the Data Protection Act, 1988. “Fallen wool” means wool which has been removed from sheep who have died from natural causes’ is translated as ‘ciallaíonn “olann tite” olann a baineadh de chaora a fuair bás nádúrtha’ in s1(1) of the Wool Marketing Act, 1968. ‘The applicant ... is the mother, natural father or a relative of the child’ is translated as ‘gurb í máthair nó gurb é athair nádúrtha an linbh, nó gur gaol don leanbh an t-iarratasóir’ in s3(1)(b) of the Adoption Act, 1964. In s27(2) of the Intoxicating Liquor (General) Act, 1924, ‘any cave or underground place, whether natural or artificial’ is translated as ‘aon uaimh nó áit eile fé thalamh, nádúrtha nó déanta’. Finally, ‘any substance natural or artificial’ is translated as ‘aon tsubstaint, saordha no aiceanta’ in s3 of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927 – see the commentary on Article 10.1 regarding ‘aiceanta’.

foras This headword is translated as ‘ground (of application, etc.)’ in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill gives this sense as the fourth set of senses under that headword and Dinneen translates ‘foras’ as ‘basis, foundation, substance, depth; a principle; an institution ...’. DIL translates ‘foras’ as I(a) ‘that which is stable; stability; basis, foundation, bottom’, this being the original sense according to one scholar; (b) ‘established or fundamental principles of knowledge or science ...’ and II ‘a station, resting-place, dwelling’. See the commentary on Articles 18.4.2° and 40.4.2°.

don chomhdhaonnacht Ó Dónaill translates ‘comhdhaonnacht’ as ‘social, companionable’, which adjective is found earlier in the Constitution, expressing ‘social’ – see the commentary on Article 15.3.1°. Ó Dónaill does not, however, give ‘comhdhaonnacht’ as a headword. L. Mc Cionnaith translates ‘social history’ as ‘stair chomhdhaonnachta’ giving Téarmaí Staire as source. Note, incidentally, that ‘society’, in the sense of ‘building society’, ‘co-operative society’, is translated as ‘cumann’ with ‘cumann foirgníochta’ and ‘comharchumann’ respectively translating ‘building society’ and ‘co-operative society’, in Téarmaí Dlí.

ag a bhfuil ‘Or any other person possessing appropriate qualifications or experience’ is translated as ‘nó aon duine eile ag a bhfuil na cáilíochtaí cuí nó an taithí chuí’ in s41(1) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s4(3) of the Civil Service Regulation Act, 1923, ‘only persons possessing such special qualifications shall be admitted thereto’ is translated as ‘ní leigfar d’éinne dul fé ach daoine na bhfuil na cáilíochta san fé leith acu’.

Admhaíonn See the commentary on Article 40.3.3°, ‘acknowledges’ rather than ‘recognises’, as here, being expressed in that Article by ‘admhaíonn’.

dochloíte See the commentary on Article 42.5. Note that ‘imprescriptible rights’ is translated as ‘cearta dochealaithe’ in Téarmaí Dlí.

is ársa ná See the commentary on Article 43.1.1°.

doshannta See the commentary on Articles 1 and 42.1.

Standardised Irish text

Admhaíonn an Stát gurb é an Teaghlach is buíonaonad príomha bunaidh don chomhdhaonnacht de réir nádúir, agus gur foras morálta é ag a bhfuil cearta doshannta dochloíte is ársa agus is airde ná aon reacht daonna.

Direct translation

Aithníonn an Stát an Teaghlach mar aonadghrúpa nádúrtha príomha bunúsach na Sochaí, agus mar fhoras morálta a bhfuil cearta dochoimhthithe dochealaithe aige<sup>1</sup>, is tuisce agus is uasta<sup>2</sup> ná gach reacht daonna<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘ag a bhfuil cearta dochoimhthithe dochealaithe’
- 2 ‘airde’, ‘uachtaraí’
- 3 ‘a ghabhann roimh gach dlí daonna agus atá níos uasta ná gach dlí daonna’

ARTICLE 41.1.2° AIRTEAGAL 41.1.2°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ós é an Teaghlach is fotha riachtanach don ord chomhdhaonnach agus ós éigeantach é do leas an Náisiúin agus an Stáit, ráthaíonn an Stát comhshuíomh agus údarás an Teaghlaigh a chaomhnú.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Since it is the Family which is the necessary foundation for the societal order and since it is imperative for the welfare of the Nation and of the State, the State guarantees to preserve the composition and authority of the Family.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State, therefore, guarantees to protect the Family in its constitution and authority, as the necessary basis of social order and as indispensable to the welfare of the Nation and the State.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 Subsection 2 of the English text follows directly from ss1, with ss2 commencing with ‘The State, therefore, guarantees ...’; in the Irish text, however, there is no syntactic link with the previous section, and the Irish text commences with ‘Ós é an Teaghlach’ (‘Since it is the Family ...’).
- 2 ‘... the Family ... as the necessary basis of social order and as indispensable to the welfare ...’ is expressed as ‘Ós é an Teaghlach is fotha riachtanach don ord chomhdhaonnach agus ós éigeantach é do leas’, ‘Since it is the Family that is the necessary basis for social order and since it is indispensable for the welfare ...’, in the Irish text.
- 3 ‘Indispensable’ is expressed in the Irish text as ‘éigeantach’, usually translated as ‘compulsory’.
- 4 ‘To protect the Family in its constitution and authority’ is expressed as ‘comhshuíomh agus údarás an Teaghlaigh a chaomhnú’ (‘to protect the constitution and authority of the Family’) in the Irish text.

- 5 'To protect' is expressed as 'a chaomhnú', 'to cherish' / 'to preserve', in the Irish text.
 6 'Constitution' is expressed as 'comhshuíomh' ('composition') in the Irish text.

Commentary

fotha This headword is translated as 'base, foundation; origins, source; cause, reason' in Ó Dónaill, being followed by the abbreviation indicating that these senses are cited from the earlier literature only. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that this is not entirely correct, 'foth' /fu/ being found in Kerry in the sense of 'base', 'basic structure', and cites 'nil ann ach an foth' (i.e. nothing remains except the base). 'Fotha' is translated as 'foundation, vestige, basis, cause' in Dinneen, who cites 'fotha sealbh, basis of possession' from the Ancient Laws of Ireland, 'fothaí na haibhéise, the foundations of the abyss' and 'dar fotha (foth) Dia, zounds! by heavens!' According to Rudolf Thurneysen, this word comes from *fo-suide ('subsidiium') and hence has the sense of 'foundation, basis, bottom', examples of which are cited in DIL from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards, along with examples generally from later sources of the figurative senses of (1) 'foundation, origin, source' and (2) 'cause, ground, reason'. As an example of this first figurative sense, followed by the preposition 'di', we get the following from the Leabhar Breac, compiled in 1411 or earlier: 'is iat sin [viz. firta Crist] is fotha 7 is bunad di cech soscela' (i.e. Christ's miracles are the foundation and basis of every Gospel).

'Bása' translates 'basis' in the very early Acts, with 'and should pass a resolution granting to such officials a superannuation ... on the basis laid down by this Article' being translated as 'agus ba chóir dóibh rún do rith chun aois-liúntas ... do dheona do gach oifigeach den tsórt san ar an mbása atá leagtha amach leis an Airtíogal so' in s9 of the 'Cavan County Scheme' in the First Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, for example. 'Déanamh seasmhach' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'to place on a permanent basis' in Iris an Phuist, 14/3/28. Turning to modern Acts, 'where the price paid or payable by the purchaser is taken as the basis for valuation' is translated as 'i gcás gurb é an praghas a d'íoc an ceannaitheoir nó is iníochta aige, an praghas lena nglactar mar bhonn luachála' in s10(4)(i) of the Free Ports Act, 1986. 'If that rent had been adopted as the basis of the assessment' is translated as 'dá nglacfaí leis an gcíos sin mar fhoras na measúnachta' in s13(1) of the Income Tax Act, 1967.

éigeantach 'Ceannach éigeantach' is translated as 'compulsory purchase' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'éigeantach' as (1) 'enforced, compulsory' and (2) 'needy, distressed', Dinneen translating this headword as 'necessary; hard; distressful; mournful; compulsory'. This term is generally known in this century in association with 'Gaeilge' (i.e. 'compulsory Irish' in school). DIL translates 'éicentach' as 'compulsory, necessary, involuntary', citing examples mainly from the works of the seventeenth-century author Geoffrey Keating (Seathrún Céitinn). 'Éicentach' is based on 'éicen' ('necessity, compulsion').

'Impose on the undertakings concerned terms which are not indispensable to the attainment of those objectives' is translated as '(nach) bhforchuireann ar na gnóthais atá

i gceist téarmaí nach bhfuil fíor-riachtanach chun na haidhmeanna sin a ghnóthú' in s4(2)(i) of the Competition Act, 1991. In s1(d) of Article 3 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962, 'all the judicial guarantees which are recognised as indispensable by civilised peoples' is translated as 'gach ráthaíocht bhreithiúnach a n-aithníonn pobail shibhialta gur den riachtanas í', with 'Personnel whose retention is not indispensable' being translated as 'An pearsanra nach mbeidh fíor-riachtanas lena gcoimeád' in Article 30.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on 'fíor-riachtanach' and 'riachtanach' together in the direct translation below, recommends translating the final clause as 'agus nach beite do leas an Náisiúin agus an Stáit bheith dá uireasa'.

comhshuíomh This compound is translated as 'composition' in Ó Dónaill, where 'dlí an chomhshuímh' is translated as 'law of constant composition' and 'i gcomhshuíomh' is translated as (i) 'properly arranged' and (ii) (typography) 'in register'. Dinneen simply translates 'cómhshuidhiughadh' as 'composition'. 'Comsuidigud', verbal noun of 'con-suidigther' ('con-suidi' literally meaning 'places together'), is translated as 'act of compounding, mixing, placing (together); composition' in DIL, where examples are cited from the Old Irish Glosses in particular, some of the later examples having less precise usages.

See the commentary on Article 15.1.1° for 'constitution' in the Acts, generally translated as 'comhdhéanamh', as in that Article. 'Subsection (1) shall not apply to any company having provisions in its constitution that would entitle it to rank as a private company if it had been registered in the State' is translated as 'Ní bhainfidh fo-alt (1) le haon chuideachta a mbeidh forálacha ina comhdhéanamh a thabharfadh teideal di í a áireamh mar chuideachta phríobháideach dá mba sa Stát a cláraíodh í' in s354(4) of the Companies Act, 1963. In s56(4) of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1983, however, the same text (with 'which has' replacing 'having' and 'public limited' replacing 'private') is translated as 'Ní bheidh feidhm ag fo-alt (1) maidir le haon chuideachta a bhfuil forálacha ina bunreacht a thabharfadh teideal di bheith ina cuideachta phoiblí theoranta dá mba sa Stát a cláraíodh í'.

a chaomhnú See the commentary on Article 28.3.3°. 'Cairde a chaomhnú' is translated as 'to cherish friends' and 'nós, teanga, a chaomhnú' is translated as 'to preserve a custom, a language' in Ó Dónaill. Among the earlier examples in DIL of the verb 'cáemaid' ('treats kindly, is gracious towards, cherishes') is the following from an Old Irish verse in the St Gall Priscian, the infixed pronoun and alliteration contributing to its beautiful brevity: 'nomchoimmediu cóima' ('may the Lord be kind to me'). 'Cáem', on which this verb is based, is translated principally as 'dear, precious, beloved; belonging to the family' in DIL. See the commentary on Article 28.3.2° regarding 'protects' (expressed as 'cosain' in that Article) and note how 'caomhaint do thabhairt d'éinne' translates 'protects any person' in s3(1)(b) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925, with the usual term today, 'cosain', cited in Article 20 of the 1922 Constitution, 'to protect ... the private papers of its members' being translated as 'páipéirí príobháideacha a bhall do chosaint'.

riachtanach 'Riachtanach' is translated as 'necessary' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'tá sé riachtanach don tsláinte' as 'it is essential to health'. Dinneen translates 'riachtanach' as 'necessary, needful; needy, necessitous; compulsory, incumbent (on, ag)', citing 'Gaedhealg riachtanach, compulsory Irish'. 'Slí riachtanais' and 'riachtanais' are translated respectively as 'way of necessity' and 'necessaries' in Téarmaí Dlí. Seventeenth-century translations of Psalms lxxxii. 4 and Proverbs xxxi. 9 provide the only two examples of 'riachtanach' cited in DIL, which headword is translated as 'necessitous, needy' and followed by 'late' in brackets. This adjective seems to have been based on 'riachtanas', which according to DIL is an abstract from 'riachtain', used in the expression 'riachtain a les(s)', a petrified abstract from the phrase 'ro-icc les(s)', 'needs (it)', meaning 'need, necessity' ('less' = Modern Irish 'leas', 'welfare'). 'Riachtain' itself is a Middle Irish variant form of 'ríchtu', verbal noun of 'ro-icc' ('comes'). See further the commentary on Articles 45.2.i (where 'riachtanais' expresses 'needs') and 12.4.5° (where 'gá' expresses 'necessary').

Ós é... As regards 'therefore' in the Acts, 'Be it therefore enacted by the Oireachtas of Saorstát Éireann as follows' is translated as 'Achtuightheadh Oireachtas Shaortsáit Éireann ar an ábhar san mar leanas' in the Preamble to the Adaptation of Enactments Act, 1922, with 'Be it therefore enacted by the Oireachtas as follows' being translated as 'Achtaitear ar an ábhar sin ag an Oireachtas mar a leanas' in the Preamble to the Royal College of Physicians of Ireland (Charter and Letters Patent Amendment) Act, 1979. 'And shall therefore not be bound to apply the minimum penalty prescribed' is translated as 'agus mar sin ní bheidh de cheangal orthu an bun-phionós a ordaitear a chur i bhfeidhm' in Article 87 of the Third Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the direct translation below of 'as' as 'mar', remarks that the drafters of the Irish text understood 'as' to mean 'since it is' ('ós é ...') and recommends translating that phrase as 'ós é is bonn riachtanach don ord sóisialach'.

don ord chomhdhaonnach See the commentary on Articles 38.3.1° and 40.6.1° regarding 'ord', on Article 15.3.1° regarding 'comhdhaonnach' and on Article 45 regarding lenition of the adjective in the dative singular qualifying a masculine noun.

Standardised Irish text

Ós é an Teaghlach is fotha riachtanach don ord comhdhaonnach agus ós éigeantach é do leas an Náisiúin agus an Stáit, ráthaíonn an Stát comhshuíomh agus údarás an Teaghlaigh a chaomhnú.

Direct translation

Ráthaíonn an Stát, ar an ábhar sin, an Teaghlach a chosaint ina chomhdhéanamh agus ina údarás, mar bhonn riachtanach an oird shóisialaigh<sup>1</sup> agus mar fhíor-riachtanas do leas an Náisiúin agus an Stáit<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'mar bhonn riachtanach don ord sóisialach', 'ós é is bonn riachtanach don ord sóisialach'
- 2 'agus nach beite do leas an Náisiúin agus an Stáit bheith dá uireasa'

ARTICLE 41.2.1° AIRTEAGAL 41.2.1°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Go sonrach, admhaíonn an Stát go dtugann an bhean don Stát, trína saol sa teaghlach, cúnamh nach bhféadfai leas an phobail a ghnóthú dá éagmais.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Specifically, the State acknowledges that the woman gives the State, through her life in the family household, assistance/support without which the welfare of the people could not be achieved.

ENGLISH TEXT

In particular, the State recognises that by her life within the home, woman gives to the State a support without which the common good cannot be achieved.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Teaghlach' expresses 'home' ('family household') in this subsection, expressing 'family' in the previous section and in the heading for this Article.
- 2 'A support' is expressed in the Irish text as 'cúnamh', normally translated as 'assistance', but with the nuance of 'contributive action' according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú; 'support' is translated as 'tacaíocht' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 3 'Recognises' is expressed as 'admhaíonn' in the Irish text, this being the same term as expresses 'acknowledges' in Article 40.3.3°, for example.
- 4 As in other Articles, 'the common good' is expressed in the Irish text as 'leas an phobail', this phrase being also found in the Acts; 'an mhaitheas phoiblí' is the translation given in Téarmaí Dlí, however.
- 5 'In particular' is expressed as 'go sonrach' ('specifically') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Cannot be achieved' is expressed as 'nach bhféadfai a ghnóthú' ('could not be achieved') in the Irish text.

Commentary

saol 'Árachas saoil' and 'léas saoil (saolta)' are translated respectively as 'life assurance' and 'lease for life (lives)' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'saol' as 'life, time, world', giving 'way or sphere of life' as one of its senses, citing 'saol na cathrach, na tuaithe, city, country, life' and 'saol mná tí, housewife's life', along with 'tá saol an mhadra bháin aige, he has a cosy life'. Dinneen translates 'saoghal' as 'an age, life, length or circumstances of life ...; a world, the world, circumstances, "things"; living, subsistence, material wealth; everything, everybody'. Old Irish 'saegul', which comes from Latin 'saeculum', is translated as (a) 'period of life, a human lifetime', (b) 'end of life', (c) 'an age, period of time, duration', (d) 'the world' and (e) 'worldly goods, pelf' in DIL, where examples are cited from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards, including 'is garait ar saigul' ('our life is short') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Psalms. See the commentary on Article 16.2.4° (where 'ré' expresses 'life') for early terms for 'life' in the Acts.

cúnamh This headword is translated as ‘help’ in Ó Dónaill, where ‘cúnamh difhostaíochta, teaghlaigh’ is translated as ‘unemployment, home, assistance’, citing ‘tá a chúnamh imithe uaidh, his family have left him’. ‘Congnamh’ is translated as ‘help, succour; act of helping, co-operating with (le)’ in Dinneen. ‘Congnam’ is the verbal noun of ‘con-gní’ (*com-gní-, literally ‘do together’), and is translated as ‘act of helping, aiding, assisting; help, aid’ in DIL.

‘Support’ today is generally translated as ‘tacaíocht’, ‘right of support’ being translated as ‘ceart tacaíochta’ in Téarmaí Dlí. See the commentary on Articles 12.10.4° and 28.10 regarding ‘support’ (expressed as ‘tacaíocht’ in both those Articles) and note that ‘tacaíocht’ is found in Article 53 of the 1922 Constitution. ‘Cabhrú’ translates ‘support’ in early Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann, according to the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms.

a ghnóthú ‘Gnóthaím’ is translated as ‘I recover (damages)’ in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates ‘gnóthaigh’ as (1) ‘work, labour’, (2) ‘win, gain; earn, achieve’, citing ‘duais, geall a ghnóthú, to win a prize, a wager’ and ‘is beag a ghnóthaigh mé air, I gained little by it; it availed me little’. Dinneen translates ‘gnóthuighim’ as ‘I get, win, obtain, attain, profit; I win (a game); I make prosperous; I appoint, ordain’, citing the following curse: ‘nár ghnídh tú do leas; agus nár ghnóthaidh sibhse! evil attend you; and may ye not succeed!’

‘That the purposes for which an order may be made ... could not be achieved’ is translated as ‘nach bhféadfaí na críocha chun ar féidir ordú a dhéanamh ... a ghnóthú’ in s43(1)(b) of the Patents Act, 1964. ‘Where another transaction would not have been undertaken or arranged to achieve the results ... achieved’ is translated as ‘i gcás nach ndéanfaí idirbheart eile a ghabháil de láimh nó a shocrú chun na torthaí ... a bhaint amach a baineadh amach’ in s86(1) of the Finance Act, 1989.

an bhean Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that ‘woman’ without indefinite article in English has the sense of ‘type’ (“cinéal”) and therefore is appropriately expressed in the Irish text as ‘an bhean’ (lit. ‘the woman’).

sa teaghlach See the commentary on the preceding section regarding ‘teaghlach’ and the commentary on Article 42.2 regarding ‘home’.

admhaíonn See the commentary on Article 40.3.3° and 41.1.1°.

Direct translation

Admhaíonn an Stát go háirithe go dtugann an bhean<sup>1</sup>, trína saol sa bhaile, tacaíocht nach féidir an mhaitheas phoiblí a ghnóthú<sup>2</sup> dá héagmais.

Variants

- 1 ‘mná’
- 2 ‘a bhaint amach’

ARTICLE 41.2.2° AIRTEAGAL 41.2.2°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Uime sin, féachfaidh an Stát lena chur in áirithe nach mbeidh ar mháithreacha clainne, de dheasca uireasa, dul le saothar agus failli a thabhairt dá chionn sin ina ndualgais sa teaghlach.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

For that reason, the State will endeavour to ensure that mothers of a family, because of want, will not have to engage in work and neglect their duties in the household because of that.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall, therefore, endeavour to ensure that mothers shall not be obliged by economic necessity to engage in labour to the neglect of their duties in the home.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘By economic necessity’ is expressed as ‘de dheasca uireasa’, ‘because of want’, which phrase is preceded and followed by a comma, in the Irish text.
- 2 ‘Mothers’ is expressed as ‘máithreacha clainne’ (‘mothers of a family’) in the Irish text.
- 3 As in the previous subsection, ‘home’ is expressed as ‘teaghlach’ in the Irish text, the same term which expresses ‘family’ in this Article in general.
- 4 ‘To the neglect of’ is expressed as ‘agus failli a thabhairt dá chionn sin’ (‘and for that reason to neglect’) in the Irish text.
- 5 Again, as in some earlier Articles, ‘to ensure’ is expressed as ‘a chur in áirithe’ in the Irish text, this phrase being generally used today in relation to ‘reserve’.

Commentary

dul le Ó Dónaill gives ‘take to, engage in’ as one of the senses of ‘téigh le’, citing ‘dul le polaitíocht, to engage in politics’ and ‘ní rachadh an mac le feirmeoireacht dó, the son wouldn’t take up farming for him’. Dinneen translates ‘téighim le’ as ‘I go with, bring, side with, consort with, cultivate or follow (as an art) ...’. DIL translates ‘téit le’ as ‘devotes oneself to, adopts, takes a certain course’, citing ‘docotar iterum fri tola in betho’ (‘they have given themselves over again to worldly desires’) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

Regarding ‘engage in’ in early Acts, ‘such of the officers engaged in the administration of those services’ is translated as ‘an méid sin de sna hoifigigh ag obair i riar na seirbhísí sin’ in Article 79 of the 1922 Constitution. ‘Any person engaged in the business of carrying goods for reward’ is translated as ‘éinne i mbun gnó earraí d’iompar ar luach saothair’ in s4(1)(c) of the Agricultural Produce (Eggs) Act, 1924. ‘A county medical officer of health shall not engage in private practice’ is translated as ‘Ní bheidh aon chleachta príobháideach ar siúl ag dochtúir oifigiúil sláinte’ in s21(7) of the Local Government Act, 1925. ‘By reason of his having been engaged in light agricultural work for his parent on his parent’s land’ is translated as ‘de dheascaibh é bheith ag gabháil d’obair éadtrom thalmhaíochta dá thuismitheoir ar thalamh a thuismitheora' in s4(3) of the School Attendance Act, 1926. Finally, from the modern Acts, 'to engage in research in such fields as the Governing Body may deem appropriate' is translated as 'gabháil do thaighde i cibé réimsí a mheasfaidh an Comhlacht Ceannais a bheith cuí' in s4(1)(b) of the National Institute for Higher Education, Limerick, Act, 1980.

ar mháithreacha clainne 'Máthair clainne, teaghlach' is translated as 'the mother of a family' in Ó Dónaill. Dinneen translates 'máthair' as 'a mother, a dam, a producer; matter, beginning, origin, source, cause'. DIL gives examples of 'máthair' from the eighth-century Glosses onwards.

'Services for Mothers and Children' is translated as 'Seirbhísí do Mháithreacha agus Leanai' in the heading for Chapter IV of the Health Act, 1970, for example. 'Affords asylum to expectant mothers or to mothers of children under the age of five years' is translated as 'tearmann do thabhairt do mhná ag iompar cloinne no do mháithreacha leanbhaí atá fé bhun cúig mbliain d'aois' in s1(a)(iv) of the Hospitals Act, 1939.

saothar 'Luach saothair' is translated as 'remuneration' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'saothar' being translated as 'work, labour; toil, exertion; stress, effort' in Ó Dónaill. 'Saothar' is translated as 'labour, toil, work, effort, exertion, trouble taken in doing a thing, stress, agony, panting or heavy breathing (from hard work or illness); care; an office or task' in Dinneen. DIL cites 'saithar ho lámaib' ('labour with hands') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, where it glosses Latin 'operantes manibus nostris', translating 'saethar' principally as 'work, labour, toil', 'saeth' being translated as 'trouble, hardship, distress, tribulation, disease, illness', this word also being cited from the Würzburg Glosses. See the commentary on Article 18.7.1<sup>iii</sup> regarding 'labour' (expressed there as 'oibreachas').

faillí This headword is translated as 'negligence' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'mórfhaillí' is translated as 'gross negligence'. Ó Dónaill translates 'faillí a dhéanamh, a thabhairt, i rud' as 'to neglect something', with Dinneen also translating 'faillighe do thabhairt (nó do dhéanamh) i or ar' as 'to neglect'. DIL's earliest example of 'faillige' ('negligence, remissness'), 'ó obair 7 ó faillighe' ('commission and omission', in relation to sin), is from Keating's seventeenth-century Eochair-sgiath an Aifrinn. Only one example of 'faillith' ('neglect') is cited in DIL, from another work by Keating, but the headword 'faill' ('neglect, negligence') is cited from earlier literature. See the commentary on Article 34.5.4<sup>o</sup> regarding the verb 'neglect', expressed by 'failligh'. 'And such decrease was occasioned by the neglect of the participant' is translated as 'agus gur de bharr faillí an rannpháirtí a tharla an laghdú sin' in s4(2)(a) of the Pyramid Selling Act, 1980, for example.

uireasa This headword is translated as 'lack, want, absence, deficiency' in Ó Dónaill, where 'nil easpa ná uireasa orainn' is translated as 'we want for nothing'. 'Uireasbhaidh' ('uireasbha' being the form in the original text) is translated as 'deficiency, need, want, poverty' in Dinneen, where 'uireasbhaidh do-ghní cumha' is translated as 'indigence begets melancholy'. DIL translates 'airesbaid' as 'lack, deficiency', citing examples mainly from the period after the twelfth century. The prepositional prefix 'air-', with intensive force, is combined in this word with 'esbaid', 'lack, loss, deficiency, defect'; 'esbaid' itself is made up of 'ess' + 'both, buith', the verbal noun of the substantive verb, according to DIL. See further the commentary on Article 45.4.2<sup>o</sup>, where we again find the phrase 'de dheasca uireasa'.

See the commentary on Article 1 regarding 'economic'. 'For the purpose of meeting a public requirement of a temporary nature or an immediate necessity' is translated as 'i gcóir riachtanais phuiblí shealadaigh no i gcóir riachtanais láithrigh' in s3(a) of the Dublin United Tramways (Omnibus Services) Act, 1925. 'Attention of ... is directed to the necessity for compliance with the rules' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'cuirtear in úil do ... a ghátaraí [atá] sé na rialacha do chó-líona' in Iris an Phuist, 11/8/26. 'Where, however, such change of residence is made suddenly by necessity arising from an unforeseen emergency' is translated as 'Má tharlaíonn, áfach, go n-athrófar áit chónaithe mar sin go hobann de riachtanas mar gheall ar éigeandáil gan choinne' in s2(5)(b) of the Children (Amendment) Act, 1957. 'Not justified by military necessity' is translated as 'nuair nach bhfuil riachtanas míleata leis' in Article 50 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962.

uime sin Ó Dónaill gives 'about, concerning, in regard to, on account of' as one of the senses of 'um', this sense being cited from earlier Irish literature, with 'is uime thug Dia chugainn é' translated as 'that is why God brought him to us'. Dinneen translates 'uime sin' as 'for that reason'. DIL gives examples of 'imm' in the abstract sense, translated as 'concerning, as regards, in the matter of, on account of, for the sake of', from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards. Note how the English text simply repeats 'therefore', as in ss2 of Article 41.1, here. See the commentary on that subsection regarding 'therefore'. See further the commentary on Article 43.1.2<sup>o</sup> where 'uime sin' expresses 'accordingly'.

de dheasca This prepositional phrase is translated as 'in consequence of' in Ó Dónaill. See Dinneen s.v. 'deascadh' for the contrast between this phrase and 'de bharr':

de dheascadh, as a result, but generally in plural, de dheascaibh, especially of a bad result, cf. de bharr; of a good result.

DIL translates 'descad' as (a) 'dregs, lees, sediment', referring to Modern Irish 'de dheascaibh, on account of', and (b) 'ferment, leaven, barm, yeast', examples of which senses being given from the Old Irish Glosses onwards.

dá chionn sin 'De chionn go' is translated as 'because' in Ó Dónaill, while Dinneen translates 'do chionn' as 'by reason of', translating 'de chionn' as 'with a view to, for the purpose of'. DIL translates 'de chiunn' / 'do chiunn' as 'in return for, for the sake of, instead of, on condition of, because of, for'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú refers to 'mar gheall air sin' and 'dá thoradh sin' as possible alternatives in the direct translation below.

féachfaidh ... le See the commentary on Article 40.6.1<sup>i</sup>.

in áirithe See the commentary on Articles 15.10 and 28.3.3<sup>o</sup>.

Direct translation

Féachfaidh an Stát, ar an ábhar sin, lena áirithiú nach gceanglófar ar mháithreacha, de dheasca riachtanais eacnamaíochta, dul i mbun saothair agus mar gheall air sin<sup>1</sup> failli a dhéanamh ina ndualgais sa bhaile.

Variants

- 1 'dá chionn sin', 'dá thoradh sin'

ARTICLE 41.3.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 41.3.1<sup>o</sup>TÉACS GAEILGE

Ós ar an bPósadh atá an Teaghlach bunaithe gabhann an Stát air féin coimirce faoi leith a dhéanamh ar ord an phósta agus é a chosaint ar ionsaí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Since it is on Marriage that the Family is founded the State takes it upon itself to give special protection to the order of marriage and to defend it from attack.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State pledges itself to guard with special care the institution of Marriage, on which the Family is founded, and to protect it against attack.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The institution of Marriage' is expressed as 'ord an phósta' ('the order of marriage') in the Irish text – technically this could be read as the marriage service, although we have an early example of the sense of 'the institution of marriage'.
- 2 'The State pledges' is expressed as 'gabhann an Stát air féin' ('the State takes upon itself / undertakes') in the Irish text.
- 3 As one sometimes finds in translations, the Irish text opens with the qualifying clause, 'Ós ar an bPósadh atá an Teaghlach bunaithe' ('Since it is on Marriage that the Family is founded'), whereas the English text states directly 'The State pledges itself ...', with 'on which the Family is founded' simply qualifying 'the institution of Marriage'.
- 4 'To guard with special care' is expressed as 'coimirce faoi leith a dhéanamh ar' ('to give special protection to') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Pósadh' in the first clause has a capital 'P' corresponding to the capital 'M' in 'Marriage' in the English text, but has no capital in 'ord an phósta' ('the order of marriage'); the English text has only one reference to 'marriage' in this section.

Commentary

coimirce 'Coimirce' is translated as 'protection, guardianship; patronage' in Ó Dónaill, where 'coimirce a thabhairt do dhuine' is translated as 'to grant protection to someone' and 'faoi choimirce an stáit' is translated as 'under the aegis, auspices, of the state'. 'Coimircí' is translated as 'ward' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'coimircíocht' translated as 'wardship'. Dinneen translates 'coimirce' as 'protection, patronage, safeguard', translating 'coimirce Dé orm' as 'may God protect me!' and 'coimirce Dé chughainn!' as 'God be merciful to us!' DIL translates 'commairge' as 'protection, security, refuge; sanctuary; act of protecting, etc.' See Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p.140f., regarding 'protection' in early Irish law:

An important principle of Irish law is the right of a freeman to provide legal protection (snáduid, also turtugud) for a certain period of time to another person of equal or lower rank .... The idea of protection is also prominent in the sagas, where it is usually called commairce or fóesam.

Professor Kelly gives the following note on the term 'commairce' (ibid, p. 141):

This term (angl. comrick) is used with the meaning 'legal protection' in official English documents. The provision of protection was clearly regarded as one of the central features of the Irish way of life, and many attempts were made to suppress it. For example, in an agreement of 28 August 1583 with the Lord Deputy, Sir John O'Reilly of Breifne undertook 'not to use any iraghtes (= Ir. airecht) or parleys upon hills to the intent to do any unlawful act to any of her majesty's subjects, not to make any distresses upon amenable persons other than for rent or duties without the special permission of the state, not to keep Irish brehons or suffer Brehon Law, not to take ericks (= Ir. éraig) but proceed by indictment for murder, and not to give comrick (= Ir. commairce) to any lords or their children or brethren that shall be offenders, but bring them to punishment'. Another group of terms ... are slánad, slánachus, sláinte (angl. slantie), slánaigeacht (angl. slanyacht), slaint(ig)echt (angl. slantyeght), which are commonly used in the Mid. and Early Mod. Ir. period for 'legal protection, guarantee, security'. The last term is used in a treaty in the English language made on 18 August 1560 between O'Rourke and O'Reilly which places both under the protection of the Earl of Kildare. They agree that if either of them break the Earl's slantyeght by killing, robbing or burning in the other's territory, he will pay 1,000 cattle to the Earl.

'To take all reasonable measures to guard against the outbreak of fire on such premises' is translated as 'gach beart réasúnach a dhéanamh le bheith san airdeall ar dhóiteán tarlú san áitreabh sin' in s18(2) of the Fire Services Act, 1981. 'Who negligently or wilfully allows to escape any person ... whom it is his duty to guard or keep in custody' is translated as 'a ligfear go faillitheach nó go toiliúil d'aon duine éaló ... nuair a bheidh sé de dhualgas air é a ghardáil nó é a bheith faoi choimeád aige' in s145(b) of the Defence Act, 1954, with 'any person whom it is his duty to keep or guard' being translated as 'Éinne 'na bhfuil sé de dhualgas air é do chimeád no do ghárdáil' in s50 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'Providing for the efficient management, sanitation, control and guarding of such places other than prisons' is translated as 'chun na háiteanna san nách príosún do bhainisti, do chimeád sláintiúil, do stiúra agus do ghárdáil go héifeacht-úil' in s8(b) of the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1926.

pósadh 'Scaoilim pósadh' is translated as 'I dissolve a marriage' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'dlínse maidir le pósadh' and 'aiseag chearta an phósta' are translated respectively as 'matrimonial jurisdiction' and 'restitution of conjugal rights'. 'Pósadh' is translated as '(state, ceremony, of) marriage' in Ó Dónaill and as 'act of marrying, joining in marriage; marriage, married life or state; a wedding feast' in Dinneen. 'Pósad' is translated as 'the act of marrying or espousing, marriage' in DIL; it is the verbal noun of 'pósaid', a Romance loanword which comes from Latin 'spons-are'; examples cited in DIL date from the later Middle Irish period onwards, 'ord an phósta' being cited from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, a manuscript compiled in 1411 or earlier. The sense of 'marriage' is cited in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses and in later sources for the term 'lánamnas', translated as 'partnership, social and/or legal relationship between two parties'. See Fergus Kelly op. cit., p. 70, regarding marriage in early Irish law:

Most legal references to women relate to marriage, and this is the subject of a special text Cáin Lánamna. Nine forms of sexual union (lánamnas) are distinguished. At the top of the list the author places the 'union of joint property' (lánamnas comthinchuir) into which both partners contribute movable goods (tínchor). The woman in such a union is called a 'wife of joint authority' (bé cuitchernsa). Next come the 'union of a woman on man-property' (lánamnas mná for ferthinchur) into which the woman contributes little or nothing, and the 'union of a man on woman-property' (lánamnas fir for bantinchur) into which the man contributes little or nothing. The fourth category is the 'union of a man visiting' (lánamnas fir thathigtheo) – a less formal union in which the man visits the woman at her home with her kin's consent. In the fifth union, the woman goes away openly with the man, but is not given by her kin. In the sixth union she allows herself to be abducted (lánamnas foxail) and in the seventh she is secretly visited (lánamnas táidi) – in both cases without her kin's consent. The eighth and ninth unions can in no sense be described as marriage, as they are union by rape and the union of two insane persons.

The word 'bainis' ('wedding; wedding-feast', Ó Dónaill), earlier form 'banais', comes from 'ben' + 'feis' and glosses Latin 'nuptias' in the Glosses in the ninth- or tenth-century manuscript Parker 279 in Corpus Christi College, Cambridge.

'Because of her marriage' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'mar gheall ar gur pósadh í' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health, 'liúntas pósa' translating 'marriage allowance' in Iris an Phoist and 'réiteach cleamhnais' translating 'marriage settlement' in a Report from the Department of Industry and Commerce. 'There is a child of the marriage' is translated as '(go) mbeidh leanbh ann de bharr an phósta' in s28(a) of the Widows and Orphans' Pensions Act, 1935. 'A marriage portion' is translated as 'coibhche' in s63(b) of the Succession Act, 1965, where 'advancement by way of portion or settlement' is translated as 'réamhshocrú i modh clannchoda nó socraíochta'. 'The Marriages Act, 1972' is cited in Irish as 'Acht na bPóstaí, 1972'.

ord 'Ord an phósta' is translated as 'the order of marriage' in Ó Dónaill, this being cited as an example of 'ord' in the ecclesiastical sense of 'prescribed form of service'. Dinneen translates 'ord an phósta' as 'the order of marriage, marriage ceremony'. DIL, however, cites 'is e ord in phósta ord Dé' from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, compiled in 1411 or earlier, as an example of 'ord' in the sense 'rule, regulation, ordinance, institution'. See the commentary on Articles 38.3.1° and 40.6.1° regarding 'ord poiblí' ('public order').

'The British and Irish Governments will seek to create institutions and structures which would enable them to work together' is translated as 'féachfaidh Rialtais na Breataine agus na hÉireann le hinstiúidí agus struchtúir a chruthú a dhéanfaidh iad a chumasú chun oibriú as lámha a chéile' in the December 1993 Joint Declaration (p. 6), with 'needs of our National Cultural Institutions' being translated as 'riachtanas ár bhForas Cúlurtha Náisiúnta' in the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97 (p. 56). See further the commentary on Article 18.4.2° where 'institution' is expressed as 'foras'.

gabhan an Stát air féin 'Assume, undertake' are given as secondary senses of the phrase 'gab ar' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ghabh sé air féin an obair a dhéanamh, he undertook to do the work'. Dinneen translates 'gabhair orm' as 'I take on myself, take up a challenge'. DIL cites examples of 'gaibid for', with reflexive pronoun, in the sense of 'takes (a burden, responsibility, on one's self, undertakes)', from the Táin and from later sources, including 'gabuid sin ortha féin' ('they undertook to do that') from a collection of the Lives of the Irish Saints.

'Pledge' is translated as 'gealltán' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'I pledge credit' is translated as 'cuirim creidmheas i ngeall'. De Bhaldráithe translates 'pledge' as (1) 'cuirim (rud) i ngeall' and (2) 'tugaim (m'fhocal, gealltanais)', translating 'to be pledged to do something' as 'bheith faoi ghealltanais rud a dhéanamh'. See the commentary on Article 45.4.1° regarding 'pledge' in the Acts.

a chosaint ar 'Cosnaim' is translated as 'I defend' in Téarmaí Dlí; Dinneen translates 'cosnaim' as 'I defend, protect from (ar); champion, seek to gain or hold, maintain'. Ó Dónaill translates 'cosain' as 'defend, protect (ar, ó against)', citing 'duine a chosaint ar rud, to defend someone against something', 'sinn a chosaint ó bhaol, ar oic, to protect us from harm, from evil'. DIL translates 'con-sní' as 'contends; contests, strives for, wins, gains; later also defends; costs', citing 'cumhacht ... lé coisneadh é féin ar bhás' (power that he 'might protect himself from death') from Ó Heoghusa's An Teagasg Criosdaidhe, 1611. See the commentary on Article 28.3.2°.

'And the order shall operate to protect against execution save as provided by this section' is translated as 'agus oibreoidh an t-ordú chun cosaint a thabhairt ar fhorghníomhú ach amháin mar a fhoráiltear leis an alt seo' in s89(1) of the Bankruptcy Act, 1988. 'By reason of the applicant's failure to take reasonable care to protect against the disease in question the animals ... which are the subject of the application' is translated as 'i ngeall ar gur mhainnigh an t-iarratasóir cúram réasúnach a ghlacadh chun na hainmhithe ... is ábhar don iarratas a chosaint ar an ngalar a bheidh i gceist' in s58(6) of the Diseases of Animals Act, 1966. See further the commentary on Articles 15.10 and 41.1.2° where 'protect' is expressed respectively by 'didean' and 'caomhnaigh'.

faoi leith See the commentary on Article 38.3.1°. As regards 'special care' in the Acts, 'where an establishment or institution is confined ... to persons of one sex requiring special care, supervision or treatment' is translated as 'i gcás ar daoine de ghnéas amháin ... atá i mbunachas nó in institiúid is daoine ar gá aire, maoirseacht nó cóireáil an leith lena n-aghaidh' in s17(2)(c) of the Employment Equality Act, 1977, with 'not to require special care and treatment in a fully equipped mental hospital' being translated as 'nach gá dóibh aireachas agus cóireáil speisialta in óspidéal meabhair-ghalar lánfheistithe' in s22(1) of the Mental Treatment Act, 1945. 'D'aireachasú' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating the verb 'care' in Iris an Phuist, 5/9/28, 'care (in performance of duties)' being translated as 'aireachas' in Iris an Phuist, 28/9/27. See the commentary on Article 38.3.1° as regard 'special' in the Acts.

ionsaí This headword is translated as 'assault' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'mionionsaí' and 'tromionsaí' are translated respectively as 'common assault' and 'aggravated assault'. Ó Dónaill translates 'ionsaí' as 'advance, approach, attack', citing 'ionsaí a dhéanamh ar áit, to advance upon, attack, a place' – see the commentary on Article 40.3.2°. Looking at early translations, 'With the object of protecting pictures in the National Gallery of Ireland from injury by attack from the air' is translated as 'D'fhonn pictiúirí i nGaileirí Náisiúnta na hÉireann do chosaint ar dhiobháil tré ionnsaighe ón aer' in s65 of the Air-Raid Precautions Act, 1939. 'Have created a state of rebellion which has been carried on by means of armed attack on the Military Forces of Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'gur chruthuódar staid rebeliúntachta a cimeádh ar siúl tré fhoghna armtha do thabhairt fé Fhórsaí Mileata Shaorstáit Éireann' in the Preamble to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923, with 'fogha' being cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'attack' in a 1927 Report of the Public Accounts Committee.

bunaithe 'Such intention is founded on the existence of sufficient evidence' is translated as 'go bhfuil an rún sin bunaithe ar fhianaise leordhóthanach a bheidh ann' in s2(1)(a) of the Extradition (Amendment) Act, 1987. 'The claim is founded on any fraud or fraudulent breach of trust' is translated as '(ina) mbeidh an t-éileamh bunaithe ar aon chalaouis nó sárú calaouis iontaobhais' in s44(a) of the Statute of Limitations, 1957, with 'under the judgement, order, or decree on which his claim is founded' being translated as 'fén mbreith, fén ordú nó fén aithne ar a mbeidh a éileamh bunaithe' in s6(2) of the Indemnity Act, 1924.

Direct translation

Tugann an Stát gealltanais institiúid an Phósta, ar a bhfuil an Teaghlach bunaithe, a ghardáil le haireachas<sup>1</sup> ar leith, agus é a chosaint ar ionsaí.

Variant

<sup>1</sup> 'le haire'

ARTICLE 41.3.2° (before amendment)

AIRTEAGAL 41.3.2° (roimh leasú)

TÉACS GAELGE

Ní cead dlí ar bith a achtú a bhéarfadh cumhacht chun pósadh a scaoileadh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is not permitted to enact any law which would give power to dissolve a marriage.

ENGLISH TEXT

No law shall be enacted providing for the grant of a dissolution of marriage.

A new subsection was substituted for this subsection by the Fifteenth Amendment of the Constitution, 1995, which text is given and commented on following this below.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Providing for the grant of a dissolution of marriage' is expressed as 'a bhéarfadh cumhacht chun pósadh a scaoileadh' ('which would give power to dissolve a marriage') in the Irish text.
- 2 Again, as in some earlier Articles, 'Ní cead' ('It is not permitted') expresses 'No ... shall' of the English text.

Commentary

a scaoileadh 'Scaoilim pósadh' is translated as 'I dissolve a marriage' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'dissolution (i.e. of marriage)' is translated as 'scaoileadh'. 'Scaoil' is translated as 'loose(n), release, discharge' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'páirtíocht, pósadh, a scaoileadh, to dissolve a partnership, a marriage'. Dinneen also gives 'I dissolve' as one of the senses of 'scaoilim'. 'Bursts, scatters, spreads' is the principal sense of 'scaillid' given in DIL. Note that in the amended ss2, 'A Court ... may grant a dissolution of marriage' is rendered as 'Féadfaidh cúirt ... scaoileadh ar phósadh a thabhairt' – see the commentary on the amended subsection below.

In s2(2) of the Army Pensions Act, 1923, 'on the death of his wife or the lawful annulment or dissolution of his marriage' is translated as 'ar fháil bháis dá mhnaoi no ar a phósa do chur ar neamh-ní no do bhrise go dleathach'. 'An pósa do scur go dleathach' translates 'the lawful dissolution of the marriage' in s22(1) of the Army Pensions Act, 1927. 'In consideration or in consequence of the dissolution or annulment of a marriage' is translated as 'i gcomaoin nó de dhroim scaoileadh nó neamhniú pósta' in s3(1)(a)(i) of the Finance Act, 1983.

cumhacht Literally 'power'. 'I grant' is translated as 'deonaím' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Such justice may, as he thinks proper, grant or refuse to grant such annulment' is translated as 'féadfaidh an Breitheamh san an t-ordú diúltuithe sin do chur ar nea-mbrí no diúltú d'é chur ar nea-mbrí, fé mar a mheasfaidh is ceart' in s35(3) of the Trade Union Act, 1941. 'An Act to grant and appropriate certain sums' is translated as 'Acht chun suimeanna áirithe do dheonú agus do chur i leithreas' in the Long Title of the Appropriation Act, 1922, with 'a permit granted under this section' being translated as 'cead a deonfar fén alt so' in s37(6) of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1927. Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú suggests 'a lamháil', 'a cheadú' or 'a aontú' as possible alternatives to 'a dheonú'.

See the commentary on Article 8.3 regarding 'provide' in the Acts. Note, for example, that 'to be a law providing for the control or regulation in that country of the manufacture ... of dangerous or otherwise harmful drugs' is translated as 'gur dlí é a fhoráilann rialú sa tír sin ar mhonarú ... drugaí atá contúirteach nó atá diobhálach ar dhóigh eile' in s20(2) of Misuse of Drugs Act, 1977, with 'to be a law providing for the control and regulation in that country of the manufacture ... of drugs' being translated as 'is dlí dheineann socrú chun déanamh ... druganna do stiúradh agus do rialáil sa tír sin' in s3(1) of the Dangerous Drugs Act, 1934.

a bhéarfadh This would be replaced by 'a thabharfadh' in the official standard – see the commentary on Article 12.1.

Ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

Standardised Irish text

Ní cead dlí ar bith a achtú a thabharfadh cumhacht chun phósadh a scaoileadh.

Direct translation

Ní achtófar aon dlí lena ndéanfar socrú chun scaoileadh ar phósadh a dheonú<sup>1</sup>.

Variants

<sup>1</sup> 'a thabhairt', 'a lamháil'

ARTICLE 41.3.2° (as amended)

AIRTEAGAL 41.3.2° (arna leasú)

TÉACS GAEILGE

Féadfaidh Cúirt a bheidh ainmnithe le dlí scaoileadh ar phósadh a thabhairt sa chás, ach sa chás amháin, gur deimhin léi –

- i go raibh, ar dháta thionscnamh na n-imeachtaí, tréimhse ceithre bliana ar a laghad, nó tréimhsí ceithre bliana ar a laghad san iomlán, caite ag na céilí ina gcónaí ar leithligh óna chéile le linn na gcúig bliana roimhe sin,
- ii nach bhfuil ionchas réasúnach ar bith ann go mbeidh comhréiteach idir na céilí,
- iii go bhfuil cibé socrú ann, nó go ndéanfar cibé socrú, is dóigh leis an gCúirt a bheith cuí ag féachaint do na himthosca, le haghaidh na gcéilí, le haghaidh aon leanaí le ceachtar acu nó leis an mbeirt acu agus le haghaidh aon duine eile a bheidh forordaithe le dlí, agus
- iv go gcomhlíontar aon choinníollacha breise a bheidh forordaithe le dlí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

A Court which will be specified by law may give a dissolution of marriage in the case, but only in the case, that it has ascertained –

- i that, on the date of the initiation of the proceedings, the spouses had spent a period of at least four years, or periods of at least four years in total, living apart from each other during the previous five years,
- ii that no reasonable expectation exists that there will be a compromise between the spouses,
- iii that such an arrangement exists, or that such an arrangement will be made, that the Court thinks proper having regard to the circumstances, for the spouses, for any children of either of them or of both of them and for any other person prescribed by law, and
- iv that any further conditions prescribed by law are fulfilled.

ENGLISH TEXT

A Court designated by law may grant a dissolution of marriage where, but only where, it is satisfied that –

- i at the date of the institution of the proceedings, the spouses have lived apart from one another for a period of, or periods amounting to, at least four years during the previous five years,
- ii there is no reasonable prospect of a reconciliation between the spouses,
- iii such provision as the Court considers proper having regard to the circumstances exists or will be made for the spouses, any children of either or both of them and any other person prescribed by law, and
- iv any further conditions prescribed by law are complied with.

This text was substituted for the original subsection following the Fifteenth Amendment of the Constitution, 1995.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Reconciliation' is rendered as 'comhréiteach' in the Irish text, which term is translated as 'compromise' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'Designated' is rendered as 'ainmnithe' ('named'/'specified') in the Irish text.
- 3 In the original subsection 2, 'providing for the grant of a dissolution of marriage' is expressed as 'a bhéarfadh cumhacht chun pósadh a scaoileadh' while in this subsection 'A Court ... may grant a dissolution of marriage' is rendered as 'Féadfaidh Cúirt ... scaoileadh ar phósadh a thabhairt'.
- 4 'For a period of, or periods amounting to, at least four years' is rendered as 'tréimhse ceithre bliana ar a laghad, nó tréimhsí ceithre bliana ar a laghad san iomlán' ('a period of at least four years, or periods of at least four years in all'), with 'the spouses having lived apart ... for a period ...' rendered as 'go raibh ... tréimhse ... caite ag na céilí ina gcónaí ar leithligh' ('that the spouses had spent a period ... living apart'), in the Irish text.

Commentary

comhréiteach This compound is translated as ‘compromise’ in Téarmaí Dlí, following four of the ten Irish Legal Terms Orders, with ‘comhréítim’ translated as ‘I compromise (i.e. an action or claim)’. ‘Comhréiteach’, verbal noun of ‘comhréítigh’ (‘compromise, settle; agree’ in Ó Dónaill), is translated as ‘compromise, settlement; agreement, harmonization’ in Ó Dónaill, who cites ‘comhréiteach aighnis, settlement of dispute’. This compound of ‘comh’ (‘mutual, joint, common’) with ‘réiteach’ does not appear to be given as a headword in Dinneen nor in DIL. ‘Réiteach’ has the sense of ‘solution, settlement; adjustment, agreement’, Ó Dónaill citing ‘réiteach a dhéanamh idir dhaoine, to settle matters between people’, ‘teacht chun réitigh le duine, to come to an agreement with someone’ and ‘chuaigh an chúis ó réiteach orainn, we failed to decide the issue, to come to terms’, along with ‘bord réitigh, conciliation board’ and ‘ráiteas réitigh, reconciliation statement’.

Dinneen gives ‘a reconciliation, peace, concord, settlement’ as one of the senses of ‘réidhteach’, translating ‘dúdog réidhtigh’ as ‘a friendly pipe, a pipe of peace’. DIL gives ‘settling, adjusting (a dispute, transaction); making terms (with)’ as a secondary sense of ‘réidtech’, citing ‘[nir] fed in t-imper reiteach eturra’ (i.e. the emperor was unable to ‘make peace between them’). ‘Réidtech’ is the verbal noun of ‘réidid’, translated as ‘levels, smooths, makes easy, clears (land etc.)’ in DIL. The verb ‘réidigid’ is also given as a headword in DIL, this being a deponent verb in Old Irish – DIL cites ‘ní redigedar’ (‘it does not make plain’) from the early ninth-century Milan Glosses on a Latin Commentary on the Psalms, and gives ‘settles, adjusts (a quarrel, transaction)’ as a later sense of this verb, citing ‘má dho réidhightheadh eadruinn 7 Dia’ (‘if we have been reconciled to God’) from the seventeenth-century translation of Romans v. 10. Both these verbs are based on ‘réidh’, primarily ‘level, smooth’, but with sense (e) in DIL of ‘at peace, reconciled’, ‘nach beinn-si reidh 7 Fionn’, from Duanaire Finn, being translated as ‘reconciled to Fionn’.

In s8(2) of the Judicial Separation and Family Law Reform Act, 1989, ‘and such order of rescission shall be made by the court upon it being satisfied that a reconciliation has taken place between the applicant and the respondent’ is translated as ‘agus déanfaidh an chúirt an t-ordú cealaithe sin ar í a bheith deimhin de go bhfuil an t-iarratasóir agus an freagróir tar éis teacht ar chomhréiteach’, with ‘to facilitate reconciliation between estranged spouses’ being translated as ‘d’éascú comhréitigh idir céilí coimhthithe’ in the Long Title of that Act. In Article 43.2.2°, ‘with a view to reconciling their exercise with the exigencies of the common good’ is expressed as ‘d’fhonn an t-oibriú sin agus leas an phobail a thabhairt le chéile’. ‘To reconcile difference of calculation’ and ‘reconciliation of balances’ are cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated respectively as ‘deifriocht do thabhairt dá chéile’ and ‘réiteach iarmhéideanna’ in early official translations. De Bhaldráithe gives ‘réiteach’ and ‘athmhuintearas’ as translations of ‘reconciliation’, the latter term being given as a headword in Ó Dónaill and simply translated as ‘reconciliation’.

ainmnithe ‘Nominate’ and ‘specify’ are two of the secondary senses of ‘ainmnigh’ (principally ‘name’) given by Ó Dónaill, who cites ‘duine a ainmniú do phost, ina iarrthóir, to nominate someone to a post, as a candidate’ and ‘lá, ionad, coinneollacha, a ainmniú, to specify a day, a place, conditions’. Dinneen includes ‘I name, assign; I nominate, mention, specify’ among the senses of ‘ainmnighim’. DIL gives examples of ‘ainmnigidir’ from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards, this verb being based on ‘ainmm’. Incidentally, it is thought that ‘anm’, found in Ogam inscriptions, which date from the fourth century onwards, may mean ‘inscription’ or ‘mortal remains’ – see DIL s.v. ‘ainmm’. See the commentary on Articles 6.1 and 13.8.2° regarding ‘designate’, expressed respectively by ‘ceap’ and ‘ainmnigh’.

ar dháta thionscnamh na n-imeachtaí ‘Tionscnamh imeachtaí’ is translated as ‘institution of proceedings’ in Téarmaí Dlí, where ‘toghairm thionscnaimh’ is translated as ‘originating summons’ and ‘tionscnaím imeachtaí’ is translated as ‘I bring proceedings’. Unlike some other verbal nouns, ‘tionscnaimh’ alone is given as the genitive singular of ‘tionscnamh’ in Ó Dónaill (translating ‘tionscnamh’ as ‘beginning, origin; introduction, initiation; institution, establishment’); one might perhaps have expected the form ‘tionscanta’ as genitive singular of the verbal noun with ‘tionscnaimh’ as the genitive singular of the noun – see, ‘filleadh’, for example, in Ó Dónaill, with ‘fillidh’ and ‘fillte’ being cited as the two forms of the genitive singular – and subsequently one would have ‘ar dháta tionscanta na n-imeachtaí’, like the form ‘Bord Soláthair an Leictreachais’, for example. DIL cites examples of the genitive form ‘tindsanta’ from the Yellow Book of Lecan (‘cuis tindsanta na raed n-anaithnich’) onwards. ‘Tionscna(m)’ is the Middle Irish verbal noun of ‘do-inscanna’, ‘begins’ (‘tinnscetal’ being the earlier verbal noun), examples of this verb being cited in DIL from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards, the following final example being cited from Keating’s seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death: ‘tionnsgnaidh an chríoch’ (= ‘finis incipit’). See further the commentary on Article 45.3.1° where ‘tionscnamh’ expresses ‘initiative’.

Commenting on the direct translation below, with ‘tionscanta’ given as a variant, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that a Munsterman would say ‘ar dháta na n-imeachtaí a thionscnamh’ in that sense, which is not the same as ‘dáta tionscanta na n-imeachtaí’, but that one would prefer ‘an dáta ar tionscnaíodh na himeachtaí’ in that second sense.

céilí ‘Céile’ is translated as ‘companion, spouse’ in Ó Dónaill and as ‘a fellow, companion, mate’ in Dinneen, who cites ‘céile na Beithínighe, the spouse of Beithineach river, i.e. he who owned the land on the river’. ‘Husband’ is given as one of the meanings of ‘céile’ in DIL, where examples are cited from the Old Irish Glosses, with the sense ‘wife’ being rarely cited, and apparently not attested in the Glosses. The main senses of ‘céile’ as a noun, according to DIL, are ‘servant’ and ‘fellow’, the term always implying a relationship. Examples of the sense ‘fellow, companion, “opposite number”, other one, neighbour (in New Testament sense)’ are cited in DIL from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards. Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 306, translates ‘céile’ as ‘client’, this word being cognate with Welsh ‘cilydd’ (‘fellow, companion’). In early Irish law the rights and duties of a lord (‘flaith’) related mainly to his clients, according to Professor Kelly (op. cit., pp. 26-7), as it was the possession of clients which made him a lord, the lowest grade of lord having five free clients and five base clients according to the early Irish law-tract Crith Gablach. In another such tract, the relationship between a lord and his base client is classified as being similar to that between a husband and his wife, a teacher and his pupil, or the Church and its monks, while in a certain Old Irish poem, God is compared to a lord whose clients are the Jewish people (ibid., p. 27). In Modern Irish, the regular terms for 'husband' and 'wife' are 'fear céile' and 'bean chéile'.

ionchas This headword is translated as 'expectation, prospect' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'ionchas saoil' as 'life expectancy' and 'ionchais na bliana' as 'the prospects for the year'. Dinneen translates 'ionchas' as 'likelihood, expectation, prospect', translating 'le hionchas go' as 'in the hope that'.

imthosca 'Imthoisic' is translated as 'circumstance' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'imthosca ionchoirtheacha' and 'imthosca maolaitheacha' are translated respectively as 'incriminating circumstances' and 'extenuating circumstances'. Ó Dónaill gives the form 'imthosca' (translated as 'circumstances') as the headword, followed by the abbreviations for 'substantive plural' and 'Jurisprudence'. See the commentary on Article 45.2.v as regards 'circumstances' in the Acts.

forordaithe 'Forordai' is translated as 'pre-ordain, predestine' in Ó Dónaill, with 'forordú' translated as 'fore-ordering, predestination'. Dinneen translates 'forórdughim' as 'I predestine, order beforehand', translating 'forórdughadh' as 'predestination, act of predestining; a previous order'. 'Prescription' is translated as 'rúradh' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'rúrach' translation 'prescriptive'. The glossators of the early Irish laws took 'rudrad' to be from 'ro' ('great, excessive') plus 'dúrad' ('duration'), this being the correct derivation of the word according to Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 109. See the commentary on Articles 15.9.1° and 27.2 where 'prescribe' is expressed respectively by 'leag amach' and 'ordaigh'.

san iomlán This phrase is translated as 'in all, all told' in Ó Dónaill. Looking at 'amount' in early Acts, 'and so much thereof as consisted of rent exceeds the sum to which compounded arrears of rent would have otherwise amounted' is translated as 'agus gur mó an méid ba chíos de ná an tsuim a dhéanfadh riaráiste cíosa socruithe mara mbeadh san' in s19(5)(a) of the Land Act, 1923. 'All sums granted out of the Central Fund towards making good the supply granted, amounting ... in the aggregate to the sum of thirty-two million, two hundred and twelve thousand, eight hundred and ninety-three pounds' is translated as 'Na suimeanna uile a deontar as an bPrímh-Chiste sin ... chun an soláthar a deonadh do dhéanamh iomlán agus 'na ndineann a n-iomlán ... suim dhá mhilleon déag ar fhichid, dhá chéad is dhá mhíle dhéag, ocht gcéad nócha a trí de phúint' in s3 of the Appropriation Act, 1924.

scaoileadh ar phósadh Note that Téarmaí Dlí simply has 'scaoileadh, dissolution (i.e. of marriage); release', without preposition, and translates 'I dissolve a marriage' as 'scaoilim pósadh'. We have seen in the original subsection 2 how 'providing for the dissolution of a marriage' was expressed as 'a bhéarfadh cumhacht chun pósadh a scaoileadh' and in subsection 3 '(No) person whose marriage has been dissolved' is expressed as 'I gcás pósadh duine ar bith a scaoileadh'. Ó Dónaill cites 'scaoileadh ó choinníoll, ó oibleagáid, release from condition, from obligation'.

ar leithligh This phrase as translated as 'apart, aside, by oneself, in particular' in Ó Dónaill and as 'separate, by oneself, by itself' in Dinneen. 'Oc leithlig' and 'do leithlig' were earlier forms of this phrase, translated as 'apart, aside' in DIL.

Standardised Irish text

'Tionscnamh', as a verbal noun, rather than be lenited, might perhaps be put in the genitive singular, 'tionscnaimh'.

Direct translation

Féadfaidh Cúirt a bheidh ainmnithe le dlí scaoileadh ar phósadh a dheonú<sup>1</sup> sa chás, agus sa chás sin amháin, gur deimhin léi –

- i go raibh, ar dháta tionscnaimh<sup>2</sup> na n-imeachtaí, tréimhse ceithre bliana ar a laghad, nó tréimhse ceithre bliana ar a laghad san iomlán, caite ag na céilí ina gcónaí ar leithligh óna chéile le linn na gcúig bliana roimhe sin,
- ii nach bhfuil aon ionchas réasúnach ann go mbeidh athmhuintearas idir na céilí,
- iii go bhfuil cibé socrú ann is cuí leis an gCúirt ag féachaint do na himthosca nó go ndéanfar socrú den sórt sin le haghaidh na gcéilí, le haghaidh aon leanaí le ceachtar acu nó leis an mbeirt acu agus le haghaidh aon duine eile a bheidh forordaithe le dlí, agus
- iv go gcomhlíonfar aon choinníollacha breise a bheidh forordaithe le dlí.

Variants

- 1 'a thabhairt'
- 2 'tionscanta', 'thionscnamh'

ARTICLE 41.3.3° AIRTEAGAL 41.3.3°

TÉACS GAEILGE

I gcás pósadh duine ar bith a scaoileadh faoi dhlí shibhialta aon Stáit eile agus an pósadh sin, agus bail dlí air, a bheidh ann fós faoin dlí a bheas i bhfeidhm in alt na huaire taobh istigh de dhlínse an Rialtais agus na Parlaiminte a bhunaítear leis an mBunreacht seo, ní fhéadfaidh an duine sin pósadh ar a mbeadh bail dlí a dhéanamh taobh istigh den dlínse sin an fad is beo don duine eile a bhí sa chuing phósta a scaoileadh amhlaidh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In the case of the marriage of anybody dissolved under the civil law of any other State and that marriage, being legally valid, (and) still existing under the law which will be in force at the time within the jurisdiction of the Government and the Parliament which is established under this Constitution, that person cannot enter a marriage which would have legal validity within that jurisdiction while the other person who was in the bond of marriage that was thus dissolved is alive.

ENGLISH TEXT

No person whose marriage has been dissolved under the civil law of any other State but is a subsisting valid marriage under the law for the time being in force within the jurisdiction of the Government and Parliament established by this Constitution shall be capable of contracting a valid marriage within that jurisdiction during the lifetime of the other party to the marriage so dissolved.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'But is a subsisting valid marriage' is expressed in the Irish text as 'agus an pósadh sin, agus bail dlí air, a bheith ann fós', 'and that marriage, and it legally valid, and still existing'.
- 2 'Shall not be capable of' is expressed as 'ní fhéadfaidh' ('will not be able') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Contracting a valid marriage' is expressed in the Irish text as 'pósadh ar a mbeadh bail dlí a dhéanamh', 'entering (making) a marriage which would have legal validity'.
- 4 'During the lifetime of the other party to the marriage' is expressed as 'an fad is beo don duine eile a bhí sa chuing phósta' ('while the other person who was in the marriage bond is alive') in the Irish text.

Commentary

a bheith ann fós Literally 'still existing'. Looking at early Acts, 'The Minister may ... alter the boundaries of any fishery district or electoral division subsisting at the date of the order' is translated as 'Féadfidh an tAire ... teoranta aon cheanntair no togh-roinne iascaigh a bheidh ann ar dháta an ordaithe d'atharú' in s27(1) of the Finance Act, 1925. 'Comprised in a subsisting licence granted under this Act' is translated as '(ná) fuil i gceadúnas atá i bhfeidhm agus a deonadh féin Acht so' in s43(2) of the Dairy Produce Act, 1924.

'Subsisting' is translated as 'ar marthain' in Téarmaí Dlí, which phrase is cited in the Acts from 1927: 'And had no reasonable ground for suspecting that copyright subsisted in the work' is translated as 'agus gan aon chúis réasúnta aige chun bheith amhrusach go raibh cóipcheart ar marthain san obair' in s161 of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. "Subsisting marriage" shall be construed as including a voidable marriage' is translated as 'déanfar "pósadh atá ar marthain" a fhorléiriú mar abairt a fholaíonn pósadh in-neamhnithe' in s46(4) of the Status of Children Act, 1987, with 'a person whose parents are or have been married to each other but between whom there has been no subsisting marriage at any time during the period of ten months before the person's birth' being translated as '(do) dhuine a bhfuil nó a raibh a thuismitheoirí pósta ar a chéile ach nach raibh aon phósth ar marthain eatarthu tráth ar bith le linn na tréimhse deich mí sular rugadh an duine' in s4(a).

In s75(1) of the Landlord and Tenant (Amendment) Act, 1980, 'and there is a subsisting undertaking ... that the house would not be sold' is translated as 'agus a bhfuil geallúint ar marthain ... nach ndíolfaí an teach'. Finally note that 'An alteration of the memorandum or rules shall not affect any subsisting right or obligation of a society' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfaidh athrú ar mheabhrán ná ar rialacha difear d'aon cheart marthanach nó oibleagáid mharthanach de chuid cumainn' in s14(6) of the Building Societies Act, 1989.

bail dlí air 'Validity' is given as one of the senses of 'bail' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ionas go mbeadh bail ar a fhaoistin, so that his confession might be valid' and 'gan bhail, invalid, void'. Dinneen translates 'bail' as 'success, prosperity; form, effect, issue, condition'. DIL s.v. 'bal', in the sense of the efficacy of a sacrament or judgement, cites 'bidh buil ar an bpósadh gan fhios, gan fhiadhain' ('a clandestine marriage is valid') from Parrthas an Anna (Gearnon, 1645) and also cites 'bidh a bpósadh ar bhail' ('valid'), from Ó Heoghusa's An Teagasg Críosaíochta, 1611 – see the commentary on Articles 15.4.2° and 28.3.3°.

Looking at 'valid' in the early Acts, 'or any valid private interest therein' is translated as 'no d'aon cheart dlísteanach príobháideach 'na leith' in Article 11 of the 1922 Constitution. 'Íocaíochta éifeachtacha íocaíochta an Cheathrú Sceidil' translates 'Payments in Fourth Schedule declared valid' in the Margin Title of s19 of the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, with 'Any County Court Judge may deem any document to which this section applies to have been validly served' being translated as 'féadfidh aon Bhreitheamh Cúirte Contae a thógaint gur seirbheáladh go dleathach aon scríbhinn le n-a mbaianeann an t-alt so' in s2(1) of the County Courts (Amendment) Act, 1923.

Turning to modern Acts, with 'valid' being translated as 'bail' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'Where a marriage would not be regarded as valid in law' is translated as 'I gcás nach measfaí pósadh a bheith ina phósadh bailí faoin dlí' in s1(7) of the Marriages Act, 1972. 'That the father reasonably believed that the ceremony of marriage ... resulted in a valid marriage' is translated as 'gur chreid an t-athair le réasún go raibh pósadh bailí de thoradh an tsearmanais phósta' in s9 of the Status of Children Act, 1987.

pósadh a dhéanamh This phrase is translated as 'to marry; to officiate at a marriage ceremony' in Ó Dónaill. DIL cites 'co rinne [Dia] pósad er tús iter Adam 7 Eua' (i.e. God made marriage first between Adam and Eve) from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, a manuscript compiled in or before 1411. 'Such children are the children of a marriage contracted before his discharge from the forces' is translated as 'gur clann iad do rugadh do lannhain a pósadh roimh an duine sin do scur as na fórsaí' in s25(2) of the Army Pensions Act, 1932, with 'being the child of a marriage contracted before his discharge from the forces' being translated as 'leanbh de phósth a rinneadh sular urscaoileadh é as na fórsaí' in s4(1)(e)(ii) of the Army Pensions Act, 1959. Note that 'I contract' is translated as 'conraím' in Téarmaí Dlí; 'until the purchase monies hereinbefore contracted to be paid ... shall have been paid to the Vendors' is translated as 'go dtí go mbeidh an t-airgead ceannuigh do connruíodh anso roimhe seo d'íoc ... leis na Díoltóirí' in s7 of the Second Schedule to the Creamery Act, 1928.

faoi dhli sibhialta According to the official standard there would be no lenition of the adjective here following a masculine noun in the dative singular – see the commentary on Article 45. The Margin Title of s195 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, ‘Adjustment of military and civil law’, is translated as ‘Ceartú idir dhli airm agus dlí sibhialta’. ‘That the plaintiff is in breach of the civil or criminal law’ is translated as ‘go bhfuil sárú ar an dlí sibhialta nó ar an dlí coiriúil déanta ag an ngearánaí’ in s57(1) of the Civil Liability Act, 1961. See the commentary on Article 43.2.1<sup>o</sup> regarding ‘sibhialta’.

sa chuing phósta Ó Dónaill translates ‘cuing an phósta’ as ‘the marriage yoke, wedlock’, translating ‘faoi chuing rúin’ as ‘under a bond of secrecy’ and ‘tá sé faoi chuing na cleithe acu’ as ‘he is completely in their power’, ‘cuing’ being translated as ‘yoke’. Dinneen translates ‘cuing phósta’ as ‘marriage bond’, translating ‘cuing’ as ‘a yoke; a bond, duty or obligation; entreaty; a condition ...’. DIL cites ‘cuing phósta’ from the late seventeenth-century Parlaimint na mBan, citing ‘fa chuing creidimh’ from a miscellaneous collection of poetry as an example of the phrase ‘cuing chrábaid (chreitim, etc.)’, ‘religious life, observance’.

Ní fhéadfaidh Regarding ‘capable of’ in the Acts, ‘no person shall be capable of being appointed as auditor of the Company without the approval of such appointment by the Minister’ is translated as ‘nach mbeidh aon duine incheaptha mar iniúchóir ar an gCuideachta gan ceadú an Aire leis an gceapachán sin’ in s10(e) of the Industrial Alcohol (Amendment) Act, 1980, with ‘every chattel mortgage shall be capable of being registered within one month ...’ being translated as ‘beidh gach airnéis-mhorgáiste incláraithe laistigh de mhí’ in s26(2) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1978. ‘Provided, however, that a register kept in non-legible form shall be capable of being reproduced in legible form’ is translated as ‘ar choinníoll, áfach, gur féidir clár a choimeádfar i bhfoirm neamhlinéite a atáirgeadh i bhfoirm inléite’ in s4(2) of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1977. ‘No person appointed to be an officer ... shall be capable of holding that office ... until he shall have made and subscribed ... a declaration’ is translated as ‘Éinne a ceapfar ... chun bheith ina oifigeach ... ní fhéadfa sé bheith i seilbh na hoifige sin ... go dtí go ndéanfidh agus go soghneoidh sé ... dearbhú’ in s11(2) of the Police Forces Amalgamation Act, 1925. ‘Capable of being applied’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as ‘is féidir do chur i mbaint’ in Iris Oifigiúil, 1925, p. 573.

a scaoileadh See the commentary on the foregoing subsection. ‘If the pensioner’s wife dies or the marriage is lawfully annulled or dissolved’ is translated as ‘má gheibheann bean chéile an phinsinéara bás nó má déantar an pósadh a chur ar neamhbhrí nó a scaoileadh go dleathach’ in the First Schedule to the Army Pensions Act, 1946. ‘Being a marriage which has not been dissolved or annulled’ is translated as ‘is pósadh nach mbeidh scaoilte ná neamhnithe’ in s4(1) of the Finance Act, 1983.

fad is beo ‘And may specify the period during the lifetime of the person applying for the order’ is translated as ‘agus féadfar an tréimhse, le linn beo don duine a d’iarr an t-ordú, a shonrú ann’ in the Table to s17(b) of the Status of Children Act, 1987. ‘For such period during the lifetime of the applicant spouse’ is translated as ‘go ceann cibé tréimhse le linn don chéile iarthach a bheith beo’ in s5(1)(a) of the Family Law (Maintenance of Spouses and Children) Act, 1976. ‘If the valuation date occurs during the lifetime of the surviving party to the marriage’ is translated as ‘más dáta i rith saol an pháirtí mharthanaigh sa phósadh an dáta luachála’ in s5(2)(b) of the Wealth Tax Act, 1975. Finally, ‘shall be granted by way of weekly pension during the lifetime of the employee’ is translated as ‘is i bhfuirm pinsin sheachtainiúil le saol an fhostaí a deonfar é’ in s5 of the Limerick Corporation Gas Undertaking (Pensions) Act, 1929.

in alt na huaire See the commentary on Articles 10.1, 12.4.2<sup>o</sup> and 46.2. ‘Under the law for the time being in force in Northern Ireland’ is translated as ‘faoin dlí a bheidh i bhfeidhm de thuras na huaire i dTuaisceart Éireann’ in s2(1) of the Foyle Fisheries (Amendment) Act, 1976. ‘By or under the law for the time being in force in relation to elections of members of councils of county boroughs’ is translated as ‘do réir no fé réim an dlí bheidh i bhfeidhm de thuras na huaire maidir le toghacháin bhall comhairlí contae-bhuirgí’ in s5(5) of the Waterford City Management Act, 1939, with ‘do réir na dlí nó féin dlí bheidh i bhfeidhm de thuras na huaire maidir le toghacháin bhall de chomhairlí contae-bhuirgí’ being found in s7(5) of the Limerick City Management Act, 1934, and ‘maidir le toghacháin do bhaill de chomhairle contae-bhuirgí’ replacing the final clause in s32(5) of the Local Government (Dublin) Act, 1930. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú again recommends ‘in am’, ‘in alt’ or ‘le linn’ rather than ‘de thuras’ (found generally in the Acts) in the direct translation below.

Standardised Irish text

I gcás pósadh duine ar bith a scaoileadh faoi dhli sibhialta aon Stáit eile agus an pósadh sin, agus bail dlí air, a bheith ann fós faoin dlí a bheidh i bhfeidhm in alt na huaire taobh istigh de dhlinse an Rialtais agus na Parlaiminte a bhunaítear leis an mBunreacht seo, ní fhéadfaidh an duine sin pósadh ar a mbeadh bail dlí a dhéanamh taobh istigh den dlínse sin an fad is beo don duine eile a bhí sa chuing phósta a scaoileadh amhlaidh.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Aon duine ar scaoileadh a phósadh nó a pósadh faoi dhli sibhialta aon Stáit eile ach ar pósadh bailí ar marthain é faoin dlí atá i bhfeidhm de thuras<sup>1</sup> na huaire laistigh de dhlinse an Rialtais agus na Parlaiminte a bhunaítear<sup>2</sup> leis an mBunreacht seo ní fhéadfaidh sé nó sí pósadh bailí a dhéanamh<sup>3</sup> laistigh den dlínse sin le linn don pháirtí eile sa phósadh a scaoileadh amhlaidh a bheith beo<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘in am’, ‘in alt’, ‘le linn’
- 2 ‘atá á bhunú’
- 3 ‘a chonrú’
- 4 ‘le linn beo don pháirtí eile sa phósadh a scaoileadh amhlaidh’

ARTICLE 42.1 AIRTEAGAL 42.1

EDUCATION OIDEACHAS

TÉACS GAELGE

Admhaíonn an Stát gurb é an Teaghlach is múinteoir príomha dúchasach don leanbh, agus ráthaíonn gan cur isteach ar cheart doshannta ná ar dhualgas doshannta tuisti chun oideachas de réir a n-acmhainne a chur ar fáil dá gclainn i gcúrsaí creidimh, moráltachta, intleachta, coirp agus comhdhaonnachta.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State acknowledges that the Family is the primary connate teacher for the child, and (it) guarantees not to interfere with the inalienable right nor with the inalienable obligation of parents to provide education according to their means for their family in matters of religion, morality, intellect, body and sociality.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State acknowledges that the primary and natural educator of the child is the Family and guarantees to respect the inalienable right and duty of parents to provide, according to their means, for the religious and moral, intellectual, physical and social education of their children.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'To provide ... for the religious ... education of their children' is expressed as 'chun oideachas ... a chur ar fáil dá gclainn i gcúrsaí creidimh' ('to provide education for their children in religious affairs') in the Irish text.
- 2 While 'leanbh' expresses 'child' in the Irish text, which term translates 'child' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'children' is expressed not by the plural 'leanaí' but as 'clann', i.e. 'children' seen as a collective family unit.
- 3 'To respect' is expressed as 'gan cur isteach ar' ('not to interfere with') in the Irish text, as in Article 40.3.1°, 'cur isteach ar' being translated as 'to molest' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 'Natural' is expressed as 'dúchasach' ('connate'/'native'/'hereditary') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Educator' is expressed as 'múinteoir' ('teacher') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Social' is expressed by the genitive singular of the now infrequently used term 'comhdhaonnacht' in the Irish text, 'sóisialach' being the general legal term and 'sóisialta' being the general modern term in ordinary usage rendering 'social'.
- 7 There is a comma in the Irish text before the clause beginning 'agus ráthaíonn' ('and guarantees'), no corresponding comma being found in the English text, and a comma in the English text alone before and after the phrase 'according to their means'.

Commentary

oideachas Dinneen's entry under this headword is as follows: 'advice, instruction, teaching, education (recent in this sense)'. Ó Dónaill cites 'oideachas bunscoile, ollscoile, primary school, university education' and 'córas oideachais, educational system'. DIL translates 'oidecht' and 'oides' respectively as 'teaching, training' and 'teaching, instruction', both being based on 'oide', the later form of 'aite', translated as (a) 'foster-father' and (b) 'tutor, teacher', in DIL, this secondary sense being cited from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, where we find 'ar danimmart á aite' ('for the authority of his tutors restrained him').

'For the payment of a periodical sum exceeding £30 per week for the maintenance and education of a child' is translated as 'chun suim thréimhsiúil is mó ná £30 sa tseachtain a íoc le cothabháil agus oideachas linbh' in s14(b) of the Courts Act, 1981, with 'for the payment of a weekly sum exceeding £15 for the maintenance and education of a child' being translated as 'chun suim sheachtainiúil is mó ná £15 a íoc le haghaidh cothabháil agus oideachas linbh' in s28(3) of the Family Law (Maintenance of Spouses and Children) Act, 1976. 'Payments made for the education of a child to a standard higher than that provided by the deceased for any other or others of his children' is translated as 'íocaíochtaí a rinneadh chun oideachas a thabhairt do leanbh de chaighdeán is airde ná mar a sholáthraigh an t-éagach d'aon leanbh nó leanaí eile leis' in s63(6) of the Succession Act, 1965. 'Whether or not the premises are also used to provide education at any level other than secondary school level' is translated as 'cibé acu a úsáidtear nó nach n-úsáidtear an t-áitreabh freisin chun oideachas a chur ar fáil ar aon leibhéal seachas ar leibhéal meánscoile' in s1 of the Local Government (Financial Provisions) Act, 1978. 'The principles on which such committee is required by or under this Act to provide continuation education and technical education' is translated as 'na prinsiobail gur dá réir is gá don choiste sin, do réir an Achta so no fé, oideachas leanúna agus ceárd-oideachas do sholáthar' in s29(3) of the Vocational Education Act, 1930. Note finally that 'the proper working of all institutions devoted to the care and education of children' is translated as 'ceart-oibriú gach institiúide atá ag gabháil d'aireachasú agus teagasc leanaí' in Article 50 of the Fourth Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962.

admhaíonn See the commentary on Article 40.3.3° and on the Preamble. 'I acknowledge' is translated as 'admhaím' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'The Taoiseach ... and the Prime Minister ... acknowledge that the most urgent and important issue facing the people of Ireland' is translated as 'Admhaíonn an Taoiseach ... agus an Príomh-Aire gurb í an tsaincheist is práinní agus is tábhachtaí atá os comhair mhuintir na hÉireann' in the December 1993 Joint Declaration (p. 1). 'In the event of its failing to acknowledge receipt of remittance' is translated as 'más rud é ná faghfar admháil ón gcoiste ar airgead an ticéid' in s7(4) of the Public Charitable Hospitals (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1930. 'When a person receives a report under this section he shall as soon as may be acknowledge the receipt thereof' is translated as 'I gcás ina bhfaighidh duine tuarascáil faoin alt seo tabharfaidh sé admháil, a luaithe is féidir, go bhfuair sé í' in s254(3) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. 'Where ... the person in possession of the land acknowledges the title of the person to whom the right of action has accrued' is translated as 'I gcás ... go n-admhóidh an duine i seilbh na talún teideal an duine chun a mbeidh an ceart caingin tar éis faibhriú' in s51(1) of the Statute of Limitations, 1957.

Looking at early Acts, in the Preamble to the Constitution of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) Act, 1922, 'Dáil Éireann sitting as a Constituent Assembly in this Provisional Parliament, acknowledging that all lawful authority comes from God to the people' is translated as 'Dáil Éireann 'na suidhe mar Dháil Bhunaídh sa Phárlimint Shealadach so, á admháil gur ó Dhia a thagann gach údarás dleathach chun na ndaoine', with 'and acknowledging it to be the duty of Saorstát Éireann to make suitable provision for his widow Mrs Maud Griffith' being translated as 'agus fós á admháil dóibh go bhfuil sé de dhualgas ar Shaorstát Éireann soláthar oiriúnach do dhéanamh dá bhaintrigh Meadhbh Uí Ghriobhtha' in the Preamble to the Griffith Settlement Act, 1923.

príomha See the commentary on Article 41.1.1°. 'The primary fund's share of that interest shall be treated as an additional asset of the primary fund' is translated as 'déanfar sciar an chiste phríomha den leas sin a áireamh mar shócmhainn bhreise de chuid an chiste phríomha' in s7 of the Finance Act, 1990. 'The primary allowance' is translated as 'an lamháltas príomha' in s4(1) of the Rates on Agricultural Land (Relief) Act, 1967, and as '(den) liúntas phríomhdha' in s14(1) of the Rates on Agricultural Land (Relief) (No. 2) Act, 1935. 'For the Expenses of Primary Education' is translated as 'Chun Costaisí Bun-Oideachais' in the Schedule to the Appropriation Act, 1925, with 'a secondary, vocational or other post-primary school' being translated as 'meánscoil, gairmscoil nó scoil eile iarbhuoideachais' in s29(5) of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977.

a chur ar fáil This phrase expresses 'to provide', rather than 'to provide for', in the next section. 'Regulations under this section shall provide for payment ... of such amount as may be determined by the Minister' is translated as 'Forálfar le rialacháin faoin alt seo go dtabharfar íocaíocht ... a mbeidh cibé méid inti a chinneadh an tAire' in s61(2) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, with 'Beidh foráil i rialacháin faoin alt seo chun íocaíocht a thabhairt ... a mbeidh cibé méid inti a chinneadh an tAire' being found in s31(2) of the Social Welfare (Occupational Injuries) Act, 1966. 'In so far as they provide for payment of an amount' is translated as 'a mhéid a fhoráilann siad go n-íocfaí méid' in the Table to s52 of the Finance Act, 1980. Finally, 'to provide for payment to the Vendors of the instalment falling due in that year' is translated as 'chun soláthar do dhéanamh chun an tráthchuid a bheidh dlíte an bhliain sin d'íoc leis na Dioltóirí' in s7 of the First Schedule to the Creamery Act, 1928. See the commentary on Article 42.4 regarding 'The State shall provide for free primary education' being expressed as 'Ní foláir don Stát socrú a dhéanamh chun bunoidéachas a bheith ar fáil in aisce' and the reference to this in the courts.

dúchasach This adjective is translated as 'hereditary, ancestral; inherited, inherent; innate, instinctive; native, indigenous' in Ó Dónaill, with 'inheritable' also given, following the abbreviation for 'Jurisprudence'. Dinneen translates 'dúthchasach' as 'of or belonging to one's country; inherent, inherited'. DIL only gives one example of 'dúthchasach' as an adjective, from O'Donovan's Tribes and Customs of Hy-Many, translating the noun 'dúthchasach' principally as 'hereditary proprietor'. 'Dúthchas' is translated principally as 'hereditary right, claim by descent, birthright', being based on 'dúthaig', as an adjective translated as 'belonging to by virtue of descent or hereditary' and, as a noun, 'hereditary land, patrimony', in DIL – see the commentary on Article 1.

Note how 'natural rights of the child', in Article 42.5, is expressed as '(do) chearta nádúrtha ... an linbh'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú wonders if a difference of meaning was understood and accepted here, commenting on 'nádúrtha' in the direct translation below, and favours maintaining 'dúchasach' on that ground. 'Natural child' and 'natural father' are translated respectively as 'leanbh nádúrtha' and 'athair nádúrtha' in Téarmaí Dlí, while 'natural justice' and 'natural law' are respectively translated as 'ceartas aiceanta' and 'dlí aiceanta' and 'natural water-course' as 'sruthchúrsa aiceanta', with 'natural love and affection' translated as 'grá agus gean nádúrtha'. 'Nádúrtha' has the secondary sense of 'good-natured, kindly' according to Ó Dónaill, who translates 'duine nádúrtha' as 'good-natured, kindly, person; easy-mannered person'. DIL cites the following example of 'nádúrda' in the sense of 'native, indigenous': 'Michel O Cleirigh ... do bhraithribh nádúrtha Conuente Dhúin na nGall'. 'Nádúir' is a Romance loanword, according to DIL – see the commentary on Article 10.1, however. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that this word was available too early to be a Romance loanword and that it would probably have the form 'natúr' if it was from Anglo-Norman. Both Irish 'nádúr' and Welsh 'natur' come from Latin 'natura', according to Alexander Macbain's Etymological Dictionary of the Gaelic Language.

"National of another Contracting State" means ... any natural person who had the nationality of a Contracting State' is translated as 'Ciallaíonn "náisiúnach de chuid Stáit Chonarthaigh eile" ... aon duine nádúrtha ag a raibh náisiúnacht de chuid Stáit Chonarthaigh' in s2 of Article 25 of the Second Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1980. 'Its outstanding natural beauty' is translated as 'a shár-áilleacht nádúrtha' in s40(a) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1976. Note, finally, that 'whether he is or is not a natural-born British subject' is translated as 'pe'ca géilliúnach Briotáineach do réir dhúthchais é ... no nách eadh' in s2(1) of the Legitimacy Act, 1931.

cur isteach ar 'Cuirim isteach air' is translated as 'I molest' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 15.10. Turning to the verb 'respect' in the Acts, 'all beneficiaries enjoying such privileges and immunities under this Article have a duty to respect the laws and regulations of the requesting State' is translated as 'beidh de dhualgas ar gach tairbhí a theachtfaidh na pribhléidí agus na diolúintí sin faoin Airteagal seo dlíthe agus rialacháin an Stáit iarrthaigh a urramú' in s7 of Article 8 of the Second Schedule to the Radiological Protection Act, 1991. 'It is the duty of all persons enjoying such privileges and immunities to respect the laws and regulations of the receiving State' is translated as 'is é dualgas na ndaoine go léir a theachtann pribhléidí agus diolúintí den sórt sin dlíthe agus rialacháin an Stáit ghlacaidh a urramú' in s1 of Article 41 of the First Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967. Note finally that 'while respecting the individual preferences of every prisoner' is translated as ‘ach tabharfar aird ar rogha phearsanta gach aon phríosúnaigh’ in Article 38 of the Third Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962. See further the commentary on Articles 40.3.1° and 44.1.

Again Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on the direct translation below, remarks that the English text has the sense of ‘not to interfere with’ and prefers ‘gan cur isteach ar’ to ‘a urramú’. He also remarks that ‘a urramú’ is too far away from the object, ‘ceart ... dualgas’, and that there is a danger of reading the text as ‘le haghaidh oideachas ... a urramú’.

tuistí ‘Tuismitheoir’, ‘parent’, is given as a headword in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil. Ó Dónaill gives ‘tuiste’ as a variant of ‘tuismitheoir’ (‘parent’). Dinneen gives both ‘tuismitheoir’ and ‘tuistidhe’ as headwords and translates them respectively as ‘a generator, a parent’ and ‘a parent, a parent case’. DIL gives examples of ‘tuistid’ (‘parent’) from the Old Irish Glosses onwards, including ‘fo chumachte a tuistide’ (‘under their parents’ power’) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. ‘Tuistid’ is based on ‘tuiste’, the participle of ‘do-fuissim’, translated as (a) ‘begets, generates’, (b) ‘conceives’ and (c) ‘bears, brings forth (offspring)’ in DIL, as well as ‘creates, fashions’, ‘founds, establishes’ and ‘produces, engenders (fig.), causes’. Examples of these senses are cited in DIL from the Glosses of the eighth century as well as examples of the verbal noun ‘tuistiú’, with ‘tuismid’ being the Middle and Modern Irish form of the verbal noun. The verb ‘tuismigid’ is based on ‘do-fuissim’ and on ‘tuismid’, and it is on this later form of the verb that ‘tuismitheoir’ is based, with the examples cited in DIL generally coming from seventeenth-century sources.

de réir a n-acmhainne ‘Ráiteas acmhainne’ is translated as ‘statement of means’ in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill gives ‘means, resources’ as the secondary sense of ‘acmhainn’ (the primary sense being ‘capacity, endurance’), and translates ‘de réir a acmhainne’ as ‘according to his means’, Dinneen similarly translating ‘do réir a acfuinne’. DIL cites ‘do réir acmuinne in othuir’ (= secundum divitias patientis), from Rosa Anglica, as an example of ‘acmaing’ in the sense of ‘abundance, wealth’, ‘acmaing’ being the verbal noun of ‘ad-cumaing’ (*ad-com-icc), ‘reaches, extends to, attains to’.

In s11 of the ‘Details’ in the ‘Leitrim County Scheme’ in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, ‘All patients must contribute towards their maintenance according to their means’ is translated as ‘Caithfidh gach othar cabhrú do réir a acfuinne chun a chimeáda suas’, with ‘or according to his means’ being translated as ‘no do reir a acfuinne’ in s21(b) of the ‘Clare County Scheme’. See the commentary on Articles 42.5 and 45.2.i where ‘means’ is expressed by ‘beart’ and ‘caoi’ respectively.

dá gclainn The special dative singular form of ‘clann’, this form being cited in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil (p. 10, 8th ed., 1995) as optional, the form identical to that of the nominative singular being allowed also in the dative singular and now being in general usage rather than the special dative form. ‘Clann’ is translated principally as ‘children, offspring’ in Ó Dónaill and as ‘race, children’ in Dinneen, who states that ‘clann’ comes from Latin ‘planta’, which word in a later borrowing produced ‘plannda’, ‘plant, scion, offspring’. DIL translates ‘clann’ as (a) ‘plant, planting; off-shoot, produce’, (b) ‘Figuratively of the growth of the hair; springing locks, tresses’ and (c) ‘children, family, offspring; a single child; descendants, race, clan’, citing examples from the Old Irish Glosses onwards of the latter sense, including ‘tuistiú claindde’ (‘the bearing of children’) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. Note, finally, that ‘clannchuid’ is translated as ‘portion (in equity)’ in Téarmaí Dlí.

múinteoir This headword is translated as ‘teacher’ in Ó Dónaill and in Dinneen. The form ‘múintid’ is found in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, glossing Latin ‘eruditorem’ – this is the only example of this headword cited in DIL, where it is translated as ‘a teacher, instructor’. DIL also cites examples of the verb ‘múinid’, ‘teaches, gives instruction (in)’, from the same collection of Glosses.

‘Oideachasóir’ is translated as ‘educationalist’ in Ó Dónaill. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on that term translating ‘educator’ in a draft of the direct translation below, recommends the term ‘oide’, which one finds in De Bhaldraithe translating ‘educator’.

i gcúrsaí coirp ‘To ... school-related physical education activities’ is translated as ‘chuid gníomhaíochtaí corp-oideachais a bhaineann leis an scoil’ in s33(2)(g) of the Finance Act, 1985. ‘Facilities for taking part in sporting and physical education activities’ is translated as ‘saoráidí le páirt a ghlacadh i ngníomhaíochtaí spóirt agus corp-oiliúna’ in s24 of the Value-Added Tax (Amendment) Act, 1978, with ‘tréineáil chuirp’ translating ‘physical training’ in s4(1) of the Vocational Education Act, 1930. ‘Éiglocht mheabhach nó choirp’ translates ‘mental or physical infirmity’ in s5(1)(a) of the Finance Act, 1990.

‘Physical protection of nuclear material’ is translated as ‘cosaint fhisiceach ábhair núicléach’ in s8(a) of the Radiological Protection Act, 1991, with ‘the act of erecting a physical obstacle to an entry to or means of exit from land or a vehicle’ being translated as ‘constaic nithiúil a thógáil i mbealach isteach chun talún nó isteach i bhfeithicil nó i mbealach amach ó thalamh nó as feithicil’ in s3(2)(b) of the Prohibition of Forcible Entry and Occupation Act, 1971.

i gcúrsaí intleachta ‘The Detaining Power shall encourage the practice of intellectual, educational, and recreational pursuits, sports and games amongst prisoners’ is translated as ‘Spreagfaidh an Chumhacht Choinneála na príosúnaigh chun cúrsaí intleachtúla agus oideachasúla, caitheamh aimsire, spóirt agus cluichí, a ghabháil chucu’ in Article 38 of the Third Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962. ‘Or other industrial or intellectual property rights’ is translated as ‘nó cearta maoinne intleachta nó tionscail eile’ in s10(3)(g) of the National Development Corporation Act, 1986.

i gcúsaí moráltachta See the commentary on Articles 29.1 and 40.6.1°. ‘The religious and moral, intellectual, physical and social welfare of the infant’ is translated as ‘leas creidimh, leas morálta, leas intleachta, leas coirp agus leas sóisialta an naíin’ in s9 of the Status of Children Act, 1987, as in s2 of the Guardianship of Infants Act, 1964 (apart from 'sóisialta' replacing 'sóisialach' of the earlier Act).

igcúrsaí creidimh 'Power of court as to infant's religious education' is translated as 'Cumhacht na cúirte maidir le hoideachas creidimh naí' in the Margin Title of s17 of the Guardianship of Infants Act, 1964, for example. See the commentary on Article 44.2.3°.

an Teaghlach See the commentary on Article 41.1.1°. Commenting on 'Teaghlach' in the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú feels it is too 'unfriendly' as a word ("ró-neamh-mhuinteartha d'fhocal") and recommends the term 'muintir'.

ráthaíonn The pronoun 'sé', referring to 'Stát', in accord with common literary usage, is not expressed. We see this feature in other Articles also.

leanbh 'Leanbh nádúrtha' is translated as 'natural child' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'the Children's Court' translated as 'an Chúirt Leanáí'.

doshannta See the commentary on Article 1.

comhdhaonnachta See the commentary on Article 41.1.1°.

Standardised Irish text

Admhaíonn an Stát gurb é an Teaghlach is múinteoir príomha dúchasach don leanbh, agus ráthaíonn gan cur isteach ar cheart doshannta ná ar dhualgas doshannta tuismitheoirí chun oideachas de réir a n-acmhainne a chur ar fáil dá gclann i gcúrsaí creidimh, moráltachta, intleachta, coirp agus comhdhaonnachta.

Direct translation

Admhaíonn an Stát gurb é an Teaghlach<sup>1</sup> oide príomha nádúrtha an linbh<sup>2</sup> agus ráthaíonn sé ceart dochoimhthithe agus dualgas dochoimhthithe<sup>3</sup> na dtuismitheoirí chun socrú<sup>4</sup> a dhéanamh, de réir a n-acmhainne, le haghaidh oideachas creidimh agus moráltachta, intleachta, coirp agus sóisialach a leanáí, a urramú.<sup>5</sup>

Variants

- 1 'gurb iad an Mhuintir'
- 2 'is oide príomha dúchasach don leanbh'
- 3 'ceart agus dualgas dochoimhthithe'
- 4 'soláthar'
- 5 The following is Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú's recommended translation: 'Admhaíonn an Stát gur iad an Mhuintir / gurb é an Teaghlach is oide príomha dúchasach don leanbh agus ráthaíonn gan cur isteach ar cheart dochoimhthithe agus dualgas dochoimhthithe na dtuismitheoirí chun, de réir a n-acmhainne, oideachas creidimh agus moráltachta, intleachta, coirp agus sóisialach a chur ar fáil dá gclann.'

ARTICLE 42.2 AIRTEAGAL 42.2

TÉACS GAELGE

Tig le tuistí an t-oideachas sin a chur ar fáil dá gclainn ag baile nó i scoileanna príobháideacha nó i scoileanna a admhaítear nó a bhunaítear ag an Stát.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Parents can provide that education for their family at home or in private schools or in schools which are acknowledged or which are established by the State.

ENGLISH TEXT

Parents shall be free to provide this education in their homes or in private schools or in schools recognised or established by the State.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Parents shall be free to' is expressed as 'tig le tuistí' ('parents can/may') in the Irish text.
- 2 'To provide this education' is expressed in the Irish text as 'an t-oideachas sin a chur ar fáil dá gclainn' ('to provide this education for their family').
- 3 'In their homes' is expressed as 'ag baile' ('at home') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Recognised' is expressed in the Irish text by the same term as expresses 'acknowledges' in the previous section, 'admhaigh'.

Commentary

ag baile Ó Dónaill translates 'sa bhaile, ag baile' as 'at home', also citing 'faoi bhaile, at home, around' and translating 'tá sé sa bhaile' (of deceased) as 'he is gone to his last abode'. Dinneen translates 'ag baile, 'san mbaile' as 'at home'. 'Baile' is translated principally as 'place; piece of land (belonging to one family, group or individual), homestead, farmstead' in DIL. Ó Dónaill gives 'home' as the principal meaning of 'baile', citing 'a bhaile féin a bheith ag duine, to have one's own home', and gives 'place, township' as the secondary meaning, translating 'an baile seo againne' as 'our town(land)'.<sup>1</sup>

Looking at 'home' in early Acts, 'imported rum may ... be delivered for home consumption if it has been warehoused for a period of at least three years' is translated as 'féadfar rum iomportáil do sheachada chun é chaitheamh sa bhaile má bhí sé i stóras ar feadh tréimhse trí mbliain ar a laighead' in s2(1) of the Immature Spirits (Restriction) Act, 1926, with 'upon delivery for home consumption' being translated as 'ar a sheachada chun a ólta i Saorstát Éireann' in s10(3) of the Finance Act, 1926. 'They should ... be given an idea of the advantages of home life as compared with life in an institution' is translated as 'ba cheart tuisgint do thabhairt dóibh ... sna buntáistí a bhaineann le saol an teinteáin teolaí seachas mar a bhaineann le saol na fúndúireachta' in s8 of the 'Details' in the 'Leitrim County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'Home Assistance' is translated as 'Cabhair Theinteáin' in s2(e) of the 'Clare County Scheme', with 'the County Cavan Home' being translated as 'Teaghlach Chontae an Chabháin' in s1 of the 'Cavan County Scheme', and 'such Home to provide accommodation for the aged and infirm homeless poor' being translated as 'slí do thabhairt sa Teaghlach san do sheandaoine bochta laga gan tigh gan áitreabh' in s2 of the 'Kerry County Scheme'.<sup>2</sup>

The requiring of adult persons to remain in their homes or the parents of children to keep the children in their homes' is translated as 'Ceangal a chur ar dhaoine éatacha

fanúint sa bhaile nó ar thuistí leanaí na leanaí a choimeád sa bhaile' in s4 of the Second Schedule to the Health Act, 1947. In s11 of the 'Laoighis County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provision) Act, 1923, 'Help to be given to the needy or medical attention to the sick in their homes in all possible cases' is translated as 'Tabharfar cúnamh do dhaoine gátaracha no aire leighis do bhreiteacháin ina dtithe féin i ngach cás in ar féidir é', with 'In all possible cases help to be given to people in their homes' being translated as 'I ngach cás in ar féidir é, is ina n-áruis féin a thabharfar cabhair do dhaoine' in s7 of the 'Offaly County Scheme'.

Tig le One of the phrases which expresses 'may' in the Constitution – see the commentary on Article 12.4.4°. As regards 'free to' in the Acts, 'Carriers shall be free to agree among themselves on provisions' is translated as 'Beidh cead ag iompróirí aontú eatarthu féin maidir le forálacha' in Article 40 of the Schedule to the International Carriage of Goods by Road Act, 1990. 'The Fund shall be free to dispose of commodity stocks forfeited to it' is translated as 'Beidh saorhead ag an gCiste diúscairt a dhéanamh ar stoic tráchtarraí atá arna bhforghéilleadh chuige' in s15 of Article 17 of the Schedule to the International Common Fund for Commodities Act, 1982. 'Consular officers shall be free to communicate with nationals of the sending State' is translated as 'beidh saoirse ag oifigh chonsalachta chun cumarsáid a dhéanamh le náisiúnaigh an Stáit shallchuir' in s1(a) of Article 36 of the Second Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967. Finally, 'They shall be free to correspond, subject to censorship, on matters concerning their religious duties' is translated as 'Beidh cead acu comhfhreagras a dhéanamh, faoi réir cinsireachta, ar chúrsaí a bhaineann lena ndualgais reiligiúin' in Article 35 of the Third Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962.

a admhaítear Note that 'admhaítear' expresses 'acknowledges' in the previous section – see the commentary on Article 8.2 regarding 'glac le' expressing 'recognize'. 'Persons employed as teachers in secondary schools recognised by the Minister for Education' is translated as 'daoine ar fostú mar mhúinteoirí i meánscoileanna atá aitheanta ag an Aire Oideachais' in s7(1)(f) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, as in s3(1) of the Social Welfare (No. 3) Act, 1974, and s12(1)(d) of the Social Welfare Act, 1952 (with 'meán-scoileanna' rather than 'meánscoileanna').

tuistí See the commentary on the previous subsection.

dá gclainn See the commentary on the previous subsection.

a chur ar fáil Note how this phrase expresses 'provide for' in the previous subsection.

Standardised Irish text

Tig le tuismitheoirí an t-oideachas sin a chur ar fáil dá gclann ag baile nó i scoileanna príobháideacha nó i scoileanna a admhaítear nó a bhunaítear ag an Stát.

Direct translation

Beidh cead ag tuismitheoirí an t-oideachas sin a sholáthar<sup>1</sup> ina mbaile<sup>2</sup> féin nó i scoileanna príobháideacha nó i scoileanna atá aitheanta nó bunaithe ag an Stát.

Variants

- 1 'a chur ar fáil'
- 2 'ina mbaillte'

ARTICLE 42.3.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 42.3.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ní cead don Stát a chur d'fhiacha ar thuistí, in aghaidh a gcoinsiasa nó a rogha dleathaí, a gclann a chur ar scoileanna a bhunaítear ag an Stát nó ar aon chineál áirithe scoile a ainmnítear ag an Stát.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State is not permitted to compel parents, against their conscience or their lawful choice, to send their family to schools (which are) established by the State or to any particular type of school (which is) named by the State.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall not oblige parents in violation of their conscience and lawful preference to send their children to schools established by the State, or to any particular type of school designated by the State.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'In violation of their conscience and lawful preference' is expressed as 'in aghaidh a gcoinsiasa nó a rogha dleathaí' ('against their conscience or their lawful choice') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Designate' is again expressed by 'ainmnigh' ('name') in the Irish text, as it sometimes is in the Acts.
- 3 'Shall not' is expressed as 'Ní cead' ('It is not permitted') in the Irish text, as we have seen in many earlier Articles.
- 4 A comma follows 'established by the State' in the English text, with no corresponding comma in the Irish text, which however puts the clause 'in aghaidh a gcoinsiasa nó a rogha dleathaí' ('in violation of their conscience and lawful preference') between commas.

Commentary

a chur d'fhiacha ar 'Fiach' is translated as 'debt' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill gives 'debt' as the primary meaning of 'fiach', but gives 'obligation' as one of its secondary meanings, translating 'chuir sé d'fhiacha orm é a dhéanamh' as 'he forced me to do it'. Dinneen translates 'cuirim d'fhiachaibh ar' as 'I oblige, compel, insist on'. DIL cites 'dlegtir féich dúib' ('debts are owed by you') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, s.v. 'fiach', translated as (a) 'an obligation, a payment due, debt, also legal due, fine, penalty' and (b) 'a duty, obligation (especially in plural)'. DIL translates the expression 'cuirim d'fhiachaibh ar ...', which preserves the older meaning of 'fiach' as 'obligation', as 'I compel ... to', citing examples of this phrase from the poetry of Tadhg Dall Ó hUiginn (1550-1591) onwards.

Looking at ‘oblige’ in the Acts, ‘and oblige the transport undertaker to make ... charges for the carriage of merchandise of the applicant’ is translated as ‘agus ceanglóidh air éilithe ... d’éileamh ... ar iompar marsantais de chuid an iarratasóra’ in s102(4) of the Transport Act, 1944. In s58(7) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, ‘The offence of using or offering any menace to or compulsion or any person tending to oblige him to receive, without his consent, any person or horse not duly billeted upon him’ is translated as ‘Aon bhagairt no fórsáil do dhéanamh ar aon duine a raghadh chun a chur fhiachaint ar an duine sin aon duine no capall do ghlaca dá ainneoin agus gur duine no capall é nár cuireadh ar billéad air go cuibhe’.

in aghaidh a gcoinsiasa As regards ‘violation’ in the Acts, ‘concerning any alleged violation of the Convention’ is translated as ‘faoi aon sárú a líomhnófar a rinneadh ar an gCoinbhinsiún’ in Article 52 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962. ‘Or otherwise in violation of the common law’ is translated as ‘nó ar shlí eile ina shárú ar an dlí coiteann’ in s98 of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act, 1959. ‘Contrártha d’fhorála an ordúithe sin’ translates ‘in violation of the provisions of such order’ in s44(3) of the Local Government (Sanitary Services) Act, 1948, with ‘má dintar aon chrann den tsórt san do ghearra anuas no do statha contrárdha don choinioll so’ translating ‘if any such tree is cut down or uprooted in violation of this condition’ in s3(3) of the Land Act, 1927. In s6(8) of the Dublin Reconstruction (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1924, ‘with respect to any of the easements or rights, or any actual or anticipated infringement or violation of the same’ is translated as ‘i dtaobh aon cheann de sna faoisimh no na cirt, no aon bhrise isteach no sárú a dineadh no a meastar a déanfar ar an gcéanna’. Finally, in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 555), ‘Pricing practices designed to secure a privileged position for certain users in violation of the principle of equal access’ is translated as ‘cleachtais phraghsála a bhfuil d’aidhm acu pribhléid a ghnóthú d’úsáidirí áirithe de shárú ar an bprionsabal comhrochtana’.

a rogha dleathaí ‘Dleathach’ is translated as ‘lawful’ in Téarmaí Dlí and as ‘lawful, legal’ in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Articles 10.1 and 40.3.3°. ‘Rogha’ is translated as ‘option’ in Téarmaí Dlí, with ‘rogha bhreithiúnach’, ‘déanaim rogha’ and ‘faoi rogha’ translated respectively as ‘judicial discretion’, ‘I exercise discretion’ and ‘at the discretion of’. ‘Preference’, on the other hand, is translated as ‘tosaíocht’ in Téarmaí Dlí, in accordance with the eighth Irish Legal Terms Order (S.I. No. 290 of 1950, ‘Terms relating to the Law of Bankruptcy’), with ‘fraudulent preference’ translated as ‘tosaíocht chalaíseach’ and ‘preference share’ translated as ‘scair tosaíochta’.

‘Shall not give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any person’ is translated as ‘ní thabharfaidh sé aon tosaíocht ná buntáiste neamhchuí nó neamhréasúnach do dhuine ar bith’ in s100(3) of the Harbours Act, 1946. In s73 of the ‘Tirconail County Scheme’ in the First Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, ‘When boarding out children the Central Home Committee shall give preference to foster parents residing in country districts’ is translated as ‘Ag cur leanbhá ar altranas dóibh, déanfidh Coiste an Teaghlaigh Mheán-suidhte rogha de lucht altroma a chomhnuíonn i gceantair thuatha’. ‘According to the next available preferences recorded thereon’ is translated as ‘do réir na gcéad roghna infheadhma eile a breacadh orra’ in s6(1) of the Third Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923, with ‘the constituency in which he received the greatest number of first preferences’ being translated as ‘an dailcheantair ina bhfuair sé an uimhir is mó de chéad-roghanna’ in s55(1) of that Act. ‘Give any preference’ is translated as ‘aon bhontáiste do thabhairt’ in Article 8 of the 1922 Constitution. We find ‘tosaíocht’ in s38(5) of the Railways Act, 1924, where ‘For the purposes of determining any question of an alleged undue or unreasonable preference or advantage’ is translated as ‘Chun aon cheist do shocrú i dtaobh tosaíochta no buntáiste nea-chuibhe no mí-réasúnta adubhradh a tugadh’.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where ‘in violation of their ... lawful preference’ was translated as ‘in aghaidh a dtosaíochta dleathaí’, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that ‘preference’ has two principal senses, i.e. ‘greater liking for one alternative over another’ and ‘a prior right or precedence, especially in connection with the payment of debts’. ‘Tosaíocht’ translates the second sense but it is the first sense that is involved here. Professor Ó Murchú regards ‘rogha’ as the best Irish translation of ‘preference’ in that sense.

a ainmnítear “Designated securities” means securities which have been designated by the Minister’ is translated as ‘ciallaíonn “urrúis ainmnithe” urrúis a bheidh ainmnithe ag an Aire’ in s139(2)(a) of the Central Bank Act, 1989. ‘All such stock shall be designated by the Board as “Dublin Bridge Stock”’ is translated as “Droichead-Stoc Bhaile Átha Cliath” a bheidh mar ainm ag an mBord ar gach stoc den tsórt san’ in s18(5) of the Dublin Port and Docks (Bridges) Act, 1928. See also the commentary on Articles 6.1 and 13.8.2° where ‘designate’ is expressed respectively by ‘ceap’ and ‘ainmnigh’.

Standardised Irish text

Ní cead don Stát a chur d’fhiacha ar thuismitheoirí, in aghaidh a gcoinsiasa nó a rogha dleathaí, a gclann a chur ar scoileanna a bhunaítear ag an Stát nó ar aon chineál áirithe scoile a ainmnítear ag an Stát.

Direct translation

Ní cheanglóidh an Stát ar thuismitheoirí, in aghaidh a gcoinsiasa agus a rogha dleathaí, a leanáí a chur ar scoileanna a bhunaítear ag an Stát, nó ar aon chineál áirithe scoile a ainmnítear ag an Stát.

ARTICLE 42.3.2° AIRTEAGAL 42.3.2°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ach ós é an Stát caomhnóir leasa an phobail ní foláir dó, toisc cor an lae, é a dhéanamh éigeantach minimum áirithe oideachais a thabhairt do na leanáí i gcúrsaí moráltachta, intleachta agus comhdhaonnachta.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

But since the State is the guardian of the welfare of the people it must, because of the circumstances of the day, make it compulsory to give a certain minimum education to the children in moral, intellectual and societal affairs.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall, however, as guardian of the common good, require in view of actual conditions that the children receive a certain minimum education, moral, intellectual and social.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The Irish text commences with a qualifying clause, expressing 'however' as 'Ach', 'But', as we have seen in other Articles, and 'as guardian of the common good' as 'ós é an Stát caomhnóir leasa an phobail', 'since the State is guardian of the common good'.
- 2 'The State shall ... require' is expressed in the Irish text as 'ní foláir dó ... é a dhéanamh éigeantach', 'it (the State) must make it compulsory'.
- 3 'That the children receive a certain minimum education' is expressed as 'minimum áirithe oideachais a thabhairt do na leanaí' ('that a certain minimum education be given to the children') in the Irish text.
- 4 'A certain minimum education, moral, intellectual and social' is expressed as 'minimum áirithe oideachais ... i gcúrsaí moráltachta, inleachta agus comhdhaonnachta' ('a certain minimum education in moral, intellectual and social matters') in the Irish text.
- 5 'In view of actual circumstances' is expressed as 'toisc cor an lae' ('because of the circumstances of the day') in the Irish text.
- 6 As we have seen in other Articles, 'the common good' is expressed as 'leas an phobail' in the Irish text, 'the common good' being translated as 'an mhaitheas phoiblí' in Téarmaí Dlí; 'social' is expressed by the now infrequent term 'comhdhaonnach', 'sóisialach' and 'sóisialta' being much more familiar today, and 'shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must').

Commentary

caomhnóir This headword is translated as 'guardian' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'caomhnóir ar an bpearsa' and 'caomhnóir ar an eastát' are translated respectively as 'guardian of the person' and 'guardian of the estate'. Ó Dónaill translates 'caomhnóir' as 'guardian, protector; patron' and Dinneen translates 'caomhnuightheoir' as 'a protector, a patron, a cherisher'. This form does not appear to be given as a headword in DIL, but goes back to the verb 'cáemnaid', which itself is based on 'cáemna', translated principally as 'act of protecting, keeping' in DIL – see the commentary on Article 28.3.3° regarding the verb 'caomhnaigh', 'preserve'. Note that 'caomhnaidhe' is the form in the original text, 'caomhnóir' being given as the standard form of the secondary sense of 'caomhnaí' in Ó Dónaill, 'companion' being given as the primary sense. Dinneen translates 'caomhnaidhe' as 'a companion, an attendant, a friend, a protector'.

In the original Article 44.1.2°, prior to the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1972, 'The State recognises the special position of the Holy Catholic Apostolic and Roman Church as the guardian of the Faith possessed by the great majority of the citizens' is expressed as 'Admhuigheann an Stát an chéim fá leith atá ag an Naomh-Eaglais Chatoiliceach Aspalda Rómhánach ós í is caomhnaidhe don Chreideamh atá ag árd-urmhór na saoránach'. 'The State, as guardian of the common good, should supply the place of the parents' is translated as 'gur cóir don Stát, ós é caomhnóir leas an phobail é, ionad na dtuismitheoirí a líonadh' in s3(1)(D) of the Adoption Act, 1988, which section relates to Article 42.5 of the Constitution. 'A parent or guardian of that person' is translated as 'tuismitheoir nó caomhnóir an duine sin' in s15(2)(a) of the Health (Mental Services) Act, 1981.

Looking at early Acts, in s4(1) of the Griffith Settlement Act, 1923, 'the guardian of the said Ita Griffith' is translated as 'caomhnóir Ide Ní Ghriobhtha roimh-ráite'. 'A County Scheme may provide for the abolition of any Board of Guardians' is translated as 'Féadfaidh Scéim Chontae a fhoráil go gcuirfead deire le haon Bhórd um Chaomhna na mBocht' in s7(1) of the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, with 'When the Board of Guardians of any Union is abolished by any County Scheme' being translated as 'Nuair a dhéanfidh aon Scéim Chontae deire do chur le Bórd Caomhnóirí aon Aontais' in s9.

caomhnóir leasa an phobail According to the official standard, 'leas' would remain in the nominative case here, followed as it is by a noun preceded by the article, i.e. 'caomhnóir leas an phobail' – see the commentary on Article 1. As regards 'leas an phobail' expressing 'the common good', see the commentary on Article 6.1. 'Where the Bank considers it necessary for the common good' is translated as 'i gcás inar dóigh leis an mBanc gur gá é ar mhaithe le leas an phobail' in s44(2)(d) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'That ... the common good requires that the working of any particular deposit of minerals should be controlled by the State' is translated as 'gur gá, mar mhaithe leis an bpobal, oibriú an fhoslaigh áirithe mianraí do bheith fé urláimh an Stáit' in s18(a) of the Minerals Exploration and Development Company Act, 1941. See further the commentary on Article 45.2.ii.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where 'as guardian of the common good' was translated as 'mar chaomhnóir na maitheasa poiblí', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that he felt this contravened some specific rule where the construction 'Noun + Article + Noun (in the genitive) cannot be joined to 'mar', as an indefinite noun or categorical noun should follow 'mar' in that sense and 'Noun is a specific noun above. As regards the emended direct translation below, see the citations from Téarmaí Dlí above where 'ar' follows 'caomhnóir'.

toisc cor an lae The genitive case follows 'toisc', it being a noun; however, according to the official standard, while 'cor', being followed by a noun preceded by the article, would remain in the nominative case, it would be lenited – see the commentary on Article 1. The form here can be read as the genitive plural (see 'leasa' above in 'caomhnóir leasa an phobail', as genitive singular, and 'conditions' in the English text) rather than nominative singular.

'Toisc, de thoisc' is translated as 'because, on account of' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'toisc na cainte go léir, because of all the talk'. In earlier Irish literature 'toisc' had the sense of 'expedition, journey; quest, errand; business, purpose', according to Ó Dónaill, who cites 'd'imigh gach neach díobh lena thoisc féin, each of them went about his own business' and 'toisc lae go n-oíche, a journey of a day and a night'. Ó Dónaill also gives the secondary sense of 'state, circumstance', citing 'tosca an cháis, the circumstances of the case', this also being one of the secondary senses of 'cor' – Ó Dónaill s.v. 'cor', cites 'is ionann cor dúinn, our circumstances are alike' and 'cora (crua) an tsaoil, the vicissitudes of life', for example. The principal sense of 'cor' in Ó Dónaill is 'turn' – we see the link between this sense and the secondary sense above very graphically in phrases such as 'is iomaí cor a chuir an saol de ó shin, time have changed very much since then' and 'tháinig sé de chor sa saol go ..., it came to pass that ...'. Dinneen translates 'cor' as 'a throw, a cast; ... a plait, a twist or coil (as of a rope); ... a turn, a move, a stir, a start, a leap; ... a tune, bar of a tune; vicissitude, circumstance, plight'. 'Toisc' is translated by Dinneen as 'report or tidings, intention, object or purpose, will or desire; amount done at a time, what can be carried at a time; a proceeding, circumstance or affair, work, business; a journey or expedition', translating 'de thoisc' / 'toisc' as 'on account or on the score of', and citing 'is ait é toisc an tsaoghail, the world's way is strange'. Three of the examples of 'do thoisc' ('on account of') cited in DIL come from works of the seventeenth-century writer, Geoffrey Keating (Seathrún Céitinn). DIL translates 'toisc' as follows: (a) 'need, necessity' (citing the following from the eighteenth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles: 'conderna cech ball anas toisc dialoilu' [so that every member may do what the other desires]), (b) 'wish, desire', (c) '(in phrase) óin-toisc, d'óen-toisc 'purposely', (d) 'quest, errand, business', (e) 'military expedition', (f) 'journey', (g) 'occurrence, occasion', (h) 'condition, state'. 'Cor' is the verbal noun of 'fo-ceird', this verb being translated principally as 'sets, puts, places' in DIL, citing 'fuchertat a laim iarna cúl' ('who put their hand behind their back') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. 'Cur' is also a later form of 'cor', which is translated principally as 'act of putting, placing; setting up' in DIL, with 'act of throwing, casting', 'twist', 'tune, melody' and 'contract' included among its many senses, as well as 'state, condition, plight', citing 'dia do chor' ('awful calamity') from the fifteenth-century poet, Pilib Bocht Ó hUiginn, as the first of only a few late examples of this sense. Note incidentally that, according to DIL, the adverbial phrase 'car(a) in cháemlaí(-laithi)', 'all day long, the livelong day', was very frequent in the later language, the form 'cor' itself seldom being used in this phrase.

Turning to 'in view of' in the Acts, 'in view of current economic conditions' is translated as 'ag féachaint do na dálaí eacnamaíochta faoi láthair' in the Preamble to the Schedule to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (Financial Support Fund) (Agreement) Act, 1976. 'In view of the wants and circumstances of the persons' is translated as 'mar gheall ar ghátar agus ar staid na ndaoine' in s42(1) of the Land Act, 1927. Note that 'toisc go bhfultear chun atharuithe do dhéanamh' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'in view of the forthcoming changes' in Iris an Phuist, 25/1/28.

Regarding 'condition' in early Acts, 'a report as to the state of repair and general condition of the drainage works' is translated as 'tuarasgabháil ar staid deisiúcháin agus ar chor ghenerálta na n-oibreacha dréineála' in s26 of the Arterial Drainage Act, 1925, with 'any matter affecting the general economic and other activities and conditions in Saorstát Éireann' being translated as 'éinni a bhaineann le gníomhaíochtaí agus cor an tsaoil go generálta i gcúrsaí eaconomaíochta agus eile i Saorstát Éireann' in s2 of the Statistics Act, 1926. 'The cost, efficiency, conditions of labour, and rates of wages in Saorstát Éireann in the industry' is translated as 'An costas, an éifeachtúlacht, staid an lucht oibre agus na rátaí páigh i Saorstát Éireann sa cheárdas' in s2 of the Schedule to the Tariff Commission Act, 1926. 'The price of the premises in the condition in which they were immediately before the injury or destruction' is translated as '(ar) an bpraghas do bheadh ar an árus agus é sa riocht ina raibh sé díreach sarar dineadh an díobháil no an mille' in s10(4) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923, with 'In every case in which a full re-instatement condition is attached to the decree' being translated as 'I ngach cás ina gcuirfar coiníoll lán-ath-shuidhimh leis an aithne' in the opening clause of that subsection.

'Condition' is translated as 'coiníoll' in Tearmaí Dlí, where 'bond with special conditions' and 'express condition' are translated respectively as 'banna faoi choinniollacha speisialta' and 'coiníoll sainráite'; 'affidavit of plight and condition', however, is translated as 'mionnscribhinn staide agus riochta'. Regarding 'actual', 'actual delivery' is translated as 'seachadadh iarbhír' in Tearmaí Dlí, with 'actual bodily harm' translated simply as 'díobháil choirp'. Ó Dónaill gives 'iarbhír', 'genitive singular as attributive adjective', as a headword, translated as 'actual', followed by the abbreviation for Jurisprudence, and citing 'mailís, caillteanas, iarbhír, actual malice, loss'. See the commentary on Articles 16.6 and 28.3.2°.

minimum 'Íosta' is translated as 'minimum' in the Glossary accompanying An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, that adjective being translated as 'minimum, minimal' in Ó Dónaill. This word does not appear to be given as a headword either in Dinneen or in DIL.

Looking at 'minimum' in the early Acts, 'the amount or the maximum or minimum limit of such grant' is translated as 'méid no teora méide no luighid an deontais' in s9 of the Adaptation of Enactments Act, 1922. 'Rátaí is lú' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'minimum rates' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1922/23, with 'táille le beith fé' translating 'minimum fee of'. 'If after the commencement of the trial the President dies ... and the Court is not reduced below the legal minimum' is translated as 'Más rud é, tar éis tosach na trialach go bhfaighidh an tUachtarán bás ... agus ná beidh líon na Cúirte fé bhun an mhínum dhleathaigh' in s105(2) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'Prohibition of export of carcases within certain minimum limits of weight' is translated as 'Toirmeasc ar chonablaigh d'easportáil laistigh de theoranta áirithe minimum meáchainne' in the Margin Title of s41 of the Agricultural Produce (Fresh Meat) Act, 1930. 'If a court-martial after the commencement of the trial is, by death or otherwise, reduced below the legal minimum, it shall be dissolved' is translated as 'Má tharlaíonn, tar éis tosnú na trialach, go dtitfidh líon comhaltáí armchúirte, de dheasca báis nó eile, faoi bhun an íoslín dlíthiúil, discaoilfear an armchúirt' in s193(1) of the Defence Act, 1954. 'The Council shall ensure that the requirement relating to education and training in specialised medicine in the State shall satisfy the minimum standards specified in the Directive' is translated as 'Cinnteoídh an Chomhairle go mbeidh na ceanglais i ndáil le hoideachas agus oiliúint sa sainleigheas sa Stát de réir na gcaighdeán íosta a bheidh sonraithe in aon Treoir' in s36(2) of the Medical Practitioners Act, 1978.

éigeantach See the commentary on Article 41.1.2° where this adjective expresses 'indispensable'. See the commentary on Articles 13.3.1° and 13.5.2° regarding 'require'.

comhdhaonnachta See the commentary on Article 41.1.1°.

Standardised Irish text

Ach ós é an Stát caomhnóir leas an phobail ní foláir dó, toisc chor<sup>1</sup> an lae, é a dhéanamh éigeantach minimum áirithe oideachais a thabhairt do na leanaí i gcúrsaí moráltachta, intleachta agus comhdhaonnachta.

Variant

- 1 'chora'

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an Stát, áfach, mar chaomhnóir ar an maitheas phoiblí<sup>1</sup>, ag féachaint do choinniollacha iarbhir, a cheangal go bhfaighidh na leanaí oideachas íosta áirithe morálta, intleachtach agus sóisialach<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'ós é caomhnóir na maitheasa poiblí é'
- 2 'sóisialta', 'oideachas morálta, intleachtach agus sóisialach íosta áirithe'

ARTICLE 42.4 AIRTEAGAL 42.4

TÉACS GAELGE

Ní foláir don Stát socrú a dhéanamh chun bunoidreachas a bheith ar fáil in aisce, agus iarracht a dhéanamh chun cabhrú go réasúnta agus chun cur le tionscnamh oideachais idir phríobháideach agus chumannnta agus, nuair is riachtanas chun leasa an phobail é, áiseanna nó fundúireachtaí eile oideachais a chur ar fáil, ag féachaint go cuí, áfach, do chearta tuistí, go mór mór maidir le múnú na haigne i gcúrsaí creidimh is moráltachta.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State must make provision for primary education to be available free, and make an effort to help reasonably and to augment (any) educational initiative both private and communal and, when it is a requirement for the welfare of the people, to provide other educational facilities or foundations, having due regard, however, for the rights of parents, especially as regards the formation of the mind in religious and moral affairs.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall provide for free primary education and shall endeavour to supplement and give reasonable aid to private and corporate educational initiative, and, when the public good requires it, provide other educational facilities or institutions with due regard, however, for the rights of parents, especially in the matter of religious and moral formation.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Corporate' is expressed in the Irish text by 'cumannnta', 'communal'.
- 2 'In the matter of religious and moral formation' is expressed as 'maidir le múnú na haigne i gcúrsaí creidimh is moráltachta' ('as regards the formation of the mind in religious and moral affairs') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Endeavour' is expressed in the Irish text as 'iarracht a dhéanamh', 'make an effort'.
- 4 'To supplement and give reasonable aid to' is expressed as 'cabhrú go réasúnta agus ... cur le' ('to help reasonably and to add to / augment') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Institutions' is expressed as 'fundúireachtaí', 'foundations', in the Irish text.
- 6 'Provide for free primary education' is expressed as 'socrú a dhéanamh chun bunoidreachas a bheith ar fáil in aisce' ('to make provision for primary education to be available free') in the Irish text, followed by a comma which has no corresponding comma in the English text; the English text has a comma after 'initiative', further on, with no corresponding comma in the Irish text.
- 7 'When the public good requires it' is expressed as 'nuair is riachtanas chun leasa an phobail é' ('when it is a necessity for the welfare of the people'), 'the public good' being translated as 'an mhaitheas phoiblí' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 8 Again 'Ní foláir' ('must') expresses 'shall' in the English text.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 208f., reports as follows on reference made to this Article in the courts:

In Crowley v Ireland ([1980] IR 102) Kenny J, speaking for the Supreme Court majority, pointed out that the Irish version "ní foláir don Stát socrú do dhéanamh chun bunoidreachas do bheith ar fáil in aisce" brought out more clearly than the English the distinction between the duty to "provide for" free primary education, and a duty (alleged by the plaintiffs) actually to "provide" it.

Note that Article 10 of the 1922 Constitution commences as follows:

All citizens of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) have the right to free elementary education. Tá de cheart ag gach saoránach de Shaorstát Éireann bun-oideachas d'fháil in aisce.

Commentary

chumannnta 'Cumann' is translated as 'society' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Cumannnta' is not given as a headword in Ó Dónaill, where 'cumannaí' is translated as 'communist' (with the variant form 'cumannach' also cited) and 'cumannaíoch' is translated as 'communistic'. 'Cumannnta' is translated as

'common' in Dinneen, followed by the abbreviation for Rathlin Island, off the coast of Antrim. 'Cumann' comes from Latin 'commentum' and is translated as 'alliance, pact, union, friendship; company, band; later love, affection' in DIL. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that the word-formation here was probably devised ad hoc by the Irish drafters to express a meaning 'syndical', 'corporate'. Professor Ó Murchú recommends 'corpráideach' rather than 'corpraithe' in the direct translation below, in that what seems to have been in mind here at the time was a group, the orders, etc.

'Corporate body' is translated as 'comhlacht corpraithe' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'cuideachta chorpraithe', however, being translated as 'incorporated company'. 'Cuntasóir corpraithe' is translated as 'incorporated accountant', as it is in Ó Dónaill, who gives 'corparáideach', translated as ('corporate'), as a headword. 'Relief for Investment in Corporate Trades' is translated as 'Faoiseamh i leith Infheistíocht i dTrádálacha Corpraithe' in the Margin Title of s10 of the Finance Act, 1990, with 'in respect of certain transactions between bodies corporate' being translated as 'i gcás idirbhearta áirithe idir chomhlachtaí corpraithe' in the Margin Title of s116. In s1(2) of the Interpretation Act, 1923, 'the word "person" shall, unless the contrary intention appears, include a body corporate' is translated as 'folóidh an focal "duine", cólucht corpruithe mara mbeidh a mhalairt i dtuisgint'.

cur le Ó Dónaill gives 'add to' and 'support' as secondary senses of 'cuir le', citing respectively 'cur le ciste, le scéal, le clú duine, to add to a fund, to a story, to someone's reputation' and 'cur le chéile, to give mutual support'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú adds 'augment' to Ó Dónaill's translations. Dinneen includes 'I add to, ... prop up, cooperate with' among the senses of 'cuirim le'. DIL cites 'ós liom chuirfeas' ('since he will take my part'), from the works of the seventeenth-century poet, Dáibhí Ó Bruadair, as an example of 'cuirid' with the proposition 'la'. 'Cur le' translated 'supplement' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health, 1925, with 'fóirliona' being cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'supplement' in 'Dáil Div. 24/215' – see the commentary on Article 45.3.1°. 'Supplemental' is translated as 'forliontach' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'supplemental deed' is translated as 'gníomhas forliontach'. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'neartú ar' rather than 'a fhorlíonadh' in the direct translation below.

tionscnamh 'Tionscnamh imeachtaí' and 'toghairm thionscnaimh' are translated respectively as 'institution of proceedings' and 'originating summons' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'ar thionscnamh' is translated as 'at the instance of'. 'Tionscnamh' is translated as 'beginning, origin; introduction, initiation; institution, establishment' in Ó Dónaill and 'tionnsnamh' is translated as 'act of beginning, initiation, planning; inception, a design or project, an arrangement or device, a preface' in Dinneen, who cites 'thug i dtionnsnamh mná é, who left it to a woman's devices'. 'Tinnscna(m)' is the Middle Irish verbal noun of 'do-innscanna', and is translated as (a) 'act of beginning' and (b) 'act of devising; design, project' in DIL, where the earlier verbal noun, 'tinnscetal', is translated as (a) 'act of beginning' and (b) 'undertaking, task, attempt'. See the commentary on Article 45.3.1° for citations from the Acts. Note that 'tionscnamh' expresses 'institution' in Article 41.3.2°.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that as 'initiative' in 'to supplement educational initiative' is not qualified by any kind of article, the syntax of the English clearly shows that 'initiative' here has an abstract meaning, i.e. 'the power or opportunity to act or take charge before others do'. Irish 'tionscnamh' does not translate this. Commenting on a draft translation of 'to supplement ... private and corporate educational initiative' as 'tionscnamh oideachais príobháideach agus corpraithe a fhorlíonadh', Professor Ó Murchú remarks that in this context, according to the Irish syntax, 'tionscnamh' would mean 'some single initiative' ('tionscnamh amháin éigin'). Máirtín Ó Murchú comments that it is unlikely that the State wanted to promise support in the case of every initiative, and promising support to some single initiative would make no sense. Professor Ó Murchú therefore recommends an abstract noun such as 'tionscantacht' (which is unattested in dictionaries).

áiseanna 'Áis sealadach' is translated as 'temporary convenience' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'ligeam mar áis sealadach' is translated as 'letting for temporary convenience'. 'Áis' is translated as (1) 'convenience' and (2)(a) 'device' in Ó Dónaill, with 'áiseanna amhairc' ('visual aids') and 'áiseanna cócaireachta' ('cooking facilities') being cited as examples of the third sense. Dinneen gives two headwords 'áis', the first being translated as 'will, consent; ease', citing 'ar t-áis, at your ease', and the second being translated as 'dependence, reliance', citing 'is air atá m'áis, it is on him I rely'. 'Áis' is translated as 'free-will, consent' in DIL – this giving Modern Irish 'ais' – with 'ceni thaisid ar ois daregaid ar ecin' ('unless ye go thus willingly, ye shall come perforce') being cited from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. See further the commentary on Article 44.2.6°, where 'áis' expresses 'utility'.

See the commentary on Article 15.15 regarding 'facility', expressed as 'saoráid' in that Article. 'The Society may ... provide educational facilities' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an Cumann ... saoráidí oideachais a sholáthar' in s40(1) of the Solicitors Act, 1954, with 'the provision or improvement of cultural or educational facilities' being translated as 'saoráidí saíochta nó oideachais a chur ar fáil nó d'fheabhsú' in s8(3)(a)(ii) of the Seanad Electoral (Panel Members) Act, 1947. "'Relevant facilities", in relation to an undertaking, means ... the marketing in the State of the units of the undertaking' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "saoráidí iomchuí", i ndáil le gnóthas ... aonaid an ghnóthais a mhargú sa Stát' in s109(1) of the Finance Act, 1990.

Looking at early translations, in Article 23 of the 1922 Constitution, 'provide them with free travelling facilities' is translated as 'saor-thaisteal do sholáthar dóibh', with the Margin Title of s46 of the Land Act, 1923, 'Facilities for exchange of holdings', being translated as 'Saoráidí chun gabháilais do mhalairtíú'. 'Shall be given facilities by the Home Committee to apply for National Benefit' is translated as 'tabharfaidh Coiste an Teaghlaigh caoi dhóibh ar Thairbhe Náisiúnta d'iarraidh' in s31 of the 'Tirconail County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, with 'in such a manner as to give to all electors in the county ... such reasonable facilities for voting as are practicable in the circumstances' being translated as 'ar chuma a thabharfaidh do gach toghthóir sa chontae ... pé cothrom réasúnta chun vótála is féidir a thabhairt sa chás' in s42(1) of the Electoral Act, 1923. 'Socúlacht' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'facility' in Iris an Phuist, 1923, p. 246.

Note, finally, that 'The making by Radio Telefís Éireann by means of its own facilities of a cinematograph film' is translated as 'Radio Telefís Éireann do dhéanamh scannáin chineamatagrafaigh lena áiseanna féin' in s3(3) of the Performers' Protection Act, 1968.

fundúireachtaí Note that 'fundúireachta' is the form in the original text. 'Fundúireacht' is translated as '(of institution) foundation' in Ó Dónaill, 'fundúir' being given as a headword which is translated as 'founder (of community, of institution)', the variant 'fondaire' being cited. Dinneen translates 'fondaire' as 'a freeholder', giving Coney's Irish-English Dictionary (1849) as the source, but follows this by 'cf. perhaps founder'. 'Fundúir' comes from Old-French 'fondeor', according to DIL, where examples are cited from the later Annals in particular. 'Fundúire' is given as a separate headword in DIL, where it is translated as 'an original owner, a freeholder'. See further the commentary on Article 44.2.5° and see the commentary on Article 18.4.2° regarding 'institution', expressed as 'foras' there, with 'ord' expressing 'institution' (of marriage) in Article 41.3.1°.

go mór mór This phrase is translated as 'especially' in Ó Dónaill and as 'especially, much more' in Dinneen. DIL cites the following example of the comparative form of this adverb from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac (a manuscript compiled in 1411 or earlier): 'cid mor dlíges cech sollamain a herdach ... is in mormo dlíges in sollamain-sí' ('though all feasts fully deserve their celebration, much more does this festival').

múnlú na haigne Ó Dónaill translates 'múnlú aigne' as 'formation of mind', translating 'múnlú' in general as 'moulding, casting, shaping'. Dinneen translates 'múnláil' as 'act of moulding, as a candle, etc.', citing 'as an múnla, well-formed (of a person or thing)' s.v. 'múnla' ('a mould').

'Formation, registration and incorporation' is translated as 'Foirmiú, clárú agus corprú' in the Margin Title of s10 of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'Have regard to the need for the formation of public awareness and understanding of the values and traditions of countries other than the State' is translated as 'beidh aird aige ar a riachtanaí atá sé an pobal a dhéanamh eolach tuiscianach ar fhiúchais agus ar thraidisiún tíortha seachas an Stát' in s13 of the Broadcasting Authority (Amendment) Act, 1976.

iarracht a dhéanamh 'Iarracht ar ghinmhilleadh a thabhairt chun críche' is translated as 'attempt to procure an abortion' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Iarracht a dhéanamh' is translated as 'to make an effort' in Ó Dónaill. 'An attempt or effort' is given as one of the senses of 'iarracht' in Dinneen. The earliest examples of 'iarracht' (translated as 'an attempt, an attempt to reach') cited in DIL come from Keating's seventeenth-century poetry. We have seen earlier how 'iarracht do thabhairt' translates 'endeavour' in early translations for the Department of Justice. Note, incidentally, that 'the offence of not using his utmost endeavours to prevent any mutiny' is translated as 'gan a chruadhcheall do dhéanamh chun aon chúlmhuitaireacht ... do chosc' in s36(b) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

'The Controller shall endeavour to secure that the relevant plant variety is maintained in quality' is translated as 'féachfaidh an Rialaitheoir lena áirithiú go ndéanfar an cineál planda iomchuí a chothabháil ó thaobh cáilíochta' in s8(4) of the Plant Varieties (Proprietary Rights) Act, 1980, with 'agus féachfaidh si le cabhrú leis na haidhmeanna sin a chur i gcrích' translating 'and shall endeavour to promote the attainment of those aims' in s3(4) of the National Council for Educational Awards Act, 1979. In s27(1) of the Apprenticeship Act, 1931, 'and shall endeavour to effect a settlement of any dispute so investigated' is translated as 'agus féachfaidh le haon aighneas go ndéanfar fiosrúchán ina thaobh amhlaidh do shocrú', with 'féachfaidh an Chúirt leis an díospóid a shocrú trí oifigeach caidrimh thionscail' translating 'it [the Court] shall endeavour to settle the dispute through an industrial relations officer of the Court' in s19(2) of the Employment Equality Act, 1977. See further the commentary on Article 40.6.1°i where 'endeavour' is expressed by 'féach le'.

bunoideachas This headword is translated simply as 'primary education' in Ó Dónaill. This compound is not found as a headword in Dinneen, 'oideachas' in the sense of 'education' itself being cited as 'recent' there. 'Primary education' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'bun-oideachas' on the Dáil Order Paper, 1926, p. 104, with 'bunscóil' translating 'primary school' in translations for the Department of Education.

socrú a dhéanamh See the commentary on Articles 8.3 and 15.2.2°. 'The rules of a building society shall provide for the following' is translated as 'Déanfar foráil i rialacha cumainn foirgníochta maidir leis na nithe seo a leanas' in s5 of the Second Schedule to the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s61(2) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, 'Regulations under this section shall provide for payment to any person attending for medical examination ... of such amount as may be determined by the Minister' is translated as 'Forálfar le rialacháin faoin alt seo go dtabharfar íocaíocht d'aon duine a thiocfaidh i láthair le haghaidh scrúdú dochtúra ... a mbeidh cibé méid inti a chinntídh an tAire', with 'Beidh foráil i rialacháin faoin alt seo chun íocaíocht a thabhairt d'aon duine a thiocfaidh i láthair le haghaidh scrúdú ...' being found in s31(2) of the Social Welfare (Occupational Injuries) Act, 1966. Finally, in s1(3) of the Land Act, 1923, 'such regulations shall provide for the immediate redemption of Bonds' is translated as 'socrófar leis na rialacháin sin i dtaobh fuascailt do dhéanamh láithreach ar Bhannaí'.

maidir le See the commentary on Articles 15.15, 29.4.1° and 40.3.3° regarding 'maidir le', expressing 'in connection with' and 'relating to' in the initial and final Article respectively. As regards 'in the matter of' in the Acts, 'Representatives and their substitutes shall, in the matter of customs and exchange control, be accorded ...' is translated as 'Tabharfar d'ionadaithe agus dá n-ionadaiagh, maidir le rialú custam agus iomlaoidé' in Article 13 of the Fifth Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967. 'And for prescribing the liability of the owner or consignor or consignee of any such animals ... in the matter of the expenses connected with the seizure, detention or disposal thereof' is translated as 'agus chun dlíteanas úinéir, coinsineoir nó coinsíní aon ainmhithe ... den sórt sin a fhorordú i ndáil leis na caiteachais a bhainfidh lena gceapadh, lena gcoinneáil nó lena ndíúscairt' in s7 of the Second Schedule to the Diseases of Animals Act, 1966. 'I dtaobh' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'in the matter of' in translations for the Department of Justice.

ag féachaint go cuí In Article 26 of the 1922 Constitution, 'with due regard to changes in distribution of the population' is translated as 'gan sóinseáil in áireamh áitiúil an lín tíre do dhearmad'. 'With due regard to the provisions of this Chapter' is translated as 'ag féachaint go cuí d'fhorálacha na Caibidle seo' in s154(1) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981.

moráltachta See the commentary on Articles 29.1 and 40.6.1<sup>o</sup>. Commenting on 'morálta' in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that 'moráltachta' suited better as regards having the syntax on equal footing (i.e. 'creidimh agus moráltachta').

chun leasa an phobail See the commentary on the foregoing subsection regarding 'the common good requires'.

Standardised Irish text

Ní foláir don Stát socrú a dhéanamh chun bunoidéachas a bheith ar fáil in aisce, agus iarracht a dhéanamh chun cabhrú go réasúnta agus chun cur le tionscnamh oideachais idir phríobháideach agus chumannnta agus, nuair is riachtanas chun leas an phobail é, áiseanna nó fondúireachtaí eile oideachais a chur ar fáil, ag féachaint go cuí, áfach, do chearta tuismitheoirí, go mór mór maidir le múnlú na haigne i gcúrsaí creidimh is moráltachta.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an Stát socrú le haghaidh saor-bhunoideachais agus féachfaidh sé le<sup>1</sup> tionscantacht phríobháideach agus chorpráideach<sup>2</sup> san oideachas a fhorlíonadh<sup>3</sup> agus le<sup>4</sup> cúnaimh réasúnta a thabhairt di, agus, nuair is gá ar mhaithe leis an maitheas phoiblí, áiseanna nó forais eile oideachais a sholáthar, ag féachaint go cuí, áfach, do chearta tuismitheoirí, go speisialta maidir le foirmiú creidimh agus morálachta<sup>5</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'féachfaidh le'
- 2 'chorpraithe'
- 3 'féachfaidh sé le neartú ar thionscantacht phríobháideach agus chorpráideach san oideachas'
- 4 'maílle le'
- 5 'morálta'

ARTICLE 42.5 AIRTEAGAL 42.5

TÉACS GAEILGE

I gcásanna neamhchoiteanna nuair a tharlaíonn, ar chúiseanna corpartha nó ar chúiseanna morálta, nach ndéanaid na tuistí a ndualgais dá gclainn, ní foláir don Stát, ós é an Stát caomhnóir leasa an phobail, iarracht a dhéanamh le beart oiriúnach chun ionad na dtuistí a ghlacadh, ag féachaint go cuí i gcónaí, áfach, do chearta nádúrtha dochloite an linbh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

In uncommon cases when it happens, for corporal reasons or for moral reasons, that the parents do not do their duties to their children, the State must, since the State is the guardian of the welfare of the people, make an effort through appropriate action to take the place of the parents, always having due regard, however, for the natural invincible rights of the child.

ENGLISH TEXT

In exceptional cases, where the parents for physical or moral reasons fail in their duty towards their children, the State as guardian of the common good, by appropriate means shall endeavour to supply the place of the parents, but always with due regard for the natural and imprescriptible rights of the child.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'To supply the place of the parents' is expressed in the Irish text as 'chun ionad na dtuistí a ghlacadh', 'to take the place of the parents'.
- 2 'In exceptional cases' is expressed as 'I gcásanna neamhchoiteanna' ('in uncommon cases') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Where the parents ... fail in their duty' is expressed as 'nuair a tharlaíonn ... nach ndéanaid na tuistí a ndualgais' ('where it happens that the parents do not do their duties') in the Irish text.
- 4 'By appropriate means' is expressed as 'le beart oiriúnach' ('by suitable action') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Imprescriptible rights' is expressed as 'cearta dochloíte' ('invincible/indefatigable rights') in the Irish text, 'imprescriptible rights' being translated as 'cearta dochealaithe' in Tearmaí Dlí.
- 6 As in s1 of this Article, 'the State as guardian of the common good' is expressed as 'ós é an Stát caomhnóir leasa an phobail' ('since the State is the guardian of the welfare of the people') in the Irish text and, as in s4, 'endeavour' is expressed as 'iarracht a dhéanamh' ('make an effort'), with 'shall' again being expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must'), as we have seen in many other Articles.
- 7 We note here the direct opposite of what we have seen in some earlier Articles, i.e. 'but' being expressed as 'áfach', 'however', in the Irish text.

Note that the Long Title of the Adoption Act, 1988, reads as follows:

An Act to provide, in exceptional cases, where the parents for physical or moral reasons have failed in their duty towards their children, for the supplying, by the adoption of the children, of the place of the parents

... Acht do dhéanamh socrú, i ndálaí eisceachtúla, i gcás na tuismitheoirí a bheith, ar chúiseanna fisiciúla nó morálta, tar éis mainneachtain ina ndualgas i leith an linbh ar chúiseanna fisiciúla nó morálta in s3(1)(I)(A) of that Act, with 'the State, as guardian of the common good, should supply the place of the parents' being translated as 'gur cóir don Stát, ós é caomhnóir leas an phobail é, ionad na dtuismitheoirí a ghlacadh' in s3(1)(I)(D).

The parents of the child ..., for physical or moral reasons, have failed in their duty towards the child' is translated as 'go bhfuil ... tuismitheoirí an linbh ... tar éis mainneachtain ina ndualgas i leith an linbh ar chúiseanna fisiciúla nó morálta' in s3(1)(I)(A) of that Act, with 'the State, as guardian of the common good, should supply the place of the parents' being translated as 'gur cóir don Stát, ós é caomhnóir leas an phobail é, ionad na dtuismitheoirí a ghlacadh' in s3(1)(I)(D).

Commentary

neamhchoiteanna 'Neamhchoiteann' is given as a variant form of 'neamhchoitianta' in Ó Dónaill, this headword being translated as 'uncommon, unusual'. 'Neamhchoitianta' is translated simply as 'uncommon' in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil. 'Neamhchoitcheann' is translated as 'uncommon, distinguished' in Dinneen, who cites 'feair breágh neamh-choitcheann, a fine distingué man', with reference made to 'neamhchoitcheanta' as being similar in meaning to 'neamhchoitcheann'. DIL cites examples of 'coitcheann', in the sense of 'common, general; usual, ordinary', from the Glosses of the ninth century onwards, including 'de phurt choitcheant' ('from a common part') from the Glosses on Psalm cxviii in S. Caimín's Psalter, Franciscan Monastery, Dublin, formerly in the Irish College at Rome.

In exceptional cases' is translated as 'i ndálaí eisceachtúla' in the Long Title of the Adoption Act, 1988, above. We find 'i gcásanna eisceachtúla' in the Preamble in the Schedule to the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (Financial Support Fund) (Agreement) Act, 1976, 'i gcásanna neamhghnáthacha' in s24 of the Schedule to the Great Southern Railways Company (Superannuation Scheme) Act, 1947, and 'i gcásanna nea-ghnáthacha' in s34(5) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. 'Gátar nea-choitianta' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'exceptional distress' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health, with 'costas nea-choitianta' translating 'exceptional expense' in translations for the Department of Justice. 'Cásanna ar leithligh' translates 'exceptional cases' in Iris an Phuist, 1923, p. 273, with 'i gcásanna fé leith' translating 'exceptionally' in Iris an Phuist, 23/6/26.

Note regarding the direct translation below that the opening phrase is followed by 'i gcás na tuismitheoirí ...', 'i ndálaí' being chosen therefore for stylistic reasons.

corpartha This headword is translated as 'corporal; corporeal' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'pionós corpartha, corporal punishment' and 'pian chorpartha, bodily pain'. 'Corporda' is equal in meaning to 'corpthae', translated as 'corporeal, bodily, physical, actual' in DIL, where examples are cited from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms onwards. See further the commentary on Article 40.1.

For physical or moral reasons' is translated as 'ar chúiseanna fisiciúla nó morálta' in s3(b)(I)(A) of the Adoption Act, 1988, as in the Long Title of that Act above. As regards 'physical' in early translations, 'any article ... intended to be worn because of ... any physical ailment or defect' is translated as 'aon earra ... atá ceaptha chun é chaitheamh mar gheall ar aon bhreiteacht no easba chorpardha' in s16(2)(d) of the Finance Act, 1925, with 'the treatment of physical and mental defects' being translated as 'cóir leighis d'ainmhe cuirp agus aigne' in s18(b) of the Local Government Act, 1925. Finally, 'eoluíocht fhisiceach' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'physical science' in translations for the Department of Education. Note that 'fhisiceach' rather than 'fisiciúil' is given as the standard form of this headword. See the commentary on Article 42.1 where 'physical' is expressed by 'corp'.

nach ndéanaid The synthetic form of the third person plural, present indicative, of 'déan' – see the commentary on Article 14.5.1<sup>o</sup> regarding synthetic and analytic forms of the verb. As regards 'fail' with 'duty' in the Acts, 'that the person to whom it was granted has, by any overt act, shown himself to have failed in his duty of fidelity to the nation' is translated as 'go ndearna an duine dar deonadh é aon ghníomh follas a chruthaigh gur loic sé ina dhualgas bheith dílis don náisiún' in s19(1)(b) of the Irish Nationality and Citizenship Act, 1956. 'That the testator has failed in his moral duty to make proper provision for the child in accordance with his means' is translated as 'gur loic an tiomnóir ina dhualgas morálta soláthar cuí a dhéanamh don leanbh de réir a acmhainne' in s117(1) of the Succession Act, 1965. See the commentary on Article 14.1 ('teip' expressing 'fail' therein) for other citations of 'fail' in modern Acts, plus the Long Title of the Adoption Act, 1988, above. As regards the verb in the negative rendering 'fail', see s25(1) of the Finance Act, 1926, for example, where 'Every person who contravenes or fails to comply with a regulation made under this section' is translated as 'Gach éinne a sháróidh no ná comhlíonfidh rialachán a bheidh déanta fén alt so'.

a ndualgais 'Dualgas' is translated as 'duty' (of office, etc.) in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Duty' is given as the secondary sense of 'dualgas' in Ó Dónaill, the primary sense being 'natural right; due; customary fee or reward', Ó Dónaill citing 'do dhualgas a dhéanamh, a chomhlíonadh, to do, fulfil, one's duty' and 'do dhualgas do Dhia, one's duty to God'. 'Dualgas' is translated principally as 'traditional right', with secondary sense of 'custom, tribute', in DIL, where 'dualgas do thuamadh óm aithribh' ('it is my ancestral duty to celebrate thy tomb') is cited from the works of the seventeenth-century poet, Dáibhí Ó Bruadair, this being one of the examples of the various meanings of 'dualgas' in Modern Irish cited in DIL. 'Dúal', from which this word originates, is translated principally as 'native, hereditary' in DIL. See the commentary on Articles 12.8 and 15.3.2<sup>o</sup>.

le beart oiriúnach 'Oiriúnach' is translated as 'suitable, fitting' in Ó Dónaill, 'oireamhnach' being translated as 'fitting, suitable, neat, proper, expedient, harmonious, proportionate, accommodated' in Dinneen, who cites 'beartughadh oireamhnach, an appropriate movement'. DIL translates 'oiremnach' as 'agreeing (with), adapted (to), suitable, convenient', with most examples cited coming from seventeenth-century sources.

'Beart' is translated as (1) 'cast, move (in a game)', (2) 'shift, plan' ('beart cliste' being translated as 'clever manoeuvre') and (3) 'proceeding, action, transaction' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'beart a dhéanamh de réir do bhriathair' as 'to fit your actions to your words'. Dinneen translates 'beart' as 'an act, a deed; behaviour; a game or trick (at cards), a move in a game; a task, an appointment, a situation; a prank; plan; a matter; a fact'. 'Burden, load; bundle' seems to have been the earlier of the three major senses of 'bert' cited in DIL, this word being related to 'beirid' ('carries'); 'clothing, covering, clothes, attire, apparel; accoutrement' is also given as one of the senses of 'bert' as is 'deed, exploit; feat, trick; effort, task; action, behaviour', with the examples of this sense coming from later sources. Note that 'bearta' expresses 'measures' in Article 29.4.3°.

'The Contracting States ... shall, by appropriate means, designate for each aircraft the State among them which shall exercise the jurisdiction' is translated as 'Na Stáit Chonarhacha ... ainmneoidh siad, ar mhodh cuí, i ndáil le gach aerárthach, an Stát díobh a fheidhmeoidh dlínse' in Article 9 of the Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1975, with 'ar mhodh cuí' again translating 'by appropriate means' in Article 5 of the Second Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1973. See the commentary on Article 45.2.i where 'caoi' expresses 'means'.

Looking at early translations of 'appropriate', 'the receipt of the appropriate officer of the Post Office' is translated as 'admháil ón oifigeach ceart in Oifig an Phuist' in s6(1)(b) of the Local Government (Collection of Rates) Act, 1924. 'From the beginning of the appropriate triennial anniversary of that day' is translated as 'o thosach lá cóir cinn trí mbliain an lae sin' in s1 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 1) Act, 1925, with 'by means of appropriate maps' being translated as 'le mapai ... oiriúnacha' in s6(2) of the Arterial Drainage Act, 1925. 'Táille chuibhe' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'appropriate fee' in translations for the Department of Finance and 'suim chothromach' translates 'appropriate amount' in Iris an Phuist, 14/9/27.

ag féachaint go cuí 'The Court may, if it so thinks fit and is satisfied, having had due regard for the rights ... of the persons concerned (including the natural and imprescriptible rights of the child)' is translated as 'féadfaidh an Chúirt, más cuí léi agus más deimhin léi, ag féachaint go cuí do chearta na ndaoine lena mbaineann ... (lena n-áirítear cearta nádúrtha dochloíte an linbh)' in s3(1) of the Adoption Act, 1988. See the commentary on the foregoing section.

ionad na dtuistí a ghlacadh 'Áit duine a ghlacadh' is translated as 'to take someone's place' in Ó Dónaill who, however, cites 'ionad duine, ruda, a dhéanamh, to take the place of someone, something', this agreeing with 'do-ní éanmhac ionad cloinne' ('takes the place of'), cited in DIL from the miscellaneous collection of Classical Irish poetry, Aithdioghlaim Dána.

nádúrtha Note how 'the primary and natural educator of the child' is expressed as 'múinteoir príomha dúchasach don leanbh' in Article 42.1.

do chearta ... dochloíte Note that 'imprescriptible rights' is translated as 'cearta dochealaithe' in Téarmaí DLí.

dá gclainn See the commentary on Article 42.1 regarding this special form of the dative singular.

caomhnóir leasa an phobail See the commentary on Article 42.3.2°.

Standardised Irish text

I gcásanna neamhchoiteanna nuair a tharlaíonn, ar chúiseanna corpartha nó ar chúiseanna morálta, nach déanann na tuismitheoirí a ndualgais dá gclann, ní foláir don Stát, ós é an Stát caomhnóir leas an phobail, iarracht a dhéanamh le beart oiriúnach chun ionad na dtuismitheoirí a ghlacadh, ag féachaint go cuí i gcónaí, áfach, do chearta nádúrtha dochloíte an linbh.

Direct translation

I ndálaí<sup>1</sup> eisceachtúla, i gcás na tuismitheoirí<sup>2</sup> a bheith, ar chúiseanna fisiceacha nó morálta, tar éis mainneachtain ina ndualgas i leith a leanaí, féachfaidh an Stát, mar chaomhnóir ar an maitheas phoiblí<sup>3</sup>, ar mhodh<sup>4</sup> cuí, le hionad na dtuismitheoirí a líonadh, ach i gcónaí le haird chuí ar chearta nádúrtha dochealaithe an linbh.

Variants

- 1 'I gcásanna'
- 2 'na dtuismitheoirí' – Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that the initial mutation would not be denied here in the case of a verbal noun phrase such as this in Munster.
- 3 'ós é caomhnóir na maitheasa poiblí é'
- 4 'le modhanna'

ARTICLE 43.1.1° AIRTEAGAL 43.1.1°

PRIVATE PROPERTY

MAOIN PHRÍOBHÁIDEACH

TÉACS GAEILGE

Maoin Phríobháideach

Admhaíonn an Stát, toisc bua an réasúin a bheith ag an duine, go bhfuil sé de cheart nádúrtha aige maoin shaolta a bheith aige dá chuid féin go príobháideach, ceart is ársa ná reacht daonna.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Private Property/Assets

The State acknowledges, because man has the gift of reason, that he has a natural right to have worldly assets of his own privately, a right which is more ancient than human statute.

ENGLISH TEXT

Private Property

The State acknowledges that man, in virtue of his rational being, has the natural right, antecedent to positive law, to the private ownership of external goods.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The private ownership of external goods' is expressed in the Irish text as 'maoin shaolta a bheith aige dá chuid féin go príobháideach', 'to have worldly goods of his own privately', with the term expressing 'goods' being the term which expresses 'property' in the heading of this Article, i.e. 'maoin', 'goods' being translated as 'earraí' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'Man, in virtue of his rational being' is expressed as 'toisc bua an réasúin a bheith ag an duine' ('because man has the gift of reason') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Positive law' is expressed as 'reacht daonna' ('human statute') in the Irish text – note, however, that 'daonna' is also found in the translation of 'positive law' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'dlí daonna'.
- 4 'Antecedent to' is expressed in the Irish text as 'ceart is ársa ná', 'a right which is more ancient than'.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 209, reports as follows on reference made to this Article in the courts:

In Central Dublin Development Association Ltd. v Attorney General (1975) 109 ILTR 69) Kenny J said, in regard to both Article 43.1.1 and Article 43.2.2, that "while there may not be a conflict" between the Irish and English versions, the English version seemed to him "to be a most unhappy attempt to reproduce the meaning of that in Irish":

"The phrase "de cheart nádúrtha aige maoin shaolta a bheith aige dá chuid féin go príobháideach" ... means, I think, "a natural right to his own private share of worldly wealth" and not "the natural right to the private ownership of external goods"... Another source of confusion in the English text is the use in Article 43.2.2 of the word "delimit". The Irish phrase is "teorainn a chur" which would, I think, be more accurately translated as "restrict". In Professor de Bhaldráithe's standard English-Irish dictionary, the Irish equivalent of "restrict" is given as "cuirim teorainn le".

J.M. Kelly remarks on the reference above to the English version being an attempt to reproduce the Irish that 'in view of the history of the Irish version, this phrase of Kenny J seems to be a mere judicial politeness'.

Commentary

is ársa ná Literally 'more ancient than'. We find this phrase earlier in Article 41.1.1°. Regarding 'antecedent' in the Acts, in s67(2)(b)(iv) of the Fisheries Act, 1939, 'any circumstances antecedent to the transition period which may have affected the earning power of the fishery' is translated as 'aon chúrsaí bhí ann roimh an idir-thréimhse agus dob fhéidir do rinne deifir do chumas tuillimh an iascaigh'. The heading above s293 of the Companies Act, 1963, 'Offences antecedent to or in the course of Winding Up', is translated simply as 'Cionta roimh an bhFoirceannadh nó i gcúrsa an Fhoirceanta'. 'Antecedent order' is translated as 'réamh-ordú' in s3(1) of the Family Law (Maintenance of Spouses and Children) Act, 1976. 'Liability of persons conducting negotiations antecedent to hire-purchase agreements' is translated as 'Dliteanas daoine a sheolann caibidlí roimh chomhaontuithe fruilcheannaigh' in the Margin Title of s32 of the Sale of Goods and Supply of Services Act, 1980. 'That the provisions of this Act relating to matters antecedent to such application have been complied with' is translated as 'go bhfuiltear ... tar éis déanamh do réir na bhforálacha den Acht so bhaineann le cúrsaí ba thúisce ná an t-iarratas san' in s7 of the Public Assistance (Acquisition of Land) Act, 1934. 'Any circumstances antecedent to the transition period' is translated as '(maidir le) haon toscaí roimh an idir-thréimhse' in s194(2)(b)(iv) of the Fisheries (Consolidation) Act, 1959, and as 'aon chúrsaí bhí ann roimh an idir-thréimhse' in s67(2)(b)(iv) of the Fisheries Act, 1939. De Bhaldráithe translates 'matters antecedent to ...' as 'nithe ba thúisce ná ...'.

bua Ó Dónaill gives 'gift, talent' and 'virtue, merit' as two of the secondary senses of 'bua' (the primary sense being 'victory, triumph'), citing respectively 'bua cainte, ceoil, gift of speech, music' and 'is mór an bua do dhuine an tsláinte, it is a great advantage to have one's health'. Dinneen includes 'virtue, excellence, an attribute' among the senses of 'buaidh'. DIL cites 'búaid precepte' ('the gift of preaching') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses as an example of this secondary sense of 'búaid' ('special quality or attribute, gift, virtue, pre-eminence, excellence; prerogative'), the primary sense of 'victory, triumph' also being cited from the same Glosses (in the archaic form 'boid'). See further the commentary on Article 40.1.

The Shorter Oxford Dictionary has the following entry s.v. 'virtue':

II As a quality of things. 1. In the prepositional phrases in or by (also through or with) virtute of, by the power or efficacy of; hence, in later use, by the authority of, in reliance upon, in consequence of, because of.

The phrase 'by virtue of' is translated as 'de bhua' in Téarmaí Dlí and is so translated in the Acts, the phrase 'by virtue of this Act', 'de bhua an Achta seo', being of regular occurrence in the Acts. 'All ... functions for the time being vested in him in virtue of his office' is translated as 'na feidhmeanna uile a bheidh dílsithe don Phríomh-Bhreitheamh de thuras na huairde de bhua a oifige' in s10(2) of the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Act, 1961, with 'de bhua a oifige' translating 'in virtue of his office' in s2 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1928. Note, incidentally, that 'in full force and virtue' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'i lán-fheidhm agus i lán-bhrí' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health.

bua an réasúin The principal meaning of 'réasún' in Ó Dónaill is 'reason, reasoning faculty; reasonableness, sense', citing 'bíodh réasún ionat, be reasonable', 'duine gan réasún, unreasoning, unreasonable person' and 'ní féidir réasún a chur ann, he won't listen to reason'. Note incidentally that Ó Dónaill gives a second headword 'réasún', translated as 'winkers', Dinneen including 'the winkers of a horse', along with 'a reason or argument, meaning, reasonableness, moderation in conduct, sobriety; a reasonable price' among the senses of 'réasún'. 'Réasún' ('reason') is a Romance loanword, according to DIL, citing 'da mbeth resun agat' (said to a lifeless object) as an example of the sense of 'the reasoning faculty'.

'Reasonable cause' is translated as 'cúis réasúnach' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Conservation of fish stocks and rational exploitation of fisheries' is translated as 'Stoic éisc a chaomhnú agus leas réasúnach a bhaint as iascaigh' in the Margin Title of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act, 1962, for example. 'Réasúnach' is translated as 'rational' in Colmán Ó Huallacháin, Foclóir Fealsaimh (1958), 'reasonable' being translated as 'réasúnta' in the same Dictionary of Philosophy. 'Beith', the verbal noun of the substantive verb, translates 'being' in that work. 'Beith' is translated as 'being, entity', followed by the abbreviation for Philosophy, in Ó Dónaill, who also cites the headword 'eiseach', 'existing thing, being'.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, commenting on 'de bhua bheith réasúnach an duine' in a draft of the direct translation below, remarks that this would not be understood, particularly as 'beith' is lenited. Professor Ó Murchú recommends translating this phrase as 'de bhua an duine a bheith réasúnach'.

maoin shaolta 'Maoin' is translated as 'property' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'maoin phearsanta' is translated as 'personal property'. Ó Dónaill translates 'maoin' as 'property, wealth', translating 'maoin shaolta' as 'worldly goods'. Dinneen also translates 'maoin an tsoghail' / 'maoin tsoghailta' as 'worldly goods', translating 'maoin' itself as 'wealth, riches, property, means, substance; benefit, gift; love, a term of endearment'. The primary sense of Old Irish 'main' is 'a benefit', according to DIL, citing the following example (with the prefix 'dag') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles: 'is éicrichnichthe don-indnig-som a dagmoini' ('without limit he bestows his benefits'), the sense of 'gift' being frequently implied in Middle Irish. The secondary sense of 'main', according to DIL, was 'a valuable article or possession, a treasure; in plural treasures, possessions, wealth' and in the early Irish law-tracts 'main' is sometimes used of cattle, stock – cattle being the most common form of currency in the period of those tracts – see Fergus Kelly, p. 113 ff. DIL cites 'do shomhaoine saoghailta' ('somain' = 'so' + 'main', 'profit, benefit'), from the Annals of the Four Masters, s.v. 'saegulta' ('belonging to this world, mundane, secular').

'Maoin' translates 'property' in the Acts – see, for example, s2 of the Malicious Injuries Act, 1981, where "property" includes wild animals in captivity and incorporeal hereditaments' is translated as 'folaíonn "maoin" ainmhithe fiaine i mbraighdeanas agus oidhreachtáin neamhchorpracha' and s2 of the Capital Acquisitions Tax Act, 1976, where "personal property" means any property other than real property', "property" includes rights and interests of any description' and "real property" means real and chattel real property' are translated respectively as 'ciallaíonn "maoin phearsanta" aon mhaoin seachas maoin réadach', 'folaíonn "maoin" cearta agus leasanna d'aon chineál' and 'ciallaíonn "maoin réadach" maoin réadach agus maoin airnéise réadaí'. 'The real and personal property ... shall be regarded as private property' is translated as 'Áireofar mar mhaoin phríobháideach an mhaoin' in Article 34 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962. In s7 of the Private Bill Costs Act, 1924, 'or which interferes with the private property of any person' is translated as 'no le n-a gcuirtear isteach ar mhaoin phríobháideach éinne'.

'Maitheasa saolta' is cited in Foclóir Oifigiúil s.v. 'goods' (with reference to Tobar Fíorghlan Gaeilge, 97). T. O'Neill

Lane gives 'maoin' as his secondary translation of 'goods', citing 'that he did not put his hand to his neighbour's goods, nár chuir seisean a láimh i maoin chomharsaí' (Ex. xxii. 11). His principal translation, however, 'earradh, -aidh', is that found in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'goods' is translated as 'earraí', with 'I pass off goods as those of another' translated as 'tairim earraí i leith is gur earraí duine eile iad' and 'property in the goods', 'slander of goods' and 'trespass to goods' are translated respectively as 'dílseánacht sna hearraí', 'clúmhillleadh earraí' and 'foghail ar earraí'. Note, however, that 'in the goods of' is translated in Téarmaí Dlí as 'maidir le maoin'. 'Earraí' generally translates 'goods' in the Acts – see, for example s39 of the Finance Act, 1980, where 'In this Chapter "goods" means goods manufactured within the State' is translated as 'Sa Chaibidil seo ciallaíonn "earraí" earraí a mhonaradh an chuideachta sa Stát'.

'Gustail shaolta' expresses 'material resources' in Article 45.2.ii – see the commentary thereon regarding 'saolta'. 'Saolta' translates 'temporal' in the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, for example, in s74 of which 'any temporal or spiritual injury or loss' is translated as 'aon diobháil nó dochar, saolta nó spioradálta'. 'External' is translated as 'eachtrach' and 'seachtrach' in the Acts – 'external tax' is translated as 'cáin eachtrach' in s35(1) of the Finance Act, 1968, for example, but as 'cáin sheachtrach' in s163(c) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976. 'External income tax' is translated as 'cáin ioncain eachtrach' in s365(1)(b) of the Income Tax Act, 1967. 'Seachtrach' is cited as translating 'outer', 'outside' and 'exterior' in the Acts, also.

'Eachtrach' also translates 'foreign', the most conspicuous example, perhaps, being 'An Roinn Gnóthaí Eachtracha', 'The Department of Foreign Affairs'. In s1(xi) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, 'the Department of External Affairs' is cited as 'An Roinn Gnóthaí Coigríche'. This was changed to 'An Roinn Gnóthaí Eachtracha' by the Ministers and Secretaries (Amendment) Act, 1939, s6(1) of which reads as follows:

It shall be lawful for the Government ... to alter in such way as they think proper the name (whether in the Irish language or the English language or in both those languages) of any Department of State.

Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú questions the meaning of 'external' in this Article and remarks that it seems to be the philosophical sense of 'derived from a source outside the subject affected, outside the conscious subject'. If that is the sense here, then Professor Ó Murchú recommends 'seachtrach' rather than 'eachtrach'.

a bheith aige Literally 'to have'. 'A bheith dá gcuid féin acu' expresses 'to own' in Article 44.2.5°. 'Ownership' is translated as 'úinéireacht' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Or have before importation been in private ownership for a substantial period' is translated as 'no bhí ar únaeracht phríobháideach ar feadh tamaill mhaith sarar hiomportáladh iad' in s15(b) of the First Schedule to the Finance Act, 1932. In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 518), for example, 'exercise the right of ownership conferred upon it with respect to special fissile materials' is translated as 'an ceart úinéireachta a fheidhmiú a thugtar dó i ndáil le hábhair inscoilte speisialta'. In s33(1) of the Finance Act, 1990, 'the risks and benefits associated with ownership of the qualifying premises' is translated as 'na fiontair agus na tairbhí a bhaineann le húinéireacht an áitribh cháilithigh'. In s27 of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976, the heading 'Change in ownership of company' is translated as 'athrú ar úinéireacht cuideachta', which also translates 'a change in the ownership of a company' within the section. 'The owner of the group' is translated as 'úinéir an chnuasaigh' in s16(1) of the Capital Acquisitions Tax Act of the same year, while in s3(2) of the Local Government (Financial Provisions) Act, 1978, 'the authority are the owner of a dwelling' is translated as '(gurb) é an t-údarás is úinéir ar theach cónaithe'. See further the commentary on Article 44.2.5<sup>o</sup>, particularly for citations from early Acts. Note that 'dílse' expresses 'ownership' in Article 45.2.ii – see the commentary thereon for further translations of 'own'/'ownership'.

Regarding the direct translation below, we have noted already (see the commentary on Article 12.2.2<sup>o</sup>) how 'an ceart ar' is sometimes used instead of 'an ceart chun' – in the Joint Declaration of December, 1993, for example, 'the right of free political thought, the right of freedom and expression of religion' is translated as 'an ceart ar shaorsmaoineamh polaitiúil, an ceart ar shaoirse agus ar léiriú creidimh' – this allows one avoid the genitive case which follows 'chun'. Commenting on the direct translation below of 'to the private ownership of external goods' as 'ar úinéireacht phríobháideach earraí seachtracha', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'úinéireacht' cannot have a qualifying genitive of this type – note the examples from the Acts above, however. Professor Ó Murchú recommends translating this phrase as 'ar sheilbh phríobháideach in earraí seachtracha'.

recht daonna See the commentary on Article 41.1.1<sup>o</sup>. 'Reacht' is translated as 'statute' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'positive law' is translated as 'dlí daonna'. Note how the definite article precedes 'dlí idirnáisiúnta' (translated as 'international law' in Téarmaí Dlí) in 'chun críche a cheadaíonn an dlí idirnáisiúnta', translating '(for) a purpose recognised by international law' in s5 of the Fisheries (Amendment) Act, 1978. As regards 'positive', note that in s7(1) of the Companies (Re-Constitution of Records) Act, 1924, 'but of whose dissolution he is unable to adduce positive evidence' is translated as 'ach nách féidir do fianaise dheimhniú do thabhairt ar a scur'.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Maoin Phríobháideach

Admhaíonn an Stát, toisc bua an réasúin a bheith ag an duine, go bhfuil sé de cheart nádúrtha aige nó aici maoin shaolta a bheith aige dá chuid féin, nó aici dá cuid féin, go príobháideach, ceart is ársa ná reacht daonna.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Maoin Phríobháideach

Aithníonn an Stát, de bhua an réasúin a bheith sa duine<sup>1</sup>, go bhfuil aige nó aici<sup>2</sup> an ceart nádúrtha, is túisce ná<sup>3</sup> an dlí daonna, ar úinéireacht phríobháideach earraí seachtracha<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'de bhua an duine a bheith réasúnach', 'de bhua bheith réasúnach an duine', 'de bhua an duine a bheith ina bheith nó ina beith réasúnach'

<sup>2</sup> 'ag an duine'

<sup>3</sup> 'a bhí ann roimh'

<sup>4</sup> 'chun úinéireachta príobháidí earraí seachtracha/eachtracha', 'ar sheilbh phríobháideach in earraí seachtracha', 'bheith ina úinéir príobháideach nó ina húinéir príobháideach ar earraí seachtracha/eachtracha'

ARTICLE 43.1.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 43.1.2<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELIGE

Uime sin, ráthaíonn an Stát gan aon dlí a achtú d'irraidh an ceart sin, ná gnáthcheart an duine chun maoin a shannadh agus a thiomnú agus a ghlacadh ina hoidhreach, a chur ar ceal.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

For that reason, the State guarantees not to enact any law attempting to set aside that right, nor the ordinary right of man to assign and to bequeath and to receive assets/property as an inheritance.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State accordingly guarantees to pass no law attempting to abolish the right of private ownership or the general right to transfer, bequeath, and inherit property.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The right of private ownership' is expressed as 'an ceart sin', 'that right', in the Irish text, referring back to the previous subsection.
- 2 The Irish term 'cur ar ceal', expressing 'abolish', is translated as 'set aside' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 3 'The general right' is expressed as 'gnáthcheart an duine' ('the ordinary/usual right of man') in the Irish text, with 'ginearálta' rather than 'gnáth' translating 'general' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 'To transfer' is expressed in the Irish text by 'sann', which term is translated as 'assign' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'I transfer' being translated as 'aistrim'.
- 5 'To inherit' is expressed as 'a ghlacadh ina hoidhreach' ('to receive as an inheritance') in the Irish text.
- 6 'To transfer, bequeath, and inherit' is expressed as 'a shannadh agus a thiomnú agus a ghlacadh ina hoidhreach', 'to transfer and to bequeath and to inherit', in the Irish text.
- 7 'Accordingly' is expressed as 'Uime sin', 'for that reason', in the Irish text.

Commentary

a chur ar ceal 'Cuirim ar ceal' is translated as 'I set aside' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Rud a chur ar ceal' is translated as 'to abolish something' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'cuireadh an rún, an reacht, ar ceal' as 'the motion, enactment, was set aside, rescinded'. Dinneen translates 'cuir ar ceal' as 'put off, lay aside'. DIL translates 'cel' as 'concealment (?), dissolution, extinction, death', citing 'an tí chuireas ar ceal toradh' (= 'qui ... distulit') from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death.

'Custum do chur ar ceal' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'to abolish Customs duties' in translations for the Department of Finance. In the 'Waterford County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, the Heading 'Abolish outdoor Relief' is translated as 'Deire le Fóirithin Allamuich', with 'Oifigí ar lár fén Scéim Seo' translating the heading 'Offices Abolished under this Scheme' in the 'Galway County Scheme'. 'Every abolition order shall operate to abolish the licence the subject of the order' is translated as 'Oibreoidh gach ordú scríosa chun deire do chur leis an gceadúnas is abhar don ordú' in s41(3) of the Intoxicating Liquor Act, 1927. Finally, the Long Title of the Family Law Act, 1981, 'An Act to abolish actions for criminal conversation, enticement and harbouring of a spouse' is translated as 'Acht do chur deireadh le caingne maidir le caidreamh collaí, mealladh agus tearmannú céile'.

d'iarraidh an ceart sin In 'd'iarraidh' we have the preposition 'do' with vowel elided, before the verbal noun 'iarraidh', corresponding to the now standard 'ag'. See Seán Ua Súilleabháin, op. cit., p. 525, regarding 'ag'/'do' before 'iarraidh' in South Munster (I translate):

In Desmond id is heard where ig or d' would be expected before iarraig, 'iarraidh', e.g. id iara(ig) uisce (H. Wagner, Linguistic Atlas and Survey of Irish Dialects II [Munster] [1964], 44). This is a combined form with the vowel of ig and the consonant of do. (I nDeasmhumhain cloistear id mar a mbeifí ag súil le ig nó d' roimh iarraig ... 'iarraidh', m.sh. id iara(ig) uisce (LASID, II, 44). Foirm chumaiscthe é seo le guta ig agus consan do).

In Article 20 of the 1922 Constitution, 'persons interfering with, molesting or attempting to corrupt its members in the exercise of their duties' is translated as 'daoine a bhainfidh le n-a bhaill no a chuirfidh isteach ortha no a thabharfaidh fé iad do bhreaba le linn dóibh a ndualgaisí do chó-líona'. Note that 'Inciting people to engage in an attempt to overthrow by violence the established form of Government of Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'Daoine do ghriósú chun tabhairt fé fhuirm bhnuithie Rialtas Shaorstáit Éireann do bhrise le fóiréigean' in s1 of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Powers of Arrest and Detention) Temporary Act, 1924. 'In respect of a prisoner attempting to escape' is translated as 'maidir le príosúnach do bheadh ad' iarraidh éaluithé' in s10(2)(f) of the Constitution (Amendment No. 17) Act, 1931. Finally, 'within three hours after so driving or attempting to drive' is translated as 'laistigh de thrí huairé a chloig tar éis dó tiomáint, nó iarracht a thabhairt ar thiomáint' in s10 of the Road Traffic (Amendment) Act, 1978.

gnáthcheart 'Gnáth' in compounds is translated as 'common', 'ordinary', 'plain' and 'fair' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'gnáthbhanna airgid', 'Gnáthbhille Sibhialta', 'gnáthchaitheamh agus gnáthchumailt' agus 'gnáthchóip' are translated respectively as 'common money bond', 'Ordinary Civil Bill', 'fair wear and tear' and 'plain copy', with 'gnáthstoc' being translated as 'common (ordinary) stock'. 'Gnáth-' is translated as (1) 'usual, customary, ordinary; vulgar, common; standard' and (2) 'constant, unremittant' in Ó Dónaill and as 'usual, general, average, continual; standing, characteristic' in Dinneen. DIL cites examples of the adjective 'gnáth', 'customary, usual, familiar, well-known', from the ninth-century Milan Glosses onwards. See further the commentary on 'gnáth-admhaithe', 'generally recognised', in Article 29.3.

'General agent' and 'general power of appointment', for example, are translated respectively as 'gníomhaire ginearálta' and 'cumhacht cheapacháin ghinearálta' in Téarmaí Dlí. The Margin Title of s5 of the Sligo Lighting and Electric Power Act, 1924, 'Extension of general purposes and power of Company', is translated as 'Leathanú ar chrícheanna agus ar chomhachta ginearálta na Cuideachtan'. Note that 'general conversation' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms, as being translated as 'gnáth-chomhrá' in translations for the Department of Education, with 'general domestic servant' being translated as 'gnáth-sheirbhíseach tighé' in translations for the Department of Industry and Commerce.

ina hoidhreacht 'Oidhreacht' is translated as 'inheritance' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'tagaim in oidhreacht (mhaoine)' is translated as 'I inherit (property)', 'oidhre' being translated as 'heir'. 'Oidhreacht' is translated as 'inheritance, heredity; heritage, patrimony' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'rud a fháil le hoidhreacht, teacht in oidhreacht ruda' as 'to inherit something', 'oidhreacht ár sinsear' being translated as 'our ancestral heritage, patrimony'. Dinneen translates 'oidhreacht' as 'an inheritance, heirloom, birthright, patrimony', citing 'thánag i n-oidhreacht an airgid do bhí ag m'athair, I inherited my father's money'. 'Eigrecht'/'oigrecht' is based on 'eigre', the earliest recorded dateable example of which is in a thirteenth-century poem – see DIL s.v. 'eigre'. DIL translates 'eigrecht' as 'inheritance, heritage, patrimony, (inherited) possession', citing 'do glac sé oighrecht a shenathar cuigi .i. iarlacht o Berbuic'.

'Where a person to whom real estate is devised for an estate tail or an estate in quasi entail dies in the lifetime of the testator leaving issue who could inherit under the entail' is translated as 'I gcás duine dá réadtiomnófar eastát réadach le haghaidh eastáit shainoidhrithe nó eastáit i samhail-sainoidhreacht d'fháil bháis le linn bheo an tiomnóra agus an duine sin d'fhágáil sleachta a d'fhéadfadh teacht in oidhreacht faoin sianordú' in s97 of the Succession Act, 1965.

a shannadh 'Sannaim' is translated as 'I assign' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill also translates 'sann' as 'assign', citing 'maoin a shannadh, to assign property'. DIL translates 'sannaid' as '(Legal) separates, alienates (land)', citing 'naid inrean, naide sanna' ('he is not to sell it, or alienate it', i.e. land belonging to the family) from an early Irish law-tract. See further the commentary on Article 10.3 where 'sannadh' expresses 'alienation'.

'I transfer' is translated as 'aistrim' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'The right to transfer property to or withdraw it from the fund' is translated as 'an ceart chun maoin a aistriú isteach sa chiste nó a thógáil amach as' in s46(4)(b) of the Charities Act, 1961. The Heading of Part III of the Ninth Schedule to the Finance Act, 1990, 'Conveyance or Transfer on Sale of other Property' is translated as 'Tíolacadh nó Aistriú ar Dhiol Maoine eile'. Finally, in s10(1) of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) (No. 2) Act, 1923, 'order the transfer of such property, in so far as it consists of land, to the Irish Land Commission' is translated as 'ordóidh sé an mhaoin sin d'aistriú an méid is talamh de chun Coimisiún Talmhan na hÉireann'.

a thiomnú 'Tiomnaím' is translated as 'I bequeath' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'May ... by deed or will convey, devise or bequeath such national monument' is translated as 'an séadchomhartha náisiúnta san do leithliú no do thiomna le dintiúir no le huacht' in s10 of the National Monuments Act, 1930. 'In relation to any property devised or bequeathed by the testator' is translated as 'i ndáil le haon mhaoín a réadthiomnaigh nó a thiomnaigh an tiomnóir' in s33(2)(a) of the Capital Acquisitions Tax Act, 1976. In the Preamble to the Methodist Church in Ireland Act, 1928, 'real ... property which has been or may be ... subscribed or bequeathed' is translated as 'maidir le maoin réalta a dinedh ... a shanna no a fhágaint le huadhacht'.

Uime sin Ó Dónaill gives 'about, concerning, in regard to, on account of' as one of the senses of 'um' from earlier Irish literature, citing 'mhaigh a ghean gáire air uime, he broke into a laugh over it' – see the commentary on Article 41.2.2°. 'Accordingly' is generally translated as 'dá réir sin' in the Acts – see s25(2) of the National Health Insurance Act, 1923, for example, where 'and cognate works shall be construed accordingly' is translated as 'agus léireofar focail den chineál chéanna dá réir sin'. See further the commentary on Article 23.2.1° where we find 'dá bhíthin sin' expressing 'accordingly'.

a ghlacadh 'Glacaim' is translated as 'I admit (as evidence); I receive' in Téarmaí Dlí. See the commentary on Articles 8.2, 12.10.4°, 13.1.3° and 27.5.1° where this verb is used respectively in expressing 'recognise', 'adopt', 'accept' and 'approve'.

Standardised Irish text

Uime sin, ráthaíonn an Stát gan aon dlí a achtú a iarraidh an ceart sin, ná gnáthcheart an duine chun maoin a shannadh agus a thiomnú agus a ghlacadh ina hoidhreacht, a chur ar ceal.

Direct translation

Ráthaíonn an Stát dá réir sin gan dlí ar bith a achtú lena ndéanfar iarracht ar dheireadh a chur leis an gceart ar úinéireacht<sup>1</sup> phriobháideach nó leis an gceart ginearálta ar mhaoín a aistriú agus a thíolacadh, agus ar theacht in oidhreacht mhaoine<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'ar sheilbh'
- 2 'ar mhaoín a aistriú, a thíolacadh, agus teacht ina hoidhreacht'

ARTICLE 43.2.1° AIRTEAGAL 43.2.1°

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ach admhaíonn an Stát gur cuí, sa chomhdhaonnacht shibhialta, oibriú na gceart atá luaite sna forálacha sin romhainn den Airteagal seo a rialú de réir bunrialacha an chirt chomhdhaonnaigh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

But the State acknowledges that it is fitting, in civil society, to regulate the operation of the rights which are mentioned in the foregoing provisions of this Article in accordance with the basic rules of the societal justice.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State recognises, however, that the exercise of the rights mentioned in the foregoing provisions of this Article ought, in civil society, to be regulated by the principles of social justice.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'By the principles of social justice' is expressed as 'de réir bunrialacha an chirt chomhdhaonnaigh' ('in accordance with the basic rules of societal justice') in the Irish text; the term expressing 'social', 'comhdhaonnach', is now less commonly used, and ordinarily 'social' is expressed in Irish by 'sóisialta'/'sóisialach', as we have already seen.
- 2 'Ought' is expressed in the Irish text as 'gur cuí, 'it is fitting'.
- 3 'Regulate' is again expressed by 'rialaigh', which term is translated as 'rule' and 'control' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 'Exercise' is again expressed by the verbal noun of the term translating 'operate' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'oibrigh'.
- 5 'Recognises' is again expressed in the Irish text by the same term which expresses 'acknowledges' in the previous section.
- 6 'However' is again expressed as 'Ach', 'But', in the Irish text.

Commentary

de réir bunrialacha an chirt chomhdhaonnaigh According to the official standard, 'bunrialacha' would be lenited, the form of the nominative being in place of the genitive (after the prepositional phrase 'de réir') before the definite noun 'ceart' (preceded by the article) – see the commentary on Article 1. As regards 'chomhdhaonnaigh' see the commentary on 'chomhdhaonnacht' below.

'Bunriail' is translated as 'fundamental rule' in Ó Dónaill, being a compound of 'bun' and 'riail', the prefix 'bun-' being translated primarily as 'basic, primary, elementary' in Ó Dónaill and 'riail' as 'rule'. Ó Dónaill's entry s.v. 'riail', reads as follows:

Rule. 1. Regulation, principle ... De réir na rialacha, in accordance with the rules.

'Bun-' is translated as 'principal, basal, foot-; middling, fairly' in Dinneen, who translates 'riaghail' as 'a rule, law or regulation; rule, government, direction or jurisdiction; a religious rule, discipline, a religion; a system or dispensation', citing 'ba riaghail ag flaithibh bheith, .c., it was the custom of nobles to be, etc.' Old Irish 'riagal' is translated as 'a rule (whether prescription, law, tradition or custom)' in DIL, 'riagal' being used in a less definite and legal sense than 'dliged' (Modern Irish 'dlí') – see further the commentary on Article 6.1. 'Bunriail' expressing 'principle' echoes 'bunreacht' ('constitution'), literally 'basic statute'.

Turning to 'principle', 'bunphrionsabal' is translated as 'first principle' in Ó Dónaill, whose entry s.v. 'prionsabal', is as follows:

Principle. 1. Fundamental truth, general law ... 2. Moral principles.

While Dinneen cites the adjective 'prionnsapálta' ('principal') from Donlevy's Irish Catechism, 1742, he does not appear to have the headword 'prionsabal'. 'Prinsipail' is an English loanword, according to DIL, where it is translated as (a) 'principal, capital sum (of money)' and (b) 'principle, rule of conduct' citing 'as d'ar gceudphrinsiopaluibh, nach eidir ...' from Molloy's Lucerna Fidelium, 1676. Note that 'Directive Principles' is expressed as 'Buntreoracha' in the heading for Article 45 – see the commentary on that Article regarding translations of 'principle'.

'Ceart' is translated as 'right' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'ceartas aiceanta' and 'iomrall ceartais' are translated respectively as 'natural justice' and 'miscarriage of justice'. Ó Dónaill's entry s.v. 'ceart', is as follows:

Right. 1(a) What is morally just. Ceart agus éigeart, right and wrong ... Má tá ceart le fáil, if there is justice in the world; if one might expect justice. I láthair an chirt, where justice is meted out; in a court of justice.

'Ceartas' is translated in Ó Dónaill as 'justice', following the abbreviation for 'Philosophy'. 'Ceart' is translated as 'right, justice, equity; claim; correct manner, the proper thing; a charge or duty; due or usual amount of anything' in Dinneen, who cites 'deinim ceart dó, I see that justice is done to'. 'Ceartas' is translated as 'equity, justice, law; what is right, what is justly due', in Dinneen, who cites 'dár cheartas rioghacht Mumhan, to whom the throne of Munster justly belonged', from the poetry of Aodhagán Ua Rathaille (1670-1726). The earliest example of 'certus' cited in DIL comes from the Martyrology of Úa Gormáin, composed within the period 1166-1174, this headword being translated as 'justice, propriety; exactitude, accuracy' in DIL. It is based on 'cert', which itself comes from Latin 'certus', examples of the adjective in the sense of 'correct, right, proper, fitting' being cited in DIL from the Milan Glosses of the ninth century onwards. DIL translates 'cert', as a noun, as 'the right, what is proper, correctness', but also gives examples of the quasi-legal sense of 'right, claim, entitlement' ('Lebor na Cert' being the title of a Middle Irish tract on rights and privileges of kings), along with examples of the sense of 'justice, fair dealing'. Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 306, translates 'cert' as 'justice, right, entitlement', citing 'ar dofet a cert certaib' ('for the rights [of the insane] take precedence over other rights') from an early Irish law-tract. 'Di Astud Chirt 7 Dligid' ('On the Confirmation of Right and Law') is the late title of a long early Irish legal text containing a wide variety of legal matter. Note that 'the Department of Justice' is styled 'an Roinn Dlí agus Cirt' in Irish. See the commentary on Articles 29.1 (where 'justice' is expressed as 'cothrom') and 38.3.1° regarding 'justice'.

Regarding 'social justice' in the Acts, 'and for regulating in accordance with the principles of social justice the exercise of private rights in respect of minerals' is translated as 'agus chun feidhmiú ceart príobháideach i ndáil le mianraí a rialáil de réir prionsabal ceartais sóisialaigh' in the Long Title of the Minerals Development Act, 1979. In s(k) of the Third Schedule to the Restrictive Practices Act, 1972, 'in any other respect operate against the common good or are not in accordance with the principles of social justice' is translated as 'atá in aon slí eile in aghaidh leasa an phobail nó ar neamhréir le prionsabail an cheartais shóisialaigh', this same English text being translated as 'atá, in aon tslí eile, in aghaidh leasa an phobail nó ar neamhréir le buntreora an cheartais chomhdhaonnaigh' in s(k) of the Second Schedule to the Restrictive Trade Practices Act, 1953.

sa chomhdhaonnacht shibhialta See the commentary on Article 41.1.1° regarding 'comhdhaonnacht' in the Constitution, 'comhdhaonnacht' being translated as 'social, companionable' in Ó Dónaill, who does not appear to give 'comhdhaonnacht', Dinneen citing neither adjective nor noun – see further the commentary on Article 15.3.1°. The definite article is regularly used with abstract nouns in Irish where no such article exists in English – e.g., 'in politics', 'sa pholaitíocht'.

'Sibhialta' is translated as 'civil' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill; DIL gives two citations of 'sibialta' from O'Molloy's Lucerna Fidelium, 1676 – see the commentary on Articles 34.3.1° and 38.4.2°. Note incidentally that 'sibhialta' translates both 'civil' and 'civilized'. 'And condemned by the civilized world' is translated as 'agus go bhfuil sé daortha ag an saol sibhialta' in the Preamble to the Genocide Act, 1973, with 'affording all the judicial guarantees which are recognised as indispensable by civilised peoples' being translated as 'maille le gach ráthaíocht bhreithiúnach a n-aithníonn pobail shibhialta gur den riachtanas í' in s1(d) of Article 3 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1963.

gur cuí 'Mionnscribhinn fhorghníomhaithe chuí' agus 'sealbhóir i gcúrsa cuí' are translated respectively as 'affidavit of due execution' and 'holder in due course' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'comaoin chuí' is translated as 'good consideration'. Ó Dónaill translates 'cuí' as 'fitting, proper', citing 'is cuí agus is cóir sin, it is right and proper'. Dinneen translates 'cuibhe' as 'proper, becoming, fit, seemly', citing 'mar is cuibhe, as is becoming'. DIL cites 'cobaid' from the early ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms s.v. 'cubaid', which headword is translated as (a) 'harmonious, in accord, agreeing' and (b) 'fitting, meet, becoming; proper, right', citing 'ro bud cubuidh ...' ('would be meet') from an early Irish law-tract. According to Rudolf Thurneysen, Grammar of Old Irish (pp. 81, 219 and 503), 'cubaid' ('rhyming, harmonious') is a compound of 'com' ('with') + 'fid' ('letter [of the alphabet]'). See further the commentary on the Preamble and see the commentary on Articles 42.4 and 42.5 for examples of 'cuí' expressing 'due'.

oibriú See the commentary on Article 3; 'oibrím' is translated as 'I operate' in Téarmaí Dlí, but usually expresses 'exercise' in the Constitution, that verb being translated as 'feidhmigh' in Téarmaí Dlí.

a rialú See the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 12.5; 'rialáim' is translated as 'I control, I rule' in Téarmaí Dlí but regularly expresses 'regulate' in the Constitution, that verb being generally translated as 'rialáil' in the Acts.

Standardised Irish text

Ach admhaíonn an Stát gur cuí, sa chomhdhaonnacht shibhialta, oibriú na gceart atá luaite sna forálacha sin romhainn den Airteagal seo a rialú de réir bhunrialacha an chirt chomhdhaonnaigh.

Direct translation

Aithníonn an Stát, áfach, gur chóir, sa tsochaí shibhialta, feidhmiú<sup>1</sup> na gceart atá luaite sna forálacha sin roimhe seo den Airteagal seo a rialáil le prionsabail<sup>2</sup> an cheartais shóisialaigh.

Variants

- 1 'go ndéanfaí feidhmiú'
- 2 'de réir phrionsabail'

ARTICLE 43.2.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 43.2.2<sup>o</sup>TÉACS GAEILGE

Uime sin, tig leis an Stát, de réir mar a bheas riachtanach, teorainn a chur le hoibriú na gceart réamhráite d'fhonn an t-oibriú sin agus leas an phobail a thabhairt dá chéile.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

For that reason, the State may, as will be necessary, put a limit to the operation of the aforementioned rights in order to bring together that operation and the welfare of the people.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State, accordingly, may as occasion requires delimit by law the exercise of the said rights with a view to reconciling their exercise with the exigencies of the common good.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'By law', in 'delimit by law', is not specifically expressed in the Irish text, where 'delimit by law' is expressed simply as 'teorainn a chur le' ('put a limit to').
- 2 'The exigencies of the common good' is expressed as 'leas an phobail' ('the welfare of the people') in the Irish text, the phrase 'leas an phobail' consistently expressing 'the common good' in the Constitution, which phrase is translated as 'an mhaitheas phoiblí' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 3 'Of the said rights' is expressed as 'na gceart réamhráite' ('of the aforementioned rights') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Their exercise' is expressed as 'an t-oibriú sin', 'that exercise', in the Irish text.
- 5 'May' is expressed as 'tig le' ('can') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some other Articles.
- 6 'Accordingly' is expressed in the Irish text as 'Uime sin', 'For that reason', as in the foregoing section.

As we saw in the commentary on Article 43.1.1<sup>o</sup>, J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 209, reports as follows on reference made to this Article in the courts:

In Central Dublin Development Association Ltd. v Attorney General ([1975] 109 ILTR 69) Kenny J said, in regard to both Article 43.1.1 and Article 43.2.2, that "while there may not be a conflict" between the Irish and English versions, the English version seemed to him "to be a most unhappy attempt to reproduce the meaning of that in Irish":

"The phrase "de cheart nádúrtha aige maoin shaolta a bheith aige dá chuid féin go príobháideach" ... means, I think, "a natural right to his own private share of worldly wealth" and not "the natural right to the private ownership of external goods"... Another source of confusion in the English text is the use in Article 43.2.2 of the word "delimit". The Irish phrase is "teorainn a chur" which would, I think, be more accurately translated as "restrict". In Professor de Bhaldráithe's standard English-Irish dictionary, the Irish equivalent of "restrict" is given as "cuirim teorainn le".

As we saw, J.M. Kelly remarks on the reference above to the English version being an attempt to reproduce the Irish that 'in view of the history of the Irish version, this phrase of Kenny J seems to be a mere judicial politeness'.

Commentary

teorainn This headword is translated as 'limit' in Téarmaí Dlí, where the verb 'teorainnim', 'I limit', is also given as a headword. Ó Dónaill translates 'teorainn a chur le' as 'to demarcate (tailte, lands); to limit, restrict (rud, something)' and Dinneen translates 'cuirim teorainn le' as 'I bound, limit, restrict'. DIL cites examples of 'tórann', verbal noun of 'do-foirndea' (*to-fo-rind-), from the Milan Glosses of the ninth century onwards, translating that headword as 1(a) 'act of marking out, delimiting', (b) 'share, division', (c) 'boundary, limit', (d) 'confines, territory', II (a) 'act of representing, denoting, signifying', (b) 'sign, figure' – see the commentary on Article 2 where 'farráigi teorann' expresses 'territorial seas'.

'When prescribing the persons or classes of persons by whom returns are to be made ... the Minister may define or delimit such persons or classes of persons' is translated as 'Nuair a bheidh an tAire á ordú cadriad na daoine no na haicmí daoine a thabharfidh cuntaisí no eolas uathu féin Acht so, féadfa sé na daoine no na haicmí daoine sin do luadh no do dheighilt amach' in s16(2) of the Statistics Act, 1926. In s47(2) of the Court Officers Act, 1926, 'the District Court shall be held for the purpose of transacting for such district court area the business for the transaction of which such area was delimited' is translated as '(ar a) ndéanfar an Chúirt Dúithche do chomóra chun an gnó dar teorannuoidh an liomataíte cúirte dúithche sin do dhéanamh don liomataíte sin'. 'Define the functions of such joint committee and, where appropriate, delimit the respective functions of such joint committee' is translated as 'míneofar feidhmeanna an chó-choiste sin agus, i ngach cás ina mbeidh san oiriúnach, leagfar amach feidhmeanna fé seach an chó-choiste sin' in s12(2)(b) of the Public Assistance Act, 1939, the same English text (with 'the' replacing 'such') being translated as 'míneo sé feadhma an chomhúdaráis agus, más cuibhe, leagfaidh amach feadhma an chomhúdaráis' in s98(2)(b) of the Mental Treatment Act, 1945. 'Situate in such area as the Board thinks proper and specifies or delimits in or by such rules' is translated as 'agus a bheidh sa liomataíte sin is dóich leis an mBord is ceart agus a luadhfaid no go luadhfaid a theoranta sna rialacha san' in s46(2)(b)(ii) of the Shops (Conditions of Employment) Act, 1938. In s41(2) of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1986, "market" means a market delimited in a geographical manner' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "margadh" margadh a bhfuil a theorainneacha socraithe ar mhodh geografach'.

a thabhairt dá chéile Ó Dónaill cites ‘Nil an tuairisc sin ag teacht le chéile, that report is not consistent’ s.v. ‘tar’, and ‘Ní théann an dá rud le chéile go rómhaith, the two things don’t agree very well’ s.v. ‘téigh’, with Dinneen, s.v. ‘céile’, translating ‘bheirim dá rud dá chéile’ as ‘I reconcile two things’. We have seen in the commentary on the amended Article 41.3.2° (where ‘comhréiteach’ renders ‘reconciliation’) how ‘deifríocht a thabhairt dá chéile’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘to reconcile difference of calculation’ in translations for Oifig an Phuist.

For regulating in accordance with the principles of social justice the exercise of private rights in respect of minerals with a view to reconciling their exercise with the exigencies of the common good’ is translated as ‘chun feidhmiú ceart príobháideach i ndáil le mianraí a rialáil de réir prionsabal ceartais sóisialaigh d’fhonn a bhfeidhmiú a chur ar comhréir le riachtanais an leasa choitinn’ in the Long Title of the Minerals Development Act, 1979. ‘Recognising that it is necessary to reconcile the fundamental values of the respect for privacy and the free flow of information between peoples’ is translated as ‘Á aithint dóibh gur gá comhréiteach a dhéanamh idir na luachanna bunúsacha a bhaineann le hurraim don phríobháideacht agus an saorshreabhadh faisnéise idir daoine’ in the Preamble to the First Schedule to the Data Protection Act, 1988.

Commenting on ‘a chur ar comhréir le chéile’ in the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends ‘a thabhairt i gcomhréir le chéile’.

a bheas riachtanach ‘Bheas’ is the special form of the relative of the substantive verb, future tense – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in ‘-s’. See the commentary on Article 41.1.2° regarding ‘riachtanach’. As regards ‘as occasion requires’, ‘The Official Censor may, as occasion requires, amend or delete an entry in the register’ is translated as ‘Féadfaidh an Scrúdóir Oifigiúil, de réir riachtanais na hócáide, iontráil sa chlár a leasú nó a scriosadh’ in s14(2) of the Video Recordings Act, 1989, with ‘de réir riachtanais na hócáide’ translating ‘as occasion requires’ in s14(4) of the Transport (Re-organisation of Córas Iompair Éireann) Act, 1986. Finally, in s12(1) of the Interpretation Act, 1923, ‘and the duty shall be performed from time to time as occasion requires’ is translated as ‘agus déanfar an dualgas o am go ham fé mar is gá’.

leas an phobail See the commentary on Article 6.1. ‘And is satisfied that the exigencies of the common good so warrant’ is translated as ‘agus gur deimhin léi gur gá sin ar mhaithe le leas an phobail’ in s24(5) of the Data Protection Act, 1988. ‘That the Government are of opinion that the exigencies of the common good necessitate the control by the Minister on behalf of the State of the supply and distribution of fuels’ is translated as ‘gur dóigh leis an Rialtas gur gá, ar mhaithe le leas an phobail, go rialóidh an tAire thar ceann na Stáit soláthar agus imdháil breoslaí’ in s2(4)(a) of the Fuels (Control of Supplies) Act, 1971. In s92(4)(a) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, ‘having due regard to the military exigencies and the public service’ is translated as ‘má tugtar aire chuibhe do riachtanaisí míleata agus don tseirbhís phuiblí’, with ‘riachtanaisí an cháis’ translating ‘exigencies of the case’ in the Seanad Order Paper of 1925, p. 101. Finally, ‘gá’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘exigencies’ in a 1928 Report of the Public Accounts Committee.

tig leis Literally ‘can’, one of the ways ‘may’ of the English text is expressed in the Irish text – see the commentary on Article 12.4.4°.

le hoibriú ... an t-oibriú See the commentary on the foregoing subsection.

Standardised Irish text

Uime sin, tig leis an Stát, de réir mar a bheidh riachtanach, teorainn a chur le hoibriú na gceart réamhráite d’fhonn an t-oibriú sin agus leas an phobail a thabhairt dá chéile.

Direct translation

Féadfaidh an Stát, dá réir sin, de réir riachtanais na hócáide, feidhmiú na gceart a dúradh a theorannú le dlí d’fhonn a bhfeidhmiú agus riachtanais na maitheasa poiblí<sup>1</sup> a chur ar comhréir le chéile<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

<sup>1</sup> ‘leas an phobail’

<sup>2</sup> ‘a thabhairt i gcomhréir le chéile’, ‘d’fhonn comhréiteach a dhéanamh idir a bhfeidhmiú agus riachtanais na maitheasa poiblí’

ARTICLE 44.1 AIRTEAGAL 44.1

RELIGION CREIDEAMH

TÉACS GAEILGE

Creideamh

Admhaíonn an Stát go bhfuil ag dul do Dhia na nUilechumhacht é a adhradh le hómós go poiblí. Beidh urraim ag an Stát dá ainm, agus bhéarfaidh oirmhidin agus onóir do Chreideamh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Faith/Religion

The State acknowledges that to be publicly adored with homage is due to God the Almighty. The State will have veneration for his name, and will give reverence and honour to Religion.

ENGLISH TEXT

Religion

The State acknowledges that the homage of public worship is due to Almighty God. It shall hold His Name in reverence, and shall respect and honour religion.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘It shall hold His Name in reverence’ is expressed as ‘Beidh urraim ag an Stát dá ainm’ (‘The State will have reverence for his name’) in the Irish text.
- 2 ‘Shall respect and honour religion’ is expressed as 'bhéarfaidh oirmhidin agus onóir do Chreideamh' ('will give reverence and honour to Religion') in the Irish text.

- 3 While the Irish text – following orthographic convention, according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú – does not have initial capitals corresponding to 'His Name' of the English text, 'Creideamh' ('religion') is given an initial capital in the Irish text only in the section itself.
- 4 'The homage of public worship' is expressed in the Irish text as 'é a adhradh le hómós go poiblí', 'he be worshipped with homage publicly'.

Note that subsections 2° and 3° of Article 44.1 of the Constitution were deleted by the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1972, Article 41.1 originally being Article 41.1.1°. These subsections read as follows:

2° The State recognises the special position of the Holy Catholic Apostolic and Roman Church as the guardian of the Faith professed by the great majority of the citizens. Admhuigheann an Stát an chéim fá leith atá ag an Naomh-Eaglais Chatoiliceach Aspalda Rómhánach ós í is caomhnaidhe don Chreideamh atá ag árd-urmhór na saoránach.

3° The State also recognises the Church of Ireland, the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, the Methodist Church in Ireland, the Religious Society of Friends in Ireland, as well as the Jewish Congregations and the other religious denominations existing in Ireland at the date of the coming into operation of this Constitution. Admhuigheann an Stát, fairis sin, Eaglais na hÉireann, an Eaglais Phresbitéarach i nÉirinn, an Eaglais Mhetoidisteach i nÉirinn, Creideamh-Chumann na gCarad i nÉirinn, mar aon leis na Pobail Iúdacha agus na haicmí eile creidimh atá i nÉirinn lá an Bunreacht so do theacht i ngníomh.

Commentary

do Chreideamh 'Creideamh' is translated as 'belief, faith, religion, creed' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'duine a thabhairt chun creidimh, to bring someone to the faith; to bring someone round to one's point of view' and 'saoirse chreidimh, religious freedom'. Dinneen translates 'creideamh' as 'faith, belief, religion, creed; act of believing'. Old Irish 'creitem' is the verbal noun of 'creitid', which verb is translated as 'believes, trusts; gives allegiance, homage', and absolutely as 'accepts the faith, is converted', in DIL. 'Inchretem' glosses Latin 'fides' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. DIL translates 'creitem' as (a) 'act of believing, act of coming to believe; being converted' and (b) 'belief, faith (Christian) religion'. Note that Old Irish 'credo'/'crédo'(?), 'creed', comes from Latin 'credo' – see DIL s.v. 'créda' – with both Irish 'creitid' and Latin 'credo' coming from the same Indo-European root, meaning originally 'of the heart'.

We also find 'reiligiún' in the Acts, particularly if 'faith' and 'religion' occur together. 'According to the rights of the religion to which they belonged' is translated as 'de réir deasghnátha a reiligiúin' in Article 17 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962, with 'the religion of the deceased' being translated as 'reiligiún an mhairbh'. In s1 of Article 3 of the Third Schedule, 'without any adverse distinction founded on race, colour, religion or faith' is translated as 'gan aon idirdhealú leatromach mar gheall ar chine, dath, reiligiún nó creideamh'. Finally, in s23(5)(b) of the Street and House to House Collections Act, 1962, 'held in accordance with the laws, canons and ordinances of the religion concerned' is translated as 'a sheolfar de réir dlíthe, canónacha agus deasghnátha an chóras creidimh lena mbaineann'.

Commenting on 'don Chreideamh' in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'an creideamh' means a particular type of religion, e.g. 'an creideamh Caitliceach', etc., with 'níor chaill sé riamh an creideamh' referring to a particular religion. Professor Ó Murchú does admit, however, that 'do Chreideamh' is somewhat unnatural.

ag dul do Ó Dónaill gives 'be due to, deserve' as a secondary sense of 'téigh do', citing 'an tsuim atá ag dul dom, the sum that is due to me' and 'tá an méid sin ar a laghad ag dul duit, you are entitled to that much at least'. DIL cites 'is d'ollamhain ... téid a ghuala' ('an ollam [chief poet / professor] has the right to sit by the king's side'), from a miscellaneous collection of Classical Irish poetry, as an example of the phrase 'téit do' in the sense of 'is given to'.

'Without payment of any sum which is due to the Minister' is translated as 'gan aon suim a íoc a bheidh dlite don Aire' in s174(4) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, with 'annual leave is due to him in respect of the current leave year' being translated as 'saoire bhliantúil a bheidh dlite dó i leith na bliana saoire reatha' in s5(1)(b) of the Holidays (Employees) Act, 1973. In s19(1)(a) of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1924, 'that any debt is due to the creditor under a judgement of a competent court' is translated as 'ar aon fhiacha bheidh dlite don bhfiach-éilitheoir fé bhreithiúntas a thug cúirt inniúil'.

na nUilechumhacht The standard Irish form of the plural of 'cumhacht' is 'cumhachtaí'. Ó Dónaill translates 'uilechumhacht' as 'omnipotence', giving no plural form of this noun, citing 'Dia Uilechumhachtach, God Almighty' s.v. 'dia' – see the commentary on Article 12.8. DIL cites 'oen Dia uli-chumachtach' and 'uli-cumachtaig in talmhan' from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac (a manuscript compiled in 1411 or earlier), as examples of 'uile-chumactach' ('omnipotent') as both adjective and noun.

'I swear by Almighty God' is translated as 'Bheirim Dia Uilechumhachtach' in s39(2) of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977, for example, with 'Bheirim-se Dia na nUile-chomhacht' being found in s21(2) of the Referendum Act, 1942, and 'Bheirim-se Dia Uile-chomhachtach' being found in s29(2) of the Electoral Act, 1923.

a adhradh 'Adhradh' is the verbal noun of 'adhair', translated as 'adore, worship' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'Dia a adhradh, to adore God' and 'd'adhair siad íola, they worshipped idols'. Dinneen translates 'adhraim' as 'I adore, venerate, reverence'. 'Adraid' comes from Latin 'adorare' and in Old Irish is generally treated as a compound verb, 'ad-or' (with short o), but sometimes as a simple verb, according to DIL, translating that headword as 'adores, worships' and citing 'adrat Dia' ('let them worship God'), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, along with the following lines from Fiacc's Hymn in honour of St Patrick, written c. AD 800: 'túatha adortaís side / ní creitset in fírdeacht' ('the peoples used to worship side: / they believed not the true Godhead').

'In so far as it requires the church not to be used as a place of public worship' is translated as 'a mhéid a cheanglaíonn sé nach n-úsáidfean an eaglais mar áit adhartha poiblí' in s3 of the Holycross Abbey (County Tipperary) Act, 1969. In s9(c) of the Finance Act, 1923, 'any building used solely for the purpose of divine worship' is translated as '(ar) fhoirgneamh ná húsáidtear ach chun Dia d'adhra ann', with 'that the premises are in close proximity to a place of worship' being translated as 'go bhfuil an t-áitreabh ana-chomhgarach d'áit adhartha Dé' in s8(c) of the Betting Act, 1926.

urraim This headword is translated as 'respect, esteem; deferential regard' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'urraim a bheith agat duit féin, to have respect for oneself' and 'tá urraim mhór dó, he is held in high esteem'. Dinneen translates 'urraim' as 'honour, respect, homage, veneration, regard, indulgence', citing 'tabhair urraim do'n aois, honour old age' and 'le h-urraim do, through veneration for'. 'Airraim' is a compound of 'air' + 'réim', according to DIL, where this headword is translated as 'deference, respect'.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'to hold someone in reverence' as 'modh agus urraim a thabhairt do dhuine', this Irish phrase being translated as 'to honour and respect someone' in Ó Dónaill, 'modh' itself being translated as 'honour, respect'. Note that 'respect' occurs in the following clause in the present Article and is expressed as 'oirmhidin', which headword is generally translated as 'reverence', as well as 'respect' – see below. De Bhaldraithe, for example, translates 'he is held in great honour' as 'tá urraim mhór dó', using the same noun 'urraim' as he does in translating 'held in reverence'. 'Carefully search for and remove with all due reverence ... all human Remains found in the Peter Street Huguenot Cemetery' is translated as 'Cuardach cúramach a dhéanamh do na Taisí daonna go léir a gheofar i Reilig na nÚgóineach i Sráid Pheadair agus iad a aistriú leis an urraim uile is cuí' in s4(b) of the Schedule to the Huguenot Cemetery Dublin (Peter Street) Act, 1966.

oirmhidin This headword is translated as 'honour, respect, reverence' in Ó Dónaill, following the abbreviation for senses found in earlier Irish literature, with 'oirmhidin Dé' translated as 'the reverence due to God'. 'Oirmhinneach' is used as an ecclesiastical title or form of address, and translates English 'Reverend'. 'Oirmhidin' is translated as 'dignity, respectability, honour, veneration, reverence' in Dinneen, who cites 'dlighidh eagna oirmhidin, wisdom demands respect'. DIL cites 'ní tartisset airmitin Dé' ('they have not shown the reverence due to God') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, along with 'co n-onóir. co n-airmitin' from a text probably composed in the eleventh century, 'Scéal Láí Brátha' ('Tidings of Doomsday'), which is found in the manuscript Leabhar na hUidhre, written in Clonmacnois c. 1100 and now in the Royal Irish Academy, Dublin.

See the commentary on Articles 40.3.1° and 42.1 regarding 'respect'. 'Each member of the Agency shall respect the international character of this duty' is translated as 'Tabharfaidh gach ball den Ghníomhaireacht d'aitheantas gur dualgas idirnáisiúnta an dualgas sin' in Article 33(c) of the Schedule to the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency Act, 1988. In s3(b) of Article IV of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements (Amendment) Act, 1977, 'These principles shall respect the domestic, social and political policies of members' is translated as 'Tabharfaidh na prionsabail sin aird ar bheartais shóisialta agus pholaitiúla baile comhaltaí'. 'The civilian population shall respect the wounded and sick' is translated as 'Tabharfaidh an pobal sibhialta urraim dá lucht créachtaithe agus breoite sin' in Article 18 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962.

onóir This headword is translated as 'honour' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'onóir a thabhairt do dhuine, to honour, do honour to, someone', citing 'duine a onóru, to honour someone' and 'na féilte a onóru, to honour, observe, the festivals', s.v. 'onóraigh'. Dinneen translates 'onóir' as 'honour, pride, haughtiness; reverence, respect; thrift', translating 'onóirim' as 'I honour, worship, respect, revere, reverence'. 'Onóir' is an early Middle Irish loanword from Latin 'honorem', translated as 'honour, respect (generally of the outward manifestations thereof), dignity' in DIL, where 'dobertsat onóir 7 airmhidin dó' is cited from the Annals of the Four Masters. 'To pay, do, honour to someone' is translated as 'onóir a thabhairt do dhuine' in De Bhaldraithe, who translates the verb 'honour' as 'onóiraim, tugaim onóir do'. Note that in Article 30 of the 1922 Constitution, 'on the grounds that they have done honour to the Nation' is translated as 'as ucht onóir do bheith déanta acu don Náisiún'.

le hómós 'Ómós' is translated as 'homage; reverence, respect' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ómós a thabhairt do dhuine, to do homage to someone; to pay respect to someone'. 'Ómós' is translated as 'homage, respect, obedience' in Dinneen, who cites 'réir agus ómós ríogh aige dá fthagáil, enjoying the service and homage due to a monarch'. 'Fomós' was an earlier form of this noun, which comes from Middle-English 'omage', all the examples of which headword cited in DIL coming from the writings of the seventeenth-century Geoffrey Keating (Séathrún Céitinn). DIL translates 'fomós' as 'homage, obedience'.

bhéarfaidh According to the official standard, this would be written as 'tabharfaidh' – see the commentary on Article 12.1. The personal pronoun would generally accompany the verb here in the Acts today, i.e. 'tabharfaidh sé' (i.e. 'an Stát').

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Creideamh

Admhaíonn an Stát go bhfuil adhradh le hómós go poiblí ag dul do Dhia na hUilechumhachta. Beidh urraim ag an Stát d'Ainm Dé, agus tabharfaidh oirmhidin agus onóir do Chreideamh.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Greideamh

Admhaíonn an Stát go bhfuil ómós an adhartha phoiblí dlite do Dhia Uilechumhachtach. Beidh oirmhidin<sup>1</sup> ag an Stát d'Ainm Dé, agus tabharfaidh sé urraim agus onóir do chreideamh<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'modh agus urraim'
- 2 'don chreideamh', 'déanfaidh sé creideamh a urramú agus a onóirú'

ARTICLE 44.2.1<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 44.2.1<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELGE

Ráthaítear do gach saoránach saoirse choinsiasa is saorchead admhála is cleachta creidimh, ach gan san a dhul chun dochair don ord phoiblí ná don mhoráltacht phoiblí.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Freedom of conscience and free licence/liberty to profess and practise religion is guaranteed to every citizen, provided that not be to the detriment of public order nor to public morality.

ENGLISH TEXT

Freedom of conscience and the free profession and practice of religion are, subject to public order and morality, guaranteed to every citizen.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Free profession and practice of religion' is expressed as 'saorchead admhála is cleachta creidimh' ('free licence to profess and to practise religion') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Subject to public order and morality' is expressed as 'ach gan san a dhul chun dochair don ord phoiblí ná don mhoráltacht phoiblí' ('provided that not be to the detriment of public order nor to public morality') in the Irish text.

Note that Article 8 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

Freedom of conscience and the free profession and practice of religion are, subject to public order and morality, guaranteed to every citizen .... Is slán do gach saoránach saoirse choinsiasa agus saor-chleachta agus admháil phuiblí chreidimh, ach gan dochar don rialtacht ná don mhoráltacht phuiblí.

Commentary

saorchead This compound is translated as 'full permission' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'saorchead a bheith agat le rud a dhéanamh, to be quite at liberty to do something' and 'saorchead isteach, free admission'. Dinneen also translates 'saor-chead' as 'full permission'.

'Any inspector shall be entitled at all reasonable times to enter upon and have free access to the interior of ... any premises' is translated as 'Beidh teideal ag aon chigire ar gach tráth réasúnta chun dul isteach agus chun saorchead a bheith aige istigh ... in aon áitreabh' in s4(1) of the Agricultural Produce (Eggs) Act, 1924, with 'and shall at all times have free access either collectively or individually to every part of such prison' being translated as 'agus beidh saor-chead acu chun dul isteach gach am i ngach páirt den phríosún san le chéile no go haonarach' in s3(2) of the Prisons (Visiting Committees) Act, 1925. Note that 'and the works and operations of the Commissioners shall be so constructed as to permit of full and free access to and from the yards' is translated as 'agus déanfar oibreacha agus obráidí na gCoimisinéirí i slí is go mbeidh slí iomlán shaor aon uair ina dhiaidh seo chun clósanna' in s94(2) of the Dundalk Harbour and Port Act, 1925. Note also that 'free speech' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'saoirse cainte' in a Report by the Dáil, 'saor-chleachta' translating 'free exercise' (reference appears to be inaccurate).

a dhul chun dochair Ó Dónaill cites 'rachaidh sé chun dochair don tír, it will bring harm on the country'. Dinneen translates 'dochar' as 'misfortune, hardship, damage, harm, hurt, loss, mischief; debit'. DIL cites 'do mharbhus duine óg chum mo dhochair féin' ('I have slain a young man to my hurt') from a seventeenth-century translation of Genesis iv. 23, translating 'dochar' as 'disadvantage, hurt, loss, injury, misery', 'dochar' being a compound of the prefix 'do-' + 'cor'. 'Dochar' had the sense of 'unfair or disadvantageous contract' in early Irish laws – see Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 307. 'Gan dochar' is translated as 'without prejudice' in Téarmaí Dlí.

'Subject to' is translated as 'faoi réir' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 12.5, where 'faoi chuimsiú' expresses 'subject to', as it does in the Constitution in general. Note that 'all royalties ... , subject to any trusts ... then existing in respect thereof' is translated as 'gach rí-chíos ... gan dochar d'aon mhuinighneachas ... do bhí an uair sin ann' in Article 11 of the 1922 Constitution, with 'subject as hereinafter provided' being translated as 'gan dochar dá bhforálar 'na dhiaidh seo' in s1(2) of the Summer Time Act, 1924.

Regarding 'public morality' in the Acts, 'would be for the benefit of an object which is unlawful or contrary to public morality' is translated as 'ag dul chun tairbhe do chuspóir atá neamhdhleathach nó atá contrártha don mhoráltacht phoiblí' in s9(b) of the Street and House to House Collection Act, 1962. In s7(3) of the Censorship of Films Act, 1923, 'to prevent the exhibition of the picture in public being subversive of public morality' is translated as 'chun taisbeáint an phictiúra don phuibhlocht do chosc ar an moráltacht phuiblí do mhille'.

saoirse choinsiasa 'Saoirse coinsiasa' is translated as 'liberty of conscience' in Ó Dónaill, who also cites 'saoirse cainte, freedom of speech'. See the commentary on Articles 15.10 and 40.4.1<sup>o</sup> regarding 'saoirse'. 'Coinsias' is an English loanword, the earliest example of which is found in Desiderius (Flaithrí Ó Maolchonaire's version of the Spanish book El Desseoso), published in Louvain in 1616. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that, on the evidence of the pronunciation of this word in Munster, it existed in Irish long before the seventeenth century.

In s97(2) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'that the oath has no binding effect upon the conscience of such person' is translated as 'ná cuirfeadh an mionn aon cheangal ar choinsias an duine sin'. 'Was vested in or capable of being exercised by the Court of Conscience' is translated as 'a bhí dilsithe no infheidhmithe ... sa Chúirt Choinsias no aici' in s78 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. 'As they result from the usages established among civilised peoples, from the laws of humanity and the dictates of the public conscience' is translated as 'mar a leanann siad as an ngnáthamh atá bunaithe i measc pobal sibhialta agus as dlíthe na daonnachta agus mar is dual de réir choinsias an phobail' in Article 158 of the Fourth Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962, with 'in accordance with their religious conscience' being translated as 'de réir a gcoinsiasa creidimh' in Article 35 of the Third Schedule.

admhála 'Admháil' is translated as 'acknowledgement', 'confession' and 'receipt (i.e. for money, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'fógra ag iarraidh fíorais (doiciméid, etc.) a admháil' is translated as 'notice to admit facts (documents, etc.)' and 'admhaím' is translated as 'I acknowledge; I confess'. 'Admháil' is translated as 'acknowledgement, admission' in Ó Donaill, who translates 'admháil creidimh' as 'profession of faith', citing 'admhaím mo chreideamh, I confess, profess, my faith' s.v. 'admhaigh'. 'Admháil' is translated as 'act of confessing, admitting; acknowledgement, confession; receipt for payment' in Dinneen, who translates 'admhuighim' as 'I confess, admit, acknowledge'. DIL translates 'atmáil', late verbal noun of 'ad-daim', as 'act of confessing, admitting, acknowledging; confession, admission'. DIL gives examples of 'ad-daim' ('acknowledges, admits, concedes, confesses') from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian onwards, citing 'gach duine ... admhuigheas ... teagasg ... Íosa Críost' from Donlevy's An Teagasg Críostduidhe, 1742, where we find 'admhaigh' in the sense of 'profess'. See further the commentary on the Preamble.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'profess' as 'admhaím (mo chreideamh, etc.), dearbhaím', translating 'profession of faith' as 'admháil chreidimh'. 'A person who does not profess the creed of the religious denomination to which such child belongs' is translated as 'duine ná géileann do chreideamh na haicme creidimh dar díobh an leanbh san' in s51(1)(a) of the Public Assistance Act, 1939. 'Members of regular armed forces who profess allegiance to a Government' is translated as 'Comhaltáí d'fhórsaí armtha rialta a dhearbhaíonn go bhfuil siad faoi ghéillsine ag Rialtas' in s3 of Article 13 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962. Note, finally, that 'has amongst its professed objects, or advocates or encourages, or professes to encourage the overthrow by force of the Government of Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'go bhfuil ar a chuspóirí admhuithe no go molann sé no go misníonn sé no go ndeir sé go misníonn sé Rialtas Shaorstáit Éireann do threascairt le láimh láidir' in s4(1) of the Public Safety Act, 1927.

don ord phoiblí Regarding the lenition of the adjective following a masculine noun in the dative singular, see the commentary on Article 45. 'If he is satisfied that it is in the interests of public order or security or safety to do so' is translated as 'más deimhin leis an Aire gur chóir déanamh amhlaidh ar mhaithe le dea-ord poiblí nó slándáil nó sábháilteacht' in s10(1) of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1988. See further the commentary on Article 38.3.1°.

Standardised Irish text

Ráthaítear do gach saoránach saoirse coinsiasa is saorhead admhála is cleachta creidimh, ach gan sin a dhul chun dochair don ord poiblí ná don mhoráltacht phoiblí.

Direct translation

Déantar, faoi réir an oird phoiblí agus na moráltachta poiblí, saoirse coinsiasa agus saoradhmáil agus saorchleachtadh creidimh<sup>1</sup> a ráthú do gach saoránach.

Variants

- 1 'saoirse admhála agus cleachta creidimh'

ARTICLE 44.2.2° AIRTEAGAL 44.2.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ráthaíonn an Stát gan aon chóras creidimh a mhaoiniú.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State guarantees not to endow any system of faith/religion.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State guarantees not to endow any religion.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Any religion' is expressed as 'aon chóras creidimh' ('any system of faith/religion') in the Irish text.

Note the following in Article 8 of the 1922 Constitution:

... and no law may be made either directly or indirectly to endow any religion .... agus ní déantar aon dlí go díreach ná go mí-dhireach chun maoin do bhronna ar aon chreideamh.

Commentary

aon chóras creidimh 'Córas' is translated as 'system' in Ó Donaill, where 'córas craolacháin' and 'córas oideachais' are translated respectively as 'broadcasting system' and 'educational system'. Dinneen translates 'córas' as 'legal or customary system; policy; organisation', citing 'córas béascna, social system' and 'córas eaglasta, ecclesiastical system'. 'Córus' is based on 'cóir' and literally means 'justness, rightness, proper arrangement, propriety', according to DIL, with the sense of 'prescribed arrangement, regulation(s), rightness, law, due' in legal contexts. Fergus Kelly translates 'córús' as 'regulation' in his Guide to Early Irish Law, translating the title of an early Irish law-tract dealing mainly with the mutual obligations of clergy and laity, 'Córús Béscnaí', as 'the regulation of proper behaviour' (p. 267) and translates 'Córús Aithní', the title of a short Old Irish text on deposits, as 'regulation of deposit' (p. 278). DIL cites 'cin fis corusa creitme' ('... religious rite, system') from a commentary on an early Irish law-tract, along with 'inda lemm, romba sí córus na creitme' ([I thought] that that was an integral part of the faith'), said by Oengus to St Patrick when injured by the saint's crozier during his baptism, from the Tripartite Life of Patrick, composed at the end of the ninth or beginning of the tenth century.

a mhaoiniú 'Maoinigh' is translated as 'finance, endow' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ospidéal a mhaoiniú, to endow a hospital'. Dinneen translates 'maoinighim' as 'I make rich, improve, finance, give gifts to'. The meaning of the earlier 'mainigid' is uncertain, according to DIL, where it is translated as 'perhaps treats as a "main", treasures, hence keeps, conserves, takes care of, maintains?' Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú refers to a note on this term by Damian McManus in Ériu xxxvi (1985).

'Endowment policy' is translated as 'polasaí dearlaice' in Téarmaí Dlí. De Bhaldraithe translates 'endow' as 'bronnaim (someone with something, rud ar dhuine), dearlacaim', translating 'he was endowed with great talents' as 'bhronn Dia buanna móra air'. The verb 'dearlaic' is translated as 'grant, bestow' in Ó Dónaill, the noun 'dearlaic' being translated as 'endowment'.

'Establish and endow ... chairs and lectureships in any university' is translated as 'cathaoireacha agus léachtóireachtaí a bhunú agus a dhearlacadh in aon ollscoil' in s8(a) of the Turf Development Act, 1990, with 'cathaoireacha agus léachtóireachtaí a bhunú agus a mhaoiniú' being found in s1 of the Turf Development Act, 1958. Note that 'endowed schools' is translated as 'scoileanna fé bhronntanas' in s1(v) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, with 'the Office of the Commissioners for managing certain School Endowments in Ireland' being translated as 'Oifig na gCoimisinéirí chun Brontanaisí áirithe Scoile in Éirinn do bhainisti' in Schedule B (No. 54) to the Appropriation Act, 1923.

Commenting on 'a dhearlacadh' translating 'to endow' in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'dearlaic' is not a very common word but on the evidence it means 'grant, bestow', as we see in Ó Dónaill above. Professor Ó Murchú refers to 'dearlaig dod shearbhfhoghantaibh an tsíothcháin' from Parrthas an Anma (l. 4170), printed in 1645. 'Aon chreideamh a dhearlacadh' would have the same sense as 'aon chreideamh a bhronnadh', according to Professor Ó Murchú, who recommends maintaining 'a mhaoiniú' in the direct translation below.

Direct translation

Ráthaíonn an Stát gan aon chreideamh a mhaoiniú<sup>1</sup>.

Variant

<sup>1</sup> 'a dhearlacadh'

ARTICLE 44.2.3<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 44.2.3<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní cead don Stát neach a chur faoi mhíchumas ar bith ná aon idirdhealú a dhéanamh mar gheall ar chreideamh nó admháil chreidimh nó céim i gcúrsaí creidimh.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State is not permitted to put a person under any disability nor to make any distinction because of faith/religion or profession of faith or standing in matters of faith.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall not impose any disabilities or make any discrimination on the ground of religious profession, belief or status.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Religious profession, belief or status' is expressed as 'creideamh nó admháil chreidimh nó céim i gcúrsaí creidimh' (religion/faith or profession of faith or standing in matters of faith) in the Irish text, 'creideamh' expressing both 'belief' and, in the genitive singular, 'religious'.
- 'Impose any disabilities' is expressed in the Irish text as 'neach a chur faoi mhíchumas', 'put a person under disability'.
- 'Shall not' is expressed as 'Ní cead' ('It is not permitted') in the Irish text, as in some other Articles.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 209, reports as follows on reference made to this Article in the courts:

In Quinn's Supermarket Ltd. v Attorney General ([1972] IR 1) Walsh J said it was quite clear from the Irish text ("ní cead don Stát neach a chur faoi mhíchumas ar bith...") that this provision was "aimed at preventing the imposition of a personal, or perhaps even a corporate, disability". It was argued in this case that the discrimination forbidden by the sub-section should be construed as if it read "discrimination against", but Walsh J rejected this submission, pointing to the general formulation of the Irish version "ná aon idirdhealú a dhéanamh" in confirmation of his view. In the High Court McLoughlin J had cited the Irish text for the same purpose. In M. v An Bord Uchtála ([1975] IR 81; (1975) 109 ILTR 62) Pringle J cited from Walsh J in the Quinn's Supermarket case the passages just referred to. In Mulloy v Minister for Education ([1975] IR 88), where the plaintiff objected to a regulation which excluded him from an increment benefit because the service concerned had been given while he was not a layman (but a priest), Butler J considered the word "céim" in order to elucidate the word "status", and, in concluding that "status" was "something other than a question of religious profession or religious belief", observed that this difference is even more clearly stressed in the Irish text where the disjunctive "nó" is repeated, viz. "... ná aon idirdhealú do dhéanamh mar gheall ar chreideamh nó admháil chreidimh nó céim i gcúrsaibh creidimh".

Note that Article 8 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

... or impose any disability on account of religious belief or religious status .... ná aon mhí-ábaltacht do chur air mar gheall ar a thuairim ná a chéim a gcúrsaí creidimh.

Commentary

faoi mhíchumas 'Míchumas' is translated as 'disability' and 'disablement' in Téarmaí Dlí, with the verb 'míchumasaim' translated as 'I disable'. Ó Dónaill gives 'disability' as the secondary sense of 'míchumas', preceded by the abbreviation for 'Jurisprudence', the primary sense being 'inability, incapacity; disablement'. Dinneen translates 'mí-chumas' as 'incapacity, inability'. It is a compound of 'cumas' and the perjorative particle 'mí-', this particle possibly originally a comparative 'mis' ('less'), akin to the second syllable of Latin 'nimis' – see DIL s.v. 'mí-'.

See the commentary on Articles 16.1.1° and 16.1.3° where 'míchumas' expresses 'disability', as in the current Article. We see above that 'mí-ábaltacht' translates 'disability' in the 1922 Constitution, with 'Grád na mí-ábaltachta do mheas' translating 'Assessment of degree of disability' in the Margin Title of s8 of the Army Pensions Act, 1927. 'The said Governing Body shall in respect of the executive of such authorised race-course take such disciplinary action and impose such disabilities and penalties as they consider proper' is translated as 'déanfaidh an Comhlucht Rialúcháin sin maidir le feadhmannach an rás-chúrsa údaraithe sin pé gníomh smachta do chur i bhfeidhm agus pé éagumais agus pionóis d'fhorchur is dóigh leo is ceart' in s40(4) of the Racing Board and Racecourses Act, 1945. 'The Executive Committee of the Club may take or authorise the taking of disciplinary action, including the imposition of disabilities in relation to participating in greyhound breeding' is translated as 'Féadfaidh Coiste Feidhmiúcháin an Chlub gníomh araíonachta a dhéanamh, nó a údarú go ndéanfar gníomh araíonachta, ar a n-áirítear míchumais a fhorchur, maidir le bheith páirteach i siolrú' in s15 of the Schedule to the Greyhound Industry Act, 1958. Finally, 'and the cemetery shall be held by the Company freed and discharged from all ecclesiastical, charitable and other Trusts, uses, purposes, obligations, disabilities, and restrictions whatsoever' is translated as 'agus teachtfaidh an Chuideachta an reilig saor agus urscaoilte ó gach Iontaobhas, úsáid, críoch, oibleagáid, míchumas, agus srian ar bith, eaglasta, carthanúil agus eile' in s4 of the Huguenot Cemetery Dublin (Peter Street) Act, 1966.

Commenting on the direct translation below of 'The State shall not impose any disabilities' as 'Ní dhéanfaidh an Stát aon mhíchumais a fhorchur', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'forchur' is not sufficiently rooted (Ó Dónaill does not have it as a headword, for example) that it can be so readily used. Professor Ó Murchú recommends returning to 'aon mhíchumas a chur ar neach' or 'míchumas a chur ar aon duine'.

mar gheall ar chreideamh See the commentary on Articles 27.3 and 40.4.2° where 'ábhar' and 'foras' respectively express 'ground'. 'On ground of hardship' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'mar gheall ar cruatan' in translations for the Department of Justice, with 'de dheascaibh droch-shláinte' translating 'on the grounds of ill-health' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1924, p. 918. 'And to which the parent of the child does not object on religious grounds to send the child' is translated as 'agus ná fuil tuismitheoir an leinbh, ar chúiseanna creidimh, i gcoinnibh an leanbh do chur chúichi' in s4(2)(c) of the School Attendance Act, 1926. Finally, as regards 'religious' in early Acts, 'any solemn declaration which under this Act may be made by any person who states he has no religious belief' is translated as 'aon fhaisnéis sholamanta a fhéadfadh éinne adeir ná fuil aon chreideamh aige a dhéanamh fén Acht so' in s3(28) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

'On ground of' is translated as 'ar fhoras' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'On the ground that he has no religious belief or that the taking of an oath is contrary to his religious belief' is translated as 'ar an bhforas nach bhfuil aon chreideamh aige nó go bhfuil sé in aghaidh a chreidimh mionn a ghlacadh' in s39(2) of the First Schedule to the European Assembly Elections Act, 1977. Looking specifically at 'religious', 'would be contrary to his religious beliefs or principles' is translated as 'dá mbeadh sé contrártha do chreideamh nó do phrionsabail creidimh an duine sin' in s2(4) of the Meath (Homes for Incapacitated Persons) Act, 1964. 'A juror who states that he has a religious belief but that he is neither a Christian or a Jew' is translated as 'coisteoir adeir go bhfuil creideamh aige ach nách Críostaí ná Giúdach é' in s53(4) of the Juries Act, 1927. Finally, 'Protection of the religious creed of children' is translated as 'Creideamh leanbhaí do chaomhadh' in the Margin Title of s51 of the Public Assistance Act, 1939.

Commenting on 'ar fhoras admhála creidimh' in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that, like 'forchuir' above, this use of 'foras' in the sense of 'cúis' is not sufficiently known to enable one to readily make sense of this phrase; Ó Dónaill only recognises it in the structure 'ar an bhforas go'. Again Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends returning to 'mar gheall ar' or using 'ar bhonn' as an alternative. Professor Ó Murchú recommends 'ar bhonn creidimh, nó creideamh a admháil, nó ar bhonn stádais creidimh' as a translation of the final clause.

céim i gcúrsaí creidimh 'Degree' and 'rank' are two of the secondary senses of 'céim' in Ó Dónaill, the principal one being 'step'. In the sense of 'rank', Ó Dónaill cites 'do chéim sa saol, one's station in life'. Dinneen includes 'grade; degree (in education, physics, navigation, etc.); ... position, dignity, fame, rank' among the senses of 'céim'. 'Céim', verbal noun of 'cingid', is cited by DIL in the sense of 'dignity, rank, degree' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, where 'hí céim' glosses Latin 'in gradum dignitatis'.

We see above how 'céim' translates 'status' in this context in the 1922 Constitution, with 'céim' translating 'status' in Iris an Phuist, 2/11/27, also. In s48 of the Local Government Act, 1925, 'shall not be deemed ... to deprive him of the status of a pensionable officer' is translated as 'Ní tuigfear ... status oifigigh inphinsin do bheith bainte d'oifigeach', with 'professional status or qualification' being translated as 'status no cáilíocht ghairme do bheith aige'. 'Where a person is treated, by reference to his marital or family status, less favourably than a person of the other sex with the same status' is translated as 'má dhéileáiltear le duine faoi threoir a stádais phósta nó teaghlai, le níos lú fabhair ná mar a dhéileáiltear le duine den ghnéas eile a bhfuil an stádas céanna aige' in s67(3)(b) of the Pensions Act, 1990, for example. 'Any body of persons having consultative status with the United Nations Organisation' is translated as '(maidir le) haon chomhlacht daoine ag a bhfuil stádas comhairleach le hEagraíocht na Náisiún Aontaithe' in s20 of the Finance Act, 1973. The 'International Health Bodies (Corporate Status) Act, 1971' is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht um Chomhlachtaí Idirnáisiúnta Sláinte (Stádas Corpraithe), 1971', with 'the Married Women's Status Act, 1957' being cited in Irish as 'an tAcht um Stádas Ban Pósta, 1957'. Finally, 'to imperil the neutral status of the State' is translated as 'is trúig baoil do neodracht an Stáit' in the Sixth Schedule to the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) (No. 2) Act, 1940.

Note finally that 'stádas sibhialta' is cited in Ó Dónaill, where it is translated as 'civil status'.

creidimh Regarding 'belief' in the Acts, 'That no minister ... shall preach maintain propagate or teach therein any doctrine or practice contrary to the statement of belief contained in the constitution for the time being' is translated as 'ná déanfaidh aon mhinistéir ... aon teagasc ná cleachta do sheanmóin, do chraobhscaoile, do theagasc ná seasamh leis a bheidh contrártha don ráiteas creidimh a bheidh sa chóru de thurus na huairé' in the Preamble to the Methodist Church in Ireland Act, 1928. See the commentary on Articles 42.1 and 44.1 regarding 'creideamh'.

ní cead One of the ways 'shall not' is expressed in the Constitution – see the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

neach See the commentary on Article 40.4.2°.

idirdealú See the commentary on Article 40.6.2°.

Direct translation

Ní dhéanfaidh an Stát aon mhíchumais<sup>1</sup> a fhorchur<sup>2</sup> ná ní dhéanfaidh sé aon idirdhealú ar fhoras creidimh, admhála creidimh nó stádais creidimh<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'aon mhíchumas'
- 2 'Ní fhorchuirfidh an Stát aon mhíchumais', 'Ní dhéanfaidh an Stát aon mhíchumais a chur ar neach / ar aon duine'
- 3 'ar bhonn creidimh, nó creideamh a admháil, nó ar bhonn stádais creidimh', 'ar fhoras admhála creidimh, creidimh nó stádais creidimh'

ARTICLE 44.2.4° AIRTEAGAL 44.2.4°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Reachtaíocht lena gcuirtear cúnaimh Stáit ar fáil do scoileanna ní cead idirdhealú a dhéanamh inti idir scoileanna atá faoi bhainistí aicmí creidimh seachas a chéile ná í do dhéanamh dochair do cheart aon linbh chun scoil a gheibheann airgead poiblí a fhreastal gan teagasc creidimh sa scoil sin a fhreastal.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Legislation by which State aid is provided for schools it is not permitted to discriminate in it between schools which are under the management of some religious classes rather than others / one or other religious group or for it to do harm to the right of any child to attend a school which gets public money and not attend religious instruction in that school.

ENGLISH TEXT

Legislation providing State aid for schools shall not discriminate between schools under the management of different religious denominations, nor be such as to affect prejudicially the right of any child to attend a school receiving public money without attending religious instruction at that school.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Different religious denominations' is expressed as 'aicmí creidimh seachas a chéile' ('some religious classes rather than others') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Legislation .. shall not discriminate' is expressed in the Irish text as 'ní cead idirdhealú a dhéanamh inti', 'it is not permitted to discriminate in it (legislation)', with 'shall not' being expressed as 'ní cead' ('it is not permitted'), as in the previous subsection.
- 3 '(Legislation ... shall not) ... be such as to affect prejudicially' is expressed as 'í do dhéanamh dochair do', '(Legislation ... shall not) ... do harm to', in the Irish text.

Note that Article 8 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

... or affect prejudicially the right of any child to attend a school receiving public money without attending the religious instruction at the school, or make any discrimination as respects State aid between schools under the management of different religious denominations .... ná baint go díobhálach ó cheart aon linbh dul chun scoile atá ag fáil airgid phuiblí i dtaobh gan é bheith láithreach ag an dteagasc creidimh sa scoil sin, ná chun aon deifríocht do dhéanamh i dtaobh cabhrach Stáit idir scoileanna fé bhainisteoireacht lucht chreidimh dheifrúla.

Commentary

aicmí creidimh 'Aicme' is translated as 'genus, class', 'family, tribe' and 'set, clique' in Ó Dónaill, as 'a sort or kind, a class, a family, a race, a tribe; in a deprecating sense, a gang; a battalion' in Dinneen and as 'race, family, tribe; genus, class' in DIL – see the commentary on Article 40.6.2°. 'Denominaton', on the other hand, is translated as 'ainmniúchán' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Roinn (creidimh)' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating '(religious) denomination' in translations for the Department of Industry and Commerce. 'A person in Holy Orders or a regular minister of any religious denomination or community' is translated as '(do) dhuine in Ord Beannaithe nó do mhinister rialta de chuid aon sainaicme nó cuallacht crábhaidh' in s19 of the Housing (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1979. 'A person who does not profess the creed of the religious denomination to which such child belongs' is translated as 'duine ná géilleann do chreideamh na haicme creidimh dar díobh an leanbh san' in s51(1)(a) of the Public Assistance Act, 1939, with 'duine ar bith d'aon aicme Phrotastúnach' translating 'no person of any Protestant denomination' in s4 of the Erasmus Smith Schools Act, 1938. We find 'an aicme creidimh' translating 'the religious denomination' in s6 of the Marriages Act, 1972, for example. 'Sainaicme creidimh' would appear to have been introduced by the Local Elections (Petitions and Disqualifications) Act, 1974, in s24(a) of which 'a minister of any religious denomination' is translated as 'ministir d'aon sainaicme creidimh'.

seachas a chéile Ó Dónaill cites 'ní mholaim aon cheann acu seachas a chéile, I don't recommend any one of them more than another' and Dinneen cites 'is deacair ceann do thoghadh seachas a chéile, it is hard to choose between them'.

Looking at 'different' in early Acts, 'Separate orders may be made at different times under this section for the postponement of the statutory elections to different classes of councils or other local bodies and different dates may be prescribed for the holding of such postponed elections' is translated as 'Féadfar ordúithe ar leithligh do dhéanamh ar uairibh éagsúla fén alt so chun na toghacháin reachtúla chun saghasanna éagsúla comhairlí no cóluchtaí áitiúla eile do chur ar ath-ló agus féadfar dátaí éagsúla do cheapa chun comóra na dtoghachán san a cuirfear ar ath-ló' in s2(2) of the Local Elections (Postponement) Act, 1922. 'Separate ballot papers of different and distinctive colours' is translated as 'páipéirí ballóide fé leith agus dath so-aitheanta fé leith ortha' in s5 of the Seventh Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923, with 'Voting in different districts' being translated as 'Vótáil i gceanntair dheifriúla' in the Margin Title of s23 of the First Schedule.

cúnamh Stáit 'Cúnamh' is translated as 'help' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'cúnamh airgid, financial help' and 'cúnamh difhostaíochta, unemployment assistance'. 'Congnamh airgid' is translated as 'subsidy' in Dinneen, who translates 'congnamh dlíghidh' as 'legal assistance'. 'Congnam' is the verbal noun of 'con-gní', and is translated as 'act of helping, aiding, assisting; help, aid' in DIL, where 'cunum béil 7 láimhe' ('help in word and deed') is cited. Examples of the verb 'con-gní' ('helps, assists') are cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses onwards.

'Cabhair agus cognamh' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'aid and assistance' in translations for the Revenue Commissioners, with 'Every person who shall ... aid or assist in making any signal' being translated as 'Gach éinne ... a chuideoidh no a chabharóidh chun go dtabharfar aon chomhartha' in s33 of the Fisheries Act, 1925. 'The basic legislative framework to ensure that state aid and trade policy is fair and equitable' is translated as 'gréasán bunaidh, reachtaíochta, a áiritheoidh go mbeidh beartas chúnamh stáit agus trádála cóir, cothrom ar fáil' in the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97, p. 7.

faoi bhainistí See the commentary on Article 10.3 regarding 'bainistí'. 'In the case of a harbour under the management of Iarnród Éireann-Irish Rail' is translated as 'i gcás cuain faoi bhainisteoireacht Iarnród Éireann-Irish Rail' in s3(1)(e) of the Oil Pollution of the Sea (Civil Liability and Compensation) Act, 1988. 'The Office of the Registrar to the Chief Justice shall be under the management of the Registrar to the Chief Justice' is translated as 'Beidh Oifig an Chláirathóra don Phrímh-Bhreitheamh fé bhainistí an Chláirathóra don Phrímh-Bhreitheamh' in s19 of the Court Officers Act, 1926.

do dhéanamh dochair See the commentary on Article 44.2.1<sup>o</sup> regarding 'dochar'. Ó Dónaill translates 'dochar a dhéanamh do dhuine, do rud' as 'to harm someone, something'. DIL cites 'bean do ní mo dhochor' ('woman who causes my misery') s.v. 'dochar'. 'A dhineann dochar do ...' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official

Terms as translating 'affecting injuriously' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health. See the commentary on Article 28.3.3<sup>o</sup> regarding 'affect', expressed in that Article by the phrase 'dífear a dhéanamh do'. 'No action, prosecution ... shall abate or be discontinued, annulled or prejudicially affected by the repeal of the Act of 1855' is translated as 'Ní dhéanfidh athghairm Acht 1855 maolú, scur, nea-mbríochaint, ná oibriú docharach ar aon aicsean, cúiseamh ...' in s24 of the Dundalk Harbour and Port Act, 1925. In s3(b) of the Foreshore (Amendment) Act, 1992, 'has affected or is likely to affect prejudicially any flora or fauna of such area' is translated as 'go ndearna nó gur dócha go ndéanfaidh ... dochar d'aon flora nó fauna de chuid an limistéir nó na limistéir sin'. 'An appropriation shall not be made under this section so as to affect prejudicially any specific devise or bequest' is translated as 'ní dhéanfar leithreasú faoin alt seo ar dhóigh ba dhochar d'aon réadtiomnú nó tiomnú sonrach' in s55(2) of the Succession Act, 1965. 'Has affected or is likely to affect prejudicially any public rights' is translated as 'go ndearna san no gur dócha go ndéanfaidh dochar do chearta puiblí ar bith' in s6(2) of the Foreshore Act, 1933. Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where 'affect prejudicially' was translated as 'a dhéanfaidh difear docharach do', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommended the more straightforward phrase 'a rachaidh chun dochair do'.

a fhreastal 'Freastalaím' is translated as 'I attend' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'freastal' is translated as 'attendance'. Ó Dónaill cites 'an scoil a fhreastal, to attend school' and 'freastal ar léachtaí, to attend lectures' as examples of 'freastail', 'attend', in the sense of 'be present at'. Dinneen gives 'I attend, as at a class, etc.' as one of the senses of 'freastalaím'. This sense does not appear to be cited in DIL s.v. 'frestlaid', translated as (a) 'attends on, ministers to; entertains' and (b) 'transferred of receiving or encountering an attack, enemy'. 'Frestal', upon which this verb is based, is cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles in the sense of 'receiving (as a guest), greeting, welcoming'.

teagasc creidimh 'Teagasc' is translated as 'instructions' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'faoi theagasc' is translated as 'instructed by' and 'teagascáim' is translated as 'I instruct (counsel, etc.)'. 'Teagasc' is translated as 'teaching, instruction' by Ó Dónaill, who cites 'teagasc ábhair, teaching of a subject', and as 'body of teaching; doctrine, precept', citing 'teagasc na hEaglaise, the teaching of the Church' and 'An Teagasc Críostaí, Christian doctrine; catechism'. Dinneen also cites 'An Teagasc Críostaidhe, the Christian Doctrine, the Catechism', translating 'teagasc' as 'act of teaching or instructing, directing; teaching, doctrine, moral teaching, counsel, direction ...'. DIL refers to Ó Heoghusa's An Teagasc Críostaidhe ('The Christian Doctrine, Catechism'), published in 1611, s.v. 'teosc', a verbal noun formation from 'to-in-com-sech'.

'Teagasc' translates 'instruction' in Iris an Phoist, 1923, p. 263. 'Teagasc chreidimh' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'religious instruction' in translations for the Department of Education. 'Provided also that in each of the said Schools reasonable opportunities shall be afforded during the time allocated to religious instruction to enable every pupil to receive such religious instruction as may be provided by the Church to which he belongs' is translated as 'Ar choinníoll fós go dtabharfar caoi réasúnta i ngach Scoil fé leith acu san i rith an ama bheidh ceaptha i gcóir teagaisc chreidimh chun a chur ar chumas gach mic léighinn an teagasc creidimh san d'fháil a bheidh curtha ar fáil ag an Eaglais le n-a mbaineann sé' in s4 of the Erasmus Smith Schools Act, 1938, with 'including instructing in Protestant doctrine' being translated as 'le n-a n-áirmhítear múineadh teagaisc Phrotastúnaigh'.

a gheibheann This is a variant form of the third person singular, present tense, of 'faigheann', the official standard form being 'a fhaigheann'.

idirdhealú See the commentary on Article 40.6.2°.

Standardised Irish text

Reachtaíocht lena gcuirtear cúnaimh Stáit ar fáil do scoileanna ní cead idirdhealú a dhéanamh inti idir scoileanna atá faoi bhainistí aicmí creidimh seachas a chéile ná í a dhéanamh dochair do cheart aon linbh chun scoil a flaigheann airgead poiblí a fhreastal gan teagasc creidimh sa scoil sin a fhreastal.

Direct translation

Ní dhéanfaidh reachtaíocht lena gcuirtear cúnaimh Stáit ar fáil do scoileanna idirdhealú idir scoileanna faoi bhainisteoireacht sainaicmí éagsúla creidimh,<sup>1</sup> ná ní reachtaíocht í de chineál<sup>2</sup> a rachaidh chun dochair<sup>3</sup> do cheart aon linbh scoil a mbeidh airgead poiblí á fháil aici a fhreastal gan freastal ar theagasc creidimh sa scoil sin.

Variants

- 1 'Ní dhéanfar idirdhealú idir scoileanna faoi bhainisteoireacht sainaicmí creidimh éagsúla le reachtaíocht lena gcuirtear cúnaimh ar fáil do scoileanna.'
- 2 'ní hí an cineál í, 'den chineál', 'ní bheidh sí ina reachtaíocht de chineál', 'ní reachtaíocht a bheidh inti de chineál'
- 3 'a dhéanfaidh dochair', 'a dhéanfaidh difear dochrach'

ARTICLE 44.2.5° AIRTEAGAL 44.2.5°

TÉACS GAELGE

Tá sé de cheart ag gach aicme chreidimh a ngnóthaí féin a bhainistí, agus maoin, idir sho-aistrithe agus do-aistrithe, a bheith dá gcuid féin acu, agus í a fháil agus a riaradh, agus fundúireachtaí chun críocha creidimh is carthanachta a chothabháil.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every religious grouping has the right to manage its own affairs, and to have property, both movable and immovable, of its own, and to get it and administer it, and to maintain foundations for religious and charitable purposes.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every religious denomination shall have the right to manage its own affairs, own, acquire and administer property, movable and immovable, and maintain institutions for religious or charitable purposes.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'For religious or charitable purposes' is expressed in the Irish text as 'chun críocha creidimh is carthanachta', 'for religious and charitable purposes'.
- 2 'To own property' is expressed as 'maoin ... a bheith dá gcuid féin acu' ('to have property of their own') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Shall have' is expressed as 'Tá ...', 'Has', in the Irish text.
- 4 'Its own affairs' is expressed as 'a ngnóthaí féin' ('their own affairs') in the Irish text, following general Irish usage of the plural in referring to a group noun.
- 5 'Property, movable and immovable' is expressed as 'maoin, idir sho-aistrithe agus do-aistrithe' ('property, both movable and immovable').
- 6 'Institutions' is expressed as 'fundúireachtaí' ('foundations') in the Irish text, as we saw earlier.
- 7 As in the foregoing subsection, 'religious denomination' is expressed as 'aicme chreidimh' ('religious grouping') in the Irish text.

Commentary

a bheith dá gcuid féin acu 'A bheith aige dá chuid féin' expresses 'the private ownership of' in Article 43.1.1°. Looking at 'own' in early translations, 'Along the quays at present owned or occupied by the Commissioners' is translated as 'fan na gcéibheanna atá dá gcuid féin no ar seilbh ag na Coimisinéirí fé láthair' in s93(2) of the Dundalk Harbour and Port Act, 1925, with 'other property now owned by A.G. Williamson' being translated as '(ar) an maoin eile is le A.G. Williamson anois' in s93. 'Cur ar a gcumas ... do bheith dá gcuid féin acu' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'entitling them to own' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1927, p. 162.

'And in exercise of the powers by the said Acts ... conferred has constructed owns maintains and works tramways' is translated as 'agus, i bhfeidhmiú na gcomhacht a bronntar leis na hAchtanna ... sin, gur dhin sí, go bhfuil dá cuid féin aice, go gcimeádann sí i dtreo agus go n-oibríonn sí trambhealaí' in the Preamble to the Dublin United Tramways (Lucan Electric Railways) Act, 1927. In s46 of the Schedule to the Corporation Tax Act, 1976, 'if the seller had continued to own the property' is translated as 'dá leanadh an díoltóir de bheith ina úinéir ar an maoin'. See further the commentary on Article 43.1.1° and on 45.2.ii where 'dilse' expresses 'ownership'.

a ngnóthaí féin 'Áitreabh gnó' and 'ráiteas gnóthaí' are translated respectively as 'business premises' and 'statement of affairs' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'do ghnó(thaí) a dhéanamh' as 'to attend to one's business, to one's affairs', also citing 'déan do ghnó(thaí) duit féin, mind your own business' – see the commentary on Articles 8.3 and 18.7.1° where this headword expresses respectively 'purpose' and 'interest'.

Looking at early translations, 'the liquidation of his affairs by arrangement' is translated as 'glana-suas a ghnótha tré shocrú' in s7(5) of the Intoxicating Liquor (General) Act, 1924. 'Cúrsaí' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'affairs' in a Cover of an Official Report of a Dáil Debate. 'Where a solicitor becomes of unsound mind or incapable of managing his own affairs' is translated as 'I gcás atur nae d'éirí mí-mheabhrach nó neamhinniúil ar a ghnó féin a bhainistí' in s61(2) of the Solicitors Act, 1954. Note that 'Statement of company's affairs to be filed in court' is translated as 'Ráiteas ar chúrsaí na cuideachta a bheith le comhdú sa chúirt' in the Margin Title of s224 of the Companies Act, 1963.

idir sho-aistrithe agus do-aistrithe 'Idir bheag is mhór' is cited in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil as an illustration of lenition of nouns after 'idir' when 'counting' is involved (see s4(c) of the chapter headed 'Séimhiú and Urú' [Lenition and Eclipsis]).

'So-aistrithe' is translated as 'easy to move; easy to transfer, to translate' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'do-aistrithe' as 'immovable, untransferable; untranslatable; inalienable'. 'Do-aistrithe' is translated as 'immovable' in Dinneen. 'Or any other property of any nature or kind, moveable or immovable, public or private, including standing trees and crops' is translated as 'no d'aon mhaoin d'aon tsórt no saghas so-aistrithe no do-aistrithe, puiblí no príobháideach, maraon le crainn agus barraí ag fás' in s9 of the Schedule to the Public Safety (Powers of Arrest and Detention) Temporary Act, 1924. 'To sell on a wheeled and movable stall, barrow, cart' is translated as 'do dhíol, ar stalla, ar bharr, ar chart, no ar fheithicil eile, atá ar rothaí agus inaistír' in s4(2)(a) of the Street-Trading Act, 1926, with 'the fixed and moveable machinery, plant, equipment, furniture and other chattels of the said premises' being translated as 'an mheaisinteacht, an gléasra, na córacha, an troscán agus an áirnéis eile, do-ghluaiste agus so-ghluaiste' in s2 of the Schedule to the Creamery Act, 1928. Finally, 'The same applies if movable and immovable property are covered by the same insurance policy' is translated as 'Is é an dála céanna é má chumhdaítear maoin shochorraithe agus maoin dhochorraithe leis an bpolasaí céanna árachais' in Article 9 of the First Schedule to the Jurisdiction of Courts and Enforcement of Judgements (European Communities) Act, 1988.

a chothabháil 'Ordú cothabhála' is translated as 'maintenance order' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Cothabháil' is translated as 'sustenance, maintenance' in Ó Dónaill, who refers the reader to 'cothú', verbal noun of 'cothaigh', for the standard form of the secondary sense of 'cothabháil'. 'Cothaigh' has the sense of 'maintain; hold fast, stay', along with the primary sense of 'feed; nourish, sustain', according to Ó Dónaill, who cites 'an cath a chothú go hoíche, to keep up the battle until nightfall'. 'Cothabháil' is translated as 'act of supplying, feeding, maintaining' in Dinneen. 'Cothaigid' is based on 'coth', 'food, sustenance', according to DIL, where this verb is translated as (a) 'supports, sustains, maintains, preserves' and (b) 'feeds, nourishes'.

'Authorising the Board to construct, maintain and operate, for the purposes of the performance by the Board of any of its functions ... the transport works' is translated as 'á údarú don Bhord na hoibreacha iompair a luafar ann do dhéanamh, do chothabháil agus d'oibriú chun an Bord do chomhlíonadh aon choda dá fheadhmanna' in s31(1)(a) of the Electricity (Supply) (Amendment) Act, 1945. 'A mental hospital authority shall provide and maintain such other institutions and accommodations ...' is translated as 'cuirfidh údarás óspidéil mheabhair-ghalair ar fáil agus cothabháil pé forais agus cóiríocht' in s26 of the Mental Treatment Act, 1945. See further the commentary on Article 12.8 where 'bheith i mo thaca agus i mo dhídin' expresses 'maintain'.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'a chothú' is more recognisable, particularly in the sense here.

a riaradh 'Riaradh' is given as a variant form of 'riar', verbal noun of the verb 'riar', 'to administer, manage', according to Ó Dónaill, who cites 'gnó a riar, to manage a business'. 'Riaraim' is translated as 'I administer (estate, justice, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí and as 'I serve, entertain, distribute, allot, divide (amongst, ar), allocate, administer, manage, rule, dispose, reduce to submission, please or comply with (do); submit to, obey' in Dinneen. 'Riaraid' is translated as (a) 'does the will of, serves' and (b) 'ministers to, entertains, supplies' in DIL, this latter sense being the general sense in late literature. See the commentary on Article 28.4.2°.

chun críocha carthanachta 'If the gain is applicable and applied for charitable purposes' is translated as 'más chun críocha carthanúla is inchaite agus a chaitear é' in s67(5)(a) of the Finance Act, 1990, with 'chun crícheanna déirciúla amháin' translating 'to charitable purposes only' in s9(b) of the Finance Act, 1923.

fundúireachtaí See the commentary on Article 42.4. Note that 'in close proximity to a place of worship, a religious institution, a school' is translated as 'ana-chomhgarach d'áit adhartha Dé, d'fhundúireacht chreidimh, do scoil' in s8(c) of the Betting Act, 1926.

Standardised Irish text

Tá sé de cheart ag gach aicme chreidimh a ngnóthaí féin a bhainistí, agus maoin, idir sho-aistrithe agus dho-aistrithe, a bheith dá gcuid féin acu, agus í a fháil agus a riar, agus fondúireachtaí chun críocha creidimh is carthanachta a chothabháil.

Direct translation

Beidh sé de cheart ag gach sainaicme creidimh a ngnóthaí féin a bhainistíú, maoin sho-aistrithe agus maoin dho-aistrithe<sup>2</sup> a bheith ar úinéireacht acu<sup>3</sup>, a fháil agus a riar, agus forais chun críocha creidimh agus carthanachta a chothabháil<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'a gnóthaí'
- 2 'maoin shochorraithe agus dhochorraithe'
- 3 'aici'
- 4 'a chothú'

ARTICLE 44.2.6<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 44.2.6<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní cead maoin aon aicme creidimh ná aon fhundúireachtaí oideachais a bhaint díobh ach amháin le haghaidh oibreacha riachtanacha chun áise poiblí, agus sin tar éis cúiteamh a íoc leo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

It is not permitted to take the property of any religious grouping or any educational foundations from them except for necessary works for public utility, and that after paying them compensation.

ENGLISH TEXT

The property of any religious denomination or any educational institution shall not be diverted save for necessary works of public utility and on payment of compensation.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The property ... shall not be diverted' is expressed in the Irish text as 'Ní cead maoin ... a bhaint díobh', 'The property shall not be taken from them'.
- 2 'And on payment of compensation' is expressed as 'agus sin tar éis cúiteamh a íoc leo' ('and that after paying them compensation') in the Irish text, which clause is preceded by a comma in that text alone.
- 3 'Institution' is expressed as 'fundúireachtaí' ('foundations') and, as in previous subsections, 'denomination' is expressed as 'aicme' ('class'/grouping), in the Irish text.
- 4 The Irish text again expresses 'shall not' by 'ní cead' ('it is not permitted').

The Attorney General's Committee on the Constitution (1968) commented as follows on this subsection (see the Report of the Constitution Review Group, May 1996, p. 376):

The word 'diverted' is a euphemism, and is neither a suitable word nor a good translation of the Irish 'a bhaint díobh', which is accurate and straightforward. 'Diversion' appears wider than 'taking from'. The two texts are not seriously inconsistent, however, and conflict could arise only if the property was clearly 'diverted for a necessary work of public utility', but not 'taken from' the institutions concerned. It is difficult to visualise any practical example of this conflict arising.

The Review Group agreed with the view expressed above to the effect that the word 'diverted' in the English language version did not correspond with the words 'a bhaint díobh' in the Irish language version, adding that 'in any event, the use of the word "diverted" in this context is euphemistic and unsuitable'. The Review Group accordingly recommended that 'diverted' be replaced by 'compulsorily acquired', stating that there was 'no need for a change in the Irish language version'.

Note that Article 8 of the 1922 Constitution concludes as follows:

... or divert from any religious denomination or any educational institution any of its property except for the purpose of roads, railways, lighting, water or drainage works or other works of public utility, and on payment of compensation .... ná chun aon chuid dá maoin do thógaint ó aon lucht creidimh ná ó aon fhundúireacht oideachais ach amháin chun bóithre, bóithre iarainn, oibreacha soluis, uisce no draeneála, no chun oibreacha eile d'úsáid phuibli, agus ar chúiteamh do dhíol.

Commentary

a bhaint díobh 'Take away from' and 'deprive of' are two of the secondary senses of 'bain de' given in Ó Dónaill (the primary sense being 'take off, remove'), citing respectively 'bain an scian den leanbh, take the knife from the child' and 'an tine, an solas, an ghrian, a bhaint de dhuine, to get between someone and the fire, the light, the sun'. Dinneen translates 'bainim de' as 'I remove, take away from' and DIL translates 'benaid de' as 'takes from', citing 'bensat a chroicend de' ('stripped his skin from him') from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, a manuscript compiled in 1411 or earlier.

'Make certain, by appropriate supervision, that nuclear materials are not diverted to purposes other than those for which they are intended' is translated as 'a dheimhniú, trí mhaoirseacht iomchuí, nach gcuirfear ábhair núicléacha chun críocha seachas na críocha atá ceaptha dóibh' in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 517), with 'either not effected or diverted from their proper use' being translated as 'agus nach ndearnadh amhlaidh ina thaobh nó nár cuireadh chun úsáide mar ba chuí' (p. 57), and 'special fissile materials are not diverted from their intended uses' being translated as '(nach ndéanfar) ... ábhair inscoilte speisialta a chlaonadh ó na húsáidí a ceapadh dóibh' (p. 559). 'Dig, break or otherwise temporarily close, cross, extend, divert or otherwise interfere with or alter any navigable waterway' is translated as 'aon uiscebhealach inseolta ... a thochailt, a bhriseadh nó a dhúnadh go sealadach ar aon slí eile, a thrasnú, a shineadh, a chlaonadh nó baint leo nó iad a athrú ar aon slí eile' in s18(1)(e) of the Fisheries Act, 1980. In s11(d) of the Arterial Drainage Act, 1925, 'and to divert, remove or otherwise interfere with any roads or bridges' is translated as 'agus chun bóithre no droichid do chasa no d'aistriú, no cur isteach ortha ar aon tslí eile'. Finally, 'Roads, sewers, watercourses, etc., may be stopped up, diverted or extended, etc.' is translated as 'Féadfar bóithre, camraí, cúrsaí uisce, etc., do stopa, do chlaona no do mhéadú, etc.' in the Margin Title of s38 of the Dundalk Harbour and Port Act, 1925.

Commenting on 'a chlaonadh' translating 'divert' in the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'divert' here means 'reallocate (especially money or resources)' and he doubts that would be understood from 'claonadh'. Professor Ó Murchú recommends 'a ghabháil uathu' or 'a shealbhú' as alternatives to 'a bhaint díobh', which would also suffice here.

chun áise poiblí 'Áis sealadach' is translated as 'temporary convenience' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Áis' is translated principally as 'convenience' in Ó Dónaill also, with 'device' being given as a secondary sense. Dinneen translates 'áis' as 'the middle prominent wicker-layer of a basket; what is convenient or can be held by the hand; a convenience, a useful article; in particular a trap', citing 'is mór an áis an bosca soin, that box is a very convenient article of furniture' and ‘áis mo chéille, the use of my senses’. See further the commentary on Article 42.4 where ‘áis’ expresses ‘facility’.

‘An Act to make provision for the execution by Local Authorities of works of public utility’ is translated as ‘Acht chun socrúithe do dhéanamh chun údaráis áitiúla do dhéanamh oibreacha fónais phuiblí’ in the Long Title of the Unemployment (Relief Works) Act, 1940. ‘Powers of executing public utility have been conferred ... on certain Local Authorities’ is translated as ‘gur bronnadh comhachta-anna ar Údaráis Áitiúla áirithe ... chun oibreacha úsáide puiblí do dhéanamh’ in the Preamble to the Local Authorities (Extension of Time) Act, 1923. ‘Not being a building society and not being a public utility society in existence at the commencement of this section’ is translated as ‘nach cumann foirgníochta agus nach cumann fónais phoiblí a bheidh ar marthain ar thosach feidhme an ailt seo’ in s13(2) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. ‘Public utility society’ is translated as ‘cumann maitheasa puiblí’ in s1 of the Housing Act, 1925. ‘Where electricity supplied by the Company to any person (other than an authorised undertaker or a public utility undertaker)’ is translated as ‘I gcás leictreachas a sholáthruíonn an Chuideachta d’éinne (nách gnóthaire údaruithe ná gnóthaire áisiúlachta puiblí)’ in s24(2) of the Dublin United Tramways (Lucan Electric Railways) Act, 1927. ‘Úsáid’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘utility’ in early Standing Orders (Private Business).

Commenting on the compact nature of ‘oibreacha riachtanacha fónais phoiblí’ in the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends ‘oibreacha riachtanacha le fónamh don phobal’ as an alternative.

tar éis cúiteamh a íoc ‘Without payment of compensation’ is translated as ‘gan cúiteamh a íoc’ in s55(6) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, with ‘for saving money for the payment of compensation for criminal injury’ being translated as ‘chun airgead do sholáthar chun cúiteamh i ndíobháil choiriúil d’íoc’ in s20 of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. Finally, ‘the compensation shall be a lump sum’ is translated as ‘cnap-shuim a bheidh mar chúiteamh’ in s4 of the Railways (Existing Officers and Servants) Act, 1926.

oibreacha riachtanacha ‘And other necessary works’ is translated as ‘agus oibreacha riachtanacha eile’ in s11(a) of the Industrial Alcohol Act, 1938, with ‘requiring the execution of all necessary works thereon’ being translated as ‘á éileamh go ndéanfar gach obair is gá ortha’ in s13(1)(a) of the Housing (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1931.

aon fhundúireachtaí Note that the form in the original text is ‘aon fhundúireachta’; while ‘fundúireachta’ expresses the nominative plural in the previous subsection, for example, it can also represent the genitive singular, and in fact would be the official standard form of the genitive singular today.

Standardised Irish text

Ní cead maoin aon aicme creidimh ná aon fhundúireachtaí oideachais a bhaint díobh ach amháin le haghaidh oibreacha riachtanacha chun áise poiblí, agus sin tar éis cúiteamh a íoc leo.

Direct translation

Ní dhéanfar maoin aon sainaicme creidimh nó aon fhorais oideachais a chlaonadh<sup>1</sup> ach amháin i gcomhair oibreacha riachtanacha fónais phoiblí<sup>2</sup> agus tar éis cúiteamh a íoc.

Variants

- 1 ‘a bhaint díobh’, ‘a ghabháil uathu’, ‘a shealbhú’
- 2 ‘oibreacha riachtanacha le fónamh don phobal’

DIRECTIVE PRINCIPLES OF SOCIAL POLICY BUNTREORACHA DO BHEARTAS CHOMHDHAONNACH

ARTICLE 45 AIRTEAGAL 45

TÉACS GAEILGE

BUNTREORACHA DO BHEARTAS CHOMHDHAONNACH
Is mar ghnáth-threoir don Oireachtas a ceapadh na bunrialacha do bheartas chomhdhaonnach atá leagtha amach san Airteagal seo. Is ar an Oireachtas amháin a bheidh sé de chúram na bunrialacha sin a fheidhmiú i ndéanamh dlíthe, agus ní intrialte ag Cúirt ar bith ceist i dtaobh an fheidhmithe sin faoi aon fhoráil d'fhorálacha an Bhunreachtá seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

BASIC DIRECTIONS FOR A SOCIETAL POLICY

It is as a general guide for the Oireachtas that the basic rules for a societal policy that are laid out in this Article were intended. The responsibility for applying those basic rules in making laws will be on the Oireachtas alone, and a question concerning that application cannot be tried by any Court under any one of the provisions of this Constitution.

ENGLISH TEXT

DIRECTIVE PRINCIPLES OF SOCIAL POLICY

The principles of social policy set forth in this Article are intended for the general guidance of the Oireachtas. The application of those principles in the making of laws shall be the care of the Oireachtas exclusively, and shall not be cognisable by any Court under any of the provisions of this Constitution.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Directive Principles' is expressed as 'Buntreoracha', 'Basic Directions', in the heading of the Irish text, with 'principles' being expressed as 'bunrialacha', 'basic rules', in the Article itself.
- 2 'And shall not be cognisable by any Court' is expressed as 'agus ní intrialte ag Cúirt ar bith ceist i dtaobh an fheidhmithe sin' ('and a question regarding that application cannot be tried by any Court') in the Irish text, 'intrialte' translating 'cognisable' in the Acts also.
- 3 'Are intended for the general guidance of the Oireachtas' is expressed as 'mar ghnáth-threoir don Oireachtas a ceapadh' ('were intended as a general guide for the Oireachtas') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Exclusive' is expressed as 'amháin', 'alone'/'only', in the Irish text, 'eisiatach' translating 'exclusive' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 5 'Of Social Policy' is expressed as 'do Bheartas Chomhdhaonnach' ('For Social Policy') in the Irish text; the compound expressing 'social', as we have seen in some earlier Articles, is a now of less frequent use and literally might be translated as '(relating to) human interaction', 'communal', with 'social' now generally being translated as 'sóisialach' or 'sóisialta'.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 209f., reports as follows on reference made to this Article in the courts:

In McGee v Attorney General ([1974] IR 284; [1975] 109 ILTR 29) O'Keeffe P said, in regard to the words "agus ní hintrialte ag cúirt ar bith ceist i dtaobh an fheidhmithe sin fá aon fhoráileamh d'fhoráiltibh an Bhunreachtá so", that this formulation:

"appears to exclude from the cognisance of the courts only questions as to the attempts of the Oireachtas to have regard to the principles laid down in the course of framing legislation, and it may be argued that it does not preclude the consideration of these principles by the courts when a statute of the Oireachtas is not under review."

Commentary

buntreoracha ... mar ghnáth-threoir Neither of these compounds with 'treoir' appear to be given as headwords either in Ó Dónaill or in Dinneen. 'Treoir' is translated principally as 'guidance, direction' in Ó Dónaill and as 'a guide, a helm, direction, tendency, ideal, progress of events, conduct, guidance, help ...' in Dinneen, who cites 'narbh' íseal treoir, whose ideals were high'. DIL translates 'treoir' principally as 'guidance, direction, course', citing 'inraic treorach do Caoimgin' ('excellent of guidance to Coemgen') from the Irish Lives of the Saints. The prefix 'bun-' is translated principally as 'basic, primary, elementary' in Ó Dónaill and as 'principal, basal, foot-' in Dinneen, with 'gnáth-' being translated primarily as 'usual, customary, ordinary, vulgar, common; standard' in the former source and as 'usual, general, average, continual' in the latter. Note that Ó Dónaill translates the adjective 'treorach' as 'guiding, directive', citing 'rialacha treoracha, guiding rules'. Note also that 'basic rent' is translated as 'cíos bunúsach' in Téarmaí Dlí.

'Bunriail' expresses 'principle' in Articles 29.3 and 43.2.1°, for which term see the commentary on the latter Article, 'treoir' expressing 'rule' in the former Article. Looking at the early Acts regarding 'principle', 'The Judge shall fix the sum ... on the same principles as the compensation for an injury' is translated as 'Déanfaidh an Breitheamh an tsuim ... do shocrú de réir na bprinsiobal gcéanna a bhaineann le socrú an chúitimh ... i gcás díobhála' in s15(4) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. 'The Special Commissioners shall thereupon hear and determine the appeal in accordance with the principles to be followed by the Revenue Commissioners' is translated as 'Leis sin déanfaidh na Coimisinéirí Speisialta an t-athchomharc d'éisteacht agus breith do thabhairt air do réir na bprinsiobal is inleanta ag na Coimisinéirí Ioncuim' in s8(5) of the Finance Act, 1924. 'Casual vacancies shall be filled in accordance with the foregoing principle of selection' is translated as 'is le roghanaíocht ar an gcuma san thuas a líonfar foth-fholúntaisí' in s65 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. Finally, 'The voting at a Seanad election shall be on the principle of proportional representation' is translated as 'Is do réir ionadúíochta cothromúla a déanfar an vótáil i dtoghachán Seanad' in s9(1) of the Seanad Electoral Act, 1928. Turning to modern Acts, 'The Bank shall ... keep the Minister ... informed of the general principles which guide the Bank' is translated as 'Déanfaidh an Banc ... an tAire ... a choinneáil ar an eolas maidir leis na prionsabail ghinearálta a bhíonn mar threoir ag an mBanc' in s66(2) of the Central Bank Act, 1989.

The noun 'directive' is translated as 'treoir' in the Acts – see s2(1) of the National Agricultural Advisory, Education and Research Authority Act, 1977, for example, where 'whether for the purpose of implementing any directive of the European Economic Community or otherwise' is translated as 'chun aon treoir ó Chomhphobal Eacnamaíochta na hEorpa nó eile a chur i bhfeidhm'. Note that 'imthreorán' is given in Foclóir Oifigiúil, without source.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where 'Directive Principles of Social Policy' was translated simply as 'Prionsabail Threoracha Bheartais Shóisialaigh', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú questioned the grammatical correctness of this phrase, recalling the earlier 'ábhair nóis imeachta'. Professor Ó Murchú recommends 'Prionsabail Threoracha faoi Bheartas Sóisialach'.

a ceapadh 'Mean, intend' is given as one of the senses of 'ceap' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'sin é a bhí ceaptha acu a dhéanamh, that is what they intended to do'. Dinneen includes 'intended' among the senses of 'ceapúighthe', the past participle of his headword 'ceapaim', translated in Tearmaí Dlí solely as 'I appoint'. See the commentary on Articles 6.1, 13.1.1°, 15.10 and 34.4.5° regarding 'ceap', respectively expressing 'designate', 'appoint', 'attach' and 'direct'. While the Irish verb 'ceap' may mean 'design, conceive' (Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú cites 'seift a cheapadh' as an example of that sense), and could be interpreted as having that meaning in the present instance in the literal English translation above of 'bunrialacha a cheapadh', as Professor Ó Murchú remarks, the English text makes clear that 'ceap' must here be taken to have the meaning 'intend' (Máirtín Ó Murchú citing 'sin é a cheap sé a dhéanamh' as an example of that sense).

Looking at 'intended' in the early Acts, 'any warehouse or other premises of any person engaged in the business of warehousing goods intended for export' is translated as 'aon stóras no áitreabh eile le héinne i mbun gnó stórála earraí le heasportáil' in s4(1)(d) of the Agricultural Produce (Eggs) Act, 1924. 'Any particular class of goods intended for human food or drink offered for sale on stall-traders ... stands' is translated as 'aon tsaghas áirithe earraí a bheidh ceaptha mar bhia no mar dhigh do dhaoine agus a tairgfáir le díol ... ar sheasáin stalla-thrádáláir' in s6(1)(f) of the Street-Trading Act, 1926, with 'all expenses incurred in the seizure, removal, storage, and any intended or attempted sale of the goods' being translated as 'gach costas a bhain leis na hearraí do thógaint, d'aistriú agus do stóráil agus le haon bheartú nó iarracht ar iad do dhíol' in s11(3). Finally, 'Whenever the Commissioners intend to acquire any occupied premises' is translated as 'Aon uair a bheidh na Coimisinéirí ar aigne aon áitreabh i seilbh do thógaint' in s2(1) of the Civic Guard (Acquisition of Premises) Act, 1923, with 'one month's notice in writing of their intention so to acquire such premises' being translated as 'fógra míosa go bhfuilid ar aigne an t-áitreabh san do thógaint amhlaidh'.

Turning to the modern Acts, 'Whether or not such fish or fishery products are intended for human consumption' is translated as 'bíodh nó ná bíodh an t-iasc nó na táirgí iascaigh sin beartaithe lena gcaitheamh ag daoine' in s32(1)(d)(iv) of the Radiological Protection Act, 1991. 'Words descriptive of any enactment are intended for convenience of reference only' is translated as 'is mar áis tagartha amháin na focail a dhéanann tuairisciú ar aon achtachán' in s155(8) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976. 'It shows, to the satisfaction of the Revenue Commissioners that the goods in question are intended for the use of blind persons' is translated as 'go gcruthóidh sé do na Coimisinéirí Ioncaim gur le haghaidh úsáid daoine dallá na hearraí sin atá i gceist' in s20(2)(b) of the Value-Added Tax Act, 1972.

See further the commentary on Article 25.4.1° where 'a mhalairt d'intinn' expresses 'a contrary intention'.

amháin 'Only' is given as a secondary sense of 'amháin' (primary sense 'one') in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'sinn féin amháin, ourselves only, alone'. Dinneen translates 'amháin' as 'only, alone, merely; even', citing 'é féin amháin, he alone'. 'Amáin' is the Middle Irish form of 'nammá', DIL translating this adjective 'following a noun and limiting it in sense' as 'only, and no more, and nothing else', citing examples from Leabhar na hUidhre (compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100) onwards, including 'an ruibér sin amháin eidirdealaiges etorra' ('nothing except the river divides them') from Ó Cianáin's Flight of the Earls. 'Nammá', according to DIL, is a petrified phrase '= negative + má', comparative of 'mór, már', literally 'not more' – DIL cites 'a mbecc sin nammá dogniú di maithe' ('that little good I do') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

'Exclusive right' is translated as 'ceart eisiatach' in Tearmaí Dlí, 'eisiach' being given as the standard form of 'eisiatach' in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Articles 8.3 and 15.2.1°, 'aon' expressing 'exclusive' therein. 'And which, while used for the purposes of the trade, is wholly and exclusively so used' is translated as 'agus atá, fad a úsáidfear chun críocha na trádála é, in úsáid go hiomlán agus go heisiach amhlaidh' in s70 of the Finance Act, 1990. In s29(3) of the Land Act, 1923, 'the powers of the Court ... shall be exercised exclusively by the Judicial Commissioner' is translated as 'déanfidh an Coimisinéir Breithiúntais amháin na cumhachta atá ag an gCúirt ... d'fheidhmiú'. See further the commentary on Article 15.6.1° where, as in the present Article, 'amháin' expresses 'exclusive'.

de chúram The preposition 'de' can denote a feature of something, 'what pertains to something'. Ó Dónaill citing 'tá sé de chlú air (go), he has the reputation (of)' and 'ná biodh sé de leithscéal agat, don't have it as an excuse', for example. Dinneen cites 'tá sé de bhuaidh, de chéill, de chéird, agam, I have the virtue of, the good sense to, the art of. Ó Dónaill translates ‘cúram’ principally as ‘care, responsibility’, citing ‘cúram ruda a bheith ort, to have the care of something’, giving ‘charge, task, duty’ as a secondary sense. Dinneen translates ‘cúram’ as ‘care, thought, responsibility; concern, interest, business ...’ – see the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

‘The duties imposed by this Act are hereby placed under the care and management of the Revenue Commissioners’ is translated as ‘Cuirtar fé chúram agus fé bhainistí na gCoimisinéirí Ioncuim leis seo na diúitithe a forchuirtar leis an Acht so’ in s3 of the Finance (No. 2) Act, 1927. ‘That ... he has employed a person for the purpose of having the care of the person ... who is so incapacitated’ is translated as ‘go raibh duine ar fostú aige ... chun aire a thabhairt don duine ... a bhí faoi éagumas amhlaidh’ in s1(b) of the Table accompanying s4 of the Finance Act, 1990. ‘As to the wardship of infants or the care of infants’ estates’ is translated as ‘maidir le coimircíocht naíonna nó cúram eastát naíonna’ in s15(1)(a) of the Courts Act, 1981. ‘In any cemetery or burial ground under the care of the Committee’ is translated as ‘in aon reilig nó talamh adhlactha faoi chúram an Choiste’ in s29(1)(c) of the Dublin Cemeteries Committee Act, 1970.

a fheidhmiú ‘Feidhmiú’ is the verbal noun of ‘feidhmigh’, translated in Ó Dónaill as (1) ‘function; act, officiate’ and (2) ‘execute, enforce, apply’, citing ‘an dlí a fheidhmiú, to enforce the law’. Dinneen translates both ‘feidhmighim’ and ‘feidhmim’ as ‘I accomplish’, translating the verbal noun ‘feidhmiughadh’ as ‘act of accomplishing, putting into force, carrying out’. ‘Feidhmim ar son an ghearánaí’ is translated as ‘I represent the plaintiff’ in Téarmaí Dlí. This verb is based on ‘feidhm’, regarding which see the commentary on Article 12.10.7°; see the commentary on Article 40.4.5° regarding ‘feidhmiú’ expressing ‘execution’.

Looking at ‘application’ in early Acts, ‘to authorise the industrial application of the design’ is translated as ‘chun a údarú go n-úsáidí an pátrún i gcúrsaí ceárdair’ in s180(2)(b) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. ‘Application of Part VI of this Act to artistic work defining a design’ is translated as ‘Baint Cuid VI den Acht so le hobair ealadhanta a mhíononn pátrún’ in the Margin Title of that section, with ‘For the purpose of the application under this section of Part VI of this Act to an artistic work defining a design, “copy-right” shall include the sole right ...’ being translated as ‘chun na críche a bhaineann le Cuid VI den Acht so do chur i mbaint, fén alt so, le hobair ealadhanta a mhíononn pátrún, folóidh “cóipcheart” an t-aon-cheart’ in s180(2).

Turning to more modern Acts, ‘The investigation of the mathematical principles of natural philosophy and the application of those principles to the physical and chemical group of sciences’ is translated as ‘prinsiobail mhata-maiticeacha na feallsúnachta nádúrtha do scrúdú agus na prinsiobail sin do chur i bhfeidhm ar an ngrúpa fisiceach agus ceimiceach de sna heolaíochta’ in s5(2)(a) of the Institute for Advanced Studies Act, 1940. ‘Apart from the application of the provisions of this subsection to the distribution’ is translated as ‘ar leith ó fheidhmiú fhorálacha an fho-ailt seo maidir leis an dáileadh’ in s34(3) of the Finance Act, 1990. ‘The application of the Local Government (Superannuation) Act, 1956, or any scheme or regulations ... to the body’ is translated as ‘an tAcht Rialtais do bheartas chomhdhaonnach According to the official standard, a qualifying adjective is lenited in the dative singular only following a feminine noun, ‘don bhean mhór’ being cited as an example – see An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, chapter headed ‘Séimhiú agus Urú’, s1(a) of the sections headed ‘Séimhiú ar Aidiachtaí’.

Áitiúil (Aoisliúntas), 1956, nó aon scéim nó rialacháin ... a chur i bhfeidhm maidir leis an gcomhlacht’ in s1(b) of the Table in s7 of the Local Government (Superannuation) Act, 1989, for example.

In Old Irish, as both o-stems (masculine nouns) and a-stems (feminine nouns) ended in a vowel in the dative singular, the following adjective was lenited in every gender, Kim McCone citing ‘don chéiliu chumachtuch’ (Modern Irish ‘don chéile cumhachtach’) and ‘úan chluich thruimb’ (‘ón gloch throm’) – see Kim McCone et al., op. cit., p. 120. Lenition of the adjective qualifying an article and noun in the dative singular masculine still continues in Ulster Irish, Art Hughes citing ‘don fhear mhór’, ‘as an teach bheag’ and ‘ar an uan bhocht’ (ibid, p. 633). We also find lenition of the masculine adjective in the dative case in North Connacht. In Conamara, however, we find this lenition of masculine adjectives only in phrases such as ‘faoi Sheán Mhór’ (as against ‘le Seán Mór’) and ‘ina chogadh dhearg’, non-lenition being the practice in every other case – see Ruairí Ó hUiginn, ibid, p. 605. Generally one does not find lenition of the adjective in the dative case in Munster Irish, though one often finds such lenition in Muskerry, Seán Ua Súilleabháin citing ‘fén gcrann mhuar’ (ibid, p. 499).

See the commentary on Article 28.5.2° regarding ‘beartas’ and on Article 15.3.1° regarding ‘comhdhaonnach’.

bunrialacha See the commentary on Article 43.2.1°, ‘bunriail’ being translated as ‘fundamental rule’ in Ó Dónaill.

leagtha amach See the commentary on Article 15.2.2°.

intrialte See the commentary on Article 38.4.2°.

Standardised Irish text

BUNTREORACHA DO BHEARTAS COMHDHAONNACH
Is mar ghnáth-threoir don Oireachtas a ceapadh na bunrialacha do bheartas comhdhaonnach atá leagtha amach san Airteagal seo. Is ar an Oireachtas amháin a bheidh sé de chúram na bunrialacha sin a fheidhmiú i ndéanamh dlíthe, agus ní intrialte ag Cúirt ar bith ceist i dtaobh an fheidhmithe sin faoi aon fhoráil d’fhorálacha an Bhunreacht seo.

Direct translation

PRIONSABAIL THREORACHA<sup>1</sup> FAOI BHEARTAS SÓISIALACH<sup>2</sup>
Tá na prionsabail faoi bheartas sóisialach<sup>2</sup> atá leagtha amach san Airteagal seo ceaptha mar threoir ghinearálta don Oireachtas<sup>3</sup>. Is é cúram an Oireachtais go heisiatach<sup>4</sup> é na prionsabail sin a fheidhmiú<sup>5</sup> le linn dlíthe a dhéanamh, agus ní intrialte an feidhmiú sin ag aon Chúirt faoi aon fhoráil<sup>6</sup> d’fhorálacha an Bhunreacht<sup>7</sup> seo.

Variants

- 1 ‘Treoirphrionsabail’
- 2 ‘do bheartas sóisialach’

- 3 'chun an tOireachtas a threorú go ginearálta', 'chun treoir ghinearálta a thabhairt don Oireachtas'
- 4 'go heisiach', 'amháin'
- 5 'cúram eisiatach an Oireachtais é feidhmiú na bprionsabal sin', 'cur i bhfeidhm na bprionsabal sin'
- 6 'aon cheann'
- 7 'aon fhoráil den Bhunreacht'

ARTICLE 45.1 AIRTEAGAL 45.1

TÉACS GAEILGE

Déanfaidh an Stát a dhícheall chun leas an phobail uile a chur chun cinn trí ord chomhdhaonnach, ina mbeidh ceart agus carthanacht ag rialú gach forais a bhaineas leis an saol náisiúnta, a chur in áirithe agus a chaomhnú chomh fada lena chumas.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State will do its utmost to advance the welfare of all the people through ensuring and preserving as far as it is able a societal order, in which justice and charity will rule every institution which relates to the national life.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall strive to promote the welfare of the whole people by securing and protecting as effectively as it may a social order in which justice and charity shall inform all the institutions of the national life.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Inform' is expressed in the Irish text by 'rialaiú', which verb is translated in Téarmaí Dlí as 'rule'/ 'control', this term usually expressing 'regulate' in the Constitution.
- 2 'All the institutions of the national life' is expressed as 'gach foras a bhaineas leis an saol náisiúnta' ('every institution which relates to the national life') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Securing' is expressed by the phrase generally expressing 'ensuring' in the Constitution, 'a chur in áirithe', this term in general usage rendering 'reserving'.
- 4 'Protecting' is expressed by the term usually expressing 'preserving', 'a chaomhnú', 'cosain' generally rendering 'protect'.
- 5 'As effectively as it may' is expressed as 'chomh fada lena chumas' ('as far as it is able') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Social' is expressed by the term found in the heading of this Article, 'comhdhaonnach', which, as we have said, occurs but infrequently today.
- 7 'Justice' is expressed in the Irish text by 'ceart', which term is translated as 'right' in Téarmaí Dlí, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Commentary

carthanacht This abstract noun is translated as (1) 'love, charity' and (2) 'friendliness, friendship' in Ó Dónaill, with 'carthannacht' being translated as 'charity, kindness, friendliness, gentleness' in Dinneen. DIL only gives four citations of 'carthanacht', translated as 'charity, kindness; friendship', the first being from the Annals of the Four Masters ('sidh caradradh, carthanacht'). This abstract noun is based on the adjective 'carthanach', cited in DIL from Leabhar na hUidhre (compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100), which is based on 'carthain', the later verbal noun of 'caraid', 'loves', which verb is cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles – 'serc', Modern Irish 'searc', 'love', was the earlier verbal noun. See further the commentary on the Preamble.

'All matters connected with outdoor relief, medical charities, etc.' is translated as 'gach ní a bhaineann le fóirithin allamuich, déarcais leighis, etc.' in s3 of the 'Cavan County Scheme' in the First Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, with 'déarcas' translating 'charity' in the Preamble to the Methodist Church in Ireland Act, 1928.

a dhícheall 'Dícheall' is translated as 'best endeavour' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'do dhícheall a dhéanamh, to do one's best'. Dinneen translates 'dícheall' as 'effort, endeavour; one's best', translating 'déan do dhícheall' as 'do your best or worst (according to context), I defy you'. According to DIL, 'dícheall' ('effort, pains, utmost endeavour') is 'a late word common in Modern Irish', citing 'mesaim co bfuil do dhícheall le déanam acat do chóta ... d'iomchur' ('I think you find it as much as you can do' [to carry your coat]) from Standish H. O'Grady's collection of Irish texts, Silva Gadelica. De Bhaldaithe gives 'do dhícheall a dhéanamh (le) rud a dhéanamh' as a translation of 'to strive to do something', also giving the phrases 'bheith ag dréim le ...' and 'féachaint go cruá le ...'. Both 'righe le' and 'dréim le' are cited in Foclóir Oifigiúil as translating 'strive to' in early Irish texts.

In line with the wording of this section, 'it being understood that the Community will strive to pursue a commercial policy which does not run counter to this progress' is translated as 'ar an mbonn tuisceana go ndéanfaidh an Comhphobal dícheall chun beartas tráchtála a shaothrú nach mbeidh bunoscionn leis na hiarrachtaí sin' in Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 1401).

a chur chun cinn Ó Dónaill cites 'chuir sé é féin chun cinn, he advanced himself, translating 'cuir chun cinn' as 'advance, promote', also citing 'ag iarraidh cúis a chur chun cinn, trying to advance a cause'. Dinneen translates 'chun cinn' as 'ahead, forward'. See the commentary on Articles 1 and 12.8 regarding 'promote' and 'welfare' respectively.

'It shall be a function of every health board to promote the welfare of children in its area who are not receiving adequate care and protection' is translated as 'Is feidhm de chuid gach bord sláinte leas leanaí nach bhfuil ag fáil dóthain cúraim agus cosanta a chur chun cinn ina limistéar' in s3(1) of the Child Care Act, 1991. 'To establish ... conveniences calculated to promote the welfare of its employees' is translated as 'áiseanna a bhunú ... a meastar a raghadh chun leasa a fhostaithe' in s13(1)(n) of the Transport Act, 1950, with the Margin Title of s46 of the Transport Act, 1944, 'Establishment of associations, etc., calculated to promote the welfare of employees' being translated as 'Comhlachais, etc., do bhunú do raghadh chun leasa d'fhostaithe'. Note that in s10(2)(b) of the Damage to Property Act, 1923, 'that the injury to the building has not materially prejudiced the economic welfare of the district' is translated as 'nar dhin an díobháil don fhoirgneamh aon dochar substainteach do staid chó-ionmhuis an cheanntair', with 'Every person who shall ... form, organise, promote, or maintain any secret society' being translated as 'gach éinne ... a bhunóidh, a chó-ghléasfidh, a chuirfidh ar aghaidh ... aon chumann sicréideach' in s8(1) of the Treasonable Offences Act, 1925.

ag rialú See the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 12.5 regarding 'rialáigh'. For translations of 'inform' in the Acts, see s47(1) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, where 'but he may at any time in the course of the investigation ... inform the Bank on matters coming to his knowledge' is translated as 'ach féadfaidh sé tráth ar bith le linn an imscrúdaithe ... scéala a thabhairt don Bhanc i dtaobh nithe atá taghta ar a iúl', with 'cuirfidh sé é sin in iúl don Aire' translating 'he shall inform the Minister accordingly' in s3 of the First Schedule to the Restrictive Practices Act, 1972. Finally, note that 'inform' is translated as 'foirmiú' in Foclóir Fealsaimh, referring the reader to Dinneen.

chomh fada lena chumas See the commentary on Article 40.3.2° where this phrase expresses 'as best it may'. Regarding 'effectively' in the Acts, 'which if the society had been empowered to do the same would have been lawfully and effectively done' is translated as 'agus a bheadh déanta go dlíthiúil agus go héifeachtúil dá mbeadh an chumhacht tugtha don chumann é a dhéanamh' in s12(1) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, for example. In s7 of the Fifth Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923, 'so much of the description of each of such candidates ... as will ... effectively distinguish such candidate' is translated as 'oiread de thuairisc gach iarrthóra dhíobh ... oiread agus a dhéanfidh idirdhealú éifeachtúil eatorra'. Note that 'effectively obliterated stamps' is translated as 'stampáí curtha ar neamhbhrí go bunúsach' in Iris an Phuist, 8/8/23.

uile 'In case the reversionary lease would be a lease of the whole of the land' is translated as 'i gcás inar léas ar iomlán na talún an léas frithdhílse' in s33(2) of the Landlord and Tenant (Amendment) Act, 1980, for example, with 'maidir le hiomlán na trádála nó an ghnó a sheolann sí' translating 'in respect of the whole of the trade or business carried on by it' in s79(3)(a) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976. See further the commentary on Article 2 (where 'go huile' expresses 'whole') and on Article 45.2.iv (where 'uile' expresses 'as a whole').

trí ord chomhdhaonnach See the commentary on Article 45 regarding the lenition of the adjective following a masculine noun in the dative – following the official standard the phrase here would be replaced by 'trí ord comhdhaonnach'. See the commentary on Articles 38.3.1°, 40.6.1° and 44.2.1° regarding 'ord' and on Article 15.3.1° regarding 'comhdhaonnach'.

an saol náisiúnta 'In the confidence that the National Life and unity of Ireland shall thus be restored' is translated as 'agus muinghin aice gur mar seo a tabharfar thar n-aís beatha agus aontacht Náisiúnta na hÉireann' in the Preamble to the 1922 Constitution.

a bhaineas The special form of the relative, present indicative, of 'bain' – this would generally be written today as 'a bhaineann'. See the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s'.

a chaomhnú The verbal noun of 'caomhnaigh' – see the commentary on Articles 28.3.3° and 41.1.2°.

a chur in áirithe See the commentary on Article 15.10.

foras See the commentary on Article 18.4.2°.

ceart See the commentary on Articles 34.1, 38.3.1° and 43.2.1°.

Standardised Irish text

Déanfaidh an Stát a dhícheall chun leas an phobail uile a chur chun cinn trí ord comhdhaonnach, ina mbeidh ceart agus carthanacht ag rialú gach forais a bhaineann leis an saol náisiúnta, a chur in áirithe agus a chaomhnú chomh fada lena chumas.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an Stát a dhícheall chun leas an phobail uile a chur chun cinn trí ord sóisialach ina mbeidh an ceartas agus an charthanacht mar bhonn le forais uile an tsaoil náisiúnta a áirithiú agus a chosaint chomh héifeachtúil agus is féidir leis.

Variant

1 'mar bhonn fhorais uile an tsaoil'

ARTICLE 45.2

AIRTEAGAL 45.2

TÉACS GAELGE

Déanfaidh an Stát, go sonrach, a bheartas a stiúradh i slí go gcuirfeair in áirithe:-

i Go bhfaighidh na saoránaigh (agus tá ceart acu uile, idir fhear is bean, chun leorshlí bheatha), trína ngairmeacha beatha, caoi chun soláthar réasúnta a dhéanamh do riachtanais a dteaghlach.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State will, specifically, direct its policy in a way that will ensure:-

i That the citizens (and all of them, both men and women, have a right to a sufficient livelihood) will obtain, through their occupations, the means of making reasonable provision for the needs of their households.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall, in particular, direct its policy towards securing:-

i That the citizens (all of whom, men and women equally, have the right to an adequate means of livelihood) may through their occupations find the means of making reasonable provision for their domestic needs.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Men and women equally' is expressed in the Irish text by the familiar idiom, 'idir fhear is bean' ('both men and women').
- 2 'Adequate means of livelihood' is expressed as 'leorshlí bheatha' ('sufficient means of livelihood') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Their domestic needs' is expressed as 'riachtanais a dteaghlach' ('the needs of their households') in the Irish text.
- 4 'In particular' is expressed as 'go sonrach' ('specifically') in the Irish text, perhaps to avoid repetition of 'áirithe', which is used in expressing 'securing' ('in áirithe') – 'particular' is generally translated as 'go háirithe'; 'in áirithe' now generally renders 'reserve', but usually expresses 'ensure' in the Constitution.
- 5 'Toward securing' is expressed in the Irish text as 'i slí go gcuirfear in áirithe', 'in a way that will secure/ensure'.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 210, reports as follows on reference to this Article in the courts:

In Murtagh Property v Cleary ([1972] IR 330) Kenny J used the Irish text to support his giving its full meaning to the provision that speaks of "men and women equally" having "the right to an adequate means of livelihood":

"The phrase "all of whom, men and women equally" shows that the right is one conferred equally on men and women. The Irish text ("agus tá ceart acu uile, idir fhear is bean"), though it does not refer to "equally", also stresses that the right is one inherent in men and women. In Professor de Bhaldraithe's English-Irish dictionary the phrase "both women and children" is translated as "idir mhná is pháistí". If those who wrote the Constitution intended to refer to the right to an adequate means of livelihood only, it is impossible to understand why the phrase "all of whom, men and women equally" should have been inserted. Its purpose was to emphasise that [so far as that right was concerned] men and women were to be regarded as equal."

Commentary

leorshlí bheatha ... trína ngairmeacha beatha 'Slí bheatha' is translated as 'means of livelihood' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'slí bheatha a bhaint amach, to earn a livelihood'. Dinneen translates 'slighe bheathadh' as 'means, livelihood'. 'Slige' is originally the verbal noun of 'sligid', and is translated as 'act of felling, smiting, a slaughter' in DIL, where 'slige Assar' ('slaughter of the Assyrians') is cited from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms; from that sense came the sense of what is cleared or cut out, that is, 'road, way, path', later 'way, means' in general. 'Leorshlí' does not appear to be cited as a headword either in Ó Dónaill or in Dinneen, who translates the prefix 'leor-' as 'full, sufficient, atoning', citing 'leor-chongnamh, suitable assistance', 'leor-dhóthain, full sufficiency' and 'leor-ghrása, sufficient grace'.

'Profession, occupation' is given as a secondary sense of 'gairm' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'do ghairm bheatha, one's mission in life; one's occupation'. Dinneen translates 'gairm bheathadh' as 'calling, avocation or condition of life, vocation'. Old Irish 'bethu' is translated principally as 'life, existence' in DIL, citing 'is bronach a bethu' ('his life is ... sad') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms.

Returning to 'adequate', 'it is adequate' is translated as 'is leor é' in De Bhaldraithe, who gives 'imleor' as the translation of 'adequate', followed by the abbreviation for 'Philosophy'. 'Adequate recompense' and 'adequate help' are translated respectively as 'cúiteamh cóir' and 'cuidiú fóna'. Looking at 'adequate means' in the Acts, 'the absence of adequate means of egress from the building' is translated as 'gan leorchóir imeachta a bheith ar fáil as an bhfoirgneamh' in s19(1)(e) of the Fire Services Act, 1981, with 'the absence of adequate means of exit therefrom' being translated as 'toisc nach leor an tslí amach as' in s1(1)(v) of the Fire Brigade Act, 1940. 'If such dependants are without adequate means of support' is translated as 'mura bhfuil leoracmhainn a gothabháilte féin ag na cleithiúnaithe' in Article 81 of the Fourth Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962.

Looking at 'adequate' alone, 'to direct and manage the affairs of the society with prudence, integrity and adequate professional skills' is translated as 'gnóthaí an chumainn a stiúradh agus a bhainistí go críonna agus go hionraic agus leis na scileanna gairmiúla leordhóthanacha' in s17(4)(a)(iii) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, with 'a society no longer possesses or is not maintaining ... adequate capital resources' being translated as 'nach bhfuil acmhainní caiptiúla leordhóthanacha ag cumann a thuilleadh nó nach bhfuil acmhainní den sórt sin á gothabháil aige' in s40(2)(j). 'Dóthanach' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'adequate (arrangements)' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health. 'He has an adequate knowledge of Irish' is cited as being translated as 'tá a dhóthain Gaedhilge aige' in translations for the Department of Justice, with 'Provided that at least two members of the committee shall be certified by the Minister for Home Affairs as possessing an adequate knowledge of the Irish language' being translated as 'Ach deimhneoidh an tAire um Ghnóthaí Dúithche leor-eolas a bheith ag beirt bhall ar a luíod den choiste ar an nGaedhilg' in s65 of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924.

Turning to 'means of livelihood', 'and not as the principal means of livelihood' is translated as 'agus nach mar phríomh-shlí bheatha' in s4 of Part II of the First Schedule to the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. 'Maritime ... activities, constituting an essential means of livelihood for persons concerned' is translated as 'gníomh-aíochtaí muirí ... is deis riachtanach mhaireachtála do dhaoine áirithe' in s2(6)(a)(i) of the Oil Pollution of the Sea (Amendment) Act, 1977. 'Damages for any wrong or injury suffered by him in his person, property, reputation or means of livelihood' is translated as 'damáistí mar gheall ar aon éagóir nó díobháil a d'fhulaing sé ina phearsa, ina mhaoin, ina chlú nó ina shlí bheatha' in s58(1)(a) of the Capital Acquisitions Tax Act, 1976. 'That his principal means of livelihood during the whole period of ten years immediately preceding the passing of this Act was the practice of dentistry in Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'gur fiacloireacht do chleachta i Saorstát Éireann ba phríomh-shlí maireachtana dho ar feadh na tréimhse iomláine de dheich mbliana díreach roimh rith an Achta so' in s28(1)(b) of the Dentists Act, 1928. Note that 'means of occupation' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'rudaí a chimeáda gnóthach é' in translations for the Department of Justice.

As regards 'occupation' in the Acts, 'it ought to be treated ... as a risk to their occupations and not as a risk common to all persons' is translated as 'gur chóir a áireamh ... gur fiontar é nó í a ghabhann lena slí bheatha agus nach fiontar é nó í a bhaineann i gcoitinne le gach uile dhuine' in s54(2)(a) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. 'Having regard to other occupations which are insurable employments' is translated as 'ag féachaint do ghairmeacha eile is fostaíochtaí inárachaithe' in s2(1) of the Social Welfare (No. 3) Act, 1974. 'Together with their ages, sex, occupations and conditions of health' is translated as 'mar aon lena n-aoiseanna, a ngnéas, a slíte beatha agus bail a sláinte' in s61(1)(a) of the Housing Act, 1966. 'Turning to early Acts, 'prohibit or restrict the employment of such children in particular occupations or during particular hours' is translated as 'fostú leanbh den tsórt san do thoirmeasc no do shriana i ngnóthaí áirithe no i rith uaireanta áirithe' in s7(1) of the School Attendance Act, 1926. 'Or carries on any profession, business or occupation' is translated as 'no ina mbíonn aon ghairm, gnó no ceárd ar siúl aige' in s52(vi) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924. 'Other persons who teach or preach in any religious congregation and do not follow any secular occupation' is translated as 'daoine eile a mhúineann no a sheanmóineann in aon phobal creidimh agus ná leanann aon tslí bheatha shaolta' in Part 1 of the First Schedule to the Juries Act, 1927.

Finally, commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where 'adequate means of livelihood' was translated as 'slí bheatha leordhóthanach', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that 'leordhóthanach' would mean something like 'thoroughly sated' and recommended translating this phrase as 'riar a gcáis de shlí bheatha'.

go sonrach This adverbial phrase is translated as 'particularly, notably' in Ó Dónaill, with Dinneen translating 'go sonradach' as 'to come to details, also chiefly, very' – see the commentary on Article 40.3.2°. DIL cites 'in druth as sundradach' from a commentary on an early Irish law-tract, 'sainredach' being the earlier form of this adjective, which glosses 'peculiaris' in the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian; DIL cites 'ainm do dorus sainredach in hIerusalem' ('the name of a particular door in Jerusalem'), from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, as an example of the sense 'specific, definite'. This adjective is based on 'sainred', translated in DIL as 'peculiar property or characteristic', citing 'attáa lemsa a sainred-sa' ('I have this peculiarity') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

Looking at early Acts, 'preventing nuisances in the Park and in particular preventing the obstruction of the roads and paths in the Park' is translated as 'cráitísí sa Pháirc do chosc agus go sonnrách cosc na mbóthar agus na gcosán sa Pháirc do chosc' in s10(1)(g) of the Phoenix Park Act, 1925, with 'prescribing the times during which the Park or any particular portion thereof shall be open to the public' being translated as 'na tráthanna d'ordú go mbeidh an Pháirc no aon chuid áirithe dhi ar oscailt don phuiblíocht' in ss1(b). The former example above is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms, where 'go mór-mhór' is given as translating 'in particular' in Iris an Phoist.

a stiúradh Verbal noun of the verb 'stiúir', 'stiúraim' being translated as 'I conduct (case, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'stiúruighim' being translated as 'I direct, guide, steer ...' in Dinneen, who cites 'go stiúruighidh Dia thú, may God direct you'. Ó Dónaill gives 'guide, direct, control' as the secondary sense of 'stiúir' (principally 'steer') – see the commentary on Article 40.6.1<sup>iii</sup>, where this verb expresses 'control'. Note that 'ceap' and 'ordaigh' express 'direct' in Articles 34.4.5° and 40.4.4° respectively.

'Stiúir', 'socrú' and 'diríú' are all cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'direct' in translations done for various Departments. 'Each member shall ... endeavour to direct its economic and financial policies towards the objective of fostering orderly economic growth' is translated as 'déanfaidh gach comhalta ... iarracht chun a bheartais geilleagair agus airgeadais a dhírú i dtreo fás geilleagair ordúil' in s1(i) of Article IV of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements (Amendment) Act, 1977. 'The Director shall ... control and direct the activities of the Institute and shall control and direct the staff of the Institute in the implementation of such activities' is translated as 'Déanfaidh an Stiúirthóir ... gníomhaíochtaí an Fhorais a rialú agus a stiúradh agus foireann an Fhorais a rialú agus a stiúradh ag comhalladh na ngníomhaíochtaí sin dóibh' in s1 of the Second Schedule to the National Institute for Higher Education, Limerick, Act, 1980.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommended 'a dhírú ar a dheimhniú' rather than 'a dhírú i dtreo a áirithiú'.

idir fhear is bean See the commentary on Article 16.1.1° for 'men and women' in the Constitution. Note that the form of this phrase in the original text is 'idir fear is bean'. According to the official standard, the preposition 'idir' lenites both nouns qualified by it in the phrase 'idir x agus y', which phrase Ó Dónaill translates as 'both ... and ...', citing 'idir fhir agus mhná, both men and women' – see An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, s4(d) of the chapter headed 'Séimhiú agus Urú'. Dinneen, however, cites 'idir fear is bean, men and women alike, all', also citing 'idir beag agus mór, both great and little' as against 'idir bheag is mhór' in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil. DIL cites 'etir maith et saich' ('both good and bad') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, along with 'a tairbirt uili ... eter mnaí is fer' from Saltair na Rann, composed c. 1000, and 'etir fer 7 mnaí' from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster.

'In the case of both men and women ... 1s. 2d. a week' is translated as 'I gcás fear agus ban ... 1s. 2d. sa tseachtain' in the Table to s87(1) of the Social Welfare Act, 1952. 'An Act to ensure equal treatment, in relation to certain terms and conditions of employment, between men and women employed on like work' is translated as 'Acht á áirithiú gurb ionann an chóir a chuirfear, maidir le téarmaí agus coinníollacha áirithe fostaíochta, ar fhir agus ar mhná a fhostaítear ar an obair chéanna' in the Long Title of the Anti-Discrimination (Pay) Act, 1974.

As regards 'equally', 'and the costs incurred in such application shall be defrayed equally by the applicant and the persons ...' is translated as 'agus na costais a tabhaíodh san iarratas sin iocfar iad, go cothrom, ag an iarratasóir agus ag na daoine' in s26(3) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'The charge shall be spread equally over a number of years of assessment' is translated as 'roinnfear an muirear go cothrom thar uimhir blianta measúnachta' in s288(1)(b) of the Income Tax Act, 1967. In s49 of the Electoral Abuses Act, 1923, 'if such permission is ... given equally to all persons alike who are at the time in his employment' is translated as 'má tugtar an cead san ... do gach éinne, mar a chéile, a bheidh ar fostú aige an uair sin'. 'Bheith ina dhá leath cothroma' is cited as a translation of 'equally divided' in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms, no source being given, however.

caoi 'Means, opportunity' is given as a secondary sense of 'caoi' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'caoi a thabhairt do dhuine (ar rud a dhéanamh), to give someone the means, an opportunity (to do something)'. Dinneen also includes 'opportunity, means' among the senses of 'caoi'. 'Way, manner, course, means' is given as a secondary sense of 'cáe' in DIL – see the commentary on Article 40.4.2° where 'caoi' expresses 'opportunity'.

Looking at early Acts, 'All patients must contribute towards their maintenance according to their means' is translated as 'Caithfidh gach othar cabhrú do réir a acfuinne chun a chimeáda suas' in s11 of the 'Details' in the 'Leitrim County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'The yearly means of the claimant' is translated as 'acfuinn bhliantúil an éilitheora' in the First Schedule to the Old Age Pensions Act, 1924. 'If the District Justice is satisfied on the evidence adduced on the examination as to means that the statement lodged by the debtor is false' is translated as 'Más deimhin leis an nGiúistís Dúithche, ón bhfianaise a tabharfar sa scrúdú i dtaobh acfuinne, an cuntas acfuinne a lóisteáil an féicheamh do bheith bréagach' in s20(2) of the Enforcement of Law (Occasional Powers) Act, 1924. Note that 'means' is expressed as 'acmhainn' in Article 42.1.

soláthar 'Soláthar a dhéanamh do rud' is translated as 'to make provision for something' in Ó Dónaill, with 'act of contributing, providing, producing, provision' being included among the senses of 'soláthar' in Dinneen. DIL cites 'atá d'fhiachaibh air an bhfear soláthar do dheanamh d'á theaghlach' from Donlevy's An Teagasg Críosduidhe (1742), this compound of 'so' and 'láthar' (translated as 'arrangement, disposition' and 'place, position', in particular, in DIL) being translated as 'act of gathering, collecting, procuring, providing'. See the commentary on Article 22.1.1° where this headword expresses 'supply'.

'Provision to meet expenditure' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'soláthairt i gcóir caiteachais' in translations for the Department of Fisheries. 'Any other enactment making provision for the protection of consumers' is translated as 'aon achtachán eile a dhéanann socrú le tomhaltóirí a chosaint' in s9(7) of the Consumer Information Act, 1978, for example, with 'do dhéanamh forála i leith ainmhithe agus éanlaithe atá galraithe nó faoi amhras galar a bheith orthu' translating 'making provision for animals or poultry affected or suspected of being affected with disease' in s26(e) of the Disease of Animals Act, 1966. 'After making provision for reserves' is translated as 'tar éis soláthar a dhéanamh le haghaidh cúltacaí' in s14(a) of Article V of the Bretton Woods Agreements Act, 1957.

See the commentary on Article 8.3 for 'socrú' expressing 'provision'.

riachtanais a dteaghlach Plural of 'riachtanas', this form being translated as 'necessaries' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'riachtanais na beatha' being translated as 'the necessities of life' in Ó Dónaill. 'Riachtanas' is translated as 'necessity, need, want, exigence, indispensable duty' in Dinneen. According to DIL, as we have seen, 'riachtanas' is an abstract noun from 'riachtain' ('the act of arriving, or of reaching' [the Middle Irish form of the verbal noun of 'ro-icc']) used in the expression 'riachtanas a les(s)', a petrified abstract from the phrase 'ro-icc les(s)', 'needs (it)', meaning 'need, necessity', with 'riachtanas' later being used alone in the same sense. DIL cites 'co mbetis uli i riachtanas a les Josep' ('... in need of Joseph') from the Leabhar Breac (compiled in 1411 or earlier), for example. See the commentary on Article 41.1.2° regarding 'riachtanach'.

Regarding 'domestic' in the present sense in the Acts, 'she engages in any occupation other than domestic duties in her own household' is translated as 'go ngabhfaidh sí ... d'aon sli bheatha seachas dualgais tís dá líon tí féin' in s27(a) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, with 'solely for the purposes of igniting gas for domestic use' being translated as 'gur d'aontoisc a rinneadh é chun gás a adhaint chun úsáide tís' in s75(2)(b) of the Finance Act, 1980. 'For certain domestic expenses', in relation to the Office of Public Works, is translated as 'le haghaidh costais intíre áirithe' in the Second Schedule to the Appropriation Act, 1981. See the commentary on Article 24.1 where 'whether domestic or international' is expressed as 'inmheánach nó idirnáisiúnta'.

Standardised Irish text

Déanfaidh an Stát, go sonrach, a bheartas a stiúradh i slí go gcuirfear in áirithe:-

- i Go bhfaighidh na saoránaigh (agus tá ceart acu uile, idir fhear is bhean, chun leorshlí bheatha), trína ngairmeacha beatha, caoi chun soláthar réasúnta a dhéanamh do riachtanais a dteaghlach.

Direct translation

Déanfaidh an Stát, go háirithe, a bheartas a dhiriú ar<sup>1</sup> a áiritiú<sup>2</sup>:-

- i Go bhfaighidh na saoránaigh (a bhfuil an ceart acu uile, idir fhir agus mhná go comhionann, ar riar a gcáis de shli bheatha<sup>3</sup>) trína ngairmeacha beatha an acmhainn<sup>4</sup> chun soláthar réasúnta a dhéanamh dá riachtanais tís<sup>5</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'i dtreo'
- 2 'a dheimhniú'
- 3 'ar shli bheatha leordhóthanach'
- 4 'trína ngairmeacha beatha acmhainn'
- 5 'tí'

ARTICLE 45.2.ii AIRTEAGAL 45.2.ii

TÉACS GAEILGE

Go roinnfear dílse agus urlámhas gustail shaolta an phobail ar phearsana príobháideacha agus ar na haicmí éagsúla sa chuma is fearr a rachas chun leasa an phobail.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

That (the) proprietary right and control of (the) worldly wealth of the people will be divided among private persons and among the various classes in the way that will best contribute towards the welfare of the people.

ENGLISH TEXT

That the ownership and control of the material resources of the community may be so distributed amongst private individuals and the various classes as best to subserve the common good.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Material resources' is expressed in the Irish text as 'gustail shaolta', 'worldly wealth'/ 'riches', the term 'acmhainní' being the familiar term today translating 'resources', and 'maoin' being the Irish legal term for 'property', and generally expressing 'wealth', with 'ábhartha' being the Irish legal term for 'material', 'saolta' generally being used to express 'material/worldly' in a religious/spiritual context.
- 2 'Control' is expressed in the Irish text by 'urlámhas', a term which historically also has the sense of 'possession', 'I control' being translated as 'rialáim' in Téarmaí Dlí, which term usually expresses 'regulate' in the Constitution, but is also found expressing 'control'.
- 3 'Individuals' is expressed as 'pearsana' ('persons') in the Irish text, though this term is sometimes so found in the Acts; there may have been a reluctance to express this as 'daoine aonair' as the clause is qualified by an adjective, and the natural order would be 'daoine príobháideacha aonair', which is a weak expression of the intended meaning. 'Daoine' alone expresses 'individuals' in the next paragraph.
- 4 'Subserve the common good' is expressed in the Irish text as 'rachas chun leasa an phobail', 'contribute towards the welfare of the people', the phrase 'leas an phobail' expressing 'the common good' in other Articles also, that phrase being translated in Téarmaí Dlí as 'an mhaitheas phoiblí'.

Commentary

dílse This headword is translated as 'proprietary right; ownership, property' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'tugadh dílse a gcríche dóibh, they were given the right to own their territory'. Dinneen includes 'inherent right' and 'forfeiture, appropriation, ownership' among its senses. 'Dílse' is an abstract noun, based on 'díles', and literally means 'that which is proper to, inherent in, due or belonging to' according to DIL, where this headword is translated principally as 'propriety (i.e. fitness, peculiar applicability, to), passing into notion of appropriation; ownership, possession (of), right over', with examples of this word being cited from the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian onwards. 'Dílis' is a compound of 'dí-' and 'les', DIL citing 'ni pa díless duit aní hitái' ('that in which thou art will not belong to thee'), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, as an example of the general sense of this adjective, 'belonging, own, proper, appropriate', the substantive use of which is translated principally as 'private property, possession' in DIL, no examples of which use are cited from the Glosses. D.A. Binchy, op. cit., p. 83f., comments as follows on 'díles' in early Irish law:

díles, lit. 'excluded from remedy' (dí + les), may be used of any situation incapable of being altered by legal process, where 'no action lies'. It has two very different meanings, therefore, according as the exclusion of legal proceedings operates to the advantage or the detriment of the person concerned. In the former case díles means 'indefeasibly entitled, held in absolute ownership', when it refers to proprietary rights, and 'immune, free from liability' when it refers to acts or omissions .... On the other hand, where the exclusion of legal process or remedy operates to the detriment of the person concerned, e.g. where property that was once his has passed irretrievably into the ownership of others without any action for its recovery remaining open to him, díles is best translated 'forfeit'.

According to Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 100, most farmland was 'fintiu' ('kin-land'); when kin-land was being divided each heir got a share which he farmed as an individual, but he could not sell his share of the kin-land without the permission of the rest of the kin.

'Private ownership' is expressed as 'a bheith aige dá chuid féin' in Article 43.1.1°, with 'own' expressed as 'bheith dá gcuid féin acu' in Article 44.2.5° – see the commentary on both Articles regarding 'own'/'ownership'. Looking at the early Acts, 'articles of personal ornament kept by the owner otherwise than as part of his stock-in-trade' is translated as 'earraí ornáide pearsan a bhíonn ag an únaer ar aon tslí eile seachas mar chuid dá stoc trádála' in s7(2)(i) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923. 'Unaereacht' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'ownership' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1927, p. 103, with 'úinéireacht' translating 'ownership' in Téarmaí Dlí. In s58(1) of the Land Act, 1923, 'Where the registration of the ownership of the land ... had not been effected' is translated as 'Sa chás nár dineadh clárú ar únaereacht tailimh'.

Turning to modern Acts, 'where there is a change in the ownership of the company' is translated as 'i gcás go raibh nó go mbeidh athrú ar úinéireacht na cuideachta' in s39(4)(b) of the Finance Act, 1990. 'For the purpose of enabling the ownership of the relevant plant breeders' rights to be ascertained' is translated as 'd'fhonn go bhféadfar úinéireacht na gceart póraitheoirí plandaí iomchuí a fhionnadh' in s3(a) of the Second Schedule to the Plant Varieties (Proprietary Rights) Act, 1980.

urlámhas This headword is translated as 'control; jurisdiction, authority' in Ó Dónaill and as 'control, custody, authority, possession, sequestration' in Dinneen. 'Airlámas' is translated as 'custody, possession' in DIL, citing 'cor ghobhadar ... urlámhus in fhearaind' from the Miscellany of the Celtic Society. This abstract noun is based on 'airlám', translated as 'custody, possession' in DIL, that noun being based on 'lám', 'hand'.

'I control' is translated as 'rialáim' in Téarmaí Dlí, the verbal noun, 'rialú', generally translating 'control' in the Acts. 'The systems of control which are to be established ... are systems for the control of the conduct of its business ... and for the control of the accounting and other records of its business' is translated as 'Na córais rialaithe atá le bunú ... is córais iad chun rialú a dhéanamh ar sheoladh ghnó an chumainn ... agus chun taifid chuntasaíochta agus taifid eile ghnó an chumainn a rialú' in s76(5) of the Building Societies Act, 1989.

'Rialú' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'control (of staffs)' in a 1928 Report of the Committee on Public Accounts. In Article 46 of the 1922 Constitution, 'and every such force shall be subject to the control of the Oireachtas' is translated as 'beidh gach fórsa dá shórt fé smacht an Oireachtais'. 'Control of Forces' is translated as 'Stiúra na bhFórsaí' in the Margin Title of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. See further the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 40.6.1<sup>ii</sup>, where 'control' is expressed by 'rialáigh', and note that 'stiúir' expresses 'control' in Article 40.6.1<sup>iii</sup>.

urlámhas gustail shaolta 'Gustail' is the genitive singular form of 'gustal', translated as (1) 'belongings, chattels' and (2) 'means, resources, wealth' in Ó Dónaill and as 'wealth; a load, a burden; means, ability' in Dinneen. 'Gustal' is translated as 'chattels, utensils, belongings' in DIL, with 'gach gustal trom dá raibhe aca do mhalairt ar ghréithibh geanamhla' being cited from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death.

'Resource' is expressed by 'ábhar maoiné' in Article 10.1. 'All the natural resources' is translated as 'gach maoin nádúrtha' in Article 11 of the 1922 Constitution, with 'the exploitation of water power and other natural resources of Saorstát Éireann for the generation of electricity' being translated as 'comhacht uisce agus maoin nádúrtha eile i Saorstát Éireann d'úsáid chun leictreachas do gheiniúint' in s27 of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1927.

'Saolta', literally 'worldly', is translated principally as 'earthly, mundane, temporal' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'nithe, rudaí, saolta, mundane matters; material things'. Dinneen translates 'saoghalta' as 'mundane, sublunary, earthly, secular ...', citing 'maoin tsaoghalta, worldly possessions'. DIL translates 'saegulta' as 'belonging to this world, mundane, secular', this adjective being based on 'saegul' (Modern Irish 'saol') which comes from Latin 'saeculum', DIL citing 'is garait ar saigul' ('our life is short') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms. See the commentary on Article 43.1.1<sup>o</sup> where 'maoin shaolta' expresses 'external goods'.

'Material welfare' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'leas cuirp' in translations for the Department of Justice. 'In relation to the measures taken by it and the human and material resources employed by it for the purpose of safeguarding aviation against acts of unlawful interference' is translated as 'i ndáil leis na bearta a bheidh glactha aici agus leis na hacmhainní daonna agus ábhartha a bheidh á n-úsáid aici chun eitlíocht shibhialta a chosaint in aghaidh toirmisc neamhdhleathaigh' in s7(1)(d) of the Irish Aviation Authority Act, 1993.

ar phearsana 'Pearsana' is the plural form of 'pearsa', 'person', Téarmaí Dlí translating 'caomhnóir ar an bpearsa' and 'foghail ar an bpearsa' respectively as 'guardian of the person' and 'trespass to the person'. Ó Dónaill cites 'tá trí phearsa i nDia, there are three persons in God' and DIL cites 'cindas persine attotchomnicc' ('what sort of person art thou?') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistle – see the commentary on Articles 40.1 and 40.3.2<sup>o</sup> (where 'pearsa' expresses 'person').

'Individual' is variously translated as 'éinne amháin', 'duine amháin' and 'duine' in early Acts. 'The Minister may at any time alter or cancel the registration of any premises under this Act upon the application of the registered proprietor, or in the case of an individual, the personal representative, or, in the case of an incorporated body, the liquidator, of the registered proprietor' is translated as 'Féadfadh an tAire aon uair clárú aon áitribh féin Acht seo d'atharú no do chur ar nea-mbrí ar iarratas an únaera chlárúithe no, más éinne amháin an t-únaer clárúithe, ar iarratas a ionadaí phearsanta no, más cólucht ionchorprúithe é, ar iarratas an té is socrathóir do' in s10(1) of the Agricultural Produce (Eggs) Act, 1924, with 'that the registered proprietor, if an individual, has died, or if an incorporated body, has been dissolved' being translated as 'más duine amháin an t-únaer gur éag sé no, más cólucht ionchorprúithe é, gur scuireadh é' in s10(3)(c). 'Without naming any individual' is translated as 'gan ainm éinne fé leith do luadh' in s6(2) of the Criminal Justice (Administration) Act, 1924. Finally, 'a company or firm of which any director or manager or any partner ... is an individual whom the controller could refuse to recognise as an agent' is translated as 'má tá ar an gcuideachtain no ar an tigh ghnótha san aon stiúirthóir no bainisteoir no aon pháirtneir ... is duine go bhféadfadh an ceannasaí diúltú d'é d'admháil mar ghníomhaire' in s137(3) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927.

Turning to modern Acts, 'from public service organisations, institutions or private individuals' is translated as 'ó eagraíochtaí seirbhíse poiblí, ó fhorais nó ó dhaoine príobháideacha' in s2(1)(a) of the National Archives Act, 1986, with 'whether they are constitutionally responsible rulers, public officials or private individuals' being translated as 'cibé acu is rialtóirí iad ar a bhfuil freagracht bhunreachtúil, oifigigh phoiblí nó daoine príobháideacha' in Article IV of the Schedule of the Genocide Act, 1973. In Article 53 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962, however, 'the use by private individuals, societies or firms, of the arms of the Swiss Confederation ... shall be prohibited at all times' is translated as 'toirmisclear i gcónaí ar dhaoine aonair, ar chumainn nó gnólachtaí, úsáid a dhéanamh d'armas Chónaidhm na hEilvéise'. 'And which he could do if he were a private individual and the owner of such fishery' is translated as 'agus a d'fhéadfadh sé a dhéanamh dá mba phearsa aonair phríobháideach é agus é ina úinéir ar an iascach sin' in s60(1) of the Fisheries Act, 1980.

Commenting on 'daoine príobháideacha aonair' in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú suggests substituting 'ar leith' for 'aonair' here.

a rachas The special form of the relative, future tense, of 'téigh', this would generally be written as 'a rachaidh' in the Acts today – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s'. 'Téigh chun' is translated literally as 'go, proceed, to' in Ó Dónaill, this phrase also having the sense of 'develop, become', Ó Dónaill citing 'rachaidh sé chun tairbhe duit, it will benefit you' and 'chuaigh an fliuchadh chun fiabhrais dó, the wetting he got brought on a fever'. Dinneen cites 'chuaidh an galar chun gadhscail air, the disease became chronic with him'. Earlier 'téit dochum' also had the sense of 'marriage', 'sexual union', according to DIL, citing 'intí immurgu téte a dochumsí' ('those who visit her' [a harlot]) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, also citing 'racha dochum n-écca ind' ('thou wilt die therein') from a later source.

'Subserve' is translated as 'cabhraím, cuidim, le (cúis, etc.)' in De Bhaldráithe, who translates 'to make something subservient to something' as 'rud a chur chun sochair do rud'. L. Mc Cionnaith translates 'to do it in subservience to' as 'é do dhéanamh mar spleadh dóibh', and 'subservient' as 'bhí sé chomh spleadhach leo', citing 'nach mé an Jumper agat!' from Connamara as a translation of 'do you think I have no will of my own, am subservient to you'.

chun leasa an phobail According to the official standard this would be replaced by 'chun leas an phobail', the nominative case taking the place of the genitive, in the case of 'leas', as it is followed by a definite noun – see the commentary on Article 1. As regards 'the common good', this is translated as 'an mhaitheas phoiblí' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Articles 6.1 and 42.3.2°. 'De réir riachtanais leasa an phobail' translates 'in accordance with the exigencies of the common good' in the Long Title of the Rent Restrictions (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1981. 'An Act to make provision, in the interests of the common good' is translated as 'Acht do dhéanamh socrú, chun tairbhe don mhaitheas phoiblí' in the Long Title of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1963.

na haicmí See the commentary on Articles 40.6.2° and 44.2.4° where 'aicme' respectively expresses 'class' and 'denomination'.

an phobail See the commentary on Article 12.2.1°.

roinnfear ... ar See the commentary on Article 28.12 where 'roinnt' expresses 'distribution'.

Standardised Irish text

Go roinnfear dílse agus urlámhas ghustal saolta an phobail ar phearsana príobháideacha agus ar na haicmí éagsúla sa chuma is fearr a rachaidh chun leas an phobail.

Direct translation

Go ndéanfar úinéireacht agus rialú acmhainní ábhartha an phobail a dháileadh i measc daoine príobháideacha<sup>1</sup> agus i measc na n-aicmí éagsúla sa tslí is fearr a chuideoidh leis an maitheas phoiblí<sup>2</sup>.

Variants

- <sup>1</sup> 'pearsana príobháideacha', 'daoine príobháideacha aonair / ar leith'
- <sup>2</sup> 'le leas an phobail'

ARTICLE 45.2.iii AIRTEAGAL 45.2.iii

TÉACS GAELIGE

Go sonrath, nach ligfear d'oibriú na saoriomaíochta dul chun cinn i slí go dtiocfadh de an dílse nó an t-urlámhas ar earraí riachtanacha a bheith ina lámha féin ag beagán daoine chun dochair don phobal.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Specifically, that the operation of free competition will not be allowed to advance in a way that there would result from it that a small number of people had in their own hands the ownership or the control of essential goods to the detriment of the community.

ENGLISH TEXT

That, especially, the operation of free competition shall not be allowed so to develop as to result in the concentration of the ownership or control of essential commodities in a few individuals to the common detriment.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'The concentration of the ownership ... in a few individuals' is expressed as 'an dílse ... a bheith ina lámha féin ag beagán daoine' ('a small number of people having the ownership in their own hands') in the Irish text, 'individuals' being expressed by 'pearsana' in the foregoing paragraph as against 'daoine' here.
- The Irish phrase expressing 'to the common detriment' parallels the phrase expressing 'to subserve the common good' in the previous paragraph, 'chun dochair don phobal' literally meaning 'to the disadvantage of the community/people'.
- While 'lig do' has the sense of 'allow', 'I allow' is translated as 'ceadaím' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'Operation' is expressed by 'oibriú', the term usually expressing 'exercise' in the Constitution, this being the term for 'operation' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'Especially' is expressed by 'go sonrath', the same adverbial phrase as expresses 'in particular' in the opening sentence of this section.
- 'Dul chun cinn' expresses 'develop', the general term today expressing 'develop' being 'forbairt', with 'cur ar aghaidh' being found in Article 1.

Commentary

d'oibriú na saoriomaíochta This compound of 'saor' and 'iomaíocht' does not appear to be given as a headword either in Ó Dónaill or in Dinneen, the latter translating 'saor-', in compounds, as 'free, noble' and 'iomaidheacht' as 'competition, rivalry'. Ó Dónaill translates 'iomaíocht' as '(act of) competing, vying; competition, rivalry; emulation'. This noun is based on 'iomaidh', translated as 'rivalry, competition' in Ó Dónaill. The earlier form, 'immad', 'immaid' (which may come from 'imbuith', the verbal noun of 'imm-tá', according to DIL), is translated as 'the act of contending; envy, jealousy, rivalry, strife' in DIL, where 'Niall Ó Néill is fear fromhtha / is léir ar a fhear n-íomtha' ('Niall Ó Néill is a proved warrior – this is shown by the state of his foe') is cited from a miscellaneous collection of Classical Irish poetry.

Looking at early translations, 'in respect of competitive traffic' is translated as 'maidir le trácht comórtasúil' in s29(1) of the Railways Act, 1924, with 'dul isteach ar chomórtas' being cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'compete' in Iris an Phoist, 8/2/28. 'Iomathóir' is cited as translating 'competitor' in translations for the Department of Education.

Turning to more modern translations, 'their opinion as to whether such prices are influenced by any agreement or combination for interfering with free competition' is translated as 'an é a dtuairim go bhfuil aon bhaint leis na praghsanna san ag aon chó-aontú no cur-le chéile chun cur isteach ar shaor-iomaíocht' in s42(1)(d) of the Control of Prices Act, 1932. In s(a) of the Second Schedule to the Restrictive Trade Practices Act, 1953, and of the Third Schedule to the Restrictive Practices Act, 1972, 'having ... the effect of unreasonably limiting or restraining free and fair competition' is translated as 'a bhfuil d'éifeacht acu ... tórainn nó srian neamhréasúnach a chur le saoirse chóir iomaíochta'.

earraí The plural of 'earra', this form being translated as 'goods' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'dilseánacht sna hearraí, property in the goods' is cited. 'Earra', in the collective sense, is translated as 'goods; ware, merchandise' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'earra, earraí, a cheannach, a dhíol, to buy, sell, goods'. Dinneen translates 'earradh' as 'property, goods, ware, furniture, articles, materials ...'. DIL translates 'errad' as 'furniture, chattels, ware, merchandise', citing 'do theilgeadar an earradh do bhí san loing annsa bhfairge' (= wares) from the seventeenth-century translation of Jonah i. 5, this being expressed as 'theilg siad amach san fharrage a raibh ar bord' in the modern 'Maynooth Bible'.

'Commodity' is translated as 'earra', 'tráchtearra' and 'ball earra' in De Bhaldraithe. "Commodities" means tangible assets which are dealt with on a commodity exchange in any part of the world other than currency, securities, debts or other assets of a financial nature' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "tráchtearraí" sócmhainní inlámhsithe a ndéileáiltear iontu ar mhalartáin tráchtearraí áit ar bith ar domhan, seachas airgead reatha, urrúis, fiacha nó sócmhainní eile de chineál airgeadais' in s4(2) of Schedule Five to the Finance Act, 1990. 'Commodities or articles for use in catching fish' is translated as 'tráchtearraí nó cóngair a úsáidtear chun iasc a ghabháil' in s1 of Part II of the Second Schedule to the Finance Act, 1978. 'When carrying commodities' is translated as 'nuair a bheidh earraí á n-iompar' in s2(i) of the Road Transport Act, 1971. 'For the transport of any commodities whatsoever upon any canal' is translated as 'chun aon tsaghas earraí d'iompar ar aon chanáil' in s180(2) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. Note that 'earraí' translates 'goods' and 'gréithre' translates 'commodities' in s1(ii) of the Ministers and Secretaries Act, 1924, where 'the supervision and control of all purchases made for or on behalf of and all supplies of commodities and goods held by the Department of State and the disposal thereof' is translated as 'maoirseacht agus cúram gach ceannaigh a déanfar d'aon Roinn Stáit no thar a ceann agus maoirseacht agus cúram gach soláthar gréithre agus earraí atá aici agus riar na rudaí sin'.

ina lámha 'In the hand(s) of, at the disposal of' are included among the senses of 'i lámh' in Dinneen, who cites 'suigheadh a iomaire féin i lámh gach aon díobh, each one was entrusted with a particular ridge'. 'I lámh' also has the sense of 'captive', 'subservient (to)', DIL citing 'i lámh atú i talmhain' from a collection of Classical Irish religious poetry. Old Irish 'lám', 'hand', is itself cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, where we find 'gnúis et láma et cossa' ('face and hands and feet').

Turning to 'concentration', 'the determination, in respect of such specimens, of the concentration of alcohol in the blood' is translated as 'cinneadh a dhéanamh maidir leis na samplaí sin ar an gcion alcóil san fhuil' in s7(1)(b) of the Road Traffic (Amendment) Act, 1978. "Concentrate of poppy straw" means the material produced when poppy straw has entered into a process for the concentration of its alkaloids' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "tiubhachán de thuí phoipín" an t-ábhar a tháirgtear tar éis tuí phoipín a dhul faoi phróiseas le haghaidh tiubhú a halcalóidí' in s6 of the Schedule to the Misuse of Drugs Act, 1977. Finally, 'articles which contain as an ingredient thereof coffee or chicory or any such extract, essence or concentration as is mentioned in the foregoing paragraph (a)' is translated as 'earraí ina mbeidh mar tháthchuid díobh caifé no ciocóire no aon eastóscán, úscra, no có-neartú den tsaghas a luaidhtear sa mhír sin (a) roimhe sin' in the First Schedule to the Finance Act, 1939.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'concentrate' as 'cruinním (le chéile); comhchruinním (smaointe, saighdiúirí)', citing 'they concentrated the fire of the battery, chomhchruinníodar lámhach an bhataire' and translating 'concentration' in the military sense as 'comhchruinniú (gunnaí)'.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where 'the concentration of the ownership ... of ... commodities in a few individuals' was translated as 'go gcomhchruinneofaí úinéireacht ... earraí riachtanacha i roinnt daoine', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú expressed doubt regarding such a construction and recommended 'go mbeidh ... úinéireacht earraí riachtanacha ar a lámh ag beagán daoine' or, if it was felt necessary to give recognition to the sense of 'concentration', 'go mbeidh ... rialú earraí riachtanacha comhchruinnithe chucu féin ag beagán daoine'.

chun dochair don phobal See the commentary on Article 3 regarding 'gan dochar', which phrase is translated as 'without prejudice' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill cites 'rachaidh sé chun dochair don tír, it will bring harm on the country' – see the commentary on Article 44.2.1° regarding 'dul chun dochair' and note that 'dochar a dhéanamh do' expresses 'affect prejudicially' in Article 44.2.4°.

'In a manner which is to the detriment of a person' is translated as 'ar dhóigh a rachaidh chun dochair do dhuine' in s6(1)(b) of the Local Government (Superannuation) Act, 1980, with '(shall not) be reduced or be otherwise altered to the detriment of such person' being translated as 'do laigheadú ná d'atharú ar shlí eile chun dochair don duine sin' in s51(1)(a) of the Conditions of Employment Act, 1936. In s13(1)(c) of the Local Government (Superannuation) Act, 1956, 'his position has been materially altered to his detriment' is translated as 'go ndearnadh a phost d'athrú go hábhartha chun dochair dó'. Finally, 'without substantial detriment to the works' is translated as ‘gan dochar mór do theacht as do sna hoibreacha’ in s16 of the Shannon Electricity Act, 1925.

ligfear See the commentary on Article 40.4.3<sup>o</sup> regarding ‘lig’, ‘ligim’ being translated as ‘I let’ in Téarmaí Dlí, with ‘lig do’ being translated as ‘allow, permit’ in Ó Dónaill, who cites ‘ligean do dhuine rud a dhéanamh, to let someone do something’. Dinneen includes ‘I concede or allow to, permit a thing’ among the senses of ‘leigim do’, citing ‘leigim dí imtheacht uirthi, I allow her to depart’. DIL cites ‘ní relic dia doib orcuin nDuaid’ (‘God did not let them slay David’), from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalms, as an example of the sense of ‘allows, permits (to do, have, etc.)’ of ‘léicid do’, literally, ‘leaves to or for, hands over to, entrusts to’.

beagán daoine ‘Beagán’ is translated as ‘little’ in Ó Dónaill, ‘a few’ being given as the secondary sense, citing ‘beagán dár muintir, a few of our people’. Dinneen cites ‘beagán buidhne, a small force’ and DIL cites ‘in becan sa dib’ (‘these few of them’ [at end of list]) from Leabhar na hUidhre (compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100), as an example of the sense of ‘a few, a small number’, ‘becán’ being translated as ‘a little, small quantity’, glossing Latin ‘pauillum’ in the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian. See the previous commentary regarding ‘individual’.

Commenting on ‘roinnt daoine’ in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that it is not as good in the context here as ‘beagán’.

dul chun cinn See the commentary on Article 1 regarding ‘develop’, expressed in that Article as ‘a chur ar aghaidh’. Commenting on the direct translation below of ‘the operation of free competition shall not be allowed so to develop’ as ‘nach gceadófar d’oibriú na saoríomaíochta forbairt ar shlí go’, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recalls David Greene’s objections to ‘forbairt’ noted in the commentary on Article 1 and remarks that the traditional sense of ‘for-fen’ etc. is not suitable here; Professor Ó Murchú recommends ‘nach gceadófar forás d’oibriú na saoríomaíochta ar shlí go’ as an alternative translation.

Go sonrach See the commentary on Article 45.2. Note that in the Preamble to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, ‘and in particular the existing law relating to the relief of the poor’ is translated as ‘agus, go sonnrách, an dlí atá ann fé láthair i dtaobh fóirithin na mbocht’. Note also that the form in the original text is ‘go sonnradhach’; Dinneen translates ‘go sonnradhach’ as ‘to come to details, also chiefly, very’, giving ‘sonnrach’ as a separate headword, translated as ‘special, particular, etc.’, and under which the reader is referred to ‘sonnradhach’. Ó Dónaill gives ‘sonraíoch’ as a separate headword, translated as ‘noticeable, remarkable; peculiar, extraordinary; abnormal, grotesque’.

d’oibriú See the commentary on Articles 3 and 13.5.1<sup>o</sup> regarding ‘oibriú’, which usually expresses ‘exercise’ in the Constitution, ‘oibrím’, however, being translated as ‘I operate’ in Téarmaí Dlí.

an dilse nó an t-urlámhas ar See the commentary on the previous paragraph regarding ‘dilse’ and ‘urlámhas’, there directly qualifying the following noun and not linked to it by a preposition, as in this paragraph (i.e. ‘ar’).

Direct translation

Go háirithe<sup>1</sup>, nach gceadófar d’oibriú na saoríomaíochta forbairt<sup>2</sup> ar shlí<sup>3</sup> go mbeidh dá dheasca úinéireacht nó rialú earraí riachtanacha comhchruinnithe chucu féin<sup>4</sup> ag beagán daoine chun dochair don phobal<sup>5</sup>.

Variants

- 1 ‘Go speisialta’
- 2 ‘nach gceadófar forás d’oibriú na saoríomaíochta’
- 3 ‘i slí’, ‘sa tsli’
- 4 ‘ar a láimh’
- 5 ‘agus go mbeadh an pobal i gcoitinne thíos leis sin’

ARTICLE 45.2.iv AIRTEAGAL 45.2.iv

TÉACS GAELGE

Gurb é leas an phobail uile is buanchuspóir agus is príomhchuspóir a rialós ina mbaineann le hurlámhas creidmheasa.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

That the welfare of the whole community is the permanent and principal objective which will govern in all that concerns the control of credit.

ENGLISH TEXT

That in what pertains to the control of credit the constant and predominant aim shall be the welfare of the people as a whole.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘In what pertains to the control of credit’ is expressed as ‘a rialós ina mbaineann le hurlámhas creidmheasa’ (‘which will control/govern/dominate all that concerns the control of credit’) in the Irish text, the phrase ‘a rialós’ adding further emphasis to what appears in the English text.
- 2 ‘Constant and predominant aim’ is expressed in the Irish text by repetition of compounds based on ‘cuspóir’ which, although it has the sense of ‘aim’, usually expresses ‘object’, the terms expressing ‘constant’ and ‘predominant’, ‘buan-’ and ‘príomh-’, usually expressing ‘permanent’ and ‘principal’ respectively.
- 3 As in the foregoing paragraphs, ‘control’ is expressed by the term ‘urlámhas’, which also has senses other than ‘control’, ‘I control’ being translated as ‘rialáim’ in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 4 ‘The people as a whole’ is expressed in the Irish text as ‘an pobal uile’, ‘all the people’ / ‘the whole community’.

Commentary

le hurlámhas creidmheasa ‘Creidmheasa’ is the genitive singular form of ‘creidmheas’, translated as ‘credit’ in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, and as ‘credit, trust, confidence’ in Dinneen. ‘Cairde’ is, and has been, perhaps the more colloquial term for ‘credit’, Ó Dónaill citing ‘rud a fháil, a thabhairt, ar cairde, to get, give, something on credit', Dinneen giving 'tick' as one of its senses. In the Glosses of the eighth and ninth centuries 'cairde' glosses Latin 'pactum' and in early Irish law expressed 'peaceful relations or pact either within a particular territory or between two or more territories', according to DIL, where the sense 'local peace, as opposed to cáin, the general law' is given. D.A. Binchy, op. cit., p. 80, comments as follows:

cairde, lit. 'friendship', a solemn compact concluded on behalf of two or more túaths (small kingdoms, a 'tuath' being] the political and jurisdictional unit of ancient Ireland) by their respective kings, each of whom pledges his subjects to it at an aonach. There are varying degrees of cairde, from a simple armistice to far-reaching arrangements for mutual recognition and enforcement of legal claims.

See Fergus Kelly, op. cit., p. 279, regarding a law-text on the subject of 'cairde'. 'Cara', on which 'cairde' is based, is cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, where we find 'coscc carat' ('a friend's advice').

The Agricultural Credit Corporation Limited' is styled 'Corparáid an Cháirde Talmhaíochta, Teoranta' in s4(1) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1927, with 'Agricultural Credit Societies' being translated as 'Cumainn Chreidiúna Talmhaíochta' on the Dáil Order Paper, 1925, p. 216. 'On the credit of the said sum' is translated as 'Ar chreidiúint na suime sin' in s2(1) of the Appropriation Act, 1923. 'The Bank's activities in respect of the protection of the integrity of the currency or the control of credit' is translated as '(i dtaobh) ghníomhaíochtaí an Bhainc chun sláine an airgeadra a chosaint nó chun creidmheas a rialú' in s16(1)(b) of the Central Bank Act, 1989.

buanchuspóir... príomhchuspóir Compounds of 'cuspóir', which noun is translated as 'object' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'object; objective, purpose' being given as a secondary sense in Ó Dónaill, the principal sense being 'thing aimed at, target'. Dinneen translates 'cuspóir' as 'an object, a target, a model, a theme ...'. This word comes from Latin 'cuspis' and is translated as 'target, purpose, aim, object' in DIL, citing 'co rabi fed cusboir etorro' ('fed cusboir' being translated as 'distance of a bow-shot') from Todd's edition of the eleventh-century Cogadh Gaedhel re Gallaibh.

Ó Dónaill translates the prefix 'buan' as 'permanent, perpetual; fixed', citing 'do chara buan, your constant friend' and 'go buan, constantly, always', the latter phrase being similarly translated by Dinneen, who translates 'buan' as 'lasting, continual'. The adjective 'búan' is translated as 'lasting, enduring; constant, firm, persevering' in DIL, citing examples from Blathmac (fl. 750-770) onwards. Note incidentally that 'the constancy of the supply of water to it' is translated as 'buaine an tsoláthair uisce a thagann chuige' in s6(3) of the River Owenmore Drainage Act, 1926.

Ó Dónaill translates 'príomh-' as 'prime, principal, chief, major, cardinal', with Dinneen translating this prefix as 'first, prime, chief, principal, great'. 'Prím-' comes from Latin 'primus' and is translated as (a) 'first (in time), primary' and (b) 'foremost, chief, principal, prime, eminent' in DIL. De Bhaldraithe translates 'predominant' as 'ardcheannasach', translating 'constant' as 'daingean, seasmhach, buan, buanseasmhach'.

'Cuspóir' is repeated here as having 'buan' qualify the compound 'cuspóir' would lead to the phrase being read as 'permanent constant aim'; note that there are many instances in the Constitution of two adjectives linked by 'and' being expressed by the adjectives immediately following each other with no conjunction in the Irish text, this being in line with Irish usage in general.

ina mbaineann le See the commentary on Article 3 regarding 'bain le'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'pertain' as 'baineann (to something, le rud)', translating 'this does not pertain to my office' as 'ní haon chuid de mo chúramsa é seo'. 'Ensuring that, in what pertains to the control of credit, the constant and predominant aim shall be the welfare of the people as a whole' is translated as 'chun a áirithiú gurb é leas an phobail i gcoitinne is príomhchuspóir buan ina mbaineann le hurlámhas creidiúnais' in s6(1) of the Central Bank Act, 1942. 'Any question whether a matter pertains to both Departments' is translated as 'aon cheist i dtaobh baint a bheith ag ábhar leis an dá Roinn' in s(a)(iii) of Article XXI of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements (Amendment) Act, 1977.

uile This headword is translated as 'all, whole', after a noun, in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'an scéal uile, the whole story' and 'dár muintir uile, to all our people'. Dinneen also translates 'uile' as 'all, whole', citing 'cách uile, everyone'. See the commentary on Articles 2 and 45.1.

Having regard to the interests of the members as a whole' is translated as 'ag féachaint do leasanna na gcomhaltá i gcoitinne' in s65(4)(a) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, with 'any particular question affecting the company as a whole' being translated as 'aon cheist áirithe a bhain leis an gcuideachta i gcoitinne' in s16(b)(i) of the Capital Acquisition Tax Act, 1976. Finally, 'the net annual value of the undertaking of the Great Southern Railways as a whole' is translated as 'luach bliantúil glan gnótha uile Mhórbhóithre Iarainn an Deiscirt' in s4 of the Schedule to the Railways (Valuation for Rating) Act, 1931. 'In iomlán' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'as a whole' in a 1928 Report of the Public Accounts' Committee, with 'le chéile' being cited from early Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann.

'As a whole' is translated as 'ina iomláine' in De Bhaldraithe, this phrase being translated as 'in its entirety' in Ó Dónaill, 'iomláine' being translated as 'integrity; fullness; total' in Dinneen.

a rialós Special form of the relative, future tense, of 'rialáigh', translated as 'rule' in Téarmaí Dlí but generally expressing 'regulate' in the Constitution – see the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 12.5.

le hurlámhas See the commentary on Article 45.2.ii.

Standardised Irish text

Gurb é leas an phobail uile is buanchuspóir agus is príomhchuspóir a rialóidh ina mbaineann le hurlámhas creidmheasa.

Direct translation

Ina mbaineann le<sup>1</sup> rialú creidmheasa, gurb é leas an phobail i gcoitinne an phríomhaidhm bhuan<sup>2,3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'Maidir le'
- 2 'an príomhchuspóir buan'
- 3 'Gurb é leas an phobail i gcoitinne an príomhaidhm bhuan ina mbaineann le rialú creidmheasa.'

ARTICLE 45.2.V AIRTEAGAL 45.2.V

TÉACS GAELGE

Go mbunófar ar an talamh faoi shlándáil gheilleagrach an oiread teaghlach agus is féidir de réir chor an tsaoil.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

That as many households as possible in accordance with the circumstances of life will be established on the land in economic security.

ENGLISH TEXT

That there may be established on the land in economic security as many families as in the circumstances shall be practicable.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'In the circumstances' is expressed in the Irish text as 'de réir chor an tsaoil', 'in accordance with the circumstances of life'.
- 2 'As ... shall be practicable' is expressed as 'agus is féidir' ('as is possible') in the Irish text, this phrase being generally so translated in Irish.
- 3 'May' (i.e. 'may be established') is expressed as 'will' (i.e. 'go mbunófar'), as in some of the earlier paragraphs in this section.

Commentary

faoi shlándáil gheilleagrach See the commentary on Article 1 s.v. 'geilleagar', regarding 'geilleagrach', and on Article 28.3.3<sup>o</sup> regarding 'slándáil'. Ó Dónaill cites 'slándáil shóisialta, social security' and 'fórsaí slándála, security forces'. 'Slán', the first element of the compound, is translated principally as 'whole, sound, unimpaired, healthy, safe' in DIL, citing 'mad slaán in ball iarna galar' ('if the member be whole after its sickness') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. In early Irish law, 'slán' had the sense of 'exempt, non-liable, safe', Fergus Kelly (op. cit., p. 156 n. 244) citing 'slán cách mairnes mígním' ('anyone who betrays an evil deed is free from liability') from an early Irish law-tract. The second element 'dáil' has the sense of 'state, condition' in such compounds, according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú.

'Faoi' can be used with an abstract noun to denote a state, Ó Dónaill citing 'faoi mheas, onóir, held in esteem, in honour', 'faoi smacht, under control' and 'faoi shíocháin, in peace'.

'Social security schemes' is translated as 'scéimeanna slándála sóisialaí' in s10(7)(g) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, for example. 'If the action relates to ... national security or military activity' is translated as 'má bhaineann an gníomh le slándáil náisiúnta nó le gníomhaíocht mhíleata' in s5(1)(b) of the Ombudsman Act, 1980. In s33 of the Fifth Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923, 'and shall otherwise take proper precautions for the security of such papers and documents' is translated as 'agus tabharfa sé gach aon aireachas eile is cóir chun na páipéirí agus na scríbhinní sin do chur ar láimh shábhála'. 'Seasmhacht' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'security' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1922/23. 'And any temporary works necessary for its reconstruction shall be so designed and executed as not to lessen or interfere with the stability or security of the Railway Bridge' is translated as 'agus ceapfar agus déanfar aon oibreacha sealadacha is gá chun a dhéanta, i slí is ná déanfar laigheadú ná cur isteach ar sheasmhacht ná ar dhaingneacht Dhroichead an Bhóthair Iarainn' in s52(2) of the Dublin Port and Docks (Bridges) Act, 1929. Finally, 'chun cosanta an ioncuim' translates 'for the security of the revenue' in s3(1) of the Finance (Customs and Stamp Duties) Act, 1929.

de réir chor an tsaoil According to the official standard, taking 'cor' to be the genitive plural here, this would read as 'de réir chora an tsaoil', 'cora' being the nominative plural in place of the genitive plural, lenited, as it is followed by a definite noun in the genitive – see the commentary on Article 1. 'Cora (crua) an tsaoil' is translated as 'the vicissitudes of life' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'tháinig sé de chor sa saol go, it came to pass that', 'cor' being translated principally as 'turn, turning movement'. Dinneen gives 'vicissitude, circumstance, plight' as one of the senses of 'cor', also citing 'coraí an tsaoghail, vicissitudes of life'. DIL cites 'dia do chor' ('awful calamity'), from Pilib Bocht Ó hUiginn (†1487), as the first of but five citations of this sense of 'state, condition, plight', 'cor' being the verbal noun of 'fo-ceird' and being principally translated in DIL as 'act of putting, placing; setting up'. See the commentary on Article 29.4.3<sup>o</sup> regarding 'cor' in the sense of 'contract' in early Irish law.

Looking at 'circumstances' in early Acts, 'An Act to interpret and to adapt to the circumstances of Saorstát Éireann certain Acts of the British Parliament' is translated as 'Acht chun Achtanna áirithe de Pháirlimint na Breataine ... do léiriú agus do chur in oiriúint do chúrsaí Shaorstáit Éireann' in the Long Title of the Adaptation of Enactments Act, 1922. 'And whereas the circumstances which rendered the several Orders and Authorisations aforesaid necessary and proper still continue to exist' is translated as 'Agus de bhri go bhfuilid ann fós na cúiseanna ba bhun leis na hOrduithe agus na hÚdaruithe uile sin roimh-ráite do bheith riachtanach agus cóir' in the Preamble to the Statutory Undertakings (Continuance of Charges) Act, 1923, with 'Persons in Class (b) who refuse to enter such Institutions as may be selected shall not be allowed under any circumstances to become chargeable to the public rates' being translated as 'Daoine d'Aicme (b) a dhiúltóidh do dhul isteach sna Fundúireachtaí a toghfar amach ní leigfar dóibh bheith ina muirear ar na rátaí puiblí ar aon tsaghas cúinse' in s4 of the 'Galway County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'The Local Authority has been prevented by circumstances beyond their control from executing the works aforesaid' is translated as 'coisceadh na hÚdaráis Áitiúla le nithe a bhí lasmuich dá smacht ar na hoibreacha roimh-ráite do dhéanamh' in the Preamble to the Local Authorities (Extension of Time) Act, 1923. 'Or a declaration as nearly corresponding thereto as circumstances permit' is translated as 'no dearbhú chó mór deabhramh leis agus is féidir sa chás' in s149(1) of the Industrial and Commercial Property Act, 1927, with 'and consolidated so far as circumstances admit with the existing purchase annuities' being translated as 'agus déanfar iad do chomhdhlúthú sa mhéid gur féidir é leis na blianachtaí ceannaigh atá ann cheana' in s55(2) of the Land Act, 1922. 'Make an order either decreasing or increasing that rate to such an extent as in the circumstances may seem just' is translated as 'ordú do dhéanamh ag laigheadú no ag méadú an ráta san oiread agus a dheabhróidh bheith cóir sa chás' in s169(3) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. Finally, to give a modern example, 'suspend the operation of the notice for such period as in the circumstances of the case he considers appropriate' is translated as 'oibriú an fhógra a fhionraí ar feadh cibé tréimhse a mheasfaidh sé is iomchuí in imthosca an cháis' in s11(5)(b) of the Safety in Industry Act, 1980. See further the commentary on the amended Article 41.3.2° where 'imthosca' expresses 'circumstances'.

an oiread ... agus is féidir 'I n-oiread sliogthe agus is féidir' is translated as 'in as many different ways as possible' in Dinneen, giving An tAth. Seóirse Mac Cúin's Réilthíní Óir (1922) as source. 'Chomh luath is is féidir liom' is translated by Ó Dónaill as 'as soon as I can', with 'is féidir (go)' being translated as 'it is possible (that)'. DIL cites 'uiread gráda ... 7 atá aige dhó féin' from Desiderius (1616) as the first of but a couple of examples of 'airet' with 'ocus' and relative clause. DIL translates 'étir, éter' as 'able; possible, feasible'. See the commentary on Article 6.2.

'All other currencies in proportion, so far as may be practicable, to the quotas of the members' is translated as 'gach airgeadra eile i gcomhréir, an oiread agus is féidir, le cuótaí na gcomhaltáí' in s1(c) of Article K of the Bretton Woods Agreement (Amendment) Act, 1977. De Bhaldraithe translates 'practicable' as 'indéanta'. Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'is féidir' is more intelligible than 'is indéanta'.

Direct translation

Go ndéanfar a oiread teaghlach agus is indéanta<sup>1</sup> sna himthosca a bhunú ar an talamh faoi shlándáil eacnamaíochta.

Variant

1 'is féidir'

ARTICLE 45.3.1° AIRTEAGAL 45.3.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Féachfaidh an Stát le fonn ar thionscnamh phríobháideach i gcúrsaí tionscail is tráchtála agus cuirfidh leis nuair is gá sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State will look eagerly at private initiative in industrial and commercial affairs and will augment/support it when that is necessary.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall favour and, where necessary, supplement private initiative in industry and commerce.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Favour' is expressed by 'féach le fonn ar', 'look eagerly at', in the Irish text.
- 2 'Supplement' is expressed by 'cuir le' ('augment' / 'support') in the Irish text.
- 3 'In industry and commerce' is expressed in the Irish text as 'i gcúrsaí tionscail is tráchtála', 'in industrial and commercial affairs'.

Commentary

ar thionscnamh príobháideach According to the official standard the adjective would not be lenited here following a masculine noun in the dative singular – see the commentary on Article 45.

'Initiative' is given as one of the senses of 'tionscnamh' in the Glossary accompanying An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, this being the verbal noun of 'tionscain', the first person singular, present indicative, of which is translated as 'I institute', as it is in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'tionscainm imeachtaí, I bring proceedings' and 'tionscnamh imeachtaí, institution of proceedings' are cited – note that 'ar thionscnamh' is translated as 'at the instance of' in Téarmaí Dlí. The verb 'tionscain' is translated as 'begin, originate; initiate; establish' in Ó Dónaill, 'tionscnamh' being translated as 'beginning, origin; introduction, initiation; institution, establishment'. Dinneen translates 'tionscnamh' principally as 'act of beginning, initiating, planning'. 'Tinnscna', 'tinnscnam', translated as (a) 'act of beginning' and (b) 'act of devising; design, project' in DIL, is the Middle Irish verbal noun of 'do-innscanna', translated as 'begins' in DIL, this verb glossing Latin 'incipere' in the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. 'Tinnscetal' (Modern Irish 'tionscadal') was the form of the earlier verbal noun.

See the commentary on Article 20.1 for early translations of 'initiative', 'tionscain' expressing 'initiate' in that Article. 'To promote private and entrepreneurial initiative in the Central and Eastern European countries' is translated as 'tionscnamh príobháideach agus fiontraíoch a chur chun cinn i dtíortha Lár agus Oirthear na hEorpa' in Article 1 of the Schedule to the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development Act, 1991. 'The President ... may convene a meeting of the Council of his own initiative' is translated as 'Féadfaidh Uachtarán ... (na Comhairle) cruinniú den Chomhairle a ghairm ar a thionscnamh féin' in s11 of the Second Schedule to the Medical Practitioners Act, 1978, with 'the Minister may, on his own initiative ... by order fix ... the charges' being translated as 'féadfaidh an tAire, uaidh féin ... na héilithe ... do cheapadh' in s102(4) of the Transport Act, 1944.

le fonn 'Rud a dhéanamh le fonn' is translated as 'to do something eagerly, gladly' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'fonn' as 'desire, wish, inclination, urge'. Dinneen translates 'le fonn' as 'intensely, eagerly', citing 'le fonn na fóla, with the intensity of animal passion'. According to DIL, 'fonn' seems confined to comparatively late Middle Irish and Modern Irish texts, DIL translating this headword as 'desire, fondness, pleasure'.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'favour' as 'taobhaím le, táim i bhfabhar, ar thaobh (scéime)', also giving 'cuidím le'. 'They do not favour their (the services) abandonment' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'níor gheall leo go n-éireofaí asta' in a 1926 Report of the Public Accounts Committee, with 'A. would be favoured by the presence of B' being cited as having been translated as 'ba mhaith le A. go dtiocfadh B.' in translations for the Department of Justice. 'Through the operation of the most-favoured-nation clause' is translated as 'as oibríú an chláis úd i dtaobh barr fábhair do náisiún ar leith' in Proposal V(a) in the League of Nations (Obligations of Membership) Act, 1935. 'Except where ... an aggregate majority of all the votes cast, favours such strike or other industrial action' is translated as 'ach amháin ... má bhíonn tromlach comhiomlán na vótaí go léir a caitheadh i bhfabhar na stailce nó an ghnímh tionscail eile sin' in s14(2)(e) of the Industrial Relations Act, 1990.

cuirfidh leis The pronoun 'sé', referring to 'an Stát', is understood here, i.e. 'cuirfidh sé leis'. See the commentary on Article 42.4 where 'cuir le' earlier expresses 'supplement'. Ó Dónaill cites 'má chuireann sé linn is fearde sinn é, it will be to our advantage if he supports us'. Dinneen includes '(I) prop up, co-operate with' among the senses of 'cuirim le'. 'Cur le' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'supplement' in 1925 translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health. De Bhaldraithe translates 'supplement' as 'cuirim le, cuirim breis le, forlíonaim (leabhar, etc.)', citing 'he supplemented his income by journalism, chuir sé lena theacht isteach le hiriseoireacht'.

'Supplemental' is translated as 'forlíontach' in Téarmaí Dlí, with 'supplemental deed' translated as 'gníomhas forlíontach'. 'Fóirlíona' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms from 'Dáil Div. 24/215'. In the Preamble to the Schedule to the Treaty (Confirmation of Supplemental Agreement) Act, 1924, 'Agreement supplementing Article Twelve of the Articles of Agreement for a Treaty between Great Britain and Ireland' is translated as 'Có-aontú le n-a bhfóirlíontar Airtíogal a Dó-Dhéag de sna hAirtíogail Chó-aontuithe do Chonnra idir an Bhreatain Mhóir agus Éire'. 'A weekly payment of supplementary welfare allowance may be made ... to supplement that person's other income' is translated as 'féadfar íocaíocht liúntais leasa fhorlíontaigh a íoc in aghaidh na seachtaine ... d'fhorlíonadh ar ioncam eile an duine sin' in s209(1)(b) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. 'That there is a global need to supplement reserves' is translated as 'go bhfuil riachtanas domhanda ann cúltaí a fhorlíonadh' in s1(b) of Article XVIII of the Schedule to the Bretton Woods Agreements (Amendment) Act, 1977.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where '(The State shall) supplement (private initiative)' was translated as 'déanfaidh sé é a fhorlíonadh', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that he doubted whether 'forlíonadh' could be used in that sense, 'forlíonadh' having the sense of 'to fill more' or 'to put more than its fill in'. Professor Ó Murchú recommends translating this clause as 'neartóidh sé leis', 'ádoigh sé air' or 'cuirfidh sé leis' – as in the original text.

i gcúrsaí tráchtála 'Tráchtála' is the genitive singular / attributive form of 'tráchtáil', 'dlí tráchtála' being translated as 'mercantile law', and 'tráchtáil' being translated as '(act of) trading; trade, commerce' in Ó Dónaill. See the commentary on Article 18.7.1<sup>iv</sup>. While 'sa tráchtáil' would be the usual translation of 'in commerce', being treated as an abstract noun preceded by the definite article (as 'an pholaitíocht' renders 'politics'), 'sa tionscal' would be read as 'in the industry' and this perhaps occasioned the introduction of 'i gcúrsaí' here, so that both 'tionscal' and 'tráchtáil' would be similarly qualifying 'i gcúrsaí'.

Standardised Irish text

Féachfaidh an Stát le fonn ar thionscnamh príobháideach i gcúrsaí tionscail is tráchtála agus cuirfidh leis nuair is gá sin.

Direct translation

Beidh an Stát i bhfabhar an tionscnaimh phríobháidigh i dtionscail agus sa tráchtáil agus, nuair is gá, neartóidh sé leis<sup>1</sup>.

Variant

<sup>1</sup> 'cuirfidh sé leis', 'ádoigh sé air'

ARTICLE 45.3.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 45.3.2<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELGE

Déanfaidh an Stát iarracht chun a chur in áirithe go stiúfar fiontraíocht phríobháideach i slí gur deimhin go ndéanfar earraí a tháirgeadh agus a imdháil le hinniúlacht réasúnta agus go gcosnófar an pobal ar bhrabús éagórach.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State will endeavour to ensure that private enterprise is / will be conducted so that it is certain that goods will be produced and distributed with reasonable competency and that the community will be protected from unjust profit.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall endeavour to secure that private enterprise shall be so conducted as to ensure reasonable efficiency in the production and distribution of goods and as to protect the public against unjust exploitation.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Exploitation' is expressed in the Irish text as 'brabús', the core meaning of which is 'profit', but which has in addition some nuance of the sense of financial exploitation; 'brabús' is translated merely as 'profit' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 'Efficiency' is expressed as 'inniúlacht', 'competency', in the Irish text.
- 'Reasonable efficiency in the production and distribution of goods' is expressed as 'go ndéanfar earraí a tháirgeadh agus a imdháil le hinniúlacht réasúnta' ('that goods will be produced and distributed with reasonable competency') in the Irish text.

- 4 'To secure' is expressed in the Irish text by 'a chur in áirithe', an expression more generally translated as 'to reserve', but also used in the Constitution to express 'to ensure'.

Commentary

le hinniúlacht 'Inniúlacht' is translated as 'competency' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'inniúlacht chonraithe' agus 'inniúlacht tiomnaithe' are translated respectively as 'capacity to contract' and 'testamentary capacity'. Ó Dónaill translates 'inniúlacht' as 'ability, competence, capacity', this being an abstract noun based on the adjective 'inniúil'. Dinneen translates 'inneamhail' as 'able, capable, earnest, eager, willing', giving no abstract noun based directly on this as a headword. 'Inneamh', on which the adjective is based, is translated as 'wealth, prosperity, power, profit, addition, help'. DIL translates 'inemail' as 'capable', Keating's seventeenth-century works being the principal source of the few examples cited there. 'Indeb' is translated as 'gain, increase, wealth' in DIL, where 'co mbetis i n-indiub fochricce domsa' ('so that they might be in gain of [the] reward to me') is cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

In s1 of Article VII of the Schedule to the Air Navigation and Transport (Preinspection) Act, 1986, 'to carry out with reasonable speed and efficiency preinspection for eligible flights of carriers' is translated as 'chun réamhniúchadh a dhéanamh, le luas agus éifeachtacht réasúnach, ar eitleí cáilithe ag iompróirí'. 'For the purpose of facilitating arrangements by which greater efficiency or economy can be effected' is translated as 'chun gurbh fhusaíde comhshocraíochtaí a dhéanamh lenar féidir éifeacht nó tíos níos feara a chur i gcrích' in s1 of the Local Government (Superannuation) Act, 1980. 'Ensure that the functions of the Authority are effectively carried out and performed with due efficiency' is translated as 'a chinntiú go ndéanfar feidhmeanna an Údaráis a chur i gcrích go héifeachtach agus a fheidhmiú le heifeacht chuí' in s30(1)(b) of the National Agricultural Advisory, Education and Research Authority Act, 1977. In s18(d) of the Gárda Síochána (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'the maintenance, training, discipline, and efficiency of the Gárda Síochána' is translated as 'coinneáil-suas, tréineáil, smacht, agus éifeachtúlacht an Ghárdá Síochána'.

Note that 'inniúil' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'efficient' in translations for the Department of Justice. 'With a view to devising a more economic and more efficient system' is translated as 'd'fhonn slí níos bailighe agus níos slachtmhaire do cheapa' in s7 of the 'Cavan County Scheme' in the First Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, with 'the duty and power of maintaining the drainage works ... in good repair and condition and proper and efficient working order' being translated as 'An dualgas agus an chomhacht chun an hoibreacha dréineála ... do choinneáil dea-dheisithe agus i dtreo mhaith agus in ordú ceart éifeachtúil chun oibre' in s19(1) of the Arterial Drainage Act, 1925.

De Bhaldráithe translates 'efficiency' as 'éifeachtacht (leighis, rialtais, etc.)', with 'efficiency (of persons)' being translated as 'cumas; feabhas, inniúlacht (chun gnó)'. 'Efficaciousness, efficacy' is translated as 'éifeachtúlacht'.

fiontraíocht This abstract noun today usually renders 'enterprise', and is translated as '(act of) venturing; riskiness; speculation, enterprise' in Ó Dónaill. Dinneen does not appear to give this headword, but translates the adjective 'fionntrach' as 'venturesome, dangerous, unsafe', this word being based on 'fiontar', as is 'fiontraíocht'. Ó Dónaill translates 'fiontar' as 'venture, risk; enterprise', the 'Department of Enterprise and Employment' being styled in Irish 'an Roinn Fiontar agus Fostaíochta'. 'Fiontar' is translated as 'risk' in Téarmaí Dlí, citing 'fiontar a ghabhas leis an bhfostaíocht, risk incidental to the employment'. Dinneen translates 'fionntar' as 'risk, jeopardy, struggle (used somewhat like venture)'. This word does not appear to be given as a headword in DIL.

'To further economic development by encouraging the growth of productive private enterprise in member countries' is translated as 'forbairt gheilleagrach a chur ar aghaidh trí fhás fiontraíochta príobháidí a ghríosadh i gcomhalta-thíortha' in Article 1 of the Schedule to the International Finance Corporation Act, 1958. 'That any activities of the Society bring the Society into competition with private enterprise' is translated as 'go gcuireann aon ghníomhaíochtaí de chuid an Chumainn ag iomaíocht le fiontraíocht phríobháideach' in s6(1) of the Red Cross Act, 1954. 'That ... a product ... is not being manufactured in the State by means of private enterprise' is translated as 'nach bhfuil táirge ... á mhonarú sa Stát trí fhiontraíocht phríobháideach' in s12(2)(a) of the Grass Meal (Production) Act, 1953, with 'that ... a particular chemical product ... is not being manufactured in the State by means of private enterprise' being translated as 'maidir le haon táirge ceimiceach áirithe ... ná fuil sé á dhéanamh sa Stát trí ghnóthas príobháideach' in s7(1) of the Industrial Alcohol (Amendment) Act, 1947. Finally, 'any person who is not engaged ... in agriculture or in a business or enterprise of any agricultural character' is translated simply as 'éinne ná fuil ag gabháil ... do thalmhaíocht nó do ghnó a bhaineann le talmhaíocht' in the Agricultural Credit Act, 1927.

go stiúrfar The future, passive, of 'stiúir', 'stiúraim' being translated as 'I conduct (a case, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Articles 12.8 and 40.6.1<sup>iii</sup>, where this verb respectively expresses 'direct' and 'control'. 'Conduct of public inquiries' is translated as 'Conas a stiúrófar fiosrúcháin phuiblí' in the Margin Title of s28 of the Arterial Drainage Act, 1925, with 'stiúra' being cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'conduct (of an office)' in the Proceedings of Seanad Éireann, 1924. 'Such matters as appear to the Commission to be necessary or expedient for the proper conduct of its business' is translated as 'pé nithe is dó leis an gCoimisiún is gá no is oiriúnach chun a ngnó do dhéanamh sa cheart' in s3(f) of the Tariff Commission Act, 1926. We find the current official term, 'seol', translating the verb 'conduct' as early as 1923, with 'The Comptroller and Auditor-General shall have full power to make from time to time orders and rules for the conduct of the internal business of this Department' being translated as 'Beidh lán-chomhacht ag an Árd-Scrúdóir órduithe agus rialacha do dhéanamh ó am go ham chun gach gnó laistig dá Roinn do sheola' in s6 of the Comptroller and Auditor General Act, 1923. 'The systems of control ... must be such as to secure that the society's business is so conducted ... that ... the information necessary ... is sufficiently accurate' is translated as 'ní mór na córais rialaithe ... a bheith de chineál a áiritheoidh go seolfar gnó na cuideachta ... ar chaoi a fhágfaidh ... go mbeidh an fhaisnéis is gá ... sách cruinn' in s76(7) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s2(2)(a)(ii) of the Insurance (No. 2) Act, 1983, '(that) the business of the insurer is being or has been so conducted as to jeopardise or prejudice the rights and interests of persons arising under policies issued by the insurer' is translated as 'go bhfuil nó go raibh gnó an árachóra á sheoladh ar shlí gur bhaol nó gur dhochar é do chearta agus leasanna daoine faoi pholasaithe a d'eisigh an t-árachóir'.

ar bhrabús 'Brabús' is translated as 'profit' in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill, who gives 'advantage' as the secondary sense. Dinneen translates 'brabús' as 'gain, profit, advantage, especially an unfair advantage, a weak point, a "catch", an opportunity'. 'Brabach' is also given as a headword in Ó Dónaill and in Dinneen, translated as (1) 'gain, profit', (2) 'benefit, advantage' and (3) 'surplus' in the former source, and as 'gain, profit, advantage; something over' in the latter. This term, unlike 'brabús', is also given as a headword in DIL, only two citations being given: 'glacadh áointighe do chum brabaigh' ('= to receive any house to hire') from the Rule of S. Clare, and 'brabach, advantage or benefit gained by anything' from the transcript of Peter O'Connell's Irish-English Dictionary in the Royal Irish Academy. De Bhaldraithe gives 'beirim brabús ar (dhuine)' and 'tagaim i dtír ar (dhuine)' as 'familiar' translations of 'I exploit', giving 'brabúsaí', along with 'saothraí' agus 'dúshaothraí', as translations of 'exploiter'. The abstract noun 'exploitation' is translated as 'saothrú' and 'dúshaothrú (lucht oibre)' by De Bhaldraithe.

'A patent shall not be granted in respect of ... an invention the publication or exploitation of which would be contrary to public order or morality' is translated as 'Ní dheonófar paitinn ... i leith aireagáin a mbeadh a fhoilsíú nó a shaothrú contrártha don ord poiblí nó don mhórlacht phoiblí' in s10 of the Patents Act, 1992. 'To advance the exploitation of water power in Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'chun úsáid chomhachta uisce do chur ar aghaidh i Saorstát Éireann' in s28(2) of the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1927. Finally, we find the following 'Definition' in s1 of the Censorship of Films (Amendment) Act, 1925:

The expression "exploitation sheet" means the document commonly known by that name amongst persons engaged in the trade of exhibiting pictures by means of a cinematograph or other similar apparatus ... cialluíonn an focal "leathán tuairisce" an scríbhinn ar a dtugtar an ainm sin do ghnáth imeasc daoine gurb é a ngnó pictiúirí do thaisbeáint le cinematagraf no le hinneal eile dá shamhail.

Commenting on 'dúshaothrú' in the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that, as we see in De Bhaldraithe above, the range of reference of this term is limited solely to work, i.e. to get too much work from people. This is not the sense involved in this subsection but charging people too much. Professor Ó Murchú is of the opinion therefore that one must use either the original phrase 'brabús', suggesting 'róbhrabús' as an alternative.

a tháirgeadh agus a imdháil 'Táirgeadh' is the verbal noun of 'táirg', translated as 'produce, manufacture' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'earraí a tháirgeadh, to produce goods'. 'Táirgim' is translated as 'I cause, effect, produce' in Dinneen. This simple verb comes from the compound verb 'do-áirci', translated principally as 'causes, effects, induces, brings about, brings (a result, etc.)' in DIL, where 'doáirci bethid dúnni tri chretim in Ísu Crist' ('it causes life to us through belief in Jesus Christ') is cited from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, 'produces, brings forth' and 'procures, gains, provides, supplies' being later senses.

'Saothrúchán' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'production' in the Proceedings of Dáil Éireann, 1926, p. 423. 'Or other requisites of agricultural production or marketing' is translated as 'no riachtanaisí eile i saothrú no i margáil tora thalmhaíochta' in s12(1)(a) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1927, with 'any cinematograph production' being translated as 'aon tabhairt-amach chinematografach' in s177(1) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927.

'Imdháileadh' is given as the verbal noun of 'imdháil', 'distribute', in Ó Dónaill, 'dáileadh' being given in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil as the form of the verbal noun of 'dailim' ('I distribute'), the prefix 'im-' ('about, around') being compounded with 'dail' in 'imdháil'. 'Imdháil' does not appear to be given as a headword either in Dinneen or in DIL, the former giving both 'dail' and 'dáileadh' as forms of the verbal noun of 'dailim', 'I dispense' being one of the senses of that verb. 'Dáilid' is translated as (i) 'portions out, pours out' and (ii) 'portions out, i.e. bestows, assigns, allots' in DIL, no examples appearing to be cited from the Old Irish Glosses. 'Dail' is the form of the verbal noun of 'dailid'. See the commentary on Article 28.12 regarding 'distribute'/'distribution', 'roinnt' expressing 'distribution' in that Article.

The Long Title of the Irish Medicines Board Act, 1995, 'An Act to make further provision in relation to the regulation of the manufacture, production ... and distribution of medicinal and cosmetic products', is translated as 'Acht do dhéanamh socrú breise i ndáil le rialáil a dhéanamh ar mhonarú, táirgeadh ... agus dáileadh táirgí leigheasacha agus cosmaideacha'. 'Relating to ... technical efficiency, increased production, efficient distribution of products and access to markets' is translated as 'a bhaineann ... le héifeacht teicniúil, le breis táirgíochta, le dáileadh éifeachtach ar tháirgí agus le cóir rochtana ar mhargaí' in s(f) of the Schedule to the Mergers, Take-overs and Monopolies (Control) Act, 1978. In s5 of the Sligo Lighting and Electric Powers Act, 1924, 'the production, generation, ... distribution and supply of electrical energy or power' is translated as 'neart no comhacht leictiriciúil do dhéanamh, do gheiniúint, ... do roinnt agus do sholáthar'.

Déanfaidh an Stát iarracht 'Iarracht do thabhairt' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'endeavour' in translations for the Department of Justice. 'The Controller shall endeavour to secure that the relevant plant variety is maintained in quality' is translated as 'féachfaidh an Rialaitheoir lena áirithiú go ndéanfar an cineál planda iomchuí a chothabháil ó thaobh cáilíochta' in s8(4) of the Plant Varieties (Proprietary Rights) Act, 1980, with 'the Controller ... shall endeavour to secure equality of advantage among the several licences' being translated as 'féachfaidh an Ceannasaí le comhionannas buntáiste a áirithiú i measc na gceadúnaithe ar leithligh' in s37(3)(b) of the Patents Act, 1964. 'He shall also endeavour to secure equality of advantage amongst several licences' is translated as 'tabharfa sé fé n-a chur in áirithe leis, go mbeidh có-ionannas buntáiste imeasc na gceadúnaithe uile agus fé seach' in s40(1)(b)(iii) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927.

éagórach See the commentary on Article 40.3.2°. 'That it would be unjust and inequitable not to make the order' is translated as 'nach mbeadh sé ceart ná cóir gan an t-ordú a dhéanamh' in s5(d) of the Fifth Schedule to the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'Impose unjust or unreasonable conditions in regard to the supply or distribution of goods' is translated as 'a fhorchuireann coinníollacha míchóra nó míréasúnacha maidir le soláthar nó imdháil earraí' in s(h) of the Third Schedule to the Restrictive Practices Act, 1972, with 'a fhorchuireas coinníollacha míchóra nó neamh-réasúnacha maidir le soláthar no imdháil earraí' being found in s(h) of the Second Schedule to the Restrictive Trade Practices Act, 1953.

go gcosnófar ... ar See the commentary on Articles 15.10 and 40.3.2° regarding 'protect'. 'All practicable measures shall be taken to protect those persons against inhalation of the dust or fume or other impurity' is translated as 'déanfar gach beart is féidir chun na daoine sin a chosaint ar an deannach nó an múch nó an eisionacht eile a anáil isteach' in the Table to s20 of the Safety in Industry Act, 1980. In Article 20 of the 1922 Constitution, 'to protect itself and its members against any person or persons interfering with ... its members' is translated as 'é féin agus a bhaill do chosaint ar aon duine no daoine a bhainfidh le n-a bhaill'.

gur deimhin The adjective 'deimhin' is translated as 'sure, certain' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'is deimhin (go)' as 'it is certain (that)' – see the commentary on Article 40.4.2°, where 'mura deimhin le' expresses 'unless satisfied'. DIL s.v. 'deimin', cites 'amal bid Dia farid gellad ... bad demnithir sin' ('let it be as sure as if God had declared it') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Commentary on the Psalter. Note that the phrase usually expressing 'ensure', 'a chur in áirithe', is used in this subsection to express 'to secure'.

a chur in áirithe See the commentary on Article 15.10 regarding this phrase expressing 'ensure' and see the commentary on Article 28.3.3° regarding this same phrase earlier expressing 'secure', which is expressed by 'cuir i bhfeidhm' in Article 38.3.1°.

Standardised Irish text

Déanfaidh an Stát iarracht chun a chur in áirithe go stiúrfar fiontraíocht phríobháideach i slí gur deimhin go ndéanfar earraí a tháirgeadh agus a imdháileadh le hinniúlacht réasúnta agus go gcosnófar an pobal ar bhrabús éagórach.

Direct translation

Féachfaidh an Stát lena áirithiú go seolfar an fhiontraíocht phríobháideach ar shlí a áiritheoidh<sup>1</sup> go mbainfidh éifeachtacht réasúnta le táirgeadh agus dáileadh earraí agus go gcosnófar an pobal ar róbhrabús<sup>2</sup> éagórach.

Variants

- 1 'a dheimhneoidh'
- 2 'ar bhrabús', 'ar dhúshaothrú'

ARTICLE 45.4.1° AIRTEAGAL 45.4.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Gabhann an Stát air féin cosaint sonrach a dhéanamh ar leas gheilleagrach na n-aicmí is lú cumhacht den phobal agus, nuair a bheas riachtanas leis, cabhair maireachtála a thabhairt don easlán, don bhaintreach, don dilleacht agus don sean.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State takes upon itself specifically to protect the economic welfare of the classes in the community whose power is least and, when it will be necessary, to give subsistence help to the infirm, to the widow, to the orphan and to the old.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State pledges itself to safeguard with especial care the economic interests of the weaker sections of the community, and, where necessary, to contribute to the support of the infirm, the widow, the orphan, and the aged.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'To contribute to the support of' is expressed in the Irish text as 'cabhair maireachtála a thabhairt do', 'to give subsistence help to'.
- 2 'The weaker sections' is expressed as 'na haicmí is lú cumhacht' ('the classes whose power is least') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Pledges itself' is expressed by 'gabhann air féin' ('undertakes' / 'takes upon itself') in the Irish text.
- 4 'To safeguard with especial care' is expressed as 'cosaint sonrach a dhéanamh ar' ('specifically to defend') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Interests' is expressed as 'leas', 'interest'/'welfare', in the Irish text.

Commentary

Gabhann ... air féin 'Assume, undertake' is given as a secondary sense of 'gabh ar' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ghabh sé air féin an obair a dhéanamh, he undertook to do the work'. Dinneen translates 'gabhaim orm' as 'I take on myself, take up a challenge'. DIL cites 'gabhuid sin ortha fein' ('they undertake to do that'), from the Lives of Irish Saints, as an example of 'gaibid for', with reflexive pronoun, in the sense of 'takes (a burden, responsibility on one's self), undertakes'.

'The Contracting Parties pledge themselves in such cases to grant extradition in accordance with their laws and treaties in force' is translated as 'Gabhann na Páirtithe Conarthacha orthu féin eiseachadhadh a dhéanamh i gcásanana den sórt sin de réir a ndlíthe agus na gconarthaí a bheidh i bhfeidhm' in Article VII of the Schedule to the Genocide Act, 1973. In the 'Form of Declaration' in the Second Schedule to the Gárda Síochána (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'I ... do solemnly and sincerely before God declare and affirm and my word and honour pledge that I will be faithful' is translated as 'Dinim-se ... a fhaisnéis agus a dheimhniú agus m'fhocal agus m'onóir do thabhairt, go solamanta agus go macánta i láthair Dé, go mbead dílis'.

In the 1993 Joint Declaration (p. 4), 'but he pledges in the meantime that ... no Northern Unionist should ever have to fear' is translated as 'ach geallann sé idir an dá linn ... nár cheart go mbeadh eagla choíche ar aon duine d'Aontachtaithe an Tuaiscirt', with 'We will give a lead by honouring the pledge in the public sector' being translated as 'Beimid ar thús cadhnaíochta agus comhlíonfaimid an gealltanais san earnáil phoiblí' in the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97 (p. 35). 'I pledge credit' is translated as 'cuirim creidmheas i ngeall' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'gealltán' translating the noun 'pledge'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'pledge' as 'tugaim (m'fhocal, gealltanais)', translating 'to be pledged to do something' as 'bheith faoi ghealltanais rud a dhéanamh'.

cosaint sonrath According to the official standard 'sonrath' would be lenited here, being an adjective qualifying a feminine noun; the rule regarding non-lenition of 'd', 't', 's' after 'd', 'n', 't', 'l' and 's' only applies to qualifying nouns – see An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, chapter on 'Séimhiú and Urú', s6(i) and s6 of the part headed 'Séimhiú ar Aidiachtaí', where 'an áit shalach' is cited as an example. See the commentary on Articles 40.3.2°, 45.2 and 45.2.iii regarding 'sonrath' and see the commentary on Articles 24.1, 28.3.2° and 40.3.1° regarding 'cosaint', expressing respectively 'preserve', 'protect' and 'defend'.

De Bhaldraithe translates 'safeguard' as 'cuirim ar lámh shábháilte, cosnaím', the latter headword being translated as 'I defend' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'To safeguard the interests of the Bank' is translated as 'chun leasanna an Bhainc a chosaint' in s44(2)(h) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'Whose duty it is to safeguard the interests of the Parties to the conflict' is translated as 'agus is é a ndualgas sin leasanna na bPáirtithe sa choinbhleacht a chaomhnú' in Article 8 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962, with 'and to safeguard the rights of the other party to the contract' being translated as 'agus chun cearta an pháirtí eile sa chonradh a chosaint' in s4(c) of the Schedule to the Great Northern Railway Act, 1958. In s14(3) of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1923, 'for the purpose of safeguarding all persons concerned' is translated as 'chun leas gach éinne le n-a mbaineann do chosaint'. Note, however, that 'in relation to the safeguarding of the health of the people' is translated as 'maidir le caomhaint shláinte na ndaoine' in s21(6)(a) of the Local Government Act, 1925.

As regards 'especial', 'that there is an especial danger of the spread of infestation of persons and articles' is translated as 'go bhfuil contúirt speisialta ann go leathnóidh foiriciú daoine agus earraí (ón mbunaíocht sin)' in s49(1) of the Health Act, 1947. 'Where an establishment or institution is confined ... to persons of one sex requiring special care, supervision or treatment' is translated as 'i gcás ar daoine de ghnéas amháin ... atá i mbunachas nó in institiúid is daoine ar gá aire, maoirseacht nó cóireáil ar leith lena n-aghaidh' in s17(2)(c) of the Employment Equality Act, 1977. 'Are certified ... not to require special care and treatment in a fully equipped mental hospital' is translated as 'a bheas ... deimhnithe ... nach gá dóibh aireachas agus cóireáil speisialta in óspidéal meabhairghalar lánfheistithe' in s22(1) of the Mental Treatment Act, 1945.

cabhair maireachtála One would also expect 'cabhair mhaireachtála' here, 'cabhair' being a feminine noun. 'Cabhair a thabhairt do dhuine' is translated as 'to give help to someone' in Ó Dónaill, 'maireachtáil' being translated as 'living, livelihood, subsistence', Ó Dónaill citing 'cóir mhaireachtála, means of subsistence'. Téarmaí Dlí cites 'gan a chuma air cóir mhaireachtála a bheith aige, with no visible means of subsistence'. Dinneen translates 'cabhair' as 'help, assistance, support ...'; he does not appear to give 'maireachtáil' as a headword, giving instead the variant form (in Ó Dónaill), 'maireachtain(t)', translated as 'act of living, etc., livelihood'. DIL cites 'lase dombeir dia cobrith n-occo' ('when God gives help therein') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles as an example of 'cobair' ('help, assistance'), citing 'cabhair fhaghla' ('military help'), from a miscellaneous collection of Classical Irish poetry, along with 'guth gan chabhair choigríche' (of the Irish language) from Keating's seventeenth-century poetry, as examples of 'cobair' with descriptive genitive.

'All patients must contribute towards their maintenance according to their means' is translated as 'Caithfidh gach othar cabhrú do réir a acuinnne chun a chimeáda suas' in s11 of the 'Details' in the 'Leitrim County Scheme' in the First Schedule of the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. 'Such amount as the Minister determines that the relevant pensioner ... could reasonably be expected to contribute to the support of the carer' is translated as 'cibé méid a chinneadh an tAire a bhféadfaí a bheith ag dréim le réasún go n-iocfadh an pinsinéir iomchuí ... é chun an cúramóir a chothú' in s18(2)(b) of the Social Welfare Act, 1990. The Long Title of the Illegitimate Children (Affiliation Orders) Act, 1930, reads as follows:

An Act to make provision for the imposition on the father of an illegitimate child of the obligation to contribute to the support or otherwise in respect of such child. ... Acht chun socrú do dhéanamh chun a chur mar oblagáid ar athair leinbh thabhartha cabhair do thabhairt chun an leanbh san do chothú no cabhrú leis ar shlí eile.

'And that the parent or guardian is able to support the child' is translated as 'agus gur féidir leis an tuiste nó an caomhnóir an leanbh a chothabháil' in s5(1)(c) of the Children (Amendment) Act, 1957. 'Has sufficient means to support the child' is translated as 'gur leor a acmhainn chun an leanbh a chothú' in s13(1) of the Adoption Act, 1952. 'In possession of the lowest interest in the building ground which is sufficient to support the grant on the said day of a lease for one hundred and fifty years' is translated as 'i seilbh an leasa is isle sa talamh tógála is leor chun neartuithe le léas céad go leith blian do dheonadh an lá san' in s60(2)(b) of the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1931. 'Investment in and support of bodies corporate' is translated as 'Infheistiú i gcomhlachtaí corpraithe agus tacú leo' in the Margin Title of s28 of the Building Societies Act, 1989, with 'to support a nomination at a meeting of the society' being translated as 'tacú le hainmniúchán ag cruinniú den chumann' in s18(2).

'That the harbour authority shall cease to contribute to the maintenance by the local authority of the roads' is translated as 'go scoirfidh an t-údarás cuain de ranníoc a dhéanamh i leith cothabhála na mbóithre ag an údarás áitiúil' in s178(2)(a) of the Harbours Act, 1946. 'Its construction contributes or will contribute significantly to meeting those needs' is translated as 'go gcabhraíonn nó go gcabhróidh a fhoirgníú go mór chun freastal do na riachtanais sin' in s10(b)(ii) of the Finance Act, 1990. 'The insured person did not directly or indirectly induce or contribute to the happening of the accident by his conduct outside the employment' is translated as 'nach ndearna an duine árachaithe go díreach ná go neamhdhíreach trína iompar lasmuigh den fhostaíocht ... tarlú na tionóisce a aslú nó cabhrú lena tarlú' in s39(2)(c) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981.

easlán This headword is translated as 'sick person, invalid' in Ó Dónaill, and as 'a sick or infirm person' in Dinneen. DIL cites 'torramad eslánú' ('let him tend the sick') from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster, 'eslán' being composed of the negative prefix 'eas-, eis-' (translated as 'ex-, dis-' in Dinneen) and 'slán' ('whole, sound, unimpaired, healthy, safe' in DIL).

'Or be afflicted with some permanent affirmity disabling him from the due execution of his office' is translated as 'no mara mbeidh easláinte éigin bhuan ag gabháil do ná fágfaidh ar a chumas a oifig do chó-líona go cuibhe' in s2(3) of the Comptroller and Auditor-General Act, 1923. 'The care and treatment of the sick or infirm' is translated as 'aireachas agus cóireáil daoine breoite nó daoine easlána' in s2 of the International Health Bodies (Corporate Status) Act, 1971. 'The wounded and sick, as well as the infirm and expectant mothers, shall be the object of particular protection and respect' is translated as 'Tabharfar coimirce agus urraim ar leith don lucht créachtaithe agus breoite, agus do na heaslán agus do mhná atá le haghaidh clainne' in Article 16 of the Fourth Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962. In s16 of the 'Wicklow County Scheme' in the First Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'That one Home for the aged and infirm ... shall be established for County Wicklow' is translated as 'Aon Teaghlach amháin do sheandaoine agus do dhaoine fannlaga ... do bhunú do Chontae Chill Mhanntáin', with 'the body of the house being set apart for the aged, infirm ...' being translated as 'corp an tigh do chimeád i gcóir seandaoine, lucht anbhfainne' in s8 of the 'Clare County Scheme'.

De Bhaldraithe translates the adjective 'infirm' as 'easlán, éigli, cróilí'.

don bhaintreach 'Baintreabhach' is translated as 'a widow, a widower' in Dinneen, who cites 'baintreabhach fir, a widower' and 'baintreabhach mná, a widow'. Ó Dónaill's entry s.v. 'baintreach' is as follows: (1) 'baintreach (mná), widow' and (2) 'baintreach (fir), widower'. 'Baintreabhach', which is translated simply as 'widow' in DIL, is a compound of 'ben' ('woman') and 'trebhach' (translated as 'householder, farmer' in DIL), this word being based on 'treb', translated primarily as 'house, farm, holding' in DIL – 'mac na bantrebthaige' (1 Kings xvii. 17) is cited from the Gaelic Maundeville. Note that 'widower' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'baintreach fir' in translations for the Department of Industry and Commerce. 'To make suitable provision for his widow Mrs. Maud Griffith' is translated as 'soláthar oiriúnach do dhéanamh dá bhaintrigh Meadhbh Uí Ghriobhtha' in the Preamble to the Griffith Settlement Act, 1923.

don dilleacht The form 'dilleachta' is given in the Glossary accompanying An Caighdeán Oifigiúil, where it is translated as 'orphan', 'dilleachta' being similarly translated in Ó Dónaill, who gives this as the standard form of 'dilleacht'. The form 'dileacht' is given as the headword in Dinneen, who gives 'dilleacht' as a variant. The nominative plural, 'in dilechtaí', glosses Latin 'orfani' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Psalms, 'dilechtae' being given in DIL as the early form of this word, which is perhaps a compound of 'di' and 'slicht' (in the sense of 'offsprings, family').

'Where the weekly means of the orphan do not exceed £1' is translated as 'i gcás nach mó ná £1 acmhainn sheachtainiúil an dilleachta' in s183(a) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. 'The word "orphan" means a child both of whose parents are dead' is translated as 'cialluíonn an focal "dilleachtaí" leanbh go bhfuil a athair agus a mháthair marbh' in s3(1) of the Widows' and Orphans' Pensions Act, 1936, with 'as if they were the orphan children of such man' being translated as 'fé is dá mba leanbhaí dilleachta leis an bhfear san iad' in s3(2). 'Allowances to his widow or orphan children' is translated as 'liúntaisí dá bhaintrigh nó dá chlainn ina dhiaidh' in s4 of the Railways (Existing Officers and Servants) Act, 1926. Finally, in s2 of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, "'orphan" means ... a qualified child, being a legitimate child, both of whose parents are dead', is translated as 'ciallaíonn "dilleachta" ... leanbh cáilithe, ar leanbh dlisteanach é, a bhfuil a bheirt tuismitheoir marbh'.

don sean 'Urraim don sean' is translated as 'respect for the aged' in Ó Dónaill, with Dinneen translating 'sean', as a noun, as 'an old person, an ancestor, an elder, an ancient'. 'Sen' glosses Latin 'senex' in the ninth-century St Gall Glosses on Priscian, DIL also citing 'is alind sen sobrich' ('delightful is a sober old man') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

In s4 of the 'Monaghan County Scheme' in the First Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'The Home to accommodate all the aged and infirm, harmless lunatics, imbeciles, and chronic cases' is translated as 'Slí do bheith sa Teaghlach do gach seandúine, duine fann-lag, gealt nea-dhiobhálach, amadán, agus síor-breoiteachán'.

cosaint na n-aicmí See the commentary on Articles 40.6.2° and 44.2.4° as regards 'aicme', expressing respectively 'class' and 'denomination'. As regards 'section', in s24(5) of the Constitution (Amendment No. 17) Act, 1931, 'the expression "public meeting" means a meeting at which all members of the public or any particular class or section or classes or sections of the public are invited ... to be present' is translated as 'cialluíonn an abairt "cruinniú puiblí" cruinniú ag a dtugtar cuireadh ... do gach duine den phobal no d'aon aicme no dream no aicmí no dreamanna áirithe den phobal bheith i láthair'. In s3(1) of the Dublin Reconstruction (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1924, 'in addition to any plans and sections of the proposed work' is translated as 'i dteannta aon phleananna agus gearrtha i gcóir na hoibre beartuithe', with 'interchanged between broad and narrow gauge sections of the company's railway' being translated as 'a malairteofar idir roinn leathan agus roinn chaol de bhóthar iarainn na cuideachtan' in s5 of the Sixth Schedule to the Railways Act, 1924.

Note that in the New Ireland Forum Report (1984, 3.11) 'both sections of the community' is translated as 'an dá chuid den phobal', with 'both sections of the community in the North' being translated as 'an dá dhrong de phobal an Tuaiscirt' (2.3). 'Representative of a broad section of prominent Irish-American business people' is translated as 'agus atá ionadaíoch do phobal leathan lucht gnó mór-le-rá Éireannach-Meiriceánach' in the Programme for a Partnership Government, 1993-97 (p. 14). 'Article 47 of the EEC Treaty lays down that its Agricultural Section shall have as its task' is translated as 'tá sé leagtha síos in Airteagal 47 de Chonradh CEE go mbeidh de chúram ar rannóg talmhaíochta an Choiste sin' in the Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 1492). Note finally that the Translation Section of the Houses of the Oireachtas is styled 'Rannóg an Aistriúcháin'.

nuair a bheas riachtanas leis See the commentary on Article 45.2.i regarding 'riachtanas' and note that 'preventing the withholding of any such necessities from the community' is translated as 'chun cosc do chur le haon riachtanaisí den tsórt san do chimeád siar o sna daoine' in s2(1)(e) of the Protection of the Community (Special Powers) Act, 1926. In s28(b) of the Finance Act, 1989, 'and, where necessary to grant to each allowable investor company concerned an amount of relief' is translated as 'agus, más gá, d'fhonn méid faoisimh ... a dheonú do gach cuideachta infheistiúcháin'. 'To inspect all or any of such documents and where necessary, to open sealed packets' is translated as 'gach ceann no aon cheann de na scríbhinní sin d'iniúchadh agus, i gcás inar gá san, pacáidí séaluithe d'oscailt' in s39(3) of the Referendum Act, 1942.

ar leas gheilleagrach See the commentary on Article 45 regarding lenition of the adjective qualifying a masculine noun in the dative case – according to the official standard, this would have the form 'ar leas gheilleagrach'. 'Leas' is translated as 'interest (i.e. beneficial etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí.

a bheas See the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s', the above phrase now generally being written as 'a bheidh'.

Standardised Irish text

Gabhann an Stát air féin cosaint shonrach a dhéanamh ar leas gheilleagrach na n-aicmí is lú cumhacht den phobal agus, nuair a bheidh riachtanas leis, cabhair mhaireachtála a thabhairt don easlán, don bhaintreach, don dilleachta agus don sean.

Direct translation

Tugann an Stát gealltanas go ndéanfaidh sé leas eacnamaíochta na ranna laga den phobal a chosaint le haire<sup>1</sup> ar leith agus, más gá, cuidiú a thabhairt maidir le tacú leis an easlán, leis an mbaintreach, leis an dilleachta, agus leis an sean.

Variant

<sup>1</sup> 'le cúram'

ARTICLE 45.4.2<sup>o</sup> AIRTEAGAL 45.4.2<sup>o</sup>

TÉACS GAELGE

Déanfaidh an Stát iarracht chun a chur in áirithe nach ndéanfar neart agus sláinte lucht oibre, idir fheara is mná, ná maoth-óige leanaí a éagóradh, agus nach mbeidh ar shaoránaigh, de dheasca uireasa, dul le gairmeacha nach n-oireann dá ngné nó dá n-aois nó dá neart.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The State will endeavour to ensure that the strength and health of workers, both men and women, nor the tender youth of children will not be wronged, and that citizens will not have to, because of want, take up occupations that do not suit their kind or their age or their strength.

ENGLISH TEXT

The State shall endeavour to ensure that the strength and health of workers, men and women, and the tender age of children shall not be abused and that citizens shall not be forced by economic necessity to enter avocations unsuited to their sex, age or strength.

Divergences between the official texts

- 'Sex' is expressed as 'gné' ('kind') in the Irish text, the derivative 'gnéas' rather than 'gné' being the usual term today rendering 'sex'; 'to their sex, age or strength' is expressed in the Irish text as 'dá ngné nó dá n-aois nó dá neart', 'to their sex or to their age or to their strength'.
- 'The tender-age of children' is expressed as 'maoth-óige leanaí' ('the tender youth of children') in the Irish text.
- 'Shall not be forced' is expressed as 'nach mbeidh ar' ('will not have to') in the Irish text.
- 'By economic necessity' is expressed as 'de dheasca uireasa' ('because of want') in the Irish text, which phrase is preceded and followed by a comma in the Irish text alone.
- 'Ensure' is expressed by 'a chur in áirithe', which phrase we have seen expressing 'secure' in s3.2<sup>o</sup> of this Article, and expressing 'ensure' in some earlier Articles, 'to reserve' being the usual sense of this phrase today.

Commentary

dul le gairmeacha 'Take to, engage in' is given as one of the senses of 'téigh le' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'dul le polaitíocht, to engage in politics' and 'ní rachadh an mac le feirmeoireacht dó, the son wouldn't take up farming for him'. DIL gives 'devotes oneself to, adopts, takes a certain course' as one of the senses of 'téit fri', citing 'docotar iterum fri tola in betho' ('they have given themselves over again to worldly desires') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, citing 'conn-dechaid re filidecht' ('... took up poetry') from a later source.

'Gairmeacha' is the plural of 'gairm', 'profession, occupation' being given as a secondary sense of that headword in Ó Dónaill and 'avocation or condition of life' being included among its senses in Dinneen – see the commentary on Articles 13.5.2° and 18.7.1°i regarding 'gairm', expressing respectively 'commission' and 'professional interest'.

'To enable them to resume their previous avocations and earn their livelihood' is translated as 'ionas go mbeidh ar a gcumas gabháil arís do na slite beatha a bhí acu cheana agus a mbeatha a thuilleamh' in the Preamble to the Convalescent Home Stillorgan (Charter Amendment) Act, 1958. 'He possesses the requisite knowledge and ability to enter on the discharge of the duties of that position' is translated as 'go bhfuil aige an t-eolas agus an ábaltacht is gá chun dul i gciunn dualgas an phoist sin a chomhlíonadh' in s17(1)(a) of the Civil Service Commissioners Act, 1956, the same English text (with 'his duties in that situation' replacing 'the duties of that position') being translated as 'go bhfuil an t-eolas agus an ábaltacht san aige is gá dho a bheith aige chun dul i mbun a dhualgaisí sa phost san' in s3(2)(d) of the Civil Service Regulation Act, 1923.

idir fheara is mná 'Fir' is the standard form of the plural of 'fear', with 'feara' and 'fearaibh' being used in certain phrases, according to Ó Dónaill, none of which phrases appears to be cited s.v. 'fear'. Ó Dónaill cites 'idir fhir agus mhná, both men and women', however, s.v. 'idir'. Dinneen cites 'idir fear is bean, men and women alike, all'. See the commentary on Article 45.2.i for citations of 'eter mnaí is fer' and 'etir fer 7 mnaí' from earlier literature.

lucht oibre This phrase is translated as 'workpeople' in Ó Dónaill and as 'workers' in Dinneen. Ó Dónaill gives '(class, category, of) people' as the secondary sense of 'lucht', which in this sense is not inflected in the genitive singular, according to Ó Dónaill. 'Lucht' is translated principally as 'contents, charge' in DIL (which sense 'lucht' still has in Modern Irish) and secondly as 'people, class of persons, category', nearly always with defining genitive or clause. According to DIL, the earlier meaning of 'lucht' with defining genitive was 'those occupying, inhabiting (and hence also possessing)', citing 'luct Corint' ('the people of Corinth') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles; 'a lucht adartha' ('his followers') is cited from Leabhar na hUídhre (compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100) as an example of 'lucht' with following verbal noun clause in the sense of 'those who (perform certain actions, are engaged in certain occupations)'. See the commentary on Articles 12.10.6° and 27.2 where we find respectively 'lucht tagartha' and 'lucht achainí', the latter expressing 'petitioners'.

We find the current general term translating 'worker', 'oibri', in the Schedule to the Appropriation Act, 1922, for example, where 'contributions to ... the Unemployed Workers' Dependendants' Fund' is translated as 'sintíúisi ... don Chiste um Muirir Oibríthe Díomhaoine'.

dá ngné 'Gné' is translated as (1) 'species, kind' and (2) 'form, appearance' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'gné de rud, an aspect of something' as an example of the secondary sense, this being one of the most common usages of 'gné' today. Dinneen translates 'gné' as 'that by which a thing is known, characteristic, mark, specimen; form, appearance, countenance; an accident (in philosophy); colour, tint; apparition; good appearance; a kind or sort, a species'. Like Ó Dónaill, DIL translates 'gné' as (a) 'kind, species', citing 'fúad et gné' ('form and kind') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles and 'gné ferrdha dib 7 gné bannda' (of diamonds) from the Gaelic Maunde-ville, and (b) 'form', (i) 'of outward appearance, appearance of countenance', citing 'gné firinne fuiri' ('the appearance of righteousness') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Psalms, and (2) 'way, manner'. See the commentary on Article 9.1.3° for 'sex' in the Constitution.

maoth-óige A compound of the adjective 'maoth', translated principally as 'soft, tender' in Ó Dónaill (who cites 'leanbh maoth, tender child') and the abstract noun 'óige' ('youth'), this compound not being cited as a headword either in Ó Dónaill or in Dinneen. Both, however, give 'maothóg' as a headword, the former translating this noun as (1) 'soft thing; soft person, softy' and (2) 'shell-less egg', Dinneen translating 'maothóg' as 'a soft-shelled egg'. 'Maethóclach', 'a youth', is cited in DIL from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac, for example, which were composed in the second half of the eleventh century, where we find 'oclach 7 moethoclach 7 senoir' ('man, youth and greybeard' [of the three Magi]). Old Irish 'moith', later 'maeth' ('moeth'), is translated as 'soft, tender, yielding (of substance or texture, also in figurative sense)' in DIL, with the sense 'tender, delicate' of persons, 'often denoting immaturity or youth', citing 'minores .i. inn aes moith 7 anfoirbthe' ('or minores, i.e. the tender and imperfect') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Psalms.

Dinneen includes 'tender' among the senses of 'moigli', 'maoth' and 'saghal', with 'frithir' and 'iogair' being included among the terms issued by the Department of Education. 'Maoth-chroidheach' is translated as 'tender-hearted' in Dinneen, 'tiom(a)-chroidhe' being translated as 'a tenderheart, tenderness'. 'Maoth-bhleántracha' is cited in Téarmaí Oifigiúla as translating 'tender loins' in the Pigs and Bacon Act, 1937.

Regarding the hyphen in 'maoth-óige', according to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil ('Na Rialacha', s24 (iv)), the hyphen is inserted in cases where there is a danger that the compound would not be recognisable without the hyphen; the hyphen here certainly makes it clear that we are dealing with a compound of 'maoth' and 'óige' as against an inflected form of 'maothóg'.

a éagóradh 'Éagóradh' is the verbal noun of 'éagóir', the variant form of the verb 'éagóirigh', 'wrong', in Ó Dónaill, with 'éagóiriú' being given as the standard form of the verbal noun. The noun 'éagóir' is translated as 'wrong' in Téarmaí Díl, where 'duine éagóraithe, aggrieved person (i.e. injured)' is also cited, this being given as 'duine éagóirithe' in Ó Dónaill. 'Éagóir' is translated as 'a crime; wrong, injustice, iniquity, unrighteousness, a foul (in athletics, etc.)' in Dinneen. 'Éccóir', the negative of 'cóir', is translated as 'incongruous, wrong, inaccurate, improper, unjust, unfitting', as an adjective, in DIL, citing 'manip ecoir frisín stoir' ('if it be not at variance with the history') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Psalms, and as 'wrong, impropriety, injustice', as a noun, citing 'écoir dungni som ón' ('the wrong which he does'), from the same collection of Glosses.

That the rights conferred by this section are being abused to secure needless publicity for defamatory matter' is translated as 'go bhfuil mí-úsáid á baint as na cearta a thugtar leis an alt seo chun poiblíocht gan gá a fháil d'ábhar clúmhillteach' in s86(4) of the Building Societies Act, 1989, with 'go bhfuil na cearta a thugtar leis an alt seo á mí-úsáid chun poiblíocht gan ghá a fháil d'ábhar clúmhillteach' being found in s182(4) of the Companies Act, 1963. 'The monopoly rights under a patent shall be deemed to have been abused in any of the following circumstances' is translated as 'Tuigfar mí-úsáid do bheith déanta de sna cirt aon-tseilbhe fé phaitinn in aon chás acu so a leanas' in s43(2) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. Note that 'the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1982', is cited in Irish as 'an tAcht chun Droch-Bhearta Toghcháin a Chosc, 1982', following the citation in Irish of 'the Prevention of Electoral Abuses Act, 1923', 'an tAcht chun Droch-bhearta Toghcháin do Chosc, 1923'.

uireasa See the commentary on Article 41.2.2° regarding the phrase 'de dheasca uireasa' and note further that DIL cites 'do fháguibh [d]juiresbaidh bennaighthe an taobh budh tuaidh' ('he left the north side without blessing') from the seventeenth-century Martyrology of Donegal.

Looking at 'necessity' in the Acts, 'in case of urgent military necessity' is translated as 'i gcás géar-riachtanais mhíleata' in Article 33 of the First Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962, with 'extensive destruction and appropriation of property, not justified by military necessity and carried out unlawfully and wantonly' being translated as 'diothú a dhéanamh agus seilbh a ghlacadh go forleathan ar mhaoín nuair nach bhfuil riachtanas míleata leis agus nuair a dhéantar é go neamhdhleathach agus go hainrianta' in Article 50. In s15 of the Public Safety (Emergency Powers) Act, 1923, 'the exercise by the Military Forces of Saorstát Éireann of any of the powers or authorities exercisable by them by virtue of military necessity arising in the course of the performance of their duty' is translated as 'feidhmiú do dhéanamh ar aon cheann de sna comhachta no na húdaráis is infheidhmithe acu san de bhua riachtanas míleata d'eirghe le linn iad do bheith ag có-líona a ndualgais'.

neart "Actual alcoholic strength by volume" means the number of volumes of pure alcohol contained at a temperature of 20°C in 100 volumes of the product at that temperature' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "an neart alcólach iarbhír de réir toirte" an líon toirteanna d'alcól íon atá, ag teocht 20°C, i 100 toirt den táirge ag an teocht sin' in s37(1) of the Finance Act, 1989. 'The strength of the bargaining positions relative to each other' is translated as 'a láidre atá staideanna margántaíochta na bpáirtithe i gcóimheas a chéile' in s2(a) of the Schedule to the Sale of Goods and Supply of Services Act, 1980. 'On grounds of physiology (excluding physical strength or stamina)' is translated as 'ar fhorais fiseolaíochta (gan neart ná lúth coirp a áireamh)' in s17(2)(a) of the Employment Equality Act, 1977. 'To perform any task of work which in the opinion of the board is suitable to the sex, age, strength, and capacity of such person' is translated as 'aon teas oibre do dhéanamh is dó leis an mbord is oiriúnach d'innscein, d'aois, do neart, agus d'ábaltacht an duine sin' in s4(1) of the Poor Relief (Dublin) Act, 1929. Note, finally, in passing, that 'no such allowance shall be payable unless the numerical strength in Dáil Éireann of the Third Party is not less than seven' is translated as 'ní bheidh aon líuntas den tsórt san iníocht maran seacht ar a laighead an líon comhaltá i nDáil Éireann a bheidh ag an Tríú Páirtí' in s11(a) of the Ministerial and Parliamentary Offices Act, 1938.

sláinte 'On methods of safeguarding and improving the health of workers' is translated as 'ar mhodhanna chun sláinte oibríthe a chosaint agus a fheabhsú' in s151(3)(d) of the Mines and Quarries Act, 1965, with 'a fheabhsú' replacing 'd'fheabhsú' of s127(3)(d) of the Factories Act, 1955.

nach mbeidh ar 'When forced by stress of weather to seek shelter in the ports or on the coasts of Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'nuair is éigean dóibh de dheascaibh doininne dídean d'iarraidh i bpoirt no ar chóstaí Shaorstáit Éireann' in s40 of the Schedule to the Pier and Harbour Provisional Order Confirmation Act, 1929, with 'in the case of a forced landing which takes place in the State, the time when a member of the Garda Síochána arrives at the place of landing' being translated as 'i gcás tuirlingt éigin sa Stát, an t-am a shroicheann comhalta den Garda Síochána an áit tuirlingthe' in s1(2)(a)(ii) of the Air Navigation and Transport Act, 1975.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, in which 'shall not be forced' was translated as 'nach gcuirfead brú ar', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that, while this is commonly heard, as part of contemporary jargon, he doubts whether it is in line with the correct usage of Irish; it is based directly on English 'pressure, pressurize', and is not recognised by Ó Dónaill. Professor Ó Murchú recommends either 'nach gcuirfead d'fhiacha ar' or 'nach dtabharfar ar', along with the phrase in the original text, 'nach mbeidh ar'.

nach n-oireann d(o) See the commentary on Article 34.5.1° regarding 'oir'. 'And whereas the Control of Prices Act, 1937 ... is unsuited to the present needs of the State' is translated as 'Agus de bhri go bhfuil an tAcht chun Pragsanna a Rialú, 1937 ... neamhoiriúnach do riachtanais láithreacha an Stáit' in the Preamble to the Prices Act, 1958. In s10(3) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) Act, 1923, 'that the substituted building named by the applicant would not be unsuited to the neighbourhood' is translated as 'nár neamhoiriúnach don chomharsanacht an mhalairt fhoirgnimh d'ainmigh an t-iarthóir', with 'and in particular the existing law relating to the relief of the poor is wholly unsuited to the circumstances of Saorstát Éireann' being translated as 'agus, go sonnrách, an dlí atá ann fé láthair i dtaobh fóirithín na mbocht, go bhfuil sé neamhoiriúnach ar fad do chás Shaorstáit Éireann' in the Preamble to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

a chur in áirithe See the commentary on Article 15.10.

Standardised Irish text

Déanfaidh an Stát iarracht chun a chur in áirithe nach ndéanfar neart agus sláinte lucht oibre, idir fhir is mhná, ná maothóige leanaí a éagóradh, agus nach mbeidh ar shaoránaigh, de dheasca uireasa, dul le gairmeacha nach n-oireann dá n-aois nó dá neart.<sup>1</sup>

Note

- 1 'dá ngné' is omitted here following the gender-proofed English text.

Direct translation

Féachfaidh an Stát lena áirithiú<sup>1</sup> nach mbainfear mí-úsáid as neart agus sláinte oibríthe, fir agus mná, ná as<sup>2</sup> maoth-aois leanaí agus nach gcuirfear d'fhiacha<sup>3</sup> ar shaoránaigh de dheasca riachtanais eacnamaíochta dul le slite beatha<sup>4</sup> atá neamhoiriúnach<sup>5</sup> dá ngnéas, dá n-aois nó dá neart.

Variants

- 1 'lena dheimhniú'
- 2 ', agus'
- 3 'nach dtabharfar', 'nach mbeidh'
- 4 'gairmeacha'
- 5 'nach n-oirfidh'

AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION

AN BUNREACHT A LEASÚ

ARTICLE 46.1 AIRTEAGAL 46.1

TÉACS GAELIGE

AN BUNREACHT A LEASÚ

Is cead foráil ar bith den Bhunreacht seo a leasú, le hathrú nó le breisiú nó le haisghairm, ar an modh a shocraítear leis an Airteagal seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

AMENDING THE CONSTITUTION

It is permitted to amend any provision of this Constitution, by change or by addition or by repeal, in the manner provided by this Article.

ENGLISH TEXT

AMENDMENT OF THE CONSTITUTION

Any provision of this Constitution may be amended, whether by way of variation, addition, or repeal, in the manner provided by this Article.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Whether by way of variation, addition, or repeal' is expressed simply as 'le hathrú nó le breisiú nó le haisghairm' ('by variation or by addition or by appeal') in the Irish text.
- 2 'May be' is expressed as 'Is cead' ('It is permitted to') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 210, reports as follows on reference to this Article in the courts:

In Finn v Minister for the Environment ([1983] IR 154) Barrington J drew attention to the fact that the Irish equivalent for the phrase "whether by way of variation, addition, or repeal" contains no word corresponding to "whether", thus lending some (though he thought not enough) strength to the suggestion that the recital of these three modes of amendment was intended to be exhaustive rather than merely illustrative.

Commentary

a leasú 'Chun an Bunreacht a leasú' expresses 'to amend the Constitution' in Article 46.3. 'Leasú' is the verbal noun of 'leasaigh', the first person singular, present indicative, of which, 'leasaím', is translated as 'I amend' in Téarmaí Dlí, this being given as one of the senses of 'leasuighim' in Dinneen. 'Amend, reform, improve' are given as the principal senses of 'leasaigh' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'do bheatha a leasú, to amend one's life' and 'dlí a leasú, to amend a law'. 'Lesaidir' is used to express a wide range of beneficial or remedial action, according to DIL, this verb being based on 'les', the earlier sense of which seems to have been 'relief, redress, remedy', Modern Irish 'leas', 'welfare', being a development of that sense. The principal sense of 'lesaidir' in DIL is 'is of benefit to, improve', with 'preserves, cherishes; perhaps also improves, embellishes' in relation to objects, literary works, etc., as a secondary sense, DIL citing 'iss é ro scrib 7 ro lesaig na scela so' from Leabhar na hUidhre (compiled in Clonmacnois, c. 1100).

'Amendments of this Constitution ... may be made by the Oireachtas' is translated as 'Féadfaidh an t-Oireachtas leasú do dhéanamh ar an mBunreacht so' in Article 50 of the 1922 Constitution. Note that 'it shall be lawful for the District Justice to amend the said rate-book by striking out the name or description of the person entered therein' is translated as 'beidh sé dleathach don Ghiúistís Dúithche an leabhar rátaí sin do cheartú tré ainm no tuairisc an duine atá iontrálta ann ... do bhuala amach' in s4(1) of the Local Government (Collection of Rates) Act, 1924.

'Amendment of the Constitution' is translated as 'Leasú an Bhunreacht' in the Margin Title of s3 of the Public Safety Act, 1927, with 'An Bunreacht do leasú' translating 'Amendment of the Constitution' in the Margin Title of s1 of the Constitution (Amendment No. 17) Act, 1931, and 'Amendment of Article 40.3 of the Constitution' being translated as 'Airteagal 40.3 den Bhunreacht do leasú' in the Margin Title of s1 of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1992. 'An Bunreacht a leasú' translates this Margin Title in the Twentieth Amendment of the Constitution (No. 2) Bill, 1999, as passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas. Note that the practice in the Acts in general in Margin Titles which are of the form 'Amendment of ...' is to translate this phrase as 'Leasú ar ...' – see the Margin Title of s2 of the Shannon Free Airport Development Company Limited (Amendment) Act, 1980, for example, where 'Amendment of section 2 of the Principal Act' is translated as 'Leasú ar alt 2 den Phríomh-Acht'.

breisiú This headword is the verbal noun of 'breisigh', which verb is translated as 'increase, add to' in Ó Dónaill, the noun 'breisiú' being translated as 'increase, growth'. 'Breisiú' does not appear to be given as a headword in Dinneen, who translates 'breis', on which it is based, as 'increase, profit, interest; an addition'. The earliest citation of 'breis' in DIL is from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster ('Eocho Mumo mó cech breis'), this headword being translated as 'increase; profit, advantage'.

Looking at early Acts, 'Any power of the court under this section shall be in addition to and not in derogation of any other power of the court' is translated as 'Aon chomhacht a bheidh ag an gcúirt fén alt so is mar bhreis a bheidh sí le haon chomhacht eile ag an gcúirt ... agus ní mar luíodú uirri' in s6(6) of the Criminal Justice (Administration) Act, 1924, with 'including the making of alterations and additions, so as to convert the same into one or more houses or self-contained flats' being translated as 'maraoon le hatharuithe agus breiseanna do dhéanamh, i dtreo go ndéanfaí den chéanna tigh no tithe, no úrlár no úrláir comhnaithe, iomlán ionta féin' in s1 of the Housing (Building Facilities) Act, 1924. 'Completion of the said works with such additions, omissions, variations, and deviations as aforesaid' is translated as '(i) gcríochnú na n-oibreacha san maraoon le gach cur-leo, fágaint-ar-lár ionta, atharú ortha, agus casa-i-leataoibh uatha mar adubhradh' in s7(b) of the Barrow Drainage Act, 1927, with 'The Minister shall ... confirm with such modifications, omissions and additions as he shall deem necessary ... every scheme submitted to him' being translated as 'Déanfidh an t-Aire gach scéim dá leagfar fé n-a bhráid ... do dhaingniú tar éis í d'atharú agus baint uathí agus cur léi fé mar is dó leis is gá' in s4(1) of the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. Finally, 'breisiúchán' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'addition' in the Proceedings of Seanad Éireann, 19/12/23.

"Alteration" ... includes any addition to or variation of the memorandum of rules' is translated as 'folaíonn "athrú" ... aon bhreis a chuirfead leis an meabhrán ... nó aon éagsúlú a dhéanfar air' in s2(1) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'Whether by variation, addition or omission' is translated as 'trí athrú, breisiú nó fágáil ar lár' in s26(7) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1978, with 'whether by way of addition, omission or variation' being translated as 'trí chur léi, baint aisti nó athrú' in s11(3) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1976, and 'trí bhreisiú, trí fhágáil ar lár nó trí athrú' being found in s12(3) of the Law Reform Commission Act, 1975.

le haisghairm 'Aisghairm' is the verbal noun of 'aisghair', which verb is translated as 'abrogate; repeal' in Ó Dónaill, 'aisghairm' being translated as 'I abrogate' in Téarmaí Dlí. The noun 'aisghairm' is translated as 'abrogation; repeal' in Ó Dónaill, 'ais-ghairm' being translated as 'recalling, abrogation' in Dinneen. This is a compound of the prefix 'ais' (translated as 're-, again, back, non-' in Dinneen) and 'gairm', verbal noun of 'gair' ('call'), on which verb see the commentary on Articles 13.2.1° and 13.5.2°.

Looking at early Acts, 'the imposition, repeal, remission, alteration or regulation of taxation' is translated as 'leaga, ath-ghairm, maitheamh, atharú no rialú cánach' in Article 35 of the 1922 Constitution. 'The enactments mentioned in the Tenth Schedule to this Act are hereby repealed to the extent specified in the third column of that Schedule' is translated as 'Na hachtacháin a luaidhtear sa Deichiú Sceideal a ghabhann leis an Acht so ath-ghairmtear iad leis seo a mhéid a háirítear sa tríú colún den Sceideal san' in s66(1) of the Electoral Act, 1923, with 'Repeals' being translated as 'Ath-ghairmeanna' in the Margin Title of that section. See further the commentary on Article 48.

le hathrú 'Athrú' is translated as 'alteration' in Téarmaí Dlí, citing 'athrú déanmhais, structural alteration' and 'athrú úsáide, alteration of user', along with 'athrú ar imthosca, variation of circumstances' and 'comhaontú athraithe, variation agreement'. 'Athrú', the verbal noun of 'athraigh', is translated as 'change, alteration' and 'variation' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'athrú maighnéadach, magnetic variation', for example. Dinneen translates 'athrughadh' as 'a change, a transformation; translation'. DIL translates 'athrugad' as 'act of changing, altering, moving', this being the verbal noun of 'aithrigid', the late form of 'ad-eirrig', translated in DIL as (a) 'repeats, reiterates' and (b) 'changes', with the sense of 'changes for the better, amends, improves' in the Old Irish Glosses, DIL citing 'dúus indaithirset' ('if perchance they may repeat it') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

'With respect to the crediting or variation or cancellation of reserve values' is translated as 'i dtaobh luachanna cúl do chur i gcreidiúint no d'atharú no do chur ar neamh-ní' in s26(1) of the National Health Insurance Act, 1923. 'By way of variation, omission, or addition' is translated as 'trí athrú, fágáil ar lár nó breisiú' in s10(1) of the Coastal Protection Act, 1963. Note that 'as amended by any alterations or variations made or to be made under this Act' is translated simply as 'arna leasú le haon athruithe a dhéantar nó a dhéanfar faoin Acht seo' in s6(2) of the Leopardstown Park Hospital (Trust Deed Amendment) Act, 1974. Note also that 'claochlú' translates 'alteration' in s8(1)(c)(ii) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, where 'review the programme and make in it any variations whether by way of alteration, addition or deletion' is translated as 'an clár a athbhreithniú agus aon chlaochlú is cuí leis a dhéanamh air trí athrú nó trí ábhar a chur leis nó a scriosadh as'.

Commenting on 'claochlú', given as a variant in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that it is too strong and suggests 'athrach' as an alternative to that variant, 'athrú' being without fault.

As regards 'le' expressing 'by way of', Ó Dónaill gives 'by use of, by means of' as one of the senses of the preposition 'le', citing 'léirigh le samplaí é, illustrate it by example'. 'Or confirm the scheme with such alteration (whether by way of variation, addition, or omission) as they may think proper to make therein' is translated as 'no an scéim do dhaingniú tar éis pé atharuithe (pe'ca tré chur leis no fágaint ar lár no aon atharú eile é) is oiriúnach leo do dhéanamh uirthi' in s9(1) of the Arterial Drainage (Minor Schemes) Act, 1928, the phrase in brackets being translated as 'pe'ca tré atharú do dhéanamh é no cur leis no fágaint ar lár' in s10(1) of the Arterial Drainage Act, 1925, and as 'pe'ca tré atharú do dhéanamh é no cur-leis no fágaint-ar-lár' in s4(1) of the River Owenmore Drainage Act, 1926.

Turning to modern Acts, wherein this triad does not appear to be cited, in s69(2)(b) of the Central Bank Act, 1989, 'thereafter be distributed (whether by way of payment or by reducing the amount to be lodged ...) among the holders of licences' is translated as 'i a dháileadh dá éis sin (cibé acu trí íocaíocht nó trí laghdú a dhéanamh ar an méid a bheidh le lóisteáil ...) i measc na sealbhóirí ceadúnas'. 'Review the programme and may make in it any variations whether by way of alteration, addition or deletion which it considers proper' is translated as 'an clár a athbhreithniú agus aon chlaochlú is cuí leis a dhéanamh air trína athrú nó trí ábhar a chur leis nó a scriosadh' in s8(1)(c)(ii) of the Fisheries Act, 1980, with 'review the plan and may make in it any variations (whether by way of alteration, addition or deletion) which they consider proper' being translated as 'an plean a athscrúdú agus aon athfhoirmithe (trí athrú, cur leis nó scriosadh as) is cuí leo a dhéanamh air' in s20(1) of the Local Government (Planning and Development) Act, 1963. Note, finally, that ‘by way of’ is expressed as ‘i bhfoirm’ in Article 40.4.3°.

ar an modh a shocraítear We find eclipsis after the relative particle ‘a’ following ‘modh’ in s11(2) of the Health Act, 1970, for example, where ‘Féadfaidh ordú faoin alt seo sócrú a bheith ann i dtaobh an mhodha a n-íocfar na caiteachais’ translates ‘An order under this section may provide for the manner in which expenses ... are to be met’.

DIL cites ‘modh conid-tuccid’ (‘in such wise that ye may understand it’), from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, and ‘cach modh dobeir saethar furra’ (‘whatever trouble it gave her’), from an early Irish law-tract, as examples of ‘modh’ as a relative adverb, ‘modh’ being borrowed from Latin ‘modus’, and translated as ‘manner, mode, way, fashion’ in DIL. See the commentary on Articles 18.6 and 34.1 regarding ‘manner’.

‘Every insured person shall be insured in the manner provided by this Part against intermittent unemployment’ is translated as ‘Ní mór gach duine árachaithe bheith faoi árachas in aghaidh breac-dhífhostaíochta sa tslí a fhoráiltear leis an gCuid seo’ in s239 of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, with ‘shall, in the manner provided by this Act pay to the Trustees for and in respect of such animals the appropriate charges’ being translated as ‘íocfaidh sé leis na hÍontaobhaithe ar na hainmhithe sin agus maidir leo, sa tslí a fhoráiltear leis an Acht seo, na táillí iomchuí’ in s4(1) of the Slaughtered and Detained Animals (Compensation) Act, 1986. Note, finally, that ‘in the manner’ is expressed as ‘ar an gcuma’ in Article 18.10.3°.

Is cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

Direct translation

Féadfar aon fhoráil den Bhunreacht seo a leasú, cibé acu trí athrú, trí bhreisiú, nó trí aisghairm, sa tslí a fhoráiltear leis an Airteagal seo.

ARTICLE 46.2 AIRTEAGAL 46.2

TÉACS GAEILGE

Gach togra chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú ní foláir é a thionscnamh i nDáil Éireann ina Bhille, agus nuair a ritear nó a mheastar a ritheadh é ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais ní foláir é a chur faoi bhreith an phobail le Reifreann de réir an dlí a bheas i bhfeidhm i dtaobh an Reifrinn in alt na huaire.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every proposal to amend this Constitution (it) must be initiated in Dáil Éireann as a Bill, and when it is passed or deemed passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas it must be submitted to the people for determination by Referendum in accordance with the law which will be in force as regards the Referendum at the time.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every proposal for an amendment of this Constitution shall be initiated in Dáil Éireann as a Bill, and shall upon having been passed or deemed to have been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas, be submitted by Referendum to the decision of the people in accordance with the law for the time being in force relating to the Referendum.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘For an amendment of this Constitution’ is expressed as ‘chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú’ (‘to amend this Constitution’) in the Irish text.
- 2 ‘Shall be’ is expressed as ‘ní foláir’ (‘must be’) in the Irish text, as we have seen in many other Articles.

Commentary

togra This headword is translated as ‘purpose, desire, will, inclination; act of desiring, resolving ...’ in Dinneen, who gives ‘togradh’ as a variant form. In Ó Dónaill, on the other hand, ‘togra’ is given as a variant form of ‘togradh’, verbal noun of ‘togair’, which verb is translated as ‘desire, choose, attempt’, with ‘togradh’ as a noun being translated as ‘will, inclination’. Earlier ‘tocra’ is the verbal noun of ‘tocraid’, which is apparently from a compound of ‘gair-’, according to DIL, where this verb is translated primarily as ‘desires to go, seeks as way’, citing ‘Adchíu far rígha in móir / ní toccair dond imfórráin’ (‘I see that your great queen does not seek to come to the fight’) from the version of the Táin in Leabhar na hUidhre (compiled in Clonmacnois c. 1100), giving ‘desires’, ‘resolves’ and ‘tries, attempts’ as other senses.

Looking at ‘proposal’ in the early Acts, ‘The method of proposal and selection for nomination’ is translated as ‘an tslí déanfar tairisgint agus togha chun ainmniúcháin’ in Article 33 of the 1922 Constitution, with ‘for the purpose of debating, but not of voting upon, the proposals of the Bill’ being translated as ‘chun díospóireacht, ach gan vótáil, do dhéanamh ar intinn an Bhille’ in Article 38. In Article 48, ‘The Oireachtas may provide for the initiation by the people of proposals for laws or constitutional amendments’ is translated as ‘Féadfaidh an t-Oireachtas soláthar do dhéanamh chun tairisgintí ó sna daoine do thionnsnamh i dtaobh dlíthe no i dtaobh leasuithe bun-reachta’. ‘Pass a resolution ... approving of the proposals contained in the petition’ is translated as ‘rún do rith ... á rá go bhfuilid sásta leis na molta atá san achuinge’ in s3(3) of the Arterial Drainage Act, 1925. Finally, ‘fógra faoi é bheith beartuithe’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘notice of proposal’ in Iris Oifigiúil, 31/24.

Turning to more modern translations, ‘Every proposal for an industrial assurance policy shall ... contain a declaration’ is translated as ‘I ngach tairisgint i gcóir polasaí árachais tionnscail ... beidh dearbhú’ in s61(1) of the Insurance Act, 1936. ‘Shall formulate its opinion on any proposal for amendment of this convention which is referred to it’ is translated as ‘foirmeoidh sé a thuairim ar aon mholadh chun an coinbhinsiún seo a leasú’ in Article 19(c) of the Data Protection Act, 1988. ‘A proposal for the amendment of the register for the purpose aforesaid shall be notified to the registered proprietor of the trade mark affected' is translated as 'Déanfar moladh chun an clár a leasú chun na críche a dúradh a chur i bhfios do dhilseánach cláraithe an trádmhairc' in s44(3) of the Trade Mark Act, 1963. Note that while 'The matters which shall be dealt with by Bills shall include all proposals for legislation' is translated as 'Ar na nithe a ndéileálfar leo le Billí áirítear gach togra reachtaíochta' in s108(4) of the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997), 'save where such proposal is opposed' (referring back to 'may propose ... arrangements for sittings') is translated as 'ach amháin i gcás go gcuirtear in aghaidh moladh den sórt sin' in s26(2).

a chur faoi bhreith See the commentary on Article 26, 'cás a chur faoi bhreith duine' being translated as 'to submit a case to someone for determination' in Ó Dónaill. In Article 47 of the 1922 Constitution, 'Such a Bill shall in accordance with regulations to be made by the Oireachtas be submitted by Referendum to the decision of the people' is translated as 'Déanfar Bille den tsórt san do chur, do réir rialacha a dhéanfaidh an tOireachtas, fé bhreith na ndaoine le Referendum', with 'it shall be submitted to the people for decision in accordance with the ordinary regulations governing the Referendum' being translated as '(go) gcuirfeadh fé bhreith na ndaoine é do réir na ngnáth-rialacha a rialúonn an Referendum' in Article 48. 'The matter shall be referred to the decision of a person appointed by the judge of the Circuit Court' is translated as 'déanfar ... an t-ábhar a chur á chinneadh ag duine a cheapfaidh breitheamh den Chúirt Chuarda' in s113(6) of the Mines and Quarries Act, 1965. In s22(6)(a) of the Dairy Produce Act, 1924, 'the question ... shall be referred to the decision of an arbitrator' is translated as 'cuirfeadh fé bhreith moltóra ... an cheist ...'.

'Córas Iompair Éireann shall submit to the Authority for decision any proposals to vary its fares' is translated as 'Déanfaidh Córas Iompair Éireann aon tograí chun athrú a dhéanamh ar a tháillí ... a chur chuig an Údarás le cinneadh a dhéanamh orthu' in s28(2) of the Dublin Transport Authority Act, 1986. 'Any question of interpretation ... arising among members of the Agency shall be submitted to the Board for its decision' is translated as 'Aon cheist a éireoidh ... idir baill den Ghníomhaireacht maidir le léiriú ... cuirfeadh faoi bhráid an Bhoird í le cinneadh a dhéanamh uirthi' in Article 56(a) of the Schedule to the Multilateral Investment Guarantee Agency Act, 1988. 'The question shall be submitted for decision in accordance with this Part' is translated as 'cuirfeadh an cheist faoi chinneadh de réir na Coda seo' in s119(a) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, with 'cuirfeadh an cheist faoi bhreith de réir an Achta seo' translating the same English text (with 'Act' replacing 'Part') in s57(a) of the Social Welfare Act, 1952.

in alt na huair See the commentary on Articles 10.1, 12.4.2° and 41.3.3°. 'By reason only that it is not stamped in accordance with the law for the time being in force in Saorstát Éireann in relation to stamp duties' is translated as 'do dheascaibh gan é bheith stampálta do réir an dlí bheidh i bhfeidhm de thuras na huair i Saorstát Éireann maidir le diúitithe stampa agus dá dheascaibh sin amháin' in s25 of the Finance Act, 1936. To give a modern example, in s45(3)(f)(iii) of the Finance Act, 1989, 'applying to the said licence duty any enactment for the time being in force relating to persons carrying on any trade' is translated as 'chun aon achtachán a bheidh i bhfeidhm de thuras na huair i ndáil le daoine a sheolann aon trádáil ... a chur i bhfeidhm maidir leis an dleacht ceadúnais sin'.

rith 'Pass, enact' is given as one of the senses of this verb in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'bille, rún, a rith, to pass a bill, a resolution'. Dinneen does not appear to cite examples of this specific sense s.v. 'rithim', translated there as 'I run, race, rush, go smartly, visit, pass, pass current'. See the commentary on Articles 13.3.1°, 17.2 and 24.1.

a thionscnamh The verbal noun of 'tionscain', translated as 'begin, originate; initiate; establish' in Ó Dónaill, 'tionscainm' being translated as 'I institute' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 20.1.

a bheas See the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s', this phrase being generally written today as 'a bheidh'.

Reifreann See the commentary on Article 47.1.

ina Bhille See the commentary on Article 28.6.1° for this use of the preposition 'i'.

Standardised Irish text

Gach togra chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú ní foláir é a thionscnamh i nDáil Éireann ina Bhille, agus nuair a rithear nó a mheastar a ritheadh é ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais ní foláir é a chur faoi bhreith an phobail le Reifreann de réir an dlí a bheidh i bhfeidhm i dtaobh an Reifrinn in alt na huair.

Direct translation

Déanfar gach moladh<sup>1</sup> maidir le leasú a dhéanamh ar an mBunreacht seo a thionscnamh i nDáil Éireann ina Bhille, agus ar é a bheith rite nó arna mheas é a bheith rite ag dhá Theach an Oireachtais, déanfar é a chur faoi bhreith an phobail<sup>2</sup> le Reifreann de réir an dlí a bheidh i bhfeidhm de thuras<sup>3</sup> na huair maidir leis an Reifreann<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'togra'
- 2 'faoi chinneadh an phobail', 'faoi bhráid an phobail lena chinneadh'
- 3 'in alt'
- 4 'i dtaobh an Reifrinn'

ARTICLE 46.3 AIRTEAGAL 46.3

TÉACS GAEILGE

Ní foláir a lua i ngach Bille den sórt sin é a bheith ina "Acht chun an Bunreacht a leasú".

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Its being "an Act to amend the Constitution" must be mentioned in every Bill of that kind.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every such Bill shall be expressed to be “An Act to amend the Constitution”.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘Every ... Bill shall be expressed to be’ is expressed in the Irish text as ‘Ní foláir a lua i ngach Bille ... é a bheith’ (‘It must be mentioned in every Bill ... its being’), with ‘shall’ again being expressed as ‘Ní foláir’ (‘must’) in the Irish text, as we have seen in the previous section and in many earlier sections, and ‘expressed’ being expressed by the verb translated as ‘cite’ in Téarmaí Dlí, ‘luaigh’, the adjective ‘express’ being translated in Téarmaí Dlí as ‘sainráite’.
- 2 ‘To amend the Constitution’ is expressed as ‘chun an Bunreacht a leasú’, the same phrase as expresses ‘for an amendment of (the) Constitution’ in the previous section, while ‘An Bunreacht a leasú’ expresses ‘Amendment of the Constitution’ in the heading of this Article.

Richard F. Humphreys, in ‘The Constitution of Ireland: The Forgotten Textual Quagmire’ (The Irish Jurist, xxii [1987], p. 175), noted that all Bills containing proposals for constitutional amendment (other than the first) were entitled ‘Acht chun an Bunreacht do leasú’, which is the form appointed in Article 46.3, although the Stationery Office copy has the word a in place of do. Referring to ‘Finn v. Attorney General [1983] I.R. 154 at 162’, Richard F. Humphreys remarks: ‘Theoretically the President might even be justified in refusing to sign an Amendment Bill which employed the Stationery Office formula’. Note that the Twentieth Amendment of the Constitution (No. 2) Bill, 1999, as passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas, reads ‘Acht chun an Bunreacht a leasú’. While we find ‘Acht chun an Bunreacht do leasú’ in the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1992, for example, the Fifteenth Amendment of the Constitution Bill, 1995, however, has ‘Acht chun an Bunreacht a leasú’, as has subsequent amendments.

Commentary

a lua The verbal noun of ‘luaigh’, the first person singular, present indicative, of which, ‘luaim’, is translated as ‘I cite’ in Téarmaí Dlí, ‘(I) mention, speak of, tell’ being given as one of the senses of ‘luadhaim’ in Dinneen. See the commentary on Article 12.10.1<sup>o</sup>, where this verb expresses ‘state’, expressing ‘specify’ in Article 14.5.2<sup>o</sup>. The adjective ‘express’, on the other hand, is translated as ‘sainráite’ in Téarmaí Dlí, with ‘expressly’ translated as ‘go sainráite’.

‘The affidavit shall be expressed to be made by the creditor specified in section 6’ is translated as ‘Beidh sé sainráite sa mhionnscríbhinn í a bheith arna déanamh ag an gcreidiúnaí a shonraítear in alt 6’ in s71(3) of the Registration of Title Act, 1964. ‘Every contract by a committee of agriculture which is made in writing shall be expressed to be made by the council by whom such committee is appointed’ is translated as ‘gach connra dhéanfaidh coiste talmhaíochta agus a bheidh i scríbhinn déarfair ann gurb í an chomhairle do cheap an coiste sin do rinne é’ in s30(2)(b) of the Agriculture Act, 1931, with ‘each such lease or licence shall be expressed to be made or granted by the local authority as agent for the Minister’ being translated as ‘déarfaidh léas no ceadúnas den tsórt san gur mar ghníomhaire don Aire do dhein no do dheon an t-údarás áitiúil é’ in s5(2)(a) of the State Land (Work-houses) Act, 1930. See further the commentary on Article 24.1 regarding ‘express’ (expressed by ‘luaigh’).

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, which had the variant there as the direct translation of this section, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that while it was very correct (“an-cheart”) it said much more than is found in the English text, Professor Ó Murchú recommending the Irish text given below.

Ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

a leasú See the commentary on Article 46.1 above.

Direct translation

Beidh sainráite i ngach Bille den sórt sin gur “Acht chun an Bunreacht a leasú” a bheidh ann.<sup>1</sup>

Variants

- 1 ‘Beidh gach Bille den sórt sin ina Bhille a mbeidh sé sainráite gur “Acht chun an Bunreacht a leasú” atá ann.’

ARTICLE 46.4 AIRTEAGAL 46.4*TÉACS GAELIGE

Aon Bhille ina mbeidh togra nó tograí chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú ní cead togra ar bith eile a bheith ann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any Bill in which there will be a proposal or proposals to amend this Constitution it is not permitted to have any other proposal in it.

ENGLISH TEXT

A Bill containing a proposal or proposals for the amendment of this Constitution shall not contain any other proposal.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 ‘For the amendment of (this) Constitution’ is expressed in the Irish text by the same phrase which expresses ‘to amend (the) Constitution’ in the previous section, ‘chun an Bunreacht a leasú’.
- 2 ‘Shall not’ is expressed as ‘ní cead’ (‘it is not permitted’) in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Commentary

ina mbeidh See the commentary on Article 40.6.2<sup>o</sup> regarding ‘contain’. ‘A plan under this section shall not contain any provision inconsistent with regulations under section 26’ is translated as ‘Ní bheidh aon fhoráil ar neamhréir le rialacháin faoi alt 26 i bplean faoin alt seo' in s15(5) of the Local Government (Water Pollution) Act, 1977. 'A revoking order shall not contain a provision transferring the holder of an office under the dissolved body to an office under a Department of State' is translated as 'Ní bheidh in ordú cúlghairme foráil d'aistriú sealbhóir aon oifige faoin gcomhlacht díscailte chun oifige faoi Roinn Stáit' in s5(3) of the Local Government Services (Corporate Bodies) Act, 1971.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2.

a leasú See the commentary on Article 46.1.

ní cead See the commentary on Article 9.1.3°.

Direct translation

Aon Bhille ina mbeidh togra nó tograí maidir le leasú a dhéanamh ar an mBunreacht seo, ní bheidh aon togra eile ann.<sup>1</sup>

Variants

- 1 'Ní bheidh aon togra eile i mBille ina mbeidh togra nó tograí maidir le leasú a dhéanamh ar an mBunreacht seo.'

ARTICLE 46.5 AIRTEAGAL 46.5

TÉACS GAEILGE

Aon Bhille ina mbeidh togra chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur leis láithreach, ar mbeith sásta dó gur comhlíonadh forálacha an Airteagail seo ina thaobh agus gur thoiligh an pobal go cuí leis an togra sin de réir forálacha alt 1 d'Airteagal 47 den Bhunreacht seo, agus ní foláir don Uachtarán é a fhógairt go cuí ina dháil.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Any Bill in which there will be a proposal to amend this Constitution the President must immediately put his hand to it, when he has been satisfied that the provisions of this Article were fulfilled regarding it and that the people duly consented to that proposal in accordance with the provisions of section 1 of Article 47 of this Constitution, and the President must duly promulgate it as a law.

ENGLISH TEXT

A Bill containing a proposal for the amendment of this Constitution shall be signed by the President forthwith upon his being satisfied that the provisions of this Article have been complied with in respect thereof and that such proposal has been duly approved by the people in accordance with the provisions of section 1 of Article 47 of this Constitution and shall be duly promulgated by the President as a law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Has been duly approved by the people' is expressed as 'gur thoiligh an pobal le' ('the people duly consented to') in the Irish text, with 'I approve' being translated as 'formheasaim' in Téarmaí Dlí, while 'toilim' is translated there as 'I consent'.

- 2 'Shall' is twice expressed in the Irish text as 'ní foláir' ('must'), as we have seen in sections 2 and 3 and in many earlier Articles, the final clause being preceded by a comma (before 'agus ní foláir') in the Irish text alone.
- 3 'Forthwith' is expressed as 'láithreach' ('immediately') in the Irish text, as it is generally in the Acts.
- 4 'For the amendment of the Constitution' is again expressed in the Irish text by the same phrase as expresses 'to amend (this) Constitution' in this Article.

Commentary

láithreach 'He shall forthwith be deemed to have vacated his first seat' is expressed as 'ní foláir a mheas láithreach go bhfuil éirithe aige as an gcéad ionad' in Article 15.14, with 'fiosrú a dhéanamh láithreach' expressing 'shall forthwith enquire' in Article 40.4.2°. 'Upon receipt of such notification ... the President shall forthwith ...' is expressed as 'Láithreach d'éis na scéala sin ... a fháil don Uachtarán ní foláir dó' in Articles 33.5.3° and 35.4.3°. In Article 27.4.1°, however, 'Upon receipt of a petition addressed to him under this Article, the President shall forthwith consider such petition' is expressed as 'Chomh luath agus a gheibheann an tUachtarán achainí faoin Airteagal seo ní foláir dó í a bhreithniú'. 'Láithreach' expresses 'immediately' in Article 24.1 where 'That ... the Bill is urgent and immediately necessary' is expressed as 'go bhfuil práinn agus riachtanas leis an mBille sin láithreach'.

'Immediately' is given as the secondary sense of 'láithreach' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'déan láithreach é, do it at once', with 'present, immediate' being the principal sense of 'láithreach' as an adjective. Dinneen translates the adverb 'láithreach' as 'presently, without delay; just a moment ago, on the spot', citing 'do fuaduiheadh uait láithreach, which was snatched from you on the spot'. According to DIL, 'láithreach' is apparently the genitive singular of 'láthar' ('place, position' being one sense of this word) in adjectival and adverbial use, no early examples of this adverbial use being cited in DIL, where 'láithreach' is translated as 'immediately'.

'Forthwith' is translated as 'gan mhoill, ar an bpoinne (boise)' in De Bhaldraithe. 'The High Court ... shall forthwith enquire into the same' is translated as 'fiosróidh an Ard-Chúirt ... an gearán san láithreach' in Article 6 of the 1922 Constitution, with 'the secretary of the council shall forthwith send to the Commissioners a copy of such resolution' being translated as 'cuirfidh rúnai na comhairle chun na gCoimisinéirí láithreach cóip den rún san' in s3(4) of the Arterial Drainage Act, 1925. Note how 'láithreach' translates both 'immediately' and 'forthwith' in s3(2) of the Offences Against the State Act, 1940, where 'that it is expedient that this Part of this Act should come into force immediately, this Part of this Act shall come into force forthwith' is translated as 'é bheith oiriúnach an Chuid seo den Acht so do theacht i bhfeidhm láithreach, tiocfaidh an Chuid seo den Acht so i bhfeidhm láithreach'. 'Such person shall unless a Justice of a District Court is immediately available forthwith be brought before a Peace Commissioner' is translated as 'tabharfar an duine sin i láthair Feadhmannnaigh Shíochána láithreach mara mbeidh Breitheamh de Chúirt Dúithche le fáil láithreach' in s88(4) of the Courts of Justice Act, 1924; in s4(3) of the District

Justices (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, this same English text (with 'a District Justice' replacing 'a Justice of a District Court') is translated as 'déanfar mara mbeidh Giúistís Dúithche ar fáil díreach le na linn sin, an duine sin do thabhairt gan mhoill os cóir Coimisinéara Shíochána'. 'Láithreach' currently translates 'forthwith' in the Acts, with 'he shall forthwith cease to hold that office' being translated as 'scoirfidh sé láithreach den oifig sin a shealbhú' in s64(10) of the Building Societies Act, 1989.

thoiligh 'Toilim' is translated as 'I consent' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'toilighim' being translated as 'I will, assent, agree to' in Dinneen – see the commentary on Article 15.8.2° where this verb expresses 'assent'. 'Toiligid' is translated as 'wills' and 'consents, agrees' in DIL, most examples cited coming from sixteenth- and seventeenth-century sources. This verb is based on 'tol', 'will', DIL citing 'tol dae do dénum' ('to do God's will') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles.

See the commentary on Article 13.1.2° regarding 'approval', there expressed as 'comhaontú', with 'aontú' being found in Article 40.2.2° and the phrase 'sásta le' in Article 13.7.3°. Both 'ceadaigh' and 'toiligh' are cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating 'approve' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health, with 'toiliú' being cited as translating 'approval'. Note that 'A copy of any consent, approval, sanction ...' is translated as 'cóip d'aon toiliú, aontú, ceadú' in s11 of the Methodist Church in Ireland Act, 1928. 'Except under conditions approved by the Government of that country' is translated as 'ach amháin faoi choinníollacha a cheadóidh Rialtas na tíre sin' in Article 7(c) of the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967, with 'until the execution of the sentence has been approved by the Government' being translated as 'go dtí go gceadóidh an Rialtas an phianbhreith a chur i bhfeidhm' in s227(1) of the Defence Act, 1954. 'But the Council shall not permit such alteration or addition to be made which in the opinion of the Council would fundamentally alter the scheme as approved by the members of the Institute' is translated as 'ach ní cheadóidh an Chomhairle aon athrú nó breis den sórt sin a d'athróidh go bunúsach, i dtuairim na Comhairle, an scéim arna ceadú ag comhaltaí na hInstitiúide mar a dúradh' in s5 of the Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland (Charter Amendment) Act, 1966. Finally, 'A statement under this section shall not be sent to members of the society unless the contents have been approved by the Central Bank' is translated as 'Ní chuirfear ráiteas faoin alt seo chuig comhaltaí an chumainn mura mbeidh an t-ábhar ann ceadaithe ag an mBanc Ceannais' in s103(3) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. See further the commentary on Article 47.1.

sásta A variant past participle of 'sásaigh', according to Ó Dónaill, where this adjective is translated as 'satisfied, contented, pleased', 'sásaim' being translated as 'I satisfy' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Satisfied, contented, willing' are the principle senses of 'sásta' in Dinneen, who cites 'sásta im' aigneadh, satisfied in my mind'. DIL cites 'ar mbeidh sásta dhóibh' from Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death, this being the opening example of DIL's entry s.v. 'sásta', translated there as 'satisfied, content'. The verb 'sásaid' is translated in DIL as 'satisfies (particularly with food), feeds; assuages, soothes', with 'sásatar' glossing Latin 'saturati sunt' in the ninth-century Milan Glosses on the Psalms. 'Sás', upon which this verb is based, is translated principally as a 'snare, trap (particularly for birds)'. See the commentary on Article 13.7.3° where 'ní foláir an Rialtas a bheith sásta le' expresses 'have received the approval of the Government'.

'Deimhin' is used in early Acts to translate 'satisfied' in this context. 'If the County Judge is satisfied ... that it was not reasonably possible to effect service in the manner required by the law aforesaid' is translated as 'más deimhin leis an mBreitheamh Cúirte Contae ... ná luíonn sé le réasún go bhféadfaí an scríbhinn sin do sheirbheáil ar an gcuma a héilítear leis an dlí roimh-ráite' in s2(1) of the County Courts (Amendment) Act, 1923. 'If satisfied as to the guilt of the accused of any two or more of the offences with which he is so charged' is translated as 'más deimhin leis go bhfuil an duine sin ciontach in aon dá chionta no níos mó díobh san inar cúisíodh é amhlaidh' in s7 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1925. 'Postmasters should satisfy themselves that ...' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'ba chóir do Mháistrí Puist féachaint chuige go ...' in Iris an Phuist, 4/4/28, with 'I have satisfied myself as to ...' being translated as 'táim tar éis mé féin do shásam maidir le' in translations for the Department of Finance.

Turning to modern Acts, 'and such order of rescission shall be made by the court upon it being satisfied that a reconciliation has taken place between the applicant and the respondent' is translated as 'agus déanfaidh an chúirt an t-ordú cealaithe sin ar í a bheith deimhin de go bhfuil an t-iarratasóir agus an freagróir tar éis teacht ar chomhréiteach' in s8(2) of the Judicial Separation and Family Law Reform Act, 1989. In s13(2)(c) of the Housing (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1979, 'the authority, upon being satisfied that the specified works have been properly completed, shall grant to the tenant a certificate stating that they are so satisfied' is translated as '(go) dtabharfaidh an t-údarás, ar bheith sásta dóibh gur críochnaíodh na hoibreacha sonraithe go cuí, deimhniú don tionónta á rá go bhfuil siad sásta amhlaidh'.

ar mbeith The preposition 'ar', used for 'iar', is translated as 'after' in Dinneen, who cites 'ar dteacht abhaile dhóibh, after they had come home, when they had come home' and 'ar ndul a chodladh dhóibh, when they had gone to sleep'. Ó Dónaill cites 'iar gcaitheamh a bproinne, after taking their meal', from earlier literature, giving 'ar éirí dom, when I get, got, up' and 'ar a theacht, on his coming' from contemporary usage. 'Upon his being returned for trial' is translated as 'ar é a chur chun a thrialach' in s3(1)(b) of the Criminal Justice (Legal Aid) Act, 1962. 'Upon his being attested as a man in any portion of the Defence Forces' is translated as 'ar é d'fhianú mar fhear in aon chuid d'Óglaigh na hÉireann' in s248(b) of the Defence Act, 1954, with 'upon his being attested as a soldier' being translated as 'nuair a dineadh é theistiú mar shaighdiúir' in s196(1) of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923. See further the commentary on Article 27.4.1° where 'upon ...' is expressed as 'chomh luath agus'.

de réir forálacha alt 1 According to the official standard this would read as 'de réir fhorálacha alt 1' – see the commentary on Article 1 regarding the lenited nominative in place of the genitive.

a fhógairt 'Fógairt' is the verbal noun of 'fógair', translated as 'declare, announce, make known' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'dlí a fhógairt, to promulgate a law' – see the commentary on Articles 13.3.2° and 25.1.

gur comhlíonadh See the commentary on Articles 12.1, 28.12 and 34.5.1° (where this verb respectively expresses 'perform', 'discharge' and 'execute'), 'comhlíonaim' being translated as 'I comply with; I conform with; I perform' in Téarmaí Dlí.

go cuí See the commentary on Articles 40.1 and 43.2.1°, 'cuí' being translated as 'due' in Téarmaí Dlí.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

a lámh a chur leis See the commentary on Articles 12.8 and 13.3.1°.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2.

a leasú See the commentary on Article 46.1.

ina dhlí See the commentary on Article 28.6.1° regarding this use of the preposition 'i'.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Aon Bhille ina mbeidh togra chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur leis láithreach, ar bheith sásta dó nó di gur comhlíonadh forálacha an Airteagail seo ina thaobh agus gur thoiligh an pobal go cuí leis an togra sin de réir fhorálacha alt 1 d'Airteagal 47 den Bhunreacht seo, agus ní foláir don Uachtarán é a fhógairt go cuí ina dhlí.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Déanfaidh an tUachtarán Bille ina mbeidh moladh<sup>1</sup> maidir le leasú a dhéanamh ar an mBunreacht seo a shíniú láithreach ar é nó í a bheith sásta gur comhlíonadh forálacha an Airteagail seo ina leith sin agus gur cheadaigh an pobal an moladh<sup>1</sup> sin go cuí de réir fhorálacha alt 1 d'Airteagal 47 den Bhunreacht seo agus déanfaidh an tUachtarán é a fhógairt go cuí ina dhlí.

Variant

1 'togra'

THE REFERENDUM AN REIFREANN

ARTICLE 47.1 AIRTEAGAL 47.1

TÉACS GAEILGE

Gach togra a dhéantar chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú agus a chuirtear faoi bhreith an phobail le Reifreann, ní foláir a mheas, chun críche Airteagal 46 den Bhunreacht seo, go dtoilíonn an pobal leis an togra sin má tharlaíonn, tar éis é a chur mar sin faoi bhreith an phobail, gur ar thaobh é a achtú ina dhlí a thugtar tromlach na vótaí a thugtar sa Reifreann sin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every proposal (which is) made to amend this Constitution and which is submitted to the people for determination by Referendum, it must be deemed, for the purpose of Article 46 of this Constitution, that the people consent to that proposal if it happens, after submitting it thus to the people for determination, that the majority of the votes that are given in that Referendum are given in favour of enacting it into law.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every proposal for an amendment of this Constitution which is submitted by Referendum to the decision of the people shall, for the purpose of Article 46 of this Constitution, be held to have been approved by the people, if, upon having been so submitted, a majority of the votes cast at such Referendum shall have been cast in favour of its enactment into law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Every proposal for an amendment of this Constitution which is submitted' is expressed as 'Gach togra a dhéantar chun an Bunreacht seo a leasú agus a chuirtear faoi bhreith' ('Every proposal which is made to amend this Constitution and which is submitted') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Be held' is expressed as 'a mheas' ('be considered') in the Irish text, as this phrase is generally translated in Irish.
- 3 'To have been approved by the people' is expressed as 'go dtoilíonn an pobal le' ('that the people consent to') in the Irish text.
- 4 'So submitted' is expressed as 'a chur mar sin faoi bhreith an phobail' ('thus submitted to the people for determination') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must') in the Irish text, as we saw in the previous Article and in many earlier Articles.

Note that Article 47 of the 1922 Constitution contains the following:

Such a Bill shall ... be submitted by Referendum to the decision of the people .... Déanfar Bille den tsórt san do chur ... fé bhreith na ndaoine le Referendum.

Article 50 commences as follows:

Amendments of this Constitution ... may be made by the Oireachtas, but no such amendment ... shall become law, unless the same shall ... have been submitted to a Referendum of the people, and unless a majority of the voters on the register shall have recorded their votes on such Referendum, and ... the votes of a majority of the voters on the register ... shall have been cast in favour of such amendment. Féadfaidh an t-Oireachtas leasú do dhéanamh ar an mBunreacht so ... ach ... ní dhéanfaidh dlí de n-a leithéid de leasú ... mara ndéanfar ... an leasú san do chur fé referendum na ndaoine agus mara gcaithfidh mór-áireamh de sna vótáluithe ar an gclár a vótanna le linn a leithéid de referendum, agus vótanna mór-áirimh de sna vótáluithe ar an gclár ... do chaitheamh i bhfabhar an leasuithe.

Commentary

Reifreann This headword is simply translated as 'referendum' in Ó Dónaill, the form of the modern borrowing of 'referendum' in Irish being modelled on 'Aifreann', 'oifrend' being the earlier form of that borrowing from Latin 'offerenda', with 'oifrend' literally meaning 'offering, sacrifice', hence 'the sacrifice or office of the Mass', according to DIL – 'a canar dind oifriund' ('what is chanted of the Mass') is cited in DIL from the Stowe Missal, written in the monastery at Tallaght sometime between 792 and 812. As we see above, 'Referendum' is simply given as 'Referendum' in the Irish text of the 1922 Constitution, as it is in s29(4) of the Electoral Act, 1923. The Long Title of the Constitution (Amendment No. 16) Act, 1929, reads as follows:

An Act to amend the Constitution by extending the period within which amendments of the Constitution may be made by the Oireachtas without submission thereof to a Referendum of the people. Acht chun an Bunreacht do leasú tré fhaidiú do dhéanamh ar an tréimhse ina bhféadfaidh an tOireachtas leasuithe do dhéanamh ar an mBunreacht gan iad do chur fé Referendum na nDaoine.

Following the 1937 Constitution, 'the Referendum Act, 1942' is cited in Irish as 'Acht an Reifrinn, 1942'.

a mheas See the commentary on Articles 12.6.2° and 20.2.2° where 'meas' respectively expresses 'deem' and 'consider'. As regards 'hold' in this context, note that 'damage may be held to be caused by the wrong of the defendant' is translated as 'féadfar a chinneadh gurbh é éagóir an chosantóra ba chúis le damáiste' in s34(2)(e) of the Civil Liability Act, 1961. 'A patent shall not be held to be invalid by reason only of the invention ... having been published prior to the date of the patent' is translated as 'Ní tuigfar paitinn do bheith nea-dhleathach mar gheall ar gur dineadh an chumadóireacht ... d'fhoillsíú roimh dháta na paitinne' in s56(2) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927. 'No loan or advance of moneys so made by the Corporation before the passing of this Act shall be held or deemed to be or ever to have been invalid or irrecoverable' is translated as 'ní háireofar ná ní tuigfar i dtaobh aon iasacht no roimh-íoc airgid do thug an Chorporáid uaithi amhlaidh roimh rith an Achta so, go bhfuil ná go raibh sé riamh nea-dhleathach na neamh-ionbhainte amach' in s23(2) of the Agricultural Credit Act, 1929. As we have already seen, 'meas' later replaces 'tuig' in this context. See further the commentary on Article 40.1 where 'All citizens shall ... be held equal' is expressed as 'Áirítear gurb ionann ... na saoránaigh uile'.

a chuirtear faoi bhreith an phobail See the commentary on Article 26. Regarding 'a chur mar sin faoi bhreith an phobail', note that 'provided that a scheme under this section which relates to the staff of a regional board shall be so submitted by the Central Board only after consultation with that board' is translated as 'ar choinníoll nach ndéanfaidh an Príomh-Bhord scéim faoin alt seo a bhaineann le foireann boird réigiúnaigh a chur faoi bhráid an Aire gan comhairle a ghlacadh roimh ré leis an mbord sin' in s33(1) of the Fisheries Act, 1980. In s41(1) of the Railways Act, 1924, 'The railway tribunal shall consider the terms and conditions so submitted' is translated as 'Breithneoidh an bínse bóthair iarainn na téarmaí agus na coinníollacha a leagfar fé n-a mbráid amhlaidh'.

ar thaobh ... a thugtar Ó Dónaill cites 'ní raibh sé ar thaobh ná ar thaobh eile, he didn't support either side, take any side in the argument' and 'An dá thaobh a thabhairt leat, to curry favour with both sides, to be a double-dealer'. 'Do vóta a thabhairt do dhuine' is translated in Ó Dónaill as 'to give one's vote to someone', with 'do vóta a chaitheamh' being translated as 'to record one's vote'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'cast' as 'caithim (vóta)'.

'If a majority of the votes validly cast at that meeting ... are cast in favour of the resolution for the proposals' is translated as 'má chaitear tromlach na vótaí a chaitheamh go bailí ag an gcruinniú sin ... i bhfabhar an rúin le haghaidh na dtograí' in s23(3) of the Companies (Amendment) Act, 1990, with 'If the voting rights conferred by any shares in the company were not cast in favour of the special resolution' being translated as 'Más rud é nach ndearnadh na cearta vótála a thugtar le haon scaireanna sa chuideachta a chaitheamh i bhfabhar an rúin speisialta' in s260(3) of the Companies Act, 1963. In s7 of the Seventh Schedule to the Electoral Act, 1923, 'stating the number of votes cast in favour of the Bill' is translated as 'á rá cá mhéid vóta do caitheadh i bhfabhar don Bhille', with 'and either the votes of a majority of the voters on the register, or two-thirds of the votes recorded shall have been cast in favour of such amendment', in Article 50 of the 1922 Constitution, being translated as 'agus vótanna mór-áirimh de sna vótáluithe ar an gclár, no dhá dtrian na vótanna sa chomhaireamh, do chaitheamh i bhfabhar an leasuithe'. Finally, 'In the counting of the votes cast at a Seanad election' is translated as 'I gcomhaireamh na vótanna a tugadh i dtoghachán' in s4(1) of the Electoral (Seanad Elections) Act, 1925. See further the commentary on Article 15.11.2° where 'vóta a thabhairt' expresses 'to exercise a vote'.

go dtoilíonn See the commentary on Article 46.5. 'Unless the scheme has been approved by the Central Bank as meeting the requirements of ... this Part' is translated as 'mura mbeidh an scéim ceadaithe ag an mBanc Ceannais mar scéim a chomhlíonann ceanglais na Coda seo' in s101(5) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'A settlement which has been approved by a court in the course of proceedings' is translated as 'Socraíocht ar tugadh formheas uirthi sa chúirt i gcúrsa imeachtaí' in Article 51 of the First Schedule to the Jurisdiction of Courts and Enforcement of Judgements (European Communities) Act, 1988.

tromlach See the commentary on Article 13.2.2°.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

chun críche See the commentary on Article 29.4.2°.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2.

a leasú See the commentary on Article 46.1.

Direct translation

Measfar, chun críche Airteagal 46 den Bhunreacht seo, go mbeidh gach moladh<sup>1</sup> maidir le leasú a dhéanamh ar an mBunreacht seo a chuirtear faoi bhreith an phobail<sup>2</sup> le Reifreann ceadaithe<sup>3</sup> ag an bpobal, más rud é, arna chur faoina mbreith amhlaidh, gur i bhfabhar a achtaithe<sup>4</sup> ina dhlí a chaitheamh formhór na vótaí a chaitheamh sa Reifreann sin.

Variants

- 1 'togra'
- 2 'a chuirtear faoi bhráid an phobail lena chinneadh', 'faoi chinneadh an phobail'
- 3 'formheasta'
- 4 'é a achtú'

ARTICLE 47.2.1° AIRTEAGAL 47.2.1°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Gach togra, nach togra chun leasaithe an Bhunreachta, a chuirtear faoi bhreith an phobail le Reifreann ní foláir a mheas go ndíulthaíonn an pobal dó más in aghaidh é a achtú ina dhlí a thugtar tromlach na vótaí a thugtar sa Reifreann sin, agus nach lú an méid vótaí a thugtar amhlaidh in aghaidh é a achtú ina dhlí ná cion trí triochad is trian faoin gcéad de líon na dtoghthóirí atá ar an rolla.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every proposal, which is not a proposal for the amendment of the Constitution, which is submitted to the people for determination by Referendum it must be deemed that the people reject it if the majority of the votes that are given in that Referendum are given against enacting it into law, and the amount of votes so given against enacting it into law is not less than a thirty-three and a third per cent share of the number of electors that are on the roll.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every proposal, other than a proposal to amend the Constitution, which is submitted by Referendum to the decision of the people shall be held to have been vetoed by the people if a majority of the votes cast at such Referendum shall have been cast against its enactment into law and if the votes so cast against its enactment into law shall have amounted to not less than thirty-three and one-third per cent. of the voters on the register.

Note that the words 'Every Bill and' were deleted from the beginning of this subsection in the English text by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, with 'Gach Bille agus' being deleted from the beginning of the Irish subsection.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'To be vetoed by the people' is expressed as 'go ndiúltaíonn an pobal dó' ('that the people reject it') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Voters' is expressed as 'toghthóirí' ('electors') in the Irish text, the English text having 'voters' where one might expect 'number of the voters', with the Irish text having 'líon na dtoghthóirí', 'the number of electors'.
- 3 'Thirty-three and one-third per cent. of the voters' is expressed as 'cion trí triochad is trian faoin gcéad de líon na dtoghthóirí' ('a thirty-three and a third per centage share of the number of voters') in the Irish text.
- 4 'And if the votes so cast against its enactment into law shall have amounted to not less than' is expressed in the Irish text as 'agus nach lú an méid vótaí a thugtar amhlaidh in aghaidh é a achtú ina dhlí' ('and the amount of votes so cast against its enactment into law is not less than').
- 5 'Register' is expressed by 'rolla' ('roll'), the term usually expressing 'panel', in the Irish text, with 'on the register' being expressed as 'atá ar an rolla', 'that are on the register/roll'.
- 6 'Shall' is again expressed in the Irish text as 'ní foláir' ('must'), as we saw in the previous section and in many earlier Articles.

Commentary

go ndiúltaíonn ... dó See the commentary on Article 13.2.2° for 'diúltaigh' in the Constitution generally expressing 'refuse'. 'Diúltaigh do' is translated in Ó Dónaill as (a) 'renounce, repudiate', citing 'diúltú don diabhal, to renounce the devil' and (b) 'refuse, reject', citing 'diúltú do bhia is do bheatha, to reject food and sustenance'. Dinneen translates 'diúltaighim' as 'I deny, refuse, oppose, renounce (with do); I jilt', with 'diúltaim don fhaisnéis' being translated as 'I refuse informations' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Diúlta(id)' is translated as 'refuses, rejects' in DIL, where examples are cited from the Book of Ballymote (written c. 1400) onwards. This verb is based on 'diúltad', which itself is the verbal noun of the earlier 'do-sluindi', examples of which verb in the sense of 'denies' (i.e. refuses to believe) are cited in DIL from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards, with 'isee ar ndiltuth dunn fanissin' ('this is our denial of ourselves') being cited from the seventh-century Cambrai Homily as an example of 'do-sluindi' with the preposition 'do' in the sense of 'denies, renounces, rejects'.

Turning to 'veto', 'whether such proposal was or was not vetoed at such referendum' is translated as 'cé acu diúltuodh don togra san sa reifreann nó nár diúltuodh' in s8(4) of the Electoral (Amendment) Act, 1985, following s32(1)(b) of the First Schedule to the Referendum Act, 1942, where 'and in any case whether such proposal was or was not vetoed at such referendum' is translated as 'agus in aon chás cé aca diúltuodh don togra san sa reifreann san nó nár diúltuodh', which itself follows the wording of the Constitution. Looking at 'veto' outside of the context of the Constitution, '(the) power to veto the appointment of a director of the company' is translated as 'cumhacht urbhang a chur le ceapadh stiúthóra ar an gcuideachta' in s16(4)(b)(ii)(IV) of the Capital Acquisitions Tax Act, 1976, and in s6(3)(ii)(II) of the Wealth Tax Act, 1975. In s36(1)(d) of the Finance Act, 1971, however, 'power to veto the appointment of a director thereof' is translated as 'cumhacht chun ceapadh stiúthóra don chéanna a chrosadh'. Finally, in s154 of the Defence Forces (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'or to do either of such things subject, nevertheless, to the veto of the Minister', is translated as 'no chun aon taobh acu do dhéanamh ach, mar sin féin, beidh san fé veto an Aire'.

In Treaties establishing the European Communities (1973, p. 547), '(The Agency shall) ... possess a right of veto over its decisions' is translated as 'beidh ceart aige chun a cinntí a chrosadh'. De Bhaldraithe translates 'I veto' as 'crosaim (rud)', translating the noun 'veto' as 'cros', citing 'to put a veto on something, rud a chrosadh' and 'he has the right of veto, tá ceart crosta aige'.

cion 'Share, amount' is the sense of the second headword 'cion' given in Ó Dónaill, the first being translated principally as 'love, affection' and the third as 'offence, transgression, blame', all these headwords having their origin in Old Irish 'cin', translated principally as 'guilt, fault, crime' in DIL – see the commentary on Articles 30.3 and 38.1. DIL cites 'breith na clainne is cean [do] mhartra' ('... is a kind of martyrdom'), from a miscellaneous collection of Classical Irish poetry, as an example of the secondary sense of 'share, due, portion', referring the reader to 'cuit' and 'páirt' as regards the development of the meaning 'love, affection'. Dinneen cites 'mo chion den airgead, my share of the money' s.v. 'cion', 'a share, division, portion, quota or dividend'.

As regards 'amounted to', 'Where in a particular year an employed contributor's reckonable earnings have amounted to the sum of £7,000' is translated as 'I gcás ina raibh, i mbliain rannioca áirithe, suim £7,000 de thuilleamh ináirithe ag ranníoc fostaithe' in s10(1)(c) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981. 'Such that the extent of the resulting disablement assessed in accordance with the following provisions of this section amounts to not less than one per cent.' is translated as 'ionas nach lú ná aon faoin gcéad méid na mithreorach dá dhroim sin arna measúnú de réir na bhforálacha seo a leanas den alt seo' in s43(1). 'Shall be divided as if each such deduction amounted to the said aggregate divided by the number of such deductions' is translated as 'a roinnte ionann is dá mbeadh gach asbhaint acu sin cóimhéid leis an gcomhiomlán arna roinnt ar an uimhir asbhainti den sort sin' in s17 of the Finance Act, 1969. 'And the value of that interest ... amounts to one fifth or more of the net assets of the company' is translated as 'agus gur cúigiú cuid nó níos mó de ghlansócmhainní na cuideachta luach an leasa sin' in s63(1)(6) of the Finance Act, 1974. Finally, 'whether the sum amounts to fifty pounds or more' is translated as 'más có-mhéid le caoga punt no breis í' in s3(1) of the Damage to Property (Compensation) (Amendment) Act, 1926.

rolla Note that this headword has an initial capital in the original text. See the commentary on Article 18.4.1° regarding 'rolla' expressing 'panel'. Note that in Article 50 of the 1922 Constitution, which deals with referenda, 'the votes of a majority of the voters on the register' is translated as 'vótanna mór-áirimh de sna vótáluithe ar an gclár', 'register' being translated as 'clár' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'The expression "the Register" shall mean the Register of the decrees of the Dáil Land Courts' is translated as 'ciallóidh an focal "an Clár" an Clár d'aitheanta Dáil-Chúirteanna Talmhan' in s3(1) of the Dáil Éireann Courts (Winding Up) Act, 1923, Amendment Act, 1924.

trí tríochad 'Tríochad' is the form of the genitive singular of 'tríocha' ('thirty'), both 'ceithre bliana tríochad' and 'ceithre bliana is tríocha' being translated as 'thirty-four years' in Ó Dónaill.

leasaithe The genitive singular form of the verbal noun of 'leasaigh', on which verb see the commentary on Article 46.1.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

na dtoghthóirí See the commentary on Article 16.1.4°.

togra See the commentary on Article 46.2.

a chuirtear faoi bhreith See the commentary on Article 26.

Standardised Irish text

Gach togra, nach togra chun leasaithe an Bhunreacht, a chuirtear faoi bhreith an phobail le Reifreann ní foláir a mheas go ndiúltaíonn an pobal dó más in aghaidh é a achtú ina dhlí a thugtar tromlach na vótaí a thugtar sa Reifreann sin, agus nach lú an méid vótaí a thugtar amhlaidh in aghaidh é a achtú ina dhlí ná cion tríocha a trí is trian faoin gcéad de líon na dtoghthóirí atá ar an rolla.

Direct translation

Measfar, maidir le gach moladh<sup>1</sup>, seachas moladh<sup>1</sup> chun an Bunreacht a leasú, a chuirtear faoi bhreith an phobail<sup>2</sup> le Reifreann, go mbeidh sé crosta ag an bpobal más rud é gur in aghaidh é a achtú ina dhlí a chaithfear tromlach na vótaí a chaithfear ag an Reifreann<sup>3</sup> sin agus nach lú ná tríocha a trí agus trian faoin gcéad de na vótálaithe ar an gclár na vótaí a chaithfear amhlaidh in aghaidh é a achtú ina dhlí.

Variants

- <sup>1</sup> 'togra'
- <sup>2</sup> 'faoi chinneadh an phobail', 'faoi bhráid an phobail lena chinneadh'
- <sup>3</sup> 'a bheidh tromlach na vótaí a chaithfear ag an Reifreann'

ARTICLE 47.2.2° AIRTEAGAL 47.2.2°

TÉACS GAEILGE

Gach togra, nach togra chun leasaithe an Bhunreacht, a chuirtear faoi bhreith an phobail le Reifreann ní foláir a mheas, chun críocha Airteagal 27 den Bhunreacht seo, go dtoilíonn an pobal leis mura ndiúltaid dó de réir forálacha an fho-ailt sin romhainn den alt seo.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every proposal, (which is) not a proposal for the amendment of the Constitution, which is submitted to the people for determination by Referendum it must be deemed, for the purposes of Article 27 of this Constitution, that the people consent to it if they do not reject it in accordance with the provisions of the foregoing subsection of this section.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every proposal, other than a proposal to amend the Constitution, which is submitted by Referendum to the decision of the people shall for the purposes of Article 27 hereof be held to have been approved by the people unless vetoed by them in accordance with the provisions of the foregoing sub-section of this section.

Note that the words 'Every Bill and' were deleted from the beginning of this subsection in the English text by the Second Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1941, with 'Gach Bille agus' being deleted from the beginning of the Irish subsection.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 As in the previous section, 'approve' is expressed in the Irish text by 'toiligh le' ('consent to'); as in the foregoing subsection, 'veto' is expressed by 'diúltaigh do', 'reject'.
- 2 'Hereof' is expressed as 'den Bhunreacht seo' ('of this Constitution') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 3 'Shall' is expressed as 'ní foláir' ('must'), as in the previous subsection.

Commentary

mura ndiúltaid The synthetic form of the third person plural, present indicative, of 'diúltaigh' – see the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding the synthetic and analytic (i.e. 'mura ndiúltaíonn siad' in the case of the phrase above) forms of the verb and see the commentary on the previous subsection regarding 'diúltaigh do' and 'veto'. Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú commends the continuity of 'beidh ... ceadaithe ... beidh crosta' as against the forms of 'cross' given in the variants.

de réir forálacha an fho-ailt sin This would have the form 'de réir fhorálacha an fho-ailt sin' in the official standard – see the commentary on Article 1 regarding the (lenited) nominative in place of the genitive.

ní foláir See the commentary on Article 11.

go dtoilíonn ... leis See the commentary on Article 47.1.

Standardised Irish text

Gach togra, nach togra chun leasaithe an Bhunreachta, a chuirtear faoi bhreith an phobail le Reifreann ní foláir a mheas, chun críocha Airteagal 27 den Bhunreacht seo, go dtoilíonn an pobal leis mura ndiúltaíonn siad dó de réir fhorálacha an fho-ailt sin romhainn den alt seo.

Direct translation

Measfar, chun críocha Airteagal 27 den Bhunreacht seo, go mbeidh gach togra, seachas togra chun an Bunreacht a leasú, a chuirfear faoi bhreith an phobail le Reifreann ceadaithe ag an bpobal mura mbeidh sé crosta acu<sup>1</sup> de réir fhorálacha an fho-ailt sin romhainn den alt seo.

Variants

- 1 'mura gcosfaidh siad é', 'mura ndéanfaidh siad é a chrosadh'

ARTICLE 47.3 AIRTEAGAL 47.3

TÉACS GAEILGE

Gach saoránach ag a bhfuil sé de cheart vótáil i dtoghchán do chomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann tá sé de cheart aige vótáil i Reifreann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every citizen who has the right to vote in an election for members of Dáil Éireann (he) has the right to vote in a Referendum.

ENGLISH TEXT

Every citizen who has the right to vote at an election for members of Dáil Éireann shall have the right to vote at a Referendum.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Shall have the right' is expressed as 'tá sé de cheart aige', '(he) has the right', in the Irish text.

Commentary

de cheart See the commentary on Article 12.2.2° regarding 'ceart', that subsection reading as follows:

Every citizen who has the right to vote at an election for members of Dáil Éireann shall have the right to vote at an election for President. Gach saoránach ag a bhfuil ceart vótála i dtoghchán do chomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann, beidh ceart vótála aige i dtoghchán don Uachtarán.

'De cheart' is translated in Ó Dónaill as 'by right', citing 'tá sé de cheart agat saoire a ghlacadh, you are entitled to take a holiday'. Dinneen translates both 'níorbh é a cheart é' and 'ní raibh sé de cheart aige' as 'it was not right for him'.

i dtoghchán do chomhaltaí See the commentary on Articles 12.2.2° and 12.5.

Gender-proofed Irish text

Gach saoránach ag a bhfuil sé de cheart vótáil i dtoghchán do chomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann tá sé de cheart aige nó aici vótáil i Reifreann.

Direct gender-proofed translation

Beidh sé de cheart ag gach saoránach a bhfuil de cheart aige nó aici vótáil i dtoghchán do chomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann<sup>1</sup> vótáil i Reifreann.<sup>2</sup>

Variants

- 1 'i dtoghchán comhaltaí do Dháil Éireann'
2 'Gach saoránach a bhfuil sé de cheart aige nó aici vótáil i dtoghchán do chomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann beidh sé de cheart aige nó aici vótáil i Reifreann.', 'Beidh ceart vótála i Reifreann ag gach saoránach a bhfuil ceart vótála aige nó aici i dtoghchán do chomhaltaí de Dháil Éireann.'

ARTICLE 47.4 AIRTEAGAL 47.4

TÉACS GAEILGE

Faoi chuimsiú na nithe réamhráite is le dlí a rialófar an Reifreann.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Within the constraint/scope of the aforementioned matters it is by law that the Referendum will be regulated.

ENGLISH TEXT

Subject as aforesaid, the Referendum shall be regulated by law.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Subject as aforesaid' is expressed as 'Faoi chuimsiú na nithe réamhráite', 'Subject to the aforementioned matters', in the Irish text; 'subject to' is translated as 'faoi réir' in Téarmaí Dlí, as against 'faoi chuimsiú', which is translated in the Glossary appended to An Caighdeán Oifigiúil as 'within the scope of'.
2 'Regulate' is expressed by 'rialáigh', which term is translated as 'rule'/'control' in Téarmaí Dlí, 'rialáil' generally translating 'regulate' in the modern Acts.

Commentary

Faoi chuimsiú na nithe réamhráite See the commentary on Article 12.5 regarding 'faoi chuimsiú'. 'Subject as aforesaid, the said sum shall be deducted repeatedly from the payments' is translated as 'Faoi réir na nithe a dúradh, déanfar an tsuim sin a asbhaint go ráitúil as na híocaíochtaí' in s3(b) of the Table to s10(2) of the Finance Act, 1980. 'Subject as aforesaid the Company may dispose ... of any property' is translated as 'Faoi réir a bhfuil ráite roimhe seo féadfaidh an Coiste aon mhaoin ... a dhiúscairt' in s18(2) of the Dublin Cemeteries Committee Act, 1970. 'Faoi réir an mhéid a dúradh' translates 'Subject as aforesaid' in s136(3) of the Income Tax Act, 1967. 'Different superannuation schemes may be prepared and (subject as aforesaid) be carried into execution by the Minister for Education in relation to different classes of teachers' is translated as 'Féadfidh an tAire Oideachais scéimeanna deifriúla aois-liúntais d'ullamhú agus (fé réir a ndaingnithe mar adubhradh) do chur i bhfeidhm i dtaobh aicmí deifriúla múinteoirí' in s2(2) of the Teachers Superannuation Act, 1928. Finally, in Article 24 of the 1922 Constitution, 'The Oireachtas shall be summoned and dissolved by the Representatives of the Crown in the name of the King and subject as aforesaid Dáil Éireann shall fix the date of re-assembly of the Oireachtas' is translated as 'Déanfaidh Ionadaí na Coróinneach in ainm an Rí an t-Oireachtas do ghairm agus do sgur agus ar na hachtaibh sin ceapfaidh Dáil Éireann dáta aith-thionóil an Oireachtais'.

a rialófar The passive future of the verb 'rialaign' – see the commentary on Articles 10.3 and 12.5 regarding this verb and 'regulate'.

Direct translation

Faoi réir na nithe<sup>1</sup> a dúradh, déanfar an Reifeann a rialáil le dli.

Variant

<sup>1</sup> 'an mhéid'

REPEAL OF CONSTITUTION OF SAORSTÁT ÉIREANN AND CONTINUANCE OF LAWS BUNREACHT SHAORSTÁT ÉIREANN A AISGHAIRM AGUS DLÍTHE A BHUANÚ

ARTICLE 48 AIRTEAGAL 48

TÉACS GAEILGE

BUNREACHT SHAORSTÁT ÉIREANN A AISGHAIRM AGUS DLÍTHE A BHUANÚ

An Bunreacht a bheas i bhfeidhm do Shaorstát Éireann díreach roimh lá an Bunreacht seo a theacht i ngníomh agus an tAcht um Bunreacht Shaorstáit Éireann, 1922, sa mhéid go mbeidh an tAcht sin nó aon fhoráil de i bhfeidhm an uair sin, aisghairtear leis seo iad agus beid aisghairthe an lá sin agus as sin amach.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

REPEALING THE CONSTITUTION OF THE IRISH FREE STATE AND PERPETUATING LAWS

The Constitution which will be in force for the Irish Free State immediately before the day of the coming into operation of this Constitution and the Constitution of the Irish Free State Act, 1922, in so far as that Act or any provision of it will be in force at that time, they are repealed by this and they will be repealed (on) that day and from then on.

ENGLISH TEXT

REPEAL OF CONSTITUTION OF SAORSTÁT ÉIREANN AND CONTINUANCE OF LAWS

The Constitution of Saorstát Éireann in force immediately prior to the date of the coming into operation of this Constitution and the Constitution of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) Act, 1922, in so far as that Act or any provision thereof is then in force shall be and are hereby repealed as on and from that date.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Continuance of laws' is expressed as 'Dlíthe a bhuanú' ('to perpetuate laws') in the Irish text, the verb 'buanaigh' being based on 'buan', which has the sense of 'permanent'.
- 2 'The Constitution of Saorstát Éireann in force ...' is expressed as 'An Bunreacht a bheas i bhfeidhm do Shaorstát Éireann' ('The Constitution which will be in force for Saorstát Éireann') in the Irish text.
- 3 'The date of' is expressed in the Irish text as 'lá an', 'the day of', as we have seen in some earlier Articles, and 'as on and from that date' is expressed as 'an lá sin agus as sin amach', 'on that day and from then on'.
- 4 'Is then in force' is expressed as 'go mbeidh ... i bhfeidhm an uair sin' ('will be in force at that time') in the Irish text.

Commentary

a bhuanú The verbal noun of 'buanaigh', translated as 'perpetuate' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'nós a bhuanú, to perpetuate a custom'. Dinneen translates 'buanaighim' as 'I continue, prolong, persevere, give long life'. DIL cites 'buáineochuidh an duine iomlán innte' ('= the perfect shall remain in it') from the seventeenth-century translation of Proverbs ii. 21, this verb being based on the adjective 'buan', translated as 'lasting, enduring; constant, firm, persevering' in DIL, giving citations from the poems of Blathmac (fl. 750-770) onwards. Modern Irish 'buan' has the principal sense of 'enduring, permanent' in Ó Dónaill – see the commentary on Article 14.1.

The Margin Title of s1 of the Exchange Control (Continuance and Amendment) Act, 1978, 'Continuance of Principal Act', is translated as 'An Príomh-Acht a choimeád i ngníomh', the Act itself being cited in Irish as 'an tAcht um Rialú Iomlaoide (Buanú agus Leasú), 1978'. The Margin Title of s8 of the National Agricultural Advisory, Education and Research Authority Act, 1977, 'Continuance of orders and regulations', is translated as 'Orduithe agus rialacháin do leanúint i bhfeidhm', with 'Continuance of Control of Exports (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1956' being cited as 'An tAcht chun Onnmhaire a Rialú (Forálacha Sealadacha), 1956, a Bhuanú'. The Margin Title of s1 of the Expiring Laws (Continuance) Act, 1922, 'Continuance of Acts in Schedule', is translated as 'Buanú na n-Achtanna atá sna Sceidil', this Act being cited in Irish as 'Acht um Buanú Dlíthe atá ag dul in Eug, 1922', and the Long Title reading as follows:

An Act to continue certain expiring laws. Acht chun dlíthe áirithe atá ag dul in eug do bhuanú.

Note, finally, that 'Continuance of new import duties' is translated as 'Diúitéthe nua iomportála do bhuanú' in the Margin Title of s11 of the Finance Act, 1926, with 'included in the duties continued by this section' being translated as 'a háirithe ar na diúitéthe a buanuítear leis an alt so' in s11(2).

a aisghairm The verbal noun of 'aisghair' – see the commentary on Article 46.1. 'Repeal of section 8 of Act of 1941 and continuance of orders' is translated as 'Alt 8 d'Acht 1941 a athghairm agus orduithe a choimeád i bhfeidhm' in the Margin Title of s3 of the Trade Union Act, 1947. 'Notwithstanding the repeal of the Building Societies Act, 1976' is translated as 'D'ainneoin aisghairm an Achta Cumann Foirgníochta, 1976' in s6(5) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. The Margin Title of s12 of the Social Welfare (Amendment) Act, 1981, 'Repeal of certain obsolete provisions of Principal Act', is translated as 'Forálacha áirithe den Phríomh-Acht atá tite as feidhm a aisghairm'. Finally, the Margin Title of s1 of the Gaming Act, 1923, 'Repeal of Section 2 of Gaming Act, 1835', is translated as 'Alt 2 den Acht Cearrbhachais, 1835, d'athghairm'.

as sin amach 'On' is given as a sense of 'amach' in the context of time, 'forward' being a subsense, in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'uaidh seo amach, henceforth' and 'ón lá seo amach, from this day forward'. Dinneen cites 'ó shoin amach, from that time forth'. The earlier form, 'immach', literally means 'into the plain', i.e. the preposition 'i' (followed by eclipsis) plus 'mag' ('field'/'plain'), and is translated principally as 'out, outwards' in DIL, translating the phrase 'ó shin amach' as 'from that time forward, henceforth', citing 'ba cara do Patraic he o sein immach' ('he was a friend of Patrick thenceforth') from Fiacc's Hymn on S. Patrick, composed c. AD 800. See the commentary on Article 34.4.4<sup>o</sup> regarding 'amuigh'.

'The certificate shall have effect as on and from that date' is translated as 'beidh éifeacht ag an deimhniú amhail ar an dáta sin agus uaidh sin amach' in s26(1)(b) of the Civil Service Commissioners Act, 1956. In s10(3) of the Drainage Maintenance Act, 1924, 'This Act shall be deemed to have come into force on the 1st day of April, 1924, and shall take effect as on and from that date' is translated as 'Tuigfar an tAcht so do theacht i bhfeidhm an Iadh lá d'Abrán, 1924, agus beidh éifeacht aige an lá san agus ón lá san amach'. See the commentary on Article 12.3.1<sup>o</sup> regarding 'lá' expressing 'date'.

An tAcht um Bunreacht Shaorstáit Éireann, 1922 The official title of this Act in Irish; 'Saorstát' in this position would be lenited but otherwise today remain uninflected in this construction, as in 'Bunreacht Shaorstát Éireann' in the Heading of this Article – see the commentary on Article 1 regarding the (lenited) nominative in place of the genitive.

beid The synthetic form of the third person, plural, future tense, of the substantive verb – this would generally be replaced today by 'beidh siad' (the analytic form). See the commentary on Article 14.5.1<sup>o</sup> regarding the synthetic and analytic forms of the verb.

a bheas The special form of the relative, future tense, of the substantive verb; this would generally have the form 'a bheidh' today – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s'.

Standardised Irish text

BUNREACHT SHAORSTÁT ÉIREANN A AISGHAIRM AGUS DLÍTHE A BHUANÚ

An Bunreacht a bheidh i bhfeidhm do Shaorstát Éireann díreach roimh lá an Bunreacht seo a theacht i ngníomh agus an tAcht um Bunreacht Shaorstáit Éireann, 1922, sa mhéid go mbeidh an tAcht sin nó aon fhoráil de i bhfeidhm an uair sin, aisghairtear leis seo iad agus beidh siad aisghairthe an lá sin agus as sin amach.

Direct translation

BUNREACHT SHAORSTÁT ÉIREANN A AISGHAIRM AGUS DLÍTHE A CHOIMEÁD I nGNÍOMH<sup>1</sup>

Leis seo déanfar<sup>2</sup> Bunreacht Shaorstát Éireann a bheidh i bhfeidhm díreach roimh dháta an Bunreacht seo a theacht i ngníomh agus an tAcht um Bunreacht Shaorstáit Éireann, 1922, sa mhéid a bheidh an tAcht sin agus aon fhoráil de<sup>3</sup> i bhfeidhm an uair sin, a aisghairm agus beidh siad aisghairthe amhail ar an dáta sin agus ón dáta sin amach<sup>4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'a bhuanú'
- 2 'déantar'
- 3 'den Acht sin'
- 4 'ón dáta sin'

ARTICLE 49.1 AIRTEAGAL 49.1

TÉACS GAELIGE

Gach uile chumhacht, feidhm, ceart agus sainchumas a bhí inoibríthe i Saorstát Éireann nó i dtaobh Shaorstát Éireann díreach roimh an 11ú lá de Mhí Nollag, 1936, cibé acu de bhua an Bhunreacht a bhí i bhfeidhm an uair sin é nó nach ea, ag an údarás ag a raibh cumhacht chomhallach Shaorstát Éireann an uair sin, dearbhaítear leis seo gur leis an bpobal iad uile.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Every power, function, right and prerogative that was operable in the Irish Free State or with regard to the Irish Free State immediately before the 11th day of the Month of December, 1936, whether by virtue of the Constitution which was then in force or not, by the authority which had the executive power of the Irish Free State at that time, it is hereby declared that they all belong to the people.

ENGLISH TEXT

All powers, functions, rights and prerogatives whatsoever exercisable in or in respect of Saorstát Éireann immediately before the 11th day of December, 1936, whether in virtue of the Constitution then in force or otherwise, by the authority in which the executive power of Saorstát Éireann was then vested are hereby declared to belong to the people.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Or otherwise' is expressed as 'nó nach ea' ('or not') in the Irish text.
- 2 'By the authority in which the ... power was then vested' is expressed as 'ag an údarás ag a raibh cumhacht ... an uair sin' ('by the authority which had the ... power ... at that time') in the Irish text.
- 3 'All powers ... whatsoever' is expressed as 'Gach uile chumhacht' ('Every power') in the Irish text, though 'uile' ('all') does add to the force of 'gach'.
- 4 'Exercisable' is expressed as 'inoibríthe' ('operable') in the Irish text, 'oibrim' being translated as 'I operate' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 5 'Executive', as we have seen in some earlier Articles, is expressed by an unfamiliar term today, 'comhallach', which would be more literally translated perhaps as 'discharging', the general term today expressing 'executive' ('feidhmiúchán') being found in a 1998 Amendment of the Constitution.

Commentary

sainchumas This headword is translated as ‘prerogative’ in Téarmaí Dlí and in Ó Dónaill. This compound of the prefix ‘sain-’ (translated in Dinneen as ‘special, different, particular’) and ‘cumas’ (‘requisite capability or power; ability’ being among its senses included in Dinneen) does not appear to be cited as a headword in Dinneen. See the commentary on Articles 14.2.2° and 31.2 regarding ‘cumas’. The adjective ‘sain’ is translated in DIL as (a) ‘different, distinct, separate (from other things)’, citing ‘sain dán cáich’ (‘different [is] every one’s gift’) from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, and (b) ‘peculiar, special (of a characteristic which distinguishes one thing from others)’, citing ‘is sain ordo dogní cehtar náí’ (‘different is the ordo which each of them makes’) from the same collection of Glosses, with ‘sainchóim ind rig’ (‘the special favourites of the King’) being cited from the same source as an example of ‘sain-’ compounded with a noun.

‘A prisoner of war awarded disciplinary punishment may not be deprived of the prerogatives attached to his rank’ is translated as ‘Ní cead na sainchumais a ghabhann lena chéim a bhaint de phríosúnach ar ar gearradh pionós araíonachta’ in Article 98 of the Third Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962, with ‘Beidh na sainchumais chéanna ag toscairí Choiste Idirnáisiúnta na Croise Deirge’ translating ‘The delegates of the International Committee of the Red Cross shall enjoy the same prerogatives’ in Article 126. Following the present Article, the Heading of Part III of the State Property Act, 1954, ‘Rights and Prerogatives belonging to the people in relation to property, escheat and bona vacantia’, is translated as ‘Cearta agus Sainchumais an Phobail maidir le Maoin, Eiséatadh agus bona vacantia’, with s27 reading as follows:

Every right and every prerogative which, by virtue of Article 49 of the Constitution, belong to the People and relate to any property (including choses-in-action) shall be exercised by the Government through and by the Minister. Is é an Rialtas, tríd an Aire, a fheidhmeos gach ceart agus gach sainchumas is leis an bPobal, de bhuaidh Airteagail 49 den Bhunreacht, agus a bhaineas le haon mhaoin (lena n-áirítear ábhair i gcaingean).

In the Treaty on European Union (1992, p. 70), ‘for the purpose of protecting their prerogatives’ is translated as ‘d’fhonn sainchumais na gcomhlachtaí sin a choimirciú’.

Looking at early translations, ‘the word “charter” means a charter, letters patent, warrant, or other instrument granted, made, or issued by the King in exercise of a prerogative power and having the force of law in Saorstát Éireann’ is translated as ‘cialluíonn an focal “cairt” cairt, leitreacha paitinne, barántas, no ionstruim eile den tsaghas chéanna do dheon no do rinne an Rí, no do thug sé amach, i bhfeidhmiú comhachta príbhléidige agus ag a bhfuil feidhm dlí i Saorstát Éireann’ in s1 of the Executive Powers (Consequential Provisions) Act, 1937. ‘Ceart príbhléideach’ is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as translating ‘prerogative right’ in Iris Oifigiúil, 1925, p. 36. ‘Réimiadh’ translates ‘prerogative’ in Foclóir Staire is Tír-eóluíochta. Dinneen translates ‘uirdhligheadh’ as ‘prerogative, privilege’. Finally, ‘prerogative right’ is translated as ‘ceart príbhléideach’ in Foclóir Oifigiúil (without reference).

gur leis an bpobal iad As regards ‘belong’ in the Acts, ‘The commodities or materials ... are exported out of the State while continuing to belong to that person’ is translated as ‘go ndéanfar na hearraí nó na hábhair ... a onnmhairiú as an Stát le linn dóibh a bheith fós ar úinéireacht ag an duine sin’ in s59(1) of the Corporation Tax Act, 1976, with ‘the machinery or plant shall be deemed to belong to him’ being translated as ‘measfar gur leis-sean an t-innealra nó an gléasra’ in s6 of the First Schedule thereto and ‘any event ... whereby the machinery or plant ceases to belong to the person carrying on the trade’ being translated as ‘aon teagmhas ... trína scoirfidh an t-innealra nó an gléasra de bheith ina mhaoin dá chuid féin ag an duine a bheidh ag seoladh na trádála’ in s29 of that Schedule. Finally, ‘Certain lands reclaimed to belong to the State’ is translated as ‘Má dintar mintíreach de thailte áirithe, is leis an Stát iad’ in the Margin Title of s105 of the Dundalk Harbour and Port Act, 1925.

de Mhí Nollag ‘Mí Nollag’ would generally be written today as ‘Mí na Nollag’, ‘Nollaig’ and ‘Mí na Nollag’ being translated as ‘December’ in Ó Dónaill, ‘Nollaig’ having the principal sense of ‘Christmas’. Dinneen also gives ‘Mí na Nodlag, December’, ‘Lá Nodlag’ being ‘Christmas Day’. ‘Notlaic’ comes from Latin ‘natalicia’ and is translated as ‘Christmas; Christmas day’ in DIL, where this word is cited from the Stowe Missal, written in the monastery of Tallaght some time between 792 and 812.

i dtaobh This prepositional phrase is translated as ‘about, concerning’ in Ó Dónaill, who cites ‘i dtaobh do litreach, as regards your letter’. Dinneen gives ‘regarding, in reference to, about’ as one of the senses of ‘i dtaobh’, citing ‘im thaobh de, as far as I am concerned’. DIL cites ‘atcualaidh ... beccán do briathraib slánaighibh ‘na thaibhsiumh’ (... as regarded him)’ as an example of the sense ‘as regards, with respect to’ s.v. ‘taeb’. ‘I dtaobh aon ní’ expresses ‘on any matter’ in Article 13.7.1°.

‘In respect of’ is generally translated as ‘i leith’ in the Acts today, though we also find ‘maidir le’. ‘Minister’s sanction required as regards certain authorisations’ is translated as ‘Ceadú an Aire riachtanach maidir le húdaruithe áirithe’ in the Margin Title of s11 of the Local Government (Financial Provisions) Act, 1978, for example.

de bhua See the commentary on Article 27. ‘And whether in virtue of ownership of such bog land or of ownership of other lands or otherwise’ is translated as ‘agus pe’ca de bhua únaeracht an phortaigh sin é no de bhua únaeracht tailte eile no éinní eile’ in s18(a) of the Arterial Drainage (Minor Schemes) Act, 1928. In s84(2) of the Postal and Telecommunications Services Act, 1983, ‘Subsection (1) shall not apply to any person who is acting ... in virtue of any power conferred on the company by section 83’ is translated as ‘Ní bheidh feidhm ag fo-alt (1) maidir le haon duine a bheidh ag gníomhú ... de bhua aon chumhachta a thugtar don chuideachta le halt 83’. ‘Which is a disposal to which Chapter VII ... applies (whether by virtue of subsection (3) of section 64 or otherwise)’ is translated as ‘is diúscairt lena mbaineann Caibidil VII ... (cibé acu de bhua fho-alt (3) d’alt 64 nó ar shlí eile)’ in s2(2)(b) of the Fifth Schedule to the Finance Act, 1990.

i bhfeidhm See the commentary on Article 24.3 where 'fan i bhfeidhm' expresses 'remain in force'. 'As regards which a certificate issued under section 73(2) of the Principal Act was then in force' is translated as 'a raibh deimhniú arna eisiúint faoi alt 73(2) den Phríomh-Acht i bhfeidhm an tráth sin ina leith' in s36(2) of the Safety in Industry Act, 1980. 'And which, if the Act of 1958 were then in force, would have been a building lease ... within the meaning of that Act' is translated as 'agus a bheadh, dá mba rud é go raibh Acht 1958 i bhfeidhm an tráth sin, ina léas foirgníochta ... de réir bhrí an Achta sin' in s8(1) of the Landlord and Tenant (Amendment) Act, 1971. In s1(1) of the Finance Act, 1923, 'under the law then in force in Saorstát Éireann' is translated as 'fén dlí a bhí i bhfeidhm an uair sin i Saorstát Éireann'.

gach uile See the commentary on Articles 12.1 and 16.1.2° where 'gach uile' expresses 'all'. 'And shall be computed on the amount of all such salaries, fees, wages, perquisites or profits whatsoever therefrom' is translated as 'agus a riomh ar mhéid na dtuarastal, na dtáillí, an phá, na bpeorcaisí nó na mbrabús uile sin de shórt ar bith uaithi' in s19(a) of the Finance Act, 1990. In Article 66 of the 1922 Constitution, 'and shall not be reviewed ... by any other Court, Tribunal or Authority whatsoever' is translated as 'ná ní féadfar aith-bhreithniú do dhéanamh ar an mbreith sin ag aon Chúirt, Binse ná Údarás eile ar bith'.

inoibrithe This headword is translated as 'workable, practicable' in Ó Dónaill, this adjective not appearing to be given as a headword in Dinneen, according to whom the prefix 'ion-, in-', with the genitive, denotes 'fitness, aptitude, worthiness', giving 'ion-chaithte' ('edible, wearable, missive') as an example of 'ion-' with the genitive of a verbal noun – see the commentary on Article 31.1.

Commenting on the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that 'a bhí infheidhmithe' is separated quite a bit from 'ag an údarás', a problem found in the English 'exercisable ... by the authority' also and which the original Irish text did not succeed in lessening.

dearbhaítear See the commentary on Article 29.1 and on Article 1.

cumhacht chomhallach See the commentary on Article 28.2.

Standardised Irish text

Gach uile chumhacht, feidhm, ceart agus sainchumas a bhí inoibrithe i Saorstát Éireann nó i dtaobh Shaorstát Éireann díreach roimh an 11ú lá de mhí na Nollag, 1936, cibé acu de bhua an Bhunreachta a bhí i bhfeidhm an uair sin é nó nach ea, ag an údarás ag a raibh cumhacht chomhallach Shaorstát Éireann an uair sin, dearbhaítear leis seo gur leis an bpobal iad uile.

Direct translation

Dearbhaítear leis seo gur leis an bpobal na cumhachtaí, na feidhmeanna, na cearta agus na sainchumais uile sin de shórt ar bith a bhí infheidhmithe i Saorstát Éireann nó ina leith<sup>1</sup> roimh an 11ú lá de mhí na Nollag, 1936, cibé acu de bhua an Bhunreachta a bhí i bhfeidhm ansin nó ar shlí eile, ag an údarás dá<sup>2</sup> raibh cumhacht fheidhmiúcháin Shaorstát Éireann dílsithe<sup>3,4</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'i leith Shaorstát Éireann'
- 2 'ina'
- 3 'a raibh cumhacht fheidhmiúcháin Shaorstát Éireann dílsithe dó'
- 4 'Na cumhachtaí, na feidhmeanna, na cearta agus na sainchumais uile sin de shórt ar bith a bhí infheidhmithe i Saorstát Éireann nó ina leith roimh an 11ú lá de mhí na Nollag, 1936, cibé acu de bhua an Bhunreachta a bhí i bhfeidhm ansin nó ar shlí eile, ag an údarás dá raibh cumhacht fheidhmiúcháin Shaorstát Éireann dílsithe, dearbhaítear leis seo gur leis an bpobal iad.'

ARTICLE 49.2 AIRTEAGAL 49.2

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ach amháin sa mhéid go ndéantar socrú leis an mBunreacht seo, nó go ndéanfar socrú ina dhiaidh seo le dlí, chun go n-oibreofar, le haon organ dá mbunaítear leis an mBunreacht seo, aon chumhacht, feidhm, ceart nó sainchumas díobh sin, achtaítear leis seo nach dleathach agus nach féidir na cumhachtaí, na feidhmeanna, na cearta, agus na sainchumais sin a oibriú sa Stát nó i dtaobh an Stáit ach amháin ag an Rialtas nó le húdarás an Rialtais.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Except in so far as provision is made by this Constitution, or that provision will be made hereafter by law, so that any of those powers, functions, rights or prerogatives will be operated, by any organ which is established by this Constitution, it is hereby enacted that it is not lawful and it is not possible to operate those powers, functions, rights, and prerogatives in the State or with regard to the State except by the Government or with the authority of the Government.

ENGLISH TEXT

It is hereby enacted that, save to the extent to which provision is made by this Constitution or may hereafter be made by law for the exercise of any such power, function, right or prerogative by any of the organs established by this Constitution, the said powers, functions, rights and prerogatives shall not be exercised or be capable of being exercised in or in respect of the State save only by or on the authority of the Government.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Shall not be exercised' is expressed as 'nach dleathach ... a oibriú' ('it is not lawful to exercise') in the Irish text.
- 2 'Shall not ... be capable of being exercised' is expressed as 'nach féidir ... a oibriú' ('cannot be exercised' / 'it is not possible to exercise') in the Irish text.
- 3 'By or on the authority of the Government' is expressed as 'ag an Rialtas nó le húdarás an Rialtais' ('by the Government or on the authority of the Government') in the Irish text – note that Article 6.2 reads as follows:

These powers of government are exercisable only by or on the authority of the organs of State established by this Constitution. Is leis na horgain Stáit a chuirtear ar bun leis an mBunreacht seo, agus leo sin amháin nó lena n-údarás, is féidir na cumhachtaí riala sin a oibriú.

- 4 'Or may hereafter be made by law' is expressed in the Irish text as 'nó go ndéanfar socrú ina dhiaidh seo le dlí', 'or (to the extent) that provision will be made hereafter by law'.
- 5 'Exercise' is expressed by 'oibrigh' ('operate') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

Commentary

féidir See the commentary on Article 6.2, where 'is féidir ... a oibriú' expresses 'are exercisable'. 'A holder ... will then, and only then by law be entitled to or be capable of being granted a superannuation allowance' is translated as 'maidir le sealbhóir a bheas do réir dlí ... agus nach mbeidh go dtí sin, i dteideal aoisliúntas d'fháil nó i gcumas é a dheonadh dhó' in Part I of the Second Schedule to the Local Government Act, 1955. In s121(b) of the Industrial and Commercial Property (Protection) Act, 1927, 'licences made by the Minister ... shall not ... be or be capable of being entered in the register' is translated as 'ní déanfar ná ní féadfar ... ceadúnaisí a dheonfadh an tAire ... d'iontráil sa chlár'. In s5(4) of the Dáil Éireann Courts (Winding-up) Act, 1923, 'No decree of a Dáil Court shall be of any force or effect or be capable of being sued upon or enforced before or by the Commissioners' is translated as 'Ní bheidh aon bhri ná éifeacht ag aon aithne Dáil-Chúirte ná ní féadfar dlí do chur ar siúl mar gheall uirthé ná i d'fheidhmiú i láthair na gCoimsinéirí'. Finally, 'capable of being applied' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'is féidir do chur i mbaint' in Iris Oifigiúil, 1925, p. 573.

socrú See the commentary on Article 8.3. Note that 'Where a person is convicted of an offence under the Principal Act ... in relation to which provision is not made ... for the forfeiture on conviction of any fish in respect of which the offence is committed' is translated as 'I gcás ina gciontófar duine i gcion faoin bPríomh-Acht ... nach bhfuil aon fhoráil ina thaobh déanta ... maidir le haon iasc a ndearnadh an cion ina leith a fhorghéilleadh' in s32(7) of the Fisheries Amendment Act, 1962.

Ach amháin See the commentary on Article 12.10.4°. 'A provisional referendum certificate shall not be capable of being questioned in any manner in any court save only by a referendum petition presented to the High Court' is translated as 'Ní bheidh deimhniú reifrinn sealadach ionchospóidithe in aon tslí i gcúirt ar bith ach amháin tré achuinge reifrinn arna tiolacadh don Ard-Chúirt' in s34(4) of the Referendum Act, 1942. 'The name of a person whose name has been erased from the register by the Council on account of professional misconduct shall not be restored to the register save only by order of the High Court' is translated as 'Ní déanfar ainm duine gur scrios an Chomhairle a ainm amach as an gclár mar gheall ar mhí-iompar maidir le n-a ghairm do chur thar n-ais sa chlár ach le hordú ón Ard-Chúirt' in s37(1) of the Veterinary Surgeons Act, 1931.

Ach amháin sa mhéid 'Any such refund shall be made without payment of interest on the amount so refunded, save to the extent to which interest was paid on the amount so refunded when the tax was paid' is translated as 'Déanfar aon aisíoc den tsórt sin gan ús d'íoc ar an tsuim a haisíocfar amhlaidh, ach amháin sa mhéid a hiocadh ús ar an tsuim a haisíocadh amhlaidh nuair a hiocadh an cháin' in s2 of Article VI of the First Schedule to the Finance Act, 1950. See the commentary on Article 15.4.2° regarding 'sa mhéid', 'to the extent'.

ina dhiaidh seo 'Such claim hereafter be made at any time within one year after the end of the year of assessment' is translated as 'féadfar an t-éileamh san do dhéanamh feasta áon uair laistigh de bhliain tar éis deire na bliana cáinmheasa' in s9(4) of the Finance Act, 1925. 'Accept the trusteeship ... of any trust which has been, or may hereafter be, established by any deed' is translated as 'glacadh le hiontaobhaíocht aon iontaobhas a bunaíodh, nó a bhunófar dá éis seo, le haon ghníomhas' in s3 of the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland (Acceptance of Trusteeship) Act, 1978. 'The privileges and immunities which have been, or may hereafter be, accorded by any State to any specialised agency' is translated as 'na pribhléidí agus na díolúintí atá tugtha, nó a thabharfar dá éis seo, ag aon Stát d'aon sainghníomhaireacht' in s39 of the Fourth Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967.

dleathach This headword is translated as 'lawful' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 10.1.

go n-oibreofar ... oibriú See the commentary on Article 3 regarding 'oibrigh'.

organ See the commentary on Article 6.2.

sainchumas See the commentary on the previous section.

le húdarás See the commentary on Article 6.2.

Direct translation

Achtaítear leis seo, ach amháin sa mhéid a dhéanfar socrú leis an mBunreacht seo nó go bhféadfar socrú a dhéanamh le dlí dá éis seo maidir le haon chumhacht, feidhm, ceart nó sainchumas den sórt sin a fheidhmiú ag aon cheann de na horgáin a bhunófar leis an mBunreacht seo<sup>1</sup>, nach ndéanfar na cumhachtaí, feidhmeanna, cearta agus sainchumais a dúradh a fheidhmiú nó nach mbeidh siad infheidhmithe sa Stát nó i leith an Stáit ach amháin ag an Rialtas nó ar údarás an Rialtais.

Variants

- 1 'maidir le haon cheann de na horgáin a bhunófar leis an mBunreacht seo a fheidhmiú aon chumhachta, feidhme, cirt nó sainchumais den sórt sin'

ARTICLE 49.3 AIRTEAGAL 49.3

TÉACS GAELGE

Is é an Rialtas is comharba ar Rialtas Shaorstát Éireann i gcás gach maoine, sócmhainne, cirt agus féichiúnais.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The Government is successor to the Government of the Irish Free State with regard to all property, assets, rights and liabilities.

ENGLISH TEXT

The Government shall be the successors of the Government of Saorstát Éireann as regards all property, assets, rights and liabilities.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'The Government shall be the successors of' is expressed in the Irish text as 'Is é an Rialtas is comharba ar', 'It is the Government which is / The Government is successor to'.
- 2 'Liability' is translated as 'dliteanas' in Téarmaí Dlí, although 'féichiúnas' does also have this sense.

Commentary

comharba ar See the commentary on Article 28.11.1°. 'And the council of such rural district' is translated as 'agus is iad comhairle na contae sin a bheidh ina gcomharbaí do chomhairle an tuathcheanntair sin' in s3(1) of the Local Government Act, 1925. 'Córas Iompair Éireann as successors to the Waterford and Limerick Railway Company' is translated as 'Córas Iompair Éireann, mar chomharbaí ar an Waterford and Limerick Railway Company' in the Preamble to the Waterford Harbour Commissioners (Acquisition of Property) Act, 1964. 'As successors to the Congested Districts Board for Ireland' is translated as 'mar chomharbaí do Bhórd na gCeanntar gCumhang in Éirinn' in s62 of the Land Act, 1923. 'That I will be faithful to H. M. King George V., his heirs and successors by law' is translated as 'go mbead dilis dá Shoillse Rí Seoirse V., dá oighrí agus dá chomharbaí' in the 'Form of Oath' to be taken by members of the Oireachtas in Article 17 of the 1922 Constitution.

'And which is the successor to a scheduled harbour authority' is translated as 'agus is comharba ar údarás cuain sceidealta' in s3(2) of the Harbours Act, 1947. 'And thereupon the Corporation shall become and be the successor to the District Council' is translated as 'agus leis sin tiocfaidh an Bárdas chun bheith agus beidh ina chomharba don Chomhairle Cheanntair' in s5 of the Local Government (Galway) Act, 1937.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that the plural of the noun or pronoun was not really necessary here, and would translate the opening clause as 'Beidh an Rialtas ina chomharba an Rialtas Shaorstát Éireann'.

féichiúnais The genitive singular form of 'féichiúnas', translated as 'indebtedness, liability' in Ó Dónaill, 'féicheamhnas' being translated as 'liability; recrimination' in Dinneen, who cites 'cáil féicheamhnais, state of indebtedness'. 'Féchemnas' is translated as 'advocacy, pleading' in DIL, citing Fionn Mac Cumhaill's boast, 'úair budh forderg forránach fergarnaidh na fuighle feicheamnais dogén-sa friú' ('for the debtor's speech which I shall hold with them will be bloody and crushing, wrathful and relentless') from the fifteenth-century version of the Chase of Slieve na mBan. This word is based on 'féchem', a noun of agency from 'fiach', which in early Irish law can mean 'either of the parties to an obligation, creditor as well as debtor', according to D.A. Binchy, in his 'Legal Glossary' to the early Irish law-tract, Críth Gablach (p. 88), which word is cited in DIL from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles. See further the commentary on Article 11.

sócmhainne The genitive singular form of 'sócmhainn', the plural form, 'sócmhainní', being translated as 'assets' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Asset' is given as the sole meaning of 'sócmhainn' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'sócmhainní pearsanta, personal assets' and 'sócmhainní so-aistrithe, liquid assets', along with 'is beag an tsócmhainn duit é, it is no great asset, not much good, to you'. Dinneen translates 'sócmhainn' as 'a makeshift or resource, something to fall back on, the next best thing, an asset especially if convertible', citing 'is maith an tsócmhainn airgid muca, pigs are readily turned into money' and 'ní'l airgead ná sócmhainn airgid agam, I have neither money nor convertible assets'. Dinneen translates the plural 'sócmhainní' as 'assets', also including 'dainties, delicacies, medicaments' among its senses. According to Dinneen 'sócmhaing' developed from 'so' and 'eacmhaing', early 'eacmhang' now 'acfuinn, acainn', 'juncture, capacity (at a given time), power, etc.'

i gcás 'I gcás' is translated as 'as regards' in Dinneen, citing 'i gcás Sheáin, in John's case, as regards John'. 'I gcás mar seo' is translated as 'in a case like this' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'i mo chás féin, in my own case', 'cás' being translated principally as 'case' in the sense of 'instance, circumstances, state of affairs'. See further the commentary on Articles 14.4, 15.8.2° and 17.1.2° regarding 'cás'. 'Indemnified such person in respect of the rates' is translated as 'an duine sin a shlánú i leith na rátaí' in s5(1)(c) of the Local Government (Financial Provisions) Act, 1978.

i gcás gach maoinne 'Maoinne' is the genitive singular form of 'maoin', translated as 'property' in Téarmaí Dlí but in general usage expressing 'wealth' – see the commentary on Article 10.1. Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where 'as regards all property, assets, rights and liabilities' was translated as 'maidir leis an maoin, na sócmhainní, na cearta agus na dliteanais go léir', Professor Ó Murchú remarked that 'go léir' was not understood as being so all-encompassing in the Irish and recommended returning to 'gach' of the original.

Direct translation

Beidh an Rialtas ina gcomharbaí<sup>1</sup> ar Rialtas Shaorstát Éireann sa mhéid a bhaineann le<sup>2</sup> gach maoin, sócmhainn, ceart agus dliteanas<sup>3</sup>.

Variants

- 1 'ina chomharba'
- 2 'maidir le'
- 3 'le gach maoin, le gach sócmhainn, le gach ceart agus le gach dliteanas'

ARTICLE 50.1 AIRTEAGAL 50.1

TÉACS GAEILGE

Na dlíthe a bheas i bhfeidhm i Saorstát Éireann díreach roimh lá an Bunreacht seo a theacht i ngníomh leanfaid de bheith i lánfheidhm agus i lánéifeacht, faoi chuimsiú an Bhunreacht seo agus sa mhéid nach bhfuilid ina choinne, go dtí go n-aisghairtear nó go leasaítear iad nó aon chuid díobh le hachtú ón Oireachtas.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

The laws which will be in force in the Irish Free State immediately before the day of the coming into operation of this Constitution will continue to be in full force and in full effect, within the constraint of this Constitution and to the extent that they are not against it, until they or any part of them are repealed or amended by enactment by the Oireachtas.

ENGLISH TEXT

Subject to this Constitution and to the extent to which they are not inconsistent therewith, the laws in force in Saorstát Éireann immediately prior to the date of the coming into operation of this Constitution shall continue to be of full force and effect until the same or any of them shall have been repealed or amended by enactment of the Oireachtas.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'They are not inconsistent therewith' is expressed as 'nach bhfuilid ina choinne' ('they are not against it') in the Irish text, 'inconsistent with' being translated as 'ar neamhréir le' in Téarmaí Dlí.
- 2 'Date' is expressed as 'lá', 'day', in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.
- 3 'Shall continue to be of full force and effect' is expressed as 'leanfaid de bheith i lánfheidhm agus i lánéifeacht' ('shall continue to be in full force and in full effect') in the Irish text.
- 4 'The same' is expressed as 'iad', 'they'/'them', in the Irish text.
- 5 'Any of them' is expressed as 'aon chuid díobh' ('any part of them') in the Irish text.
- 6 'Shall have been repealed or amended' is expressed as 'go n-aisghairtear nó go leasaítear' ('are repealed or amended') in the Irish text.
- 7 'Subject to' is expressed as 'faoi chuimsiú' ('within the scope/constraint of') in the Irish text, as we have seen in some earlier Articles.

J.M. Kelly, op. cit., p. 210, reports as follows on reference to this Article in the courts:

In The State (Sheerin) v Kennedy ([1965] IR 379) Walsh J pointed to the corresponding pairs of expressions (which were distinct in each text) "inconsistent/ina choinne", "validity/bail", "repugnant/in aghaidh" in order to fortify the practical distinction which he emphasised between "inconsistency" with the Constitution (under Article 50) and "invalidity" (under Article 34) or "repugnancy" (under Article 26).

Note that Article 73 of the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

Subject to this Constitution and to the extent to which they are not inconsistent therewith, the laws in force in the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) at the date of the coming into operation of this Constitution shall continue to be of full force and effect until the same or any of them shall have been repealed or amended by enactment of the Oireachtas. Gan dochar don Bhun-reacht so agus sa mhéid ná fuilid buinisciunn leis, leanfaidh na dlíthe atá i bhfeidhm i Saorstát Éireann le linn teacht i ngníomh don Bhun-reacht so i lán-neart agus i lán-fheidhm go dtí go n-athghairmfear no go leasófar iad no aon cheann aca le hachtú den Oireachtas.

Commentary

ina choinne 'Subsection (2) of section 38, to the extent to which it is inconsistent with this Act' is translated as 'Fo-alt (2) d'alt 38, sa mhéid go bhfuil sé ar neamhréir leis an Acht seo' in Part III of the Schedule to the Statute of Limitations, 1957. 'In so far as they are inconsistent with' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'sa mhéid ná fuil ... do réir ...' in translations for the Department of Local Government and Public Health. We find the phrase 'bunisciunn le' in earlier Acts, following the 1922 Constitution above. In the Preamble to the Adaptation of Enactments Act, 1922, 'subject to that Constitution and to the extent to which they are not inconsistent therewith' is translated as 'gan dochar don Bhun-reacht san agus sa mhéid ná fuilid buinisciunn leis'. 'And every such contract shall accordingly be deemed to be void to the extent (if any) to which it is inconsistent with such regulations' is translated as 'agus, dá réir sin, is tuigte gach connradh den tsórt san do bheith gan bhri sa mhéid (más aon mhéid é) go mbeidh sé bunosciunn leis na rialacháin sin' in s21(3) of the Children Act, 1941. Note, finally, that 'Sections 69 and 117 of the Income Tax Act, 1918, so far as the same are inconsistent with the provisions of this section shall cease to have effect' is translated as 'Sa mhéid ná tagaid le forálacha an ailt seo scuirfidh Ailt 69 agus 117 den Acht Cánach Ioncaim 1918, d'éifeacht do bheith acu' in s11(4) of the Finance Act, 1923.

díreach roimh 'Immediately preceding' is cited in the Oireachtas Dictionary of Official Terms as being translated as 'díreach roimh', preceding a noun, and as 'díreach sara', preceding a verb, in Iris Oifigiúil, 1922/23. 'In every statute and statutory instrument in force immediately prior to the date of the coming into operation of the Constitution' is translated as 'I ngach reacht agus instruim reachtúil a bheidh i bhfeidhm díreach roimh an dáta thiochfaidh an Bunreacht i ngníomh' in s2(1) of the Constitution (Consequential Provisions) Act, 1937. 'All property ... which immediately prior to the date of the passing of this Act is vested in ... the commissioners' is translated as 'an mhaoin uile ... a bhí, díreach roimh dháta an Achta so do rith, dílsithe sna coimisinéirí' in s3(1) of the Mountjoy Square, Dublin, Act, 1938. 'Part of an accounting period falling after the day immediately prior to the date of the commencement of that relevant accounting period' is translated as 'cuid de thréimhse chuntasaíochta ar tar éis an lae díreach roimh dháta tosaigh na thréimhse chuntasaíochta iomchuí sin di' in s42(4) of the Finance Act, 1980.

lánfheidhm ... lánéifeacht 'For the purpose of ensuring that the laws in force in Saorstát Éireann immediately prior to the date of the coming into operation of the Constitution shall continue to be of full force and effect in accordance with and to the extent provided by Article 50 of the Constitution' is translated as 'Chun a chur in áirithe go leanfaidh na dlíthe bheidh i bhfeidhm i Saorstát Éireann díreach roimh dháta an Bhunreacht do theacht i ngníomh de lán-fheidhm agus de lán-éifeacht do bheidh acu do réir Airteagal 50 den Bhunreacht agus sa mhéid a forálar leis an Airteagal san' in s5(1) of the Constitution (Consequential Provisions) Act, 1937. In s37 of the Limerick Harbour Act, 1926, 'the Limerick Harbour Act, 1867 ... shall continue to be of full force and effect as if this Act had not been passed' is translated as 'leanfaidh i lán-fheidhm agus i lán-éifeacht fé is dá mba ná rithfí an tAcht so ... an Limerick Harbour Act, 1867'. 'And the adaptations of the Income Tax Acts ... had had full force and effect' is translated as 'agus dá mbeadh lán-fheidhm agus lán-éifeacht ... ag na hoiriúnuithe a dinedh ar na hAchtanna Cánach Ioncuim' in 2(1) of the Finance Act, 1923. Finally, in s68(1) of the Medical Practitioners Act, 1978, 'the agreement ... shall continue to have full force and effect' is translated as 'leanfaidh an comhaontú de lánfheidhm agus de lánéifeacht a bheith leis', with 'the covenant shall ... continue in full force and effect' being translated as 'leanfaidh an cúnant ... de lánfheidhm agus de lánéifeacht a bheith leis' in s28(2) of the Landlord and Tenant (Ground Rents) (No. 2) Act, 1978.

Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where 'shall continue ... to be of full force and effect' was translated as 'leanfaidh na dlíthe ... de lánfheidhm agus lánéifeacht a bheith acu', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommended the more succinct 'faoi lánfheidhm agus faoi lánéifeacht'.

le hachtú 'Achtú' is the verbal noun of 'achtaigh', translated as 'enact, decree' in Ó Dónaill, 'achtaim' being translated as 'I enact' in Téarmaí Dlí. 'Achtú' as a noun is translated as 'enactment' in Ó Dónaill, 'achtughadh' being translated as 'act of ordaining, decreeing, act of binding, coming to an agreement, imposing conditions' in Dinneen, who cites the variant 'achtadh'. 'Achtugad' is translated as 'act of stipulating, making a condition; stipulation' in DIL, where 'ma ta achtugad airithe air eturru' ('if there be a particular stipulation respecting it between them') is cited from a commentary on an early Irish law-tract, 'achtugad' being the verbal noun of 'achtaigid'. The verb 'achtaigid' is based on 'acht', six different headwords 'acht' being given in DIL. One such headword, translated as 'stipulation, condition' in DIL and cited from commentaries on early Irish law-tracts, may be a specialisation of 'acht', 'save, except' (Modern Irish 'ach'). The sixth headword 'acht' is an English loanword and is translated as 'decree, contract, condition' in DIL, where citations are given from seventeenth-century texts onwards. See further the commentary on Articles 13.3.1° and 15.4.2° regarding 'achtaigh'.

leanfaid ... nach bhfuilid The synthetic forms of the third person plural, future tense, of 'lean' and of the third person plural, present indicative, of the substantive verb, respectively, these generally today being replaced by 'leanfaidh siad' and 'nach bhfuil siad' (i.e. the analytic forms) – see the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding the synthetic and analytic forms of the verb.

go leasaítear iad Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where 'until the same ... shall have been repealed' was translated as 'go dtí go mbeidh an céanna aisghairthe', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú, who in general advises against the use of 'an céanna', remarks that 'an céanna' could be taken as referring to 'an Bunreacht', which is syntactically nearest to it.

a bheas The special form of the is relative, future, of the substantive verb – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s', the above now generally being replaced by 'a bheidh'.

lá See the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

faoi chuimsiú See the commentary on Article 12.5.

go n-aisghairtear See the commentary on Article 46.1.

go leasaítear See the commentary on Article 46.2.

Standardised Irish text

Na dlíthe a bheidh i bhfeidhm i Saorstát Éireann díreach roimh lá an Bunreacht seo a theacht i ngníomh leanfaidh siad de bheith i lánfheidhm agus i lánéifeacht, faoi chuimsiú an Bhunreacht seo agus sa mhéid nach bhfuil siad ina choinne, go dtí go n-aisghairtear nó go leasaítear iad nó aon chuid díobh le hachtú ón Oireachtas.

Direct translation

Faoi réir an Bhunreacht seo agus sa mhéid nach bhfuil siad ar neamhréir leis, leanfaidh na dlíthe a bheidh i bhfeidhm i Saorstát Éireann díreach roimh dháta an Bunreacht seo a theacht i ngníomh faoi lánfheidhm agus faoi lánéifeacht<sup>1</sup> go dtí go mbeidh na dlíthe sin, nó aon cheann díobh, aisghairthe nó leasaithe le hachtú ón Oireachtas.

Variant

<sup>1</sup> 'de lánfheidhm agus lánéifeacht a bheith leo'

ARTICLE 50.2 AIRTEAGAL 50.2

TÉACS GAEILGE

Dlíthe a bheas achtaithe roimh an mBunreacht seo a theacht i ngníomh agus a mbeidh luaite iontu iad do theacht i bhfeidhm dá éis sin, tiocfaid i bhfeidhm de réir mar a luaitear iontu mura n-achtaí an tOireachtas a mhalairt.

*Dochum Glóire Dé
agus
Onóra na hÉireann.*

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

Laws which will be enacted before the coming into operation of this Constitution and in which will be stated that they are to come into force after that, will come into force in accordance with what is stated in them unless the Oireachtas enacts the contrary.

For the Glory of God and the Honour of Ireland.

ENGLISH TEXT

Laws enacted before, but expressed to come into force after, the coming into operation of this Constitution, shall, unless otherwise enacted by the Oireachtas, come into force in accordance with the terms thereof.

*Dochum Glóire Dé
agus
Onóra na hÉireann.*

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'But expressed' is expressed in the Irish text as 'agus a mbeidh luaite iontu' ('and in which will be stated'), 'express' being translated by the participial adjective 'sainráite' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'luaim' is translated as 'I cite'.
- 2 'In accordance with the terms thereof' is expressed as 'de réir mar a luaitear iontu' ('in accordance as is stated in them') in the Irish text, the same verb being found here as expresses 'express' earlier in the section.

Commentary

luaite ... luaitear See the commentary on Articles 12.10.1°, 14.5.2° and 24.1 regarding the verb 'luaigh', respectively expressing 'state', 'specify' and 'express'. 'Where an Act passed after the commencement of this Act ... is expressed to come into operation on a particular day' is translated as 'Má abartar go dtiocfaidh i bhfeidhm ar lá áirithe Acht a rithfar tar éis tosach feidhme an Achta so' in s11(2) of the Interpretation Act, 1923. 'Any order made by the Minister ... before the appointed day shall not be expressed to come into operation on a day earlier than the appointed day' is translated as 'Aon ordú dhéanfaidh an tAire ... roimh an lá ceaptha ní déarfadh go dtiocfaidh i bhfeidhm ar dháta is túsce ná an lá ceaptha' in s30(6) of the Agricultural Produce (Cereals) Act, 1936, with 'but any order which is made ... before the appointed day shall not be expressed to come into operation on a day earlier than the appointed day' being translated as 'ach ní déarfad in aon ordú a dhéanfar ... roimh an lá ceaptha, go dtiocfaidh an t-ordú sin i ngníomh ar dháta is luaithe ná an lá ceaptha' in s2(5) of the Ministers and Secretaries (Amendment) Act, 1977. 'The following provisions shall have effect in relation to every Act of the Oireachtas of Saorstát Éireann which is expressed to come into operation immediately after the coming into operation of the Constitution' is translated as 'Beidh éifeacht ag na forálacha so leanas maidir le gach Acht d'Oireachtas Shaorstáit Éireann go mbeidh ráite ann é do theacht i ngníomh díreach tar éis teacht i ngníomh don Bhunreacht' in s11(2) of the Constitution (Consequential Provisions) Act, 1937.

Looking at modern Acts, 'A requirement of the Central Bank under subsection (4) may be expressed to apply ...' is translated as 'Féadfaidh sé a bheith sainráite i gceanglas de chuid an Bhainc Ceannais faoi fho-alt (4) go bhfuil feidhm aige' in s39(5) of the Building Societies Act, 1989. 'Part 1 shall, save as is otherwise expressly provided therein, be deemed to have come into force ... as on and from the 6th day of April, 1990' is translated as 'Measfar gur tháinig Cuid 1 i bhfeidhm ..., ach amháin mar a fhoráiltear a mhalairt go sainráite inti, amhail ar an agus ón 6ú lá d'Aibreán 1990' in s140(8) of the Finance Act, 1990. Note that 'No adoption of a person taking effect or expressed to take effect at any time after the coming into operation of this Constitution' is rendered as 'Ní raibh ná ní bheidh aon uchtáil ar dhuine do ghlac éifeacht nó a bhfuil sé sainráidhte gur ghlac si éifeacht aon tráth tar éis don Bhunreacht seo do theacht i ngníomh' in Article 37.2, following the Sixth Amendment of the Constitution (Adoption) Act, 1979. See further the commentary on Articles 24.1 and 46.3.

Regarding 'thereof', which as the plural 'iontu' clearly shows, refers to the 'laws', see the commentary on Articles 8.3 and 40.4.5°; 'den chéanna' would match the ambiguity of the English text.

tiocfaid The synthetic form of the third person plural, future tense, of the verb 'tar', this would generally be replaced by 'tiocfaidh siad' (the analytic form) today – see the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding the synthetic and analytic forms of the verb in the Constitution.

mura n-achtaí The present subjective of the verb 'achtaigh', this generally being replaced by the future tense today (i.e. 'mura n-achtóidh'), except in the case of the optative (e.g. 'go ndéana Dia trócaire ort') – see the commentary on Article 12.3.1°.

a bheas The special form of the relative, future tense, of the substantive verb, this would generally be replaced today by 'a bheidh' – see the commentary on Article 6.1 regarding the special form of the relative in '-s'.

do theacht 'A' generally replaces 'do' before verbal nouns today – see the commentary on Article 15.8.2°.

Dochum Glóire Dé agus Onóra na hÉireann This well-known Irish expression, here closing both texts of the Constitution, is attested in the 'Epistle Dedicatory' from Michael O'Clery to Fearghal O'Gadhra in the seventeenth-century Annals of the Four Masters:

Tanacsa an brathair bocht durd .S. Fronseis Michel o clericch (iar mbeith deich mbliadhna damh acc Sccriobhadh gach sendachta da bfuaras ar naomhaibh na hereann a maille le humhlacht gach Prouinsial da raibhe in erinn a ndiaidh a chele do beith accam) da bhar lathairsi a uasail A Fherghail uí ghadhra. Do bhraithes ar bhar nonoir gur bhadbar truaighe, 7 nemhele, doghailsi, 7 dobroin libh (do chum gloire dé 7 onora na hereann) a mhed do dheachattar sliocht Gaoidhil meic Niuil fo chiaigh 7 dorchadas, gan-fios ecca na oidhedha Naoimh, na bannaomhe Airdepscoip, Epscoip, na abbadh, na uasal graidh eccailsi oile, Righ, na Ruirigh, tighearna na toisicch, comhairsir na coimhsinedh neich dibhsidhe fri aroile. (I, Michael O'Clery, a poor brother of the order of St. Francis (after having been for ten years transcribing every old material which I found concerning the saints of Ireland, observing obedience to each provincial that was in Ireland successively), have come before you, O noble Farrell O'Gara. I have calculated on your honour that it seemed to you a cause of pity and regret, grief and sorrow (for the glory of God and the honour of Ireland), how much the race of Gaedhal the son of Niuil have gone under a cloud and darkness without a knowledge of the death or obit of saint, or virgin, archbishop, bishop, abbot, or other noble dignitary of the Church, of king or prince, lord or chieftain [and] of the synchronism or connexion of the one with the other.)

The colophon followed Article 63, the final Article of the Transitory Provisions, in the original Constitution. Such expressions would generally not be standardised.

Standardised Irish text

Dlíthe a bheidh achtaithe roimh an mBunreacht seo a theacht i ngníomh agus a mbeidh luaite iontu iad a theacht i bhfeidhm dá éis sin, tiocfaidh siad i bhfeidhm de réir mar a luaitear iontu mura n-achtóidh an tOireachtas a mhalairt.

Direct translation

Dlíthe a achtófar roimh theacht i bhfeidhm don Bhunreacht seo ach a mbeidh sé sainráite go dtiocfaidh siad i bhfeidhm i ndiaidh don Bhunreacht seo a theacht i ngníomh, mura n-achtóidh an tOireachtas a mhalairt, tiocfaidh siad i bhfeidhm de réir théarmaí na ndlíthe<sup>1</sup>.

Variants

<sup>1</sup> 'na ndlíthe céanna', 'na ndlíthe céanna sin', 'an chéanna'

APPENDIX 1

FOSCRÍBHINN 1

PREAMBLE BROLLACH

As noted in the introductory essay, unlike the Irish text of the Constitution in general, the Preamble is acknowledged in the authorised Irish biography of Éamon de Valera to be a translation from English done by Tomás Ó Rathile. The Preamble, being in the nature of a dedication or prayer and not having the same legislative content as the main part of the text, would allow the translator some freedom. A cursory commentary on the Preamble is presented below, the text itself being divided into five sections.

I

TÉACS GAEILGE

BUNREACTH NA hÉIREANN

In Ainm na Tríonóide Ró-Naofa is tobar don uile údarás agus gur chuici, ós í is críoch dheireanach dúinn, is dírithe ní amháin gníomhartha daoine ach gníomhartha Stát,

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

THE CONSTITUTION OF IRELAND

In the Name of the Most Holy Trinity which is the wellspring for all authority and to whom, since it is the final end for us, not alone actions of people but actions of States are directed,

ENGLISH TEXT

BUNREACTH NA hÉIREANN

In the Name of the Most Holy Trinity, from Whom is all authority and to Whom, as our final end, all actions both of men and States must be referred,

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'From Whom is all authority' is translated as 'is tobar don uile údarás' ('who is the source of all authority') in the Irish text.
- 2 The initial capital in 'Whom' is not matched either in 'chuici' or 'í' in the Irish text, this being in accord with differences in orthographic convention, according to Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú.
- 3 'As our final end' is translated in the Irish text as 'ós í is críoch dheireanach dúinn', 'as it ("í", in reference to the grammatically feminine "Tríonóid") is the final end for us'.
- 4 'All actions both of men and States' is translated as 'ní amháin gníomhartha daoine ach gníomhartha Stát' ('not alone the actions of people but the actions of States') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Must be referred' is translated in the Irish text as 'is dírithe', 'are (to be) directed'.

Note that the Preamble to the 1922 Constitution reads as follows:

Dáil Éireann sitting as a Constituent Assembly in this Provisional Parliament, acknowledging that all lawful authority comes from God to the people and in the confidence that the National life and unity of Ireland shall thus be restored, hereby proclaims the establishment of The Irish Free State (otherwise called Saorstát Éireann) and in the exercise of undoubted right, decrees and enacts as follows:- Dáil Éireann 'na suidhe mar Dháil Bhunaidh sa Pháirlimint Shealadach so, á admháil gur ó Dhia a thagann gach údarás dleathach chun na ndaoine agus muinghin aice gur mar seo a tabharfar thar n-ais beatha agus aontacht Náisiúnta na hÉireann, fógrann sí leis seo bunú Shaorstáit Éireann agus de bharr lán-chirt gan dearmad dineann sí a reachtú agus a achtú mar leanas:-

Commentary

is tobar do 'Tobar' is translated as 'well; fountain, spring, source' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'tobar eagna, eolais, fountain of wisdom, of knowledge'. Dinneen translates 'tobar' as 'a well, spring or source' and cites 'Tobar na dTrí Sreabh, the Well of Three Streams, God; Trí Tobar na trócaire, the Three Wells of mercy, the three Divine Persons; Eo na dTrí dTobar, the Salmon of the Three Wells, Christ'. DIL cites 'is hé as tobar inna n-ane' ('it is He who is the well of the treasures') from the eighth-century Würzburg Glosses on the Pauline Epistles, giving three examples of 'tobar do', including 'Saltair Temrach ... as tobar do seanchadhaibh Érenn' (i.e. the Tara Psalter is the source for the historians of Ireland).

críoch dheireanach 'An chríoch dhéanach' is translated as 'the latter end' in Ó Dónaill, who cites '(Ceithre) críocha déanacha an duine, man's last state; the Four Last Things' and 'tá sé sna críocha déanacha, he is in the last extremities'. Dinneen also cites 'ceithre críocha déidheannacha an duine', which he explains are death, judgment, hell, heaven. He also cites 'tá sé sna críochaibh déidheannacha, he is in the last extremities, at the point of death'. DIL translates 'crích' as (a) 'boundary, limit (of territory), end; aim, purpose', and (b) 'confines, territory, district, land'. Under (a) is cited 'go ttangador críocha deiridh don lo soin' (i.e. evening). From Gearnon's Parrthas an Anma (1645) are cited the four last things: 'an bás, an breithiomhnas, ifrionn ⁊ flaitheamhnas'. See further the commentary on Articles 2 and 3.

'Deireanach', like 'déanach', is translated as 'last' in Ó Dónaill, and comes from 'deiredach' through the influence of 'déidenach' – see DIL s.v. 'deirenach'. It is based on 'deired', translated as (a) 'remainder, residue' and (b) 'end, rear, conclusion' in DIL, examples of which are cited from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards. No early examples of 'deiredach' are cited in DIL (only a few examples in all of 'deiredach' and 'deirenach' are cited), as against 'déidenach, didenach', the earlier form of 'déanach', examples of which are cited in DIL from the eighth-century Glosses onwards. 'Déidenach, didenach' are formed from 'déiden-' ('last') and 'diden-' ('end').

na Tríonóide Ró-Naofa 'Rónaofa' is translated as 'most holy' in Ó Dónaill. Dinneen translates 'ró-naomhtha' as 'Most Holy or Sacred' and cites 'an Tríonóid Ró-naomhtha, the Most Holy Trinity'. The earlier form of 'ró-' was 'ro-'. As stated in DIL s.v. 'ro', this intensive prefix with an adjective is used 'to denote the possession of a quality in a high (but not necessarily excessive) degree; the notion of excess is sometimes implied and is usual in modern Irish'. Note that the headword is un-hyphenated in Ó Dónaill. According to the official standard, 'proper titles', such as 'An Priomh-Bhreitheamh' and 'An tArd-Aighne', are hyphenated and the hyphen may perhaps be so justified here. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú refers to s47 of Graiméar Gaeilge na mBráithre Críostaí where 'Naomh-Mhuire Síor-Ógh' is cited. Also as 'Most' and 'Holy' have initial capitals, the inclination in translation would be to follow suit.

'Trínóid', Old Irish 'trindóit', comes from Latin 'trinitāt-' – see DIL s.v. 'trindóit', where 'chum na Tríonóide ro naomhtha d'onórughadh' is cited from Donlevy's Catechism (1st edition, 1742).

chuici ... í As regards the lower-case initials referring to the Trinity, see s48 of Graiméar Gaeilge na mBráithre Críostaí where it is stated that initial capitals are not usually used in pronouns referring to God, with 'is tú mo Dhia' and 'go dtaga do riocht' being cited for example. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that while Ó Dónaill has 'Sé' s.v. 'Dia' he cites 'tá máthair mhaith aige'. Professor Ó Murchú further remarks that it is unusual that the Trinity is referred to by the singular pronouns 'chuici' and 'uaithi', citing '... an Tríonóid naomhtha 'na trí bpearsanaibh ... 7 gurab ionan aois, óige, glóir, 7 cumhachta dóibh' from Seanmóna Chúige Uladh (ll. 1109-11).

is dírithe 'Dirigh' is translated as (1) 'straighten' and (2) 'direct' in Ó Dónaill. 'I refer (a case to the County Registrar, etc.)' is translated as 'tarchuirim (cás chun an Chláráitheora Chontae, etc.)' in Téarmaí Dlí. Commenting on 'tarchur' in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Ó Murchú remarked that this was not the sense of 'refer' here, recommending 'tagairt' instead. Commenting on 'araon' expressing 'both' in the same draft, Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that, as there is more than one state involved, 'both' here refers to more than a couple.

Direct gender-proofed translation

In Ainm na Tríonóide Ró-Naofa, a dtagann gach údarás uathu<sup>1</sup> agus nach mór, mar chríoch dheireanach<sup>2</sup> dúinn, gníomhartha uile daoine agus Stát a thagairt dóibh<sup>3</sup>,

Variants

1 'arb uathu a thagann gach údarás'

2 'dheiridh'

3 'ar chucu, mar chríoch dheireanach dúinn, a chaithfear gach gníomh de chuid fear agus Stát a thagairt'

II

TÉACS GAELIGE

Ar mbeith dúinne, muintir na hÉireann, ag admháil go huiriseal a mhéid atáimid faoi chomaoín ag Íosa Críost, ár dTiarna Dia, a thug comhfhortacht dár sinsir i ngach cruatan ina rabhadar ar feadh na gcéadta bliain,

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

As we, the people of Ireland, are humbly admitting the extent to which we are obliged to Jesus Christ, our Lord God, who comforted our ancestors in every hardship in which they were for hundreds of years,

ENGLISH TEXT

We, the people of Éire,

Humbly acknowledging all our obligations to our Divine Lord, Jesus Christ, Who sustained our fathers through centuries of trial,

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The lay-out of the Irish text does not correspond to the English, which has 'We, the people of Éire' on a separate line.
- 2 'Our obligations to' is translated as 'a mhéid atáimid faoi chomaoín ag' ('the extent that we are under obligation to') in the Irish text.
- 3 'Our Divine Lord, Jesus Christ' is translated as 'Íosa Críost, ár dTiarna Dia' ('Jesus Christ, our Lord God') in the Irish text.
- 4 'Who sustained our fathers' is translated as 'a thug comhfhortacht dár sinsir' ('who gave consolation to our ancestors') in the Irish text.
- 5 'Through centuries of trial' is translated as 'i ngach cruatan ina rabhadar ar feadh na gcéadta bliain' ('in every hardship in which they were for hundreds of years') in the Irish text.

Commentary

Ar mbeith dúinne The preposition 'ar' plus the verbal noun of the substantive verb 'bí', plus the first person plural of the prepositional pronoun 'do', with which the first person plural suffix '-ne' coalesces. See Ó Dónaill s.v. 'ar' (14) (with verbal noun), '(b) (Action) Ar éirí dom, when I get, got, up. Ar a theacht, on his coming'. 'Ar mbeith' would generally be replaced today by 'Ar bheith'.

go huiriseal 'Uiriseal' is translated as (1) 'lowly, humble' and (2) 'base, servile' in Ó Dónaill. The earlier form, 'airisel', which is based on 'isel', is translated as 'very low' in DIL, an example of 'co airisel' in the sense of 'in a low voice' being cited from the twelfth-century manuscript, the Book of Leinster.

faoi chomaoín 'Comaoín' is translated as 'consideration' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'bheith faoi chomaoín ag duine' as 'to be under a compliment, beholden to someone' and cites 'tá mé faoi chomaoín agat, I am obliged to you'. Dinneen translates 'comaoín' as 'a counter-gift, consideration, favour, recompense, complement' and translates 'táim fá chomaoín agat' as 'you have done me a favour, I am under an obligation to you'. The earlier form, 'commaín', is a compound of 'com' and 'maín', translated as 'equal wealth, means' in DIL. Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below containing 'na comaoineacha atá curtha orainn', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that the plural of 'comaoin' in this context would be somewhat unusual.

comhfhurtacht 'Comhfhortacht' is translated as 'consolation, comfort' in Ó Dónaill. The form 'fortacht', rather than 'furtacht', is given in An Caighdeán Oifigiúil and, according to Ó Dónaill, 'comhfhortacht' is the standard headword. Dinneen translates 'comhfhortacht' as 'act of consoling, comforting; comfort, aid, consolation; full relief, help, or comfort'. 'Comfortacht', based on 'fortacht', is translated as 'act of helping, comforting; help; comfort, relief' in DIL – no early examples are cited.

rabhadar The synthetic form of the substantive verb – the analytic form, 'raibh siad', generally replaces this in writing today. See the commentary on Article 14.5.1° regarding synthetic and analytic forms of the verb.

cruatan This headword is translated as 'hardship, want' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'cruatan a fhulaingt, to endure hardship' and the saying 'tagann an cruatan i ndiaidh an chaite, waste makes want'. Dinneen translates 'cruadhtan' as 'difficulty, hardship, distress' and cites 'mám an chruadhtain, the yoke of misery; an cruadhtan, the busy season'. The earliest examples of this word, which is based on 'crúaid' ('hard'), seem to mean 'hard ground' but we find the meaning 'hardship' in Pádraigín Haicéad's seventeenth-century poetry and, in the translation Trompa na bhFlaitheas (1755), we find 'trésan uile shórt cruatain' – see DIL s.v. 'crúatan'.

'Triail' is translated as 'trial, test' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'is crua an triail orthu é, it is a sore trial for them' and 'ba mhór an triail a bhí ann, he showed great endurance'. Commenting on 'trí na céadta bliain de thrialacha' in a draft of the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarked that this plural would only have the literal sense and recommends retaining 'cruatan' or substituting the singular 'de threabhlaid', 'd'anró' or 'd'fhulaingt'.

sinsir This headword is translated as 'ascendants' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary on Article 1. Ó Dónaill has 'ancestor' as a secondary sense of 'athair', as have Dinneen and DIL, and translates 'ár n-aithreacha romhainn' as 'our fathers before us'. However, as Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks, 'aithreacha' would not suit here as regards gender-proofing, remarking further that 'aithreacha' adheres very much to its literal meaning.

ár dTiarna Dia 'An Tiarna (Dia)' is translated as 'the Lord (God)' in Ó Dónaill, who also cites 'Ar dTiarna (Íosa Críost), Our Lord (Jesus Christ)'. 'An Tighearna' is translated as 'the Lord' in Dinneen. 'Tigerna' is translated as 'lord, superior, chief' in DIL, citing examples of the meaning 'God' from an early Irish law-tract, as well as from two religious tracts. See further the commentary on Articles 40.3.3° and 44.2.1°.

ag admháil 'Admhaím' is translated as 'I acknowledge' and 'I confess' in Téarmaí Dlí; 'admhuighim' is translated as 'I confess, admit, acknowledge' in Dinneen. The earlier form of the verb is 'ad-daim', which is translated as (a) 'acknowledges, admits, concedes, confesses', (b) 'consents to, accedes to, grants, allows' and (c) 'avows, reveals, makes known, declares' in DIL, where examples are cited from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards.

ar feadh This prepositional phrase is translated as 'during, throughout' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'ar feadh an lae, during the day, all day. Ar feadh bliana, for the space of a year ... Ar feadh i bhfad, for a long time'. DIL s.v. 'ed' (with prosthetic 'f' in 'fed' probably under the influence of 'fo') cites examples of 'ar fed' ('during, for the period of; whilst') from the Passions and Homilies from the Leabhar Breac (a fourteenth-century manuscript [er fead na bethadsa]) onwards.

'Trí', 'through', also has the sense of 'during the course of; throughout' (Ó Dónaill); Dinneen cites 'tré'n oidhche go léir, all through the night; tré saoghal na saoghal, for ever and ever, tré biotha síor, trias an saoghal síor, idem'. DIL s.v. 'tré', cites 'trí rei ciana' ('for long times') from the ninth-century Milan Glosses, and 'tria nuile mbethaid' ('through their whole life') from the Turin Glosses, as well as examples from later centuries.

muintir na hÉireann See the commentary on Article 12.2.1°.

Standardised Irish text

Ar bheith dúinne, muintir na hÉireann, ag admháil go huiriseal a mhéid atáimid faoi chomaoin ag Íosa Críost, ár dTiarna Dia, a thug comhfhortacht dár sinsir i ngach cruatan ina raibh siad ar feadh na gcéadta bliain,

Direct gender-proofed translation

Déanaimid, muintir na hÉireann, leis seo, Ag admháil dúinn go huiriseal an chomaoin atá curtha orainn ag ár dTiarna Íosa Críost, a chothaigh ár sinsir trí na céadta bliain de chruatan<sup>1</sup>,

Variant

1 'd'fhulaingt'

III

TÉACS GAEILGE

Agus ar mbeith dúinn ag cuimhneamh go buíoch ar a chalmacht a rinneadarsan troid gan staonadh chun an neamhspleáchas is dual dár Náisiún a bhaint amach,

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

And as we gratefully remember how bravely they fought ceaselessly to achieve the independence which is the intrinsic right of our Nation,

ENGLISH TEXT

Gratefully remembering their heroic and unremitting struggle to regain the rightful independence of our Nation,

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The Irish text has 'chun an neamhspleáchas is dual dár Náisiún a bhaint amach' ('to gain the rightful independence of our Nation') as against the English text's 'to regain' it – note, however, the strength of 'is dual do', which has among its senses 'that belongs to', so that gaining it is really regaining it.
- 2 'Their heroic and unremitting struggle' is translated as 'a chalmacht a rinneadarsan troid gan staonadh' ('how bravely they fought without cessation') in the Irish text.

Commentary

a bhaint amach 'Bain amach', literally 'take out', also has the sense of 'gain'. Ó Dónaill cites clú, ceart, a bhaint amach, to gain a reputation, a right' and daingean a bhaint amach, to gain, capture, a fortress'. Dinneen translates 'bainim amach' as 'I take possession of, I exact, I eke out, I reach, gain, I rescue'. DIL s.v. 'benaid', cites 'lér bhain sé a fhlaithéas ... amach arís' ('bhain amach' being translated there as 'recovered'), from Keating's seventeenth-century History of Ireland.

De Bhaldraithe gives 'bainim (áit) amach arís' as a translation of a secondary sense of 'regain', giving 'athghnóthaim, gnóthaim ar ais' as a translation of the principal sense. Commenting on a draft of the direct translation below, where 'to regain the independence' was translated as 'chun an neamhspleáchas a athghnóthú', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú suggested 'a bhuanachan' as an alternative to 'a athghnóthú'. Note that De Bhaldraithe translates 'to regain possession of something' as 'athsheilbh a fháil ar rud'. Note finally and incidentally that 'who when recovering from illness would otherwise be obliged to return to work before they had regained their strength' is translated as 'a mbeadh orthu, mura mbeadh sin, ... filleadh chun oibre sula mbeadh siad ar ais ar a neart' in the Preamble to the Convalescent Home, Stillorgan (Charter Amendment) Act, 1958.

troid a dhéanamh 'Troid', translated as 'fight, quarrel' in Ó Dónaill, is given as the verbal noun of 'troid'. Dinneen translates this headword as 'act of fighting, struggling or wrangling, a fight or struggle, a quarrel or wrangle, opposition, resistance'. Unlike 'cath' and 'comrac', for example, we find no examples of 'troid' in the Glosses of the eighth and ninth centuries; it is cited, however, in the twelfth century Book of Leinster – see DIL, s.v. 'troid' ('fight, battle, quarrel').

'Gleic' would be the usual translation of 'struggle' today. 'During the struggle to bring about the establishment of the First Dáil Éireann' is translated as 'le linn na gleice chun an Chéad Dáil Éireann ... do bhunú' in the Long Title of the Indemnity Act, 1924, for example. 'Gleic' is translated as '(act of) wrestling, fighting; struggle, contest' in Ó Dónaill and as 'a wrestling, a contending, a struggle, a contest, act of contending, struggling' in Dinneen. DIL translates 'gleicc' as 'wrestling, a struggle, a contest', citing an example from Leabhar na hUídhre, completed by 1106.

go buíoch 'Buíoch' is translated as (1) 'thankful' and (2) 'pleased, satisfied' in Ó Dónaill. The form 'buidheach' is found in Dinneen, who translates this headword as a chalmacht 'Calmacht' is translated as 'stalwartness; bravery, strength' in Ó Dónaill and as 'bravery, courage, strength' in Dinneen. This abstract noun is itself based on the abstract noun 'calma', 'strength; bravery, deeds of valour'; the adjective 'calma' is translated as 'strong, brave, valiant' in DIL, where it is stated that the relationship to English and French 'calm(e)' is obscure. 'A', leniting, is a particle used with abstract nouns to denote degree – see Ó Dónaill, who translates this particle as 'how', citing 'a ghéire a labhair sí, how sharply she spoke'.

'thankful, grateful, obliged, kindly disposed, pleasing'. The Old Irish form 'buidheach' glosses Latin 'contentus' and 'gratus' and is translated as 'well-disposed, pleased, satisfied, sated, grateful, thankful' in DIL, citing 'go ... buidheach' (= 'thankfully') from Donlevy's Catechism (1742).

a rinneadarsan The synthetic form of the third person plural, perfect tense, of 'déan', plus the plural emphatic suffix – see Ó Dónaill s.v. '-san', who cites 'ach rinn-eadarsan an obair, but it was they who did the work'. See the commentary on Article 14.5.1<sup>o</sup> regarding synthetic and analytic forms of the verb. Today in the Acts 'rinneadar' would be rendered as 'rinne siad', i.e. the analytic form.

staonadh This headword is translated as 'forbearance' in Téarmaí Dlí. It is the verbal noun of 'staon', translated as 'stop, desist; abstain, forbear; draw back, flinch' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'gan staonadh' as 'without stop' and cites 'fearthainn gan staonadh, incessant rain' and 'gan stad (sos, stop) gan staonadh, without stop or stay'. Dinneen cites 'ní raibh maide rámha gan staonadh, no oar but was strained (in the rowing)'. O'Daly's Poets and Poetry of Munster and two volumes of the Transactions of the Ossianic Society are the only sources for the late examples of the verb 'staonaid', 'refrains, desists, hangs back', cited in DIL.

neamhspleáchas This headword is translated as 'independence' in Ó Dónaill. The noun 'neamh-spleádh', 'independence', and the adjective 'neamh-spleádhach', 'independent', are given in Dinneen. 'Spleadhachas' is translated as 'flattery, boasting, romance, exploits, dependence' in Dinneen, where 'gan spleadhachas' is translated as 'independent, regardless of consequence'. 'Spleadhachus' is translated as 'flattery' in DIL. See further the commentary on Articles 5 and 35.2.

is dual do 'Dual' is translated as (1) 'native, natural (do, to)', (2) 'proper, fitting' and (3) 'in the natural order of things; fated; possible' in Ó Dónaill. Under (1) Ó Dónaill cites 'an rud is dual do dhuine a dhéanamh, what is natural for one to do, what one may be expected to do' and 'ba dhual sin dó ón dá thaobh, he took that from both sides of the family'. Under (2) he cites 'an áit, an oidhreacht, is dual dó, his rightful place, inheritance' and 'is dual dó é, it is his due'. Under the third group of senses Ó Dónaill cites 'dúirt sé gur dhual don mhac a bheith in aghaidh an athar, he said that it was fated for son to oppose father'. Dinneen translates 'dual' as 'that which is natural, hereditary, bounden, expected', and cites 'ba dhual dó é dhéanamh, it was according to his kind to do it'. DIL translates 'dual', with the preposition 'do', as 'that which belongs or is proper to an individual by nature or descent; kind, natural' and cites an example of the sense 'belonging to by right or descent, right, possession' from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster.

Looking at 'rightful' in the Acts, 'that he is the rightful holder of a particular supplementary unemployment book' is translated as 'gurb é is sealbhóir dlisteanach ar leabhar difhostaíochta forlionsach áirithe' in s262(2) of the Social Welfare (Consolidation) Act, 1981, and as 'gurb é sealbhóir dleathach leabhair áirithe díomhaointis fhoirliontaigh' in s42(2) of the Insurance (Intermittent Unemployment) Act, 1942. Finally, 'the District Justice may order such books or money to be delivered to the rightful owner thereof' is translated as 'féadfí an Giúistís Dúithche a ordú go dtíolacfar na hearraí no an t-airgead san don té gur leis iad le ceart' in s5(1) of the Public Safety (Punishment of Offences) Temporary Act, 1924.

Standardised Irish text

Agus ar bheith dúinn ag cuimhneamh go buíoch ar a chalmacht a rinne siadsan troid gan staonadh chun an neamhspleáchas is dual dár Náisiún a bhaint amach,

Direct translation

Ag cuimhneamh go buíoch dúinn ar a ngleic laochta gan staonadh chun athsheilbh a fháil ar an neamhspleáchas is dual dár Náisiún',

Variants

- 1 'is lenár Náisiún le ceart', 'chun an neamhspleáchas is dual dár Náisiún a bhuachan / a athghnóthú'

IV

TÉACS GAEILGE

Agus ar mbeith dúinn á chur romhainn an mhaitheas phoiblí a chur ar aghaidh maille le Críonnacht agus le hIonracas agus le Carthanacht de réir mar is cuí, ionas go dtiocfaidh linn a uaisleacht agus a shaoirse a chur in áirithe do gach aon duine, saol ceart comhdhaonnach a bhunú, aiseag a haontachta a thabhairt dár dtír, agus comhcharadra a dhéanamh le náisiúin eile,

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

And as we are setting out to advance the public good with Wisdom and Integrity and Charity as is appropriate, so that we can ensure his nobility and his freedom to every individual, to establish a proper societal life, to give the restoration of her unity to our country, and to make mutual alliance with other nations,

ENGLISH TEXT

And seeking to promote the common good, with due observance of Prudence, Justice and Charity, so that the dignity and freedom of the individual may be assured, true social order attained, the unity of our country restored, and concord established with other nations,

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 The Irish text can be read as if the final three clauses, beginning with 'saol ceart comhdhaonnach a bhunú', were following on from 'Agus ar mbeith dúinn á chur romhainn' ('And seeking to') rather than following from 'ionas go dtiocfaidh linn' ('so that we can').

- 2 'Aiseag a haontachta a thabhairt dár dtír' would not be readily understood today, 'aiseag' being disadvantaged by having the sense of 'vomit'.
- 3 'With due observance of Prudence ....' is translated as 'le Críonnacht ... de réir mar is cuí' ('with Prudence ... as is appropriate') in the Irish text.
- 4 The term translating 'social' in the Irish text, 'comhdhaonnach', has been superseded by 'sóisialta'/'sóisialach'.

Commentary

aiseag This headword is translated as 'restitution' in Téarmaí Dlí where 'aiseag chearta an phósta, restitution of conjugal rights' and 'eascaire aisig, writ of restitution' are cited. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú cites 'fuair sé aiseag a amhairc' from An tAthair Peadar. 'Aiseag' is translated as 'restoration, restitution' in Ó Dónaill, but is more common today in Ó Dónaill's secondary sense of 'vomit, emetic'. Dinneen translates 'aiseag' as 'restitution; repayment; recovery; restoration; act of vomiting; the thing vomited; disgust, nausea, loathing', citing 'tabhair aiseag 'na bheathaidh dó, restore to him his means of livelihood' as well as 'chuirfeadh sé ag aiseag mé, it would make me vomit'. DIL s.v. 'aisec' ('act of restoring, giving back; restitution, restoration'), cites 'asec a rige fein do' from the Annals of Connacht, 1250. The difference in the sense of 'aisecc', verbal noun of 'do-aisicc', translated as 'restoring, restitution' in DIL, is not clear, according to DIL (s.v. 'aisecc').

aontachta 'Aontacht' is translated as (1) 'oneness, unity', (2) 'union', (3) 'unanimity' and (4) 'simplicity' in Ó Dónaill and as 'unity, agreement, singleness, solitariness, celibacy' in Dinneen. 'Oendacht' is translated as (a) 'oneness, unity, indivisibility' and (2) 'simplicity, ingenuousness' (only one example cited, from Betha Colaim Chille) in DIL.

á chur romhainn 'Cuir roimh' is translated literally as 'put, place, send, before' in Ó Dónaill and also as 'set before (as aim)', citing 'rud a chur romhat (féin), to set oneself to do something'. Dinneen translates 'cuirim róimham' as 'I propose for myself, decide, undertake, put in front of myself'. See DIL s.v. 'cuirid', with 'ré'.

Críonnacht This abstract noun is translated as 'wisdom, prudence; shrewdness, sagacity', as well as 'thriftiness' and 'maturity; old age' in Ó Dónaill and as 'wisdom, prudence, thrift; cleverness; age, longevity; old withered refuse' in Dinneen. 'Crínnacht', translated as 'prudence, wisdom' in DIL, is based on the adjective 'crinna' (translated as 'old, aged; experienced, prudent, wise' in DIL), which is a development of the adjective 'crin', translated as 'withered, decayed; old, decrepit' in DIL. 'Manage the affairs of the society with prudence, integrity and adequate professional skills' is translated as 'gnóthaí an chumainn ... a bhainistí go crionna agus go hionraic agus leis na scileanna gairmiúla leordhóthanacha' in s17(4)(a)(iii) of the Building Societies Act, 1989.

Commenting on 'críonnacht' in the direct translation below, Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that it still retains some of the sense of age and suggests 'gaois' and 'ciall' as alternatives.

comhdhaonnach This compound is translated as 'social, companionable' in Ó Dónaill, who translates 'saol ceart comhdhaonnach' as 'true social order'. See the commentary on Article 15.3.1°.

comhcharadra This compound is translated as 'concord' in Ó Dónaill, preceded by the abbreviation for 'history; historical'. Dinneen does not seem to have this headword but translates 'cómhchárdeas' as 'mutual friendship'. Ó Dónaill has 'caradradh, caradras = cairdeas'. The one example of 'comcharatrad' cited in DIL (from the Irish version of Lucan's Pharsalia) is translated as 'mutual friendship'.

Ionracas This headword is translated as (1) 'uprightness, honesty, integrity', (2) 'artlessness, guilelessness' and (3) 'favour, compliment' in Ó Dónaill, where the saying 'tá ionracas os cionn margaidh, honesty is above bargaining, honesty is the best policy' is cited. 'Ionracas' is translated as 'uprightness, conscientiousness, honesty; innocence, chastity; justice, fair play; compliment, mark of respect, favour; officious diligence' in Dinneen. DIL translates 'indracus' as 'worthiness, honour, integrity, innocence'. This abstract noun is based on the adjective 'indraic', which is formed from 'in' + 'reic', literally 'fit for sale' – see DIL s.v. 'indraic', where examples are cited from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards as well as from early Irish law-tracts, where in reference to persons it has the sense of 'worthy, trustworthy, qualified to perform certain legal functions'.

Note that 'miscarriage of justice' and 'natural justice' are translated as 'iomrall ceartais' and 'ceartas aiceanta' in Tearmaí Dlí. See the commentary on Articles 29.1 and 34.1 where 'justice' is respectively expressed as 'cothrom' and 'ceart'.

Carthanacht See the commentary on Article 45.1. Note further and incidentally that, unlike 'grád' (Modern Irish 'grá'), examples of 'serc' (the early verbal noun of 'caraid'), 'love (both sacred and profane)', according to DIL, are found in the Old Irish Glosses of the eighth and ninth centuries. 'Carthanas' is translated as 'charity' in Tearmaí Dlí, where 'iontaobhas carthanais' is translated as 'charitable trust'.

a chur in áirithe 'In áirithe' is translated as 'reserved, engaged' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'suíochán a chur in áirithe, to book a seat' and 'culaith a chur in áirithe, to bespeak a suit'. Dinneen translates 'cuirim i n-áirithe' as 'I engage, secure'. See the commentary on Article 15.10.

an mhaitheas phoiblí This phrase is translated as 'the common good' in Tearmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'an mhaitheas phoiblí' as 'the common weal', while Dinneen translates 'an maitheas poiblidhe' as 'the public good' s.v. 'maitheas'. 'Poiblí' is translated as 'public' in Ó Dónaill, while 'poiblidhe' is translated as 'public, common, well-known' in Dinneen, who here translates 'an mhaitheas poiblidhe' as 'the public weal'. DIL s.v. 'maitheas', cites two examples (with 'maitheas' in the sense of 'welfare, weal') from the seventeenth century: 'a mbearear ... do bhreathaibh díorgha dlighe isin maitheas phuiblidhe' ('in the common weal') from the 'Contention of the Bards' and 'na seacht gcéime onóra bhíos corónta san maitheas phuiblidhe, mar atáid pápa, impir, rí, etc.', from Keating's Three Shafts of Death. See the commentary on Article 6.1, where we find 'leas an phobail' expressing 'the common good', as it does in general in the Constitution.

uaisleacht See the commentary on Article 40.2.1° where this headword expresses 'nobility'. This abstract noun is translated as 'nobility, gentility' in Ó Dónaill, to which Dinneen adds 'generosity, refinement; finery', citing 'ar aon dul in uaisleacht, of equal dignity'. DIL translates 'úaisleacht' as 'nobility, honour, greatness'. This word is based on 'úaisle', translated as 'nobility, dignity' in DIL.

Dinneen s.v. 'dighnit' ('dignity'), states 'used as far back as 1500' and cites 'fear dighnité móire, a man of high position' from the Annals of Ulster. DIL s.v. 'dignit', an English or Romance loanword, gives examples in particular from the seventeenth-century works of Keating. T.F. O'Rahilly includes it in his 'English words rooted in Irish before 1580' – see L. Mc Cionnaith s.v. 'dignity', who also cites 'my dignity was never upset, níor gabhadh do chosaibh im dhighnít riamh' from the Munster Irish of Seán Tóibín, Murcha Dubh.

ionas go dtiocfaidh linn Note that the form of this verb is 'go dtiocfadh' in the original text, that is, the conditional rather than the future tense.

de réir mar is cuí 'De réir' is translated as 'in accordance with, according to' in Ó Dónaill, who cites 'de réir mar a chuala mé, according to what I have heard' and 'de réir mar is mian leat, according as you wish'. Ó Dónaill translates 'cuí' as 'fitting, proper', and 'mar is cuí' as 'as is proper'. Dinneen translates 'do réir' as 'agreeable to, according to, after, at the disposal of' and 'do réir mar' as 'according as, while, as', citing 'do réir mar thiocfaidh linn, as we shall have occasion' and 'do réir mar chífead, according to what I shall find, according to circumstances'. 'Mar is cuibhe' is translated as 'as is becoming' in Dinneen. DIL s.v. 'riar', cites two examples of 'do réir', in the sense of 'according to', with 'mar', both from the seventeenth century: 'do réir mar ráinig a leas, according as the need had arisen' (from the 'Contention of the Bards') and 'do réir mar léaghthar san ochtmhadh caibidil' (from Keating's Three Shafts of Death). DIL s.v. 'cubaid' (a compound of 'com' + 'fid' ['tree, wood, timber']), translated as (a) 'harmonious, in accord, agreeing' and 'fitting, meet, becoming; proper, right', cites 'neach nár iomchair an umhla mar budh cubaidh' (i.e. a person who did not carry humility as was meet) from the seventeenth-century Beatha San Froinsias. See further the commentary on Article 43.2.1°.

a chur ar aghaidh Ó Dónaill translates 'cuir ar aghaidh é' as 'put it forward' and cites 'scéim a chur ar aghaidh, to promote a scheme' – see the commentary on Article 1.

Standardised gender-proofed Irish text

Agus ar bheith dúinn á chur romhainn an mhaitheas phoiblí a chur ar aghaidh maille le Críonacht agus le hIonracas agus le Carthanacht de réir mar is cuí, ionas go dúinn a chur in áirithe, saol ceart comhdhaonnach a bhunú, aiseag a haontachta a thabhairt dár dtír, agus comhcharadra a dhéanamh le náisiúin eile,

Direct translation

Agus ag iarraidh dúinn an mhaitheas phoiblí a chur chun cinn, le meas cuí ar an gCríonnacht<sup>1</sup>, ar an gCeartas<sup>2</sup> agus ar an gCarthanacht,<sup>3</sup> chun go ndéanfar dínit agus saoirse an duine aonair a áirithiú, fíor-ord sóisialach a bhaint amach, aontacht ár dtíre a thabhairt ar ais, agus comhcharadra a bhunú le náisiúin eile,

Variants

- 1 'ar an nGaois'
- 2 'ar an gCóir'
- 3 'leis an gCríonnacht, leis an gCeartas agus leis an gCarthanacht á n-urramú go cuí.'

V

TÉACS GAEILGE

Atáimid leis seo ag gabháil an Bhunreacht seo chugainn, agus á achtú agus á thíolacadh dúinn féin.

LITERAL ENGLISH TRANSLATION

We are hereby adopting this Constitution, and enacting it and dedicating it to ourselves.

ENGLISH TEXT

Do hereby adopt, enact, and give to ourselves this Constitution.

Divergences between the official texts

- 1 'Give to ourselves' is translated more poetically – perhaps with religious intonations – as 'á thíolacadh dúinn féin', 'dedicating it to ourselves', in the Irish text.

Commentary

ag gabháil ... chugainn Ó Dónaill cites 'gabh chugat an scian, take (hold of) the knife'. Dinneen translates

'gabhaim chum' as 'I take or receive for myself, take to heart, adopt, suffer' and cites 'ná gabh chugat m'éagnach, take not my reproaches to heart', from the seventeenth-century 'Contention of the Bards'. See DIL s.v. 'gaibid co', 'takes to oneself, receives', with a reference to Keating's seventeenth-century Three Shafts of Death.

"Adoptable powers" means powers which ... must ... be adopted by the society and "adopt" or "adopted" means adopt or adopted on the formation of the society or subsequently by a special resolution' is translated as 'ciallaíonn "cumhachtaí inghlactha" cumhachtaí nach mór ... a bheith glactha ag an gcumann ... agus ciallaíonn "glacadh" nó "glactha" glacadh nó ghlactha, trí chomhaontú, ar fhoirmiú an chumainn nó trí rún speisialta dá éis sin' in s2 of the Building Societies Act, 1989. In s10 of the 'Sligo County Scheme' in the Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923, 'The Committee shall adopt such Standing Orders and Regulations as shall be deemed necessary' is translated as 'Glacfaidh an Coiste le pé Buanórduithe agus Rialacháin is gá'.

Commenting on the variant direct translation below of 'a ghabháil chugainn féin', Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú remarks that it is somewhat too strong, with the sense of 'make our own of'.

á thíolacadh 'Tíolacaim' is translated as 'I convey' in Téarmaí Dlí. Ó Dónaill translates 'tíolaic' as (1) 'bestow', (2) 'dedicate' and (3) 'convey', citing 'thíolaic sí a beatha do Dhia, she dedicated her life to God' under 'tíolaic' (2). Dinneen translates 'tíodhlaicim' as 'I convey, deliver, present, bestow, offer, grant, deliver up, conduct, convoy, escort'. The earlier form of the verb, 'do-indnaig', is translated as 'gives, bestows, grants, hands over (with do of recipient)' in DIL, where examples from the Glosses of the eighth century onwards are cited.

Direct translation

An Bunreacht seo a ghlacadh, a achtú agus a thabhairt dúinn féin<sup>1</sup>.

Variant

- 1 'a ghabháil chugainn féin'

APPENDIX 2 FOSCRÍBHINN 2

TÉARMAÍ DLÍ      LEGAL TERMS

The following is a table of terms in the Constitution which differ from those in Téarmaí Dlí – see the English Index for references to the Articles in which these terms and phrases occur. Where the Irish term in the Constitution expressing an English headword below is differently translated in Téarmaí Dlí that is included at the end of the entry from Téarmaí Dlí.

	CONSTITUTION	TÉARMAÍ DLÍ
acquire	acquired by the State: a thiocfas i seilbh an Stáit	after-acquired property: maoin iarfhaighte seilbh: possession
actual	without any actual election: gan é a dhul faoi thoghadh; in the case of actual invasion: i gcás ionraidh; actual conditions: cor an lae	actual bodily harm: díobháil choirp; actual delivery: seachadadh iarbhír; actual loss: caillteanas iarbhír affection	without affection or ill-will towards any man: gan bá gan drochaigne chun duine ar bith	natural love and affection: grá agus gearn nádúrtha affirm	deimhnigh; dearbhaigh	I affirm (decree etc.): daingnim; I affirm (as an unsworn witness): dearbhascaim deimhnim: I certify, I vouch dearbhaím: I declare
agree	réitigh	I agree: comhaontaím alienation	sannadh	coimhthiú sannadh: assignment allege	abair a person alleged to be detained: duine a deirtear a bheith á choinneáil	I allege: liomhnaím allow	lig do the High Court shall ... allow the said person to be at liberty: ní foláir don Ard-Chúirt ... ligean don duine sin a shaoirse a bheith aige	I allow (a question, costs, etc.): ceadaím appear	to appear at the investigation: bheith i láthair ar an scrúdú	I appear (in Court): láithrím appropriate	leithghabháil	I appropriate: dílsím chugam approval	comhaontú; sásta le; aontú	formheas
approve	toiligh le	I approve: formheasaim
armed rebellion	ceannairc faoi arm	ceannairc faoi airm assign	counsel assigned by the Court: abhcóidí a thoghfair ag an gCúirt	I assign: sannaim
attach	power to attach penalties for their infringement: de chumhacht acu pionós a cheapadh do lucht a sáráithe sin	I attach (for contempt, etc.): astaím
authenticate	fioraigh	I authenticate: fiordheimhnim

	CONSTITUTION	TÉARMAÍ DLÍ
body	vested in any person or body : is le haon duine nó le haon dream	body corporate : comhlacht corpraithe capacity	differences of capacity, physical and moral : (don) difríocht atá idir daoine ina mbuanna corpartha agus ina mbuanna morálta	cáil personal capacity : cáil phearsanta; testamentary capacity : inniúlacht tiomnaithe capital	capital cases : cásanna breithe báis	capital offence : cion báis case stated	cás ríofa	cás sonraithe I state (a case) : sonraím (cás) ríomhaim: I compute ; cuntas ríofa: account stated
casting vote	vóta cinniúna	vóta réitigh
certified	faoi theastas	certified copy : cóip dheimhnithe charge	invoking a charge upon public funds : a chuirfeadh costas ar an gciste poiblí	muirear land improvement charge : muirear feabhsaithe talún children	clann	the Children's Court : an Chúirt Leanaí
the common good	leas an phobail	an mhaitheas phoiblí leas: interest (i.e. beneficial) commute/commutation	maolú	iomalairt I commute : iomalartaím maolú: mitigation condition	cúinse	coinníoll consent	toil	toiliú tionóntacht ar toil: tenancy at will control	for the regulation and control ... of the exercise of the right : chun oibriú an chirt ... a rialú agus a stiúradh	I control : rialaim stiúraim: I conduct (case, etc.)
corporate	private and corporate educational initiative : tionscnamh oideachais idir phríobháideach agus chumannta	body corporate : comhlacht corpraithe custody	coinneáil	coimeád coinneáil: detention decide	the Court decides that : más é breith na Cúirte	I decide : breithním declare	The Oireachtas shall not declare acts to be infringements of the law : Ní cead don Oireachtas a rá gur sárú dlí gníomhartha; War shall not be declared : ní dleathach cogadh a fhógairt	I declare : dearbhaím; dying declaration : dearbhú i mbéal báis dedicate	dedicate my abilities : mo lándícheall a dhéanamh	I dedicate : toirbhrím defer	moilligh	deferred share : scair iarchurtha detain	coinnigh ina bhrá	I detain : coinním detention	braighdeanas	coinneáil
develop	cuir ar aghaidh	development scheme : scéim forbartha

	CONSTITUTION	TÉARMAÍ DLÍ
direct	such one of the judges of that Court as that Court shall direct. an duine sin de bhreithiúna na Cúirte sin a cheapfaidh an Chúirt sin chuige sin; if the President of the High Court ... directs. má dhéanann Uachtarán na hArd-Chúirte ... a ordú	I direct (jury): treoraím ceapaim: I appoint ordaim: I order direction	ordú	treorú ordú: order discretion	in his absolute discretion. as a chomhairle féin	judicial discretion: rogha bhreithiúnach; at the discretion of. faoi rogha; I exercise discretion: déanaim rogha comhairle: advice
dispute	achrann	diospóid
disqualify	cuir faoi dhícháilíocht	I disqualify. dicháilim distribution	distribution of business: gnó a roinnt orthu	I distribute: dáilim; Statutes of Distribution: Reachtanna an Dáilte document	scríbhinn	doiciméad
enrol	cuir isteach ina iris	I enrol: rollaim; enrolment: rollú enter	dul isteach i	I break and enter: brisim agus iontrálaim entitled	No person shall be entitled to: Ní cead d'aon duine	absolutely entitled: i dteideal iomlán except	No law shall be enacted excepting from the appellate jurisdiction: Ní cead aon dlí a achtú a chuirfeadh ar an taobh amuigh de dhlinse achomhairc	I except: eiscim exclude	No person may be excluded from Irish nationality. Ní cead náisiúntacht Éireann a cheilt ar dhuine ar bith	I exclude: eisiaim; excluding: ag eisiaimh  ceilt bhreithe: concealment of birth
exclusive	The sole and exclusive power of making laws is vested in the Oireachtas. Bheirtear don Oireachtas amháin an t-aon chumhacht chun dlíthe a dhéanamh	exclusive right: ceart eisiatach execute	comhlíon	I execute (i.e. an order, deed, etc.): forghníomhaím  comhlíonaim: I comply with; I conform with; I perform
execution	for the execution of the said sentence of death: chun an bhreith bháis sin a fheidhmiú	execution order: ordú forghníomhaithe; stay of execution: bac ar fhorghníomhú expiration	at the expiration of: i gceann; before the expiration of: go ceann	on the expiration of the lease: ar éag don léas forcible	foréigneach	forneartach foréigneach: violent
future	the future acquisition: fáil feasta	future debt: fiach todhchaí
general	general guidance: gnáth-threoir	general agent: gníomhaire ginearálta; general meeting: cruinniú ginearálta; gnáthchruinniú: ordinary meeting
the common good	leas an phobail	an mhaitheas phoiblí

	CONSTITUTION	TÉARMAÍ DLÍ
goods	external goods : maoin shaolta	earraí I pass off goods as those of another : tairgim earraí i leith is gur earraí duine eile iad maoin: property
ground	on the ground of : mar gheall ar	on ground of : ar fhoras
holder	the holder of the office : an té a bheas i seilbh na hoifige	sealbhóir holder for value : sealbhóir ar luach-chomaoin inadequate	nach leor	inadequate consideration : comaoin neamhleor incapacity	míthreoir	éagumas permanent incapacity : éagumas buan míthreoraím: I misdirect ; míthreorú: misdirection
incidental	incidental to : a bhfuil baint aige le	risk incidental to the employment : fiontar a ghabhas leis an bhfostaíocht incite	saighid	I incite : gríosáim; incitement : gríosú include	The Courts of First Instance shall include : Beidh ar na Cúirteanna Céadchéime	I include : foláim inconsistent	to the extent that they are not inconsistent therewith : sa mhéid nach bhfuilid ina choinne	inconsistent with : ar neamhréir le indecent	graosta	míghneasach graosta: obscene intention	unless the contrary intention appears : mura léir a mhalairt d'intinn ina thaobh	notice of intention to claim relief : fógra go bhfuiltear chun faoiseamh a éileamh invalid	shall be invalid : beidh sé gan bhail; no adoption shall be invalid : ní bheidh aon uchtáil ó bhail dlí	neamhbhailí issue	cuir amach	I issue : eisim jury	coiste tiomanta	giúiré coiste iniúchta: committee of inspection justice	cothrom; ceart; ionracas	miscarriage of justice : iomrall ceartais; natural justice : ceartas aiceanta ceart: right
knowledge	to the best of my knowledge and power : chomh maith agus is eol agus is cumas dom; persons having knowledge of the following interests : daoine ag a mbeidh eolas ar na gnóthaí seo a leanas	guilty knowledge : fios ciontach; unlawful carnal knowledge : fios collaí neamhdhleathach positive law	reacht daonna	dlí daonna Reacht na dTréimhsi: Statute of Limitations liability	féichiúnas	dliteanas féichiúnaí: debtor matter	a matter of such grave import : chomh tábhachtach sin	ábhar in the matter of : maidir le
means	the means of making reasonable provision for their domestic needs : caoi chun soláthar réasúnta a dhéanamh do riachtanais a dteaghlach	with no visible means of subsistence : gan a chuma air cóir mhaireachtála a bheith aige

	CONSTITUTION	TÉARMAÍ DLÍ
meeting	tionól	cruinniú tionól neamhdhleathach: unlawful assembly
notice of motion	fógra tairisceana	fógra foriarratais molest	any person interfering with, molesting ... its members : aon duine ... a dhéanfadh cur isteach nó toirmeasc ar a chomhaltai	I molest : cuirim isteach ar movable	so-aistrithe	so-chorraithe nuisance	cránas	núis
nullify	cuir ar neamhní	I nullify : neamhním official	official residence : stát-áras	official assignee : an sannaí oifigiúil; official receiver : glacadóir oifigiúil Stát-fhiach: State debt
open	in open court : sa chúirt go poiblí	hearing in open court : éisteacht i gcúirt oscailte ceart slí poiblí: public right of way operate	shall operate to : is é is feidhm do	I operate : oibrím cuirim i bhfeidhm: I enforce ; i bhfeidhm: in force ownership	the ownership ... of the material resources of the community : dílse ... gustail shaolta an phobail; private ownership : a bheith aige dá chuid féin	úinéireacht dílsím: I vest
period	ré; téarma; tráth	extension of period : fadú tréimhse; I extend the period : fadaím an tréimhse tionóntacht ar feadh téarma blianta: tenancy for a term of years
petitioner	petitioners : an lucht achainí	achainíoch positive law	reacht daonna	dlí daonna reacht: statute possess	tá aige	possess and receive ... order to : ordú ... a shealbhú agus a ghlacadh preference	in violation of their ... lawful preference : in aghaidh a rogha dleathaí	fraudulent preference : tosaíocht chalaíseach; preference share : scair thosaíochta rogha: option presence	in the presence of : i bhfianaise	in the constructive presence of : i láthair ... go hinchiallaithe privileged	saor ar chúrsaí dlí	faoi phribhléid prosecute	All crimes ... prosecuted in any court ... shall be prosecuted : i gcás gach coir dá dtugtar in aon chúirt ... a dhéanfar an cúiseamh	I prosecute (a person) : ionchúisím; I prosecute (appeal, proceedings, etc.) : tugaim ar aghaidh purport	a bheireann le tuiscint	I purport : airbheartaím
armed rebellion	ceannairc faoi arm	ceannairc faoi airm
refer	cuir faoi bhráid; cuir faoi bhreith	I refer (a case to the County Registrar, etc.) : tarchuirim (cás chun an Chláraitheora Chontae, etc.)
reference	a chur faoi bhreith	reference (to arbitration, etc.) : tarchur (chun eadrána, etc.); reference order : ordú tarchurtha

	CONSTITUTION	TÉARMAÍ DLÍ
register	rolla	clár register of agreements : clár na gcomhaontuithe rolla an ghiúiré: jury panel
Registrar	Iriseoir	Cláraitheoir County Registrar : Cláraitheoir Contae remuneration	tuarastal	luach saothair
represent	ionadaigh	I represent the plaintiff : feidhmim ar son an ghearánaí representative	ionadóir	personal representative : ionadaí pearsanta repugnant to	in aghaidh	aimhréireach le retire	dul as oifig; scoir	I retire : scoirim as oifig review	cuir faoi léirmheas	I review : athbhreithním rule	rule of conduct : treoir	rule of Court : riail Chúirte treoraím: I direct (jury) satisfy	unless satisfied that : mura deimhin leis go	I satisfy : sásaím
second	as a second official language : mar theanga oifigiúil eile	second private sitting : an dara suí príobháideach
senior	in the presence of ... the senior available judge : i láthair ... an bhreithimh ... is sinsearaí dá mbeidh ar fáil	senior counsel : abhcóide sinisr sentence	sentence of death : breith bháis	pianbhreith I sentence : cuirim pianbhreith ar breith: decision sign	lámh a chur le signed by : faoi lámh	I sign : sínim special	faoi leith	special agent : gníomhaire speisialta; special sitting : suí speisialta specific	by specific enactment : in achtachán chuige sin	specific gift : bronnantas sonrach; specific performance : sainchomhlíonadh specify	luaigh	I specify : sonraím luaim: I cite state	luaigh; abair	I state (a case) : sonraím (cás) stated	case stated : cás ríofa	case stated : cás sonraithe cuntas ríofa: account stated
statement	léirthuirisc	ráiteas
subject to	faoi chuimsiú	faoi réir faoi chuimsiú na fostaíochta: within the scope of the employment subsequent	subject to the subsequent provisions of this section : faoi chuimsiú na bhforálacha inár ndiaidh den alt seo	subsequent condition : iarchoinníoll
subsisting	but is a subsisting marriage : agus an pósadh sin ... a bheith ann fós	ar marthain supervision	to be prepared under his supervision : a ullmhú faoina threorú	winding up under supervision : foirceannadh faoi stiúradh treorú: direction (by judge)

	CONSTITUTION	TÉARMAÍ DLÍ term	the terms and conditions of the office of ...: coinníollacha agus cúinsí oifig an ...	term (i.e., of contract, etc.): téarma  coinníoll: condition; proviso; stipulation terminate	terminate the appointment. cuir as oifig	I terminate. foirceannaim title	gairm title of honour. gairm onóra	teideal transfer	to transfer ... property. maoin a shannadh	I transfer. aistrím unlawful	unlawfully. go haindleathach	unlawful assembly: tionól neamhdhleathach valid	but is a subsisting valid marriage: agus an pósadh sin, agus bail dlí air, a bheith ann fós	bailí validity	the question of the validity of any law. (leis) an gceist sin bail a bheith nó gan a bheith ar aon dlí áirithe	bailíocht
vest	interests ... lawfully vested in any person. leasanna is le haon duine; The supreme command of the Defence Forces is hereby vested in the President. Leis seo cuirtear na Fórsaí Cosanta faoi ardcheannas an Uachtaráin	I vest. dilsím voluntary	deonach	saorálach
work	saothar	obair luach saothair: remuneration

APPENDIX 3 FOSCRÍBHINN 3

GENDER-PROOFING PROMHADH Ó THAOBH INSCENE

Two cases are outlined in the introductory essay where the Irish text of the Constitution could be taken into account in gender-proofing the English text. Other possible cases are examined in this appendix, which is concerned in particular with cases where there appears to be an option in how one gender-proofs the Irish text, along with the question of repetition in gender-proofing.

Article 43.1.1<sup>o</sup>, 'The State acknowledges that man, in virtue of his rational being, has the natural right ...', is gender-proofed in the edition published by the All-Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution to read 'The State acknowledges that ~~man~~, a man or woman, in virtue of his or her rational being, has the natural right ...'. The Irish text is as follows: 'Admhaíonn an Stát, toisc bua an réasúin a bheith ag an duine, go bhfuil sé de cheart nádúrtha aige ...'. The only emendation necessitated by gender-proofing this text is to add 'nó aici' to the final 'aige'. While one would not recommend, as an alternative to the amendment 'a man or woman' in the English text, substituting 'the person' for 'man' above, 'duine' expressing 'person' on approximately forty occasions in the Constitution, 'duine' also expresses 'individual' both in the Preamble ('so that the dignity and freedom of the individual may be assured', 'ionas go dtiocfaidh linn a uaisleacht agus a shaoirse a chur in áirithe do gach aon duine') and in Article 45.2.iii ('the concentration of the ownership or control of essential commodities in a few individuals', 'an t-urlámhas ar earraí riachtanacha a bheith ina lámha féin ag beagán daoine'). In light of this, 'The State acknowledges that man, in virtue of his rational being, has the natural right ...' might be emended to read 'The State acknowledges that ~~man~~, the individual, in virtue of his or her rational being, has the natural right ...'.

Article 12.4.5<sup>o</sup>, which reads 'Where only one candidate is nominated for the office of President it shall not be necessary to proceed to a ballot for his election', is gender-proofed as follows:

Where only one candidate is nominated for the office of President it shall not be necessary to proceed to a ballot for his the election.

The Irish text reads:

Nuair nach n-ainmnítear d'oifig an Uachtaráin ach aon iarrthóir amháin, ní gá vótáil chun é a thoghadh.

This would be gender-proofed as follows:

Nuair nach n-ainmnítear d'oifig an Uachtaráin ach aon iarrthóir amháin, ní gá vótáil chun é nó í a thoghadh.

This would be equivalent to emending the English text above to read:

Where only one candidate is nominated for the office of President it shall not be necessary to proceed to a ballot for his or her election.

An emendation similar to the above is made to the English text of Article 18.9 ('Every member of Seanad Éireann shall ... continue to hold office until the day before the polling day of the general election for Seanad Éireann next held after his election or nomination'), which is gender-proofed as follows:

Every member of Seanad Éireann shall ... continue to hold office until the day before the polling day of the general election for Seanad Éireann next held after his or her election or nomination.

There is another factor involved in making the gender-proofed Irish and English texts of Article 12.4.5<sup>o</sup> correspond more fully to one another, that is, Article 12.7, which concludes with the clause 'as soon as may be after the election' – the very same clause with which the gender-proofed text of that Article commences: 'The first President shall enter upon his office as soon as may be after his the election ...'. The Irish text of this Article commences and concludes as follows:

Ní foláir don chéad Uachtarán dul i gcúram a oifige chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis é a thoghadh ... chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis an toghcháin.

The same English word 'election' is expressed by 'a thoghadh' and 'toghchán', the first being the verbal noun and the second a noun. The above can be gender-proofed as follows:

Ní foláir don chéad Uachtarán dul i gcúram a oifige chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis é nó í a thoghadh ... chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis an toghcháin.

While one could propose emending 'a thoghadh' to 'toghchán' and reading 'Ní foláir don chéad Uachtarán dul i gcúram a oifige chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis é ~~a thoghadh~~ an toghcháin ... chomh luath agus is féidir é tar éis an toghcháin', the emendation of Article 12.4.5<sup>o</sup> to read 'Nuair nach n-ainmnítear d'oifig an Uachtaráin ach aon iarrthóir amháin, ní gá vótáil don toghchán' is not satisfactory. The recommended emendation of the commencement of Article 12.7 above would be equivalent to emending the English text to read 'The first President shall enter upon his office as soon as may be after his or her election' rather than 'The first President shall enter upon his office as soon as may be after his the election'.

Finally, turning to the Preamble, 'We, the people of Éire, Humbly acknowledging all our obligations to our Divine Lord, Jesus Christ, Who sustained our fathers through centuries of trial' is gender-proofed to read 'We, the people of Éire, Humbly acknowledging all our obligations to our Divine Lord, Jesus Christ, Who sustained our fathers forebears through centuries of trial'. No gender-proofing is necessary in the case of the Irish text which reads 'Ar mbeith dúinne, muintir na hÉireann, ag admháil go huiriseal a mhéid atáimid faoi chomaoin ag Íosa Críost, ár dTiarna Dia, a thug comhfhurtacht dár sinsir i ngach cruatan ina rabhadar ar feadh na gcéadta bliain'. While De Bhaldraithe translates 'forbear' as 'sinsir', 'our forbears' is translated therein as 'an mhuintir a chuaigh romhainn'. In Téarmaí Dlí, based on Statutory Instrument No. 3 of 1950, 'sinsir' is translated as 'ascendants'. In view of this, perhaps 'Who sustained our fathers through centuries of trial' might be emended to read 'Who sustained our fathers ascendants through centuries of trial', rather than emending it as above.

As we have seen above, a choice sometimes presents itself in gender-proofing the Irish text between following the gender-proofed English text published by the All-Party Oireachtas Committee on the Constitution or gender-proofing the Irish text independently of the English text. Article 25.2.1°, for example, reads:

Save as otherwise provided by this Constitution, every Bill so presented to the President for his signature and for promulgation by him as a law shall be signed by the President not earlier than the fifth and not later than the seventh day after the date on which the Bill shall have been presented to him. Taobh amuigh de chás dá socraítear a mhalairt leis an mBunreacht seo, gach Bille a thairgtear don Uachtarán mar sin chun a lámh a chur leis agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhlí, ní foláir dó a lámh a chur leis lá nach luaithe ná an cúigiú lá agus nach déanaí ná an seachtú lá tar éis an lae a thairgtear an Bille dó.

The English text has been gender-proofed as follows:

Save as otherwise provided by this Constitution, every Bill so presented to the President for his or her signature and for promulgation by him or her as a law shall be signed by the President not earlier than the fifth and not later than the seventh day after the date on which the Bill shall have been presented to the President.

The Irish text can be gender-proofed as follows:

Taobh amuigh de chás dá socraítear a mhalairt leis an mBunreacht seo, gach Bille a thairgtear don Uachtarán mar sin chun a lámh a chur leis agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhlí, ní foláir don Uachtarán a lámh a chur leis lá nach luaithe ná an cúigiú lá agus nach déanaí ná an seachtú lá tar éis an lae a thairgtear an Bille dó nó di.

Gender-proofing the Irish text following the gender-proofed English text above would give the following Irish text:

Taobh amuigh de chás dá socraítear a mhalairt leis an mBunreacht seo, gach Bille a thairgtear don Uachtarán mar sin chun a lámh a chur leis agus chun é a fhógairt ina dhlí, ní foláir dó nó di a lámh a chur leis lá nach luaithe ná an cúigiú lá agus nach déanaí ná an seachtú lá tar éis an lae a thairgtear an Bille don Uachtarán.

While account was taken of the gender-proofed edition of the English text in gender-proofing the Irish text in this study, the Irish text was gender-proofed having regard to emendations which would involve the least interference with the original Irish text.

In the published gender-proofed English text, 'Chairman' is gender-proofed to 'chair' in the following Articles: 15.9.1°, 15.9.2°, 15.11.1°, 15.11.2°, 22.2.3°, 24.1, 27.5.1°, 27.6, 33.5.2° and 35.4.2°. By emending 'Cathaoirleach' to 'cathaoirleach' (with lower case 'c'), this minor emendation suffices to gender-proof the Irish version of those Articles. Note, however, that we find 'Cathaoir' in the Standing Orders of Dáil Éireann (1997), in sections 20, 44, 48, 53, 61(1), 64(1), 75, 113 agus 115(1) – s44, for example, reads 'Members shall address the Chair', 'Is chun na Cathaoireach a labhróidh comhaltaí'. In s116, however, 'which is deemed by the Chair ...' is translated as 'más dóigh le Cathaoirleach an Choiste'. 'Cathaoirleach' (with upper case 'C') refers to 'Cathaoirleach Sheanad Éireann' in Articles 14.2.1° and 14.2.4°.

Article 15.9.1° reads as follows:

Each House of the Oireachtas shall elect from its members its own Chairman and Deputy Chairman, and shall prescribe their powers and duties. Toghfaidh gach Teach ar leith den Oireachtas a Chathaoirleach agus a Leas-Chathaoirleach féin as a chomhaltas féin, agus leagfaidh amach dóibh a gcumhachtaí agus a ndualgais.

The English text has been added to as follows in the gender-proofed edition of that text:

Each House of the Oireachtas shall elect from its members its own chair and deputy chair, and shall prescribe their powers and duties, the chair of Dáil Éireann to be known as the Ceann Comhairle and the chair of Seanad Éireann to be known as the Cathaoirleach.

This has been rendered as follows in the gender-proofed Irish text in this study:

Toghfaidh gach Teach ar leith den Oireachtas a chathaoirleach agus a leaschathaoirleach féin as a chomhaltas féin, agus leagfaidh amach dóibh a gcumhachtaí agus a ndualgais; an Ceann Comhairle a ghairfear de chathaoirleach Dháil Éireann agus an Cathaoirleach a ghairfear de chathaoirleach Sheanad Éireann.

Somewhat like 'Cathaoirleach' above, 'baintreach', expressing 'widow' in Article 45.4.1°, needs no gender-proofing. The English text, 'to contribute to the support of the infirm, the widow, the orphan, and the aged' is gender-proofed as follows: 'to contribute to the support of the infirm, widows and widowers, the orphan, and the aged'. The Irish text reads as 'cabhair maireachtála a thabhairt don easlán, don bhaintreach, don dilleacht agus don sean'. 'A widow or widower' is translated simply as 'baintreach' in s19(1) of the Finance Act, 1966, though we find 'baintreach fir' translating 'widower' in s18(2) of the Social Welfare (Occupational Injuries) Act, 1966, and 'baintreach nó baintreach fir' translating 'widow or widower' in s5(1)(c) of the Social Welfare Act, 1970. 'Baintreach fir' is cited in Foclóir Oifigiúil as translating 'widower' in translations for the Department of Industry and Commerce. Ó Dónaills entry s.v. 'baintreach' reads: '1. baintreach (mná), widow. 2. baintreach (fir), widower'. In De Bhaldraithe, s.v. 'widower', we find 'baintreach (fir)'. Dinneen translates 'baintreach' as 'a widow, a widower', but also includes 'baintreach fir, a widower; baintreach mná, a widow'. While 'baintreach' is a compound of 'ban' and 'trebhach' ('householder, farmer'), we find the metaphorical use of this term in the seventeenth century in the phrase 'is baintreach gach teampoll' (i.e. without their clergy) –see DIL.

Turning specifically to the question of gender-proofing and the Irish text, the omission of the personal pronoun in some clauses where one would generally find such a pronoun today results in clauses where the English text requires gender-proofing but the corresponding Irish text needs no such proofing. Taking the opening of Article 14.1, for example, where the gender-proofed English text reads 'In the event of the absence of the President, or the temporary incapacity of the President, or the permanent incapacity of the President', the Irish text reads 'Má bhíonn an tUachtarán as láthair nó má bhíonn ar míthreoir go sealadach, nó má bhíonn ar míthreoir go buan ...'. In Article 12.7, where '... in the event of his predecessor's removal from office, death, resignation, or permanent incapacity ...' is gender-proofed to read 'in the event of his or her predecessor's removal from office, death, resignation, or permanent incapacity', the Irish text ('má tharlaíonn dá réamhtheachtaí go gcuirfear as oifig é nó go n-éagfaidh nó go n-éireoidh as oifig nó neachtar acu go ngabhfaidh míthreoir bhuan é') can be gender-proofed to read 'má tharlaíonn dá réamhtheachtaí go gcuirfear as oifig é nó í nó go n-éagfaidh nó go n-éireoidh as oifig nó neachtar acu go ngabhfaidh míthreoir bhuan é nó í', rather than 'má tharlaíonn dá réamhtheachtaí go gcuirfear as oifig é nó í nó go n-éagfaidh sé nó sí nó go n-éireoidh sé nó sí as oifig nó neachtar acu go ngabhfaidh míthreoir bhuan é nó í'.

'Under disability or incapacity for membership of Dáil Éireann', in Article 16.1.3°, is expressed as 'faoi mhíchumas nó faoi mhíthreoir maidir lena bheith ina chomhalta de Dháil Éireann'. In the gender-proofed text presented in the study, 'lena' is emended to 'le' and the text reads 'faoi mhíchumas nó faoi mhíthreoir maidir le bheith ina chomhalta nó ina comhalta de Dháil Éireann'. The English text 'after his election or nomination', in Article 18.9, which is expressed in the Irish text as 'd'éis é a thoghadh nó é a ainmniú', is gender-proofed to read 'after his or her election or nomination'. In gender-proofing the Irish text here 'é nó í' is inserted only once in the Irish text and the second 'é' is deleted, to read 'd'éis é nó í a thoghadh nó a ainmniú', rather than 'd'éis é nó í a thoghadh nó é nó í a ainmniú'.

Gender-proofing the Irish text sometimes, however, requires repetition of elements of the original text. Where a preposition occurs before a masculine personal pronoun it would appear that the preposition itself needs to be repeated before the feminine pronoun which is introduced in gender-proofing. In Article 26.2.1°, for example, 'le hargóintí ón Ard-Aighne nó thar a cheann' would be gender-proofed to read 'le hargóintí ón Ard-Aighne nó thar a cheann nó thar a ceann', rather than 'le hargóintí ón Ard-Aighne nó thar a cheann nó a ceann'. Similarly, in Article 31.1, where the English text 'in relation to the exercise and performance by him of such of his powers and functions, as are by this Constitution expressed ...' is gender-proofed to read 'in relation to the exercise and performance by him or her of such of his or her powers and functions as are by this Constitution expressed', the Irish text, 'maidir le hé d'oibriú is do chomhlíonadh na gcumhachtaí is na bhfeidhmeanna a luaitear sa Bhunreacht seo', would be gender-proofed to 'maidir le hé nó le hí d'oibriú ...' rather than 'maidir le hé nó hí d'oibriú' or 'maidir le hé nó í d'oibriú'. An alternative to the above, as noted by my colleague Treasa Ní Bhrua, is to repeat the noun, i.e. to gender-proof 'le hargóintí ón Ard-Aighne nó thar a cheann' as 'le hargóintí ón Ard-Aighne nó thar ceann an Ard-Aighne' — such repetition of the noun is found in the gender-proofed English text also, as we saw above, where 'the President' was inserted rather than emending 'he' to 'he or she'. Note, as an example of repetition of the preposition in the original text, that 'all estates and interests therein for the time being lawfully vested in any person or body' is expressed as 'cibé eastáit agus leasanna is le haon duine nó le haon dream go dleathach in alt na huaire' in Article 10.1 and 'Every such message or address must, however, have received the approval of the Government' is expressed as 'Ach i ngach cás díobh sin ní foláir an Rialtas a bheith sásta roimh ré leis an teachtaireacht nó leis an aitheasc' in Article 13.7.3°.

Repetition of the copula seems to be necessary when gender-proofing the phrase 'is é', i.e. 'is é nó is í', as against 'is é nó í'. In Article 28.1, for example, 'agus is é an tUachtarán a cheapfas na comhaltaí sin' ('who shall be appointed by the President') is gender-proofed as 'agus is é nó is í an tUachtarán ...' rather than 'agus is é nó í an tUachtarán'. As regards the feminine pronoun referring to a masculine noun, see Graiméar Gaeilge na mBráithre Críostaí, p. 144:

Is é gnéas an duine agus ní hé gnéas an ainmfhocail a chinneann inscne an fhorainmnigh go hiondúil. (The gender of the person rather than the gender of the noun usually decides the gender of the pronoun.)

Among the examples cited are 'sin í an cailín ag cur uirthi a cóta' and 'is í an captaen í'.

Article 35.2 reads as follows:

All judges shall be independent in the exercise of their judicial functions and subject only to this Constitution and the law. Beidh gach breitheamh saor neamhspleách maidir lena feidhmeanna breithimh a oibriú, gan de smacht air ach an Bunreacht seo agus an dlí.

It would appear that 'breithimh' needs to be repeated in gender-proofing. Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommending having the extra phrase 'no lena feidhmeanna breithimh' preceded and followed by a comma:

Beidh gach breitheamh saor neamhspleách maidir lena feidhmeanna breithimh, nó lena feidhmeanna breithimh, a oibriú, gan de smacht air nó uirthi ach an Bunreacht seo agus an dlí.

The alternative would read:

Beidh gach breitheamh saor neamhspleách maidir lena feidhmeanna nó lena feidhmeanna breithimh a oibriú, gan de smacht air nó uirthi ach an Bunreacht seo agus an dlí.

It would not appear to be necessary to repeat 'maidir' to read:

Beidh gach breitheamh saor neamhspleách maidir lena feidhmeanna breithimh nó maidir lena feidhmeanna breithimh a oibriú ....

Again it would appear necessary to repeat the adjective in Article 40.4.1° which reads:

No citizen shall be deprived of his personal liberty save in accordance with law. Ní cead a shaoirse phearsanta a bhaint d'aon saoránach ach amháin de réir dlí.

The English text has been gender-proofed to read:

No citizen shall be deprived of his or her personal liberty save in accordance with law.

A question arises as to whether the Irish text be gender-proofed to read:

Ní cead a shaoirse phearsanta nó a saoirse phearsanta a bhaint d'aon saoránach ach amháin de réir dlí.

or

Ní cead a shaoirse nó a saoirse phearsanta a bhaint d'aon saoránach ach amháin de réir dlí.

Similarly in Article 40.5 ('The dwelling of every citizen is inviolable', 'Is slán do gach saoránach a ionad cónaithe'), one could gender-proof the Irish text as '*Is slán do gach saoránach a ionad cónaithe nó a hionad cónaithe' or simply as '*Is slán do gach saoránach a ionad nó a hionad cónaithe'. Note in the original text that 'sannadh' is repeated in Article 10.3 ('for the control of the alienation, whether temporary or permanent, of that property', 'chun sannadh buan nó sannadh sealadach na maoiné sin a rialú'), as is 'tábhacht' in Article 13.7.1° ('any matter of national or public importance', 'aon ní a bhfuil tábhacht náisiúnta nó tábhacht phoiblí ann').

In gender-proofing 'Tig leis an Uachtarán, as a chomhairle féin, diúltú' ('The President may in his absolute discretion refuse'), in Article 13.2.2°, for example, a question arises as to whether it is necessary to repeat 'féin', i.e. 'as a chomhairle féin nó as a chomhairle féin' as against 'as a chomhairle nó a chomhairle féin'. See also Articles 13.9 and 31.3. In Articles 28.9.4°, 30.5.2° and 31.7 – where the English text, 'for reasons which to him seem sufficient', is gender-proofed simply as 'for reasons which to him or her seem sufficient' – the choice in gender-proofing the Irish text 'ar ábhair is leor leis féin' is between 'ar ábhair is leor leis féin nó léi féin' or 'ar ábhair is leor leis nó léi féin'.

The question of the repetition of 'sin' arises in some Articles. 'Ceapfaidh an tUachtarán an Taoiseach .i. an Ceann Rialtais nó an Príomh-Aire, arna ainmniú sin ag Dáil Éireann' ('The President shall, on the nomination of Dáil Éireann, appoint the Taoiseach, that is, the head of the Government or Prime Minister'), in Article 13.1.1°, would appear capable of been gender-proofed either as 'Ceapfaidh an tUachtarán an Taoiseach .i. an Ceann Rialtais nó an Príomh-Aire, arna ainmniú sin nó arna hainmniú sin ag Dáil Éireann' or as '... arna ainmniú nó arna hainmniú sin ag Dáil Éireann'. A similar phrase is found in Article 30.2 ('The Attorney General shall be appointed by the President on the nomination of the Taoiseach ...', 'Is ag an Uachtarán a cheapfar an tArd-Aighne arna ainmniú sin ag an Taoiseach'); the same wording is found in Article 33.2, regarding the appointment of the Comptroller and Auditor General. 'Arna' is composed of 'ar' and the possessive adjective 'a'; no differentiation is made as regards number or gender in the case of 'sin' with a possessive pronoun – 'a mhac sin' ('that man's son') and 'lena dtaobh sin' ('as compared to those') are cited by Ó Dónaill; 'muintir Chonamara sin' is cited in s104(d) of Graiméar Gaeilge na mBráithre Críostaí, where 'sin' qualifies the feminine noun 'muintir'.

The English text of Article 34.5.4°, 'shall be deemed to have vacated his office', is gender-proofed as 'shall be deemed to have vacated his or her office'. The Irish text reads as 'ní foláir a mheas go bhfuil scartha aige lena oifig'. Again a question arises as to whether to gender-proof as 'ní foláir a mheas go bhfuil scartha aige lena oifig nó aici lena hoifig' or as 'ní foláir a mheas go bhfuil scartha aige nó aici lena oifig nó lena hoifig'.

Article 40.4.2°, 'go bhfuil an duine sin á choinneáil ina bhrá go haindleathach' ('... that such person is being unlawfully detained') illustrates the case of gender-proofing the Irish text where possessive adjectives are involved. This phrase is gender-proofed in the study as 'go bhfuil an duine sin á choinneáil ina bhrá nó á coinneáil ina brá go haindleathach' rather than 'go bhfuil an duine sin á choinneáil nó á coinneáil ina bhrá nó ina brá go haindleathach'. Further on in that subsection, the English text's 'the person in whose custody he is detained' ('neach a choinnithe ina bhrá') is gender-proofed as 'the person in whose custody he or she is detained'. The Irish text has been gender-proofed here as 'neach a choinnithe ina bhrá nó a coinnithe ina brá' rather than 'neach a choinnithe nó a coinnithe ina bhrá nó ina brá'. We find similar phrases in Articles 40.4.3° agus 40.4.4° – 'a bheith á choinneáil ina bhrá' being gender-proofed to read 'a bheith á choinneáil ina bhrá nó á coinneáil ina brá' rather than 'a bheith á choinneáil nó á coinneáil ina bhrá nó ina brá'. In Article 40.4.3° 'ligean don duine sin a shaoirse a bheith aige' is gender-proofed to read 'ligean don duine sin a shaoirse a bheith aige nó a saoirse a bheith aici' rather than 'ligean don duine sin a shaoirse nó a saoirse a bheith aige nó aici'.

Finally, Article 43.1.1° reads:

The State acknowledges that man, in virtue of his rational being, has the natural right, antecedent to positive law, to the private ownership of external goods. Admhaíonn an Stát, toisc bua an réasúin a bheith ag an duine, go bhfuil sé de cheart nádúrtha aige maoin shaolta a bheith aige dá chuid féin go príobháideach, ceart is ársa ná reacht daonna.

The English text is gender-proofed as follows:

The State acknowledges that a man or woman, in virtue of his or her rational being, has the natural right, antecedent to positive law, to the private ownership of external goods.

The Irish text is gender-proofed to read:

Admhaíonn an Stát, toisc bua an réasúin a bheith ag an duine, go bhfuil sé de cheart nádúrtha ag fear nó bean maoin shaolta a bheith aige dá chuid féin nó aici dá cuid féin go príobháideach, ceart is ársa ná reacht daonna.

This is in preference to the following:

Admhaíonn an Stát, toisc bua an réasúin a bheith ag an duine, go bhfuil sé de cheart nádúrtha ag fear nó bean maoin shaolta a bheith aige nó aici dá chuid féin nó dá cuid féin go príobháideach, ceart is ársa ná reacht daonna.

APPENDIX 4 FOSCRÍBHINN 4

THE LATEST AMENDMENTS

As stated in the introductory essay, the Irish text of the most recent amendments of the Constitution are direct translations of the English text and therefore need not be translated into English in this study. However, again as noted in that essay, the translator of the amendment strives as far as possible to adhere to the terms and phrases already in use in the full text, which terms and phrases may not be direct translations of the terms and phrases in the English text, as this study has shown. It follows, therefore, that some modern amendments contain an amalgam of two styles, as we have seen in the commentary on Articles 40.3.3° and 41.3.2° above, which include the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments of the Constitution. While it is not intended to comment in any detail on the later amendments here, particularly as the author is a member of the staff of the Translation Section of the Houses of the Oireachtas which produced those translations, the texts are given here for the sake of completeness and a few remarks will be made on the lengthy Nineteenth Amendment of the Constitution in Article 29.7, which contains two new Articles which are proposed to be substituted for Articles 2 and 3.

Article 29.4.3° was added to the Constitution by the Third Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1972. The text of that subsection was added to by the Tenth Amendment of the Constitution Act, 1987. It is the text following that amendment which is given in the study above and commented on. Following the Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution, 1992 (dealing with the Maastricht Treaty), the third sentence of that Article was deleted and became the basis for the new ss7°; ss4° and 8° were also added to the text following that amendment. Subsections 5° and 6° were added following the Eighteenth Amendment of the Constitution, 1998 (dealing mainly with the Amsterdam Treaty). Articles 29.4.4°, 5°, 6°, 7° and 8° read as follows:

4° Tig leis an Stát an Conradh ar an Aontas Eorpach a síníodh i Maastricht ar an 7ú lá d'Fheabhra, 1992, a dhaingniú agus tig leis a bheith ina chomhalta den Aontas sin.

The State may ratify the Treaty on European Union signed at Maastricht on the 7th day of February, 1992, and may become a member of that Union.

5° Tig leis an Stát an Conradh Amstardam ag leasú an Chonartha ar an Aontas Eorpach, na gConarthaí ag bunú na gComhphobal Eorpach agus Ionstraimí gaolmhara áirithe, a síníodh in Amstardam an 2ú lá de Dheireadh Fómhair, 1997, a dhaingniú.

The State may ratify the Treaty of Amsterdam amending the Treaty on European Union, the Treaties establishing the European Communities and certain related Acts signed at Amsterdam on the 2nd day of October, 1997.

6° Tig leis an Stát na roghnuithe nó na roghanna a fheidhmiú a shocraítear le hAirteagail 1.11, 2.5 agus

NA LEASUITHE IS DEIREANAÍ

2.15 den Chonradh dá dtagraítear i bhfo-alt 5° den alt seo nó fúthu agus leis an dara Prótacal agus leis an gceathrú Prótacal atá leagtha amach sa Chonradh sin nó fúthu ach beidh aon fheidhmiú den sórt sin faoi réir ceadú a fháil roimh ré ó dhá Theach an Oireachtais.

The State may exercise the options or discretions provided by or under Articles 1.11, 2.5 and 2.15 of the Treaty referred to in subsection 5° of this section and the second and fourth Protocols set out in the said Treaty but any such exercise shall be subject to the prior approval of both Houses of the Oireachtas.

7° Ni dhéanann aon fhoráileamh atá sa Bhunreacht seo aon dlíthe a d'achtaigh, gníomhartha a rinne nó bearta lenar ghlac an Stát, de bhíthin riachtanais na n-oibleagáidí mar chomhalta den Aontas Eorpach nó de na Comhphobail a chur ó bhail dlí ná cosc a chur le dlíthe a d'achtaigh, gníomhartha a rinne nó bearta lenar ghlac an tAontas Eorpach nó na Comhphobail nó institiúidí díobh, nó comhlachtaí atá inniúil faoi na Conarthaí ag bunú na gComhphobal, ó fheidhm dlí a bheith acu sa Stát. No provision of this Constitution invalidates laws enacted, acts done or measures adopted by the State which are necessitated by the obligations of membership of the European Union or of the Communities, or prevents laws enacted, acts done or measures adopted by the European Union or by the Communities or by institutions thereof, or by bodies competent under the Treaties establishing the Communities, from having the force of law in the State.

8° Tig leis an Stát an Comhaontú maidir le Paitinní Comhphobail a tarraingíodh suas idir Ballstáit na gComhphobal agus a rinneadh i Lucsamburg ar an 15ú lá de Nollaig, 1989, a dhaingniú.

The State may ratify the Agreement relating to Community Patents drawn up between the Member States of the Communities and done at Luxembourg on the 15th day of December, 1989.

Most of the terms and phrases found in ss4°, 5° and 8° are already found in ss3° and the Irish text of those new subsections is consistent with that of the earlier subsection. Note that 'amending' in ss5° could also be translated as 'lena leasaítear'. As noted above, ss7° is based on the original ss3°, with 'aon fhoráileamh' replacing 'aon fhoráil' of the original subsection, 'foráileamh' being the form of 'foráil' found in the original text of the Constitution, but being replaced by 'foráil' in the popular edition in general.

The subsections above did, nevertheless, introduce terms to the text which do not conform to those of the original text. As noted in the commentary on Article 3, 'exercise' is rendered by 'feidhmigh' in ss6°, as is the norm in the modern Acts, 'oibrigh' expressing 'exercise' in the text of the Constitution in general. As noted in the commentary on Article 12.5, 'subject to' is rendered above as 'faoi réir', following Téarmaí Dlí, 'faoi chuimsiú' generally expressing 'subject to' in the Constitution. Similarly 'ceadú' is the term found generally in the modern Acts translating 'approval', although this term is translated as 'formheas' in Téarmaí Dlí – see the commentary in Article 13.1.2°.

Article 28 was amended by the Seventeenth Amendment of the Constitution, 1997 (dealing with Cabinet confidentiality). Subsection 3° of Article 28.4 was renumbered as ss4° and the following new ss3° was inserted:

Déanfar rúndacht na bpléití ag cruinnithe den Rialtas a urramú i ngach toisc ach amháin i gcás ina gcinnfidh an Ard-Chúirt gur ceart nochtadh a dhéanamh i dtaobh ní áirithe –

i ar mhaithe le riaradh cirt ag Cúirt, nó ii de bhua leasa phoiblí sháraithe, de bhun iarratais chuige sin ó bhinse arna cheapadh ag an Rialtas nó ag Aire den Rialtas le húdarás Thithe an Oireachtais chun fiosrú a dhéanamh faoi ní a luafaidh siad ina thaobh go bhfuil tábhacht phoiblí ann.

The confidentiality of discussions at meetings of the Government shall be respected in all circumstances save only where the High Court determines that disclosure should be made in respect of a particular matter –

i in the interests of the administration of justice by a Court, or

ii by virtue of an overriding public interest, pursuant to an application in that behalf by a tribunal appointed by the Government or a Minister of the Government on the authority of the Houses of the Oireachtas to inquire into a matter stated by them to be of public importance.

Note how 'respect' ('a urramú') is translated literally here as against 'gan cur isteach ar' found in Articles 40.3.1° and 42.1; 'justice' is translated as 'ceartas' following Téarmaí Dlí as against 'ceart' in the Constitution in general. Note that Ó Dónaill gives 'riaradh' as a variant form of 'riar', 'riaradh' being the general form in the Acts; and note, finally, that we find the lenited nominative in the phrase 'le húdarás Thithe an Oireachtais', this rule of the official standard regarding the lenited nominative in place of the genitive not being complied with in general in the popular edition of the original text of the Constitution – see the commentary on Article 1.

Article 40.4.7° was added to the Constitution following the Sixteenth Amendment of the Constitution, 1996 (dealing with bail). This section reads as follows:

Féadfar socrú a dhéanamh le dlí chun go bhféadfaidh cúirt bannaí a dhiúltú do dhuine atá cúisithe i gcion tromaí sa chás go measfar le réasún é a bheith riachtanach chun an duine sin a chosc ar chion tromaí a dhéanamh.

Provision may be made by law for the refusal of bail by a court to a person charged with a serious offence where it is reasonably considered necessary to prevent the commission of a serious offence by that person.

'Charge' is translated here, following Téarmaí Dlí, by 'cúisigh', this not being the case always in the original text of the Constitution – see the commentary on Articles 12.10.2° and 3°. Note also that 'trom' (rather than 'tromaí') translates 'serious' in Téarmaí Dlí, where 'serious and permanent disablement' is translated as 'buan-mhíchumas trom'. 'Serious offence' is translated as 'cion tromaí' in the 'Interpretation' in s1 of the Extradition (European Convention on the Suppression of Terrorism) Act, 1987, with 'mura mbeidh cúiseanna tromaí ann chun a thiomhde go bhfuil earraí ann nach mbaineann na saoirseachtaí leo a luaitear i mír 1 den Airteagal seo' translating 'unless there are serious grounds for presuming that it contains articles not covered by the exemptions mentioned in paragraph 1 of this Article' in s2 of Article 36 of the First Schedule to the Diplomatic Relations and Immunities Act, 1967.

The final amendment to be touched on here is the lengthy Nineteenth Amendment of the Constitution, 1998 (dealing with the British-Irish Agreement), which added Article 29.7 to the Constitution. This section reads as follows:

1° Tig leis an Stát a thoilíú a bheith faoi cheangal ag Comhaontú na Breataine-na hÉireann, arna dhéanamh i mBéal Feirste an 10ú lá d'Aibreán, 1998, ar a dtugtar an Comhaontú sa Bhunreacht seo feasta. The State may consent to be bound by the British-Irish Agreement done at Belfast on the 10th day of April, 1998, hereinafter called the Agreement.

2° Tig le haon institiúid a bhunófar leis an gComhaontú nó faoin gComhaontú na cumhachtaí agus na feidhmeanna a fheidhmiú a thugtar di dá chionn sin i leith oileán na hÉireann ar fad nó i leith aon chuid de d'ainneoin aon fhorála eile den Bhunreacht seo lena dtugtar cumhacht nó feidhm dá samhail d'aon duine nó d'aon organ Stáit arna cheapadh faoin mBunreacht seo nó arna chruthú nó arna bhunú leis an mBunreacht seo nó faoin mBunreacht seo. Féadfaidh aon chumhacht nó aon fheidhm a thabharfar d'institiúid den sórt sin i ndáil le hacrainn nó conspóidí a réiteach nó a shocrú a bheith i dteannta nó in ionad aon chumhachta nó aon fheidhme dá samhail a thugtar leis an mBunreacht seo d'aon duine den sórt sin nó d'aon organ Stáit den sórt sin mar a d'ádh.

Any institution established by or under the Agreement may exercise the powers and functions thereby conferred on it in respect of all or any part of the island of Ireland notwithstanding any other provision of this Constitution conferring a like power or function on any person or any organ of State appointed under or created or established by or under this Constitution. Any power or function conferred on such an institution in relation to the settlement or resolution of disputes or controversies may be in addition to or in substitution for any like power or function conferred by this Constitution on any such person or organ of State as aforesaid.

3° Má dhearbhaíonn an Rialtas go bhfuil an Stát tagtha chun bheith faoi oibleagáid, de bhun an Chomhaontaithe, éifeacht a thabhairt don leasú ar an mBunreacht seo dá dtagraítear sa Chomhaontú sin, ansin, d'ainneoin Airteagal 46 den Bhunreacht seo, déanfar an Bunreacht seo a leasú mar a leanas: If the Government declare that the State has become obliged, pursuant to the Agreement, to give effect to the amendment of this Constitution referred to therein, then, notwithstanding Article 46 hereof, this Constitution shall be amended as follows:

i déanfar na hAirteagail seo a leanas a chur in ionad Airteagail 2 agus 3 den téacs Gaeilge:
i the following Articles shall be substituted for Articles 2 and 3 of the Irish text:

"Airteagal 2

Tá gach duine a shaoilaítear in oileán na hÉireann, ar a n-áirítear a oileáin agus a fharraigí, i dteideal, agus tá de cheart oidhreachta aige nó aici, a bheith páirteach i náisiún na hÉireann. Tá an teideal sin freisin ag na daoine go léir atá cáilithe ar shlí eile de réir dlí chun bheith ina saoránaigh d'Éirinn. Ina theannta sin, is mór ag náisiún na hÉireann a choibhneas speisialta le daoine de bhunadh na hÉireann atá ina gcónaí ar an gcoigríoch agus arb ionann féiniúlacht agus oidhreacht chultúir dóibh agus do náisiún na hÉireann.

Airteagal 3

1 Is í toil dhiongbháilte náisiún na hÉireann, go sítheach cairdiúil, na daoine go léir a chomhroinneann críoch oileán na hÉireann i bpáirt lena chéile, in éagsúlacht uile a bhféiniúlachtaí agus a dtraidisiún, a aontú, á aithint gur trí mhodhanna síochánta amháin le toiliú thromlach na ndaoine, á chur in iúl go daonlathach, sa dá dhlíne san oileán, a dhéanfar Éire aontaithe a thabhairt i gcrích. Go dtí sin, bainfidh na dlíthe a achtófar ag an bParlaimint a bhunaítear leis an mBunreacht seo leis an limistéar feidhme céanna, agus beidh an raon feidhme céanna acu, lena bhain na dlíthe, agus a bhí ag na dlíthe, a d'achtaigh an Pharlaimint a bhí ar marthain díreach roimh theacht i ngníomh don Bhunreacht seo.

2 Féadfaidh údaráis fhreagracha faoi seach na ndlísin sin institiúidí ag a mbeidh cumhachtaí agus feidhmeanna feidhmiúcháin a chomhroinntear idir na dlínsí sin a bhunú chun críoch sonraithe agus féadfaidh na hinstitiúidí sin cumhachtaí agus feidhmeanna a fheidhmiú i leith an oileáin ar fad nó i leith aon chuid de.”

ii déanfar na hAirteagail seo a leanas a chur in ionad Airteagal 2 agus 3 den téacs Sacs-Bhéarla:
ii the following Articles shall be substituted for Articles 2 and 3 of the English text:

“Article 2

It is the entitlement and birthright of every person born in the island of Ireland, which includes its islands and seas, to be part of the Irish nation. That is also the entitlement of all persons otherwise qualified in accordance with law to be citizens of Ireland. Furthermore, the Irish nation cherishes its special affinity with people of Irish ancestry living abroad who share its cultural identity and heritage.

Article 3

1 It is the firm will of the Irish nation, in harmony and friendship, to unite all the people who share the territory of the island of Ireland, in all the diversity of their identities and traditions, recognising that a united Ireland shall be brought about only by peaceful means with the consent of a majority of the people, democratically expressed, in both jurisdictions in the island. Until then, the laws enacted by the Parliament established by this Constitution shall have the like area and extent of application as the laws enacted by the Parliament that existed immediately before the coming into operation of this Constitution.

2 Institutions with executive powers and functions that are shared between those jurisdictions may be established by their respective responsible authorities for stated purposes and may exercise powers and functions in respect of all or any part of the island.”, iii déanfar an t-alt seo a leanas a chur leis an téacs Gaeilge den Airteagal seo:

iii the following section shall be added to the Irish text of this Article:

“8 Tig leis an Stát dlínse a fheidhmiú taobh amuigh dá chrioch de réir bhunrialacha gnáth-admhaithe an dlí idirnáisiúnta.”,

agus
and

iv déanfar an t-alt seo a leanas a chur leis an téacs Sacs-Bhéarla den Airteagal seo:

iv the following section shall be added to the English text of this Article:

“8 The State may exercise extra-territorial jurisdiction in accordance with the generally recognised principles of international law.”.

4° Má dhéantar dearbhú faoin alt seo, déanfar an fo-alt seo agus fo-alt 3°, seachas an leasú ar an mBunreacht seo a dhéantar leis an bhfo-alt sin 3°, agus fo-alt 5°, den alt seo a fhágáil ar lár as gach téacs oifigiúil den Bhunreacht seo a fhoilseofar dá éis sin, ach d'ainneoin iad a fhágáil ar lár amhlaidh leanfaidh an t-alt seo d'fheidhm dlí a bheith aige.

If a declaration under this section is made, this subsection and subsection 3°, other than the amendment of this Constitution effected thereby, and subsection 5°, of this section shall be omitted from every official text of this Constitution published thereafter, but notwithstanding such omission this section shall continue to have the force of law.

5° Mura ndéanfar dearbhú den sórt sin laistigh de dhá mhí dhéag ón tráth a chuirfear an t-alt seo leis an mBunreacht seo nó cibé tréimhse is faide ná sin a shocrófar le dlí, scoirfidh an t-alt seo d'éifeacht a bheith leis agus fágfar ar lár é as gach téacs oifigiúil den Bhunreacht seo a fhoilseofar dá éis sin.

If such a declaration is not made within twelve months of this section being added to this Constitution or such longer period as may be provided for by law, this section shall cease to have effect and shall be omitted from every official text of this Constitution published thereafter.

This is a very literal translation of the English text favouring modern Irish legal terms and the phraseology of the modern Acts to the terminology and phraseology of the text of the Constitution in general. Thus ‘consent’ is translated as ‘toiliú’ in the proposed new Article 3 (as against ‘toil’ in Article 12.9, for example); ‘exercise’ is translated as ‘feidhmigh’ in ss2° above (as against ‘oibrigh’ in the Constitution in general); ‘has become’ is translated as ‘tagtha chun bheith’ in ss3° (see the commentary on Article 9.1.1°) and ‘within’ is translated as ‘laistigh’ in ss5° (as against ‘taobh istigh de’ in the Constitution in general). On the other hand, following Article 29.3, ‘the generally recognised principles of international law’ is rendered as ‘bunrialacha gnáth-admhaithe an dlí idirnáisiúnta’ in the new Article 29.8 contained in Article 29.7.3° above. In s66(2) of the Central Bank Act, 1989, for example, ‘the general principles which guide the Bank’ is translated as

'na prionsabail ghinearálta a bhíonn mar threoir ag an mBanc', 'de réir ghnáthphrionsabail an dlí' translating 'in accordance with general principles of law' in Article 67 of the Fourth Schedule to the Geneva Conventions Act, 1962, and 'Prionsabail Ghinearálta' translating 'General Principles' in the Heading for s55 of the 'Clare County Scheme' in the First Schedule to the Local Government (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1923.

As stated in the text of the amendment above, it is intended that subsections 5°, 4° and 3° of Article 29.7 be omitted in due course from the official text of the Constitution and that the new Articles 2 and 3 contained in Article 29.7.3° be substituted for the original Articles 2 and 3. Note that 'territory', in 'the territory of the island of Ireland' in Article 3.1, is translated literally by the singular 'críoch' ('críoch oileán na hÉireann') as against the plural 'críocha' of the original Article 2, where 'The national territory consists of the whole island of Ireland' is expressed as 'Is é oileán na hÉireann go hiomlán ... na críocha náisiúnta' – see the commentary on Article 2 regarding 'críocha' v. 'críoch'. In Article 3.2 we find 'exercise' translated by the current term in the Acts, 'feidhmigh', rather than the term in the Constitution in general, 'oibrigh'. 'Executive' is translated by the genitive singular of 'feidhmiúchán' as an attributive adjective rather than as 'comhallacht' as in Article 6.1, or the adjective 'comhallach' as in Articles 28.2, 29.4.1°, 29.4.2° and 49.1.

As stated in the introductory essay, the new Article 2 introduced gender-proofing in an otherwise non-gender-proofed text, with 'tá de cheart oidhreachta aige nó aici' translating 'It is the ... birthright (of every person)'. Note that in order to gender-proof the preceding subsection in this amendment (Article 29.7.2°), 'd'aon duine nó d'aon organ Stáit arna cheapadh faoin mBunreacht seo' ('on any person or any organ of State appointed under ... this Constitution') would have to read 'd'aon duine nó d'aon organ Stáit arna cheapadh nó arna ceapadh faoin mBunreacht seo' – Professor Máirtín Ó Murchú recommends 'd'aon duine nó d'aon organ Stáit dá gceapfaí faoin mBunreacht seo' here.

Note, finally, that 'oidhreachta' occurs twice in the new Article 2, translating 'heritage' in the concluding clause of this Article, with 'ceart oidhreachta' translating 'birthright' of the opening clause. 'Oidhreachta' is translated as 'inheritance, heredity; heritage, patrimony' in Ó Dónaill, citing 'thréig siad a n-oidhreachta, they forsook their heritage' and 'oidhreachta ár sinsear, our ancestral heritage, patrimony' – note that s.v. 'ceart', Ó Dónaill translates 'ceart dúchais' as 'hereditary right'. Dinneen translates 'oidhreachta' as 'an inheritance, heirloom, birthright, patrimony'. DIL translates 'eigrecht'/'oigrecht' as 'inheritance, heritage, patrimony, (inherited) possession'. This abstract noun is based on 'eigre'/'oigre', translated in DIL as 'heir, inheritor, successor, descendant (often equivalent to mac)'; the earliest dateable example recorded is 'eigher' in a thirteenth-century poem, but 'eigre' ('oigre'), the commoner form, may be older, according to DIL.

Turning specifically to 'birthright', Dinneen cites 'ceart beirthe, birth-right' s.v. 'ceart'. L. Mc Cionnaith cites 'ceart do shinnsearachta', from Munster, translating 'your birth right'. Historically, 'sinsearachta' alone expresses 'birthright'. The year 1535 is given for the earliest citation of 'birthright' in the Shorter Oxford Dictionary, where Jacob's response to his brother Esau's request for food, 'Sell me this daye thy byrth-right', is cited from Genesis xxv. 31. This is rendered as 'Reic liom do cheart sinsearachta ar dtús más ea' in the modern 'Maynooth' Bible. This biblical episode is echoed in the Irish saga 'Echtra mhac nEchach' ('The Adventures of the Sons of Eochaid'), with the Goddess of Sovereignty telling the young Niall 'ná tabair-seo in t-usce dod braithrib co tucad aisceda dait .i. co tucud a sindisirdacht duid', translated by Standish Hayes O'Grady as 'to thy brothers deal not water until they give thee conditions: till they yield thee their birthright'. DIL translates 'sinsirecht'/'sinseracht' as 'seniority, birthright', citing examples from the twelfth-century Book of Leinster onwards. DIL also includes 'seniority, birthright' among the senses of the headword 'sinserdacht'. Both headwords are developments of 'sinser', translated as 'the elder, the eldest; a senior, in plural, elders, ancestors, forefathers' in DIL. Dinneen translates the phrase 'de shinnsearachta' as 'by inheritance', and cites from the epigram by Roibeard Mac Artúir (fl. 1606-1626), 'sinsearachta ní ghabhann ceart i dtír do ghabhtar le neart, ancestry counts for naught in a conquered land'. This epigram in particular, the author feels, would have won a place for 'sinsearachta' over the repetition of 'oidhreachta' were the new Article 2 found in the original 1937 Constitution.

APPENDIX 5 FOSCRÍBHINN 5

1999 ENROLLED IRISH TEXT AN TÉACS GAELGE MAR A ROLLAÍODH I 1999

Under Article 63 – a Transitory Provision – a copy of the Constitution signed by the Taoiseach, the Chief Justice and the Chairman of Dáil Éireann must be enrolled for record purposes in the office of the Registrar of the Supreme Court, such enrolled text being the conclusive evidence of the provisions of the Constitution. This was done in 1938. Under Article 25.5, further enrolments took place in 1942, 1980, 1990 and in 1999 to embody amendments. The authentic version of the Irish text, then, is that passed by the people in 1937, as subsequently amended under the Constitution, and enrolled. The following is the Irish text (excluding the Transitory Provisions, in accordance with their own terms) as enrolled on 27 May 1999.

Bunreacht na hÉireann

1 nAinm na Tríonóide Ró-*Naomh*ta is tobar don uile ugharás agus sur cuice, ós í is críóc éireannaic úinn, is dírište ní haíáin gñíomharcta daoine ac gñíomharcta stáct,

AR mbeic úinne, muintear na hÉireann, as aomáil so huiriseal a méio atámaio fá comaoim as íosa críost, ar uirisearna Dia, eus comfurtaic dár sinsearaib i nshac cruadotan 'na rabadar ar feo na scéadta bliadon,

ASUS AR mbeic úinn as cuínniú so buideac ar a calmaic do rinneadar-san troio gan staoic ac an neim-spleadac is dual dár náisiún do bamt amac,

ASUS AR mbeic úinn dá cur roimainn an máiteas poiblice do cur ar asaió maille le críonnaic agus le hionnracas agus le carctannaic do réir mar is cuáió, ionnas so uiofao linn a uaisleac agus a saoirse do cur i n-áirice do sac don uime, saosal ceart comhadonnaic do bunú, aiseas a haonadca do eadairt dár uir, agus comcaradradó do uéanam le náisiúnaib eile, atámaio leis seo as gabáil an bunreacca so eusainn, agus dá acú agus dá tíolacaó úinn réin.

an náisiún.

airteasal 1.

Deimhseann náisiún na hÉireann leis seo a scéart do-shannca, do-claoirte, ceannasac eun cibé cinéal Ríadaltais is rosa leo réin do bunú, eun a scaireain le náisiúnaib eile do cinnead, agus eun a saosal poiliticeac is seilleasair is saoireac do cur ar asaió do réir úicac is gnás a sinsear.

airteasal 2.

is é oileán na hÉireann so hiomlán, maille le n-a oileáin agus a fáirrsí teorann, na críoca náisiúnta.

airteasal 3.

SO uir so noeantar ac-comlánú ar na críocáib náisiúnta, agus gan uocar do ceart na párlaiminte is an Ríadaltais a bunuictear leis an mbunreacac so eun uirise do'uibriú msna críocáib náisiúnta uile, bainfio na uiriste acúocar as an bpárlaimint sin leis an límistéir céadna le n-ar bain uiriste saorstac éireann, agus beio an éireacac céadna ac a taob amuis den límistéir sin a bí as uiricib saorstac éireann.

an stáct.

airteasal 4.

Éire is ainm don stáct nó, sa tsacs-béarla, Ireland.

airteasal 5.

is stáct ceannasac, neim-spleadac, daon-pladac éire.

airteasal 6.

1. is ón bpobal, fá Dia, a uiseas sac cumacac ríadla, uoir reacacúeacac is comallacac is breicéainnas, agus is as an bpobal atá sé de ceart ríadlóirí an stáit do ceapad, agus is fáin bpobal fá ueio atá sac ceist i uiaob beartas an náisiúin do sócrú do réir mar is gabad eun leas an pobail.

2. is leis na horzanaib stáit a cuirtear ar bun leis an mbunreacac so, agus leo sin aináin nó le n-a n-ugharás, is réioir na cumacca ríadla sin do'uibriú.

airteasal 7.

An uradac trí noac .i. uaine, bán, agus plannbuio, an suaicéantas náisiúnta.

airteasal 8.

1. Ós í an shéoilis an teansa náisiúnta is í an príin-teansa oiriseáil í.

2. glactar leis an sacs-béarla mar *teansa*in oiriseáil eile.

3. Acé féadfar socrú do dhéanamh le tliḡeasó d'fonn ceactar den dá cheanḡam sin do beic ina haon-cheanḡam le haḡairé don ḡnó nó ḡnócaí oifḡeainḡa ar fuair an Stáit ar fáil nó i n-aon éuro de.

ḡirteasáil 9.

1. 1° Ar cheact i nḡnóim don bhunreacht so is saoránaḡ d'Éirinn don duine ba saoránaḡ de saorstáct Éireann díreac roim cheact i nḡnóim don bhunreacht so.

2° Is do réir tliḡiḡó a cinnḡear faḡáil agus cailleanaint náisiúntaḡt agus saoránaḡct Éireann feasta.

3° Ní ceao náisiúntaḡt agus saoránaḡct Éireann do ceilt ar duine ar bit toisc ḡur fireann nó toisc ḡur baineanḡ an duine sin.

2. Is bun-tuallḡas poiliticeac ar ḡac saoránaḡ beic dílis don náisiún agus tairiseac don Stáct.

ḡirteasáil 10.

1. ḡac adbar maoine nádúrca, mar don leis an aer agus ḡac adbar fionnóim, dá bfuil fá tliḡimse na ḡárlaiminte agus an Riáḡalcais a bunuḡḡear leis an mbunreacht so, maille le ḡac rí-cíos agus díolmáine dá bfuil fá tliḡimse sin, is leis an Stáct iao uile, ḡan doḡar do cibé eastáit agus leasan-na is le haon duine nó le haon dream so oleaḡcaḡ i n-alc na huair.
2. ḡac talainḡ agus ḡac mianac, mianraḡ, agus uisce ba le saorstáct Éireann díreac roim cheact i nḡnóim don bhunreacht so is leis an Stáct iao uile sa méir so mba le saorstáct Éireann an uair sin iao.
3. Féadfar socrú do dhéanamh le tliḡeasó cun bainistḡe do dhéanamh ar an maoin is leis an Stáct de buao an ḡirteasáil seo, agus cun sannaḡ buan nó sannaḡ sealaḡac na maoine sin do riáḡlú.
4. Féadfar socrú do dhéanamh le tliḡeasó, fairis sin, cun bainistḡe do dhéanamh ar talainḡ, ar mianaiḡ, ar mianraiḡe agus ar uiscí tíocpas i seilb an Stáit d'éis teact i nḡnóim don bhunreacht so, agus cun sannaḡ buan nó sannaḡ sealaḡac na talainḡ, na mianac, na mianraḡ agus na n-uiscí a tíocpas ina seilb ainlaḡo do riáḡlú.

ḡirteasáil 11.

Ní foḡair cíos uile an Stáit cibé bunao atá leis, acé ainḡin an éuro sin de ar a nḡeantar eisceaḡt le tliḡeasó, do cur i n-aon císte ainḡin, agus é do leic-ḡabáil cun na ḡcriḡeanḡa, agus ar an móo, a cinnḡear le tliḡeasó agus fá cuimsiú na muirear agus na bfeiceainḡas a ḡearrḡear le tliḡeasó.

ḡn tuactarain.

ḡirteasáil 12.

1. Beic uactarain ar Éirinn (.i. uactarain na héireann), ar a dtuḡtar an tuactarain insan bhunreacht so feasta; beic tosaḡ aḡe ar ḡac uile duine insan Stáct, agus ní foḡair do na cuinaḡca agus na feadmanḡa a beirḡear don uactarain leis an mbunreacht so agus le tliḡeasó d'oibriú agus do coimḡionao.

2. 1° Le bóca lom-díreac an ḡobail a toḡfar an tuactarain.

2° ḡac saoránaḡ aḡ a bfuil ceart bócaḡa i toḡcán do coimḡalcaib de Óáil Éireann, beic ceart bócaḡa aḡe i toḡcán don uactarain.

3° Is le rún-ballóir agus do réir na hionadaiḡeacca cionnáiḡe agus ar móo an aon-ḡoḡa ionaistriḡe a dhéanḡar an bócaḡil.

3. 1° Beic an tuactarain i seilb oifḡe so ceann seaḡt mbliadḡan ón lá raḡairé i ḡcúram a oifḡe muna dtárluigiḡo roim dhéireao an téarma sin so n-éaḡfaiḡo nó so n-éireoḡair as oifḡe nó so ḡcuirḡear as oifḡe é, nó so nḡeobair míḡreoir buan é agus so suiḡḡear sin so sásaḡ na cúirte uactaraiḡe agus i coimḡeantḡa de cúḡeair breicéainḡan ar a laiḡeao.

2° Duine atá nó a bí ina uactarain, is iontoḡca cun na hoifḡe sin é don uair ainḡin eile, acé sin a mbeic.

3° Ní foḡair toḡcán d'oifḡe an uactarain do dhéanamh lá nac dhéireanaiḡe ná dáca dhéireao téarma oifḡe ḡac uactarain ar leic agus nac luaiḡe ná an seascadmaḡo lá roim an dáca sin, acé má cuirḡear an tuactarain as oifḡe, nó má tárluigiḡeann do (roim é do dól i ḡcúram a oifḡe nó dá éis sin) é d'eaḡ nó é d'éirḡe as nó míḡreoir buan ar n-a suiḡeainḡ mar adubraḡo dá ḡábdáil, ní foláir toḡcán d'oiḡis an uáctaráin do dhéanán táb istis de seasc lá tar éis an ní sin do éarlaáctaint.

4. 1° ḡac saoránac as a bfuil cúis bliáona tríócádo slán, is iontoḡta cun oiḡis an uáctaráin é.

2° ḡac iarrtóir d'oiḡis an uáctaráin, seácas duine acá nó bí ina uáctarán éana, is uáca so leanas nac foláir a ainmniú do éeáct:

- i. píce duine ar a laiḡeao agus ḡac duine fá leic dhóibh sin ina cóimálta, i n-álc na huair, de tḡis de tḡicḡib an Oireáctais, nó
- ii. Cóimairlí ceitre cóntae riaraácaim ar a laiḡeao (agus cóntae-ḡuirḡí d'áireain) mar míniḡtear le dlḡeao.

3° Ní ceao d'áon duine ná d'áon cóimairle dhóibh sin beic páirteac i n-ainmniú breis is áon iarrtóir áhain d'oiḡis an uáctaráin san áon-toḡcán.

4° Tḡis le haon duine acá nó a bí ina uáctarán é péin d'ainmniú d'oiḡis an uáctaráin.

5° Nuair ná hainmniḡtear d'oiḡis an uáctaráin ac áon iarrtóir áhain, ní ḡábdádo dhóibh cun é toḡca.

5. fá cúimsiú foráilcí an áirteasail seo is le dlḡeao riáḡlócar toḡcáin d'oiḡis an uáctaráin.

6. 1° ní ceao an tuáctarán do beic ina cóimálta de dháil éireann ná de sheanao éireann.

2° Má toḡtar cóimálta de ceáctar de tḡicḡib an Oireáctais cun beic ina uáctarán, ní foláir a meas ḡo bfuil scárta aḡe le cóimáltas an tḡise sin.

3° ní ceao don uáctarán áon oiḡis ná post soáir do beic aḡe seácas a oiḡis uáctaráin.

7. ní foláir don céao uáctarán dul i ḡcúram a oiḡise cóim luac agus is péidoir é tar éis é toḡca, agus ní foláir do ḡac uáctarán dhá éis sin dul i ḡcúram a oiḡise an lá i n-oiáio veireao téarma oiḡise a réain-éaáctaióe nó cóim luac agus is péidoir é dhá éis sin nó, má éarluiḡeann dhá réain-éaáctaióe ḡo ḡcúir-pear as oiḡis é nó ḡo n-éaḡeaióe nó ḡo n-éireoáio as oiḡis nó neáctar acá ḡo nḡeobáio mítreoir buan é agus ḡo suiópear sin mar socruiḡtear le hál. 3 den áirteasail so, cóim luac agus is péidoir é tar éis an toḡcáin.

8. is é slḡe a raácaio an tuáctaráin i ḡcúram a oiḡise ná leis an dearbádo so leanas do dhéanán ḡo poiblíóe aḡus a lámh do cur leis i bhfiáónaise cóimáltaí den dhá tḡis den Oireáctas, agus breiteainna den cúirt uáctaraíḡ agus den áro-cúirt agus maice poiblíóe eile:-

“I lácair dhá na nuile-cúmaáct, táimse, dhá ḡealláinaint agus dhá dearbádo ḡo sollamannta is ḡo pírimneac beic im áca agus im dhóin do dhunreáct éireann, agus a dlḡicḡe do áoinna, mo dháḡais do cóimlíonádo ḡo dháis coimsiasac do réir an dhunreáctas is an dlḡicḡe, agus mo lán-díceall a dhéanán ar son leasa is róḡnainn míunḡir na héireann. dhá dom stiúrao agus dom cúmhádo.”

9. ní ceao don uáctarán imeáct ón stáct le linn é beic i n-oiḡis, ac áhain le toil an riáḡaltais.

10. 1° péaḡear an tuáctarán do táinseain as uéct mí-íomáir a luáḡear.

2° Ceáctar de tḡicḡib an Oireáctais a dhéanfas an cúisiú agus is fá cúimsiú agus do réir foráilcí an áil seo dhéanfas é.

3° Má tairḡtear do ceáctar de tḡicḡib an Oireáctais cúis do ádhairt i n-aḡáio an uáctaráin fáin álc so ní ceao áirto do ádhairt ar an dhairḡsint sin ac áhain de dharr róḡra tairḡseana i scrúibinn fá lámh tríóca cóimálta ar a laiḡeao den tḡis sin.

4° ní ceao do ceáctar de tḡicḡib an Oireáctais ḡlacádo le haon tairḡsint den tsórt sin ac áhain de dharr rúin ón tḡis sin le n-a mbeio tacaioeáct dhá dhrián ar a laiḡeao dhá lán-cóimáltas.

5° Má dhéanann ceáctar de tḡicḡib an Oireáctais cúisiú fáin álc so ní foláir don tḡis eile an cúis do scrúoádo nó an cúis do cur dhá scrúoádo.

6° Beio de ceart as an uáctarán beic i lácair agus luéct tairḡta do beic aḡe ar an scrúoádo sin.

7° Máas é torádo an scrúoáta sin ḡo riḡpear rúin, le tacaioeáct dhá dhrián ar a laiḡeao de lán-cóimáltas an tḡise den Oireáctas do scrúoiḡis an cúis nó do cúir an cúis dá scrúdaí, dá dtearbháid gur suirbhéid an cúis a tuasáil i n-ádhaidh an uachtaráin agus, an mí-iomláir ba síocair don chúisiú, gur mí-iomláir é go bhfuil an tuachtarán neamh-oireadhaic dá dteascáil cun fanaidhaint i seilbh oifige, isé is feidhm don rún sin an tuachtarán do chúir as oifige.

11. 1° Beid stáit-árus as an uachtarán i gcaitair bháile áda cliaic nó ar a comhgar.

2° Seobáid an tuachtarán sócáir agus allúntais fá mar cinnfeas le bliagáid.

3° Ní cead lagtóú do dteanaim ar sócáir ná ar allúntais an uachtaráin le linn é beid i n-oifige.

Áirteagáil 13.

1. 1° Ceapfaid an tuachtarán an taoiseac .1. an ceann ríagáiltais nó an príomh-áire, ar n-a ainmniú sin as dáil éireann.

2° Ar n-a n-ainmniú as an taoiseac, le comáontad dáil éireann roim ré, ceapfaid an tuachtarán na comáltaí eile den ríagáiltais.

3° Ar comáirle an taoisig ní foláir don uachtarán ghlacáid le haon comálta den ríagáiltais d'éirge as oifige, nó comálta ar bid den ríagáiltais do chúir as oifige.

2. 1° Is é an tuachtarán, ar comáirle an taoisig, a comórfeas agus a lán-scoirfeas dáil éireann.

2° Tis leis an uachtarán, as a comáirle féin, diúltaid do dáil éireann do lán-scor ar comáirle taoisig ná leann tromlaic i n-dáil éireann de beid i dtacáidheac leis.

3° Tis leis an uachtarán uair ar bid, tar éis comáirle do ghlacáid leis an gcomáirle stáit, ceacáir de tígáib an oireadtais, nó iad ardon, do comórad.

3. 1° Gac bille rítear nó a meastar a rítead as dá tís an oireadtais ní foláir lán an uachtaráin do beid leis cun é acú ma bliagáid.

2° Gac bliagáid dá ndéanfaid an toireadtais ní foláir don uachtarán é fócairt.

4. Leis seo cuirtear na fórsaí Cosanta fá ártó-áeannas an uachtaráin.

5. 1° An t-ártó-áeannas ar na fórsaí Cosanta is le bliagáid a ríaglócair an moó ar a n-oibreocáir é.

2° Is ón uachtarán a beid a gáirm as gac oifigeac gárima de na fórsaí Cosanta.

6. Beirtear don uachtarán leis seo ceart maiteadhaicais, agus cuimacáit cun maolúighe nó lošta pionóis a gearrtear ar dáomib i n-aon cúirt bliagáinse coire, ac, taob amuis de áasanna breite báis, féadfar an cuimacáit maolúighe nó lošta sin do tabáirt le bliagáid d'ugárasáil eile freisin.

7. 1° Tis leis an uachtarán, tar éis comáirle do ghlacáid leis an gcomáirle stáit, teacáireacáit nó áiteasc do chúir fá bráidáid tígáit an oireadtais i dtacáid don ní a bhfuil tabáic náisiúnta nó tabáic poiblíde ann.

2° Tis leis an uachtarán uair ar bid, tar éis comáirle do ghlacáid leis an gcomáirle stáit, áiteasc do chúir fá bráidáid an náisiúin i dtacáid don ní den tsórt sin.

3° Ac i n-gac cás díob sin ní foláir an ríagáiltais do beid sásta roim ré leis an teacáireacáit nó leis an áiteasc.

8. 1° Níl an tuachtarán freagáicac d'aon tis den oireadtais ná d'aon cúirt i n-oibriú is i gcomlíonad cuimacáit is feadomanna a oifige ná i n-aon gníom dá ndéanann sé nó a beireann le tuigsint gur gníom é a dteanann sé i n-oibriú agus i gcomlíonad na gcuimacáit is na bfeadomanna sin.

2° Ac féadfar iomláir an uachtaráin do chúir fá léirneas i gceacáir de tígáib an oireadtais cun críceanna áit 10 d'áirteagáil 12 den bunreacáit so, nó as don cúirt, binnse nó comluic a ceapfar nó a ainmneocáir as ceacáir de tígáib an oireadtais cun cúis fá áit 10 den áirteagáil sin do scrúdaid.

9. Taob amuis de áas dá socruighear leis an mbunreacáit so go ngníomháid an uachtarán as a comáirle féin, nó tar éis comáirle do ghlacáid leis an gcomáirle stáit, nó go ngníomháid sé i dtacáid ní a báneas leis an gcomáirle stáit, nó ar comáirle nó ainmniú don duine nó don dreanna eile, nó ar don scéala eile d'fáidáil ó don duine nó don dreanna eile, is ar comáirle an ríagáiltais áháin is cead don uachtarán na cuimacáta agus na feadomanna a beirtear do leis an mbunreacáit so d'oibriú is do comlíonad.

10. Fá cúimsiú an bhunreácta so féadfar tuilleadh cumhacht agus feadomanna do tadhairt don uachtarán le tligheadh.
11. Ní ceas do uachtarán aon cumhacht ná feidhm dá mbronntar air le tligheadh d'oisiríú ná do choimhlíonadh ac aithne ar choimairle an Rialtais.

Airteagal 14.

1. Má bhíonn an tuachtarán as láthair nó má bhíonn ar mítreoir go sealadach, nó má bhíonn ar mítreoir go buan agus go suíofear sin mar socrúistear le halt 3 d'airteagal 12 den bhunreáct so, nó má tairluiseann é d'éas nó é d'éirise as oifis nó é do cur as oifis, nó má teipeann air cumhachta is feadomanna a oifise nó aon ceann díob d'oisiríú is do choimhlíonadh, nó má bhíonn oifis an uachtaráin poláin, is Coimisiún a beas coimhdeanta mar socrúistear i n-Alt 2 den Airteagal so oibreochas is coimhlíonpas na cumhachta is na feadomanna bronntar ar an uachtarán leis an mbunreáct so nó fé.
2. 1° Is iad na daoine seo leanas an Coimisiún, .i. an Prímh-Úreiteán, Cachtairleac Óáil Éireann (An Ceann Coimairle) agus Cachtairleac Seanad Éireann.
- 2° Gníomhócair uachtaráin na hárd-cúirte ina coimhachta den Coimisiún i n-ionadh an Prímh-Úreiteán aon uair a beas oifis an Prímh-Úreiteán poláin nó a beas an Prímh-Úreiteán san beir i scumas gníomhuighe.
- 3° Gníomhócair Leas-Cachtairleac Óáil Éireann ina coimhachta den Coimisiún i n-ionadh Cachtairleac Óáil Éireann aon uair a beas oifis Cachtairleac Óáil Éireann poláin nó a beas an Cachtairleac sin san beir i scumas gníomhuighe.
- 4° Gníomhócair Leas-Cachtairleac Seanad Éireann ina coimhachta den Coimisiún i n-ionadh Cachtairleac Seanad Éireann aon uair a beas oifis Cachtairleac Seanad Éireann poláin nó a beas an Cachtairleac sin san beir i scumas gníomhuighe.
3. Is oleaghad do don Coimisiún gníomú tré beirt ar bit dá líon agus gníomú d'aindeoin poláinanta is ina scómaltas.
4. Féadfar an Coimairle Stáit, le tromlac dá scómaltas, cibé socrú is oirceas leo do téanaí cun na cumhachta agus na feadomanna bronntar ar an uachtarán leis an mbunreáct so nó fé d'oisiríú is do choimhlíonadh i n-aon éas ná téantat socrú ina coimair leis na foráiltí sin romáin den Airteagal so.

5. 1° Na foráiltí den bhunreáct so a baineas leis an uachtarán d'oisiríú is do choimhlíonadh na scumhacht is na bfeadomanna a bronntar air leis an mbunreáct so nó fé bainfio, fá cúimsiú na bforáiltí i n-ar ndiaid den alt so, le hoibríú is le coimhlíonadh na scumhacht is na bfeadomanna san fán Airteagal so.

2° Má teipeann ar an uachtarán aon cumhacht nó feidhm d'oisiríú nó do choimhlíonadh ná poláir dó, do réir an bhunreácta so nó fé, í d'oisiríú nó do choimhlíonadh fá ceann aimsire luaitear, ní poláir í d'oisiríú nó do choimhlíonadh fán Airteagal so com luac agus is feidhm é tar éis na haimsire luaitear aithair.

AN PÁRLAIMINT NÁISIÚNTA.

Coimhdeanaí agus Cumhachta.

Airteagal 15.

1. 1° An tOireáctas is ainm don Párlaimint Náisiúnta, agus sin é a beirtear uirtí de ghad sa bhunreáct so.
- 2° An tuachtarán agus dá tís adá insan Oireáctas: Tís ionadóirí ar a dtuhtar Óáil Éireann, agus Seanad ar a dtuhtar Seanad Éireann.
- 3° Is i scadair Úaile dá Cluac nó ar a comhar, nó cibé áit eile ar a scinnfio ó am go ham, a suíofio tíghe an Oireáctas.
2. 1° Beirtear don Oireáctas aithne leis seo an t-aon cumhacht cun tlighe do téanaí don Stáit; níl cumhacht as ugharás reáctairdeácta ar bit eile cun tlighe do téanaí don Stáit.
- 2° Ac féadfar socrú do téanaí le tlighe cun ró-reáctas do cur ar bun nó cun glacda leo, agus cun cumhachta agus feadomanna na bpo-reáctas sin do leagadh amac.

3. 1° Tíς leis an Oireáctas sócrú do théarmaí cun comhairlí feadomhanais is farrma beaáó, a ionaduiđeas ranna de saóşal cómhóannaó aşus de saóşal şeilleaşraó an řobail, do cur ar bun nó şlacáó leo.

2° Ulişeaó ar bié le n-a şcuirtear comhairle den tsórt sin ar bun nó fá n-a nşlacatar léi ní poláir léiriú do beic ann ar ceartaib, ar cumáctaib aşus ar óualşadaib na comhairle sin, aşus řos ar a comhaint leis an Oireáctas aşus leis an Riáşaltaş.

4. 1° Ní ceao don Oireáctas aon ulişeaó o'áctú a beaó ar aon cuma i n-aşaió an ðunreácta so nó i n-aşaió aon řoráilte den ðunreáct so.

2° I şcás aon ulişeaó o'á n-aóóóaió an toireáctas do beic ar aon cuma i n-aşaió an ðunreácta so nó i n-aşaió aon řoráilte den ðunreáct so beio sé şan ðail sa méio şo mbeio sé i n-aşaió an ðunreácta so aşus sa méio sin aiháin.

5. Ní ceao don Oireáctas a ráó şur sárú ulişió şnioiharta ná sárú ulişió iao le linn a noéanta.

6. 1° Is aş an Oireáctas aiháin aóa de ceart řorsaí míleata nó řorsaí armta do bunú aşus do cóóabáil.

2° Ní oleaştaó řorsa míleata ná řorsa armta ar bié, seaóas řorsa míleata nó řorsa armta a bunuiştear aşus a coóabáiltear aş an Oireáctas, do bunú ná do cóóabáil cun críce ar bié.

7. Ní poláir don Oireáctas suióe uair sa bliáoain ar a laişeaó.

8. 1° Is şo poiblíóe a suióřio şac Tíş den Oireáctas.

2° Ac i şcás práinn speisialta do beic ann, tíş le ceáctar den o'á Tíş suióe şo príobáioeaó ac o'á o'riañ de na comáltaib a beas i láctair do toiliú leis.

9. 1° Toşřaió şac Tíş ar leic den Oireáctas a cátaoirleaó aşus a leas-cátaoirleaó řeim as a comáltas řeim, aşus leaşřaió amaó o'óib a şcumácta aşus a noualşais.

2° Is le ulişeaó a cinnřear tuarastal cátaoirliş is leas-cátaoirliş şac Tíşe ar leic.

10. Oéanřaió şac Tíş ar leic a riáşlaóa aşus a ðuan-orduişte řeim, aşus beio sé de cumáct aş şac Tíş aca pionós do ceapaó do luó a sáruişte sin; beio sé de cumáct aise řairis sin saoirse aishnis do cur i n-aírióe, aşus a scríóinní oifíşeamla řeim aşus ráipéir řríobáioeaó a comáltaí do o'óoin, aşus řos é řeim aşus a comáltaí do o'óoin ar aon oime nó ar aon oream oaoine do oéanřaió cur-isteac nó toirmeasc ar a comáltaib nó do oéanřaió iarraóct ar iao o'éilliú aşus iao aş oéanřaió a noualşas.

11. 1° Taoó amuiş de cás o'á sócruiştear a ihálairt leis an mðunreáct so is é slíşe a o'abářřar breic ar şac ceist i nşac Tíş ar leic ná le hurihóř o'ótaí na şcomáltaí a beas i láctair aşus a oéanřas o'ótaí ac şan an cátaoirleaó nó an comálta beas i şceannas o'áireain.

2° Más ionann líon na o'ótaí ar an o'á taoó beio aş an şcátaoirleaó, nó aş an şcomálta beas i şceannas, o'óta cinneainna nac poláir o'ó a óabáirt.

3° Is le n-a ðuan-orduişte cinnřear cia an méio comálta a beas riáctanaó do óionól de ceáctar den o'á Tíş cun é beic i şcumas feaóma.

12. Şac tuarascóail aşus řoilşeaóan oifíşeamail ón Oireáctas aşus ó şac Tíş de, maille le caint ar bié o'á noéantař i n-aon Tíş o'óib, táio saor ar cúrsaib ulişió cibé áit a řpoillsiştear.

13. Oá comáltaí şac Tíşe den Oireáctas saor ar şabáil le linn beic i o'earmann ceáctar den o'á Tíş nó aş teaóct cuise nó aş imeáct uair, ac aiháin i şcás tréasa, mar míniştear sa ðunreáct so é, nó i şcás řeileontaóta nó briseaó síóóána; aşus cibé caint a oéanřaió comálta i n-aon Tíş o'óib ní hionóuisişte é mar şeall uiró i n-aon cúirt ná aş uşoaras ar bié ac aiháin an Tíş řeim.

14. Ní ceao o'áon oime beic ma comálta de o'á Tíş an Oireáctais san am ceáona, aşus aon oime beas ma comálta de Tíş o'óib aşus şo noéanřar comálta den Tíş eile o'e, ní poláir a ihéas láitreaó şo řřuil éirişte aise as an şceao ionao.

15. Tíς leis an Oireadctas socrú do déanaí le dlígeadh cun allúntais d'íoc le comáltaibh shac tíge de as uct a n-ualgas i gcáil ion-aoirí poiblíde, agus cun go n-éanfaí dóibh, maidir le n-a n-ualgasasib, saoráio cun taisteal i n-aisce agus cibé saoráio eile a cinnfíó an toireadctas, má éinneann.

Uáil Éireann.

Airteaghal 16.

1. 1° Shac saoránac, cibé aca fear nó bean, as a bfuil bliadhain agus píce slán agus ná cuirtear fá mícumas nó fá mítreoir leis an mbunreacht so ná le dlígeadh, tá sé iontocht a comáltas Uáil Éireann.

2° i. Shac uile saoránac, agus

ii. cibé daoine eile sa stát a cinnfear le dlígeadh, cibé aca fir nó mná, as a bfuil oet mbliadhna deas slán agus ná cuirtear fá d'icáilíreacht le dlígeadh, agus a comhionas comheallaca an dlíghíó i tsaobh tochtáin comáltaí do Uáil Éireann, tá ceart bótála aca i tochtán comáltaí do Uáil Éireann.

3° Ní ceao don dlígeadh d'actú do cuirfeadh saoránac ar bié, toisc sur fear nó toisc sur bean an saoránac sin, fá mícumas nó fá mítreoir maidir le n-a beit ma comálta de Uáil Éireann nó a d'icáileoach saoránac ar bié nó duine ar bié eile, ar an bporas céanna sin, ó beit i tpeirdeal bótála i tochtán comáltaí do Uáil Éireann.

4° Ní ceao do tochtóir ar bié tar don bótála ahdáin do tabairt i tochtán do Uáil Éireann, agus is le rún-bhallóio a déanfar an bótáil.

2. 1° Ionadóirí do Uáil-éanntraibh a socrúitear le dlígeadh comáltas Uáil Éireann.

2° Socrócar líon comáltaí Uáil Éireann le dlígeadh ó am go ham ac ní ceao a lánlíon do beit fá bun comálta i n-asháio shac tríóca míle den daonraio, ná ós cionn comálta i n-asháio shac píce míle den daonraio.

3° An comhréir a beas ioir an líon comáltaí beas le tocha don trác le haíó shac Uáil-éanntrair ar leit agus daonraio shac Uáil-éanntrair ar leit, do réir an daonraim is déireanaige dá n-éannaio roimhe sin, ní foláir í beit ar cotrom, sa méio sur péioir é, ar fuao na d'icé uile.

4° Ní foláir don Oireadctas na Uáil-éanntrair d'ait-meas uair ar a laigeadh insan dá bliadhain deas as féacaint go cuibe d'áon átarraige ar suideam na daonraio; ac átarraige ar bié dá n-éanntra ar na Uáil-éanntraibh ní tíoceao i bpeiom i rit ré na Uála beas ma suide le linn an aite-measta sin.

5° Is do réir na hionadaióeacta cionháire agus ar móó an don-focha ion-astriige a tochar na comáltaí.

6° Ní ceao dlígeadh d'actú a beareadh fá bun trír an líon comáltaí a beas le tocha d'áon Uáil-éanntrair.

3. 1° Ní foláir Uáil Éireann do comórad agus do lán-scor mar socrúitear le halt 2 d'airteaghal 13 den bunreacht so.

2° Ní foláir olltochtán do comáltaibh do Uáil Éireann do beit ann lá nac déireanaige ná tríóca lá tar eis Uáil Éireann do lán-scor.

4. 1° An bótáil do shac olltochtán ar leit do Uáil Éireann ní foláir í déanaí, sa méio sur péioir é, an t-don lá ahdáin ar fuao na d'icé uile.

2° Ní foláir do Uáil Éireann teact le céile taobh istig de tríóca lá ón lá bótála sin.

5. Ní beit de ré as don Uáil Éireann ac seact mbliadhna ó lá a céao-tionóil: féarar ré is giorra ná sin do socrú le dlígeadh.

6. An comálta de Uáil Éireann a beas ma ácaoirleac díreac roim lán-scor do Uáil Éireann ní foláir socrú do déanaí le dlígeadh cun go bfeardar a meas an comálta sin a beit tochtá do Uáil Éireann insan céao olltochtán eile, san é uil fá tocha.

7. Fá cuimsiú na bporáiltí sin roiminn den airteaghal so is do réir dlíghíó a riaglócar tochtáin do comáltas Uáil Éireann, mar don le líonad corr-folaíantás.

ÁIRTEAGAL 17.

1. 1° Cómh luath agus is féidir é tar éis na Meastacáin ar fásáiltas an Stáit agus na Meastacáin ar cáiteadh airgid an Stáit i gcómhair don bliadhna airgeadais do chúir fá bhrádasú Óáil Éireann fá Áirteagal 28 den Bunreacht so, ní foláir do Óáil Éireann na Meastacáin sin do breaicnú.

2° An reáctairéacht a beas riáctanac cún feirom tliúir do tábairt do Rúin Airgeadais gac bliadhna ar leit ní foláir í áctú an bliadhna sin féin ac ainhin sa mhéir so mbeir a mhalairt socair i tcaob gac cas ar leit i n-áctacán cúise sin.

2. Ní oleáctac do Óáil Éireann bóta ná rún do rit, ná ní oleáctac don tliúeáó t'áctú, cún leit-ádbáil do tóanain ar stáct-cíos ná ar airgead poiblíde ar bit eile, muna mbeir teáctaireáct as Óáil Éireann ón Riááiltas fá Láin an Tcaoisí as moláó críce na leit-ádbála tóib.

Seanad Éireann.

ÁIRTEAGAL 18.

1. Seasca comálta líon Seanad Éireann, .i. don duine tóeas a ainmneócar agus naonbar is dá ícío a toúpar.

2. Ionnas so mbeáó duine ionááctá ar comáltas Seanad Éireann ní foláir é beir ionááctá ar comáltas Óáil Éireann.

3. Na comáltaí ainmneócar do Seanad Éireann ainmneócar iáo le réain-áeao uáta féin as an tcaoiseac a ceapfar ar Óáil Éireann t'áitcionól i ntoiáó an lán-scoil ar Óáil Éireann is siocair leis na comáltaí sin t'ainmniú.

4. 1° Na comáltaí a toúpar do Seanad Éireann, is ar an gcuma so leanas a toúpar iáo:—

- i. Toúparíó ollscoil na héireann triúr.
- ii. Toúparíó ollscoil báile áta cliac triúr.
- iii. Toúpar triúr is dá ícío as rollaib t'iaráctóirib a cóireócar ar an gcuma a socruictear annso i n-ar ntoiáó.

2° Féapfar foráileain a tóanain le tliúeáó cún so ttoúpar do réir toú-córais, agus ar an móó, a socrócar le tliúeáó, as ceann ainhin nó níos mó de na forais seo a leanas, eádon:

- i. na hollscoileanna a luairtear i bpo-áct 1° den áct so,
- ii. don forais eile ártóiteacáis sa stáct, an líon san comáltaí de Seanad Éireann a socrócar le tliúeáó in ionad líon comionann de na comáltaí a beas le toúá do bun míreanna i agus ii den fo-áct san 1°.

Féapfar comálta nó comáltaí de Seanad Éireann a toúá fáin bpo-áct so as forais a beas tiomsuicte le céile nó as foras donair.

3° Ní ceao don ní dá bfuil in san Áirteagal so t'ááairt cún toirmeasc a chúir le hollscóil a luairtear i bpo-áct 1° den áct so a lánscóir do réir tliúir.

5. Gac toúcán dá mbeiró ann do na comáltaib a toúpar do Seanad Éireann is do réir na hionadairéactá cionnaire a tóanain é agus ar móó an don-áóta ion-áistricte, le rún-bállóio íuist.

6. Na comáltaí a toúpar do Seanad Éireann as na hollscólaib is do réir toú-córais, agus ar an móó, a socrócar le tliúeáó a toúpar iáo.

7. 1° Romh gac olltoúcán do na comáltaib do Seanad Éireann a toúpar as rollaib t'iaráctóirib cóireócar ar an gcuma socrócar le tliúeáó cúis rollaí t'iaráctóirib ar a mbeiró ainmneáca tcaoine as a mbeiró eolas agus cleáctáó ar na gnoctáib agus na seirbísib seo leanas fá seac:—

- i. An áeóilí as an tcaoiseac náisiúnta, litricéact, ealaónáct, oiteacás agus pé garna a léireócar le tliúeáó cún críce an rolla so;
- ii. Talmaireáct, maille le gnoctáib a báineas léi, agus iascaireáct;
- iii. Oibreacás, cibé comheágruicte é nó ná eáó;

iv. TIONNSCAL IS TRÁCTÁIL AR A N-ÁIRMIŢEAR BANNCAERAÁCT, AIRGEADAS, CUNN-TASADHÓEÁCT, INNEALLTÓIREÁCT AGUS FOIRSHIÓEÁCT;

v. RIARACÁN POIBLÍDE AGUS SEIRBÍSÍ COMHARONNACÁ, AGUS OBÁIR COMHARONNACÁ DEONTACÁ D'ÁIREAÍ.

2° NÍ CEAD NÍOS MÓ NÁ AON DUINE D'ÉAS NÁ, FÁ CUMSIÚ FORÁILTÍ AIRTEAGAL 19 DEN BUNREÁCT SO, NÍOS LUŞA NÁ CUIGEAR DE COMHALTÁIB SEANAD ÉIREANN DO TOSGA AS AON ROLLA ÁIRIŢE.

8. NÍ FOLÁIR OLLTOŞCÁN DO SEANAD ÉIREANN DO BEIT ANN LÁ NAÓ D'ÉIRIŢE NÁ NÓCA LÁ D'ÉIS LÁN-SCOR DO DÁIL ÉIREANN, AGUS NÍ FOLÁIR DO SEANAD ÉIREANN TEÁCT LE CÉILE AR CÉAD-TIONÓL TAR ÉIS AN OLLTOŞCÁIN LÁ A CINNPIÓ AN TUÁCTARÁN CUIGE AR COMHARLE AN TAOISIŞ.

9. LEANFAIÓ ŞAC COMALTA DE SEANAD ÉIREANN DÁ OIFIS, MUNA N-ÉAGAIÓ NÓ MUNA N-ÉIRŞIÓ AS OIFIS NÓ MUNA NÓICÁILIŞTEAR É, ŞO DTÍ AN LÁ ROIMH LÁ NA BÓTÁLA DON OLLTOŞCÁN IS TUISCE BEAS ANN DO SEANAD ÉIREANN D'ÉIS É TOSGA NÓ É D'AMMNIÚ.

10. 1° FÁ CUMSIÚ NA BFORÁILTÍ SIN ROIMH DEN AIRTEAGAL SO, IS DO RÉIR ULIŞIÓ A RIÁŞLÓCAR ŞAC TOŞCÁN DO NA COMHALTÁIB A TOŞFAR DO SEANAD ÉIREANN.

2° IS LE HAMMNIÚ ÓN TAOISEAC A LÍONFAR CORR-FOLAMHANTAIS I LÍON NA ŞCOMHALTÁI AMMNIŞTEAR DO SEANAD ÉIREANN, LE RÉAMH-CEAD NA NÓDOIME AMMNEOCTAR.

3° IS AR AN ŞCUMA A SOCRUIŞTEAR LE ULIŞEAD A LÍONFAR CORR-FOLAMHANTAIS I LÍON NA ŞCOMHALTÁI A TOŞTAR DO SEANAD ÉIREANN.

AIRTEAGAL 19.

FÉADFAR SOCRÚ DO D'ÉANÁIN LE ULIŞEAD IONNAS ŞO BÉADOFAD AON DREAM FEADMA NÓ ŞARMA BEADAD, NÓ AON COMLUCT NÓ COMHARLE FEADMA NÓ ŞARMA BEADAD, AN OIREAD COMHALTÁI DO SEANAD ÉIREANN DO TOSGA ŞO LOM-OIREAC AGUS A CINNFEAR LEIS AN ULIŞEAD SIN, IN IONAD AN OIRIO CÉADHNA DE NA COMHALTÁIB A TOŞFAR AS NA COMH-ROL-LÁIB D'ÁIRRECTORÍB A COIREOCHAR FÁ AIRTEAGAL 18 DEN BUNREÁCT SO.

REÁCTAIÓEÁCT.

AIRTEAGAL 20.

1. NÍ FOLÁIR ŞAC BILLE A TIONNSCANTAR I NÓDÁIL ÉIREANN AGUS A RIŢTEAR AS DÁIL ÉIREANN DO CÚR ŞO SEANAD ÉIREANN AGUS, MUNA BILLE AIRŞIÓ É, TIS LE SEANAD ÉIREANN É LEASÚ, AGUS NÍ FOLÁIR DO DÁIL ÉIREANN AON LEASÚ DEN TSÓRT SIN DO BREÁCTHÚ.

2. 1° IS DLEÁŞTAC BILLE NAÓ BILLE AIRŞIÓ É DO TIONNSCÁIN I SEANAD ÉIREANN, AGUS MÁ RIŢEANN SEANAD ÉIREANN É NÍ FOLÁIR É TÁBÁIRT ISTEAC I NÓDÁIL ÉIREANN.

2° MÁ TIONNSCANTAR BILLE I SEANAD ÉIREANN AGUS ŞO LEASUIŞEANN DÁIL ÉIREANN É, NÍ FOLÁIR A MEAS É BEIT MA BILLE A TIONNSCÁD I NÓDÁIL ÉIREANN.

3. BILLE A RIŢTEAR AS CEÁCTAR DEN DÁ TIS AGUS LE N-A NŞLACANN AN TIS EILE NÍ FOLÁIR A MEAS ŞUR RIŢEAD É AS AN DÁ TIS.

BILLÍ AIRŞIÓ.

AIRTEAGAL 21.

1. 1° IS I NÓDÁIL ÉIREANN AMÁIN IS CEAD BILLÍ AIRŞIÓ DO TIONNSCÁIN.

2° NÍ FOLÁIR ŞAC BILLE AIRŞIÓ A RIŢTEAR AS DÁIL ÉIREANN DO CÚR ŞO SEANAD ÉIREANN D'ÁIRRAIÓ A MOLTAÍ MA TAOB.

2. 1° ŞAC BILLE AIRŞIÓ A CUIRTEAR ŞO SEANAD ÉIREANN D'ÁIRRAIÓ A MOLTAÍ MA TAOB, NÍ FOLÁIR É CÚR AR AIS ŞO DÁIL ÉIREANN I ŞCEANN TRÉIMHE NAÓ SIA NÁ LÁ AGUS FICE TAR ÉIS AN BILLE DO CÚR ŞO SEANAD ÉIREANN, AGUS TIS LE DÁIL ÉIREANN IOMLÁN NA MOLTAÍ Ó SEANAD ÉIREANN NÓ AON CUIO TÍOB DO ŞLACAD NÓ DO DHIULTAD.

2° MUNA ŞCUIRTEAR AN BILLE AIRŞIÓ SIN AR AIS Ó SEANAD ÉIREANN ŞO DÁIL ÉIREANN TAOB ISTIŞ DEN LÁ AGUS FICE SIN, NÓ MÁ CUIRTEAR AR AIS É TAOB ISTIŞ DEN LÁ AGUS FICE SIN MÁR AON LE MOLTAÍ NÁ ŞLACANN DÁIL ÉIREANN LEO, NÍ FOLÁIR A MEAS ŞUR RIŢ AN DÁ TIS I ŞCIONN AN LAE AGUS FICE SIN É.

AIRTEAGAL 22.

1. 1° IS É IS CIALL DO BILLE AIRŞIÓ BILLE NÁ BÍONN ANN AC FORÁILTÍ LE HAŞAIÓ IOMLÁN NA N-ADHAR ŞO LEANAS NÓ AON CUIO ADA .1.

cánačas do shearradó, d'aisghairm, do loḡadó, d'áchtarrú nó do riaslú; muirir do leasadó ar airgítoib poiblíde cun ríada d'íoc nó cun cuspóirí eile airgeadais, nó a leitéirí sin de muirir d'áchtarrú nó d'aisghairm; soláchar; airgead poiblíde do leit-ḡadáil, do ḡlacadó, do coimneáil nó d'eiseamhaint, nó cumntais air d'iniúcadó; don iasáct do cruinniú nó do ráctú nó d'aisíoc; ríó-áobair a bfuil baint aca leis na neitib sin nó le haon cuido aca.

2° Insan míniú sin ní áirimítear fá na foclaib "cánačas", "airgead poiblíde" agus "iasáct", fá sead, don cánačas, airgead ná iasáct a cruinniḡio uḡoáráis nó comluctáí áiteamla cun críceanna áiteamla.

2. 1° Má s é tuairim cátaoirleac Óáil Éireann sur bille airḡio don bille fá leit ní foláir do a deimniú sur bille airḡio é agus, fá cuimsiú na bporáiltí i n-ar noiaró den alt so, ní beiró dul tar an deimniú sin.

2° Tis le Seanad Éireann rún do rit i dtionól ná beiró níos luḡa ná tríoca comálta i láchar ann, dá iarráid ar an uáctarán ceist do cur fá bráḡaid Coiste Príbléirí féadaint cé aca bille airḡio an bille nó nac ead.

3° Má donḡuiseann an tuáctarán leis an áctuinḡe tar éis comairle do ḡlacadó leis an ḡcomairle Stáit, ní foláir do Coiste Príbléirí do ceapadó. An líon céadna de comáltaib de Óáil Éireann agus de Seanad Éireann a beas ar an ḡCoiste sin, agus breiteam den cúirt uáctaraḡ ina cátaoirleac ortá. Is tar éis comairle do ḡlacadó leis an ḡcomairle Stáit a deaḡar na ceapáid sin. Má s ionann an líon bótaí ar an dá taob beiró bóta as an ḡcátaoirleac, ac munab ionann ní beiró.

4° Ní foláir don uáctarán an ceist do cur fá bráḡaid an Coiste Príbléirí a ceapfar mar sin, agus ní foláir don Coiste a mbreit ar an ḡceist do cur cun an uáctaráin taob istis de lá agus ríce d'éis an lae a cuiread an bille so Seanad Éireann.

5° Ní beiró dul tar breit an Coiste.

6° Má óiultuiseann an tuáctarán d'áctuinḡe Seanad Éireann tar éis comairle do ḡlacadó leis an ḡcomairle Stáit, nó muna ḡcuiró an Coiste Príbléirí a mbreit i n-iúil taob istis den tréimse a luairtear annso roimhinn, seasfaid deimniú cátaoirleac Óáil Éireann.

tréimse cun billí do breacnú.

Airteasal 23.

1. Daineann an tAirteasal so le ḡac bille a ríteann Óáil Éireann agus a seoltar so Seanad Éireann, ac amáin bille airḡio nó bille so ndearnad an tréimse cun a breacnuisḡe as Seanad Éireann do ḡiorrú fá Airteasal 24 den Bunreacḡ so.

1° Má tárluiseann, taob istis den tréimse áirite a luairtear sa céad ríó-alt eile, so noiuultuiseann Seanad Éireann d'aon bille le n-a mbaineann an tAirteasal so, nó so ríteann Seanad Éireann an bille agus leasuisḡe air a noiuultuiseann Óáil Éireann doib, nó muna ndéanann Seanad Éireann an bille do rit (pé aca leasuisḡe é nó ḡan leasú) nó oiultad do taob istis den tréimse áirite, annsin má ríteann Óáil Éireann rún cúise sin taob istis de naoi bpeidó lá tar éis na tréimse áirite beit caite, ní foláir a meas sur rítead an bille sin as dá tis an Oireacḡtais an lá rítead an rún.

2° Nóca lá, nó don tréimse is sia ná sin a réirḡisḡio dá tis an Oireacḡtais le céile maidir leis an mbille, an tréimse áirite, agus is é an lá a seoltar an bille ar dtús ó Óáil Éireann so Seanad Éireann tosaḡ na tréimse.

2. 1° Daineann an t-alt sin roimhinn den Airteasal so le ḡac bille a tionnsantar i Seanad Éireann agus a rítear as Seanad Éireann, agus a leasuisḡe ar Óáil Éireann, agus so meastar dá bfein sin sur i nÓáil Éireann a tionnsnacó é.

2° Cúise sin is é an lá a seoltar an bille so Seanad Éireann den céad uair tar éis é leasú as Óáil Éireann a ḡosuiseas an tréimse áirite i ḡcomair an bille sin.

Airteasal 24.

1. Má ríteann Óáil Éireann bille, seacás bille a luairtear a beit ina bille a bfuil toḡra ann cun an Bunreacḡ do leasú, agus so seolann an taoiseac teacḡaireacḡtaí scríobḡta cun an uáctaráin agus cun cátaoirleac ḡac Tisḡe den Oireacḡtais, dá deimniú doib surb é tuairim an Riaslatais so bfuil práinn agus riacḡanas leis an mbille sin láitreac cun síocḡáin agus slánóidil an pobail do cosaint, nó go bfuil práinn agus riachtanas leis láithreadh toisc éigeandáil poiblíde inméadóthac nó eadarnáisiúnta do beiré ann, annsin má bheartuigeann Dáil Éireann amlaíó le rún, agus go n-aontuigeann an tuáctarán leis an rún tar éis comhairle do ghlacáó leis an gComhairle Stáit, ní foláir an tréimse a fásfar an bille sin fá breaicnú Seanad Éireann do giorrú agus do cur fán teorainn a luaitéar insan rún.

2. Bille ar bit a n-dearnaó an tréimse cun a breaicnuigíte as Seanad Éireann do giorrú fán airteasal so, má éarluiúgeann,

(a) i gcás bille nac bille airisio, go n-oiúltuigeann Seanad Éireann do nó go ritheann Seanad Éireann é maille le leasuisicéib doá n-oiúltuigeann Dáil Éireann nó ná déanann Seanad Éireann é rit ná oiúltacáó doó, nó,

(b) i gcás bille airisio, go gcuireann Seanad Éireann ar ais go Dáil Éireann é maille le moltaib ná ghlacann Dáil Éireann leo nó ná déanann Seanad Éireann é cur ar ais go Dáil Éireann, taob isticé den tréimse a luaitéar insan rún, ní foláir a méas gur ritheáó an bille as doá cicé an oireacátais i gcióinn na tréimse sin.

3. Ar déanamé olicéiré do bille go n-dearnaó an tréimse cun a breaicnuigíte as Seanad Éireann do giorrú fán airteasal so, beiré sé i bpeirém ar feacá tréimse nóca lá ó doáca a acáitúicé, acé sin a mbeiré, muna n-aontuigíte doá cicé an oireacátais roimé deireáó na tréimse sin an olicéiré sin o'fanamháint i bpeirém ar feacá tréimse is sia ná sin, agus go luaitéar i rúnaió ón doá cicé an tréimse aontuigítear amlaíó.

Oligíte do sígmiú agus o'rógairt.

Airteasal 25.

1. Comé luacé agus rittear bille, seacás bille a luaitéar a beiré ma bille a bfuil togra ann cun an bunreacá so do leasú, nó a meastar é beiré ritte as doá cicé an oireacátais, ní foláir don taoiseacé an bille sin do éairisint don uacáran cun a lám do cur leis agus cun é rógairt ma olicéiré do réir foráiltí an airteasail seo.

2. 1° Taob amuisé do cás doá socruigítear a málairt leis an mbunreacá so, gacé bille a tairgítear don uacáran mar sin cun a lám do cur leis agus cun é rógairt ma olicéiré, ní foláir do a lám do cur leis lá nac luaité ná an cúisiméacá lá agus nac deiréanaisé ná an seacáimacá lá tar éis an lae tairgítear an bille doó.

2° Ar acéuinúge an Riagáltais, le coméoil Séanad Éireann roimé ré, ticé leis an uacáran a lám a cur le haon bille is siocair don acéuinúge sin níos luaité ná an cúisiméacá lá tar éis an doáca réamháiréte.

3. Gacé bille go n-dearnaó an tréimse cun a breaicnuigíte as Seanad Éireann do giorrú fá airteasal 24 den bunreacá so, ní foláir don uacáran a lám do cur leis an lá tairgítear an bille sin do cun é sígmiú agus cun é rógairt ma olicéiré.

4. 1° Déanann olicéiré do gacé bille an lá a cúireann an tuáctarán a lám leis fán mbunreacá so agus is olicéiré é an lá sin agus ón lá sin amacé agus, muna léir a málairt o'ntínn ma taob, is é an lá sin a ticéann sé i ngníóm.

2° Gacé bille a gcuireann an tuáctarán a lám leis fán mbunreacá so ní foláir do é rógairt ma olicéiré le rógra insan Iris Oifigiúil, fá ordú uairé, doá ráó go bfuil an bille ma olicéiré.

3° Isé téacs do bille a gcuiréiré an tuáctarán a lám leis ná an téacs do ritheáó nó a meastar do ritheáó as doá cicé an oireacátais agus, má rittear bille nó má meastar é beiré ritte amlaíó insan doá teangáin oifigiamla, cuiréiré an tuáctarán a lám le téacs gaeóilge agus le téacs Sacs-Béarla an bille.

4° I gcás an tuáctarán do cur a lám le téacs bille i teangáin do na teangáca oifigiamla agus insan teangáin sin amháin, ní foláir tionntóó oifigiamail do cur amacé insan teangáin oifigiamail eile.

5° Comé luacé agus is péiréiré é tar éis bille do sígmiú agus é rógairt ma olicéiré, ní foláir an téacs den olicéiré sin le n-a mbeiré lám an uacáran nó, i gcás lám an uacáran do beiré le téacs gaeóilge agus le téacs Sacs-Béarla an olicéiré sin, an doá téacs sígmicé sin do cur istecé ma iris nó ma n-iris i n-oifis irisoir na cúirt uacáraisé, agus is fiaónaisé do-claóiré ar foráiltí an olicéiré sin an téacs a cuirfeadh isteach ina iris, nó an dá téacs a cuirfeadh isteach ina n-iris, amlaí.

6° I gcás téacs saeóilge agus téacs sács-béarla de úlgeadh do cur isteach ina n-iris fán alt so agus san an dá téacs sin do beir do réir a céile, is as an téacs saeóilge a beir an forlámhas.

- 5. 1° Is oleaghdac don taoiseac a tabairt, ó am go ham fá mar a cífeadh do sábhac do beir leis, go ndéanfar téacs (insan saeóilge agus insan sács-béarla) den bunreacht so, mar a beir i bfeidm an trác sin agus ma mbeir na leasuište uile beir déanta air go dtí sin, o'ullmú fá n-a t'reorú.

2° Saé téacs a hullamhócar amlaí ní foláir don uactarán a lám do cur le cóib de ar beir fíoruíšte ói le sígníšte an taoisig agus an íríim-breimí, agus ní foláir an cóib sin do cur isteach ina hiris i n-oiris iriseoir na cúirte uactaraiše.

3° An cóib a beir sígníšte agus curta isteach ina hiris amlaí agus surb í an téacs is deireannaíše, ar n-a ullmú amlaí, i n-alt na huairé í, beir sí, ar beir curta isteach ina hiris ói amlaí, ma fíadnaisé óo-élaoidte ar an mbunreacht so mar a beir ar óata an cóib sin do cur isteach ina hiris amlaí agus, cúige sin, saófa sí ionad na dtéacsanna uile den bunreacht so a mbeir cóibeanna óioó curta isteach ina n-iris amlaí romhe sin.

4° I gcás san na téacsanna o'adon cóib áiríte den bunreacht so a beir curta isteach ina hiris fán alt so do beir do réir a céile, is as an téacs saeóilge a beir an forlámhas.

Billí do cur fá breit na cúirte uactaraiše.

Áirteagál 26.

Dáineann an tairteagál so le saé bille a rítear nó a meastar a ríteadh as óá tíg an oireadtais, ac amláin bille áirgíro, nó bille a luairítear a beir ma bille a bfuil tosra ann cun an bunreacht do leasú, nó bille go ndearnad an tréimhe cun a breacnuíšte as seanaó éireann do síorrú fá áirteagál 24 den bunreacht so.

- 1. 1° Is ceao don uactarán, tar éis comairle do glacaó leis an scomairle stáit, don bille le n-a mbaineann an tairteagál so do cur fá breit na cúirte uactaraiše féadaint an bfuil an bille sin nó don foráileam nó don foráiltí áiríte de i n-ágaró an bunreacá so nó i n-ágaró don foráilte de.

2° I nsaé cás den tsórt sin ní foláir an bille do cur fá breit na cúirte lá nac déirdeannaíše ná an seacámadó lá tar éis an óata a tairgeann an taoiseac an bille don uactarán cun a lám do cur leis.

3° Bille ar bit a cuirtear fá breit na cúirte uactaraiše fán áirteagál so, ní ceao don uactarán a lám do cur leis go dtí go dtuagann an cúirt a breit.

- 2. 1° Ní foláir don cúirt uactaraiše, cúirt ma mbeir cúigear breiteamán ar a laigead, saé ceist óá scuireann an t-uactarán fá n-a breit fán áirteagál so do breacnú agus, tar éis éisteach le harzónaib ón áro-áighe nó tar a ceann agus ó ábcóirib a tosfar as an scúirt, ní foláir ói a breit ar an sceist sin do tabairt insan cúirt go poiblíde com luac agus is feidm é agus, ar don cumá, lá nac déirdeannaíše ná seasca lá tar éis an ceist do cur fá n-a breit.

2° An breit a beireann an tromlac de breiteamán na cúirte uactaraiše, sin í breit na cúirte cun críceanna an áirteagáil seo agus isé éraolpas an breit sin ná an duine sin de na breiteamánib sin a ceapairó an cúirt cúige sin, agus ní ceao tuairim ar bit eile, as donú nó as easaon-tú leis an mbreit sin, do éraolac ná ní ceao a noctac tuairim ar bit eile den tsórt sin do beir ann.

- 3. 1° I gcás don bille a cuirtear fá breit na cúirte uactaraiše fán áirteagál so, más é breit na cúirte go bfuil don foráileam de i n-ágaró an bunreacá so nó i n-ágaró don foráilte de, ní foláir don uactarán diúltaó óá lám do cur leis an mbille sin.

2° I gcás atcúinghe do beir curta cun an uactarán fá áirteagál 27 den bunreacht so i ótaobó bille le n-a mbaineann an tairteagál sin, ní foláir an tairteagál sin do comlíonac.

3° I nsaé cás eile ní foláir don uactarán a lám do cur leis an mbille com luac agus is feidm é tar éis an lae a beireann an cúirt uactarac a breit.

Billí do cur fá breic an pobail.

AIRTEAGAL 27.

Baineann an tAirteagal so le gac Bille, seacás Bille a luaitéar a beic ma Bille a bfuil togra ann cun an Bunreacé so do leasú, a meastar, de buad Airteagail 23 den Bunreacé so, a ritead as dá tís an Oireacéais.

1. Is cead do tromlac de comaltaié Seanad éireann, i bpoáir trian, ar a laisead, de comaltaié Óáil éireann, com-áccuinse do cur cun an uacéarain fán Airteagal so, dá iarrad air oiúltad dá lám do cur le haon Bille le n-a mbaineann an tAirteagal so agus don Bille sin o'fóairt ma ólisead, toisc togra beic ann ma bfuil an oiread sin tábacé náisiúnta sur cóir breic an pobail o'fááil air.
2. Ní foláir gac áccuinse den tsórt sin do beic i scríbinn agus í beic fá lám an lué áccuinse agus ní foláir a sígnisicé sin do beic fíoruisicé ar an moó a horóuisicéar le ólisead.
3. Ní foláir léar-tuairisc do beic i nscá áccuinse den tsórt sin ar an adóar nó ar na haóbaraié áiricé ar a bfuil sí bunuisicé, agus í do áairisicé don uacéarain lá nac déirdeanaise ná ceitire lá tar éis an dáta a meastar a ritead an Bille as dá tís an Oireacéais.
4. 1° Com luacé agus seibeann an tuacéarain áccuinse fán Airteagal so ní foláir do í breacnú agus, tar éis comairle do glacáó leis an sComairle Stáit, a breic do áairicé uirtí lá nac déirdeanaise ná deic lá tar éis an lae a meastar a ritead, as dá tís an Oireacéais, an Bille sin le n-a mbaineann an áccuinse.

2° I scás an Bille nó don fóráileain de do cur fá breic na cúirte uacéaraisicé fá Airteagal 26 den Bunreacé so, ní beic ar an uacéarain an áccuinse do breacnú muna noéanaió ná so o'fí so noéanaió an cúirt uacéarac, de óruim an cúrcá fá breic sin, breic do craoláó dá dearbú gan an Bille sin nó an fóráileain sin de do beic i n-ááir do an Bunreacé so ná i n-ááir don fóráilte de agus, i scás an cúirt uacéarac do craoláó breicé dá dearbú sin, ní beic ar an uacéarain a breic ar an áccuinse do craoláó so ceann sé lá tar éis an lae a craolpar breic na cúirte uacéaraisicé as dearbú mar adóbaráó.

5. 1° I scás gac Bille is siocair o'áccuinse fán Airteagal so, más é breic an uacéarain so bfuil togra ann ma bfuil an oiread sin tábacé náisiúnta sur cóir breic an pobail o'fááil air, ní foláir do scríbinn fá n-a lám agus fá n-a séala do cur so o'fí an taoiseacé agus so o'fí Caáoirleacé gac Tíse den Oireacéas dá cur sin i n-iúil doib, agus oiúltad dá lám do cur leis an mBille sin agus dá fóairt ma ólisead muna nglacéar, agus so o'fí so nglacéar, an togra—

- i. le toil an pobail i Reipreann do réir fóráilcí ailc 2 o'Airteagal 47 den Bunreacé so, taob istisicé o'ócé mí oéas ón lá a beireann an tuacéarain a breic, nó
- ii. le rún ó Óáil éireann ar n-a rit taob istisicé den tréimse réamráicé i noaió lán-scor agus áicéionól do Óáil éireann.

2° Cibé uair a oéantar togra bíonn i mBille is siocair o'áccuinse fán Airteagal so do glacáó le toil an pobail nó le rún ó Óáil éireann do réir na fóráilcí sin roiminn den alt so, ní foláir an Bille sin do áairisicé don uacéarain com luacé agus is féicir é tar éis a glacéa, cun a lám do cur leis agus é fóairt ma ólisead, agus air sin ní foláir don uacéarain a lám do cur leis an mBille agus é fóairt so cuibe ma ólisead.

6. I scás gac Bille is siocair o'áccuinse fán Airteagal so, más é breic an uacéarain ná fuil don togra ann ma bfuil an oiread sin tábacé náisiúnta sur cóir breic an pobail o'fááil air, ní foláir do scríbinn fá n-a lám agus fá n-a séala do cur so o'fí an taoiseacé agus so o'fí Caáoirleacé gac Tíse den Oireacéas dá cur sin i n-iúil doib, agus a lám do cur leis an mBille sin lá nac déirdeanaise ná don lá oéas tar éis an lae a meastar a ritead an Bille sin as dá tís an Oireacéais, agus é fóairt so cuibe ma ólisead.

AN RIAÁALTAS.

AIRTEAGAL 28.

1. Móirseisear ar a laisead, agus cúis óuine oéas ar a méio, líon comaltai an Riaáaltais, agus is é an tuacéarain a ceapras na comaltai sin do réir fóráilcí an Bunreacé so.

2. Fá cúimsiú foráilte an Bunreáctas so, is é an Rialtas oibreócas, nó is le húdaráis an Rialtais a oibreócar, cumáct comallac an Stáit.

3. 1° Ní tleáctac coşaó o'fóşairt ná páirt do beic as an Stáit i n-aon coşaó ac aínáin le haontaó Óáil Éireann.

2° Ac fáoşairt an Rialtais, i şcás ionnraio, aon ní do oéanaín a méaşairt a beic riactanaó cun an Stáit do coşaint, asus muna mbeio Óáil Éireann ina suioe ní poláir í tioneól com luac asus is feioir é.

3° Ní ceao aon ní oá bfuil insan Bunreáct so o'asairt cun aon oliceao oá n-aótuiseann an toireáctas do cur ó bál má luairótear ann şur oliceao é cun sláoáil an póbaíl do cur i n-áirice asus cun an Stáit do éaoinna i n-aimsir coşairt nó ceannairce fá arm, ná cun aon şnioín oá noéantar nó a beireann le tuisint şur şnioín é a oéantar in aimsir coşairt nó ceannairce fá arm do bun aon oliceo den tsórt sin, do cur ar neaín-ní. Insan bpo-alc so, poluiseann "aimsir coşairt" trác a beio coinblióct fá arm ar siubál ná beio an Stáit páirteac ann ac şo mbeio beartuicte as şac Tis den Oireáctas ina éaoó le rún şo bfuil ann, oé oéascaio an coinbliócta sin fá arm, stao íráinne náisiúnta oéanann oeişir do bonn beaca an Stáit asus poluiseann "aimsir coşairt nó ceannairce fá arm" an tréinise amsire sin a beio ioir an trác a cuirfear oeişio le haon coşaó, nó le haon coinblióct fá arm den tsórt sin réaín-ráioite, nó le ceannairc fá arm asus an trác a beartócaio şac Tis den Oireáctas le rún nac ann a tuilleao don stao íráinne náisiúnta aró é an coşaó sin, nó an coinblióct sin fá arm, nó an ceannairc sin fá arm fá noeár é.

4. 1° Tá an Rialtas preaşarác do Óáil Éireann.

2° I şcoinuşoaras a tíoşairt an Rialtais le céile asus a şnioínócaio, asus táio şo léir le céile preaşarác msna Rannaio Stáit a riartar as comalcaio an Rialtais.

3° Oéanşar rúnoacó na bpleití as cruinnice den Rialtas a urramú i nşac toisc ac aínáin i şcás ina şcinnfeio an aró-cúirt şur ceart noctao a oéanaín i otaoó ní áirice—

i. ar máice le riaraó cirt as cúirt, nó

ii. oé bua leaa póiblí sáraitic, oé bun iarraoais cuise sin ó binse arna éapaó as an Rialtas nó as aire oen Rialtas le húoaras tice an Oireáctais cun fiosrú a oéanaín faoi ní a luafairt siao ina éaoó şo bfuil táoacó póiblí ann.

4° Ní poláir oen Rialtais Meastacáin ar fáşáltas an Stáit asus Meastacáin ar éairéaín airşio an Stáit o'ullmú i şcoimair şac bliáoina airşeoais, asus iao do cur ós comair Óáil Éireann cun a mbreánuicte.

5. 1° An taoiseac is teioeal do ceann an Rialtais, .i. an íríom-áire, asus sin é a beirtear air insan Bunreáct so.

2° Ní poláir oen taoiseac eoas i şcoitcinne do éaoairt oen uaótarán ar neitib a baineas le beartas imheaoónac asus le beartas eaoarnnáisiúnta.

6. 1° Ní poláir oen taoiseac comalta oen Rialtais o'ainmniú cun beic ina éánaiste.

2° Má éaşann an taoiseac nó má şabann mícioeir buan é, ní poláir oen éánaiste şnioínú cun şac crice i n-ionao an taoisicş nó şo şceaptar taoiseac eile.

3° Ní poláir oen éánaiste, fairis sin, şnioínú tar ceann nó i n-ionao an taoisicş le linn eisean do beic as lácair şo seala-oac.

7. 1° Ní poláir an taoiseac asus an éánaiste asus an comalta sin oen Rialtais a beas i mbun an Roinn airşeoais do beic ina şcomalcaio oé Óáil Éireann.

2° Ní poláir na comalcaí eile oen Rialtais do beic ina şcomalcaio oé Óáil Éireann nó oé şeanao Éireann, ac ní tleáctac tar beirt aca do beic ina şcomalcaio oé şeanao Éireann.

8. Tá sé oé ceart as şac comalta oen Rialtais beic i lácair asus labairt i nşac Tis den Oireáctas.

9. 1° Tis leis an taoiseac éirşe as oifis uair ar bic trí n-a cur sin i n-iúil oen uaótarán.

2° Tis le haon comalta eile oen Rialtais éirşe as oifis trí n-a cur sin i n-iúil oen taoiseac cun an scéal do cur fá bráşair an uaótarán.

3° ní foláir don uachtarán slacaó le haon comálta den Rialtas, seachas an Taoiseach, d'éiríse as oifis má comhairliúeann an Taoiseach é sin dó.

4° Tí leis an Taoiseach uair ar bit, ar aóðaraid is leor leis féin, a iarraid ar comálta den Rialtas éiríse as oifis; muna ndéanaid an comálta sin do réir na haécuinse sin, ní foláir don uachtarán an comálta sin do cur as oifis má comhairliúeann an Taoiseach dó é.

10. Don uair ná leanann tromlaic i nÓil éireann de beic i dtacaróeact leis an Taoiseach, ní foláir dósan éiríse as oifis muna lán-scoireann an tuachtarán Óil éireann ar comairle an Taoisí, agus go n-éiríseann leis an Taoiseach tacaíoeact tromlaic i nÓil éireann d'fásáil ar aiccionól do Óil éireann i ndiaid an lán-scoir.

11. 1° má éiríseann an Taoiseach as oifis trác ar bit, ní foláir a mheas go n-éiríseann an cúir eile de comáltaid an Rialtais as oifis fairis sin; ac leanfaid an Taoiseach agus an cúir eile de comáltaid an Rialtais dá n-ualais nó go sceaptar a scoimbarbaí.

2° Na comáltaid den Rialtas a beas i n-oifis lá lán-scora Óil éireann leanfaid dá n-oifis nó go sceaptar a scoimbarbaí.

12. Is do réir dlí a riallócar na neite seo leanas .i. Ranna Stáit do choimeasgrú agus shó do roinnt ortá, comáltaid den Rialtas do ceapad cun beic ina ndiaid i mbun na Rann sin, na feadomanna a baineas le hoifis comálta den Rialtas do comhlíonad le linn an comálta sin do beic tamall as lácar nó ar mícreoir, agus tuarastal comáltaid an Rialtais.

CAITREAM EADARNÁISIÚNTA.

Airteagal 29.

1. Dearbann éire gur mian léi síocáin agus comar, do réir an coitruim eadarnáisiúnta agus na móraltaicta eadarnáisiúnta, do beic ar bun ior náisiúnaid an doimain.

2. Dearbann éire pós gur mian léi go ndéanfaí fás acránn ior náisiúnaid do réitoeac go síocáinta le heoráin eadarnáisiúnta nó le cinnead breiteamnac.

3. Slacann éire le bunriaglacá shac-adomaiete an dlí ior eadarnáisiúnta le beic ina dtreoir d'éirinn ina caiream le Stáit eile.

4. 1° Do réir airteagal 28 den Bunreac so is é an Rialtas oibreocas, nó is le huáorás an Rialtais a oibreocar, cuimact comallac an Stáit maidir le n-caiream eactrac.

2° Ionnas go bfeadpar don feiom comallac leis an Stáit d'oiriú maidir le n-caiream eactrac feadpar an Rialtas, sa méir go scinnepar le dlíeac agus fá cuimsiú pé comseallaca a cinnepar le dlíeac, má cinntear, don orsan Stáit nó sás nó nós imeacta do cur cun críce nó do slacaó a cuirtear cun críce nó a slactar cun a leiteir sin de cuspoir as na náisiúnaid is comáltaid d'aon buiom nó d'aon cumann de náisiúnaid a bfuil nó a mbeid an Stáit i scoimlacas leo le haáar comair eadarnáisiúnta i scúrsaib a baineas leo uile.

3° Tí leis an Stáit do beic ina comálta den Coitpobal Eorpac do fual agus cruac (do bunúeac le Conrac do síneac i bparas an 18ad lá d'aireán, 1951), de Coitpobal eacnamaiocá na heorpa (do bunúeac le Conrac do síneac insan Róim an 25ad lá de mártá, 1957) agus den Coitpobal Eorpac do fúinneam adomnac (do bunúeac le Conrac do síneac insan Róim an 25ad lá de mártá, 1957). Tí leis an Stáit an Ionstraim Eorpac donair (do síneac tar ceann balstáit na scoitpobal i Lucsamburg an 17ad lá d'feabra, 1986, agus insan háis an 28ad lá d'feabra, 1986) do áingniú.

4° Tí leis an Stáit an Conrac ar an donas Eorpac a síneac i Maastricht ar an 7ad lá d'feabra, 1992, do áingniú agus tí leis do beic ina comálta den donas san.

5° Tí leis an Stáit Conrac Amstardam as leasú an Conrta ar an donas Eorpac, na scoarctaid as bunú na scoitpobal Eorpac agus Ionstraimí faolmára áirite, a sínió in Amstardam an 2ú lá de Deiread póimair, 1997, a áingniú.

6° Tíis leis an Stát na roghnuithe nó na roghanna a feidmiú a sócráítear le hAirteagail 1.11, 2.5 agus 2.15 den Chonradh dá dtagraítear i bfo-alt 5° den alt seo nó fúthu agus leis an dara prótacal agus leis an gceathrú prótacal atá leasáil amháid sa Chonradh sin nó fúthu ac beirí don feidmiú den sórt sin faoi réir ceathú a fáil roimh ré ó dá téad an Oireáctais.

7° Ní déanann don fórsaíleam atá insan Bunreáct so don tliúite d'áctuiú, gníomhartha do rinne nó bearta le n-ar glac an Stát, de bítin riáctanais na n-oibleasáirí mar cómalta den dochtas Eorpac nó de na Comhobail do cur ó baid tliúirí ná cosc do cur le tliúite d'áctuiú, gníomhartha do rinne nó bearta le n-ar glac an tdochtas Eorpac nó na Comhobail nó instiúití d'óid, nó comúctáí atá inneamhail fá na Connarctáí as bunú na gComhobail, ó feidm tliúirí do beirí sca sa Stát.

8° Tíis leis an Stát an Comhontú maidir le daitinní Comhobail a tarrainúiseadh suas idir bállstáit na gComhobail agus a rinneadh i Lucsamburg ar an 15ú Lú de nollais, 1989, do dainmí.

5. 1° Ní foláir náid connradh eadarnáisiúnta ina mbeirí an Stát páirtead do leasadh ós comhair Óáil Éireann.

2° Don connradh eadarnáisiúnta a cuirfeadh costas ar an gciste poiblíde ní beirí sé ina ceangal ar an Stát muna tóilúirí Óáil Éireann le téarmaíbh an connartha.

3° Ní baineann an t-alt so le connarthaíbh ná le comhontáíbh ar cúrsaíbh teicnice agus riaráidín.

6. Ní beirí don connradh eadarnáisiúnta ina curio de tliúitead inneadónad an Stáit ac mar éinníirí an tOireáctais.

7. 1° Tíis leis an Stát a tóilú a beirí faoi ceangal as Comhontú an Breataine-na hÉireann, arna déanamh i mbéal feirste an 10ú Lú d'áibreán, 1998, ar a dtugtar an Comhontú sa Bunreáct seo feasta.

2° Tíis le haon instiúití a bunófar leis an gComhontú nó faoin gComhontú na cumháctáí agus na feidmeanna a feidmiú a tustar do dá éionn sin i leirí oileán na hÉireann ar fad nó i leirí don curio de d'ainneoin don fórdla eile den Bunreáct seo lena dtugtar cumháct nó feidm dá saimhail d'áon duine nó d'áon orshan Stáit arna ceapadh faoin mbunreáct seo nó arna éruíú nó arna bunú leis an mbunreáct seo nó faoin mbunreáct seo. Féadfaid don cumháct nó don feidm a tábairt d'institiúití den sórt sin i ndáil le hacraimh nó conspóirí a réitead nó a sócrú a beirí i tteannta nó in ionad don cumháct nó don feidme dá saimhail a tustar leis an mbunreáct seo d'áon duine den sórt sin nó d'áon orshan Stáit den sórt sin mar a tóradh.

3° Má déarbáidinn an Riáctas go bfuil an Stát tástá éun beirí faoi oibleasáirí, de bun an Comhontáite, éiríad a tábairt don leasú ar an mbunreáct seo dá dtagraítear sa Comhontú sin, ansin, d'ainneoin Airteagal 46 den Bunreáct seo, déanfar an Bunreáct seo a leasú mar a leanas:

- i. déanfar an hAirteagal seo a leanas a cur in ionad Airteagal 2 agus 3 den téacs áeilíse:

“Airteagal 2.

Tá náid duine a saolaítear in oileán na hÉireann, ar a n-áirítear a oileáin agus a fárraí, i tteirdeal, agus dá de ceart oírdreáctá aise nó aici, a beirí páirtead i náisiún na hÉireann. Tá an teirdeal sin freisin as na daoine go léir atá cáilíte ar slí eile de réir tliú éun beirí ina saoránais d'Éirinn. Ina tteannta sin, is móir as náisiún na hÉireann a cóibneas speisialta le daoine de bunad na hÉireann atá ina gcónaí ar an gcoisríóc agus arb ionann péimíúad agus oírdreáct éultúir tóib agus do náisiún na hÉireann..

Airteagal 3.

1. Is í toil óionúbáilte náisiún na hÉireann, go sítead cairdúil, na daoine go léir a cóimroinneann críóc oileán na hÉireann i bpaírt lena éile, in éasúúad uile a b'féimíúlachtáí a'gus a 'ttráidisiún, a don'tú, á aic'nt gur trí mhóanna síochánta a'áin le toilíú t'romlác na n'aoime, á 'ur in iúl 'so d'áon-lá'c, sa dá 'línse san oileán, a 'éan'ar éire don'taite a 'á'airt i 'scrí'c. 'so 'tí sin, ba'p'í' na 'líte a 'á'tó'ar a'g an b'p'arlaimint a buná'te'ar leis an m'bhunreá'c seo leis an limisté'ar fe'irme céanna a'gus be'í' an raon fe'irme céanna acu, len'ar 'bain na 'líte, a'gus a 'bí a'g na 'líte, a 't'á'c'ta'í' an 'p'arlaimint a 'bí ar mar'tain 'd'íreá'c roim' 'c'eá'c i 'n'ghí'om' 'don bhunreá'c seo.

2. Fé'ar'ar'ó 'u'ar'á'is fé'ar'á'c'a fá'oi seá'c na n'ol'nsí sin inst'it'ú'í' a'g a m'be'í' cu'á'c'tá'í a'gus fe'í'omeanna fe'í'om'ú'c'á'ín a 'c'óim'roim'nte'ar 'í'oir na 'ol'nsí sin a 'bunú' 'cun crí'óc son'ra'ite a'gus fé'ar'ar'ó na hin'st'it'ú'í' sin cu'á'c'tá'í a'gus fe'í'omeanna a fe'í'om'ú' i le'it' an oileá'ín ar fá'ó nó i le'it' don 'c'ú'í' 'de.'.

ii. 'é'an'ar na h'á'ir'te'á'sá'íl seo a leanas a 'c'ur in ion'á'ó á'ir'te'á'sá'íl 2 a'gus 3 'den té'acs Sá'cs-'b'é'ar'l'a:

“Article 2.

It is the entitlement and birthright of every person born in the island of Ireland, which includes its islands and seas, to be part of the Irish nation. That is also the entitlement of all persons otherwise qualified in accordance with law to be citizens of Ireland. Furthermore, the Irish nation cherishes its special affinity with people of Irish ancestry living abroad who share its cultural identity and heritage.

Article 3.

1. It is the firm will of the Irish nation, in harmony and friendship, to unite all the people who share the territory of the island of Ireland, in all the diversity of their identities and traditions, recognising that a united Ireland shall be brought about only by peaceful means with the consent of a majority of the people, democratically expressed, in both jurisdictions in the island. Until then, the laws enacted by the Parliament established by this Constitution shall have the like area and extent of application as the laws enacted by the Parliament that existed immediately before the coming into operation of this Constitution.

2. Institutions with executive powers and functions that are shared between those jurisdictions may be established by their respective responsible authorities for stated purposes and may exercise powers and functions in respect of all or any part of the island.”,

iii. 'é'an'ar an t-'á'lt seo a leanas a 'c'ur leis an té'acs 's'á'eil'se 'den á'ir'te'á'sá'íl seo:

“8. T'í' leis an st'á't 'ol'ínse a fe'í'om'ú' t'á'ob' á'mu'í'g dá 'crí'óc 'de ré'ir bun'ri-'á'lá'c'a 'n'á't-'á'om'á'ite an 'ol'í' 'í'oir'n'á'is'í'ú'nt'a.”, a'gus

iv. 'é'an'ar an t-'á'lt seo a leanas a 'c'ur leis an té'acs Sá'cs-'b'é'ar'l'a 'den á'ir'te'á'sá'íl seo:

“8. The State may exercise extra-territorial jurisdiction in accordance with the generally recognised principles of international law.”.

4° m'á 'é'ant'ar 'de'ar'b'ú' fá'om' á'lt seo, 'é'an'ar an fo-'á'lt seo a'gus fo-'á'lt 3°, seá'c'as an leas'ú' ar an m'bhunreá'c seo a 'é'ant'ar leis an b'fo-'á'lt sin 3°, a'gus fo-'á'lt 5°, 'den á'lt seo a fé'á'sá'íl ar l'ár as 's'á'c' té'acs o'ir'í'sí'ú'íl 'den bhunreá'c seo a foil'se-'o'far dá 'é'is sin, á'c 'd'á'inne'om' í'á'ó a fé'á'sá'íl ar l'ár a'm'la'í'ó le'an'ar'ó' an t-'á'lt seo 't'fe'í'om' 'ol'í' a 'be'í't' á'í'se.

5° m'ura n'ó'é'an'ar 'de'ar'b'ú' 'den só'rt' sin la'is't'í'g 'de' dá' m'í' 'é'á's' ó'n t'r'á'c' a 'c'uir'fe'ar-'an t-'á'lt seo leis an m'bhunreá'c seo nó c'ib'é' t'r'é'm'h'se is fá'í'oe ná sin a 's'ocr'ó'far le 'ol'í', sco'ir'p'í'ó an t-'á'lt seo 'd'é'í'peá'c't' a 'be'í't' leis a'gus fá's'fe'ar ar l'ár é' as 's'á'c' té'acs o'ir'í'sí'ú'íl 'den bhunreá'c seo a foil'se'o'far dá 'é'is sin.

AN TÁRTO-ΔΙΓΗNE.

ΔΙΡΤΕΔΣΔΛ 30.

1. Beirō ÁRTO-Διγήne ann, ΔΣUS IS É IS COΜΑΙRLEAC̄ DON RIAΣΔΛTAS I ΣCÚRSΔIḂ ὈΛIΓIḂ ΔΣUS TΔΑΙRIMÍ ὈΛIΓIḂ, ΔΣUS NÍ FOΛΔIR ὉÓ ΣΔC̄ CUMΔC̄T, ΣΔC̄ FEIḂM ΔΣUS ΣΔC̄ ὉΔΔΣΔS ὉΔ MBRONNTAR NÓ ὉΔ ΣCUIRTEAR ΔIR LEIS AN MḂUNREACT̄ SO NÓ LE ὈΛIΓEAC̄ Ὁ'OIB-RIÚ ΔΣUS ὉO COMLIḂNAC̄.
2. IS ΔΣ AN UACTARÁN Δ CEAPFAR AN TÁRTO-Διγήne ΔR N-Δ ΔIMMIÚ SIM ΔΣ AN TAOISEAC̄.
3. I ΣCΔS ΣΔC̄ COIR ΔΣUS CION ὉΔ ὉTUSΤAR I N-ΔON CÚIRT Δ BUNUIΓTEAR FÁ ΔIRTEΔΣΔΛ 34 DEN ḂUNREACT̄ SO, ΔC̄ ΔHΔM CÚIRT ὈΛIΓINSE ΔC̄COMAIRE, IS I N-ΔIMM AN ḂOBAIL ΔΣUS ΔR ΔΣRA AN ÁRTO-Διγήne, NÓ ΔR ΔΣRA ὉUINE ÉIΣIN EILE Δ UΓḂARUIΓTEAR INA COΜAIR SIM ὉO RÉIR ὈΛIΓIḂ, Δ ὉÉANFAR AN CÚISIÚ.
4. NÍ CEΔO AN TÁRTO-Διγήne BEIT INA COΜΔΛTA DEN RIAΣΔΛTAS.
5. 1° TIS LEIS AN ÁRTO-Διγήne ÉIRGE ΔS OIFIS UΔIR ΔR BIḂ TRÍ N-Δ CÚR SIM I N-IÚIL DON TAOISEAC̄ CÚN AN SCÉAL ὉO CÚR FÁ ḂRΔΣAIḂ AN UACTARÁN.
- 2° TIS LEIS AN TAOISEAC̄, ΔR ΔḂḂARAIB IS LEOR LEIS FÉIN, Δ IARRAIḂ ΔR AN ÁRTO-Διγήne ÉIRGE ΔS OIFIS.
- 3° MUNA NḂÉANAIḂ AN TÁRTO-Διγήne ὉO RÉIR NA HΔC̄CUIḂGE SIM NÍ FOΛΔIR DON UACTARÁN É CÚR ΔS OIFIS MΔ COΜAIRLIΓEANN AN TAOISEAC̄ ὉÓ É.
- 4° NÍ FOΛΔIR DON ÁRTO-Διγήne TUL ΔS OIFIS ΔR ÉIRGE ΔS OIFIS DON TAOISEAC̄, ΔC̄ TIS LEIS LEANAIHAIḂT ὉΔ ὉΔΔΣΔIS NÓ ΣO ΣCEAPTAR COΜARBA AN TAOISIΣ.
6. FÁ CUMSIÚ NA ḂFORΔITÍ SIM ROMAINN DEN ΔIRTEΔΣΔΛ SO IS ὉO RÉIR ὈΛIΓIḂ Δ RIAΣḂOC̄AR OIFIS AN ÁRTO-Διγήne, MAILLE LEIS AN TΔARASTAL IS MIḂCTA LEIS AN TÉ BEAS I SEIB NA HOIFIGE SIM.

AN COΜAIRLE ΣTΔIT.

ΔΙΡΤΕΔΣΔΛ 31.

1. Beirō COΜAIRLE ΣTΔIT ANN CÚN CΔḂAIR IS COΜAIRLE ὉO CΔḂAIRT DON UACTARÁN I ὉTΔOḂ ΣΔC̄ NÍ ὉΔ ΣCUIRFIḂ AN TΔACTARÁN INA ΣCOΜAIRLE, MAIḂIR LE HÉ Ὁ'OIBRIÚ IS ὉO COMLIḂNAC̄ NA ΣCUIHΔC̄T IS NA ḂFEΔḂMANNA Δ

LUAIḂTEAR SA ḂUNREACT̄ SO ὉO BEIT IONOIB-RIΓTE IS IONCOIMLIḂNTA ΔIGE TAR ÉIS COΜAIRLE ὉO ΣΔC̄AC̄O LEIS AN ΣCOΜAIRLE ΣTΔIT, ΔΣUS FOS CÚN ΔON FEΔḂMANNA EILE Δ BRONNTAR ΔR AN ΣCOΜAIRLE SIM LEIS AN MḂUNREACT̄ SO ὉO COMLIḂNAC̄.

2. IS IΔO NA ὉΔOINE SEO LEANAS Δ ḂEAS INA ΣCOΜΔLTΔIB DEN COΜAIRLE ΣTΔIT:
  - i. ὉE ḂUAC̄O OIFIGE: AN TAOISEAC̄, AN TΔHAISTE, AN ḂRÍM-ḂREITΔMḂ, UACTARÁN NA HÁRTO-CÚIRTE, CΔTΔOIRLEAC̄ ὉΔIL ÉIREANN, CΔTΔOIRLEAC̄ ΣEANΔO ÉIREANN, ΔΣUS AN TÁRTO-Διγήne.
  - ii. ΣΔC̄ ὉUINE ΣUR CUMAS ὉÓ ΔΣUS ΣUR Fonn LEIS ΣHIOHÚ INA COΜΔΛTA DEN COΜAIRLE ΣTΔIT, ΔΣUS Δ ḂI TRΔC̄ INA UACTARÁN NÓ INA TAOISEAC̄ NÓ INA ḂRÍM-ḂREITΔMḂ, NÓ INA UACTARÁN ΔR ÁRTO-COΜAIRLE ΣΔORSTΔT ÉIRE-ANN.
  - iii. ΔON ὉΔOINE EILE Δ CEAPFAR ΔΣ AN UACTARÁN FÁN ΔIRTEΔΣΔΛ SO, MΔ CEAPTAR ÉINNE, CÚN BEIT INA ΣCOΜΔLTΔIB DEN COΜAIRLE ΣTΔIT.

3. TIS LEIS AN UACTARÁN UΔIR ΔR BIḂ ΔΣUS Ó AM ΣO HAM CIBÉ ὉΔOINE EILE IS OIREΔIHNAc̄ LEIS, ΔS Δ COΜAIRLE FÉIN, ὉO CÉAPAC̄O LE ḂARÁNTAS FÁ N-Δ ΛÁM IS FÁ N-Δ ΣÉΔLA CÚN BEIT INA ΣCOΜΔLTΔIB DEN COΜAIRLE ΣTΔIT, ΔC̄ NÍ ὉLEΔΣCTAC̄ C̄AR MOIRSEISEAR Δ CEAPTAR ΔR AN ΣCUMA SIM Δ BEIT INA ΣCOΜΔLTΔIB DEN COΜAIRLE ΣTΔIT INSAN AM CÉΔḂNA.

4. NÍ FOΛΔIR ὉO ΣΔC̄ COΜΔΛTA DEN COΜAIRLE ΣTΔIT, AN CÉΔO UΔIR Δ BEIḂ SÉ ΔR CIONḂ DEN COΜAIRLE SIM INA COΜΔΛTA ὉI, AN ὉEARḂAC̄O SO LEANAS ὉO ὉÉANAIḂ ΔΣUS Δ ΛÁM ὉO CÚR LEIS:

“I ΛΔC̄AIR ὉIA NA NḂHILECUMΔC̄T TΔIMSE,

, ὉΔ ΣEΔLLAIHAIḂT ΔΣUS ὉΔ ὉEARḂAC̄O ΣO SOLLAMANTA ΔΣUS ΣO FÍRIN-NEAC̄ MO ὉΔΔΣΔIS IM COΜΔΛTA DEN COΜAIRLE ΣTΔIT ὉO COMLIḂNAC̄O ΣO ὉILIS COMSIΔAC̄.”

5. ΣΔC̄ COΜΔΛTA DEN COΜAIRLE ΣTΔIT Δ CEAPFAR ΔΣ AN UACTARÁN BEIḂO SÉ I SEIB OIFIGE NÓ ΣO ὉCÉIΓIḂ COΜARBA AN UACTARÁN Δ CÉAP É I ΣCÚRAM Δ OIFIGE, SÉ SIM MUNA ὉTÁRLUIΓIḂ ROIME SIM ΣO N-ÉΔΣFAIḂ AN COΜΔΛTA SIM, NÓ ΣO N-ÉIREOC̄AIḂ ΔS OIFIS, NÓ ΣO NGEḂΔIḂ MIḂTROIḂ ḂUAN É, NÓ ΣO ΣCUIRFEAR ΔS OIFIS É.

6. Aon comhalta den Comhairle Stáit dá sceapfaió an tuáctarán tís leis éiríse as oifis trí n-a cur sin i n-úil don uáctarán.
7. Tís leis an uáctarán, ar aóbaráib is leor leis féin, tuine ar bit dár ceap sé don Comhairle Stáit do cur as oifis le horú fá n-a láim asus fá n-a séala.
8. Tís leis an uáctarán an Comhairle Stáit do comórad cibé áit asus am a sócrócaíó sé cuise.

AIRTEAGAL 32.

Cumácta nó feadmanna ar bit so luaitéar ina tsoib insan bunreáct so sur oleasáctá don uáctarán iad o'uibriú nó do comhlíonad tar éis comhairle do glacad leis an sComhairle Stáit, ní cead don uáctarán aon cumáct ná feidm oíob o'uibriú ná do comhlíonad muna scomóra sé an Comhairle Stáit i nscá cás roim ré, asus éisteaáct leis na comhaltaib den Comhairle sin a beas i láctair.

AN TÁRTO-REACTAIRE CUNNTAS ASUS CISTE.

AIRTEAGAL 33.

1. Beid áro-Reactaire Cunntas asus Ciste ann cun scá caiteáin airisio do riaslú tar ceann an Stáit, asus cun iniúctá do déanaí ar scá uile cunntas ar airsead a riaratar as an Oireáctas nó fá uádarás an Oireáctais.
2. Is as an uáctarán a ceapfar an tárto-Reactaire Cunntas asus Ciste, ar n-a ainmnú sin as Óáil Éireann.
3. Ní cead an tárto-Reactaire Cunntas asus Ciste beid ina comhalta de ceáctar de tísctib an Oireáctais, ná beid i n-aon oifis ná post soáir eile.
4. Ní foláir don áro-Reactaire Cunntas asus Ciste tuarascúala do cur ós comair Óáil Éireann ar tráctáib áiríte mar cinnear le dlisead.

5. 1° Ní cead an tárto-Reactaire Cunntas asus Ciste do cur as oifis ac ámáin de beascáib mí-iomáir nó mítreóra a luápar, ná an uair sin féin muna ríctio Óáil Éireann asus Seanao Éireann rúin dá éileáin é cur as oifis.

2° Rúin ar bit den tsórt sin a ríctio Óáil Éireann asus Seanao Éireann ní foláir don taoiseáct scéala a tábairt don uáctarán ina tsoib so cuibe, asus cóib de scá rún den tsamáil sin do seoláó cuise fá teastas áctaoirleaáct an tísge den Oireáctas do ríct é.

3° Láitreaáct o'éis na scéala sin asus cóibeanna de na rúnaib sin o'fásáil don uáctarán ní foláir do, le horú fá n-a láim is fá n-a séala, an tárto-Reactaire Cunntas asus Ciste do cur as oifis.

6. Fá cúmsiú na neite sin roimáin, is le dlisead a cinnear comsealáctá asus cúmsi oifis an áro-Reactaire Cunntas asus Ciste.

NA CÚIRTEANNA.

AIRTEAGAL 34.

1. Is i sCúirteannaib a bunuiscéar le dlisead asus as breiteáinnaib a ceaptar ar an moó acá leasáctá amaáct sa bunreáct so a riarpar ceart, asus is so poiblíde a déanpar sin ac ámáin insna cásannaib speisialta teoranta sin a horúócar le dlisead.
2. Beid ar na cúirteannaib sin Cúirteanna Céadócéime asus Cúirt áctcomairc Óeirio.
3. 1° Beid ar na Cúirteannaib Céadócéime sin áro-Cúirt as a mbeid lán-dliscinse bunair, asus cumáct cun breit do tábairt, i nscá ní asus ceist dliscinó nó fíris cibé síbáilta nó coireáct iad.

2° Tsoib amuis de cás dá socruiscéar a málairt leis an Airteagal so, beid dliscinse as an áro-Cúirt maidir leis an sceist sin bail do beid nó san a beid ar aon dlisead áiríte as féacáint o'foráiltib an bunreáctá so, asus ní cead aon ceist den tsórt sin do tárrainis anuas (trí plétoeáil ná arsóint ná eile) i sCúirt ar bit, ar n-a bunú fáin Airteagal so nó fá aon Airteagal eile den bunreáct so, seacás an áro-Cúirt nó an Cúirt uáctarác.

3° Ní beirte óliúinse aS Cúirt ar bit cun bailiúeáct óliúinó nó fórdáilte ar bit de óliúeáó do cun i n-áinras is óliúeáó a n-óeárhna an tuáctarán an hille le n-a ášáir do cun fá breit na Cúirte uáctaráiše fá áirteášal 26 den bunreáct so, ná cun bailiúeáct fórdáilte de óliúeáó do cun i n-áinras má rinne an tuáctarán an fórdáileáin cóim-réire insan hille le hášáir an óliúinó sin do cun fá breit na Cúirte uáctaráiše fáin áirteášal sin 26.

4° Beirte ar na Cúirteannaib Céadócéime, fairis sin, Cúirteanna aS a mbeirte óliúinse ceoranta áiteáinail maille le ceart áctóináirc ina n-ášáir fá mar cinneáar le óliúeáó.

4. 1° An Cúirt uáctarác is teirdeal don Cúirt áctóináirc óeirió.

2° An príim-óreiteáin is teirdeal ó uáctarán na Cúirte uáctaráiše.

3° Taob amuis de cibé eisceáctá aSus fá cúimsiú cibé riášláca oróócar le óliúeáó, beirte óliúinse áctóináirc aS an sCúirt uáctaráiš ar breáctáib uile na hárd-Cúirte aSus, fairis sin, ar na breáctáib sin ó Cúirteannaib eile a oróócar le óliúeáó.

4° Ní ceáó don óliúeáó ó'áctú do cúir- feáó ar an ótaob amuis de óliúinse áctóináirc na Cúirte uáctaráiše cásanma ina mbeáó ceisteáanna le réiróteáó i ótaob bail do beirte nó šan a beirte ar don óliúeáó, aS féáóáin ó fórdáiltib an bunreáctá so.

5° Isé éraoláas breit na Cúirte uáctaráiše ar ceist i ótaob bail do beirte nó šan a beirte ar óliúeáó aS féáóáin ó fórdáiltib an bunreáctá so ná an tuine sin de breiteáináib na Cúirte sin a ceá- páir an Cúirt sin cúige sin, aSus ní ceáó tuáirim ar bit eile ar an sCeist sin, aS donóú nó aS eásonóú leis an mbreit sin, do éraoláó ná ní ceáó a noóctáó tuáirim ar bit eile den óórt sin do beirte ánn.

6° Ní beirte óul tar breit na Cúirte uáctaráiše i šcás ar bit.

5. 1° Šac tuine a ceápar cun beirte ina breiteáin fáin mbunreáct so ní fólar do an óeárbáó so leanas do óéanáin aSus a láin do cun leis:

"1 LÁCAIR Óia na nuilecúináct táimse, , óá šealláináin aSus óá óeárbáó šo sollámaná aSus šo fírinneáó šo šcoimlíonáó šo cuibe aSus šo óilis, cóin máit aSus is eol aSus is cumas dom, oipis an príim-óreiteáin (nó do réir mar oireas) šan eášlá šan cláonáó, šan háiró šan óró- áišne cun tuine ar bit, aSus šo šcoimóóáó bunreáct aSus óliúeáó éireánn. Óia dom štíúráó aSus dom cúinóáó."

2° Is i LáCAIR an uáctaráin a óéanáir an príim-óreiteáin an óeárbáó sin aSus a cúirpíó a láin leis, aSus is insan cúirt šo poiblíóe aSus i LáCAIR an príim-óreiteáin nó an breiteáin den Cúirt uáctaráiš is sinseáraiše óá mbeirte ar fášáil a óéanáiró šac breiteáin eile den Cúirt uáctaráiš aSus šac breiteáin den árd-Cúirt aSus de šac Cúirt eile an óeárbáó sin aSus a cúirpíó láin leis.

3° Ní fólar do šac breiteáin an óeárbáó do óéanáin aSus a láin do cun leis šara ótéiúó i šcúram óualšas a oipise, aSus cibé scéal é, ar óáta náó óeiróeáinše ná óeic lá tar éis láe a ceápta, nó óáta is óeiróeáinše ná sin mar cinneáir an tuáctarán.

4° Don breiteáin a óiúltócas nó a fáilleócas an óeárbáó réáinráiróte do óéanáin ní fólar a inéas šo bfuil scárcá áiše le n-a oipis.

Áirteášal 35.

1. Is aS an uáctarán a ceápar breiteáinán na Cúirte uáctaráiše, na hárd-Cúirte aSus an uile Cúirte eile a bunuigšear do bun áirteášail 34 den bunreáct so.
2. Beirte šac breiteáin šaor neáin-spleáóac máitóir le n-a féáómanna breiteáinán ó'óibriú, šan de smáct air ác an bunreáct so aSus an óliúeáó.
3. Ní ceáó don breiteáin do beirte ina cóinálta de ceáctar de óiúitib an Oireáctáis, ná beirte i n-aon oipis ná post sóáir eile.
4. 1° Ní ceáó breiteáin den Cúirt uáctaráiš ná den árd-Cúirt do cun aS oipis ác áináin de óeáscáib mí-íomáir nó mítreóra a luáópar, ná an uáir sin féin muna riéiró óáil éireánn aSus Seanáó éire- ánn rúin óá éileáin é cun aS oipis.

2° Rúin ar bit den óórt sin a riéipíó Óáil éireánn aSus Seanáó éireánn ní fólar don óaóiseáó scéala do tábairt don uáctarán ina ótaob šo cuibe aSus cóib de šac rúin óiob do šeoláó cúige fá ceástas Cátaoirleáó an óiúe den Oireáctáis do rié é.

3° Láitreada d'éis na scéala sin agus cóibeanna de na rúnaib sin d'fáidil don uachtarán ní foláir dó, le hordú fá n-a Láim is fá n-a Séala, an breiteam le n-a mbainn do cur as oifis.

5. Ní ceao laistóu do déanaí ar tuarastal breiteam an fáid is beir m oifis.

ÁIRTEAGAL 36.

fá cumsiú na bporáilte sin roiminn den bunreacht so a baineas leis na Cúirteannaib is do réir dlí is a rialóid na neite seo leanas .1.

- i. Líon breiteamán na Cúirte uachtaraige, agus na hárd-cúirte, tuarastal, aois scórta agus pinsin na mbreiteamán sin,
- ii. Líon breiteamán sa Cúirte eile, agus na comheallacha fá sceaparaí, agus
- iii. comhéanaí agus comheagraidheacht na scúirteanna sin, roinnt na dlí is agus na hoibre ar na Cúirteannaib sin agus ar na breiteamánib sin, agus sa n-áirteagál le n-áirteagál.

ÁIRTEAGAL 37.

1. Aon duine nó aon dream so n-údaruisítear so cuibhe dóib le dlí is feadomanna agus cumácta teoranta breiteamánais d'oibriú i scúrsaib nac cúrsaí coireacta, má oibriú na feadomanna agus na cumácta sin ní beir an t-oibriú sin san bail dlí is de bítin aon ní insan bunreacht so, siú is nac breiteam ná cúirt do ceapad nó do bunuigead mar breiteam nó mar cúirt fán mbunreacht so an duine nó an dream sin.
2. Ní raib ná ní beir aon uctáil ar duine do glac éireact nó a bfuil sé sainráidte sur glac sí éireact aon trác tar éis don bunreacht seo do ceact i ngníom faoi dlí is d'áctuis an coireactas agus is uctáil de bun ordú do rinne nó údarú do tuis aon duine nó aon dream a bí sonruigte leis na dlí is sin cun na feadomanna agus na cumácta sin d'oibriú ó bail dlí is de bítin aindín nar breiteam ná cúirt do ceapad nó do bunuigead mar breiteam nó mar cúirt faoin mbunreacht seo an duine nó an dream sin.

TRIAIL I SCIONTAIB.

ÁIRTEAGAL 38.

1. Ní ceao éinne do triail i n-aon cúis coirctis ac mar is cuibhe do réir dlí is.
2. Féadfar mion-cionta do triail as cúirteanna dlí is seachtaire.
3. 1° Féadfar cúirteanna fá leit do bunú le dlí is cun cionta do triail i scásannaib so scinnear ma tacaob, do réir an dlí is sin, nac leor na gná-cúirteanna cun riaraob cirt do cur i bfeim le héireact agus cun síocáin agus ord poibliche do áoinna.

2° Is le dlí is seachtaire a socróid comhéanaí, cumácta, dlí is agus n-áirteagál na scúirteanna fá leit sin.

4. 1° Féadfar binnsí míleata do bunú cun daoine do triail i sciontaib i n-áirteagál dlí is míleata aoirtear do rinnead le linn a mbeir fá dlí is míleata, agus fós cun broic le heisic nó le ceannaire fá arm.

2° Duine de na fórsaib Cosanta ná fuil ar fianas ní ceao é triail i lácair aon arm-cúirte ná binnsé míleata eile i scion is mtrialte insna cúirteannaib síbiaita, muna cion é ac fá dlí is aon arm-cúirte nó binnsé míleata eile fá aon dlí is cun smaict míleata do cur i bfeim.

5. Ní ceao duine do triail i n-aon cúis coirctis ac i lácair coiste tiomanta, ac aindín i scás cionta do triail fá alt 2, alt 3 nó alt 4 den áirteagál so.
6. Ní bairé fórdáilte áirteagáil 34 ná áirteagáil 35 den bunreacht so le haon cúirt ná le haon binnsé a bunóid fá alt 3 nó alt 4 den áirteagál so.

ÁIRTEAGAL 39.

Is é aindín is tréas ann: coşad do cur ar an stáct, nó cabrú le stáct nó le duine ar bit, nó saigeadad fá duine, nó beir i scoimceil is le duine, cun coşad do cur ar an stáct; nó iarract do déanaí le harm nó ar móð fóireigheact eile ar na hórşain rialaitais a bunuigetar leis an mbunreacht so do trascairt; nó páirt nó baint do beir as neac le n-a leiteo sin d'iarract, nó éinne do saigeadad nó beir i scoimceil is leis cun a déanta nó cun páirt nó baint do beir aise léi.

bun-CÚIRT.

CIRT PEARSANTA.

AIRTEAGAL 40.

1. Áirimítear surb ionann ina bpearsain daonna na saoránais uile i láthair an tUachtaraí.

Ac ní hiontuigte as sin ná féadfaid an Stát go cuibhe, ina chúir a dtacaán, don deifriúeact atá iomr daoinib ina mbuaduib corporda agus ina mbuaduib móralta agus ina bfeiom coimhdaonmáis.

2. 1° Ní cead don Stát sairm uaisleacta do bronnao ar éinne.

2° Ní cead t'adon tsaoránac sairm uaisleacta ná sairm onóra do glacaó ac le haontaó roim ré ón Rialtas.

3. 1° Ráctuíseann an Stát san cur istead le n-a tUachtaraib ar ceartaib pearsanta don tsaoránais, agus ráctuíseann pós na cirt sin do cosaing is do suirdeam le n-a tUachtaraib sa mhéid sur féidir é.

2° Téalfaid an Stát, go sonnaoac, le n-a tUachtaraib, beacta agus pearsa agus deact-clú agus maom-cirt an uile saoránais do cosaing ar ionnsaige éascóraac coim paoda le n-a cumas, agus iad do suirdeam i scás éascóra.

3° Admáionn an Stát ceart na mbeo san breic cun a mbeacta agus, as féadaint go cuí do coimceart na mátar cun a beacta, ráctáionn sé san cur istead lena tUachtaraib ar an sceart sin agus ráctáionn pós an ceart sin a cosaing is a suiom lena tUachtaraib sa mhéid sur féidir é.

Ní teorannóid an fo-alt seo saoirse cun taisteal iomr an Stát agus Stát eile.

Ní teorannóid an fo-alt seo saoirse cun paisnéis a fáil nó a cur ar fáil sa Stát maomir le seirbísí atá ar fáil go tleactac i Stát eile ac sin paoi cuimsiú cibé coimnollac a féadfar a leasán síos le tUachtaraib.

4. 1° Ní cead a saoirse pearsanta do baing t'adon tsaoránac ac aindin do réir tUachtaraib.

2° Nuair téannann tuine ar bit searain, nó a téantár searain tar ceann tuine ar bit, leis an Árd-Cúirt nó le breiteam ar bit tó dá rád go bfuil an tuine sin dá coimneail ina braidse go hainoleactac, ní poláir don Árd-Cúirt agus t'adon breiteam agus do scás breiteam tó cun a noéantár an searain sin fiosrú do téannam láitreaac i tUachtaraib an searain sin, agus féadfaid a ordú do neac coimnigte an tuine sin ina braidse an tuine sin do tadbairt ina pearsain i láthair na hÁrd-Cúirte lá a ainnnigtear agus a deimniú i scríbhinn cad is forais dá braidseannas, agus ní poláir don Árd-Cúirt, nuair do breitear an tuine sin ina pearsain i láthair na Cúirte sin agus tar éis caoi do tadbairt do neac a coimnigte ina braidse ar a cruicú sur braidseannas cóir an braidseannas, a ordú an tuine sin do scaoileao as an mbraidseannas sin muna deimhin leis an scúirt sin sur do réir an tUachtaraib atá coimneail.

3° I scás tuine adreitear do beic dá coimneail ina braidse go hainoleactac do tadbairt ina pearsain i láthair na hÁrd-Cúirte de bun ordúigte cuise sin ar n-a téannam fán alt so agus sur deimhin leis an scúirt sin an tuine sin do beic dá coimneail ina braidse do réir tUachtaraib ac an tUachtaraib sin do beic neambailre as féadaint t'foráiltib an bunreacta so, ní poláir don Árd-Cúirt an ceist sin bail do beic nó san a beic ar an tUachtaraib sin do cur fá breic na Cúirte uactaraisse i bfuirm éais riomta agus féadfaid, le linn an ceist sin do cur fá breic amlaio nó trác ar bit ina tUachtaraib sin, leisean don tuine sin a saoirse do beic aise, fá réir na mbannaí agus na scoimgeallacá sin a ceapfaid an Árd-Cúirt, go tó go tUachtaraib an Cúirt uactarac breic ar an sceist a cuirfear fá n-a breic amlaio.

4° Is triúr breiteamhan is Árd-Cúirt i n-adon éas aingite, ina noéantár tuine adreitear do beic á coimneail ina braidse go hainoleactac do tadbairt ina pearsain i láthair na hÁrd-Cúirte de bun ordúigte cuise sin ar n-a téannam fán alt so, má téannann uactarain na hÁrd-Cúirte nó, muna mbeid seisean ar faidil, an breiteam is sinsearaisse den Cúirt sin dá mbeid ar faidil a ordú, i tUachtaraib an éas sin, an líon sin do beic inri agus is breiteam aindin is Árd-Cúirt i nscás éas eile den tsórt sin.

5° I scás an Árd-Cúirt nó breiteam tó do téannam ordúigte fán alt so dá ordú tuine fá breic éais do tadbairt i láthair ina pearsain, ní poláir don Árd-Cúirt nó don breiteam sin tó a ordú preisin feiomniú na breite báis sin do mhoilliú go dtí go dtiubairfear an duine sin ina pearsain i lárthair na hárto-úirte agus go gcinnefar an oleastac an duine sin do coinneáil ina bdráige nó nac oleastac agus má cinntear, tar éis an feiróimíste sin do mhoilliú, sur oleastac an duine sin do coinneáil ina bdráige, ceapfaid an áro-úirt lá cun an breit báis sin o'feiróimí agus beid éifeact as an mbreit báis sin pá réir an lá ceapfar amlaio do cur i n-ionad an lae socruigead i dtosac cun an breit báis sin o'feiróimí.

6° Ac don ghníomh de ghníomhaib na b'pórsaí Cosanta le linn eisíte nó ceannairce pá arm, ní cead don ní dá b'pail insan alt so o'asairt cun an ghníomh sin do choirmeasc nó do riaslú nó do bac.

7° Féadfar socrú a déanamh le dlí cun go b'féadfaid úirt bannaí a díultú do duine atá cúisíte i gcion tromaí sa cás go measfar le réasún é a beit riasctanaic cun an duine sin a cosc ar éion tromaí a déanamh.

5. Is slán do sac saoránac a ionad comhaidíte, agus ní cead dul istead ann go foireisneac ac do réir dlíste.
6. 1° Rácuigeann an Stát saoirse cun an cirt seo leanas o'uibríú ac san do beit pá réir uird is móraltaicéa poiblíde:—

- i. Ceart na saoránac cun a ndéimní is a dtuairimí do noctad san bac.

Ac toisc oileamaint aigne an pobail do beit com tadbactac sin do leas an pobail, féadfaid an Stát le n-a cur i n-áiríte ná déanfar orsain aigne an pobail, mar sompla, an raio is an preas is an cineama, o'úsaid cun an t-ord nó an móraltaicéa poiblíde nó ugdarás an Stáit do bonn-brisead. Insan am céadna coimeadfaid na horzain sin an tsaoirse is oleact doib cun tuairimí do noctad agus orca sin tuairimí léirímeasa ar beartas an riaslatais.

Don ní diaimslac nó ceannairceac nó draosta o'poillsiú nó o'áitris is cion in'pionóis é do réir dlíste.

- ii. Ceart na saoránac cun teact ar tionól go síteoilte san arm.

Féadfar socrú do déanamh do réir dlíste cun cosc do cur nó riaslú do déanamh ar éionláib go gcinnefar do réir dlíste sur baosal brisead síotcána do teact doib nó sur contadairt nó cradónas don pobal i scoitcínne iad, agus fós ar éionláib i scoimhar do ceactar de tisteib an oireactais.

- iii. Ceart na saoránac cun comlacais agus cumainn do bunú.

Ac is cead dlíste o'actú cun oibriú an cirt réamráite do riaslú agus do stiúrao ar máite leis an bpobal.

2° Ní cead don toirdealú, maidir le poiliticeact nó creideamh nó aicmí, do beit i n'olisteib a riasluigeas mo'oibriste an cirt cun comlacais agus cumainn do bunú agus an cirt cun teact le céile ar saor-éionól.

An Teaglac.

Airteagal 41.

1. 1° Doimigeann an Stát surb é an teaglac is buidean-donad príomda bunaid don comhdonnac do réir nádúra, agus sur foras móralta é as a b'pail cirt do-shannta do-claoite is ársa agus is airde ná don react donna.

2° Os é an teaglac is foča riasctanaic don ord comhdonnac agus os éiseantac é do leas an náisiúin agus an Stáit, rácuigeann an Stát comsuideam agus ugdarás an teaglais do éomna.

2. 1° Go somraoac, doimigeann an Stát go dtuagann an bean don Stát, trí n-a saosal insan teaglac, congnam ná féadfaid leas an pobail do gnoctacan dá éasmuis.

2° Uime sin, féadfaid an Stát le n-a cur i n-áiríte ná beid ar máitreaicib cloinne, de deascuib uireasba, dul le saotar agus faillice do cladairt dá éion sin ina ndualgais insan teaglac.

3. 1° Ós ar an bPósaó atá an Teaghlac bunuigíte sa bhann an Stáit ar féin coimirce fá leif do théanaí ar ord an pósta agus é cosaint ar ionnsaíge.

2° Féadfaid Cúirt a beid ainmníte le dlí scaoilead ar pósaó a tadbairt sa chás, ac sa chás aindin, sur deimhin léi-

i. go raib, ar tóata tionscnaí na n-imeadtaí, tréimse ceitre bliana ar a laşad, nó tréimhí ceitre bliana ar a laşad san iomlán, caite as na céilí ina scónaí ar leitlíg óna céile le linn na scúis bliana roimé sin,

ii. nac bfuil ioncas réasúnaic ar bit ann go mbeid comhréiteac idir na céilí,

iii. go bfuil cibé socrú ann, nó go ndéanfar cibé socrú, is dóig leis an scúirt a beid cuí as féadaint do na himtoscá, le haşaio ná scéilí, le haşaio don leanaí le ceactar acu nó leis an mbeirt acu agus le haşaio don duine eile a beid forordaité le dlí, agus

iv. go scoimlíontar don coimníollaca breise a beid forordaité le dlí.

3° I scás pósaó duine ar bit do scaoilead fá tligéad síbialta don Stáit eile agus an pósaó san, agus bail tligéio air, do beid ann pús fáin tligéad beas i bfeioim i n-ait na huaire taob istig de tligimse an Rialtaais agus na párlaiminte bunuigítear leis an mDunreac so, ní féadfaid an duine sin pósaó ar a mbead bail tligéio do théanaí taob istig den tligimse sin an fáio is beo don duine eile bí sa cúig pósta do scaoilead aindair.

OIDEACAS.

Airteasal 42.

1. Doimúigeann an Stáit surb é an Teaghlac is múinteoir príomía dúicásac don leand, agus ráctuígeann san cur isteaic ar ceart do-sannta ná ar tualşas do-sannta tuistí cun oideacas do réir a n-acfuinne do cur ar faşáil dá şclainn i şcúrsaib creioim, móraltaic, inleaic, cuirp agus comhdonnaic.

2. Tis le tuistib an t-oideacas sin do cur ar faşáil dá şclainn as baile nó i scolairb príobáioeaca nó i scolairb a doimúigítear nó a bunuigítear as an Stáit.

3. 1° Ní cead don Stáit a cur o'fiacáib ar tuistib, i n-aşaio a şcoinsiais nó a roşan oleaic, a şclainn do cur ar scolairb a bunuigítear as an Stáit nó ar don cimeal áirite scoile a ainmnúigítear as an Stáit.

2° Ac ós é an Stáit caoimnaioe leasa an íobail ní poláir do, toisc cor an lae, é théanaí éiseantaic minimum áirite oideacais do tadbairt do na leandairb i şcúrsaib móraltaic, inleaic agus comhdonnaic.

4. Ní poláir don Stáit socrú do théanaí cun bunoidacas do beid ar faşáil in misce, agus iarraic do théanaí cun cabrú go réasúnta agus cun cur le tionscnaí oideacais idir íríobáioeac agus cumanta agus, nuair is riactanas cun leasa an íobail é, áiseanna nó fonóioeac eile oideacais do cur ar faşáil, as féadaint go cuibe, áitac, do ceartaib tuistí, go móir-móir maidir le múnlú na haighe i şcúrsaib creioim is móraltaic.

5. I scásairb neam-coitceanna nuair tárluígeann, ar cúiseannaib corporía nó ar cúiseannaib móralta, ná théanaio na tuistí a ndualşais dá şclainn, ní poláir don Stáit, ós é an Stáit caoimnaioe leasa an íobail, iarraic do théanaí le beart oireamnac cun ionad na dtuistí do şlacad, as féadaint go cuibe i scoimnaioe, áitac, do ceartaib ndóirta do-claioite an leimb.

maoin íríobáioeac.

Airteasal 43.

1. 1° Doimúigeann an Stáit, toisc buad an réasúim do beid as an duine, go bfuil sé de ceart ndóirta aige maoin tsaosalta do beid aige dá cúio féin go príobáioeac, ceart is ársa ná reaic doanna.

2° Uime sin, ráctuígeann an Stáit şan don tligéad o'actú o'iarraio an ceart sin, ná şnáic-ceart an duine cun maoin do şannad agus do tionscnaic agus do şlacad ina hoioeac, do cur ar ceal.

2. 1° Ac adomúigeann an Stát sur cuíbe, insan comhdonnadh síbialta, oibríú na sceart atá luaithe insna foráilteib sin roimhinn den Airteagal so do riaslú do réir bunriaslaí an éirt comhdonnais.

2° Uime sin, tug leis an Stát, do réir mar beas riachtanach, teóra do cur le hoibríú na sceart réamhráirte d'fionn an t-oibríú sin agus leis an pobail do tadbairt dá céile.

Creideamh.

Airteagal 44.

1. Adomúigeann an Stát go bfuil as dul do 'Dia na n-ilecúimhacht é d'adras le hómós go poiblíde. Beir urraim as an Stát dá ainm, agus béarfaid oirímhinn agus onóir do Créideamh.
2. 1° Ráctuístear do shac saoránach saoirse coimsias is saor-éad adhála is cleachtá creidiú, ac shan san do dul cun dochar don ord poiblíde ná don mhórdlath poiblíde.

2° Ráctuígeann an Stát shan don córas creidiú do mhóimí.

3° Ní cead don Stát neac do cur fá mhí-cumas ar bit ná don iorídealú do déanamh mar sheall ar créideamh nó adhála creidiú nó céim i scúrsaib creidiú.

4° Reachtairdeacht le n-a scuirtear congnamh Stáit ar fásáil do scoláib ní cead iorídealú do déanamh innti iorí scoláib atá fá haimistiúe aicmí creidiú seachas a céile ná í do déanamh dochar do ceart don leim cun scoil a sheibeann airgead poiblíde d'frestal shan teagasc creidiú sa scoil sin d'frestal.

5° Tá sé de ceart as shac aicme creidiú a ngnótaí féin do haimistiúe, agus maoin, iorí só-aistriúe agus do-aistriúe, do beir dá scuid féin aca, agus í d'fásáil agus do riarad, agus fonduireachtá cun crícheanna creidiú is carctannaictá do cótabáil.

6° Ní cead maoin don aicme creidiú ná don fonduireachtá oideachais do baint díob ac ahdám le haíad oibreachtá riachtanacha cun áise poiblíde, agus san tar éis cúiteam d'íoc leo.

bun-treora do beartas comhdonnadh.

Airteagal 45.

Is mar shac-treoir don Oireachtas a ceapad na bunriaslaí do beartas comhdonnadh atá leasáta amac insan Airteagal so. Is ar an Oireachtas ahdám a beir sé de cúram na bunriaslaí sin d'feirmíú i n-éanamh dlúste, agus ní hintríalite as cúirt ar bit ceist i ttabó an feirmíste sin fá don foráilteam d'foráilteib an bunreachtá so.

1. Déanfaid an Stát a díceall cun leas an pobail uile do cur cun cinn trí ord comhdonnadh, ina mbeir ceart agus carctannaict as riaslú shac forais a haineas leis an saogal náisiúnta, do cur i n-áiríte agus do éaoimna com fada le n-a cumas.
2. Déanfaid an Stát, go sonnradhac, a beartas do stiúrad i slúe go scuirtear i n-áiríte:—
- go bfuigí do na saoránais (agus tá ceart aca uile, iorí fear is bean, cun leor-slúe beactá), trí n-a ngnarmáib beactá, caoi cun soláctar réasúnta do déanamh do riachtanais a tteaslaic.
  - go roinnfead dílse agus urlámhas sustail saogalata an pobail ar pearsanaib príobáideacha agus ar na haicmí éagsaíla insan cuma is fearr a racas cun leasa an pobail.
  - go sonnradhac, ná leifear d'oibríú na saor-iomairdeachtá dul cun cinn i slúe go dtiocfaid de an dílse nó an t-urlámhas ar earráib riachtanacha do beir ina lámáib féin as beasán daime cun dochar don pobal.
  - surb é leas an pobail uile is bun-cuspóir agus is príom-cuspóir a riaslócas ina mbaineann le hurlámhas creideamhasa.

- v. So mbunócar ar an talaímh fá slántháil féilleasraísh an oiread teaslaic agus is féidir do réir cor an tsaosáil.
3. 1° Féadfaid an Stát le fonn ar tionnscnaíh príobháideac i gcúrsaibh tionnscail is trádáil agus cuirfid leis nuair is gá d'ádh sin.
- 2° Déanfaid an Stát iarraicé cun a cur
 i n-áiricé so stiúrfaí fionntaraídeacé príobháideac i slíse gur veimh so ndéanfaí earráí do éairgead agus o'iomháil le hinneamlaicé réasúnta agus so gcosnócar an pobal ar b'rábús éascóracé.
4. 1° Gá d'ádh an Stát air féim cosaint sonnraicé do dhéanaíh ar leas féilleasraicé na n-áicmí is luísa cuíacé den pobal agus, nuair beas riáctanas leis, cabair maireacéana do éairicé don easláih, don báinricé, don oilleacé agus don tsean.
- 2° Déanfaid an Stát iarraicé cun a cur
 i n-áiricé ná dhéanfaí neart agus sláinte luicé oibre, roir féaraibh is mnáibh, ná maoc-óise leahb o'éascóracé, agus ná beid ar saoránaicéibh, de dhéascaibh uireasbá, dul le garmáibh ná hoireann dá nshé nó dhán-aois nó dá neart.

an bunreacé do leasú.

airteasáil 46.

1. is cead foráileah ar bit den bhunreacé so do leasú, le hacarrú nó le breisiú nó le haisgairim, ar an moé sochrucéar leis an airteasáil so.
2. Gáic togra cun an bhunreacé so do leasú ní foláir é tionnscnaíh i n'óáil éireann ma hille, agus nuair a ricéar nó a meastar a ricéad é as óá ticé an oireacéais ní foláir é cur fá breicé an pobail le Reifreann do réir an ólicéir beas i b'péim i t'caobh an Reifrimh i n-áit na huairé.
3. ní foláir a luáó i n'gac hille den tsórt sin é beicé ma "acé cun an bhunreacé do leasú".

4. An hille ma mbeid togra nó tograí cun an bhunreacé so do leasú ní cead togra ar bit eile beicé ann.
5. An hille ma mbeid togra cun an bhunreacé so do leasú ní foláir don uacéarán a láih do cur leis láicreacé, ar mbeicé sásta óó gur comhlíonad foráilicé an airteasáil seo ma caobh agus gur óoilicé an pobal so cuibe leis an togra sin do réir foráilicé áit 1 o'airteasáil 47 den bhunreacé so, agus ní foláir don uacéarán é pósaicé so cuibe ma ólicéad.

an Reifreann.

airteasáil 47.

1. Gáic togra dhéantar cun an bhunreacé so do leasú agus a cuircear fá breicé an pobail le Reifreann, ní foláir a meas, cun críce airteasáil 46 den bhunreacé so, so óoilicéann an pobal leis an o'togra sin má éairluicéann, tar éis é cur mar sin fá breicé an pobail, gur ar caobh é acéú ma ólicéad a tucéar tromlacé na bócaí a tucéar insan Reifreann sin.
2. 1° Gáic togra, nacé togra cun leasucé an bhunreacé, a cuircear fá breicé an pobail le Reifreann ní foláir a meas so noicéluicéann an pobal do más i n-áicéir é acéú ma ólicéad a tucéar tromlacé na bócaí a tucéar insan Reifreann sin, agus nacé luísa an méicé bócaí a tucéar áhlaicé i n-áicéir é acéú ma ólicéad ná cion tricé tricéad is tricéan fáih gcead de líon na o'tocóirí acá ar an rolla.
- 2° Gáic togra, nacé togra cun leasucé
 an bhunreacé, a cuircear fá breicé an pobail le Reifreann ní foláir a meas, cun críceanna airteasáil 27 den bhunreacé so, so óoilicéann an pobal leis muna noicéluicéir do do réir foráilicé an pó-áit sin romáinn den áit so.
3. Gáic saoránaicé as a b'ruil sé de céart bócaí i o'tocéan do comáitáibh de óáil éireann tá sé de céart aise bócaí i Reifreann.

4. Fá cúimsiú na neirte réamhráiríte is le tliḡeadó ríáḡlócar an Reifreann.

bunreáct ḡaorstáct éireann o'aisḡairm aḡus tliḡte o'o buanú.

airteáḡal 48.

An bunreáct a beas i bfeiróm o'o ḡaorstáct éireann o'ireáct roimh lá an bunreáct so o'o tēáct i nḡníoim aḡus an tādct um bunreáct ḡaorstáct éireann, 1922, sa mheir o'o mbeir an tādct sin nó don foráileamh o'e i bfeiróm an uair sin, aisḡairmtear leis seo iad aḡus beir aisḡairmte an lá sin aḡus as sin amac.

airteáḡal 49.

1. ḡac uile cúimáct, feiróm, ceart aḡus san-cumas o'o b'í ionoibríḡte i ḡaorstáct éireann nó i o'taoḡ ḡaorstáct éireann o'ireáct roimh an 11o lá o'e m'í noo'laḡ, 1936, cibé aca o'e buao an bunreácta a b'í i bfeiróm an uair sin é nó nac eao, aḡ an uḡo'arás aḡ a raiḡ cúimáct coimállac ḡaorstáct éireann an uair sin, o'earbctar leis seo ḡur leis an b'pobal iad uile.

2. Ac amáin sa mheir o'o no'ean'ar so'crú leis an mbunreáct so, nó o'o no'ean'ar so'crú ina o'iair o'e le tliḡeao, cun o'o n-oibreo'ar, le haon orḡan o'á mbunuiḡtear leis an mbunreáct so, don cúimáct, feiróm, ceart nó san-cumas o'ioḡ sin, ac'uiḡtear leis seo nac o'leáḡta'ac aḡus nac feiróm na cúimácta, na fea'omanna, na cirt, aḡus na san-cumais sin o'oibriú sa stáct nó i o'taoḡ an stáct ac amáin aḡ an ríáḡal'tas nó le huḡo'arás an ríáḡal'tais.

3. Is é an ríáḡal'tas is coimarda ar ríáḡal'tas ḡaorstáct éireann i ḡacás ḡac maoinē, so'cimáinne, cirt aḡus feiceamhais.

airteáḡal 50.

1. Na tliḡte beas i bfeiróm i ḡaorstáct éireann o'ireáct roimh lá an bunreáct so o'o tēáct i nḡníoim lea'pao o'e beir i lán-feiróm aḡus i lán-éireáct, fá cúimsiú an bunreácta so aḡus sa mheir ná fuilid ina coimnib, o'o o'tí o'o n-aisḡairmtear nó o'o leasuiḡtear iad nó don cuir o'ioḡ le hac'tú ón o'ireáctas.

2. Tliḡte beas ac'uiḡte roimh an mbunreáct so o'o tēáct i nḡníoim aḡus o'o mbeir luairte ionnta iad o'o tēáct i bfeiróm o'á éis sin, tío'pao i bfeiróm o'o réir mar luairtear ionnta muna n-ac'uiḡir an o'ireáctas a m'alairt.

IRISH INDEX INNÉACS GAEILGE

This is principally an index referring to the commentaries in the study on the various Articles rather than a concordance or glossary. Translations/meanings of the headwords below as given in standard dictionaries will be found in the commentaries, along with citations from official translations.

- abair: declare 15.5; allege 38.4.1°, 40.4.2°; mar a dúradh: see 27.4.2°
- ábhar: ground 27.3°; reason 28.9.4°
- ábhar fuinnimh: potential energy 10.1
- ábhar maoinne: resource 10.1
- abhcoídí: counsel 26.2.1°
- ach: however 15.2.2°; with 15.8.2°; save 40.5
- ach amháin: save 12.10.4°; save only 49.2
- ach amháin sa mhéid go: save in so far as 17.1.2°
- ach sin: see 40.3.3°
- achainí: request 22.2.3°, 25.2.2°, 28.9.4°; petition 26.3.2°
- achomharc: appeal 34.2, 34.4.3°
- achrann: dispute 29.2
- achtaigh: enact 13.3.1°, 15.4.2°
- acmhainn: means 42.1
- adhair: worship 44.1.1°
- admhaigh: acknowledge 40.3.3°, 42.1; recognise 42.2
- admháil: profess 44.2.1°; acknowledging preamble
- ag: by 38.2; a bheith aige dá chuid féin: private ownership 43.1.1°; tá aige: possess 41.1.1°
- agair: invoke 18.4.3°, 40.4.6°
- cuir ar aghaidh: develop 1; promote preamble
- in aghaidh: for 16.2.2°; in violation of 42.3.1°; repugnant to 15.4.1°, 26.1.1°
- agra: suit 30.3
- agus: see 22.2.1°
- aiceanta, see 10.1
- aicme: class 40.6.2°; denomination 44.2.4°; section 45.4.1°
- aighe an phobail: public opinion 40.6.1°i
- aighneas: debate 15.10
- aimsir chogaidh nó ceannairce faoi arm: time of war or armed rebellion 28.3.3°
- aindleathach: unlawful 40.4.2°
- ainm: name 4; see 15.1.1°
- ainmnigh: nominate 12.4.4°, 13.1.1°, 18.3, 30.2; designate 13.8.2°, 41.3.2°, 42.3.1°
- d'ainneoin: notwithstanding 14.3
- air sin: thereupon 27.5.2°
- aird a thabhairt air: entertain 12.10.3°
- is airde ná: superior to 41.1.1°
- aire: see 13.1.1°
- agus ... a áireamh: including 12.4.2°, 18.7.1°v
- airgead poiblí: public moneys 17.2; airgidí: moneys 22.1.1°
- airgeadas: finance 18.7.1°iv
- Bille Airgid: Money Bill 20.1
- áirigh: hold 40.1; see 15.11.1°; ar a n-áirítear: including 18.7.1°iv
- áirithe: one 18.7.2°; stated 23.1.1°
- cuir in áirithe: ensure 15.10; secure 28.3.3°
- áis: facility 42.4; utility 44.2.6°
- in aisce: free 15.15
- aiseag: restore preamble
- aisghairm: repeal 46.1, 48
- aitheasc: address 13.7.1°; see 13.7.2°
- aithris: utter 40.6.1°i
- áitiúil: local 34.3.4°
- in alt na huaire: for the time being 10.1 12.4.2°, 41.3.3°
- san am chéanna: at the same time 15.14, 31.3
- amháin: only 6.2; exclusively 15.6.1°, 45
- cuir in amhras: question 34.3.3°
- amuigh: see 34.4.4°
- bheith ann: take place 16.3.2°
- bheith ann fós: subsisting 41.3.3°
- nach ann a thuilleadh: ceased to exist 28.3.3°
- anseo inár ndiaidh: hereinafter 18.4.1°
- aon: exclusive 8.3, 15.2.1°
- aon ... amháin: only one 12.4.5°; same 16.4.1°
- aonghuth: single vote 12.2.3°
- aontacht: unity preamble
- aontaigh: accede 22.2.3°; assent 26.2.2°, 34.4.5°
- aon-toghchán: same election 12.4.3°
- aontú: assent 28.3.1°; approval 40.2.2°
- ar: comprise 34.2; include 34.3.1°
- ar: upon 46.5
- beidh ar: obligatory 27.4.2°
- iad araon: both 13.2.3°
- Ard-Aighne: Attorney General 30.1
- Ard-Chomhairle: Executive Council 31.2
- Ard-Chúirt: High Court 34.3.1°
- ardcheannas: supreme command 13.4
- ardoideachas: higher education 18.4.2°
- argóint: argument 34.3.2°
- armchúirt: courtmartial 38.4.2°
- Ard-Reachtaire Cuntas agus Ciste: Comptroller and Auditor General 33.1
- armtha: armed 15.6.1°
- le harm: by force of arms 39
- gan arm: without arms 40.6.1°ii
- arna: on the 30.2
- ársa: antecedent 41.1.1°, 43.1.1°
- as: from among 15.9.1°
- as sin amach: from that date 48
- atá: see 15.1.2°
- athchomhlánú: re-integration 3
- athmheas: revise 16.2.4°
- athrú: alteration 16.2.4°; variation 46.1
- ationól: re-assembly 18.3, 28.10
- bá: affection 34.5.1°
- bac: interfere with 40.4.6°
- gan bac: freely 40.6.1°i
- bail: validity 40.4.3°
- bail dlí air: valid 41.3.3°
- bail a bheith: validity 34.3.2°
- ó bhail: invalid 37.2
- cuir ó bhail: invalidate 28.3.3°
- gan bhail: invalid 15.4.2°
- ag baile: in their homes 42.2
- bain amach: regain preamble
- bain de: deprive 40.4.1°; divert 44.2.6°
- bain le: have, apply 3; in relation to 13.9; relate to, apply to 14.5.1°; ally 18.7.1°ii; see 29.4.2°; pertains 45.2.iv
- baincéireacht: banking 18.7.1°iv
- bainistí: management 10.3

- faoi bhainistí: under the management of 44.2.4° a bhfuil baint aige: incidental 22.1.1° páirt nó baint: taking part or being concerned in 39 baintreach: widow 45.4.1° ballóid: ballot 12.2.3° ballstát: member state 29.4.3° bannaí: bail 40.4.3° baol: see 40.6.1°ii
 barántas: warrant 31.3
 beagán daoine: a few individuals 45.2.iii beart: measure 29.4.3°; means 42.5
 beartaigh le rún: resolve 24.1, 28.3.3° beartas: policy 28.5.2°
 beatha: life 40.3.3° fad is beo: during the lifetime 41.3.3° beo gan breith: unborn 40.3.3° a bheir air: refer to 15.1.1° bheir do: confer 12.1; give 26.2.2°; a bhéarfadh: whereby 16.2.6°
 Bille Airgid: Money Bill 20.1
 binse: tribunal 13.8.2°, 38.4.1° ar bith: see 9.1.3°, 15.2.1°, 15.6.2° dá bhíthin sin: accordingly 23.2.1° de bhíthin: necessitated by 29.4.3° sa bhliain: every year 15.7
 bonn beatha: vital interests 28.3.3° bonnbhris: undermine 40.6.1°i coinnigh ina bhrá: detain 40.4.2° brabús: exploitation 45.3.2° faoi bhráid: see 13.7.1°; present 17.1.1° cuir faoi bhráid: refer 22.2.2° braighdeanas: detention 40.4.2° bratach: flag 7
 breisiú: addition 46.1
 breith: will 27.1
 breith: determine 15.11.1°, 34.3.1°, 40.4.3°; decide 26.3.1° cuir faoi bhreith: refer 26, 40.4.3°; submit ... to the decision of 46.2
 breith bháis: sentence of death 40.4.5°; cásanna breithe báis: capital cases 13.6 breithimh: judicial 35.2
 breithiúnach: judicial 29.2
 breithiúnais: judicial 37.2
 breithnigh: consider 17.1.1°, 20.1
 breithniú: consideration 24.1, 24.2
 briseadh síochána: breach of the peace 15.13, 40.6.1°ii broic le: deal with 38.4.1° bronn: confer 13.11
 bua: see 40.1; virtue 43.1.1° de bhua: by virtue of 27; in virtue of 49.1
 de bhua oifige: as ex-officio members 31.2
 buan: permanent 14.1
 buanchuspóir: constant aim 45.2.iv buan-orduithe: standing orders 15.10
 buanú: continuance 48
 buíoch: grateful preamble buíon: group 29.4.2°
 buíon-aonad: unit group 41.1.1° bun-: fundamental 9.2
 ar bun: see 29.1
 cuir ar bun: create 15.2.2° de bhun: in pursuance of 28.3.3° faoi bhun: less than 16.2.2°
 i mbun: in charge 28.7.1° bunadh: source 11
 bunaidh: original 34.3.1°; fundamental 41.1.1° bunaigh: establish 3; form 40.6.1°iii; found 41.3.1°; raise 15.6.1° bunoidreachas: primary education 42.4 bunriail: principle 29.3, 29.4.2°, 43.2.1° buntreoir: directive principle 45 cabhair: aid 31.1
 cabhair mhaireachtála a thabhairt: contribute to the support 45.4.1° caidreamh: relations 1, 29.3
 cailleadh: loss 9.1.2°
 caint: utterance 15.12
 caite: expiration 23.1.1° caitheamh airgid: expenditure 17.1.1°; disbursement 33.1
 calmacht: heroic preamble cánachas: taxation 22.1.1° caoi: opportunity 40.4.2°; means 45.2.i caomhnaigh: preserve 28.3.3°, 41.1.2° caomhnóir: guardian 42.3.2° carthanacht: charity 45.1, preamble cás ríofa: case stated 40.4.3°
 i dtaobh gach cás: in each case 17.1.2° i gcás: in cases 15.8.2°; as regards 49.3
 in aon chás: in any contingency 14.4
 Cathaoirleach: Chairman 14.2.1°, 14.2.3° ceachtar: see 12.6.1°; either 13.2.3°, 20.3
 ní cead: no ... may 9.1.3°; no ... entitled 12.4.3°; shall not 12.6.1°, 30.4 an chéad ... eile: ensuing 16.6
 ina cheangal: bound 29.5.2°
 Ceann Rialtais: head of Government 13.1.1°, ceann an Rialtais: head of the Government 28.5.1° faoi cheann: within 14.5.2° go ceann: before the expiration of 27.4.2° i gceann: at the expiration of 21.2.1° thar ceann: for 28.6.3° den chéanna: thereof 18.3
 ceannairc faoi arm: armed rebellion 28.3.3° ceannairceach: seditious 40.6.1°i i gceannas: presiding 15.11.1° ceannasach: sovereign 1 ceap: designate 6.1; appoint 13.1.1°, 13.8.2°, 28.1°; attach 15.10; direct 34.4.5°; fix 40.4.3°; intend 45 ceart: justice 34.1, 38.3.1°, 43.2.1°
 ceart vótála: the right to vote 12.2.2° ceil: exclude 9.1.3°
 céile: spouse 41.3.2°
 céim: status 44.2.3°
 ceist: question 22.2.2°, 34.3.1°, 40.4.3° cheana: see 12.4.2° mar a chítear dó: see 25.5.1° chomh fada lena chumas: as best it may 40.3.2°; as effectively as it may 45.1
 chuige sin: specific 17.1.2°; see 23.1.1°, 23.2.2° is ciall do: means 22.1.1° cibé: see 15.1.3° cibé áit agus am: at such times and places 31.8
 cibé uair: whenever 27.5.2° cineál: form 1 cineama: cinema 40.6.1°i cinn: determine 1, 12.11.2° cinneadh: determination 29.2
 vóta cinniúna: casting vote 15.11.2° cion: offence 30.3, 38.1, see 47.2.1° dá chionn sin: see 41.2.2° os cionn: more than 16.2.2° ionadaíocht chionúire: proportional representation 12.2.3° cíos: revenue 11
 ciste: fund 29.5.2°
 clann: children 42.1
 claonadh: favour 34.5.1° cleachtadh: practical experience 18.7.1° cogadh: war 28.3.1° cogadh a chur: levy war 39 coimeád: preserve 40.6.1°i coimirce a dhéanamh ar: guard 41.3.1° coimisiún: commission 14.1

- coibhleacht: conflict 28.3.3° i gcoinne: inconsistent 50.1
 coinneáil: custody 22.1.1° coinnioll: provision 16.1.2°; term 33.6, 36ii sairse choinsiasa: freedom of conscience 44.2.1° coinsiasach: conscientious 12.8
 coir: crime 30.3
 coireachta: criminal 37.1
 cóirigh: constitute 18.4.1°; form 18.7.1° coiriúil: criminal 34.3.1°, 38.1
 coiste tiomanta: jury 38.5
 faoi chomaoin: obligations preamble comhachain: joint petition 27.1
 comhair: see 14.4
 cuir os comhair: present 28.4.3°; leag os comhair: lay before 29.5.1° comhairle: advice 13.1.3° tabhair comhairle: counsel 31.1 comhairle a ghlacadh: consult 13.2.3° as a chomhairle féin: in his absolute discretion 13.2.2° comhairleach: adviser 30.1
 comhairligh: advise 28.9.3° comhallach: executive 28.2
 comhallacht: executive 6.1
 comhalta: member 12.2.2° comhaltas: see 12.6.2°, 12.10.4° comhaontú: approval 13.1.2°; convention 29.5.3° comhar: co-operation 29.1
 comharba: successor 28.11.1°, 49.3
 comhbhaint: relation 15.3.2° comhcharadra: concord preamble comhcheart: equal right 40.3.3° i gcomhcheilg le: conspire 39 comhdhaonnach: social 15.3.1° comhdhaonnacht: society 41.1.1° an chomhdhaonnacht shibhialta: civil society 43.2.1° comhdhéan: constitute 14.1
 comhdhéanamh: constitution 15.1.1°, 36iii comheagraíocht: organization 36iii comheagrailthe: organised 18.7.1°ii comheagrú: organization 28.12 comhfhurtacht: sustain preamble comhionann: equal 18.4.2° comhlachas: association 40.6.1°iii i gcomhlachas: associated 29.4.2° comhlacht: association 19; body 13.8.2° comhlíon: perform 12.1, see 13.9, 14.5.1°; discharge 28.12; execute 34.5.1°; comply with 46.5
 Comhphobal: Community 29.4.3° comhréir: ratio 16.2.3° comhréire: corresponding 34.3.3° comhréiteach: reconciliation 41.3.2° comhrollaí: corresponding panels 19 comhshuíomh: constitution 41.1.2° comhthoil: concurrence 25.2.2° comhúdarás: collective authority 28.4.2° comóir: see 12.3.3°; summon 13.2.1°; convene a meeting 13.2.3°; convene 31.8
 cóngar: near 12.11.1°; vicinity 40.6.1°ii conradh: treaty 29.4.3° contúirt: danger 40.6.1°ii cor an lae: actual conditions 42.3.2° cor an tsaoil: circumstances 45.2.v
 córas: see 44.2.2° corp: physical 42.1
 corpartha: physical 40.1, 42.5
 corrfholúntas: casual vacancy 16.7, 18.10.2° cosain: preserve 24.1; protect 28.3.2°, 40.3.1°, 41.3.1°; safeguard 45.4.1° cosain ar: protect from 40.3.2°; protect against 45.3.2° cósca a chur ar: prevent 40.6.1°ii costas: charge 29.5.2° cothabháil: maintain 15.6.1°, 44.2.5° cothrom: justice 29.1
 ar cothrom: the same 16.2.3° cránas: nuisance 40.6.1°ii craol: pronounce 34.4.5° creideamh: religion 44.1; religious 42.1, 44.2.3°; belief 44.2.3° teagasc creidimh: religious instruction 44.2.4° creidmheas: credit 45.2.iv cuir chur críche: avail, use 29.4.2° críoch dheireanach: final end preamble críocha: territory 2, 3
 chun críocha: for the purposes of 13.8.2° Críonnacht: Prudence preamble
 cruatan: trial preamble cruinnigh: raise 22.1.1° cruthaigh: see 40.4.2°
 cúí: due preamble go cúí: due 40.1
 gur cúí: ought 43.2.1°
 cuid: part 29.6
 an chuid eile: see 28.11.1° bheith dá gcuid féin acu: own 44.2.5° bheith aige dá chuid féin: private ownership 43.1.1° faoi chuimsiú: subject to 12.5, 18.7.2°, 40.3.3° cuing phósta: marriage 41.3.3° cúinse: condition 33.6
 cuir á: cause 12.10.5°
 cuir amach: issue 25.4.4° cuir ar: impose 30.1
 cuir ar ceal: abolish 43.1.2° cuir ar fáil: make available 40.3.3° cuir as oifig: remove from office 12.10.7°, 33.5.1°; terminate the appointment 13.1.3°, 28.9.4° cuir chun: send 26.3.2° cuir chun cinn: promote 45.1
 cuir faoi: see 13.4
 cuir faoi bhráid: communicate 13.7.1° cuir go: send 22.2.4° cuir i: form 11
 cuir i gcomhairle: consult 31.1
 cuir isteach: interfere 15.10 cuir le: supplement 42.4, 45.3.1° cuir roimh: seek preamble
 cúirt: court 34.1
 Cúirt Dlinse Achomaire: Court of Summary Jurisdiction 30.3, 38.2
 cúirt achomhairc dheiridh: court of final appeal 34.2 cúirt chéadchéime: court of first instance 34.2 cúis: charge 12.10.3°; 38.1
 cúiseamh: charge 12.10.2°; prosecute 30.3 cúiteamh: compensation 44.2.6° ar an gcuma: see 18.4.1°; in the manner 18.10.3° ar aon chuma: in any respect 15.4.1°; in any case 26.2.1° cumann: league 29.4.2°; union 40.6.1°iii cumannta: corporate 42.4
 gan bheith i gcumas: is unable 14.2.2°; ar cumas dó: able 31.2
 cumhacht: power 13.6, 13.9
 cumhdaigh: sustain 12.8, 34.5.1°; uphold 34.5.1° cúnámh: support 41.2.1° cúnámh Stáit: State aid 44.2.4° cuntas: account 22.1.1°; see 33.1 cuntasaíocht: accountancy 18.7.1°iv cur isteach: interfere 15.10 gan cur isteach: respect 40.3.1°, 42.1
 de chúram: the care of 45
 dul i gcúram oifige: enters office 12.3.1°; i gcúram dualgas: enter upon duties 34.5.3° cúrsa: see 15.12
 cuspóir: purpose 29.4.2°; aim 45.2.iv

- dá: see 13.3.2°, 40.4.6° an dá: both 20.3
 dailcheantar: constituency 16.2.1° daingnigh: ratify 29.4.3° daonáireamh: census 16.2.3° daonlathach: democratic 5
 ina bpearsain daonna: as human persons 40.1
 reacht daonna: positive law 41.1.1°, 43.1.1° daonra: population 16.2.2° de: thereof 8.3, 40.4.5°; see 35.2, 45 dea-chlú: good name 40.3.2° déan: commit 15.5; prefer (a charge) 12.10.2° nach ndéanann: fail in 42.5
 déan de: become 15.14, 25.4.1° toghchán a dhéanamh: hold an election 12.3.3° faoi deara: occasion 28.3.3° dearbhaigh: declare 12.10.7°; affirm 29.1 dearbhú: declaration 12.8
 dá dheasca: see 12.10.7°;
 de dheasca: see 41.3.3°
 deimhin: satisfied 40.4.2°; ensure 45.3.2° deimhne: conviction 40.6.1° deimhnigh: affirm 1; certify 22.2.1° deireadh: expiration 12.3.1°
 críoch dheireanach: final end preamble is deireanaí: latest 25.5.3° faoi dheoidh: in final appeal 6.1
 deon: grant 15.15
 deonach: voluntary 18.7.1°
 dhá thrian: two-thirds 12.10.4°
 Dia na nUilechumhacht: Almighty God 12.8; 44.1
 ina dhiaidh seo: hereafter 49.2
 inár ndiaidh: subsequent 14.5.1°, 22.2.1° diamhaslach: blasphemous 40.6.1° dícháiligh: disqualify 16.1.3°, 18.9 cuir faoi dhícháilíocht: disqualify 16.1.2° dícheall a dhéanamh: strive 45.1
 dídean: see 12.8; protect 15.10 déan difear do: affect 28.3.3° dílis: fidelity 9.2; faithful 12.8 dilleacht: orphan 45.4.1° dílse: ownership 45.2.ii díolúine: franchise 10.1
 díreach roimh: immediately preceding 50.1
 díriugh: refer preamble diúltaigh: reject 21.2.1°; decline 34.5.4°; veto 47.2.1° diúltaigh do: refuse 13.2.2°; decline 26.3.1° is dleacht do: rightful 40.6.1° dleathach: lawful 10.1, 40.3.3°, 42.3.1° an dleathach nó nach dleathach: lawfulness 40.4.5° is dleathach: may 14.3; shall 15.6.2°, 17.2; it shall be lawful 25.5.1°
 dlí míleata: military law 38.4.1°
 dlí sibhialta: civil law 41.3.3° le dlí: by law 15.9.2°
 de réir dlí: see 38.1
 dlínse: jurisdiction 3, 34.3.2° dlínse achomhairc: appellate jurisdiction 34.4.3° cúirt dlínse coire: court of criminal jurisdiction 13.6 do-aistrithe: immovable 44.2.5° chun dochair do: to the detriment of 45.2.iii dul chun dochair: see 44.2.1° dochar a dhéanamh do: affect prejudicially 44.2.4° gan dochar: without prejudice 3 dochloíte: indefeasible 1 doshannta: inalienable 1 dream: body 10.1; body of persons 37.1; group 19 droch-aigne: ill-will 34.5.1° de dhroim: on 27.4.2°
 is dual do: rightful preamble dualgas: duty 12.8, 15.3.2°, 42.5 dúchas: genius 1
 dúchasach: natural 42.1
 dúiche: country 16.2.3° ag dul do: is due 44.1.1°
 dul isteach: enter 40.5
 dul thar: final and conclusive 22.2.1°, 34.4.6° eachtrach: external 29.4.1° eadhon: see 14.2.1°; namely 18.4.2° eadráin: arbitration 29.2
 éag: die 12.3.1°, 28.6.2° éagóir: injustice 40.3.2°; abuse 45.4.2° éagórach: unjust 40.3.2°, 45.3.2° ealaíonacht: art 18.7.1°
 earra: commodity 45.2.iii easaontaigh: dissent 26.2.2°, 34.4.5° easlán: infirm 45.4.1° eastát: estate 10.1
 éifeacht: effect 3, 40.4.5°; effective 38.3.1° éigeandáil: emergency 24.1
 éigeantach: indispensable 41.1.2°; require 42.3.2° eile: second 8.2; new 28.6.2° aon daoine eile: such other persons 31.2
 ná eile: or otherwise 34.3.2° éiligh: call for 33.5.1°
 éilligh: corrupt 15.10
 Éireann: Irish 9.1.2°, 12.8° éirigh as: resign 12.3.1°; resignation 13.1.3°; vacate 15.14 éirigh leis: see 28.10
 d'éis: after 10.4; dá éis sin: subsequent 12.7 tar éis: after 25.2.1° eisceacht: exception 11
 eisith: a state of war 40.4.6° éist le: hear 26.2.1°, 32 is eol: knowledge 34.5.1°
 eolas: knowledge 18.7.1°; inform 28.5.2°
 fad is beo: during the lifetime 41.3.3° an fad is bheidh: during 35.5
 faigh: ascertain 27.1
 fáil: acquisition 9.1.2° cuir ar fáil: make available 40.3.3°; provide for 42.1 failli: neglect 41.2.2° failligh: neglect 34.5.4° fairis sin: also 10.4
 faisnéis: information 40.3.3° fáltas: see 11; receipts 17.1.1° fan: continue 12.10.7° fan i bhfeidhm: remain in force 24.3; i bhfeidhm: in force 49.1 faoi mar: as 12.11.2°, 25.5.1°, 34.3.4° féach do: have regard 40.1
 féach le: endeavour 40.6.1° féach le fonn: favour 45.3.1° ag féachaint go cuí: with due regard 16.2.4°, 42.4, 42.5
 féad: see 12.4.4°; may 40.3.3°; capable of 41.3.3°; enable 16.6
 ar feadh: through preamble fear nó bean: see 16.1.1° feasta: future 9.1.2° féichiúnas: liability 11, 49.3
 feidhm: operate 12.10.7° feidhm dlí: effect 17.1.2°; force of law 29.4.3°
 i bhfeidhm: in force 49.1
 cuir i bhfeidhm: secure 38.3.1°; enforce 38.4.2° fan i bhfeidhm: remain in force 24.3 teacht i bhfeidhm: take effect 16.2.4° dream feidhme: functional group 19 feidhmeannas: functional 15.3.1° feidhmigh: apply 45
 feidhmiú: execution 40.4.5°

féidir: see 6.2, 40.3.1°; capable of being 49.2
 sa mhéid gur féidir é: in as far as practicable 16.2.3°, 40.3.1° chomh luath agus is féidir é: as soon as possible 17.1.1°; at the earliest practicable date 28.3.2° an oiread agus is féidir: as many as shall be practicable 45.2.v
 feileonacht: felony 15.13
 féin: see 17.1.2°, 33.5.1° a chur d'fhiacha ar: oblige 42.3.1° fianaise: evidence 25.4.5° fianaise dhochlóite: conclusive evidence 25.4.5°
 i bhfianaise: in the presence of 12.8
 ar fianas: on active service 38.4.2° fiontraíocht: enterprise 45.3.2° fíoraigh: authenticate 25.5.2°; verify 27.2 fíoras: fact 34.3.1° fiosrú a dhéanamh: enquire into 40.4.2° fireann nó baineamh: sex 9.1.3° go firinneach: sincerely 12.8 flannbhui: orange 7 fo-ábhar: subordinate matter 22.1.1° focal: expression 22.1.2°
 i bhfochair: and 27.1
 fógar: promulgate 13.3.2°, 25.1; declare 28.3.1° fógra: notice 25.4.2° fógra tairisceana: notice of motion 12.10.3° foilsigh: publish 15.12
 foirgníocht: architecture 18.7.1°iv i bhfoirm: by way of 40.4.3° ní foláir: shall 11; require 13.3.1° folamh: vacant 14.1
 folúntas: vacancy 14.3
 fónamh: service 12.8
 ar fonn leis: is willing 31.2 foráil: see 8.3, 14.4, 18.4.2° foras: institution 18.4.2°; ground 40.4.2° fo-reachtas: subordinate legislature 15.2.2° foréigneach: violent 39; forcible 40.5
 forlámhas: prevail 25.4.6° formhór: majority 15.11.1° forordaigh: prescribe 41.3.2° fórsa: force 15.6.1°
 na Fórsaí Cosanta: the Defence Forces 13.4° fós: see 15.3.2°, 29.2, 40.3.1° fotha: basis 41.1.2° freagrach do: answerable to 13.8.1°; responsible to 28.4.1° freastal: attend 44.2.4° freisin: further 40.4.5° ar fud: throughout 8.3, 16.2.3° fuinneamh: energy 10.1
 fundúireacht: institution 42.4

gá: necessary 12.4.5° gabh: see 31.5
 gabh air féin: pledge itself 41.3.1°, 45.4.1° gabh chuig: adopt preamble gabháil: arrest 15.13
 gach: all 10.2
 gach ... dá: every 13.3.2° gach uile: all 12.1, 16.1.2°; all ... whatsoever 49.1
 gair: see 13.2.1°
 gairm: commission 13.5.2°; title 40.2.1°; professional interest 18.7.1°; avocation 45.4.2° gairm bheatha: occupation 45.2.i; comhairlí gairme beatha: vocational councils 15.3.1° gairm onóra: title of honour 40.2.2° geall: promise 12.8
 mar gheall ar: on the ground of 44.2.3° gearán: complaint 40.4.2° gearr: impose 11, 13.6, 22.1.1° geilleagar: economic 1 is giorra: shorter 16.5

 giorraigh: abridge 23.1
 glac: accept 40.2.2° glac le: recognise 8.2; adopt 12.10.4°; accept 13.1.3°, 28.9.3°; approve 27.5.1°
 ionad a ghlacadh: to supply the place of 42.5
 de ghnáth: generally 15.1.1° gnáth-: general 43.1.2°
 gnáth-admhaithe: generally recognised 29.3 gnáth-threoir: general guidance 45 gné: sex 45.4.2°
 gníomh: act 13.8.1°, 15.5, 40.4.6° teacht i ngníomh: come into operation 9.1.1° gníomhaigh: act 13.9, 14.2.2°, 28.4.2° gnó: purpose 8.3; interest 18.7.1°; affair 44.2.5° gnóthaigh: achieve 41.2.1° go dtí go: pending 26.1.3° graosta: indecent 40.6.1°i gustail shaolta: material resources 45.2.ii i: consists of 15.1.2°; as 31.4; see 29.6

 bheith i: contain 40.6.2°, 46.4
 .i. see 7; namely 14.2.1°
 iarracht: attempt 15.10
 iarracht a dhéanamh: endeavour 42.1, 45.3.2° iarraidh: attempt 43.1.2° d'iarraidh: for 21.1.2° iarrthóir do: candidate for 12.4.2° iascaireacht: fisheries 18.7.1°ii idir: both 45.2.ii
 idirdhealú: discrimination 40.6.2° imdháil: distribution 45.3.2° imigh ó: leave 12.9
 imthosca: circumstances 41.3.2° ina: holds office of 12.3.2°; see 28.6.1°, 40.1
 inaistrithe: transferable 12.2.3° inchomhlíonta: performable 31.1
 inchúisithe: amenable 15.13 inghlactha: eligible (to become) 18.2 iniúch: audit 22.1.1°, 33.1
 inmheánach: domestic 24.1, 29.6
 innealtóireacht: engineering 18.7.1°iv iniúlacht: efficiency 45.3.2° inoibrithe: exercisable 31.1, 49.1 inphionóis: punishable 40.6.1°i intinn: intention 25.4.1° intleacht: intellectual 42.1
 intofa: eligible for re-election 12.3.2°; eligible for election 12.4.1°; eligible for 16.1.1° intrialte: cognisable 38.4.2° intuigthe: hold to mean 40.1 cúiteamh a íoc le: payment of compensation 44.2.6° iomlán: all 21.2.1°
 go hiomlán: entirely 2 san iomlán: amounting to 41.3.2° iompar: behaviour 13.8.2° ionad: seat 15.14
 gabh ionad: supersede 25.5.3°
 ionad a ghlacadh: to supply the place of 42.5
 in ionad: in substitution for 19; in the place of 14.2.2° ionad cónaithe: dwelling 40.5
 ionadaigh: represent 15.3.1°
 ionadaíocht chionúire: proportional representation 12.2.3° ionadóir: representative 15.1.2° ionann: equality 15.11.2°, 22.2.3°; equal 40.1
 ionas go: see 18.2, 29.4.2°
 ionchas: prospect 41.3.2° Ionracas: Justice preamble
 ionradh: invasion 28.3.2°
 ionsaí: attack 40.3.2°, 41.3.1° ionstraim: act 29.4.3°

- cuir isteach ina iris: enrol 25.4.5°
 Iriseoir: Registrar 25.4.5° is: shall become and be 9.1.1°; see 15.1.1° is é: consists of 2
 cuir in iúl: report 22.2.6°
- lá: date 12.3.1°
 labhair: be heard 28.8
 ar a laghad: not less than 12.4.2°, 12.10.3° laghdú a dhéanamh ar: diminish 12.11.3° faoi lámh: signed by 12.10.3°, 31.3 láithreach: forthwith 46.5
 lámh a chur le: subscribe 12.8; sign 13.3.1° bheith ina lámha: concentration 45.2.iii lánchomhaltas: total membership 12.10.4° lándicheall: see 12.8
 lándlínse: full jurisdiction 34.3.1° lánéifeacht: full effect 50.1
 lánfheidhm: full force 50.1
 lánlíon: total number 16.2.2° lánscoir: dissolve 13.2.1°, 18.8
 as láthair: absence 14.1, 28.6.3° i láthair: in the presence of 12.8; see 38.4.2°; before 40.1
 i láthair ann: are present 22.2.2° bheith i láthair: appear 12.10.6°; attend 28.8
 tabhair i láthair: produce 40.4.2° le: vested in 10.1; by way of 46.1; see 31.3 is le: belong 49.1
 leag amach: see 15.2.2°; prescribe 15.9.1° leag síos: lay down 40.3.3° lean de: continue to 18.9; see 13.2.2°, 28.10, 28.11.1° a leanas: as follows 18.4.1° leanbh: child 42.1
 leas: interest 10.1; welfare 12.8
 leas an phobail: the common good 6.1, 42.3.2°; the exigencies of the common good 43.2.2° Leas-Chathaoirleach: Vice-Chairman 14.2.3° leasaigh: amend 46.1 mura léir: unless ... appears 25.4.1° léirigh: define 18.7.1° léiriú: see 15.3.2°
 léirmheas: review 13.8.2°
 tuairimí léirmheasa: criticism 40.6.1° léirthuarisc: statement 27.3
 leis seo: hereby 13.6
 faoi leith: special 38.3.1°, 41.3.1° gach ... ar leith: every 12.3.3°; see 15.9.1° leithghabháil: appropriate 11; appropriation 17.2 ar leithligh: apart 41.3.2° nach leor: inadequate 38.3.1° is leor leis féin: to him seem sufficient 28.9.4° leorshlí bheatha: adequate means of livelihood 45.2.i lig do: allow 40.4.3°
 le linn: at the date of 15.5; during 12.9; at the time of 40.4.3°; see 38.4.1° líon: number 14.3; 36i; see 18.1, 28.1
 liúntas: allowance 12.11.2° loghadh: remit 13.6, 21.1.1° lomdíreach: direct 12.2.1° luaigh: state 12.10.1°; specify 14.5.2°; express 24.1, 28.3.3°, 46.3
 chomh luath agus: upon 27.4.1° chomh luath agus is féidir é: as soon as may be 12.7, 25.4.5°; as soon as possible 17.1.1°; at the earliest practicable date 28.3.2° lucht achainí: see 27.2
 lucht oibre: workers 45.4.2°
 lucht tagartha: see 12.10.6°
- má: if and whenever 24.1; see 15.15 má bhíonn: in the event of 14.1
- maidir le: in connection with 15.15; relating to 40.3.3°; in the matter of 42.4; see 29.4.1° maille le: see 2; and 10.1
 cabhair maireachtála a thabhairt: contribute to the support 45.4.1° maithe: personages 12.8
 an mhaitheas phoiblí: the common good preamble maithiúnas: pardon 13.6
 máithreacha clainne: mothers 41.2.2° malairt: contrary 25.4.1°
 maoin shaolta: external goods 43.1.1°
 ábhar maoinne: resource 10.1
 maoincheart: property right 40.3.2° maoinigh: endow 44.2.2° maolú: commute/commutation 13.6
 maoth-óige: tender age 45.4.2° mar aon le: including 10.1, 16.7
 mar sin: so 22.2.4° meas: deem 12.6.2°, 16.6, 24.2; consider 20.2.2°, 28.3.2°; hold 47.1
 meastachán: estimate 17.1.1° cén méid: the number 15.11.3° ar a mhéid: not less than 28.1
 sa mhéid go: to the same extent 10.2; to the extent 15.4.2°
 sa mhéid gur féidir é: in as far as practicable 16.2.3°
 Mí Nollag: December 49.1
 is mian le: devotion to 29.1; adherence 29.2
 mianach: mine 10.2
 mianra: mineral 10.2
 míchumas: disability 16.1.1°, 16.1.3°, 44.2.3° mí-iompar: misbehaviour 12.10.1°
 dlí míleata: military law 38.4.1°
 mínigh: define 12.4.2°
 míniú: definition 22.1.2° míonchion: minor offence 38.2
 míthreoir: incapacity 12.3.1°, 31.5 modh: see 13.5.1°; manner 18.6, 34.1, 46.1
 modh oibrithe: see 40.6.2° ar mhodh: by means of 12.2.3° moilligh: defer 40.4.5° mol: recommend 17.2
 moladh: recommendation 21.1.2°, 24.2 go mór mór: especially 42.4
 moráltacht: morality 29.1, 40.6.1°, 42.1 mórsheisear: seven 28.1
 muirear: charge 11, 22.1.1° múnlú na haigine: formation 42.4
 mura: unless 27.4.2°; see 28.9.4°
- ná eile: or otherwise 34.3.2° de réir nádúir: natural 41.1.1° nádúrtha: natural 10.1
 náisiún: nation 1
 saol náisiúnta: national life 45.1
 náisiúntacht: nationality 9.1.2° neach: person 40.4.2°
 neachtar: see 12.7
 neamhchoiteann: exceptional 42.5
 cuir ar neamhni: nullify 28.3.3° neamhoiriúnach: unfit 12.10.7° neamhspleách: independent 5, 35.2
 neamhspleáchas: independence preamble neart: strength 45.4.2°
 ní: see 12.3.3°; faoi chuimsiú na nithe réamhráite: subject as aforesaid 47.4
 aon ní: aon matter 13.7.1°; matter 40.6.1° gach ní: all matters 34.3.1° ní: shall not be 13.8.1° níos mó ná ... níos lú ná: not more than ... not less than 18.7.2°

nó go: until 28.6.2° nocht: disclose 26.2.2°; express 40.6.1°i Mí Nollag: December 49.1
 nós imeachta: method of procedure 29.4.2°, 36iii nuair: where 12.4.5°

obair: activities 18.7.1°v oibleagáid: obligation 29.4.3° oibreacha riachtanacha: necessary works 44.2.6° oibreachas: labour 18.7.1°iii oibrigh: exercise 3, 13.5.1°, 14.5.1°; see 13.9
 oideachas: education 42.1
 oidhreacht: inherit 43.1.2° oifig: office 30.6
 cuir as oifig: remove from office 12.10.7°, 33.5.1° dul as oifig: retire from office 30.5.4°
 maoth-óige: tender age 45.4.2° oiliúint: education 40.6.1°i oir: see 34.5.1°; suit 45.4.2° oircheas: meet 14.4
 Oireachtas: see 15.1.1°
 oiread: see 19
 an oiread agus is féidir: as many as ... shall be practicable 45.2.v
 oiriúnach: fit 31.3
 le beart oiriúnach: by appropriate means 42.5
 oirmhidin: respect 44.1.1°
 Ollscoil Bhaile Átha Cliath: the University of Dublin 18.4.1° Ollscoil na hÉireann: the National University of Ireland 18.4.1° ómós: homage 44.1.1° onóir: honour 44.1.1°
 gairm onóra: title of honour 40.2.2°
 ord an phósta: the institution of marriage 41.3.1° ord poiblí: public order 38.3.1°, 40.6.1°, 44.2.1° ordaigh: prescribe 27.2, 34.4.3°; direct 40.4.4° ordú: direction 25.4.2°; ordú ... á ordú: order for 40.4.5° organ: organ 6.2, 40.6.1°i ós é/í: as 8.1, 41.1.2°

páirt a bheith: participate 28.3.1°
 páirt nó baint: taking part or being concerned in 39 páirteach: subscribe 12.4.3°; participant 28.3.3°; see 29.5.1° pearsa: person 40.3.2°; individual 45.2.ii
 ina bpearsain daonna: as human persons 40.1
 pionós: punishment 13.6; penalty 15.10 pléadail: pleading 34.3.2° pobal: people 12.2.1° ar mhaithe leis an bpobal: in the public interest 40.6.1°iii poiblí: public 40.6.1°
 an mhaitheas phoiblí: the common good preamble
 Riarachán Poiblí: Public Administration 18.7.1°v go poiblí: in public 15.8.1°, 34.1 sa chúirt go poiblí: in open court 26.2.1° polaitíocht: political 1
 pósadh: marriage 41.3.1°; cuing phósta: marriage 41.3.3° pósadh a dhéanamh: contract marriage 41.3.3° post: position 12.6.3° práinn: emergency 15.8.2°, 24.1
 staid phráinne náisiúnta: a national emergency 28.3.3° príobháideach: private 15.8.2° Coiste Pribhléidí: Committee of Privileges 22.2.2° príomha: primary 41.1.1°, 42.1
 Príomh-Aire: Prime Minister 13.1.1°, 28.5.1°
 Príomh-Bhreitheamh: Chief Justice 14.2.1°, 31.2
 príomhchuspóir: predominant aim 45.2.iv príomhtheanga: first language 8.1

á rá: alleging 40.4.2°
 ranna: branches 15.3.1° ráthaigh: guarantee 22.1.1°, 40.3.1° ré: life 16.2.4°; period 16.5

reacht daonna: positive law 41.1.1°, 43.1.1° reachtaíocht: legislative 15.2.1°; legislation 20.1
 réamhchead: prior consent 18.3 réamhráite: aforesaid 25.2.2°; foregoing 40.6.1°iii faoi chuimsiú na nithe réamhráite: subject as aforesaid 47.4 réamhtheachtaí: predecessor 12.7
 réasún: see 43.1.1° reifreann: referendum 47.1
 de réir: in accordance with 1; on the system of 12.2.3°; by 14.5.2°; founded on 29.1
 de réir a chéile: see 25.4.6°
 de réir dlí: see 38.1
 réitigh: agree 23.1.2° riachtanach: necessary 41.1.2° de réir mar a bheas riachtanach: as occasion requires 43.2.2° oibreacha riachtanacha: necessary works 44.2.6° riachtanais: needs 45.2.i nuair a bheas riachtanas leis: where necessary 45.4.1° rial: government 6.1
 rialaigh: control 10.3, 33.1; regulate 12.5; inform 45.1
 rialú a dhéanamh ar: control 40.6.1°ii riar: administer 28.4.2°, 44.2.5°
 Riarachán Poiblí: Public Administration 18.7.1°v ríchíos: royalty 10.1
 cás riofa: case stated 40.4.3°
 rith: pass 13.3.1°, 17.2; see 24.1, 46.2
 Ró-Naofa: Most Holy preamble
 rogha: preference 42.3.1°
 díreach roimh: immediately preceding 50.1
 roimh ré: previous 13.1.2° roinnt: distribution 28.12 rolla: panel 18.4.1°; register 47.2.1° anseo romhainn: hereinbefore 22.2.6° sin romhainn: foregoing 14.4, 18.10.1°
 Rúin Airgeadais: Financial Resolutions 17.1.2° rún: resolution 12.10.4° rúnbhallóid: secret ballot 12.2.3°

Sacs-Bhéarla: English 4
 saighid: incite 39
 sainchumas: prerogative 49.1
 sainráite: expressed 37.2
 saíocht: culture 1, 18.7.1°i den tsamhail sin: such 33.5.2° sannadh: alienation 10.3; transfer 43.1.2° saoirse: freedom 15.10, 40.4.1°; liberty 40.4.3°, 40.6.1° saoirse choinsiasa: freedom of conscience 44.2.1° saol: life 41.2.1°
 saol náisiúnta: national life 45.1
 gustail shaolta: material resources 45.2.ii
 maoin shaolta: external goods 43.1.1°
 saor: see 35.2
 saor ar chúrsaí dlí: privileged 15.12
 saoráid: facility 15.15
 saoránach: citizen 9.1.1°, 12.2.2° saorchead: free 44.2.1° saoriomaíocht: free competition 45.2.iii saothar: work 41.2.2° sárú: infringement 15.5
 sás: instrument 29.4.2°
 sásta le: approval 13.7.3°; satisfied 46.5
 scaoil: dissolve 41.3.2°, 41.3.3° scaoileadh: release 40.4.2° scar le: vacate 12.6.2°, 34.5.4° scéal: see 28.9.2°
 cibé scéal é: in any case 34.5.3° scéala: communication 13.9; notify 33.5.2°; notification 33.5.3° scoir: retire 36i
 scoir de: see 13.2.2° scribhinn: document 15.10

- i scríbhinn: in writing 27.2
 scrúdaigh: investigate 12.10.5° faoi seach: respectively 18.7.1°, 22.1.2° seachas: not 12.4.2° seachas a chéile: different 44.2.4° sealadach: temporary 14.1, 28.6.3° sean: aged 45.4.1°
 Seanad: Senate 15.1.2° seas: stand confirmed 22.2.6°
 i seilbh: see 30.6
 i seilbh oifige: hold office 12.3.1° tar i seilbh: acquire 10.4
 seirbhís: service 18.7.1° seol: send 23.1, 33.5.2°; address 24.1 nach sia: not longer 21.2.1° sibhialta: civil 34.3.1°, 38.4.2°
 dlí sibhialta: civil law 41.3.3° an chomhdhaonnacht sibhialta: civil society 43.2.1° sin: these 6.2; the said 8.3; such 12.4.3°; see 13.1.1°, 30.2
 sin a mbeidh: that is all 12.3.2° sin romhainn: foregoing 14.4
 sinigh: sign 25.3
 sinsear: see 1; father preamble sinsearach: senior 34.5.2°, 40.4.4° siocair: subject 12.10.7°, 25.2.2°; occasion 18.3
 síocháin: peace 29.1
 sítheoilte: peaceful 40.6.1°ii siúd is nach: notwithstanding 37.1 sláinte: health 45.4.2°
 slán: reached 12.4.1°
 slán do: inviolable 40.5
 slándáil: security 28.3.3°, 45.2.v slí bheatha: livelihood 45.2.i smacht: discipline 38.4.2° gan de smacht air: subject only to 35.2 so-aistrithe: movable 44.2.5° socair: provide 17.1.2° sochar: emolument 12.6.3°, 12.11.2° sócmhainn: asset 49.3
 socraigh: fix 16.2.2° socrú: provide/provision 8.3, 15.2.2°; 42.4; 49.2 soláthar: supply 22.1.1°; provision 45.2.i sonrach: especial 45.4.1° go sonrach: in particular 40.3.2°, 45.2, 45.2.iii den sórt sin: such 13.7.2° staid phráinne náisiúnta: state of national emergency 28.3.3° gan staonadh: unremitting preamble stát: state 4
 stát-áras: official residence 12.11.1° státchíos: revenue 17.2
 stiúir: direct 12.8, 45.2; control 40.6.1°iii; conduct 45.3.2° suaitheantas: flag 7
 suigh: sit 15.1.3°; establish 12.3.1°, 12.3.3°; sustain 12.10.7°; vindicate 40.3.1°; see 15.7
 suíomh: distribution 16.2.4°
- tá: shall 15.12
 tá ar – nach mbeidh ar: shall not be forced 45.4.2° tábhacht: importance 13.7.1° chomh tábhachtach sin: matter of such grave import 40.6.1°i tabhair: confer 13.6; cause 25.5.1°; prosecute 30.3 tabhair ar thaobh: cast in favour 47.1 tabhair dá chéile: reconcile 43.2.2° tabhair isteach: introduce 20.2.1° breith a thabhairt: pronounce a decision 26.2.1° taca: see 12.8
 tacaíocht: support 12.10.4°, 28.10
 lucht tagartha: see 12.10.6°
 táinsigh: impeach 12.10.1° tairg: present 25.1, 26.1.2°; see 12.10.3° tairg: production 45.3.2° tairiscint: motion 12.10.3° tairiseach: loyalty 9.2
 taisteal: travel 40.3.3° talmhaíocht: agriculture 18.7.1°ii tamall: temporary 28.12
 Tánaiste: see 28.6.1°
 taobh amuigh de chás: save where 13.9; save as 15.11.1°, 25.2.1°, 34.3.2° cuir ar an taobh amuigh de: except 34.4.4° taobh istigh de: within 12.3.3°, 16.4.2°, 21.2.2° i dtaobh: relating to 16.1.2°; on 13.7.1°; in respect of 49.1
 Taoiseach: see 28.5.1° tar ó: derive 6.1
 má tharlaíonn: in the event of 12.3.3°; where 24.2
 tarraing anuas: raise 34.3.2° an té: see 30.6
 teacht le chéile: meet 16.4.2° teachtaireacht: message 13.7.1° téacs: text 25.4.3°
 teagasc creidimh: religious instruction 44.2.4° teaghlach: family 41.1.1° téarma: period 12.3.1° tearmann: precincts 15.13
 faoi theastas: certified 33.5.2° teicnic: technical 29.5.3° is teideal: shall be called 28.5.1°, 34.4.1° téigh chun: subserve 45.2.ii téigh le: engage in 41.2.2° téigh le gairm: enter an avocation 45.4.2° teip: fail 14.1, 14.5.2° teorainn: territorial 2 teorainn a chur le: delimit 43.2.2° teorannaigh: limit 40.3.3° teoranta: limited 34.1
 thar: more than 28.7.2°
 ní bheidh dul thar: final and conclusive 22.2.1°, 34.4.6° tíg le: may 12.4.4°; free to 42.2
 tíolaic: give preamble tiomnaigh: bequeath 43.1.2° tiomsaigh: group 18.4.2° tionóil: summon 28.3.2° tionól: meeting 15.11.3°, 40.6.1°ii; sitting 22.2.2° teacht ar tionól: assemble 40.6.1°ii tionscain: initiate 20.1
 tionscal: industry 18.7.1°iv tionscnamh: institution 41.3.2°; initiative 42.4, 45.3.1° tiontú: translation 25.4.4° is tobar do: see preamble togh: elect 12.2.1°; return 16.2.6°; assign 26.2.1° toghchán: election 16.1.2°
 toghchán a dhéanamh: hold an election 12.3.3° toghchán do: election for 12.2.2°, 12.5 toghchóras: franchise 18.4.2° toghthóir: voter 16.1.4° togra: proposal 46.2
 toil: consent 12.9; see 27.5.1°i toiligh: approve 46.5; see 15.8.2° toirmeasc: molest 15.10; prohibit 18.4.3°, 40.4.6° toisc: in view of 42.3.2°; see 40.6.1°i toradh: result 12.10.7° tosach: precedence 12.1
 i dtosach: originally 40.4.5° tráchtáil: commerce 18.7.1°iv cúrsaí tráchtála: commercial affairs 45.3.1° tráth: see 31.2
 aon tráth: at any time 16.2.3° tréas: treason 15.13, 39
 treascair: overthrow 39
 tréimhse: time 23.1
 treoir: rule of conduct 29.3; see 45
 teorú: supervision 25.5.1°

- triail: trial 38.1
 trian: a third 27.1
 Tríonóid: Trinity preamble
 triúr: three 16.2.6°
 troid: struggle preamble tromlach: majority 13.2.2°, 14.4, 26.2.2°, 28.10 tuairim: opinion 22.2.1°, 24.1, 30.1, 40.6.1°
 tuairimí léirmheasa: criticism 40.6.1°
 tuarascáil: report 33.4
 tuarastal: remuneration 15.9.2° tuilleadh: additional 13.10 is túisce: next 18.9
 a bheireann le tuiscint: purport 13.8.1° tuiste: parent 42.1

 uachtarán: president 12.1
 uaine: green 7
 uair ar bith: at any time 13.2.3°, 13.7.2° an uair sin féin: then 33.5.1° aon uair: on any occasion 14.2.2° uaisleacht: nobility 40.2.1°; dignity preamble

 as ucht: for 12.10.1° uchtáil: adoption 37.2
 údarás: authority 13.6
 le húdarás: by/on the authority of 6.2
 údarú: authorisation 37.2
 uile: whole 45.1; as a whole 45.2.iv uile ... eile: all other 35.1
 Dia na nUilechumhacht: Almighty God 12.8, 44.1
 uime sin: therefore 41.2.2°; accordingly 43.1.2° uireasa: economic necessity 41.2.2°, 45.4.2° uiriseal: humble preamble ullmhaigh: prepare 25.5.1° urlámhas: control 45.2.ii urraim: reverence 44.1.1°

 vóta: vote 12.2.1°, 17.2
 vóta a thabhairt: exercise a vote 15.11.2°, 16.1.4°; cast a vote 47.1
 vótáil: proceed to a ballot 12.4.5°; polling 16.4.1°
 ceart vótála: the right to vote 12.2.2°

ENGLISH INDEX INNÉACS BÉARLA

This is principally an index referring to the commentaries in the study on the various Articles rather than a concordance or glossary. Translations and citations of the headwords below from official translations, particularly from the Acts of the Oireachtas, will be found in the commentaries.

- ability: see 12.8, 34.5.1° abolish: cuir ar ceal 43.1.2° abridge: giorraigh 23.1
absence: as láthair 14.1, 28.6.3° abuse: éagóir 45.4.2° accede: aontaigh 22.2.3° accept: glac le 13.1.3°, 28.9.3°; glac 40.2.2° in accordance with: de réir 1 accordingly: dá bhíthin sin 23.2.1°; uime sin 43.1.2° account: cuntas 22.1.1° accountancy: cuntasáíocht 18.7.1°iv achieve: gnóthaigh 41.2.1° acknowledge: admhaigh 40.3.3°, 42.1, preamble acquire: tar i seilbh 10.4
acquisition: fáil 9.1.2° act: gníomh 13.8.1°, 15.5, 40.4.6°; ionstraim 29.4.3° act: gníomhaigh 13.9, 28.4.2° activities: obair 18.7.1°v actual: see 16.6, 28.3.2°, 42.3.2° actual conditions: cor an lae 42.3.2° addition: breisiú 46.1
additional: tuilleadh 13.10 address: aitheasc 13.7.1°; see 13.7.2° address: seol 24.1
adequate means of livelihood: leorshlí bheatha 45.2.i administer: riar 28.4.2°, 44.2.5°
Public Administration: Riarachán Poiblí 18.7.1°v adopt: gabh chuig preamble; glac le 12.10.4° adoption: uchtáil 37.2 advice: comhairle 13.1.3° advise: comhairligh 28.9.3° adviser: comhairleach 30.1 affairs: gnóthaí 44.2.5° affect: déan difear do 28.3.3° affect prejudicially: dochar a dhéanamh do 44.2.4° affection: bá 34.5.1° affirm: deimhnigh 1; dearbhaigh 29.1 aforesaid: réamhráite 25.2.2° subject as aforesaid: faoi chuimsiú na nithe réamhráite 47.4 after: d'éis 10.4; tar éis 25.2.1° tender age: maoth-óige 45.4.2° aged: sean 45.4.1° agree: réitigh 23.1.2° agriculture: talmhaíocht 18.7.1°ii aid: cabhair a thabhairt 31.1
State aid: cúnamh Stáit 44.2.4° aim: cuspóir 45.2.iv alienation: sannadh 10.3
all: gach 10.2; gach uile 12.1, 16.1.2°; iomlán 21.2.1° all other: uile ... eile 35.1
all ... whatsoever: gach uile 49.1
that is all: sin a mbeidh 12.3.2° allege: abair 38.4.1°, 40.4.2° allied: a bhaineann le 18.7.1°ii allow: lig do 40.4.3° allowance: liúntas 12.11.2°
Almighty God: Dia na nUilechumhacht 12.8, 44.1
also: fairis sin 10.4
alteration: athrú 16.2.4° amenable: inchúisithe 15.13 amend: leasaigh 46.1
from among: as 15.9.1° amount to: see 47.2.1° amounting to: san iomlán 41.3.2° and: i bhfochair 27.1; maille le 10.1
answerable to: freagrach do 13.8.1° antecedent: ársa 41.1.1°, 43.1.1°
if any: see 15.15, 29.4.2° apart: ar leithligh 41.3.2° appeal: achomharc 34.2, 34.4.3°
in final appeal: faoi dheoidh 6.1
appear: bheith i láthair 12.10.6° unless ... appears: mura léir 25.4.1° appellate jurisdiction: dlinse achomhairc 34.4.3° application: bain le 3; see 23.2.2°; a fheidhmiú 45 apply: bain le 3, 23.1
apply to: bain le 14.5.1° appoint: ceap 13.1.1°, 13.8.2°, 28.1 appropriate: leithghabháil 11 by appropriate means: le beart oiriúnach 42.5 appropriation: leithghabháil 17.2 approval: comhaontú 13.1.2°; sásta le 13.7.3°; aontú 40.2.2° approve: toiligh 46.5, 47.1 arbitration: eadráin 29.2 architecture: foirgníocht 18.7.1°iv area: limistéar 3 argument: argóint 34.3.2° armed: armtha 15.6.1° armed rebellion: ceannairc faoi arm 28.3.3°, 40.4.6° without arms: gan arm 40.6.1°ii
by force of arms: le harm 39 arrest: gabháil 15.13 art: ealaíonacht 18.7.1°i as: ós í 8.1; ós é 41.1.2°; faoi mar 12.11.2°, 25.5.1°, 34.3.4°; i 31.4
as best it may: chomh fada lena chumas 40.3.2° ascertain: faigh 27.1
assemble: teacht ar tionól 40.6.1°ii assent: see 15.8.2°; aontaigh 26.2.2°; aontú 28.3.1° asset: sócmhainn 49.3 assign: togh 26.2.1° associated: i gcomhlachas 29.4.2° association: comhlacht 19; comhlachas 40.6.1°iii attach: ceap 15.10
attack: ionsaí 40.3.2°, 41.3.1° attempt: iaracht 15.10; iarraidh 43.1.2° attend: freastal 44.2.4°; bheith i láthair 28.8
Attorney General: Ard-Aighne 30.1 audit: iniúch 22.1.1°, 33.1
authenticate: fíoraigh 25.5.2° authorisation: údarú 37.2
authority: údarás 13.6
by/on the authority of: le húdarás 6.2

avail: cuir chun críche 29.4.2° make available: cuir ar fáil 40.3.3° avocation: gairm 45.4.2°

bail: bannaí 40.4.3° ballot: ballóid 12.2.3°; vótáil 12.4.5° banking: baincéireacht 18.7.1°iv basis: fotha 41.1.2° become: déan de 15.14, 25.4.1°; see 18.2
 become and be: is 9.1.1° before: os comhair 29.5.1°; i láthair 40.1 behaviour: iompar 13.8.2° rational being: see 41.1.1° belief: creideamh 44.2.3° belong: is le 49.1
 bequeath: tiomnaigh 43.1.2° blasphemous: diamhaslach 40.6.1°i body: dream 10.1; comhlacht 13.8.2° body of persons: dream 37.1 both: iad araon 13.2.3°; an dá 20.3; idir 45.2.i bound: ina cheangal 29.5.2° branches: ranna 15.3.1° breach of the peace: briseadh síochána 15.1.3°, 40.6.1°ii by: de réir 14.5.2°; ag 38.2

calculate: see 40.6.1°ii call: see 15.1.1° shall be called: is teideal 28.5.1°, 34.4.1°
 call for: éiligh 33.5.1° candidate for: iarthóir do 12.4.2° capable of: féad 41.3.3°; féidir 49.2 capacity: see 40.1 capital cases: cásanna breithe báis 13.6 care: see 41.3.1°
 the care of: de chúram 45 case stated: cás ríofa 40.4.3° as the case may be: de réir mar a oireas 34.5.1° in any case: cibé scéal é 34.5.3° in cases: i gcás 15.8.2°
 cast in favour: tabhair ar thaobh 47.1
 casting vote: vóta cinniúna 15.11.2° casual vacancy: corrfholúntas 16.7, 18.10.2° cause: cuir á 12.10.5°; tabhair 25.5.2°; see 40.6.1°ii cease: see 13.2.2° ceased to exist: nach ann a thuilleadh 28.3.3° census: daonáireamh 16.2.3° certified: faoi theastas 33.5.2° certify: deimhnigh 22.2.1°, 24.1
 Chairman: Cathaoirleach 14.2.1°, 14.2.3° charge: cúiseamh 12.10.2°; cúis 12.10.3° charge: muirear 11, 22.1.1°; costas 29.5.2° in charge: i mbun 28.7.1° charity: carthanacht 45.1, preamble
 Chief Justice: Príomh-Bhreitheamh 14.2.1°, 31.2 child: leanbh 42.1 children: clann 42.1 cinema: cineama 40.6.1°i circumstances: imthosca 41.3.2°; cor an tsaoil 45.2.v citizen: saoránach 9.1.1°, 12.2.2° civil: sibhialta 34.3.1°, 38.4.2° civil law: dlí sibhialta 41.3.3°
 civil society: an chomhdhaonnacht shibhialta 43.2.1° class: aicmí 40.6.2° cognisable: intrialte 38.4.2° collective authority: comhúdarás 28.4.2° commerce: tráchtáil 18.7.1°iv commercial affairs: cúrsaí tráchtála 45.3.1° commission: coimisiún 14.1; gairm 13.5.2° commit: déan 15.5
 commodity: earra 45.2.iii common good: leas an phobail 6.1; an mhaitheas phoiblí

preamble
 communicate: cuir faoi bhráid 13.7.1° communication: scéala 13.9
 Community: Comhphobal 29.4.3° commute/commutation: maolú 13.6 compensation: cúiteamh 44.2.6° free competition: saoriomaiocht 45.2.iii complaint: gearán 40.4.2° compose of: see 18.1
 comprise: ar 34.2
 Comptroller and Auditor General: Ard-Reachtair Cuntas agus Ciste 33.1 concentration: bheith ina lámha 45.2.iii taking part or being concerned in: páirt nó baint 39 concord: comhcharadra preamble concurrence: comhthoil 25.2.2° condition: cúinse 33.6
 actual conditions: cor an lae 42.3.2° conduct: stiúir 45.3.2° confer: bheir do 12.1; tabhair 13.6; bronn 13.11 conflict: coinbheacht 28.3.3°; see de réir a chéile 25.4.6° in connection with: maidir le 15.15 freedom of conscience: sairse choinsiasa 44.2.1° conscientious: coinsiasach 12.8 consent: toil 12.9
 consider: breithnigh 17.1.1°, 20.1; meas 20.2.2° consideration: breithniú 24.1, 24.2 consist: is é 2; is iad 14.2.1°; tá i 15.1.2°; see 40.4.4° conspire: i gcomhcheilg le 39 constant aim: buanchuspóir 45.2.ii constituency: dailcheantar 16.2.1° constitute: comhdhéan 14.1; see 18.1; cóirigh 18.4.1° constitution: comhdhéanamh 15.1.1°, 36iii; comhshuíomh 41.1.2° consult: cuir i gcomhairle 31.1 contain: bheith i 40.6.2°, 46.4; see 18.7.1° contingency: cás 14.4
 continuance: buanú 48 continue: fan 12.10.7°; lean 18.9 continue to: lean de 28.11.1° contract marriage: pósadh a dhéanamh 41.3.3° contrary: malaírt 25.4.1° contribute to the support: cabhair maireachtála a thabhairt 45.4.1° control: rialaigh 10.3; rialú a dhéanamh ar 40.6.1°ii; stiúir 40.6.1°iii control: urlámhas 45.2.ii convene a meeting: comóir 13.2.3°, 31.8 convention: comhaontú 29.5.3° conviction: deimhne 40.6.1°i co-operation: comhar 29.1
 incorporate: cumanta 42.4
 corresponding: comhréire 34.3.3° corresponding panels: comhrollaí 19 corrupt: éiligh 15.10 counsel: abhcóidí 26.2.1° counsel: comhairle a thabhairt 31.1 country: dúiche 16.2.3°
 in due course of law: see 38.1
 court: cúirt 34.1
 court of criminal jurisdiction: cúirt dlínse coire 13.6 court of final appeal: cúirt achomhairc dheiridh 34.2 court of first instance: cúirt chéadchéime 34.2
 Court of Summary Jurisdiction: Cúirt Dlinse Achomairc 30.3, 38.2
 courtmartial: armchúirt 38.4.2° create: cuir ar bun 15.2.2° credit: creidmheas 45.2.iv crime: coir 30.3
 criminal: coiriúil 34.3.1°; coireachta 37.1

- criticism: tuairimí léirmheasa 40.6.1° cultural: saíocht 1 custody: coinneáil 22.1.1°
- danger: contúirt 40.6.1°ii date: lá 12.3.1° at the date of: le linn 15.5
from that date: as sin amach 48 deal with: broic le 38.4.1° sentence of death: breith bháis 40.4.5° debate: aighneas 15.10 December: Mí Nollag 49.1
decide: breith 26.3.1° declare: dearbhaigh 12.8, 12.10.7°; abair 15.5; fógair 28.3.1° decline: diúltaigh do 26.3.1°; diúltaigh 34.5.4° dedicate my abilities: mo lándícheall a dhéanamh 12.8 deem: meas 12.6.2°, 16.6; see 24.2
the Defence Forces: na Fórsaí Cosanta 13.4 defend: cosain 40.3.1° defer: moilligh 40.4.5° define: mínigh 12.4.2°; léirigh 18.7.1°i definition: míniú 22.1.2° delimit: teorainn a chur le 43.2.2° democratic: daonlathach 5 denomination: aicme 44.2.4° deprive: bain de 40.4.1° derive: tar ó 6.1
designate: ceap 6.1; ainmnigh 13.8.2°, 41.3.2°, 42.3.1° detain: coinnigh ina bhrá 40.4.2° detention: braighdeanas 40.4.2° determination: cinneadh 29.2 determine: cinn 1, 12.11.2°; breith 15.11.1°, 34.3.1°, 40.4.3° to the detriment of: chun dochair do 45.2.iii develop: cuir ar aghaidh 1 devotion to: is mian le 29.1 die: éag 12.3.1°, 28.6.2° different: seachas a chéile 44.2.4° dignity: uaisleacht preamble diminish: laghdú a dhéanamh ar 12.11.3° direct: lomdíreach 12.2.1° direct: stiúir 12.8, 45.2; ceap 34.4.5°; ordaigh 40.4.4° direction: ordú 25.4.2° directive principle: buntreoir 45 disability: míchumas 16.1.1° disbursement: caitheamh airgid 33.1 discipline: smacht 38.4.2° disclose: nocht 26.2.2° in his absolute discretion: as a chomhairle féin 13.2.2° discrimination: idirdhealú 40.6.2° dispute: achrann 29.2
disqualify: cuir faoi dhícháilíocht 16.1.2°; dicháiligh 16.1.3°, 18.9 dissent: easaontaigh 26.2.2° dissolve: lánscoir 13.2.1°, 18.4.3°, 18.8; scaoil 41.3.2°, 41.3.3° distinction: see 16.1.1° distribution: roinnt 28.12; imdháil 45.3.2°; suíomh 16.2.4° divert: bain de 44.2.6° document: scríbhinn 15.10 domestic: inmheánach 24.1, 29.6 domestic needs: riachtanais a dteaghlach 45.2.i done: see 40.3.2°
due: cuí preamble; go cuí 40.1
in due course of law: see 38.1
is due: ag dul do 44.1.1° during: le linn 12.9; an fad is bheidh 35.5
during the lifetime: an fad is beo 41.3.3° duty: dualgas 12.8, 15.3.2° dwelling: ionad cónaithe 40.5
- education: oideachas 42.1; oiliúint 40.6.1° effect: éifeacht 3, 40.4.5°; feidhm dlí 17.1.2°; see 27.4.2° full effect: lánéifeacht 50.1
take effect: teacht i bhfeidhm 16.2.4° effective: éifeacht 38.3.1° as effectively as it may: chomh fada lena chumas 45.1 efficiency: inniúlacht 45.3.2° either: see 12.6.1°, 13.2.3°, 20.3 elect: togh 12.2.1° election (of): toghchán 16.1.2° election for: toghchán do 12.2.2° hold an election: toghchán a dhéanamh 12.3.3° eligible (to be): bheith 35.3 eligible (to become): inghlactha 18.2 eligible for re-election: intofa 12.3.2°; eligible for election: intofa 12.4.1° embodying: ina mbeidh 25.5.1° emergency: práinn 15.8.2°; éigeandáil 24.1
state of national emergency: staid phráinne náisiúnta 28.3.3° emolument: sochar 12.6.3°, 12.11.2° enable: féad 16.6 enact: achtaigh 13.3.1°, 15.4.2°, 49.2 enactment: achtú 50.1
final end: críoch dheireanach preamble endeavour: féach le 40.6.1°i; iarracht a dhéanamh 42.4, 45.3.2° energy: fuinneamh 10.1
enforce: cuir i bhfeidhm 38.4.2° engage in: dul le 41.2.2° engineering: innealtóireacht 18.7.1°iv English language: Sacs-Bhéarla 4 enquire into: fiosrú a dhéanamh 40.4.2° enrol: cuir isteach ina iris 25.4.5° ensuing: an chéad ... eile 16.6 ensure: cuir in áirithe 15.10 enter: dul isteach i 40.5
enter an avocation: téigh le gairm 45.4.2° enter office: dul i gcúram oifige 12.3.1° enter upon duties: dul i gcúram dualgas 34.5.3° enterprise: fiontraíocht 45.3.2° entertain: aird a thabhairt ar 12.10.3° entitled: (ní) cead 12.4.3° equal: comhionann 18.4.2°; ionann 40.1 equal right: comhcheart 40.3.3° equality: ionann 15.11.2°, 22.2.3° equally: see 45.2.i especial: sonrach 45.4.1° especially: go mór mór 42.4 establish: suigh 12.3.1°, 12.3.3° estate: eastát 10.1
estimate: meastachán 17.1.1° event: see 12.3.3°, 30.5.3° in the event of: má tharlaíonn 12.3.3°; má bhíonn 41.1 every: gach ... ar leith 12.3.3°; gach ... dá 13.3.2°, 15.9.1° evidence: fianaise 25.4.5° ex-officio: de bhua oifige 31.2 except: cuir ar an taobh amuigh de 34.4.4° except with: ach le see 40.2.2° exception: eisceacht 11 exceptional: neamhchoiteann 42.5 exclude: ceil 9.1.3° exclusive: aon 8.3, 15.2.1° exclusively: amháin 15.6.1°, 45 execute: comhlíon 34.5.1° execution: feidhmiú 40.4.5° executive: comhallacht 6.1; comhallach 28.2
Executive Council: Ard-Chomhairle 31.2
exercisable: inoibrithe 31.1, 49.1; oibrigh 6.2; see 13.9 exercise: oibrigh 3, 13.5.1° exercise a vote: vóta a thabhairt 15.11.2°, 16.1.4° in the exercise of: see 35.2
- earliest practicable: chomh luath agus is féidir é 28.3.2° economic: geilleagair 1; see 41.2.2° exigencies of the common good: leas an phobail 43.2.2° ceased to exist: nach ann a thuilleadh 28.3.3° expenditure: caitheamh airgid 17.1.1° expiration: deireadh 12.3.1°; see 21.2.1°; caite 23.1.1° at the expiration of: i gceann 21.2.1°, 24.2 before the expiration of: go ceann 27.4.2° exploitation: brabús 45.3.2° express: luaigh 24.1, 46.3, 50.2; nocht 40.6.1° expressed: sainráite 37.2 expression: focal 22.1.2° extend to: see 34.3.2° to the extent: sa mhéid 15.4.2°, 49.2 to the same extent: sa mhéid go 10.2 external: eachtrach 29.4.1° external goods: maoin shaolta 43.1.1° extra-territorial: see 3 facility: saoráid 15.15; áis 42.4 fact: fíoras 34.3.1° fail: teip 14.1, 14.5.2°; fail in: nach ndéanann 42.5 faithful: dílis 12.8

 family: teaghlach 41.1.1° fathers: sinsir preamble favour: féach le fonn 45.3.1° favour: claonadh 34.5.1°
 cast in favour: tabhair ar thaobh 47.1
 felony: feileonacht 15.13
 a few individuals: beagán daoine 45.2.iii fidelity: dilis 9.2
 final and conclusive: ní bheidh dul thar 22.2.1°, 34.4.6°
 final end: críoch dheireanach preamble
 in final appeal: faoi dheoidh 6.1
 finance: airgeadas 18.7.1°
 Financial Resolutions: Rúin Airgeadais 17.1.2° first language: príomhtheanga 8.1 fisheries: iascaireacht 18.7.1°ii he may think fit: is oiriúnach leis 31.3 fix: socraigh 16.2.2°; ceap 40.4.3° flag: suaitheantas, bratach 7 as follows: a leanas 18.4.1° for: as ucht 12.10.1°; in aghaidh 16.2.2°; d'iarraidh 21.1.2°; thar ceann 28.6.3°
 force: fórsa 15.6.1°
 by force of arms: le harm 39
 in force: i bhfeidhm 24.3, 49.1 shall not be forced: nach mbeidh ar 45.4.2° forcible: foréigneach 40.5
 foregoing: sin romhainn 14.4, 18.10.1°; réamhráite 40.6.1°iii form: cuir i 11; cóirigh 18.7.1°; bunaigh 40.6.1°iii form: cineál 1 formation: múnlú na haigne 42.4 former: see 12.4.2° forthwith: láithreach 46.5 found: bunaigh 41.3.1° founded on: de réir 29.1
 franchise: díolúine 10.1; toghchóras 18.4.2° free: in aisce 15.15; saorchead 44.2.1° is free to: tig le 42.2
 free competition: saoriomaíocht 45.2.iii freedom: saoirse 15.10, 40.4.1° freedom of conscience: saoirse choinsiasa 44.2.1° freely: gan bac 40.6.1°i from that date: as sin amach 48
 full effect: lánéifeacht 50.1
 full force: lánfheidhm 50.1
 full jurisdiction: lándlínse 34.3.1° functional: feidhmeannas 15.3.1° functional group: dream feidhme 19 fundamental: bun- 9.2; bunaidh 41.1.1° further: freisin 40.4.5° future: feasta 9.1.2°

general: gnáth- 43.1.2° general guidance: gnáth-threoir 45 generally: de ghnáth 15.1.1° genius: dúchas 1
 give: bheir 26.2.2°; tíolaic preamble
 Almighty God: Dia na nUilechumhacht 12.8, 44.1
 good name: dea-chlú 40.3.2°
 the common good: leas an phobail 6.1; an mhaitheas phoiblí
preamble
 external goods: maoin shaolta 43.1.1° government: rial 6.1
 grant: deonaigh 15.15; see 41.3.2° grateful: buíoch preamble grave: see 40.6.1°i green: uaine 7
 ground: ábhar 27.3; foras 40.4.2° on the ground of: mar gheall ar 44.2.3° group: tiomsaigh 18.4.2° group: dream 19; buíon 29.4.2° guarantee: ráthaigh 22.1.1°, 40.3.1° guard: coimirce a dhéanamh ar 41.3.1° guardian: caomhnóir 42.3.2°

 head of Government: Ceann Rialtais 13.1.1°; ceann an Rialtais 28.5.1° health: sláinte 45.4.2° hear: éist le 26.2.1°, 32 hereafter: ina dhiaidh seo 49.2 be heard: labhair 28.8
 hereby: leis seo 13.6
 hereinafter: anseo inár ndiaidh 18.4.1° hereinbefore: anseo romhainn 22.2.6° hereof: den Bhunreacht seo 35.1 heroic: calmacht preamble
 High-Court: Ard-Chúirt 34.3.1° higher education: ardoideachas 18.4.2° hold: áirigh 40.1, 47.1; see 13.5.2°
 hold an election: toghchán a dhéanamh 12.3.3° hold office: i seilbh oifige 12.3.1°; ina 12.3.2° hold to mean: intuigthe 40.1 holder: see 30.6
 homage: ómós 44.1.1° in their homes: ag baile 42.2 honour: onóir 44.1.1° title of honour: gairm onóra 40.2.2°
 however: ach 15.2.2°
 as human persons: ina bpearsain daonna 40.1
 humble: uiríseal preamble

 if and whenever: má 24.1
 if any: see 15.15
 ill-will: droch-aigne 34.5.1° immediately preceding: díreach roimh 50.1
 immovable: do-aistrithe 44.2.5° impeach: táinsigh 12.10.1° a matter of such grave import: chomh tábhachtach sin 40.6.1°i importance: tábhacht 13.7.1° impose: gearr 11, 13.6; cuir ar 30.1 inadequate: nach leor 38.3.1° inalienable: doshannta 1 incapacity: míthreoir 12.3.1°, 16.1.1°, 16.1.3°, 31.5 incidental: a bhfuil baint aige le 22.1.1° incite: saighid 39 include: ar 34.3.1°
 including: mar aon le 10.1, 16.7; agus a áireamh 12.4.2°, 18.7.1°v; ar a n-áirítear 18.7.1°iv inconsistent: i gcoinne 50.1 indecent: graosta 40.6.1°i infeasible: dochloíte 1 independence: neamhspleáchas preamble independent: neamhspleách 5, 35.2

- indispensable: éigeantach 41.1.2° individual: pearsa 45.2.ii industry: tionscal 18.7.1°iv infirm: easlán 45.4.1° inform: cuir in iúl 27.5.1°; eolas a thabhairt 28.5.2°; rialaigh 45.1 information: faisnéis 40.3.3° infringement: sárú 15.5
 inherit: oidhreach 43.1.2° initiate: tionscain 20.1
 initiative: tionscnamh 42.4, 45.3.1° injustice: éagóir 40.3.2° institution: foras 18.4.2°; ord 41.3.1°; fundúireacht 42.4; tionscnamh 41.3.2° religious instruction: teagasc creidimh 44.2.4° instrument: sás 29.4.2° intellectual: intleacht 42.1 intend: ceap 45 intention: intinn 25.4.1° interest: leas 10.1; gnó 18.7.1° professional interest: gairm 18.7.1°i in the public interest: ar mhaithe leis an bpobal 40.6.1°iii vital interests: bonn beatha 28.3.3° interfere: cur isteach 15.10; bac 40.4.6° introduce: tabhair isteach 20.2.1° invalid: gan bhail 15.4.2°; ó bhail 37.2; neamhbhail 40.4.3° invalidate: cuir ó bhail 28.3.3° invasion: ionradh 28.3.2° invest with: beidh ag 34.3.1° investigate: scrúdaigh 12.10.5° inviolable: slán do 40.5
 invoke: agair 18.4.3°, 40.4.6° Irish: Éireann 9.1.2°, 12.8
 issue: cuir amach 25.4.4°
- judicial: breithiúnach 29.2; breithimh 35.2; breithiúnais 37.1 jurisdiction: dlínse 3, 34.3.2° jury: coiste tiomanta 38.5
 justice: cothrom 29.1; ceart 34.1, 38.3.1°, 43.2.1°; ionracas preamble justify: see 40.4.2°
- knowledge: eolas 18.7.1°; eol 34.5.1° known: see 15.1.1°
- labour: oibreachas 18.7.1°iii latest: is deireanaí 25.5.3° by law: le dlí 15.9.2°
 civil law: dlí sibhialta 41.3.3° positive law: reacht daonna 41.1.1°, 43.1.1°
 in due course of law: see 38.1
 lawfulness: an dleathach nó nach dleathach 40.4.5° lawfully: dleathach 10.1, 42.3.1° lay down: leag síos 40.3.3° league: cumann 29.4.2° leave: imigh ó 12.9
 legislation: reachtaíocht 20.1 legislative: reachtaíocht 15.2.1° less than: faoi bhun 16.2.2° not less than: ar a laghad 12.4.2°, 12.10.3°, 28.1
 levy war: cogadh a chur 39 liability: féichiúnas 11, 49.3 liberty: saoirse 40.4.3°, 40.6.1° life: ré 16.2.4°; beatha 40.3.3°; saol 41.2.1° national life: saol náisiúnta 45.1
 during the lifetime: an fad is beo 41.3.3° limit: teorannaigh 40.3.3° limited: teoranta 34.1 livelihood: slí bheatha 45.2.i local: áitiúil 34.3.4° not longer: nach sia 21.2.1°
- loss: cailleadh 9.1.2° loyalty: tairiseach 9.2
- maintain: bheith i mo thaca agus i mo dhídin 12.8; cothabháil 15.6.1°, 44.2.5° majority: tromlach 13.2.2°, 14.4, 26.2.2°, 28.10; formhór 15.11.1° make available: cuir ar fáil 40.3.3° management: bainistí 10.3
 under the management: faoi bhainistí 44.2.4° manner: modh 18.6, 34.1
 in the manner: ar an gcuma 18.10.3°; ar an modh 46.1 marriage: pósadh 41.3.1°; cuing phósta 41.3.3° contract marriage: pósadh a dhéanamh 41.3.3° matter: see 40.6.1°i any matter: aon ní 13.7.1° in the matter of: maidir le 42.4 may: tig le 12.4.4°; is dleathach 14.3; féad 40.3.3° no ... may: ní cead 9.1.3° mean: is ciall do 22.1.1° means: acmhainn 42.1; beart 42.5; caoi 45.2.i by means of: ar mhodh 12.2.3° measure: beart 29.4.3° meet: oircheas 14.4
 meet: teacht le chéile 16.4.2° meeting: see 13.2.3°; tionól 15.11.3°, 40.6.1°ii member: comhalta 12.2.2° member state: ballstát 29.4.3° membership: see 12.10.4° men and women: idir fhear is bean 45.2.i message: teachtaireacht 13.7.1°; see 13.7.2° military law: dlí míleata 38.4.1° mine: mianach 10.2
 mineral: mianra 10.2
 minimum: minimum 42.3.2° minor offence: mionchion 38.2 misbehaviour: mí-iompar 12.10.1° molest: toirmeasc 15.10
 Money Bill: Bille Airgid 20.1
 moneys: airgidí 22.1.1° public moneys: airgead poiblí 17.2 morality: moráltacht 29.1, 40.6.1°, 42.1
 more than: os cionn 16.2.2°; thar 28.7.2° not more than: ar a mhéid 28.1
 Most Holy: Ró-Naofa preamble mothers: máithreacha clainne 41.2.2° motion: tairiscint 12.10.3° movable: so-aistrithe 44.2.5°
- name: ainm 4
 good name: dea-chlú 40.3.2° namely: .i. 14.2.1° nation: náisiún 1
 national life: saol náisiúnta 45.1
 nationality: náisiúntacht 9.1.2° natural: nádúrtha 10.1; de réir nádúir 41.1.1°; dúchasach 42.1 nature: see 37.1
 near: cóngar 12.11.1°
 necessary: gá 12.4.5°; riachtanach 41.1.2° necessary works: oibreacha riachtanacha 44.2.6° where necessary: nuair a bheas riachtanas leis 45.4.1° necessitated by: de bhithin 29.4.3° by economic necessity: de dheasca uaireasa 41.2.2°, 45.4.2° needs: riachtanais 45.2.i neglect: failligh 34.5.4°; failli 41.2.2° new: eile 28.6.2°
 next: see 18.3; is túisce 18.9 nobility: uaisleacht 40.2.1° nominate: ainmnigh 12.4.4°, 13.1.1°, 18.3, 30.2
 not: seachas 12.4.2°

- not more than ... not less than: níos mó ná ... níos lú ná 18.7.2°
- notice of motion: fógra tairisceana 12.10.3°
- notification: scéala 33.5.3°
- notify: scéala a thabhairt 33.5.2°
- notwithstanding: d'ainneoin 14.3; siúd is nach 37.1
- nuisance: cránas 40.6.1<sup>ii</sup>
- nullify: cuir ar neamhní 28.3.3°
- number: líon 14.3, 16.2.2°, 36i; cén méid 15.11.3°; see 19
- obligation: oibleagáid 29.4.3°
- obligations: faoi chomaoin preamble
- obligatory: beidh ar 27.4.2°
- oblige: a chur d'fhiachaibh ar 42.3.1°
- occasion: faoi deara 28.3.3°
- as occasion requires: de réir mar a bheas riachtanach 43.2.2°; see 25.5.1°
- on any occasion: aon uair 14.2.2°
- occupation: gairm bheatha 45.2.i
- offence: cion 30.3, 38.1
- office: oifig 30.6
- official residence: stát-áras 12.11.1°
- on: i dtaobh 13.7.1°; de dhroim 27.4.2°
- one: áirithe 18.7.2°
- only one: aon ... amháin 12.4.5°
- only: amháin 6.2, 21.1.1°
- in open court: sa chúirt go poiblí 26.2.1°
- shall operate to: is é is feidhm do 12.10.7°
- come into operation: teacht i ngníomh 9.1.1°
- opinion: tuairim 22.2.1°, 24.1, 40.6.1<sup>i</sup>
- public opinion: aigne an phobail 40.6.1<sup>i</sup>
- opportunity: caoi 40.4.2°
- orange: flannbhuí 7
- public order: ord poiblí 38.3.1°, 40.6.1°, 44.2.1°
- organ: organ 6.2, 40.6.1<sup>i</sup>
- organised: comheagraithe 18.7.1<sup>iii</sup>
- organization: comheagrú 28.12; comheagraíocht 36iii
- original: bunaidh 34.3.1°
- originally: i dtosach 40.4.5°
- orphan: dílleacht 45.4.1°
- such other persons: aon daoine eile 31.2
- other than: see 15.11.1°
- otherwise: see 22.2.3°; or otherwise: ná eile 34.3.2°
- ought: gur cú 43.2.1°
- overthrow: treascair 39
- own: bheith dá gcuid féin acu 44.2.5°
- ownership: dílse 45.2.ii
- private ownership: a bheith aige dá chuid féin 43.1.1°
- panel: rolla 18.4.1°
- pardon: maithiúnas 13.6
- parent: tuiste 42.1
- part: cuid 29.6
- taking part or being concerned in: páirt nó baint 39
- participant: páirteach 28.3.3°
- participate: páirt a bheith 28.3.1°
- in particular: go sonrach 40.3.2°, 45.2, 45.2.iii
- pass: rith 13.3.1°, 17.2, 46.2
- passage: see 24.1
- payment of compensation: cúiteamh a íoc le 44.2.6°
- peace: síocháin 29.1
- peaceful: sítheoilte 40.6.1<sup>ii</sup>
- penalty: pionós 15.10
- pending: go dtí go 26.1.3°
- people: pobal 12.2.1
- perform: comhlíon 12.1; see 13.9
- performable: inchomhlíonta 31.1
- period: ré 16.5; téarma 12.3.1°; tráth 33.4
- permanent: buan 14.1
- person: pearsa 40.3.2°; neach 40.4.2°
- as human persons: ina bpearsain daonna 40.1
- personages: maithe 12.8
- pertain: bain le 45.2.iv
- petition: achainí 26.3.2°
- petitioners: an lucht achainí 27.2
- physical: corpartha 40.1, 42.5; coirp 42.1
- in the place of: in ionad 14.2.2°
- to supply the place of: ionad a ghlacadh 42.5
- pleading: pléadail 34.3.2°
- pledge itself: gabh air féin 41.3.1°, 45.4.1°
- policy: beartas 28.5.2°
- political: polaitíocht 1
- polling: vótáil 16.4.1°
- population: daonra 16.2.2°
- position: post 12.6.3°
- positive law: reacht daonna 41.1.1, 43.1.1°
- possess: tá aige 41.1.1°
- as soon as possible: chomh luath agus is féidir é 17.1.1°
- potential: ábhar 10.1
- power: cumhacht 13.6, 13.9
- at the earliest practicable date: chomh luath agus is féidir é 28.3.2°
- so far as practicable: sa mhéid gur féidir é 16.2.3°, 40.3.1°
- as many as shall be practicable: an oiread agus is féidir 45.2.v
- practical experience: cleachtadh 18.7.1°
- precedence: tosach 12.1
- immediately preceding: díreach roimh 50.1
- precincts: tearmann 15.13
- predecessor: réamhtheachtaí 12.7°
- predominant aim: príomhchuspóir 45.2.iv
- prefer (a charge): déan 12.10.2°; tabhair 12.10.3°
- preference: rogha 42.3.1°
- without prejudice to: gan dochar do 3
- affect prejudicially: dochar a dhéanamh do 44.2.4°
- prepare: ullmhaigh 25.5.1°
- prerogative: sainchumas 49.1
- prescribe: leag amach 15.9.1°; ordaigh 27.2, 34.1, 34.4.3°; forordaigh 41.3.2°
- in the presence of: i bhfianaise 12.8
- present: cuir faoi bhráid 17.1.1°; táirg 25.1, 26.1.2°; cuir os comhair 28.4.3°
- present: i láthair ann 22.2.2°
- preserve: cosain 24.1; caomhnaigh 28.3.3°; coimeád 40.6.1<sup>i</sup>
- president: uachtarán 12.1
- presiding: i gceannas 15.11.1°
- prevail: see forlámhas 25.4.6°
- prevent: cosc a chur ar 40.6.1<sup>ii</sup>
- previous: roimh ré 13.1.2°
- primary: príomha 41.1.1°, 42.1
- primary education: bunoidéachas 42.4
- Prime Minister: Príomh-Aire 13.1.1°, 28.5.1°
- principle: bunriail 29.3, 43.2.1°
- directive principle: buntreoir 45
- prior consent: réamhchead 18.3
- private: príobháideach 15.8.2°
- private ownership: a bheith aige dá chuid féin 43.1.1°
- privileged: saor ar chúrsaí dlí 15.12
- Committee of Privileges: Coiste Pribhléidí 22.2.2°
- method of procedure: nós imeachta 29.4.2°, 36iii
- proceed to a ballot: vótáil 12.4.5°
- produce: tabhair i láthair 40.4.2°
- production: táirg 45.3.2°
- profess: admháil 44.2.1°
- professional interest: gairm 18.7.1<sup>i</sup>
- prohibit: toirmeasc 18.4.3°; toirmisc 40.4.6°
- promise: geall 12.8
- promote: see cur ar aghaidh 1; cur chun cinn 45.1
- promulgate: fógair 13.3.2°, 25.1
- pronounce decision: breith a thabhairt 26.2.1°; breith a chraoladh 34.4.5°
- property right: maoineacht 40.3.2°
- proportional representation: ionadaíocht chionúire 12.2.3°

- proposal: togra 46.2 prosecute: tabhair 30.3; cúiseamh a dhéanamh 30.3 prospect: ionchas 41.3.2° protect: dídean 15.10; cosain 28.3.2°, 41.3.1°; caomhnaigh 41.1.2° protect against: cosain ar 45.3.2° protect from: cosain ar 40.3.2° provide: socair 17.1.2°; see 41.3.2° provide for: cuir ar fáil do 42.1 provide/provision: sócrú 8.3, 42.4; coinneoll 16.1.2°; see 18.4.2°, 41.3.2°; soláthar 45.2.i Prudence: Críonnacht preamble public: poiblí 15.8.1°, 34.1, 40.6.1°
 Public Administration: Riarachán Poiblí 18.7.1°v
 public order: ord poiblí 44.2.1° in the public interest: ar mhaithe leis an bpobal 40.6.1°iii publish: foilsigh 15.12 punishable: inphionóis 40.6.1°i punishment: pionós 13.6
 purport: a bheireann le tuiscint 13.8.1° purpose: gnó 8.3; cuspóir 29.4.2° for the purpose of: chun críocha 13.8.2° in pursuance of: de bhun 28.3.3° pursuant to: de bhun 18.4.2°
- question: ceist 22.2.2°, 34.3.1°, 40.4.3° question: cuir in amhras 34.3.3°
- raise: bunaigh 15.6.1°; cruinnigh 22.1.1°; tarraing anuas 34.3.2° ratify: daingnigh 29.4.3° ratio: comhréir 16.2.3°
 rational being: see 43.1.1° reached: slán 12.4.1° reason: ábhar 28.9.4°
 re-assembly: ationól 18.3, 28.10
 armed rebellion: ceannairc faoi arm 28.3.3° receipts: fáltas 17.1.1° recognise: glac le 8.2; admhaigh 42.2 recommend: mol 17.2
 recommendation: moladh 21.1.2°, 24.2 reconcile: tabhair dá chéile 43.2.2° reconciliation: comhréiteach 41.3.2° refer: cuir faoi bhráid 22.2.2°; cuir faoi bhreith 40.4.3°; díriugh preamble refer to: bheir ar 15.1.1° reference: a chur faoi bhreith 26 referendum: reifreann 47.1 refuse to: diúltaigh do 13.2.2° regain: bain amach preamble have regard: féach do 40.1
 with due regard: ag féachaint go cúí 16.2.4°, 42.4, 42.5 as regards: i gcás 49.3
 register: rolla 47.2.1° Registrar: Iriseoir 25.4.5° regulate: rialaigh 12.5
 re-integration: athchomhlánú 3 relate to: bain le 14.5.1°; maidir le 40.3.3° relating to: i dtaobh 16.1.2° relation: comhbhaint 15.3.2° in relation to: bain le 13.9 relations: caidreamh 1, 29.3 release: scaoileadh 40.4.2° religion: creideamh 44.1
 religious: creideamh 42.1, 44.2.3° religious instruction: teagasc creidimh 44.2.4° remain in force: fan i bhfeidhm 24.3 remit: loghadh 13.6
 remove from office: cuir as oifig 12.10.7°, 33.5.1° remuneration: tuarastal 15.9.2° render: see 12.10.7°
- repeal: aisghair 46.1, 48 report: cuir in iúl 22.2.6° report: tuarascáil 33.4
 represent: ionadaigh 15.3.1°; see 16.2.1°
 proportional representation: ionadaíocht chionúire 12.2.3° representative: ionadóir 15.1.2° to be represented: lucht tagartha a bheith aige 12.10.6° repugnant to: in aghaidh 26.1.1° request: achainí 22.2.3°, 25.2.2° require: ní foláir 13.3.1°, 13.5.2°; see éigeantach 42.3.2° as occasion requires: see 25.5.1° resign: éirigh as 12.3.1° resignation: éirigh as oifig 13.1.3°; see 28.9.1° resolution: rún 12.10.4°
 Financial Resolutions: Rúin Airgeadais 17.1.2° resolve: see 23.1.1°; beartaigh le rún 24.1 resource: ábhar maoiné 10.1 material resources: gustail shaolta 45.2.ii respect: gan cur isteach 40.3.1°, 42.1 respect: oirmhidin 44.1.1° in any respect: ar aon chuma 15.4.1° in respect of: i dtaobh 49.1 respectively: faoi seach 18.7.1°; 22.1.2° responsible to: freagrach do 28.4.1° restore: aiseag preamble result: toradh 12.10.7° retire: dul as oifig 30.5.4°; scoir 36i retiring: see 12.4.2° revenue: cíos 11; stáchtios 17.2 reverence: urraim 44.1.1° review: cuir faoi léirmheas 13.8.2° revise: athmheas 16.2.4°
 the right to vote: ceart vótála 12.2.2° rightful: is dleacht do 40.6.1°i; is dual do preamble royalty: ríchíos 10.1
 rule of conduct: treoir 29.3
- safeguard: cosain 45.4.1° same: aon ... amháin 16.4.1° same election: aon-toghchán 12.4.3° the same: ar cothrom 16.2.3°
 at the same time: san am chéanna 15.14 satisfied: deimhin 40.4.2°; sásta 46.5 save: ach amháin 12.10.4°, 49.2; ach 40.5
 save as: taobh amuigh de chás 15.11.1°, 25.2.1°, 34.3.2° save in so far: ach amháin sa mhéid go 17.1.2° save where: taobh amuigh de chás 13.9 seat: ionad 15.14
 second: eile 8.2
 secret ballot: rúnbhallóid 12.2.3° section: aicme 45.4.1° secure: cuir in áirithe 28.3.3°; cuir i bhfeidhm 38.3.1° security: slándáil 28.3.3°, 45.2.v seditious: ceannairceach 40.6.1°i seek: cuir roimh preamble seem sufficient: is leor leis 28.9.4° Senate: Seanad 15.1.2°
 send: cuir go 22.2.4°; seol 23.1, 33.5.2°; cuir chun 26.3.2° senior: sinsearach 34.5.2°, 40.4.4°
 sentence of death: breith bháis 40.4.5° service: fónamh 12.8; seirbhís 18.7.1° on active service: ar fianas 38.4.2° session: see 15.7
 seven: mórshéisear 28.1
 sex: fireann nó baineann 9.1.3°; gné 45.4.2°; see 16.1.1° shall: ní foláir 11; ní cead 12.6.1°; tá 15.12; see 15.1.2°, 18.4.3° shall not: níl 13.8.1° no ... shall: ní dleathach 15.6.2° shorter: is giorra 16.5
 sign: lámh a chur le 13.3.1°; sinigh 25.3

signed by: faoi lámh 12.10.3° sincerely: go firinneach 12.8 single vote: aonghuth 12.2.3° sit: suigh 15.1.3° sitting: see 15.8.1°; tionól 22.2.2° so: mar sin 22.2.4°; chuige sin 23.1.1°; see 47.1 social: comhdhaonnach 15.3.1° society: comhdhaonnacht 41.1.1°
 civil society: an chomhdhaonnacht shibhialta 43.2.1° as soon as may be: chomh luath agus is féidir é 12.7, 25.4.5°
 as soon as possible: chomh luath agus is féidir é 17.1.1° source: bunadh 11 sovereign: ceannasach 1 special: faoi leith 38.3.1°, 41.3.1° specific: chuige sin 17.1.2° specify: luaigh 14.5.2°, 22.2.6° spouse: céile 41.3.2° stand confirmed: seas 22.2.6° state: luaigh 12.10.1°; abair 25.4.2° state: stát 4
 state of national emergency: staid phráinne náisiúnta 28.3.3° state of war: eisíth 40.4.6° stated: áirithe 23.1.1° case stated: cás riofa 40.4.3° statement: léirthuirisc 27.3 status: céim 44.2.3° strength: neart 45.4.2° strive: dícheall a dhéanamh 45.1 struggle: troid preamble subject: is siocair do 12.10.7° subject as aforesaid: faoi chuimsiú na nithe réamhráite 47.4
 subject to: faoi chuimsiú 12.5, 40.3.3°; ach gan san a dhul chun dochair do 44.2.1° subject only to: gan de smacht air 35.2 submit to the decision of: cuir faoi bhreith 46.2 subordinate legislature: fo-reachtas 15.2.2° subordinate matter: fo-ábhar 22.1.1° subscribe: bheith páirteach i 12.4.3°; lámh a chur le 12.8
 subsequent: dá éis sin 12.7; inár ndiaidh 14.5.1°, 22.2.1° subserve: téigh chun 45.2.ii subsisting: bheith ann fós 41.3.3° in substitution for: in ionad 19 successor: comharba 28.11.1°, 49.3
 such: sin 12.4.3°; den sórt sin 13.7.2°; den tsamhail sin 33.5.2°; see 12.10.7°, 15.1.3° at such times and places: cibé áit agus am 31.8 suit: agra 30.3
 summon: comóir 13.2.1°; tionóil 28.3.2° superior to: is airde ná 41.1.1° supersede: gabh ionad 25.5.3° supervision: treorú 25.5.1° supplement: cur le 42.4, 45.3.1° supply: soláthar 22.1.1°
 to supply the place of: ionad a ghlacadh 42.5
 support: tacaíocht 12.10.4°, 28.10; cúnaimh 41.2.1° contribute to the support: cabhair maireachtála a thabhairt 45.4.1° supreme command: ardcheannas 13.4 sustain: cumhdaigh 12.8; suigh 12.10.7°; see comhfhurtacht preamble on the system of: de réir 12.2.3° take place: bheith ann 16.3.2° taxation: cánachas 22.1.1° technical: teicnic 29.5.3° temporary: sealadach 14.1, 28.6.3°; tamall 28.12
 tender age: maoth-óige 45.4.2° term: coinníoll 33.6, 36ii terminate the appointment: cuir as oifig 13.1.3°, 28.9.4° territorial: teorainn 2 territory: críocha 2

text: téacs 25.4.3°
 that is all: sin a mbeidh 12.3.2°
 then: an uair sin féin 33.5.1° therefore: uime sin 41.2.2°; see 41.1.2° thereof: de 8.3, 40.4.5°; den chéanna see 18.3
 thereupon: air sin 27.5.2° these: sin 6.2
 three: triúr 16.2.6° a third: trian 27.1
 two-thirds: dhá thrian 12.10.4° through: ar feadh preamble throughout: ar fud 8.3, 16.2.3° time: tréimhse 23.1
 time of war or armed rebellion: aimsir chogaidh nó ceannairce faoi arm 28.3.3° at any time: aon tráth 16.2.3°; uair ar bith 13.2.3°, 13.7.2°
 at the same time: san am chéanna 31.3 for the time being: in alt na huaire 10.1, 41.3.3° title: gairm 40.2.1°
 title of honour: gairm onóra 40.2.2° total membership: lánchomhaltas 12.10.4° total number: lánlíon 16.2.2° tradition: gnás 1 transfer: sann 43.1.2°
 transferable: inaistrithe 12.2.3° translation: tiontú 25.4.4° travel: taisteal 40.3.3° treason: tréas 15.13, 39 treaty: conradh 29.4.3° trial: triail 38.1; cruatan preamble tribunal: binse 13.8.2°, 38.4.1° tricolour: bratach trí dhath 7 is unable: gan bheith i gcumas 14.2.2° unborn: beo gan breith 40.3.3° undermine: bonnbhris 40.6.1° unfit: neamhoiriúnach 12.10.7° union: cumann 40.6.1°iii unit-group: buion-aonad 41.1.1° unity: aontacht preamble
 the National University of Ireland: Ollscoil na hÉireann 18.4.1° the University of Dublin: Ollscoil Bhaile Átha Cliath 18.4.1° unjust: éagórach 40.3.2°, 45.3.2° unlawful: aindleathach 40.4.2° unless: mura 27.4.2° unremitting: gan staonadh preamble unsuited to: nach n-oireann do 45.4.2° until: nó go 28.6.2° until after: see 40.4.5° uphold: cumhdaigh 34.5.1° upon: chomh luath agus 27.4.1°; ar 46.5 urgent: práinn leis 24.1
 utility: áis 44.2.6° utterance: caint 15.12; a aithris 40.6.1°i vacancy: folúntas 14.3 vacant: folamh 14.1
 vacate: scar le 12.6.2°, 34.5.4°; éirigh as 15.14 valid: bail dlí air 41.3.3° validity: bail a bheith 34.3.2°, 40.4.3° variation: athrú 46.1
 vest in: le 10.1; see 13.4
 veto: diúltaigh do 47.2.1°
 Vice-Chairman: Leas-Chathaoirleach 14.2.3° vicinity: cóngar 40.6.1°ii in view of: toisc 42.3.2° vindicate: suigh 40.3.1° in violation of: in aghaidh 42.3.1° violent: foréigneach 39 virtue: bua 43.1.1°
 by virtue of: de bhua 27

vital interests: bonn beatha 28.3.3° viz.: see 15.1.2° vocational: gairme beatha 15.3.1° voluntary: deonach 18.7.1° vote: vóta 12.2.1° vote: vótáil 12.2.2° voter: toghthóir 16.1.4°

war: cogadh 28.3.1°
 levy war: cogadh a chur 39
 state of war: eisith 40.4.6° warrant: barántas 31.3
 by way of: i bhfoirm 40.4.3°; le 46.1 welfare: leas 12.8
 all ... whatsoever: gach uile 49.1
 whenever: cibé uair 27.5.2° where: nuair 12.4.5°; má tharlaíonn 24.2; i gcás 40.4.5° whereby: a bhéarfadh 16.2.6° whole: go hiomlán 2; uile 45.1 as a whole: uile 45.2.iv of whom: see 18.1

 widow: baintreach 45.4.1° will: breith 27.1
 is willing: ar fonn leis 31.2
 with: ach 15.8.2°; faoi réir 40.4.5° within: taobh istigh de 12.3.3°, 16.4.2°; faoi cheann 14.5.2°;
     see 17.1.2°, 21.2.2° work: saothar 41.2.2° workers: lucht oibre 45.4.2° necessary works: oibreacha riachtanacha 44.2.6° worship: adhair 44.1.1° every year: sa bhliain 15.7